

Greetings and welcome, brethren, to the Feast of Tabernacles. In anticipation of the scores of you who will be here this year, we have realized a definite need for cooperation and organization. Therefore, we have compiled some useful information and listed a few simple rules for you to observe (for your own good) while you are here. We cannot stress too strongly that you do your part by obeying these rules and helping keep the facilities, which God has opened to us, clean and orderly.

We have tried to place responsible men in key positions to guide and help you in every possible way. We must ask you to cooperate by following their instructions to alleviate any possible confusion.

Since we have a tight schedule, we must work together to insure the most from these eight days -- God's Feast of Tabernacles.
