The '86 Envoy

AN ANNUAL PICTORIAL RECORD

The 1986 Envoy is dedicated as a tribute to the founder of Ambassador College, Herbert W. Armstrong.

Mr. Armstrong recognized that an educational institution based upon the Word of God as the foundation of knowledge — teaching its students the “missing dimension in education,” the true purpose and meaning of life — was the key to supplying the trained personnel needed to carry God’s Great Commission to the ends of the earth.

Mr. Armstrong was not personally wealthy, but he left a wonderful legacy: two college campuses, the Ambassador Foundation, the World Tomorrow program, The Plain Truth and the other publications that he founded over the years, and a worldwide organization that supports them. These are the tangible fruits of a life devoted to God and His Work.

But what Mr. Armstrong valued most, and what he labored hardest to build, was understanding. In 1926 when his personal religious beliefs were challenged, he embarked on a quest for understanding. All his life, he had wanted more than just knowledge — he wanted to know WHY. He turned his energy and his formidable ability to concentrate on searching out the answers to some of life’s most important questions: Does God really exist? And if He does, what does He expect of us? What was His purpose in creating man? Or was there indeed any purpose?

Mr. Armstrong was not prepared to accept the fuzzy and often muddled educational concepts that masquerade as answers to these questions. He wanted the truth.

It came slowly at first. But he had recognized a vital principle: “. . . a good understanding have all they that do his [God’s] commandments” (Ps. 111:10). As he pored over the Word of God, he put what he learned into practice. He also realized that education is a responsibility, and as God gave him direction he began to share his understanding with others.

His educational efforts commenced with the smallest of beginnings — a weekly half hour on one small radio station and a hand-duplicated magazine. But Mr. Armstrong taught with the flair that had brought him success in the advertising profession in the early ’20s. God blessed his efforts and The Plain Truth and World Tomorrow program grew in impact until now they reach — and teach — millions around the world.

Mr. Armstrong often likened an understanding of the Bible to putting together a jigsaw puzzle. At first one seems to have a jumble of unrelated pieces. But as one fits them together a clearer picture begins to emerge. Over the years, God gave him more pieces of the puzzle, and he never stopped learning. Shortly before he died, he said he had come to understand more in the last ten years of his long life than in all the previous decades.

Come with us as we review the college year 1985-86, and remember the man whose vision and dedication to God made possible the first 39 years of Ambassador College.

“Passing the Baton”

Contents of the 1986 Envoy

Each year that passes at Ambassador reveals its own unique personality.

As a reflection of each year, the Envoy, too, changes slightly and develops a certain identity. Themes change, but there's always an underlying tone of quality and character — a direct reflection of the Ambassador experience.

This year, we have the responsibility of paying tribute to the beloved Founder of Ambassador College, and the Chancellor for almost 40 years, Herbert W. Armstrong. While the Envoy is typically an enthusiastic and cheerful reflection of Ambassador College life, the tribute to Mr. Armstrong represents a more sober and serious element. But at the same time, it is a joy to reflect on the contributions of the man who exemplified and personified the high standards of Ambassador.

Under the guidance of Chancellor Joseph W. Tkach and Deputy Chancellor Raymond McNair, the tribute developed into the dominant theme of this year's book.

"Charting the Course" was retained as the general theme, but Mr. Armstrong's life was so crucial to the course the College has set, it is only appropriate to pay him tribute in the whole publication.

As his experience, commitment and energy filled this College throughout his long and fruitful life, they now fill this book in tribute to him. □

The Most Remarkable Man of the Twentieth Century

Few men when they die are known for having actually changed some part of our world. But there are a few. Herbert W. Armstrong was among them.

From the earliest days of his long and eventful life Mr. Armstrong craved understanding.

As a five year-old he often asked his father, "Why?"

At 93, he challenged millions of people by asking them, "Why?"

Not content to accept vague answers to life's most difficult questions, he sought out the plain truth about vital issues of human existence. Spurned, scorned and ridiculed by some, he nevertheless pressed on, achieving in the process a reputation and respect rarely afforded any man.

A UNIQUE PERSPECTIVE

Publisher, educator, minister, broadcaster, philanthropist — he was a friend to sovereigns and servants, chairmen and children around the world. His broad experiences and wide-ranging interests made him a fascinating individual. He could talk about world politics or football, a distant universe, or the beauty of a single snowflake.

Perhaps his wide range of interests came from seeing so many new things develop in his lifetime. Born eight years prior to the start of the 20th century, he knew two worlds — one in which there were only horses and buggies, and one in which man walked on the moon.

As a teenager he didn't watch television — there was no such thing. Yet later he was to use the medium as naturally and effectively as a veteran newscaster. In his twenties he became a dynamic and innovative force in the world of advertising, developing the skills which later he used in launching this era of the Work of God.

By the time he turned 53 he had seen the world thrown into global war twice. He attended the signing of the United Nations charter in 1945, and saw the Jews obtain a homeland in May 1948. While millions today have never known a world without space travel, television, and the atomic bomb, his experience has bridged both worlds. Firsthand, he saw the amazing technological growth and the appalling destruction that have characterized this 20th century.

This unique perspective enhanced his ability as a writer and speaker — an ability God used to the fullest after his conversion in 1926. Other experiences in life would round out the preparation God had in mind for him.

As a young man his ambition and energy drove him to amazing accomplishments. Before he reached 30 he was a highly successful advertising executive, making an income equivalent to around a quarter of a million dollars per year. But the flash depression of 1929 sent his clients into receivership, destroying his business. He went on to establish a new marketing program for the struggling laundry industry. That too was inexplicably pulled out from under him just before achieving its greatest results.

The successes and subsequent knockdowns were all a part of the preparation and calling of Herbert W. Armstrong, as he acknowledges in his Autobiography.

UPS AND DOWNS

Traumatic business reversals in his early life were followed by frustrating delays, detours and roadblocks as he struggled to build a fledgling Work of God and establish a college where God's ministers could be taught. Many dismissed the whole idea as an impossible dream. Still he endured, and the trials continued.

The birth of his first son, Richard David, was "the happiest day of my life," Mr. Armstrong said. That son was taken in a tragic car crash in 1958. In 1967, Mrs. Loma Armstrong, who had been a part of Mr. Armstrong's work from the beginning, died just three months prior to their golden wedding anniversary.

But along with the hardships came many successes.

Ambassador College, for years just an idea, grew to cover three beautiful campuses here and in Europe and gain a reputation unrivaled in higher education. The Plain Truth, with another "mustard

In December 1983 Mr. Armstrong watched the printing of the 50th anniversary edition of The Plain Truth at the facilities of R.R. Donnelly & Sons in Kentucky (left). Personal appearances also marked Mr. Armstrong's dynamic ministry. In January 1982 he addressed a Plain Truth readers' meeting in Hong Kong (below).

AROUND THE WORLD Mr. Armstrong travelled, meeting with heads of state and speaking to the brethren wherever he could. Egyptian President Hosni Mubarak welcomed Mr. Armstrong to the same office in which he had met with the late President Anwar Sadat (above). seed" beginning, grew from a hand-mimeographed newsletter to become one of the largest mass-circulation magazines in the world, now with a monthly printing of over eight million copies in eight languages. The Ambassador Auditorium, dedicated in 1974, was another dream that has become the best theater in Los Angeles, as reported in the 25th anniversary edition of Los Angeles magazine.

Mr. Armstrong was known and respected by dozens of heads of state around the world. Involvement in overseas projects through the Ambassador Foundation and the establishment of Youth Opportunities United, with youth camps in many parts of the world, were major achievements brought about through Mr. Armstrong's relentless drive and enthusiasm for God's Work. The mustard seed beginnings grew to encompass a worldwide publishing and broadcasting effort supported and administered by the Worldwide Church of God.

Through it all he never veered to the left or to the right. The course he set was straight and the goal was constant; the good news of the kingdom shall be preached in all the world. He always maintained a spirit of pioneering — constantly alert for new trails to blaze in doing the Work. He liked to call the teenagers at the Summer Educational Program camps around the world "young pioneers," encouraging them to accept the challenges they faced in life and to actively achieve their incredible human potential.

There are many attributes by which to remember Herbert Armstrong: his wisdom, his energy, his jovial nature, his love and concern for everyone, his willingness to share all that he could with others. Those who knew him best say their most vivid and memorable recollection is of his love of life. He enjoyed life, even with the trials and hardships, with all his might.

He especially loved little children. And they loved him back — as a special “grandfather.” Everywhere he went young children would rush up to see him, to hold his hand, or just to listen to him. At summer camps teenagers hugged him and listened to his words of encouragement and advice. And the love they showed him he beamed back in warm smiles and friendliness.

UNSELFISH SERVICE

Herbert W. Armstrong gave himself unselfishly to the Work of God for over 50 years. The joy of Mr. Armstrong's life, Pastor General Joseph W. Tkach said, was doing the will of God. In the last year of his life, at age 92, he completed his most important book, Mystery of the Ages. Despite failing eyesight and other infirmities, he continued to do the Work of God until the end. But, as God's plan reveals, the end is just the beginning. □

FUNERAL services for Mr. Armstrong were held outdoors to accommodate over four thousand people who came to pay tribute to the Founder of Ambassador College and the Pastor General of the Worldwide Church of God. Dr. Herman Hoeh conducted the graveside service. Young and old alike (inset) mourned the death of God's Apostle.

FOUNDER'S MESSAGE

E DUCATION — and the world of its creation — has lost all knowledge of the PURPOSE and true meaning of life. Modern education doesn't know, and fails to teach: What is MAN? WHY is man? What are the TRUE VALUES? What is THE WAY to peace, happiness, abundant well-being?

This BASIC KNOWLEDGE cannot be acquired by all the exploratory, observational or philosophical powers of man. This kind of necessary knowledge is received only by revelation!

The fruits of modern education have brought mankind to unparalleled decadence and crisis. There is a reason. There has to be a cause for every effect.

There are two alternatives as a starting point — a FOUNDATION for knowledge. This world and its education have adopted the false FOUNDATION.

Ambassador College knows and teaches the PURPOSE and true meaning of life — the TRUE VALUES that pay off — and THE WAY to peace, happiness and abundant well-being. We don't guess, or theorize. We have it on AUTHORITY! The Bible is that Authority, and it is PROVED to be the revelation of the Almighty living GOD to mankind.

The Bible is the world's biggest seller, but also the book almost nobody knows. It is the FOUNDATION of all knowledge, and the approach to acquirable knowledge.

Ambassador College is pioneering the educational system of the WORLD TOMORROW. A foretaste of that peace, happiness and abundant well-being is radiated by Ambassador students.

Ambassador students learn HOW to live — THE WAY to happiness — but the "how to EARN a living" is not neglected.

Ambassador students are taught the MISSING DIMENSION in education — the underlying PURPOSE and the real meaning of life; the worthwhile values; the basic laws of success, not only in economic fields, but in life as a whole. They are given individual attention in the development of character, poise, culture and personality. Ambassador is a unique character-building institution. □

A.C. Life

Surrounded by carefully maintained buildings and grounds, students at Ambassador College in Pasadena — and at our sister campus in Big Sandy, Tex., enjoy a positive and uplifting learning environment in what has been judged one of the most beautiful colleges in America.

Mr. Herbert Armstrong, the founder of Ambassador, designed the College to be “a fantastically beautiful place” where students could get a foretaste of the happy, joyful, World Tomorrow. He said and believed there was no other place like it on earth.

“The purpose of Ambassador training is to teach young men and women not only how to earn a living, but how to live,” he often said.

But everyone knew, including Mr. Armstrong, that the physical beauty of the campus, the tone and character of the buildings, were only background. The real reason that students here radiate happiness is that the very laws which God set in motion to produce happiness are being observed. That is why visitors often comment on the fine character and friendliness of our AC students.

Life at Ambassador is challenging and rewarding. There is no other college or university which teaches the standards and values found here. And nowhere is there a more beautiful or happy educational environment.

The founder designed the College to be a fantastically beautiful place.

Nearly four decades have passed since Ambassador began charting a new course in education. While modern educational philosophy rejects the knowledge found in the Bible, Ambassador has dared to base its entire curriculum on the foundation of God’s Word. That approach has resulted in courses designed to educate the whole man.

Today's generation of students stares down the gun barrel of extinction. Modern education has provided them with all the questions — but few of the answers. They seem destined to inherit a world fraught with political and social injustice and evil, more violent and more threatening than any time in history.

Against this backdrop, Herbert W. Armstrong was led to found Ambassador College 39 years ago. His vision was to establish an institution that would recapture true values and impart them to students who could then base their lives upon this foundational truth and knowledge. In so doing they would be qualified to lead others in a better way of life.

The early years were hard. The fledgling college many times appeared unable to continue. Yet time and again the dedication of the members of the Worldwide Church of God, the tireless work of Mr. Armstrong and the com-

Beyond these physical efforts of course, was the will of the Great God by whom the goals and purposes of the College were inspired. It was He who breathed life and strength into this institution during those early years, and it is He who continues to lead it today.

all walks of life, offering a general and practical basic education. . . ." Mr. Armstrong wrote in the January-February 1947 issue of The Plain Truth magazine.

Mr. Armstrong had found surveys that showed 95 percent of freshmen entering college believed in the existence of God. Yet, those same surveys showed — even in 1947 — that 95 percent of graduating seniors had become agnostics or athiests. Four years of higher education had turned them away from the ty against the consistency of the Word of God. They were taught to resist the easy road of compromise and blaze new trails to develop true depth of character and leadership. They experienced an education that gave them a broad, firm foundation for life.

This course the early students charted is today continuing to be followed and explored. Over the years, thousands of men and women have graduated from Ambassador College with degrees which have a value beyond price.

These people learned — and are learning — how to live. By example and by direct teaching, these people are today helping others learn the right way of life.

In this way, Ambassador College continues to chart a new course in education.

Education is what Ambassador College is all about. But it is a special kind of education. It is one which teaches not only technical and academic skills, but also the moral and spiritual values to which every successful man and woman must attain. It is an education which prepares students for life.

From the earliest days of the College, founder Herbert W. Armstrong fought the notion that this was "just another Bible college." It was to be more than that — much more.

Mr. Armstrong saw the need for a trained ministry as this era of the Church of God began to blossom in the first half of this century. His own physical resources were being stretched to the limits as he tried to minister to members, proclaim the gospel and tend to the administrative needs of a growing Work.

The only way to prepare such a ministry was through a structured learning experience such as was offered at colleges and universities. But Mr. Armstrong saw that the universities were not offering a sufficient education — not for the needs of the Work of God. Those needs dictated that a new concept be devised, a new type of education with a unique emphasis.

From local residents to international royalty, visitors often express their admiration for the students of Ambassador College. Her Majesty Queen Sirikit of Thailand visited the Pasadena campus in March of 1985 as the guest of our late Chancellor.

Classes here are concerned with providing a stable foundation upon which a successful life can be based. Whether that life is to be dedicated to the full-time service of the Church, or to a career and family, a certain type of training is needed that is unavailable anywhere else.

It is a training concerned with the way the world works, how and why it does so, and how to successfully live in it. This educa-

Through the ages education has been hallowed as a special privilege. For centuries it was available to only the rich and politically powerful. Today we have more knowledge available to more people than at any previous time in history. In this age of "information overload" the problem modern man faces is how to use his vast knowledge rightly.

There is a way to achieve happiness, peace and worldwide prosperity. That is why, for nearly 40 years, Ambassador College has blazed a new path in education, based on the unshakeable Word of God. The results speak for themselves.

This is real education.

The rural atmosphere of the Texas campus offers a natural beauty conducive to long walks, pleasant conversations, and a dedicated approach to learning.

Students are often asked, "What's a typical day like at Ambassador College?" The answer that comes to mind is that there is no such thing as a "typical" day at AC.

Things are always changing. Students are growing, developing, improving, and overcoming. New opportunities open up almost every day. It is a continually stimulating, challenging and rewarding environment.

So to try and map out a "typical day in the life of Joe AC" is a tall order. What we can do is provide a candid look at what you might encounter in the course of a week as an Ambassador student. You'll see that it is busy. It is exciting. You may even find it a little surprising.

Let's begin by setting the scene.

You're on the Pasadena campus early on Sunday morning. Outside, the weather is perfectly Southern Californian. In your dorm there are about a dozen people asleep. There are also a couple of empty beds.

They were vacated by students who work at the WATS (Wide Area Telephone Service) department, taking calls in response to

This morning you can have brunch anytime until 11:00 a.m., so you've got a couple of hours to yourself. There's time for a jog around the track, or to do your laundry before the rush sets in.

for. Students here have a wide range of job opportunities available. The biggest employers are Custodial, Landscaping and Food Services. But employment is also available in such departments as Publishing, Mail Processing, Accounting, and Data Processing. Many other departments also hire students.

So you can put in a few hours of work today, after which there's still time to catch up on some homework, research a paper, or prepare for tests. And somehow, on Sundays, there's always time

Monday morning. Everyone's in a rush. A quick shower and it's off to breakfast. A little while later it's out of the Student Center and up the hill to the Academic Center for classes. Most classes are held here in the Fine Arts building, Science building or Ambassador Hall.

Many students schedule their classes in the mornings, leaving afternoons free for work. So, you could easily find yourself spending four 50-minute classes at the Academic Center each Monday, Wednesday and Friday morning. Typical classes might include Fundamentals of Theology with Mr. Ames, Prophecy with Mr. Kelly, Epistles of Paul with Mr. Meredith, Life and Teachings with Mr. McNair, along with Math, Science, Speech or Home Economics.

After spending a few hours at work on Monday afternoon, you can move on to one of the popular sports at Ambassador, like basketball. Even if they don't play, many students like to go and cheer on their teams. If you do play, you will practice at least a couple of hours a week.

Dinner is a great time to catch up with friends, enjoying their company after a busy day. It's also a good opportunity to make new acquaintances. There is a distinctly international flavor about Ambassador, with students from over 30 different

In addition, students in Pasadena enjoy the opportunity of meeting ministers from around the nation and around the world through the refresher program conducted at headquarters. It's a good way to keep up with what is happening at home and in the constantly growing worldwide Work of God.

After enjoying dinner and the chance to talk with friends old and new, it's time to settle down to some study or to fulfill assignments. There always seems to be a speech to prepare or a paper to write. And there are plenty of extracurricular activities to keep

These activities provide enjoyable learning experiences for those who want to be involved. So your Monday evening study might be followed by an hour of radio announcing at KBAC, or a class meeting to discuss an upcoming activity. All of which makes for a rather full day. And there are still four days to go before you get a break.

Tuesday can be a lighter day for classes. At eleven o'clock students and faculty meet in the man Clubs. They are another vital aspect of the education offered here — an aspect that is stimulating, challenging and packed full of opportunities for personal growth. The same can be said of the women's clubs which meet on Mondays and Wednesdays.

There is always much to be done following these meetings, but it is rarely a burden. Many students form study groups and get together once or twice a week to go over class material and work on assignments together. This helps ease the load each person must carry individually.

◀ FOCUS ON GRADUATION

A reward well worth waiting for — graduation. Senior Marguerite Dubois receives a congratulatory hug at the close of a week of year-end activities that seemed to go by like a blur.

▼ FINISHING THE COURSE

"I have finished the race, I have completed the course." Graduation is a happy time and a sad time for most AC students. A time that's not really the end, but the beginning.

Each individual learns he must set and keep priorities in order to take advantage of all AC has to offer.

time to relax and enjoy a break from the hectic weekly routine.

Who could do without the Sabbath? Sabbath brunch, notes from friends, dates, services and time for private study and meditation are all highlights of this special day. It's a good feeling to slow down, yet know that you're really catching up.

After services and dinner you might take in a basketball game down in the gymnasium. Faculty, students and friends pack the bleachers for Ambassador's exciting Saturday night intramural action from November through February.

So ends your week at AC. Hope you enjoyed it. Maybe you have some questions like, "How do you keep up the pace?", or "When is there time to study?" An important lesson every student here learns is that each individual must set and keep priorities.

By learning to prioritize, to set goals and work towards them, students learn valuable lessons in how to make the most not only of college, but of life. □

Yosemite Chief's Firing Tied to Ranger Morale, Crime

By MICHAEL SULLIVAN, Times Staff Writer

The resignation of Yosemite National Park Superintendent James Lacey, who was abruptly fired last week, was part of a long struggle to improve morale and a long struggle to curb crime in the park.

The GAO report was the latest in a series of investigations of the park. Earlier investigations, which in some cases resulted in disciplinary action, had been conducted by the park's internal review unit and other agencies.

But Superintendent Lacey's firing was a surprise. He had the reputation of being a "tough" and "no-nonsense" manager. He was seen as a "strong" manager.

The "directed transfer" of Lacey was a surprise. He was a planning post in the National Park Service's western regional office in San Francisco.

report has not been made public, but GAO investigators with access to Interior's preliminary findings said neither investigation had come up with any evidence of criminal wrongdoing.

The investigations came after Yosemite Ranger Paul Berkowitz told a hearing of the House Interior subcommittee in the park last October that money used for undercover drug purchases in the park was being improperly administered.

Shuttle Explodes; Crew Killed Crew Blows Apart Shortly After Perfect Liftoff

President Mourns the Loss of Six Astronauts, Teacher

By PETER H. KING, Times Staff Writer

KENNEDY SPACE CENTER, Fla. — The shuttle Challenger exploded shortly after liftoff Tuesday, killing six astronauts and a schoolteacher chosen to become the first female to venture into space.

The horrible spectacle occurred at 8:55 a.m. PST eight minutes into what had appeared to be a perfect launch from the Space Center.

It was witnessed with stunning clarity by thousands of spectators here and millions more Americans watching on television. Extraordinary attention was focused on the launch because of the presence aboard of Sharm Chitra Mikkal, a 37-year-old high school teacher from New Hampshire and a mother of two small children.

"This was truly a national day," said President Reagan, who last year declared that an educator should be the first everyday American to ride on a shuttle mission. "We mourn their loss as a nation together," he said in a nationally televised statement.

The President postponed for one week his State of the Union address scheduled for Tuesday night.

'Small Ancestors' of Debris

After the explosion, helicopters and ships converged on an offshore area to make a rough count of debris. The Challenger disintegrated within minutes. Its right-hand booster had burst into a small stream of debris, including heat-resistant tiles from the nozzle and nozzles of its boosters.

National Aeronautics and Space Administration officials had said they did not know what triggered the explosion. An intensive search for shuttle activity was suspended for the moment. Reagan vowed that there would be a full-scale investigation.

The explosion came at one of the most serene points in the shuttle program. One minute before the shuttle was scheduled to launch, the crew received pre-launch instructions and they had been allowed to decompress at pressure on the shuttle, as well as on the reproductive system, but tank and booster failure would be tragic, it was said.

A Defect in Booster or Ruptured Seam? Why Shuttle Exploded Still a Major Mystery

By THOMAS H. MAUGH II, Times Science Writer

A little more than a minute after the space shuttle Challenger lifted off from pad 39B at the Kennedy Space Center Tuesday morning, a thin tongue of flame appeared between the left booster rocket and the shuttle's main fuel tank. The flame was not seen by observers on the ground, but slow motion videotapes of the launch show it clearly.

Less than a second later, nearly 300,000 pounds of liquid hydrogen in the main fuel tank exploded in a massive fireball that enveloped the shuttle orbiter and sent both solid rocket boosters flying off in nearby and ignited the explosion. Investigators will probably not be able to determine precisely which of these scenarios occurred, however, until the wreckage of the boosters and the fuel tank are recovered, a process that could take several weeks.

Investigators of the most hazardous cause for the shuttle, as well as other rockets, lies in the fact that they are carrying a full fuel load and are carrying a full load of heat because they are subjected to maximum stress during that period.

With all five rocket boosters, main stress during that period. With all five rocket boosters, there on the shuttle itself and one.

Tragedy Brings Space Program to a Standstill

By J. J. ABRAMSON, Times Staff Writer

The tragic loss of the space shuttle Challenger Tuesday, which threw serious doubts on the nation's manned space program to a standstill during what was to have been the busiest time in its history.

While the loss of several lives for the shuttle program is a tragedy, it is also a setback for the space program. It will be the first time, before another shuttle launch, that the shuttle program will be suspended.

The National Aeronautics and Space Administration will not launch again until it has completed the investigation into the cause of the explosion and the shuttle program is suspended.

CALENDAR

The 1986 Calendar

P A S A D E N A

A year of change draws the student body closer together and deepens the bond of commitment to the Ambassador experience.

Busy — that's the way we could all describe the past year. From the rush through registration and orientation activities to the final push through exams and graduation, the pace was relentless.

The annual pre-semester student leadership conference brought the 1985-1986 student leaders together for three days of meetings with the College administration. A trip to Magic Mountain provided the chance for resident assistants, club presidents and student body leaders to get acquainted before the school year began.

Back at the conference, Student Body President Paul Bennett indelibly stamped "The Ripple Effect" on each student leader's mind. His purpose was to make the student leaders aware of their responsibility to set a right example. If they lived the right way and exemplified Ambassador's standards, the student body would do likewise, he said.

A FLYING START

From around the world students poured back into Pasadena for orientation and registration. Appointments with academic advisors were made, classes chosen and schedules set up. Then there was the joy of rescheduling classes because the ones you wanted closed just before you got to register! Then it was time to pay — or tell Mr. Suckling how you were going to pay, but not right now. Many students pay their bill through payroll deduction.

Not only did registration require attention, but a host of other demands reminded everyone that another year had begun. Employment had to be found, then work schedules were juggled, balanced and squeezed.

Incoming juniors who had graduated from the two-year program in Big Sandy were welcomed to Pasadena at a special reception in the Auditorium, hosted by the faculty.

Freshmen Reception was a highlight of Orientation Week activities. Faculty members mingled with the incoming class and both were able to get to know each other better.

And before they really knew what was happening, the 131 freshmen were off to a flying start. The layout of the campus, originally a maze, quickly became familiar and well travelled territory.

Miracle on Mt. Whitney

A freak blizzard trapped four students on Mt. Whitney for two days during September. Neil Matkin, Will Flaman, Teri Pfister and Janyth Clemons spent a harrowing 48 hours snowed-in atop the highest point in the continental United States.

The four were trapped in a small stone building at the summit when an unseasonal snowstorm covered the trail they had used to ascend the mountain. Inside the shelter they tried but were unable to start a fire. By sharing emergency blankets and huddling together they tried to ward off the intense cold.

Lightning struck the shelter and each of the students during their first night at the summit. They sang hymns together, prayed individually and as a group, and did all they could to combat the cold. The severe cold affected Teri in particular. By the end of the second night her friends realized they had to find a way to get back down the mountain.

Just before noon on their second day in the shelter, two forest rangers arrived at the summit. They had scaled the east face of the mountain, faced 35

m.p.h. headwinds and battled through deep snow to reach the group. The rangers admitted they had not expected to find the four students alive.

A rescue team arrived soon after the rangers and served a hot meal to the students. A Forest Service helicopter was unable to land until late in the day because of heavy cloud cover.

48 hours snowed-in atop the highest point in the continental U.S.

Surviving the ordeal has left lasting impressions upon each of the four students. Despite the hardships and dangers to which they were exposed, they were very aware of the protection God had given them. "Look how our prayers were answered," Will said later. "We were almost totally unscathed."

SNOWSTORM caught four Ambassadors at the summit of Mt. Whitney. Searchers did not expect to find the four alive.

The Television Department recorded the event for the 1985 "Behind the Work" film shown at the Feast of Tabernacles. Evangelist Richard Ames, who teaches the Fundamentals of Theology class, described the occasion as an "historic event." The class felt very privileged to have been a part of Mr. Armstrong's last major appearance.

MONTHS OF PREPARATION went into the release of Mystery of the Ages (top right to bottom). Quality of printing was checked and advertisements were prepared for major newspapers. On Sept. 10 Mr. Armstrong launched the book to the Fundamentals of Theology class. The book was prominently displayed in bookstores.

TRANQUILITY of Camp River Glen is captured in these photographs from the Sophomore class trip during first semester.

RIVERGLEN

"Dear-Hunting" season opened earlier for the seniors. They travelled up to River Glen before the end of September to enjoy the fresh air and great outdoors. Class Advisor Arthur Suckling and Dean of Students Greg Albrecht and their families accompanied the Seniors for the weekend. For many of the Class of '86 this was to be the last time they would enjoy a River Glen weekend. It was a time for remembering and for looking ahead to "view this as a transitional year," as Mr. Albrecht had advised.

FESTIVAL BREAK

As the leaves on campus were just beginning to hint at the onset of autumn, the student body was scattered to the four corners of the earth for the fall festival break.

From Hawaii to Haiti and Alaska to Australia, students represented the College at Feast sites around the world. Many manned booths selling Young Ambassador tapes and copies of the Envoy, as well as providing information about College life.

For some the Feast was time to spend with family and friends; for others it offered a chance to experience a completely different culture for the first time. Those who stayed in Pasadena filled a vital role in the continuance of the Work during the eight-day festival.

EDUCATIONAL FIELD DAY

Just one month later midterms struck! And the pace began to quicken. Papers were due and tests loomed on every horizon. Late nights were devoted to study and research to ensure a good account being given. But Educational Field Day gave weary minds and bodies some well-earned respite for a while.

A triple feature had been arranged by Geoff Robertson, student body vice-president. After breaking up into three groups, students were treated to tours of the new Gulfstream III, the Griffith Park Observatory and the Los Angeles Zoo. The lunch will long be remembered as being "finger lickin' good!"

NOVEMBER DAYS

Turnabout Weekend gave the ladies a chance to ask the men of AC for dates. A movie night that November weekend featured the classic comedy It's a Mad, Mad, Mad, Mad World. After Turnabout the Senior class was hard at work putting the finishing touches on some outstanding decorations for Thanksgiving Ball. It was their last chance to work together on a major project for the benefit of the faculty and student body.

"The Harvest is Plenteous" combined dancing, conversation and comedy with sincere thanksgiving for the blessings enjoyed by everyone present. Deputy Chancellor Raymond McNair complimented the Seniors on the job they'd done and announced the Freshman Class President. Michael Snellgrove was taken by surprise at the announcement, but gave his assurance that he would do his best to serve the class through the remainder of the year.

TO THE END OF THE YEAR

Thanksgiving break afforded the opportunity to rest for a few days before plunging into the final weeks of first semester. Students enjoyed Thanksgiving dinners at the homes of local Church members and married students. Some were able to head home for a couple of days. Most just enjoyed the break and took the opportunity to catch up on assignments.

The Ambassador Foundation hosted a display of "The Secret Army of China's First Emperor" in the Hall of Administration during November. The exhibition featured a priceless collection of hand-sculptured terra-cotta figures excavated from the burial site of the emperor Qin Shi Huang Ti in China. Thousands of people visited the campus during the exhibition.

In the midst of the activity and pressures of the final two weeks of classes the Pasadena student body was sobered and saddened by the announcement of the impending closure of the sister campus in Texas. (See our special Big Sandy Tribute, p. 284.) Deputy Chancellor Raymond McNair read the letter from Mr. Armstrong announcing the closure to a hushed assembly in the Auditorium. Later, the decision was reversed.

Temperatures around the country plunged while Southern California enjoyed warm December weather. But it was time to study for finals — the clear, sunny skies could only be looked at. Classes came to a close and finals occupied the attention of all.

ROSE PARADE

The annual Tournament of Roses parade was held in cool, fine weather, aiding the efforts of the student body in raising funds for the activities held during the academic year. The winter break was a time for some to return home to spend time with family; for others it was a time to work or just take a well-earned break from the pressures of a hectic AC year.

"SNOWLINE" PARTY

Preparations were well under way in second semester for the annual Snowline Party when an unforeseen problem arose — no snow. The unseasonably warm weather had been a delight for all but the skiers. Ski resorts closed their doors as the expected cold weather failed to arrive. Warm rains added to the problem in the days preceding the Snowline activity. Any available snow melted and the slopes turned to mud.

Resourceful as ever, the organizers made alternate plans and the result was a relaxing day in the mountains. Dubbed the "Timberline Party," the activity was held in cool, but clear weather in the San Gabriel mountains, about two hours from campus. After hiking, eating and playing a hard game of "Capture the Flag," everyone was ready for a good night's sleep.

GOD'S APOSTLE

Just four days before classes resumed, students, faculty and staff, along with thousands of others worldwide, were stunned by the death of founder Herbert W. Armstrong. Those on campus for the break were summoned to a special assembly in the Auditorium at 11:30 a.m. on Thursday, Jan. 16.

"God granted Mr. Armstrong 93 dynamic years of life," said Joseph W. Tkach, the man Mr. Armstrong had appointed to succeed him. "This is one of the most sobering times we will experience in this lifetime," he said.

On Sunday, Jan. 19, Mr. Armstrong's body was taken to Turner & Stevens, C. Lewis Edwards Mortuary in Altadena. The hearse was escorted to the gravesite by an honor guard of Ambassador College student leaders. The Advisory Council of Elders served as pallbearers, carrying the solid mahogany casket to the grave which is located between his mother's and his wife's. Mr. Armstrong's son Richard is buried alongside his mother.

Several thousand people attended the funeral. Tributes continued to pour in to headquarters during the week.

The following weekend was a memorable one for students employed by and volunteering for the Wide Area Telephone Response department (WATS). A total of 81,359 calls were received in response to the World Tomorrow telecast titled "A Tribute to Herbert W. Armstrong."

"That his final program brought such a great response is a tremendous tribute to Mr. Armstrong," said Mr. Tkach. "This is also a clear encouragement to carry on God's work with greater determination and zeal."

CHARTING THE COURSE

The annual Sophomore Ball and Speech Banquet in February provided 725 guests with a memorable evening of fine dining, dancing and speaking. Four speakers were selected from the Ambassador and Women's Clubs to present speeches at the banquet. The theme of "Charting the Course" was reflected in the nautical style of decorations. The stage represented a pier in front of a seascape mural background.

After the speaking portion of the evening Mr. Tkach addressed the students and guests. He said all four of the speeches were outstanding.

As second semester progressed a trickle of engagement announcements became a flood. Forum, Assembly and Sabbath brunch announcements abounded with news of forthcoming marriages. In no way associated with this phenomenon was the Turnabout Weekend screening of the movie The Gods Must Be Crazy. Another highlight of the weekend was a square dance in the gym.

ROGER BRYANT

Faculty member gives Gold Medal Series recital

Big Sandy Faculty member Roger Bryant delivered a public performance in the Ambassador Auditorium during second semester.

Mr. Bryant, accompanied by pianist Ruth Walter, performed as part of the Ambassador Foundation's Gold Medal Series. His performance included arias and songs by Mozart, Donizetti, Haydn, Mendelssohn, Handel, Purcell, and Schubert. He was called back by the audience for two encores.

Considered to be one of the finest tenors in the United States, Mr. Bryant has previously performed as a guest soloist with the Bodensee Symphonie Orchester of West Germany and the Los Angeles Chamber Orchestra.

In other public performances he won second place in the San Francisco Opera auditions and was a finalist in the Lyric Opera of Chicago auditions in 1975. Last year he performed with the William Hall Chorale in the Verdi Requiem at the Dorothy Chandler Pavillion in Los Angeles.

Mr. Bryant is director of the Big Sandy College Chorale and Chairman of the Music Department. He has performed before many Church and College audiences in Big Sandy, Pasadena and at a number of Feast sites.

FIRST L.A. MARATHON

The first official City of Los Angeles Marathon was staged March 9, with five AC students joining the field of 11,000 runners for the grueling 26-mile event.

Outreach hosted the annual Senior Citizen's Banquet for 100 senior citizens and 35 ministers and guests during March. It was the largest-ever banquet arranged by Outreach. The event gave scores of students an opportunity to serve their elders in the Pasadena area.

"Ancient Civilizations" was the theme of the Freshman Costume Ball of 1986. Attire from centuries — even millenia — gone by were paraded by students and faculty in the Greek-pillared Student Center decor. It was the first major activity organized by the Freshman class.

L.A.'S FIRST MARATHON drew more than 5000 participants, including five students from Ambassador College: Radford Arner, Deanne Bochenski, Eric Katzer, Karla Lyon and Sue McDonald.

ANCIENT CIVILIZATIONS was the theme of the annual Freshman Costume Ball. David Bensinger managed a dance or two despite his mummified state (above). Clockwise from top: Randy McGowan and Grant Ledingham went as Israelite spies, while Grant's wife Janne went as the grapes; Paul Bennett and Geoff Robertson combined to go as Goliath; Don Turgeon and Bob Bapst were part of King Solomon's court; Carrie Docken somehow found a way to dance with Bill Palmer's Hanging Gardens of Babylon; Roger Hooper arrived looking like an Australian dressed up as an ancient Chinese warrior.

RUMORS

As April rolled around thoughts were turning to Spring Break and summer plans. Rumors persisted throughout the month that "this would be the day" when announcements regarding summer opportunities and student leadership positions would be made.

For sophomores particularly, April was a red-letter month. Acceptance letters for the four-year bachelor program had been mailed just a week prior to the class' special trip to River Glen. For many the trip into the mountains was a time for reflecting on the past two years and making plans for life after College. A special dinner on Saturday night set new standards for River Glen elegance and cuisine as the class enjoyed a four-course meal with wine, roses and bow-tied waiters. A special presentation was made to class adviser Richard Ames for his involvement with the class.

Upon their return from River Glen the Sophomores joined the rest of the student body for the annual Etiquette Dinner in the Student Center. Once again Dibar Apartian, director of the French-speaking areas of the Work, conducted the evening.

DIVERSE DIVERSIONS abound during the year, from a stint in the kitchen at River Glen to the Etiquette Dinner with Mr. Apartian, or perhaps performing in the Elijah at the Spring Concert.

SOMETHING TO APPLAUD

In his first forum to the student body as chancellor, Mr. Tkach announced plans to keep the Big Sandy campus of the College open. The announcement made simultaneously to both campuses via a telephone hook-up, was greeted by enthusiastic applause. Mr. Tkach also announced the top student leadership positions for the 1986-87 school year, those selected for overseas programs, ministerial trainees and full-time hires.

Spring Break came late this year and tired minds and bodies appreciated some time away from the regular hectic schedule of AC life. Some went home, others stayed on campus. Still others visited Big Sandy for the two-week recess. The Big Sandy Chorale traveled to Pasadena for a concert with the Pasadena Chorale in the Auditorium. Their performance of the Elijah was the highlight of the year for both groups.

STUDENT SOLOISTS Lynn Burrows, Wendy Gubb, Bill Daniels and Robert Rodzaj join other members of the Concert Choir during a performance of Mendelssohn's Elijah. The annual Spring Concert combining Church and College performers is a highlight of the Ambassador Chorale's year-long endeavors.

LET'S MAKE A DEAL

One week before Spring Break four members of the College Publications staff travelled to Big Sandy to take color shots of the campus for the Envoy. The beautiful weather plus the wonderful hospitality made the trip truly a success.

San Diego was the destination for the Senior class as they got away for a few days of rest and relaxation during the annual Senior Class Trip. The three-day trip included a journey across the Mexican border into Tijuana, trips to the San Diego Zoo and Sea World, and a dinner cruise on San Diego Harbor.

To raise money for their trip the Seniors appeared as members of the audience on the "Let's Make a Deal" game show. The students dressed up in costumes to better their chances of being contestants. Some did play and won prizes such as a dishwasher, vacuum cleaner, other appliances and even cash.

After the break was over there were only seven days of classes before finals and graduation. It was a real race to the finish to prepare for exams, finalize assignments and schedule time for the many activities of the last weeks of school.

BEACH PARTY

One of the many activities during the last week was the Spring Beach Party. After an early breakfast the student body packed up and headed out to Huntington Beach for a fun-filled day. The day started off a bit cloudy but the clouds burned off to allow the sun to shine in its full force. And as is customary some red faces were seen Monday during class.

SENIOR MEMORIES came wrapped in a week-long package during the annual Senior trip, this year to San Diego. A dinner cruise on a Show Boat (right) and then the trek home.

THE FINAL PUSH and the final pull finds students giving it their all at the final beach party (above) and during the last week of classes (right). Rebecca McCann is surprised to find a photographer taking pictures in her class.

Finally graduation week arrived. Families flocked into Pasadena for graduation activities. Graduation Ball was centered on the theme: "To Everything There Is A Season." The decorations and entertainment used the four seasons of the year as a basis for the message. The Junior class spent countless hours during the year — and especially during graduation week — putting together an elegant evening of dancing and entertainment.

Graduation brunch the next morning was followed by graduation ceremonies in the afternoon. Student Body President Paul Bennett delivered his discourse entitled "New Beginnings." Graduation was not an end, he said, but really the start of a whole new experience in life.

HIGHLIGHTING a busy year, graduation week concluded the year — and in some cases the career — for AC students. Chancellor Tkach (right, top to bottom) presents a diploma to Candace Martin; Mr. McNair addresses the Graduation Brunch audience; Sophomore graduate Joe Campbell feeds the newest Campbell, Micah Lynn.

CONCERT chorale and orchestra (left), under the direction of John Schroeder, for graduation ceremonies. Afterwards, lots of picture taking and hugging.

Chancellor Joseph W. Tkach gave the main address, encouraging the graduating Seniors and Sophomores by saying "the best is yet to come," which was the title of his address. Mr. Tkach then accepted Deputy Chancellor Raymond McNair's recommendation for the conferring of degrees upon the graduating classes. He presented Associate of Arts, Associate of Science and Bachelor of Arts degrees to more than 220 graduating students.
So ended the 1985-86 Pasadena school year. □

VAIL

Skiiers from Pasadena and Big Sandy hit the black diamond slopes of Vail, Colo., again this year for the annual Winter Break ski trip.

More than 200 students traveled to Vail for the event. Joining them were faculty members from both campuses. The Antlers condominiums were home for the week, with features such as fireplaces, kitchens, and the ever-popular jacuzzies.

Most skiiers took the first lift up the mountain at about 9 a.m. each morning, taking lunch with them to eat at chalets on the slopes. After taking the last possible ride up the mountain around 3:30 p.m. they returned to the condominiums for dinner and evening activities — going out to eat, browsing through the shops, going to a movie or ice skating.

Snow conditions were ideal throughout the four-day trip. Although the packed-powder slopes were patched with ice on the first day of skiing, an overnight snowfall of eight to ten inches left the mountains coated with fresh powder for the remaining days.

"The trip was great," said sophomore Andrew Graham. "A trip to Vail is one of those experiences that you'll never forget." □

The 1986 Calendar

B I G S A N D Y

From orientation through graduation, the Ambassador lifestyle is constantly busy, exciting and challenging.

The new college year began with orientation week, incorporating a myriad of college social activities which helped to make the last half of August and the month of September a challenging time for everyone. Feast preparations rounded out a hectic month in which students and faculty were enthusiastically involved.

Volleyball, races, dancing and a sing-a-long all helped every student to get acquainted with his colleagues and faculty at the Labor Day beach party on Lake Loma. With the excitement of orientation week in late August a series of seminars, lectures and assemblies helped the incoming Freshmen properly plant their feet on Ambassador soil during Orientation Week.

A freshman reception gave students the opportunity to meet the faculty while experiencing a taste of quality foods followed by a formal dance held in the Dining Hall.

Also during this month, a piano concert performance by freshman David Bilowus was presented to a large audience in the college auditorium. This concert was preparatory to an AICF performance in Jordan before the royal family prior to the Feast.

Softball season gave students the opportunity to participate in intramural programs even in spite of the heavy rains experienced during September.

'85 FESTIVAL

Excitement and anticipation swept the Big Sandy campus in October when over 5,000 brethren gathered in observance of the 1985 Feast of Tabernacles. Ambassador College students from both Big Sandy and Pasadena campuses manned the AC booth selling festival tapes and distributed Mr. Armstrong's book, Mystery of the Ages.

Redwood Room Manager Gary Shaffer, along with senior leaders Tony Marcinelli and Dwyer Hockwald, supervised 150 students working on concessions. Ambassador students worked a total of 5,800 hours and earned $13,200 for the student activity fund. Sophomore Warren Zehrung commented that "the giving attitudes of the students" was a reason for the success. The most nomadic student body in Big Sandy's history traveled worldwide to keep God's Festival.

BEACH PARTY on Lake Loma enabled Sophomore Bonnie Barfield to "catch a few rays" during first semester (above). It also gave the guys a chance to flex their muscles (right). Beach parties bring faculty and students together in a sort of giant family outing.

"In spite of the earthquake that hit Mexico only about 11 days before the Feast... it still went full speed ahead," remarked Paula Kinster. Students visited 13 international sites ranging from Acapulco to New Zealand and 19 American sites from Alaska to St. Petersburg.

BENEFIT CONCERT

Freshman David Bilowus performed his piano recital in Amman, Jordan. Benefits from the concert went to the School for the Physically Handicapped, supported in part by the Ambassador International Cultural Foundation.

The Young Ambassadors, who performed at the Corpus Christi Feast site, gave their first performance in Big Sandy for the Silver Ambassadors, Sept. 22. The International Club's second meeting hosted a Canadian night. The club gave Canadian students an opportunity to inform their audience about Canada in speeches and skits. Paul Anderson gave a comical "Just what do you mean, eh?" inform speech while Terry Dobson and Merv Boyle presented a short enactment of a hockey game.

In sports, men's and women's softball league championship games ended a softball season of many rain-outs. Men's team A under Sophomore Gary Roth earned a perfect 4-0 record, while Senior George Townsend's team topped the B league. After a steady battle for the lead, the Faculty inched past Dave Buckley's team for an 8-7 victory after a clutch hit by Gil Norman brought in the winning run.

GREETINGS are extended to the incoming freshmen by Dean of Students Larry Salyer and his wife Judy (above) while the upperclassmen are kept busy serving (right).

Introductions to Ambassador life offer students the chance to socialize and to serve.

Miscellany

The Big Sandy Portfolio features a 'Miscellany' column in each issue. 'Miscellany' highlights some of the light-hearted moments of AC life. Here are some of the best. . .

Cheesy Situation

Have you ever wondered what would happen to a block of cheese if you put it in a clothes dryer?

Sophomore Tom Mansanarez found out the hard way Sunday evening, Sept. 15, when he baked a block of Redwood Room cheddar in the dryer of Men's Dorm 1.

It seems that Tom doesn't like his cheese hard and cold, so he decided a quick way to soften it would be in the warmth of a dryer in use. Freshman Steve Andreas was the unwitting partner in this unscientific experiment — Steve was just trying to do his laundry.

Tom wanted to leave the cheese in the tumbling inferno for just a couple minutes prior to a math study session. The only problem was that he forgot it for about 20 minutes. As he was leaving the dorm for the study session he asked himself if he had everything when he was faced with the awful truth — his cheddar was still in the dryer, reduced to a liquid, yellow mush.

Roommate John Hanson was reassuring in view of Tom's predicament. "It looks like the Blob," John said. Tom, on the other hand, was a bit more practical: "If you were making nachos that's what you'd do," he quipped.

Overseas for the Weekend

A weekend trip to somewhere just a few hours away for a change of pace is a rare opportunity cherished by students. But a weekend in England . . . on less than $300?

It almost sounds too good to be true. But claiming to be literally following the advice of classmate Nick Efthyvoulos and even advice of faculty members during forums and assemblies to "step out" and take opportunities, sophomores Richard Hill, George Litavsky, and John Zyskoski expanded their cultural and geographic horizons by going to England.

The idea became reality when Richard's aunt told him about a round-trip flight to England for only $200. Richard made all the arrangements and the three got permission from Dr. Ward to miss classes on Monday and Tuesday.

February 7 Richard drove George and John to Houston, where they stayed at Richard's home Friday night and the Sabbath. Saturday night, they became literal Ambassadors as they flew overseas. All three enjoyed the flight over. Richard said they even gave away some Church literature to interested passengers on the flight. Sunday morning they arrived and went to the home of Linda Pike's father, where they stayed for the trip. They visited Bricket Wood, the Kingshead Pub (built in 1588) and several other sights on Sunday before heading to London. They took the train into London and visited numerous points of interest throughout the city.

Monday morning, the tourists went back to London to do some more sight-seeing. They visited several pubs, Piccadilly Circus and the British Museum.

"We went through 4,000 years of history in an hour and a half," said Richard about the museum.

The three tired but happy Ambassadors bid England good-bye Tuesday morning, but not before they had made a point of seeing Prime Minister Margaret Thatcher. They waved and yelled greetings to her as she walked into her house in London.

Richard, George and John arrived back on campus Tuesday night. None of them had spent more than $280 on the trip.

"We went, we saw, we conquered," said Richard.

Mystery Date

With the many weekend activities at college, college coeds sometimes have several dates in one weekend. But for sophomore Marie Myers, Friday night Bible Study Nov. 8 turned into six dates.

The adventure began the previous Saturday when Marie got an anonymous Sabbath note asking for a "mystery date" the following weekend. The note asked her to reply on Monday by wearing red, meaning "yes," or black, meaning "no." Marie, who thought it would be fun, answered in red.

Friday night at 7 p.m., senior Tony Marcinelli arrived at Marie's dorm and announced to Marie that he was her mystery date and the two began to walk to Bible Study. When they got to the road, Tony escorted Marie to a parked car and opened the door. Inside was sophomore Steve Dickey. Marie, a little taken aback, looked at Tony, who told her that Steve was her date. Steve agreed and pointed to the red jacket he had on. Marie hopped in the car and the two began riding around campus when Steve stopped the car and up stepped Jeff Pilsner and claimed his "mystery date."

Jeff escorted Marie (now thoroughly confused) to a car with George Suskalo in the driver's seat. George drove to the Field House and pulled up to the curb. Up walked Brian Rennie with a smile, who proceeded to escort Marie into Bible Study. "I thought it was over when we walked into Bible Study," said Marie, but Brian then told her that he needed to get a drink of water and asked her to sit down and he would be back. He never returned.

Finally, sophomore Danny Apartian walked up and identified himself as Marie's real date. After Bible Study, they went to Marie's dorm for refreshments and conversation. Danny said that it was fun arranging the "mystery date," and Marie said that the whole experience was just that — an experience.

"It was kind of neat having six dates in one evening!" she said.

High Finance

Godfather IV in Big Sandy? No, it's sophomore Dan Vanderpoel and accomplices Jim Garden and George Suskalo paying his semester tuition. Security guard Chip DeVilbiss joined the entourage to provide protection for the $1,050 in one dollar bills that Dan used to pay the bill.

George said that he and Dan came up with the idea one night when they were talking, and the next day Dan went to the bank and got the money. George said that when Dan opened the briefcase, most of the office personnel were amused, at least initially.

"Mr. McNeely was also amused until he realized he had to count it," said George. □

HOME SWEET HOME

The Sophomore class put in hundreds of man-hours preparing for the Thanksgiving Ball November 24. Meanwhile, the student body enjoyed seeing how the other half lives during Open House, and how the other half dances at the Square Dance. Dorm parties also added to the excitement in November.

Thanksgiving Ball, a tradition at Ambassador College, was the first big ball of the year and ended a month of mounting excitement. Sophomores put in many nights of preparation to give one of the best and most memorable Thanksgiving Balls ever. The AC band performed at the dance. During the entertainment portion some sophomores tried their hand at acting.

At Open House on Nov.3, all dorms and booths were open for public scrutiny. Many dorms, especially the women's, decorated and offered snacks. Music was playing in many rooms and photos were out for neighbors to see. A square dance was held in the gym where most students will remember "away...together."

YOU'RE INVITED

During mid-November all 14 dorms held parties. Some of the men's and women's dorms combined their resources to stage larger parties, while others preferred smaller gatherings. The themes of the parties varied widely; some dorms threw luaus or costume parties, while others went out for pizza or hamburgers.

Club seminars were held in November for men and women. The seminars discussed the roles of men and women as Ambassadors, as well as good grooming and health.

Pasadena Dean of Students Greg Albrecht visited the Big Sandy campus during November and spoke at Forum as well as teaching two freshman classes.

Volleyball was the sport of the month in November and co-ed "team" volleyball was the feature. Nearly 250 enthusiastic students took part in three leagues, with 25 teams total.

Outdoor movie night became indoor movie night due to weather conditions and the International Club hosted an Australian night.

SEMESTER END

Both the semester and 1985 drew to a close as a sobering December rolled around.

In a special forum called for Tuesday, Dec. 10, Deputy Chancellor Leslie McCullough, reading from a letter from Pastor General Herbert W. Armstrong, announced that the Texas campus would close at the end of the 1985-86 school year.

SET-UP for Sophomore Ball and Speech Banquet took many hours of labor (below). The theme, "Whistle Stop," was depicted in the giant mural students erected in the gymnasium. Many hours of planning and preparation combined with teamwork are required to stage Ambassador's social events. The 5K Run, sponsored by the Running Club, gets off to a good start (bottom).

After the Thanksgiving activities, preparations for the Speech Banquet began. One person from each Ambassador and Women's Club was chosen to represent his or her club in the speakoffs. The final selection was made by a panel of faculty judges. Speakers were evaluated on the basis of content, organization, effectiveness, delivery and adherence to established time restrictions. C.W. Davis, Dave Clark, Janie Shaw, and Kim Demont were chosen to be speakers.

FIRE IT UP

Seventy-seven students participated in the "Fire It Up" 5K fun run on campus. The race was sponsored by the Ambassador Running Club. Awards were given to the top three male and female finishers in the Freshmen and Sophomore categories. Jerry Benedetti, Steve Clark and Mark Stapleton took first, second and third places respectively in the Freshmen men's division. In the Sophomore category, Clayton Groom won first, Abe Stores took second and Dan Phillips won third.

In the women's division, Carrie St. Charles won first, Tamara Stout took second and Sonya Blythe placed third in the Freshman category. Marie Myers, Donna Elam and Melinda Hopper took first, second and third respectively in the Sophomore category.

FOOTSTEPS

January — a time to reflect on past events and future activities; a time of sudden endings and new beginnings.

"There is no man who can fill his shoes, but, Father, we aim to follow his footsteps." Such were the words of the new Pastor General Joseph W. Tkach in his closing prayer at Herbert W. Armstrong's funeral, Jan. 19, 1986. Both faculty and students felt the impact and loss of one of the greatest leaders in the history of the Church of God.

Activities resumed as usual for students returning from a relaxing but action-packed winter break. While most of the student body were daring the "black diamond" slopes at Vail, nine Big Sandy students cycled 530 miles through the hot summer beauty of southern New Zealand.

Senior Dwyer Hockwald also traveled overseas as a counselor for the Winter Educational Program in Austria.

After the Vail skiers' return to campus, the student body took inventory for the Dallas Neiman-Marcus department stores.

THE BAND PLAYED ON

February began with an unusual twist — Turnabout Weekend. The women asked the men out for the various activities over the weekend, such as Bible Study, brunch, Sabbath services, a basketball game Saturday night and a movie-night Sunday.

Ambassador students as well as brethren and members of the community had the opportunity to listen to the big band sound of the Gene Krupa Orchestra during the Ambassador Foundation concert Feb. 5. The "Big Band Hit Parade" featured well-known musical personalities June Valli, and Herb Jeffries, the balladeer from the Duke Ellington Orchestra.

Visiting Pasadena Faculty member Dibar Apartian used the assembly of Feb. 20 to set the stage for the Etiquette Dinner that evening in the Dining Hall.

The big event of the month, Speech Banquet, rolled into town, bringing with it a "Whistle Stop" evening of speeches, dancing and the naming of the Freshman Class President, Dave Clark.

Students kicked up their heels and stomped their feet at a barndance on the farm property on the east side of the campus. Besides down-home style singing and dancing, participants enjoyed hayrides, bonfires and marshmallow roasts, trying their hand at various carnival booths, and braving "Ned," the home-made mechanical bull specially designed for a unique bullriding contest. Faculty members Randy Duke and Marty Yale and their band, along with featured performances by various students, provided entertainment for the event.

GRAND TOUR

Students and faculty anxiously awaited glimpses of the G-III Friday afternoon, March 14. After airstrip greetings, Mr. Tkach attended a special luncheon with College faculty and then toured various campus facilities.

Approximately 4,600 brethren from three Texas churches and surrounding states gathered to hear Mr. Tkach speak on the Sabbath in the convention center. Some of those attending described the event as resembling a "mini-Feast."

THE BRONZE SWAN

Fine dining and elegant cuisine awaited students on the Restaurant Nights of March 16 and 30. The Dining Hall was converted into a four-star restaurant, "The Bronze Swan," featuring such delicacies as salmon, duck, chateaubriand, and dessert delights including napoleons, mousse and tortes.

Weeks of preparation came together in the first dance to be sponsored by the student body in honor of the Big Sandy and Tyler Church congregations.

ONE MORE YEAR

April brought a renewed spirit to students, staff and faculty as the long-hoped-for announcement came: Big Sandy would pursue state certification with plans to remain open for at least one more year.

The April 15 announcement by Pastor General Joseph W. Tkach came via a phone hook-up at a special forum.

April found the freshmen busy with their biggest project of the year: Graduation Ball.

About 85 students and local church members participated in the "Grand Finale" road race. Organized through the Physical Education department and the AC Running Club, the race course featured pavement, trails and hills as it wound around Lake Loma.

Spring Break took the chorale to Pasadena for a combined performance of Mendelssohn's Elijah with the Pasadena chorale in the Ambassador Auditorium. A special reception was held with Chancellor Joseph W. Tkach after the first of the two performances. The two chorales visited Disneyland after their performing responsibilities were concluded.

A WARM WELCOME awaited Chancellor Tkach after touch-down on the College airstrip.

GRADUATION

Graduation activities occupied everyone's attention in May. Graduation Ball, hosted by the Freshman class saluted the achievements of the graduating Sophomores and celebrated "advancements in God's Work, yesterday, today and forever."

After dining in the Field House auditorium, students danced and enjoyed the entertainment provided. Included in the entertainment was a special song composed by freshman David Bilowus dedicated to the Big Sandy campus and the potential of God's people.

The decorations were spectacular, featuring an entrance that on a miniature scale recreated the parting of the Red Sea.

GRADUATION exercises include a lot of standing in line, but nobody seems to care as these graduates wait for that special moment when graduation is official (opposite).

GRAD WEEK activities culminated in Grad Ball dancing and Grad Brunch dining (right). Chancellor Joseph W. Tkach delivers an address at graduation (above).

The next day, Wednesday, May 21, Mr. Tkach delivered his commencement address to the 213 graduating students and 1,300 guests.
"This is not the end, but merely the beginning of a new chapter in your opportunity to fulfill your incredible human potential," he said. "Today you stand on the threshold of the greatest opportunity of your life. We pause with you on a bridge between youthful dreams and hopes and adult realities and responsibilities." □

Life

Each year The Envoy endeavors to impart the flavor, energy and ambience of Ambassador life for a worldwide audience. This year we are privileged to present an insight into the lives of Ambassador's faculty, those whose job it is to impart the most valuable education on earth.

The first faculty member was our founder, Herbert W. Armstrong. He boldly set out to chart a new course in education; to pioneer and blaze new trails. As he dared to be different, he also dared the students to follow his example and explore this new experience in learning.

His work in the early years set a standard of devotion that none could match, but that all could learn from and aspire to. That example remains today. The faculty of 1986 share Mr. Armstrong's purpose and commitment.

Commitment is the touchstone of the Ambassador faculty. Their lives are dedicated to the goals and purposes of this institution — lives that are intertwined with those of the students they teach. For this commitment we are truly grateful.

Featured on the following pages is a glimpse into the lives of a few AC faculty. We regret that we cannot feature all of them, but we do thank each one for his fine example. □

FORUM — Dr. David Wainwright delivers a forum on time scheduling (left). He urged students to maintain a balanced schedule of classes, work, sleep and exercise. In addition to his classes and responsibilities as Director of Admissions, evangelist Richard Ames this year began appearing on The World Tomorrow program (opposite bottom), in which his Fundamentals of Theology class appeared once.

FACULTY

Classes

Ambassador's faculty don't hide from their students.

While students at many larger colleges and universities often find it almost impossible to meet with their lecturers, students here find the faculty and administration readily available. They are always willing to provide needed assistance — whether it means clearing up a question after class or spending time discussing a problem with a student.

This attitude of service reflects directly the whole point and purpose of an Ambassador education. The faculty here don't just teach a way of life — they live it, personally and directly.

Classes cover a wide spectrum of education — from the arts and sciences to business, psychology and, of course, theology. It is the theology classes which occupy students' attention the most. For without this vital foundation the rest of the curricula would not be firmly anchored to a concrete set of values. It is on that point that modern education has jumped the track.

As a result of the firm and consistent base of Ambassador's program, the faculty work in concert to present a diverse curricula with a common theme. It is a theme of truth, of balance and of recapturing the true values.

It is a theme to which all of the Ambassador faculty are dedicated. □

FACULTY

Homelife

Ambassador's faculty have two families.

We often speak of the "Ambassador family" to which all students and faculty belong. But the faculty have their own families away from the campus, too.

On these pages we focus on faculty home life, sharing a more intimate look at the lives of our AC faculty.

Their homes are scattered throughout the vast, sprawling metropolis of Los Angeles. Some live in the shadow of the mountains, others in the inland valleys, while others still reside close to campus in the crown city of Pasadena.

Family life away from the hectic pace of AC is like most other Church families. In addition to spending as much family time together as possible, they often invite students over, whose own families are usually hundreds, or thousands, of miles away. Here the faculty can give far more than academic expertise.

By sharing their home life with the students they teach, Ambassador's faculty bring their two families together. □

WORK still continues out of the classroom. Deputy Chancellor Raymond McNair fastens slate to his roof (left) while Dave Albert and daughter Missy prepare to work on a sailboat.

Sharing more than academic expertise, they often invite students over.

Attend any College social activity and you will see many of the faculty in attendance. In the early years of the College Mr. Armstrong himself participated in many of the student body functions. Even toward the end of his years he entertained students in his home and attended College activities whenever he could. He knew the value of close contact between faculty and students, and he worked hard to strengthen the bonds.

Whether it's Saturday night basketball, a beach party or a dance, the AC faculty are always welcomed guests. Their attendance is appreciated by the students, who can use these social occasions to become better acquainted with their instructors.

The faculty field teams in nearly all of the intramural sporting competitions. They are invited to all the dances and also participate in the annual field trips. Faculty members also serve as advisers to the numerous student body organizations, lending support, experience and advice to the students involved.

Each of the classes has a class adviser; a faculty member whose responsibility is to oversee the activities and general well-being of the class. The same adviser stays with the class from the freshman to senior year, which stimulates the development of friendship and trust between the faculty member and the class. □

Ambassador faculty are always welcomed guests. Attend any social activity and you'll see many of them there.

Life

It is a place set in the tawny woods of Northeast Texas surrounded by such college landmarks as Lake Loma, the golf course, old Highway 80, and the Ambassador College-Big Sandy Airstrip. It is a close-knit community of teachers and administrators sharing a camaraderie as neighbors and fellow employees. It is an environment unique in purpose and setting to that of other colleges and universities.

It is fondly known at AC Big Sandy as "Faculty Row."

The neighborhood consists of 20 homes adjacent to the main campus area, built "primarily as a social extension of the college," according to Dr. William L. Johnson, Chairman of the Department of Math and Science, who has lived there for five years.

Dr. Johnson says that Faculty Row reflects the ideals of founder Herbert W. Armstrong's philosophy of education — that a student should be educated not solely academically, but physically, emotionally, culturally and spiritually as well.

"Faculty Row provides a nice setting in which students can come into our homes to interact socially in a way otherwise impossible," said Dr. Johnson. "It allows them to see the faculty in a whole different light. We're treating the students as future leaders; that's why we give them this type of education in so many areas. This is not done with students in big universities."

The location of Faculty Row, in close proximity to the center

ENERGY is important to any science teacher, as faculty member Howard Baker demonstrated during an address to the student body (above). Dr. Don Ward, Big Sandy's academic dean, conducts his Fundamentals of Theology class (left). "You need financial aid!" says Jim Kissee. Mr. Kissee's responsibilities bring him into constant contact with the students as they learn important lessons in financial management at college.

Classes

of activity on the college campus, is a plus for additional reasons. "Being close to work is a real benefit," said Richard Thompson, Speech and Journalism Department head, who is "less than five minutes from the office."

"One of the greatest advantages is being able to accomplish so much more on the campus," noted Russell Duke, instructor of Music and Speech, who has lived on Faculty Row for two years now. "I can go home to see the family and go back to work if need be. We can see the students a lot more and do things we never could do otherwise if we didn't live there."

The natural beauty surrounding Faculty Row is an enhancement to life there. "It's a nice thing to be able to look out over that lake from our patio," said Mr. Thompson. "On Sabbath mornings you can sit out there and relax and drink a cup of coffee. It's just a short walk to the north side of the lake; that's where I go when I want to be alone and have some privacy."

Homelife

"It's a very pleasant atmosphere, and provides a beautiful environment in which to entertain," commented Dr. Annabel Johnson, Head of the Home Economics Department. "It provides an uplifting and inspiring environment which complements the campus."

Dr. Larry Johnson added, "Eighty-five percent of what we learn is visual. Ten percent comes by hearing and the rest through taste, touch and smell. Since the majority is visual, that's why it's important to have a beautiful environment — so you can teach. The maintenance of a nice Faculty Row is a critical part of the education of students. That's the bottom line."

Working together daily in addition to living near one another allows the residents of Faculty Row to relate above the level of the average neighbors. "It's like a small community," said Mrs. Duke. "Everyone knows everyone else."

"We know each other as fellow employees," Mr. Thompson said, "and as friends as well."

"I can go for a walk in the evening," said Dr. Johnson, "and feel at home to go up to anyone's house to talk for a while. The faculty at Big Sandy are very close-knit. We respect one another, have a good camaraderie. It comes down to conversion, having the same goals, and being part of a work that is far greater than ourselves."

As would neighbors, most of the faculty go out to eat together occasionally or hold "progressive dinners" in their homes.

The main emphasis, however, is on serving the student body. "Most of the faculty feel a greater responsibility to entertain the students rather than the faculty members," said Dr. Johnson. "Some of our nicest memories are having students over for nice dinners, to talk and visit, to watch a football game on television or whatever. It adds a whole new dimension to students' lives."

Their life is not without its "homework" either, as many instructors spend a good deal of their "free" time in writing, studying or in lesson and class preparation in their homes.

A certain amount of privacy is also sacrificed in exchange for the conveniences of living on Faculty Row. Mr. Duke explained, "It tends to be open house all of the time — together with the kids, the gardeners and landscapers, and the students, we all seem like one big giant family!" □

PASADENA STUDENTS

It seems like only yesterday we were nervously dressing for our first Freshmen Reception, studying for Life and Teachings and Western Civilization, or "dunking" a senior at the Get Acquainted Picnic. Yet the reality of the passage of time sank in when we saw the word "Senior" on our registration packets.

No longer would we be asking others where the Hall of Administration is or looking for Station C during registration. Suddenly, we were the upperclassmen. It was our example that would be on display. Three years at Ambassador had earned us a position of leadership.

We seniors won't forget the theme of the Thanksgiving Ball, "The Harvest is Plenteous." The time and effort expended preparing for the dance was enormous. We wondered if there would be a "harvest" at all, but the late nights paid off. The work that went into the decorations and the care that was taken to provide stimulating entertainment required contributions from everyone in the class. We grew much closer.

The encouragement by our class advisor, Arthur Suckling, reminded us that this is our last opportunity as students to give something back to the college. Those words helped strengthen us during many late nights. We'll remember the evening as a highlight of the first semester.

The death of Mr. Armstrong brought the idea of leadership into sharp focus. We realized more than ever that we had to carry on in the tradition that makes Ambassador unique. We couldn't help but be reminded of the tireless hours Mr. Armstrong put in over the years to the great Work of God.

As the semester came to a close and our college career was nearing its end, it became a time of self-examination and also a time to see if our class theme of "Unity through Service" had produced the desired results. It is our hope that as a Senior class some of our goals and efforts have had a positive impact on other students this year.

As we venture out from here, we take with us the memories of learning to give, from an institution that has given us so much.

Donald Campbell

More opportunities were offered Ambassador College students to serve in Ambassador Foundation's overseas projects this year than in any previous year.

Students travelled to Thailand, Jordan and Sri Lanka to serve as teachers in a variety of programs. Being involved in these projects, many times for an entire year, offers a unique educational and cultural experience for the students. But not without sacrifice.

"Being involved in an international project, we have come to feel as if we are looking in [on the world] from the outside," wrote Kurt Hoyer from Jordan in a letter to the Ambassador Portfolio. "The news we are so accustomed to hearing on a daily basis, including local television news and campus news, we rarely ever hear. Life has taken on a new perspective for us."

A year at an overseas project is a year far removed from the hectic but routine lifestyle of the Ambassador campuses. The pace of life is invariably slower, the customs different. Even the diet students must adjust to is often unique.

Ambassador's students overseas truly assume the role of ambassadors. They have a responsibility to represent the College and the Work every day. They have to be particularly aware of their role in a foreign environment and alert to the cultural, educational, social and religious differences that exist. And their training has paid off.

Adan Abu Odeh, minister to the Royal Court of Jordan, said this about the students' involvement: "If Mr. Armstrong had not called Ambassador College 'Ambassador,' it should be changed. Truly, that's what it is. The students have done more to further good-will between the Middle East and America than any other government official. They truly are ambassadors."

Pioneering is a challenge very much alive at Ambassador. This year's Juniors were the first to incorporate sophomores from Big Sandy and Pasadena who graduated from the Associate of Arts or Associate of Science degree programs.

We started the school year with several activities designed to give a warm welcome to the students transferring from the Texas campus. Included were a reception with the Pasadena faculty, a class meeting featuring a Bunko party and a class trip to River Glen. All of these activities helped bond the "pioneering" Juniors together from the start.

That bond was an important one, given the responsibilities the class faced during the year. A typical year for the Juniors is a very busy one. River Glen, the End-of-the-Semester Submarine Party and the 10K Run are all a class responsibility. But the highlight of service for the year was Graduation Ball. Preparation for Grad Ball began at the start of first semester. Our theme "To every thing there is a season" then developed gradually throughout the year.

Grad Ball itself was a pioneering endeavor. A musical formed the basis for the entertainment. It had been several years since this approach had been tried. It was also the biggest project just about any of us had worked on while at College.

It was a successful year for us. We pulled together as a team to support one another and to do a top-quality job on all we put our hands to do. It's definitely a year we'll never forget.

This was a milestone year for the Sophomore class of 1986. Attaining their Associate of Arts degrees meant making important decisions about the future: whether to stay on and obtain a Bachelor's degree or to leave and pursue a career.

The year was a rewarding one for each member of the class. With a year of AC experience under our belts we "knew the ropes" and felt more at home. As a result we were able to become more involved with activities, classes and the overall college scene. This involvement made us more a part of the Ambassador family — an experience we will always treasure.

Sophomore Ball and Speech Banquet was an exciting opportunity for us to serve the student body. Working cohesively as a team the class brought the theme of "Charting the Course" to life, producing an evening of enjoyment and high quality. Later we were able to enjoy a memorable and unique final visit to River Glen. A formal dinner served by bow-tied waiters is not a regular occurrence at River Glen, but we did it. And we enjoyed it!

Undoubtedly the highlight of the year was Mr. Armstrong's personal presentation of his last book, Mystery of the Ages, to our class on Sept. 10. His energy, vitality and drive was an inspiration to us all. We feel deeply privileged to have had Mr. Armstrong's personal involvement with our class.

The people featured in the following pages share memories of two of the best years of their lives. Memories of late nights studying, of dates, and of sharing each other's lives.

Two busy, challenging and rewarding years together has resulted in a special bond of friendship in the class. Wherever we may go before we meet each other again, we know that the bond that has been built will remain — forever.

The Freshman year at Ambassador is a year of adjustment. Students converged on the Pasadena campus from all over the world to begin an entirely new phase of their lives. It became apparent that flexibility was a key to successful adjustment. Life at Ambassador is full, and quickly we found our cups running over. It helped to have a very enthusiastic class.

Enthusiasm was an invaluable character trait, especially in completing our major activity, the Costume Ball. "Ancient Civilizations" was this year's theme, and it was the first opportunity the class had to work together as a team. The dance provided an enjoyable evening of relaxation and fellowship, and it was instrumental in weaving a more closely-knit class.

Another group activity the Freshmen participated in as a class was a trip to River Glen. High in the mountains, away from the din of the city, we got to know each other a little better as people, not just Freshmen. River Glen helped us feel less like a class and more like a family.

Our freshman year has been one of adjustment and change. Some changes have been dramatic. It has been a great year for personal growth for all of us.

We leave this year with memories of a challenge. And all of us look forward to next year when we can again meet the challenge of Ambassador College head on.

BIG SANDY STUDENTS

What does it mean to be a senior in Big Sandy? It does not mean a year off! It does mean a lot of hard work, cooperation, and a willingness to give of yourself.

With every opportunity comes responsibility. With only 14 seniors you really feel that responsibility: to be a positive leader, an enthusiastic worker and above all a true Ambassador example. For some of us it was the first time we felt directly responsible for someone else.

During the Student Leadership Conference we tried to stress the point of flexibility. Being able to flow with the year's changes and pulling together as a team is a key element. We not only had to work together, we also had to work with the faculty and the student body. Our communication skills increased greatly as the year went along and the importance of working together became more apparent and important.

Commitment is a key to leadership success. You have to believe in what you are doing. After our three years of Ambassador College training we felt ready and excited about helping others see what an opportunity these two or four years are. Our example had to be a reflection of our commitment. Good examples did more for student morale than anything else.

This year was like no other year in our time. With the announced closing of the Big Sandy campus just prior to the death of God's apostle and leader of this Church, and the passing of authority of one Pastor General to another, came many challenges for the faculty, students and employees of Ambassador College Big Sandy. But looking back at the year I know that these challenges were met positively and successfully and led to a year that we will all remember.

What does it mean to be a senior in Big Sandy? It means learning to meet challenges and working through them with teamwork and cooperation. It means a year of intense leadership training that could only be found at Ambassador College.

SOPHOMORES

One year ago we were rookies, breaking into our first season of college life. Regardless of our age or past experience, we were greenhorns. Then suddenly we were Sophomores, the upper classmen of a two-year institution. Leaders.

It was a rewarding year for the class of '86. Our first major responsibility was to coordinate the annual Thanksgiving Ball. Having completed a successful "It Won't Be Long Now" Graduation Ball the previous year, we were even more prepared for our "American Heritage" theme, highlighting such American symbols as Uncle Sam, Betsy Ross, the Bald Eagle, and Mount Rushmore. Preparing for the dance helped unify the Sophomores, seeing our task and working together as a team, a unit, a class.

We also worked cohesively with our Freshmen and Senior leaders on such projects as the Speech Banquet, the Neiman-Marcus inventory in Dallas, and a first-time dance for our Big Sandy and Tyler congregations.

The young men and women on the following pages shared two of the best years of their lives together on the Big Sandy, Texas campus. Whether we are heading to Pasadena for our Bachelor's Degree or returning to our local church areas, the class of '86 will hold strongly to bonding memories: the friendships, the laughter, the shared sorrow and shared joy, the pulling together through the rough times, and the collective jubilation of shared triumph.

This year's Freshman class in Big Sandy has had a busy and fast-paced introduction to Ambassador College life. Square dances, beach parties, fine dining, and a host of new acquaintances greeted us upon our arrival in Texas. The faculty and students all made us feel immediately at home. But the excitement and the new surroundings quickly blurred into the reality of hard work and study.

No sooner had we settled in than the Feast of Tabernacles brought students together in a concerted effort to serve the brethren. Concession stands manned by students supplied feast-goers with groceries and hardware items. The student body's efforts in serving the thousands attending the Feast in Big Sandy resulted in a boost to the student body activity fund.

Thanksgiving Ball was our first exposure to a formal dance — Ambassador style! The Sophomore class worked hard to present an enjoyable evening for the Thanksgiving celebration. It was an exciting and fun-filled start to our first college year.

Sobering news near the end of first semester left everyone with the determination to go all out and make our first year — and possibly Big Sandy's last — "the best ever."

Spring semester proved to be one of the busiest in Big Sandy's history. The Speech Banquet, record WATS responses and the first Church dance in honor of the local congregation were among the highlights. Undoubtedly one of the more memorable events was Mr. Tkach's first visit to Big Sandy as Chancellor.

The Freshman class was especially excited to hear Mr. Tkach announce that the administration would endeavor to keep the College open for another year. We all look forward eagerly to our Sophomore year at Ambassador College.

SPORTS

I N T R O D U C T I O N

Sportsmanship, character development stressed in AC athletics.

Diving into the end zone to catch a touchdown pass generates a special kind of exhilaration. Adrenalin pumps quickly when you're at courtside with the score tied in a fast-paced game of basketball. The physical discipline exerted in a hard game of racquetball brings a unique satisfaction.

The rewards for effort are nowhere as immediate and tangible as in the field of athletics. Sports serve as a concentrated opportunity for learning and growing, in the process of building character. Because each sport encapsulates so many aspects of growth in a structured and intense environment, proper participation in sport develops and improves the whole man.

There are many lessons we can learn from the world of sports: confidence, determination, perseverance, teamwork. These are lessons for life; lessons that develop character.

The positive and balanced approach to sports at Ambassador — the teaching of true values in regards to athletic competition — is another unique aspect of an Ambassador education.

In many colleges and in most professional sports, the emphasis is on winning, regardless of how victory is achieved. Sportsmanship is subconsciously, if not outwardly, vilified.

Athletes here are taught to recapture the true values of sport. Each participant is taught to contribute his or her maximum effort, while maintaining a proper respect for the opponent. At Ambassador it's not whether you win or lose, but it really is how you play the game.

From the beginning Ambassador has stressed the need for a balanced physical education program as part of a curriculum designed to provide a complete learning experience.

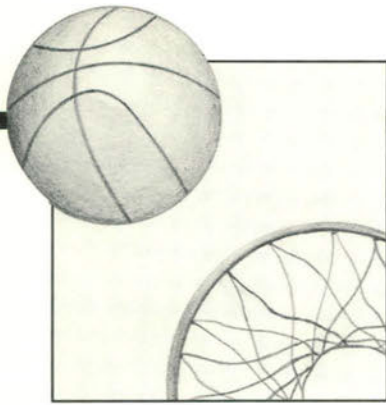

Over the years significant improvements have been made to Ambassador's athletic facilities. A fine gymnasium combines with a carefully designed natatorium and racquetball complex to provide a comprehensive sports center. In addition, there are four tennis courts, an exceptionally well-equipped weight room, and a world-class track and artificial-turf playing field.

The physical education staff work to ensure that students gain maximum benefit from the sports program and that the goals of the College are being fulfilled within the athletics area. At the start of each intramural season, Director of Athletics Jim Petty and his staff go over the purpose of sports at Ambassador and explain particular problems, rule changes and goals students need to bear in mind during the season.

"The number one thrust of the program is to help develop your character," said Mr. Petty at a pre-season meeting.

"You may be on one particular team," he said, "but the big team is all of us." □

ALL-STAR ACTION — Earl Campbell puts up two for the underclassmen, despite last-minute pressure from big brother Don.

Close Finishes Mark Basketball Season

But Juniors and Seniors manage to stay on top

Hustle.

That's the one word that best describes Ambassador basketball.

Another season of down-to-the-wire action ended with four of the five men's teams sharing first and second place, while the Junior and Senior women's teams tied for first place. And for the grand finale, the senior men and women's teams won their season closers at the last Saturday night game. That's real hustle.

Basketball action began in November following a definitive orientation by Athletic Director Jim Petty and staff. Mr. Petty explained the need to play hard and with intensity, while demonstrating character and control at all times.

Referring to Chancellor Armstrong's book, Mystery of the Ages, he said people had thought of College Founder Herbert W. Armstrong as a hustler in his younger days.

"And you better bet if he were here that's how he'd play the game," he said.

This year the Junior and Senior men's teams shared first place, with the Faculty and Sophomores sharing second. For the women, the Juniors and Seniors each finished at 7-1.

Fine play demands a lot of effort. Training schedules were set as each coach analyzed the talent available, skill drills, offensive and defensive plays and constant shooting practice conditioned the players for a tough but rewarding season.

Commitment was a must for all participants. The Juniors had two 6 a.m. training sessions per week with Coach Jeb Egbert. Early morning sessions like that demand commitment! □

Downpour Turns Game Into Season Highlight

Faculty and Sophs enjoy wet flag football encounter

After struggling to a tight 20-19 victory over the Sophomores in the first game of the season, the Junior's football squad strung together three straight wins to come out undefeated for the 1985-1986 season. The season produced a high standard of play from all teams with several close games.

The Faculty-Sophomore game was memorable for the spectacular plays produced by the battle with driving rain and slick surface. Rain storms had dumped an inch of rain on the playing surface to begin with, but heavy rain during the game made everything more difficult. Players had to adopt a whole new approach to offense and defense. The Faculty scored only once to win 7-2. During this play, a faculty member slid a few feet on his elbow after grabbing a wide pass in the corner of the end zone.

That game also produced the season's best back-to-back defensive performance, according to Portfolio sports editor Chris Marlow. Sophomore Mike Kuykendall made a diving flag pull to save a touchdown on a third-down play, then followed that on 4th down with a diving interception in the corner of the end zone.

The season ended with the Faculty in second place with a record of 3-1, Seniors in third at 2-2, Sophomores in fourth with 1-3 and the Freshmen finishing with an 0-4 record. □

Co-eds Enjoy Strong V'Ball Competition

Close games were the hallmark of the first-semester women's volleyball competition this year.

The Juniors finished with a clean 4-0 record, closely followed by the Faculty with 3-1. The two teams gave strong performances throughout the season — but their best efforts culminated in a Sept. 17 match-up.

The Juniors opened with three front-row hitters, producing a power attack that gave them an early lead. But the Faculty fought back and at 8-3 began running the clock down to win. But a five-minute revival by the Juniors left them one point up with six seconds remaining. Then the Faculty won the final point before time ran out. The game went into sudden-death overtime. After several volleys, the Juniors took the first point to win.

The remainder of the match produced more exciting action and the Juniors were able to capitalize on their first-game victory to win the match. Having Christy Allgeyer and Dawn Fricke on the same team was a real advantage.

The final standings put the Juniors at the head of the league, the Faculty in second place, followed by the Sophomores, Seniors and Freshmen. □

Pasadena Softball

Softball season wraps up busy second-semester intra-mural program

The Junior men and Faculty women emerged victorious in this year's second-semester softball season.

After a short but well-contested qualifying round, the Junior men met the Sophomores for the championship game May 13. The Sophomores took an early 4-2 lead, but their attempt to lock in a victory waned as the Juniors rallied with a sixth-inning drive.

A two-run homer by Tapu Panuve in the sixth levelled the scores. Followed by tight Junior defense, and three more runs, the Juniors laid claim to the championship.

The Women's championship pitted the Faculty against the Juniors. The Faculty played a tight game, with few fielding errors and a fine 11-run offensive drive. The final score was 11-5. □

Heightened Interest In AC Soccer

The 1986 soccer season produced the highest turnout ever with teams being fielded by the Freshmen, Sophomores and Seniors. Good sportsmanship was emphasized from the beginning.

The short season culminated in an exciting climax with a Freshman-Senior match. The Freshmen, with representatives from seven different countries, had won all their games. The seniors had won two and lost one.

To win the tournament the Seniors had to beat the Freshmen by two clear goals, a mammoth task taking into consideration the standard of the Freshman team. Constant pressure from the Seniors resulted in an early goal which the Freshmen soon equaled. The Seniors though, playing for the last time at AC, went on to score two more goals to win the match and the tournament.

Although the season was short, fans witnessed some excellent plays and participants gained a greater respect for the game of soccer. □

Participation Marks '86 Swim Meet

Another record-breaking event added to a record-breaking year

Four new records were set this year at the annual Swim Meet. The Sophomore women and Senior men's teams each set a new record for the 200 Medley. Stacey Cole and Bruce Dague, who were later named Most Outstanding Swimmers, each broke individual records.

Ambassador's annual Swim Meet not only awards points for wins and places, but also for participation. The more swimmers in each team event, the more points the class accumulates. This encourages participation and produces a balanced competition, with swimmers competing with others of their own level.

The meet this year was held on the Saturday evening immediately prior to the end of classes. In the midst of finishing papers and preparing for finals, students found time to practice, and the results reflected that effort. □

Records Fall At Track Meet

Six new records set at end-of-semester meet

The Juniors continued their domination of the Ambassador track and field competition this year, with an outstanding effort that included two new records.

Three years ago, as freshmen, the Junior class of 1986 showed their prowess when they set several new records and won the meet. This year they faced strong competition from the other three classes, in particular the Freshmen, who finished second.

The Freshmen, Seniors and Sophomores finished in that order and within 17 points of each other, demonstrating the balanced competition this year.

New records were set by Michael North, Joe Brandenberger, Ken Bellamy, and Jeff Broadnax for the Men's Triple Jump, High Jump, 400 Meter, and 200 Meter respectively. In the Women's division, Senior Sarah Campbell smashed both the 100 and 200 Meter records.

At the Pizza Party following the meet, Deputy Chancellor Raymond McNair and Athletic Director Jim Petty presented Outstanding Athlete awards to Sarah Campbell and Jeff Broadnax.

They also presented Outstanding Sportsmanship awards to graduating seniors Cathy McNiel and David Boyll.

Big Sandy SPORTS

I N T R O D U C T I O N

Wide variety of athletic opportunities offered to students at Texas campus

It has been said that more character can be built on the athletic field than nearly anywhere else. It is true that athletes, while increasing their physical stamina, also learn many lessons of character; good sportsmanship, teamwork and authority are just a few. Big Sandy students had ample opportunity to develop character in this way during the year.

From the baseball diamonds, to the hardwood courts, to the track and to the field, the sports program in Texas kept most athletes here extremely satisfied.

Under the direction of Athletic Director Kermit Nelson and intramural program director Larry Haworth, the Texas campus undertook an ambitious sports schedule which included softball, two seasons of volleyball and the perennial basketball action.

"Participation" was once again the byword for the sports program. Virtually every student participated in one of the intramural seasons. Over half the student body played on one of the 25 teams during the co-ed fall volleyball season.

The Big Sandy campus is ideally suited for sports. The size of the campus itself, some have quipped, is conducive to marathon running. The Ambassador Running Club would probably agree with that; the club sponsored five students in the Houston Marathon Jan. 19. In addition, members of the club participated in several five kilometer and 10 kilometer runs during the year, including two races sponsored on campus for students and local Church members. The club was advised by Coach Dave Goethals and College employee Skeets Mez.

Soccer, a game gaining more popularity across the United States, also took a step forward in popularity on the Big Sandy campus with heightened student interest and an expanded spring schedule.

But whether their interest was breaking down "the wall" of marathoning, cycling in the beauty of the east Texas countryside or participating in the more traditional Ambassador team sports of basketball, softball or volleyball, students continued to strengthen friendships, build unity and grow in character in Big Sandy's dynamic sports schedule. □

The course is also used by campers attending the annual Summer Educational Program (SEP) in Big Sandy.

Saturday Night Hoop Action Pulls Big Crowds

Basketball begins athletic program

After the Faculty continued a 20-year tradition by beating the Freshmen at the start of first semester, Big Sandy's basketball competition settled down to some close games.

The Faculty-Freshman contest is an annual event held shortly after the school year commences. A total of 44 freshmen participated in the game.

Big Sandy's basketball competition consisted of three men's divisions and one women's division. The two "A" leagues were headed by faculty members in conjunction with a student captain. Teams were selected on a draft system following a November tryout session before the team captains and coaches.

In the final standings, faculty member Russell Duke and Mike Cook's White team won the competition with a 6-2 record, only one game clear of Dr. Nelson's Faculty line-up.

In the Women's league, Dr. Torrance and Marj Klaus led the White team to a perfect 8-0 record.

The season finale pitted the Sophomores against combined Freshman-Senior teams in men's and women's All-Star games. The Sophomores won both contests convincingly. □

Two-Wheeled Touring A Feature Of Texas Athletics Program

Big Sandy cycling class offers unique opportunities to students

If there is one sport that clearly has the markings of Big Sandy, that sport is cycling.

Team cycling carries with it a lot of the feeling of the Texas campus. Untethered by the bounds of basketball, tennis and racquetball courts, Big Sandy cyclists have the opportunity to experience the country lanes and highways of East Texas from the seat of a 10-speed.

Several sections of introductory and intermediate cycling are offered under the auspices of the Physical Education Department and the guidance of Coach Larry Haworth. The team cycling program in Big Sandy separates it from virtually every other campus in the United States.

After almost a semester in the cycling classes, a group of about 80 Ambassadors took to the road Nov. 25 for a 50-mile trip from the town of Winnsboro back to the Big Sandy campus. The group was divided into about 10 "packs" of eight cyclists each; one of the packs was composed of cyclists scheduled to participate in the New Zealand "SEP on Wheels" during the winter break.

The highlight of the year for U.S. cyclists was a three-day trip from Austin to San Antonio held April 6-8. Cyclists used the opportunity to not only fellowship with South Texas brethren, but to also visit the University of Texas Cultural Center and the historic Alamo.

Participation Marks '85-86 Volleyball

Season involves most of student body

A total of 24 teams turned out for the second-semester volleyball season this year.

Two leagues were formed in both the Men's and Women's divisions. Dwyer Hockwald's Team 3 took the Men's "A" league with a 7-1 record, while Marj Klaus's Team 4 also finished with 7-1 in the Women's "A" league.

In the "B" leagues, Brent Hardin's Team 2 left the field behind with a 6-0 record, while Angie Showalter's Team 1 took the Women's division 5-1.

Two Saturday-night matches attracted good crowds to the gymnasium. The first featured the men's action early in the season, while the second weekend round highlighted the women's leagues.

The final item of business for the season was an All-Star series. The Sophomore women outplayed the Freshmen-Senior team to take a 3-1 victory, after overcoming early problems with a lack of power returns. The men's All-Star action saw the Red Freshmen-Faculty-Senior team outperform the Blue Sophomores in a closely-contested series of games. The scores see-sawed throughout, but the Sophomores eventually conceded a 3-1 decision to the combined forces of the Red team. □

Softball season short, but sharp.

Rain shortens season, but fails to dampen enthusiasm.

Despite a rain-shortened season, the men's and women's softball season was a grand-slam success.

The men's season began with a faculty "mixer" match that served as a preliminary to the draft Aug. 29. Seventy-five men donned gloves and cleats to display their talents before faculty members and student captains.

In the championship round, Gary Roth's Team 4 took the game and the crown from the Faculty squad, 6-4, to complete a perfect 4-0 season. The Faculty took an early 2-0 lead in the top of the first inning, but a three-run homer by Steve Dickey erased the deficit in the bottom of the third.

The women's season, which consisted of a three game round-robin tournament, concluded with an All-Star match Oct. 20. In the match, the Red all-stars were led to a smashing 7-2 victory by the outstanding play of shortstop Jennifer Montano and pitcher Amy Burnett.

Red took a 2-0 lead after two innings, but a rally by the Blue team knotted the score at 2-2 in the third. Red came back with two more runs in the fourth and never relinquished the lead. Red coach Gary Roth said that the team played a game of sound fundamentals.

"Up and down the lineup, they all hit well, and defense was superb," he said. □

Track and Field

Records broken and new standards set at three-day meet.

Three new Ambassador College Big Sandy records were set this year as the Freshmen worked their way to victory over the Sophomores in a three-day track and field meet during April.

Sophomore Tim Dickey and freshman Marlene Myers were presented MVP trophies for their outstanding performances at the meet. Both set a new record: Tim for the high jump, at six feet seven inches, and Marlene for the 440-dash, with a time of 1:03.

"On the approach I didn't think I had it," said Tim after breaking the record. "I feel good."

The other new record was set by Dave Bapst in the 120-yard high hurdles, with a time of 17.35, one second faster than the previous record.

The Freshmen built their lead in the meet over the three days, accumulating a total of 475 points, finishing ahead of the Sophomore score of 364. The division into class teams was a departure from the traditional field day system. In the past, teams were formed from combined brother and sister Ambassador and Women's Clubs.

The meet covered track events including the 100, 220, 440 and 880, plus one-mile and two-mile races, hurdles, and relays. The field events included high, triple and long jumps, discus, shot put, and javelin. □

OPPORTUNITIES

INTRODUCTION

The world today seems to be a smaller place. For early explorers an expedition across the sea represented a huge investment of time, money and personal sacrifice. But today we can travel to the other side of the world in less than a day.

For students at Ambassador the advent of the "global village" has resulted in many exciting travel opportunities. Hundreds have been privileged to visit sometimes exotic and always exciting areas in many parts of the world, as part of their overall education.

Through the Ambassador Foundation, for example, AC students have participated in special educational projects in Thailand, Jordan, and Sri Lanka. Students selected by the administration spend a year during their college career serving in one of the international projects. Their AC training is put to excellent use in the assignments they are given.

Other travel opportunities are available throughout the summer when the College sponsors foreign language projects in Europe, South America and China. An archeological project in Jerusalem has provided hundreds of students with a first-hand look at the Middle East. During the annual Feast of Tabernacles many students pack their bags en route to a foreign feast site. And other travel opportunities are provided for students selected for positions at one of the Summer Educational Programs, either in the United States or abroad.

On the following pages you will see a sampling of some of our Ambassadors serving in the U.S. and abroad. These experiences represent an important part of an Ambassador education. □

Sri Lanka

The newest project overseas took five Ambassador students to the island-nation of Sri Lanka. They went there to teach English and vocational classes in Nuwara Eliva, a city about 100 miles from the capital of Colombo. Nuwara Eliva means "city of light."

Ambassador's involvement in Sri Lankan education stems from a meeting between College Founder Herbert W. Armstrong and Sri Lanka President Janius Jayewardene in November of 1984. The president asked Mr. Armstrong to help with a program in the country and appointed the Minister of Land and Lands Development, Gamina Disanavake, to the post of directing the project. The program is known as the Armstrong-Disanavake Educational Trust.

Graduate Dave Baker and senior Trent Meisner were sent to Sri Lanka in May to teach at Bhikku Teacher's Training College in Mt. Lavinia and help establish the new school in Nuwara

JORDAN program

Ten Ambassador students and one recent graduate spent the past year teaching physically and mentally handicapped children at two schools in Jordan. The two schools are the Al Hussein School for the Physically Handicapped and the Young Women's Moslem Association Center.

The students' roles at the schools include teaching English, teaching vocational classes and assisting with physical therapy. The students also developed special sports programs for the schools and for other similar schools in the area.

Prince Ra'ad Bin Zeid and his wife Princess Majda are both actively involved with the education and development of Jordan's physically and mentally handicapped youth. The Prince is the president of the Sports Federation and the Princess is the patron of the Al Hussein School.

Princess Sarvath, wife of Crown Prince Hassan, oversees the Young Women's Muslim Association (YWMA) Center. Students on the Jordan project are privileged to attend a number of functions each year at which the royal family are in attendance.

The schools are located near Amman, Jordan's capital. □

THAILAND program

An attempted coup in Thailand this year did little to dampen the enthusiasm of three students sent there to teach English.

Dusty Howell, Nigel Bearman and Rob Burbach agreed that the attempted overthrow of the government seemed to have little effect on the country. At no time were any of the students in danger, although the school at which Dusty and Nigel taught was only two kilometers from an area where action occurred.

Nigel and Dusty's responsibilities at the Wat Maha Chula and Wat Sraket school in Bangkok involved teaching English to Buddhist monks. Rob taught at an elementary prep school on the campus of the Shulalonghorn University. Each stressed the vocal use of the language in their classes. They recorded a marked improvement in the speaking ability of their students. Dusty and Nigel delighted in "Thai English" renditions of vocal exercises like Theophilus Thistle and Rubber Baby Buggy Bumpers so familiar to the men in the College and the Church.

The AC students taught classes during the afternoons and attended Thai classes during the mornings. Several times during their stay they were able to tour parts of the country.□

TEACHING AND TOURING consume most of the time for the Ambassador students who are privileged to spend a year at one of the Ambassador Foundation educational projects in Jordan, Thailand or Sri Lanka. JERUSALEM

The ancient city of David provided a “hands-on” biblical geography and archeology class for 35 Ambassador students who participated in the fourteenth annual Jerusalem Dig.

Accompanied by project director Richard Paige and Big Sandy Dean of Students Larry Salyer and his family, the students spent four weeks in the city of Jerusalem and another two weeks touring Israel. Their tours included crossing the Sea of Galilee by launch, riding camels in the Judean wilderness and spending four days in the Sinai Desert. It was a time full of special experiences. While in Jerusalem, the students lived in a modern kibbutz community. A kibbutz is a collective farm or settlement in Israel. During the mornings they worked at the excavation site just south of the Temple Mount. In the afternoons they were able to tour Jerusalem. Among the many places they visited were the Dome of the Rock, the Garden Tomb of Christ and the Valley of Hinnom. □

FOREIGN PROJECTS

Summer. It's a time for changing pace. A time for getting out and enjoying the sunshine and the great outdoors. For AC students who serve in Orr it's all this and more.

Orr, Minn. is the home of one of six Summer Educational Program sites where students served this year. It is the original SEP camp, pioneered in the early 1960s. Today it is the largest and most well-equipped camp the Church operates. Just a couple of hours from the Canadian border, Orr is definitely in the wilderness. The campsite is located on Lake Pelican, just one of thousands of lakes in Minnesota.

Ninety-two students from both campuses traveled to Orr this past summer to serve nearly 1,000 Youth Opportunities United (YOU) members during three sessions of camp. The campers were primarily from the United States and Canada, but were joined by a number from Jamaica, Ireland and Australia.

Recreation and education are the main ingredients of any SEP camp. Campers in Orr participated in a wide selection of activities, ranging from rockclimbing and water-skiing to computers and communications. In addition to regular classes, activity clubs were offered to help campers further develop their skills in specific areas.

Providing a positive example to the youth of the Church is one of the primary responsibilities facing students selected to serve at camp. A high standard of personal conduct is required in addition to proficiency in a specific activity. The examples of AC students at camp have produced turning points in the lives of many teenagers. Many students themselves have commented on the fact that it was a former student's example that prompted them to pursue an Ambassador education. □

HITTING THE PAVEMENT for a bike trip or taking to the hardwood for a basketball scrimmage, activities never seem to cease for campers and staff at Big Sandy's Summer Educational Program. Ambassador students from Pasadena and Big Sandy participate as counselors or instructors during the two summer sessions. Cycling (above) on campus or off is a popular sport, and discussing basketball strategy with Dr. Kermit Nelson (left), the camp's director and an avid player himself, is one way the faculty keep ahead of the game.*

The "Lone Star" state played host to over 200 campers and College staff during the three-week session of SEP on the Big Sandy campus last summer.

The Big Sandy program was geared towards older teenagers who had previous SEP experience. The activities differed from those offered at other camps due to the outstanding facilities available at the College. Racquetball, golf, home economics and cycling were among the various activities offered.

The highlight of the session was the visit of SEP founder Herbert W. Armstrong. When Mr. Armstrong and his entourage landed at the campus airstrip, the campers and staff lined the roadway to greet them. After a luncheon with the faculty, Mr. Armstrong addressed the campers and staff, urging them to strive for true success and enjoy the right sort of fun.

Students from both campuses served at the camp as counselors, instructors and service personnel. Whatever their responsibility, AC students are the backbone of the overall program. In service departments they check for and maintain safety and efficiency in the overall operation of physical facilities. As instructors they develop skills and confidence in tomorrow's generation of leaders. And as counselors they lead, teach and demonstrate the way of living that brings success.

Camp concluded with a formal banquet and dance for the staff and campers. Several campers provided entertainment during the dinner, after which Camp Director Kermit Nelson presented awards from each activity department. The awards acknowledged consistent outstanding performance in each activity.

SEP Big Sandy was a learning and growing experience for campers and staff alike. □

SCOTLAND

SCUBA DIVING is a unique activity offered at SEP in Scotland (above). Campers are instructed in the safe and effective use of the equipment and given practical exposure to the sport in the waters of the loch (lake). Opposite page: The newly developed sport of sailboarding is contrasted with the millenia-old art of archery. Each year hundreds of youths are able to develop new skills such as these at SEP sites around the world.

In the lush, green highlands of Scotland, nestled on the banks of Loch Lomond, an annual summer camp each year brings together a diverse collection of campers and staff. Last year, 16 AC students joined over 300 campers from ten countries for SEP in Scotland.

The campers came from Scotland, England, Ireland, Italy, Germany, Holland, France, Belgium, Nigeria and the United States. To add to the international flavor, there were representatives of Australia, New Zealand, Canada and the Philippines among the staff.

The Scottish SEP is different from other sites. It is not a permanent campsite. Prior to camp the site is a sheep pasture. Tents are erected for sleeping and eating quarters. Camping trailers are used for faculty accommodation. The entire area must then be cleared and made ready for activities such as soccer, volleyball and fencing.

Sailing is taught on the loch (lake) and is a popular activity among the campers. Swimming and water-skiing are also taught there. Scuba diving is another unique activity offered at the site.

An obstacle course featuring rope-climbs, trees and tunnels challenges each dormitory at the camp. The dorm must negotiate the course as a team — while carrying a log! The teams compete to complete the course in the shortest time. This activity, along with the rest of the program, helps build confidence, teamwork and resourcefulness in the campers.

One of the differences students from the U.S. notice is the culture. The British staff and campers have a different style, a different way of doing things. But the focus and purpose for being there remains constant: sharing a better way of life with the youth of God's Church. It is this unifying factor that makes a lasting impression upon the minds of all those privileged to serve at SEP Scotland. □

LOCH LOMOND — an aerial view of the Scottish SEP site shows the fully established camp set in the natural beauty of Scotland's northwest farmlands (above). Like other SEP sites around the world, Loch Lomond is set away from the hustle and bustle of city life, enabling campers to develop their creative talents in a natural environment.

AUSTRALIA

FRIENDLY COMPETITION in the form of arm wrestling (above) attracts a crowd in Tapu Panuve's dorm. Tapu, a junior from Ambassador Pasadena, and six other AC students served at the Australian SEP, as they have since it started five years ago. Dances in the "Sheditorium" are a popular Saturday night pastime. Another favorite pastime is rock climbing (opposite above), where campers put their instruction in the subject to the test. Canoeing across Lake Moogerah (right) takes a bit of effort.*

The "land down under" — the island continent of Australia — hosted seven students chosen to serve at the Australian SEP site on Lake Moogerah during parts of December and January. The country gave them a warm summer welcome — temperatures soared into the 90's and above.

"Moogerah" is the Aboriginal term meaning "place of thunderstorms." It is a name suited to the location, which experiences regular thunderstorm activity because of the extremely high humidity of the region.

Given the climate, the lake was a welcome part of camp activities. Water-skiing and canoeing were among the activities offered this year. Other activities included basketball and tennis. More educational classes such as music, photography, radio and journalism were also part of the three-week program.

Volunteers from around the country come to Moogerah to serve each year. They, along with a number of field ministers and personnel from the Church's regional office, fill the majority of positions at the camp. Many return every year to offer their services.

The warm summer evenings featured dorm barbecues, dances, basketball games and special forums. Through these and many other experiences, the AC students formed many friendships in the course of their stay in Australia. Their responsibility to add enthusiasm and a right example was filled on a daily basis in their roles at the camp.

The 1985-86 summer program was the fifth consecutive one in Australia. AC students have served at the site every summer since it started. This year the students enjoyed a bit more comfort and convenience than those students who pioneered back in 1981-82. In the beginning the camp was basically tents and mud. Lots of mud. Today the site has been developed into a modern, well-equipped, comfortable campsite.

At the end of this year's Australian program, the group was taken to the Gold Coast for five days of sightseeing, sunbathing and relaxing before the long flight back to Los Angeles. □

NEW ZEALAND

SUMMER TOUR participants (above) numbered almost 100 for the 1985-86 New Zealand bike trip. Thirteen Ambassador students plus three faculty members made the 525-mile journey in thirteen days. A camper (left) works for position behind the boat during a ski class at SEP near Auckland. The camp site is located at Mototapu.

A chance to experience summer in New Zealand came in two ways for AC students this year; a cycling tour and the Summer Educational Program. The greatest number of students participated in a tour of New Zealand's South Island.

Two years of advance planning culminated in the success of the 1985-86 "Ambassadors to New Zealand" tour, a 525-mile jaunt through New Zealand's South Island.

Accompanied by Coach Larry Haworth of Big Sandy, the tour organizer, 13 students, along with Martin Yale, Larry Johnson, and their wives, of Big Sandy and Paul Sullivan from Pasadena, flew out of Los Angeles shortly before the end of the first semester. Their flight to Auckland, the capital city of New Zealand, took more than 15 hours. Naturally, by the time they arrived the cyclists were ready to stretch their legs.

And stretch their legs they did. Ahead of them lay hundreds of miles of roadway that would take them from Christchurch down through the Canterbury Plains to Queenstown and on to their destination of Mosgiel, just outside Dunedin. Along the way they were able to tour the fiord land and visit a 30,000-acre sheep station (ranch).

The cyclists employed the team touring technique on the trip. This method breaks the whole group into packs, each led by a pack leader. The packs were separated by distances from 200 yards up to a mile.

AUSTRIA

A brand new SEP in Austria this year attracted nine AC students and 85 campers in December. The group travelled to Saalbach, in the Swiss Alps, for the Winter Educational Program (WEP) with about 85 teenagers from many parts of the United States.

Sixty European campers and 30 staff joined the US contingent in Austria for the 10-day event. A number of Imperial Schools and Ambassador college faculty accompanied the group.

In the weeks prior to the start of the Austrian WEP the Alpine ski slopes — famous throughout the world — were lacking just one element: snow. Day after day everyone waited and watched and hoped. Weather reports were checked on a daily basis, but still no snow fell.

Even when the U.S. group left Dallas International Airport for Austria, the slopes were bereft of snow. But upon their arrival, it was snowing heavily in Saalbach. When the snow began to thin out on the slopes after a couple of days, more fell, providing ideal conditions for skiing. Over four feet of snow fell in the area of the WEP site. None fell anywhere else in the Alps during that period.

Daily activities revolved around the slopes. Education classes each morning were followed by skiing for the rest of the day. At night there were opportunities for the different nationalities to mix with games, sledding and other activities.

For many of the students the trip was their first overseas experience. Big Sandy Senior Dwyer Hockwald described the experience as "fantastic."

"I'll go back anytime," he said. □

WINTER came late to Saalbach, Austria, but just in time for the first Winter Educational Program (WEP) in Austria. American, Canadian and European teenagers gathered in a world-famous ski resort for 10 days of activities.

ORGANIZATIONS

PASADENA STUDENT COUNCIL

Ambassador's student councillors are responsible for providing leadership in a wide variety of areas, as well as assisting the College administration.

Each week the Student Council meets, under the direction of the student body president, to discuss the needs of the student body, the implementation of College policies and the planning of College activities.

The Student Council serves as an effective link between the administration and the student body. Student councillors are able to communicate issues at the student level to the faculty and administration and set the pace in responding to the goals and objectives of the College.

AMBASSADOR HALL

RESIDENT ASSISTANTS

Dormitory life represents a significant part of a student's experience at Ambassador. As a result, resident assistants are appointed to ensure the maintenance of AC's high standards in the dormitories.

Their endeavor is also to play a supportive role in the lives of the students they serve.

The RA's meet with Student Housing Officer Gary Richards on a weekly basis to discuss improvements, problems and activities in the dormitories.

RA's serve as "an extension of my arms," says Mr. Richards. One of an RA's greatest responsibilities to his or her dormitory and the College is to make the dormitory conducive to Christian growth.

WOMEN'S CLUB COMMITTEE

Ambassador Women's Clubs are designed to add to a woman's appreciation of her role in society. Through theme nights focusing on different aspects of true femininity, the clubs are able to play an important role in the lives of AC's women.

Under the direction of faculty members and their wives, the club presidents set the tone for the club meetings. Each week the presidents meet as a coordinating committee to ensure unity of purpose in the clubs.

Ambassador Women's Clubs are run along similar lines to the men's clubs. Topics sessions and speeches form the central part of each meeting. The speeches usually focus on the theme for the meeting, which might range from current events to leadership to health and diet or entertaining. The theme for each meeting is also supported by the decorations, invitations and refreshments. Each of these areas provide club members with the opportunity to directly contribute.

PASADENA OUTREACH

Sponsored by the College, Outreach provides a helping hand to those in need in the Church and the local community. More than 300 students this year participated in some aspect of the organization.

The highlight of the year was the Elderly Citizens' Banquet. Providing 120 senior citizens with a fine meal and entertainment, the banquet was the largest Outreach has hosted to date.

The major areas of responsibility for Outreach this year were providing a visiting program for the elderly and supplying specialized programs for emotionally and mentally disturbed youths in the community.

These programs give students challenging real-life situations in which to use their Ambassador training. The many lessons and principles learned at College come to the fore when students go out into the community to give much-needed help and support.

Ambassador's Outreach program truly represents the "way of give" in action.

PASADENA BANDS

Pasadena is home to three different bands: the Dance Band, Stage Band and Pep Band. Playing for one of the three demands a commitment to hours of practice and performance in an already busy schedule. The reward comes in seeing happy, appreciative audiences both on and off campus. The bands provide music for all the College dances and at major sporting events in the Ambassador gymnasium. They also perform for various community functions which require a high calibre musical presentation. Each year one of the groups is involved in some aspect of the Tournament of Roses festivities, known throughout the world for its Pasadena Rose Parade. This year the Stage Band performed at the Rose Parade coronation brunch, when the queen of the parade is crowned.

Many of our musically talented students play in more than one of the bands, due to their specific talent or instrument. These students must be capable of performing a wide variety of compositions. Under the direction of Ross Jutsum, Music Services Director for Ambassador College, the bands have maintained a reputation of excellence in musical selection and execution.

Recording sessions provide another outlet for musical expression. Providing "big band" sounds for the Young Ambassador tapes or films — or creating soundtracks for special occasions — takes one of the three bands (or all three) into the studio to perform but without an immediate audience.

It all equals a real challenge to the musically gifted at Ambassador. In order to maintain the quality for which it's known, Ambassador's Music Services department does require commitment from student performers. But it's well worth the effort.

YOUNG AMBASSADORS

This year the Young Ambassadors completed two years of filming for the all-new 1986 Festival Film.

The Film features an appearance by the late Chancellor of Ambassador College, Herbert W. Armstrong, who for many years took an active interest in the Young Ambassadors.

In addition to filming, the YA's also present live shows in church areas and to local organizations, such as the Rotary Club. One such performance this year was at a dinner in honor of the president of Rotary International at the Anaheim Hilton.

The show was appreciated by the Rotarians and prompted the comment by a Rotary spokesman that "it turned out to be a most perfect show."

Another regular feature of the YA's calendar is a busy schedule of performances for local church areas. Some of these are limited to special music, while others are variety entertainment presentations.

AMBASSADOR RADIO—KBAC

Campus radio station KBAC enables students to develop a variety of broadcast media skills. This year's programming featured extensive daily news coverage, music and variety shows.

More than 90 student volunteers worked with the staff at the station. In a major development this year, KBAC switched to an FM format, providing a potentially stronger and clearer signal transmission.

Station Manager Edwin Stepp and News Director Kevin Armstrong placed a great deal of emphasis on KBAC's news department this year.

Not only did this provide more on-air opportunities, it also opened the doors for students to produce and research news programs. This in turn enabled KBAC to offer a wider range of opportunities to students and to provide a greater service to the student body.

An extensive report, prepared by the Public Relations class, helped the station more clearly see its role in the College community and devise ways to more effectively fill that role.

The report presented a challenge which KBAC was happy to accept, according to Edwin.

OUTDOOR LEADERSHIP CLUB

The proximity of challenging natural environments in Southern California supplies the Outdoor Leadership Club with ample activity opportunities.

The club provides activities such as camping trips and hikes to stimulate students' appreciation of the outdoors and develop skills in properly adjusting to and organizing such activities.

With a meeting each month the club was well prepared for its outings. The meetings focused on outdoor skills including map and compass reading, riflery, rock climbing, and outdoor cooking.

Highlights of the Outdoor Leadership calendar were a camping trip at Devil's Canyon, and a day hike along Bear Creek. The hike concluded with dinner roasted over an open fire. Other activities included rock climbing and day hikes.

Ambassador's Outdoor Leadership Club invites participation from the entire student body. The club outings offer a rare opportunity for students to escape the city and enjoy the beauty of the outdoors in the company of friends.

With the enormous emphasis on the printed word in the Work today, the role of the Portfolio in the College has been important ever since the first issue was published on Nov. 28, 1951.

The student staff employed by College Publications is assisted by volunteers from the student body. The staff and the volunteers all contribute to every aspect of the paper, from writing and reporting to designing and pasting up.

"Working on the Portfolio helps you learn the principles of effective communication by putting them into practice," said Managing Editor Steve McAfee. "It offers a valuable learning experience."

The Ambassador Portfolio is a tabloid bi-weekly campus newspaper which provides students with practical experience in journalism and newspaper production. It serves as both a record of College activities and a source of campus news.

BIG SANDY STUDENT COUNCIL

When you serve as one of the student leaders on the Big Sandy campus, you are required to wear a lot of different hats.

Take, for example, Tony Marcinelli. In addition to serving as the president of the student body, Tony also served as the president of an Ambassador Club and a resident assistant. He was not the only student leader wearing a lot of hats; all of the 14 seniors transferred to the Texas campus carried at least three major areas of responsibility.

It was the second year for the student leadership program, instituted by the late Herbert W. Armstrong to give the Texas campus the benefit of upperclass experience. The seniors were joined on the council by Sophomore President John Hanson and Freshman President Dave Clark.

YA's

The Big Sandy Young Ambassadors took to the stage for their second year with a much expanded schedule.

Under the direction of Russell Duke, the ensemble sang and danced its way through several performances for local church areas and one major concert tour through Louisiana and Mississippi during the spring break.

The busy year began early, with a Sept. 22 performance, followed by several appearances in Corpus Christi during the Feast of Tabernacles. In addition to several other concerts, the Young Ambassadors performed for students and the Big Sandy church congregation April 5.

The group was accompanied by Phyllis Duke on the piano, Randy Duke and Martin Yale on guitars and Mike Peine on percussions.

BIG SANDY CHORALE

When the Big Sandy Ambassador Chorale combined with the Pasadena Concert Choir for the April 26 and 27 performances of Mendelssohn's Elijah — the highlight of the chorale's busy year — it was under unusual circumstances. For the first time in the year, the group did not appear under the direction of Roger Bryant.

This time the group was under the baton of John Daneri Schroeder, music director and conductor at the Pasadena campus, and Mr. Bryant was performing as one of the featured soloists.

The group, after several performances for Sabbath special music, had spent months preparing for the concert in the Ambassador Auditorium during spring break. The special performances were dedicated to the memory of the late Herbert W. Armstrong.

"Service" was the motto of the Portfolio staff, a 15-member journalistic team that covered the happenings of the Big Sandy campus during the 1985-86 college year.

"Throughout the year we tried to emphasize and reemphasize service to our fellow students, in addition to the rest of our readership," said editor Ken Tate.

It was the second year in a row for Ken to head the Texas newspaper staff.

"I think we took a couple of big steps forward toward a more professional product this year," Ken said. "It really helped having a strong returning staff of sophomores." Sophomores completing their second year on the Portfolio staff were Mike Bedford, Susan Bumbulis, Kelli Franco, Marie Myers, Alyssa Olinger and Diane Schemm.

In addition to the regular news and feature coverage of Big Sandy happenings, there were a lot of "top stories" for the veteran staff to cover during the year. First was the announcement of the decision to close the campus at the end of the academic year. Then came the sad news that Pastor General Herbert W. Armstrong had died Jan. 16. Finally, finishing the year on an upswing, came the decision by the new Pastor General Joseph W. Tkach to seek recertification by the state of Texas in order that the campus might remain open.

Speech Clubs Promote Better Communication

Learning to speak with confidence and poise in public can be a tremendous asset. In business, government, education and in daily conversations the ability to speak clearly and intelligently is essential. A virtual information explosion makes effective communication skills mandatory for the well-educated man.

One of the main goals of Ambassador Men's and Women's Clubs is the development of vital public speaking skills. This purpose is achieved through a carefully-designed program which enables students to experience a variety of speaking situations, such as prepared speeches, impromptu, and discussions of current events topics.

Ambassador Clubs for men use the format found in the Church's Spokesman Clubs worldwide. In addition to helping men develop their speaking abilities, the clubs are designed to teach men to think quickly, make a point convincingly and concisely, and learn to participate correctly in a formal meeting environment. The overall goal is to build stronger, more dynamic character according to the purpose laid down by the founder of Ambassador Clubs, Herbert W. Armstrong.

Mr. Armstrong realized even as a young man that public speaking was too often an exercise in vanity, and too often it was boring. In his popular Autobiography, he writes about the approach he encouraged his brother-in-law, Walter Dillon, to take in a speaking contest.

"I asked my brother-in-law if he could bring me copies of a few first-place winning orations. He brought out to the farm a number of them from the college library, printed in pamphlet form. Immediately I noticed that they were all couched in flowery language — the amateur college boy attempt at fancy rhetoric, employing five- to seven-syllable words which actually said practically nothing. All the orations were written on such altruistic and idealistic subjects as peace, or prohibition, or love for fellowman. They displayed ignorance of the WAY to peace, or the problem of alcoholism, or of the human experience in living. But they did contain beautiful, high-flown language!" (The Autobiography of Herbert W. Armstrong, p. 255.)

Ambassador was founded for the purpose of teaching young men and women the right way of life and how to teach that way to others. Effective, purposeful public speaking is an important part of the College curriculum. The clubs are organized using student officers, usually Juniors and Seniors, with each club under the directorship of an Ambassador faculty member or headquarters minister.

Ambassador Women's Clubs also represent significant learning opportunities for the co-eds. Meetings are organized like the men's clubs, except that each meeting has a specific theme. Speeches, decorations and invitations all revolve around the theme for the evening.

FRIENDLINESS pervades all the different club settings at AC. From a men's night in Club H (top left) to a Spanish Club fiesta, an air of hospitality and congeniality make each club meeting a memorable social event. provide loving and encouraging guidance to the women—helping them improve their speaking abilities, developing finer social and cultural graces, and providing instruction relative to the theme of the meeting. Club themes for 1986 included current events, homemaking, leadership, goal-setting, health and diet, personal appearance, living the “give way,” friendship, emotions and the Proverbs 31 woman.

There are other clubs at Ambassador too. Language clubs provide cultural insights and language training for students who participate. The four language clubs, French, German, Spanish and Hebrew, hold meetings throughout the school year. Meetings are conducted in surroundings reflective of the club’s native culture. Guest speakers often visit the clubs to update members on the Work in their particular area. Outings to areas of relative cultural significance are also highlights for the language clubs each year.

Ambassador’s variety of student clubs are designed to provide enjoyable and educational diversions from the hectic daily routine of college life. Participation means growth and development in an important area of character development. □

The production of Ambassador's yearbook, The Envoy, is very much a reflection of the institution the book represents. It is a team effort which requires vision, dedication and commitment to upholding the finest Ambassador traditions.

Work on the publication begins soon after the previous year's book is published. Planning begins late in the summer just prior to the beginning of school, with meetings and discussions about possible themes and content. Trends in publication design are examined to ensure that the Envoy stays current with the most successful and effective graphic approaches. Ideas for editorial content are evaluated in light of the overall theme.

Once a detailed outline of the content of the book has been prepared and approved by Publications Director Dennis Robertson, the pagination is taken to Deputy Chancellor Raymond McNair for his input. Mr. McNair takes an active interest in The Envoy, not only from the standpoint of his responsibilities as deputy chancellor, but also because he served as editor of the book as a student.

Following Mr. McNair's evaluation, the overall project is reviewed by Chancellor Joseph Tkach. Mr. Tkach is dynamically involved in all operations of Ambassador, including the publication of the annual yearbook. After the initial concepts have been worked out, work begins on design, writing and specific photographic assignments at the beginning of the school year. Each section must be constructed in a unified manner. Photographs, design and copy must all complement each other to uphold the theme and tone of the section. Meetings with staff members are held regularly to make sure all are speaking — and doing — the same thing. Each page of the publication is worked on with the whole book in mind.

After the sections are designed, written and photographed, paste-up is begun. Each page is carefully gone over several times to ensure accuracy. While the staff have individual responsibilities in the production of the book, all share the work of checking and reviewing the finished layouts.

This year's Envoy staff consisted of three photographers, a photography assistant, designer, layout artist, and typesetter, along with the art director, photography editor and editor. All staff reported to Mr. Robertson, publications director and the faculty adviser to the Ambassador yearbook.

Input from our Big Sandy campus was provided through their Portfolio photography staff and associate Envoy editor Ken Tate. The annual pictorial record of the year in Big Sandy is really a labor of love, since all the students who contribute to their section have other jobs. In April, a team from College Publications in Pasadena visited Big Sandy to photograph the campus for the special tribute which appears in this book.

Quality is a byword at the College, and the Envoy must reflect Ambassador's standards in every detail. This requires not only taking special care during the preparation of the book for publishing, but also checking quality as the book is printed. Representatives of College Publications travel to the press at Hunter Publishing in North Carolina each year to check color and overall quality as each part of the book is printed.

The final product is the culmination of thousands of hours of dedicated work by the Envoy staff, which is mainly composed of students. It's always a relief when the book is done. It is a massive undertaking. But the students all agree that it's interesting, stimulating and inspiring to see the year come together in pictures and print. We hope you enjoy viewing the book as much as we enjoyed producing it.

BIG SANDY CAM

PUS

A Visit to Our Sister Campus

The Envoy takes a springtime tour of the beautiful Texas campus.

Every day of the year eighteen-wheel rigs roll down Highway 80. From just outside Dallas the highway slices its path along 100 miles of pavement through rolling eastern Texas farmland to the town of Longview. Those 100 miles are just a microcosm of this huge state.

Everything out here is big. The farms, the cars, the trucks all reflect the size of the state that has had perhaps the most colorful and legendary history of all the states of America. Texas could well be the home of the pick-up truck. They dominate the highways, sharing them only with giant trucks and almost exclusively American-made cars.

Even the lone star in the Texas flag is big. In the gentle late-afternoon breeze that flag, with the flag of the United States above it, waves proudly from the entrance to the Big Sandy campus of Ambassador College. On the outskirts of the town of Big Sandy and directly in the path of Highway 80, the College, too, is big.

Sprawling over 1,600 acres, the Ambassador College campus represents a balanced mix of rugged natural beauty and tamed, cultivated grounds. There are many

ARCHITECTURE BLENDING WITH NATURE.

The Roy Hammer Library stands perfectly situated among the trees and rolling lawns of the campus. The Redwood Building, as it is also known, was the first building constructed on the Big Sandy property. Today it remains a hub for College life, housing the library and student commissary.

CLEAR APRIL SKIES

Cyclists enter the campus grounds off Highway 80 during a Physical Education class. The campus' extensive road network connecting the various parts of the 1600-acre property and the flat surrounding terrain lend themselves to Big Sandy's cycling program.

PEACEFUL RURAL ENVIRONMENT

From the fields where cows contentedly graze to the busy College thoroughfares, there is an air of peace and tranquility that engulfs the campus. Big Sandy is a study in unified diversity, offering modern facilities and natural rural environs in a balanced and pleasant combination, each complementing the other.

heavily wooded acres of land on the campus, while much of the property has been carefully groomed and developed to reflect Ambassador's high standards.

The original parcel of college property was purchased back in 1952 and the location has been used as a Festival site since 1953. Every year except 1979 hundreds of Church members have camped out in the "Piney Woods" on the Big Sandy campus. During the Feast in 1953 services were held in a partially completed building on the campus. The result was a distinctive "open-air" feeling to the services.

It was in September 1964 that the site became a college campus, with 18 faculty and 108 pioneering students. That first year was one requiring sacrifice and vision. The well-equipped facilities of today were non-existent, but every day progress was being made.

As the months and years passed the campus developed and grew, blossoming, like the yellow rose of Texas, into a magnificent creation. Around the high quality of the faculty homes were sculptured elegant lawns and gardens, producing a lake-front mini-suburb of lasting beauty. College buildings like the Field House, a multi-functional facility, and the Science Lecture Hall joined the Redwood Building as a part of the campus architecture.

The Redwood Building, erected early in the history of the property, is still today a prominent campus landmark. It was built by volunteers soon after the initial purchase of land had been made. Housing the commissary and Roy Hammer Library, it overlooks the valley leading from the dormitories to the Field House. Its location makes it an ideal meeting place for outings.

Founder Herbert W. Armstrong took a close and personal interest in the development of the Texas campus. He provided many hours of input to meetings and planning sessions regarding Big Sandy's growth as a college. Deputy Chancellor Leslie McCullough, one of the Big Sandy pioneers, contributes directly to the design and growth of the campus by keeping a constant eye on campus maintenance and supervising all development.

The results of the early vision, the sacrifice, the planning and work all come alive today when one visits Ambassador College in Big Sandy. From highway to lakefront, fenceline to fenceline, the unmistakable stamp of Ambassador is evident. But it is not a clone of Pasadena or the former Bricket Wood campus. It retains a unique and special personality all its own.

REACHING FOR THE SKY

David Wynne's bronze "Swans in Flight" sculpture, unveiled by Mr. Wynne and College Founder Herbert W. Armstrong in 1968, aptly captures the vision and purpose of the College. The young men and women who make up the Ambassador student body are themselves spreading their wings and preparing to soar to new heights.

ADMINISTRATION BUILDING

This well-appointed facility served for a number of years as the central organizing center for the annual Feast of Tabernacles. Today it houses the business and registration offices. The building maintains a distinctly natural interior decor that befits its location.

GENTLE, COOLING
LAKESIDE BREEZES

Lake Loma provides a pleasant outlook for the residents of "Faculty Row." All of the homes enjoy easy access to the Lake, which serves as an ideal location for many College activities, as well as for moments of quiet reflection.

It is a personality that leaves a lasting impression on all who have been privileged to be students or faculty here.

"I'll always remember the wide open spaces and being able to look up into a clear sky at night," said Don Worthing, a junior who transferred to Big Sandy during his sophomore year. "It's a great environment for thinking about things."

More than even the physical environment here, the people are what make Big Sandy so special. It is the sharing of life on a daily basis that brings the students of any Ambassador campus close together, but the rural environment, combined with the smaller student body, produces a special atmosphere.

"Everybody down there is like a big family," said junior Aaron Eagle, who spent two years in Big Sandy.

With only a freshman and sophomore class, there is more frequent contact between the entire student body. This, along with the close contact students have with faculty who live on campus, results in the family atmosphere which is so often verbalized.

With the same number of activities as the larger Pasadena campus there are almost double the opportunities to become directly involved with dances, dinners and outings. This produces a close working relationship between students that engenders deep and lasting friendships.

Another aspect of the campus that brings the student body together is the fact that the campus is "where it's at." Leave the campus and there isn't a whole lot of excitement. Many transferring to Big Sandy from Pasadena find it takes a while to adjust to the more rural pace of life. There are no bright lights, no freeways, not even a choice of TV stations.

Excitement, in the sense of artificial Hollywood-style action, is somewhat limited. Nearly everyone down here jokingly refers to "counting the number of trains that go by," for thrills. Despite the initial reaction to the slower pace, it doesn't take long until the breakneck speed of AC life takes over.

Ambassador life has always been fast-paced and full of challenges. Many times Mr. Armstrong referred to it as the "happiest, busiest place on earth." That comment has rung true wherever Ambassador College has been located.

As day dawns over the pasturelands of east Texas, life begins again. Wildlife in the prolific natural vegetation on campus begins to stir. Swans on the lake spread their wings to greet the sunlight streaming across Lake Loma. An orchestra-on-wings bursts into symphony in the trees surrounding the dormitories. And from one corner of campus to the other, squirrels and chipmunks scurry about in a never-ending quest to fill the family grocery order.

In the dormitories and in Booth City, students make ready for another day of classes and work. The trek to the Field House is a long one, resulting in a proliferation of bicycles around campus — two wheels are faster than two legs. The Field House is home to administration offices, the gymnasium, meeting rooms, and most important of all — at mealtime — the kitchen and dining hall.

At breakfast time plans are made for the coming day. Last minute study for Life and Teachings is done with cornflakes as a study aid, letters are read or written around honey bears and speech ideas are tossed back and forth amidst the eggs and waffles. And then, just before 8:00 a.m., an exodus occurs that leaves the dining hall almost bereft of life. Another day of classes has begun.

As the morning wears on the freshness of the day melts under the warmth of the southern skies. Renowned for its humidity in the warmer months, Big Sandy is air conditioned from entrance to exit. The humidity reaches across the east Texas farmland like a blanket, stifling all but the faintest breath of air. The stillness will sit for days, unbroken but for the incessant chirping of crickets, until thunderclouds begin to well up and roll across the land bringing spectacular lightning and thunder bursts that seem to rent the sky from horizon to horizon.

It is in the spring that the campus enjoys its most pleasant climate. Gentle breezes blow small white clouds across the sky as green growth explodes through the trees and flowers burst into colorful life. The cold of winter and the heat of summer are bridged by this perfect harmony of the elements.

SURROUNDS RESI-DENCES

The addition of the student dormitories to the property was done so as to blend with the environment, thus preserving the natural beauty and tranquility. Students enjoy the park-like setting in which their College residences are located.

After hours, home-away-from-home is the Redwood Room. It is here that students relax with a game of pool or in front of the television for a while. Because stores are so far from the campus, the Redwood Room also serves as a commissary, supplying students with everything from shaving cream to tennis balls. It also serves as the campus bookstore, stocking textbooks and stationery.

But perhaps the main reason people flock to the Redwood Room is because it's a good place to get together and relax. Sundaes, shakes and munchies help ease the pressures of AC life and many students stop in at the Redwood Room on their way to studies or other evening activities.

Relaxation comes at a premium, but this is a perfect environment in which to unwind. From the golf course and the rolling shaded lawns to the lake and the gently winding pathways beside the streams, there are an abundance of places to get away from the crowd and enjoy time alone. Perhaps that is what makes Big Sandy such a joy to be a part of — the balance between activity and peace; company and solitude; progress and natural beauty.

Throughout the 22 years since it was first opened as a college, Ambassador College Big Sandy has played a vital role in the development of a unique educational system. Thousands of students have passed through the classrooms and dormitories of the campus. It has served through the years to provide an education otherwise unavailable to hundreds of young people.

In May 1977 the campus was closed and only a limited number of students were accepted to the reopened Pasadena campus. A couple of years later it became evident that a second campus was again needed to accommodate even a segment of the applicants for Ambassador College. The reopening of the campus in 1981 meant a backlog of suitable applicants could be accepted and many more students were able to reap the benefits of an AC education.

On December 10, 1985 it was announced that Big Sandy would again close its doors. It was an announcement that saddened students present and past. There are strong emotional ties to the campus and it has for so long been a part of the Work it seemed like the loss of a loved one.

Hope was revived April 15, 1986 when Chancellor Joseph W. Tkach announced that he was advising the College administration to pursue certification for one more year at least. This would allow the Freshman class to complete their year at Big Sandy.

Whatever its future, the Big Sandy campus has faithfully served the Work of God for many years and has left indelible memories in the minds of all its students, faculty members, and dedicated employees. □

BEAUTIFUL SUNSETS ADD TO THE BEAUTY OF OUR SISTER CAM- PUS

Life on Lake Loma goes on from the start of a new day until its beautiful sunset closure. The lake's beauty and peace attract the swan and her cygnet just as readily as they do the lone boatman enjoying the fading rays of sunlight that gently shimmer on Lake Loma's waters.

From the Editor:

Pressure is the burden of physical or mental distress; the constraint of circumstance. To borrow from Dr. Doolittle, we've grown accustomed to that phase here in the Envoy office. It is a struggle, annually, to finish a book of this size. Thousands of photographs to go over, thousands of words to write, 8000 man-hours of work to accomplish in perhaps the busiest environment on earth — Ambassador College. No one has figured out how it gets done, but each year this "annual pictorial record" rolls off the presses, another chapter in the history of Ambassador recorded for posterity.

We wish to thank Herbert W. Armstrong, the founder of Ambassador and its chancellor for 39 years, for his dedication in making the College such a remarkable institution and for allowing us the privilege of recording its history year by year in the pages of The Envoy. We are happy to dedicate this volume to him.

Many thanks to the students who are the backbone of this publication. From photographers, to writers, to graphic artists, they have many other responsibilities as students here, but they always come through — in spite of the pressure. Thanks a million. And many thanks to Pasadena's Deputy Chancellor Raymond F. McNair for his dedicated interest and involvement each year. Thanks to our adviser and boss, Dennis Robertson. He has a lot of hats to wear, but his Envoy hat looks the most worn.

A special thanks to Chancellor Joseph W. Tkach, who gave of his valuable time to assist the staff. (The beautiful cover was his idea!)

There were many others who contributed during the year. Our appreciation goes out to Greg S. Smith, Ralph Lucia, Phil McCollum, Cliff Worthing, Andrew Graham, Kevin Craft, Glen La Ravia, Jeff Dowd, Max E. Fly, Larry Miller, Scott Smith, Mike Miles, Diane Seelhoff and all the other people who contributed to The 1986 Envoy.

Thanks again, Mr. Armstrong. It was an honor to have served with you.

... The baton is passed.
