Verses 27-28, “And when the seven days were almost ended, the Jews from Asia, seeing him in the temple, stirred up the whole crowd and laid hands on him, crying out, ‘Men of Israel, help! This is the man who teaches all men everywhere against the people, the law, and this place; and furthermore he also brought Greeks into the temple and has defiled this holy place.’”

We see a mob. A riot starts—this kind of lynch-mob mentality. People get in a mob and they don’t think. Rumors go out and people believe the craziest things. Here they were. The rumor went out that Paul had brought some Gentiles into the inner part of the temple; he had brought some in who were uncircumcised and who would not have had access beyond the outer courts in the court of the Gentiles. The rumor went out that He brought them in and had defiled the temple.

They said, ‘This man has so little regard for the temple that he has brought a couple of uncircumcised Greeks in here, and they have defiled the temple. He has nothing but contempt for the temple.’ This was the rumor that began to run rampant. There was a riot that started.

Verse 33, the police force came and arrested Paul. They didn’t know what was going on.

Verses 37-38, “And as Paul was about to be led into the barracks, he said to the commander, ‘May I speak to you?’ He replied, ‘Can you speak Greek? Are you not the Egyptian who some time ago raised an insurrection and led the four thousand assassins out into the wilderness?’”

The captain of the guard makes it plain. He said, ‘Aren’t you that Egyptian fellow that had started a riot and led a bunch of robbers off into the desert?’ He was surprised when Paul spoke Greek to him. From all the commotion going on, he thought he was arresting the “Al Capone” of his day. He thought he must have the public enemy “number one.” It turns out that he said, ‘You are not that guy. I can see you and listen to you talk. You are not that fellow that did that.’ Paul said, ‘No, I’m not.’

Verse 39, “But Paul said, ‘I am a Jew from Tarsus, in Cilicia, a citizen of no mean city; and I implore you, permit me to speak to the people.’”

Verse 40, Paul began to speak there. He spoke in Hebrew to the crowd.

Acts 22:2, “And when they heard that he spoke to them in the Hebrew language, they kept all the more silent...” They quieted down when he began speaking in Hebrew—both out of respect for the Hebrew language as well as the fact that they generally had to “listen up” in order to hear it better because Hebrew was not the everyday spoken language in Judea at that time. Aramaic, which is similar to Hebrew, was the common language. Of course, a lot of the Jews who were there from other areas for the holy day understood only a small amount of Hebrew or they were “rusty” with their Hebrew. When Paul began speaking in the “real thing,” they had to really “listen up” to try to understand what he was saying. They were doing so, and he went through and spoke to them.

Everything was fine until he began to talk about preaching to the Gentiles. When he mentioned going and speaking to the Gentiles (vv. 21-22), this really stirred them up. To them this was the unforgivable sin. They were ready to start a riot again. Such was their attitude.

Verse 24, the commander ordered him to be brought into the barracks (KJV, “castle”). He decided that there had to be something to this. He didn’t know what was going on, but he took him in there and gave him a good working over—gave him the “third degree.” Then they would see what story he would tell.

Verses 25-26, they tied up Paul. Paul asked, ‘Is it lawful for you to do this to me, a Roman citizen, un-condemned? I haven’t had a trial. I haven’t been convicted of a crime. You’re going to take me in there and give me a beating. I’m a Roman citizen.’ Well, then the guard got scared and went and got the captain. ‘You had better watch it; this guy is a Roman citizen.’

Now, Roman citizens had rights. Most people in the Roman Empire were not citizens. Originally, the only ones who were Roman citizens were the inhabitants of Rome. Later, Roman citizenship was extended to all the people of Italy. Everyone else that they conquered was subject peoples; they weren’t citizens. They were subjects of the Roman Empire, but they weren’t citizens, which meant that they didn’t really have any rights. The only ones that had any rights were the citizens.

There were a number of rights. Rome practiced the rule of law, but the law only applied to the citizens—and there weren’t a whole lot of citizens. The automatic citizenship, there in Rome and Italy, was extended out to a few other localized areas. Individuals could obtain Roman citizenship granted on a one-by-one basis. Generally, the way you got it was you bought it. Kind of like the way you get things today. If you have enough money, you can probably buy just about anything. You could probably get a Russian citizenship or whatever citizenship you wanted if you had enough money.

It's amazing when you pay off the right people. The emperors were always willing to sell a few things, a few citizenships, and raise a little cash.

Citizenship was hereditary in the family. If your dad was a citizen, then you inherited that citizenship. Once a family received Roman citizenship, then from that time on, that family had that citizenship. Paul had inherited his citizenship. He was born a Roman citizen. Paul invoked the legal rights that he had and utilized them.

Let's quickly summarize here as we get to the situation where he went to trial before the Sanhedrin (Acts 22:30).

In Acts 23, Paul used wisdom. There is a time to use wisdom. Paul was on trial. When they brought him before the Jewish court, it didn't take him very long to realize that half of them were Pharisees and half of them were Sadducees. Now, the Pharisees believed in the resurrection. They accepted the doctrine of the resurrection, but the Sadducees didn't.

Verses 6-7, when Paul got in there, the first thing he said was, 'You know I was born a Pharisee; I am the son of a Pharisee. I am in here because I've been called into question of the hope of the resurrection of the dead.' Immediately, this began to set things "abuzz."

Verses 8-9, the Sadducees were upset because they didn't think there was any resurrection. They began arguing with the Pharisees who said, 'Yes, there is.' Then the Pharisees said, 'This fellow doesn't seem like such a bad fellow; we think you should turn him loose.'

Verse 10, the Sadducees were mad and began squabbling and fighting among themselves. Paul just used a little bit of psychology. He picked the point that they did not agree on and got them arguing among themselves. That got so much commotion going that they were about to get into a fight over him. The soldiers came in and took him back to jail. They said, 'This is getting out of hand.'

In Acts 24, they brought him before Felix the governor. Now the Jews had hired a real "hotshot" lawyer—a fellow by the name of Tertullus. He was one of those real "hotshot" types, a kind of the "Race-horse Haines" of the day or whatever the famous lawyer. He came in there. Notice the "syrupy" way he started off. When he was called, Tertullus began to accuse Paul to Felix.

Acts 24:2-7, "And when he was called upon, Tertullus began his accusation, saying, 'Seeing that through you we enjoy great peace; and prosperity is being brought in this nation by your foresight, we accept it always and in all places, most noble Felix, with all thankfulness. Nevertheless, not to be tedious to you any further, I beg you to hear, by your courtesy, a few words from us. For we have found this man a plague, a creator of dissension among all the Jews throughout the world, and a ringleader of the sect of the Nazarenes. He even tried to profane the temple, and we seized him, and wanted to judge him according to our law. But the commander Lysias came by and with great violence took him out of our hands.'"

Does that at all bear any resemblance to the truth? He comes in here "laying it on really thick." He was saying, 'This fellow, he's a troublemaker, a ringleader of this sect—this cult, this sect of the Nazarenes. [Boy that sounds bad.] He's just stirring up trouble everywhere. He was going to profane the temple, and all we were trying to do was bring him to court. We are peaceful, law-abiding people. We were arresting him for breaking the law, and we were going to take him to court. These soldiers, these policemen, just came in there swinging their Billy-clubs everywhere. They just knocked us all around and just took this guy. Boy, police brutality! They were just trampling all over us, just terrible, terrible! You need to speak to that chief of police that you have. I just can't believe it! Those police just came in there, and they were just so ugly!'

Listen to this guy just "laying it all on." People haven't changed; it's the same thing. You can just see this lawyer up here in court, going on about his poor client. 'The police came in, and it was terrible.' Well, anyway, the governor listened to all this.

Verse 9, the Jews were standing there, and they were agreeing—"listen to this guy." So Paul, afterward, just went down and gave the facts.

Verses 10-13, "Then Paul, after the governor had nodded to him to speak, answered: 'Inasmuch as I know that you have been for many years a judge of this nation, I do the more cheerfully answer for myself, because you may ascertain that it is no more than twelve days since I went up to Jerusalem to worship. And they neither found me in the temple disputing with anyone nor inciting the crowd, either in the synagogues or in the city. Nor can they prove the things of which they now accuse me.'"

'They didn't find me in the temple arguing with anybody or inciting people—neither in the synagogues nor in the city. I haven't said anything to anybody. They can't prove any of these things that they are saying. They have no evidence. They can't document one thing that they say I did. I was not preaching in the temple. I was not doing anything.' Paul had been accused of profaning the temple.

We see the situation went on. Felix listened to Paul. He called Paul and liked to listen to what Paul had to say.

Verse 25, "Now as he reasoned about righteousness, self-control, and the judgment to come, Felix was afraid and answered, 'Go away for now, when I have convenient time I will call for you.'" When Felix heard about righteousness and temperance, this made him a little nervous. When he began to find out there was a judgment to come, this really scared him because he knew that he was falling pretty far short when it got to righteousness and temperance, and if there was a judgment to come, he really was in trouble. So, he didn't want to hear anymore. This is the way some people are. They hear the truth and want to turn off the television. It makes them uncomfortable.

Verse 26, "Meanwhile he also hoped that money would be given him by Paul, that he might release him. Therefore he sent for him more often and conversed with him."

Felix kept him in jail because what he really wanted was a little "payola." He wanted a little "under-the-table" money. He kept figuring that eventually Paul could "shake down" the Church and get some money for him. He would listen to him from time to time and kept waiting to get some money.

Verse 27, "But after two years Porcius Festus succeeded Felix; and Felix, wanting to do the Jews a favor, left him there." Two years went by, and Paul didn't pay him off. So when he was getting ready to leave office, he decided he would just leave him there. He wouldn't stir up trouble with the Jews. Festus came in. Festus was the new governor. Well, they had to go through all the "rigmarole" again.

Acts 25:2-3, "Then the high priest and the chief men of the Jews informed him against Paul; and they petitioned him, asking a favor against him, that he would summon him to Jerusalem—while they lay in ambush along the road to kill him." Festus thought, 'Let's just send him back to Jerusalem and have a trial.'

Verse 10, "Then Paul said, 'I stand at Caesar's judgment seat, where I ought to be judged. To the Jews I have done no wrong, as you very well know.'" Paul said, 'No way. I am not going back there.' He knew that they would try to kill him. There wasn't going to be any trial. Paul at this point appealed to Caesar.

Verse 11, "For if I am an offender, or have committed anything worthy of death, I do not object to dying; but if there is nothing in these things of which these men accuse me, no one can deliver me to them. I appeal to Caesar.'" He appealed to the Supreme Court of the day. He appealed to Caesar. He was exercising his right as a Roman citizen to do so, and this solved the problem for Festus. He said, 'I will just send you to Rome then.'

Verse 12, "Then Festus, when he had conferred with the council, answered, 'You have appealed to Caesar? To Caesar you shall go!'"

Verse 13, King Agrippa was in town, and he wanted to hear this fellow Paul. Festus decided this would be an opportunity to get in good with Agrippa.

In Acts 26:1-29, Paul addressed Festus and Agrippa. Notice the situation. Paul has now had an opportunity to speak to the top echelons of government in his area. He spoke to the two Roman governors and the king over that area under the Roman Empire.

Acts 26:31-32, neither of them found anything wrong with him.

In Acts 27, they put him on a boat and were going to ship him off to Rome.

Verses 13-44; 28:1, on the trip from Caesarea to Rome, a storm resulted in a shipwreck on Malta where the group had to winter. Of course, Paul took advantage of the opportunity to preach.

In Acts 27:9-10, it was a time when the sailing was dangerous. In fact, Paul warned them that it was really too late in the season. But they figured, 'what did he know?' And they went anyway. It mentions in v. 9 that the Fast was already past—in other words, the Day of Atonement.

In Acts 28:1, they wrecked there at Malta.

Verses 11-14, when the winter was over—in the spring—they left. They landed at Syracuse, in Sicily and then came into the main part of Italy, south of Rome. When Paul came to Rome, he was delivered to the Praetorian Guard.

Verse 16, he was allowed to dwell by himself. He rented a home.

Acts 28:30, "Then Paul dwelt two whole years in his own rented house, and received all who came to him." He had a personal guard. He was evidently chained to the guard, but he was at least allowed to dwell in a house. He was allowed free access for people to come and see him.

Notice the reputation of the Church. Notice what they knew about the Church.

Verse 21, “And they said to him, ‘We neither received letters from Judea concerning you, nor have any of the brethren who came reported or spoken any evil of you. But we desire to hear from you what you think; for concerning this sect [speaking of the Church], we know that it is spoken against everywhere.’”

‘We don’t really know anything about it; we just know that people don’t like it.’ That sounds kind of like us, doesn’t it? They don’t know much about it, but they don’t like it. ‘This sect! This cult! This crazy bunch you got mixed up with.’

There’s nothing new under the sun. That’s what they said about Paul. That’s what they said about the Church in the New Testament. Why should we expect that they think more highly of us? Christ warned us to be careful.

Luke 6:26, “Woe to you when all men speak well of you.” Be careful if everybody likes you. I don’t mean your personality. People liked Christ’s personality, but they didn’t like His message. If the world agrees with you, you have trouble. If the world agrees with you, then you have to look and see what you are preaching and practicing. The world did not agree with Christ, and they are not going to agree with us. They may like certain things about us, but when it comes down to religion, they think that’s kind of crazy.

We notice what Paul was preaching right to the end.

Acts 28:31, “preaching the kingdom of God and teaching the things which concern the Lord Jesus Christ with all confidence, no one forbidding him.”

We open the book of Acts with the disciples asking Jesus, Acts 1:6, “...Lord, will You at this time restore the Kingdom to Israel?” –Because that’s what He preached about. When the book of Acts ends, Paul was preaching the Gospel of the Kingdom of God. So throughout, we have the clear message and teaching of the Gospel of the Kingdom of God. The world has lost sight of that Gospel and that message, but God’s Church has preached and taught that message through the centuries.

With that, we will conclude our survey of the book of Acts. We, of course, have only hit the high spots in the book of Acts, but you have had opportunity to read the story in detail. I have tried to concentrate on matters of background that can perhaps make it a little more meaningful.

We will be starting fresh on a brand new series.

So with that, we will be completed.

Introduction to the General Epistles

I want to begin a new series. It will be a fairly short four-part series on the General Epistles. I think it will serve to tie up material that we have covered. We went through the Gospels—the story of what Jesus Christ said and did—then we followed up with Acts, the actions of His original apostles. We have the emphasis on action—what was done by Jesus Christ and His disciples.

Now we come to what is next in the inspired order of the New Testament—the General Epistles. I'll explain to you, in just a few moments, as to why they would logically come next. We will focus a little bit on what these books contain because they have vital information.

When we finish this series, we are going back to the Old Testament and picking up some of the material we skipped over earlier. We covered the historical survey of the Old Testament in story flow, but there are many books that we did not touch upon. When we finish this series on the General Epistles, we will go back and pick up the Major Prophets—Isaiah, Jeremiah and Ezekiel—that I think will prove to be a very timely subject. Then we will go into the Minor Prophets. I think we will find that the timing of going into those books will prove to tie in very directly with the events that we will be going through in the course of the next year.

Let's focus this evening on the General Epistles—sometimes called the “catholic epistles.” That's right! You know why they are called the “catholic epistles”? The word “catholic” simply means “universal.” The term “catholic epistles” does not mean that they have any connection with the Catholic Church. We will notice a little later what the Catholic Church sought to do to some of these epistles. Some of the commentators use the term “universal” or “catholic” in the old sense of “universal” or “general.”

Many of the letters that Paul wrote were specific letters. He wrote a letter to the Church at Rome. He wrote a letter to the Church in Corinth, a letter to the Church in Thessalonica, a letter to the Church in Ephesus.

The General Epistles are letters that were written, not to a specific church or to a specific individual like Titus or Timothy or Philemon, but to a wide general audience. They were not directed toward one specific congregation or one specific individual. That's why they are termed General Epistles.

In the order of the New Testament that the Greeks have preserved, we have, first, the Gospels and Acts. They were preserved in the order that we customarily find them. Next are the General Epistles of James, Peter, John and Jude. Paul's epistles come next in mostly the order that we now have. The only difference would be that Paul's letters to the seven Churches, Romans through Thessalonians, would follow in the order that we have them, but the book of Hebrews would be inserted in between II Thessalonians and I Timothy rather than coming after Philemon, as in our common English versions. So, the inspired order is the Gospels, Acts, the General Epistles, Paul's epistles followed by the book of Revelation. We are going to note that there were some reasons for this. As I said, this is the order that was preserved by the Greeks in their manuscripts.

The order that is used in our English Bibles is what is called the Western order. That is the order that was derived from the Catholic Vulgate—the Latin translation—that was the official version of the Catholic Church. They re-arranged the order of the books from that which the Greeks had preserved. When the translations were made from the Greek manuscripts, they rearranged the order of them to conform to that with which people were already familiar, which was the Catholic or Western order. The reason was that they didn't see what difference it made. They said, ‘it's all the same books; what difference does it make what order they are in? This is what people are familiar with, so this is what we will do.’ That's why all subsequent English translations have followed that order. To my knowledge, the only English translation that uses the original order is the Pannan translation of the New Testament. He didn't fully understand what the significance was, but he figured there must be one. So in doing his English translation, he followed the original Greek order.

We have the same thing with the Old Testament. The order that we have in our King James and all the English translations is a re-arranged order. It is not in the order that the Jews preserved the books. If you find a Jewish translation of the Old Testament, it will be in the inspired order, but any of the other English orders simply follow a re-arrangement. The library in Alexandria, Egypt, didn't see any "rhyme or reason" to the order that the Jews had, so they re-arranged it—as librarians are want to do. They arranged it in the order that made sense to them—which missed the point—but they didn't understand the point. There are several reasons why God originally inspired that the general epistles come right after the book of Acts and why that was the first thing you would go into. One clear reason involves the subject matter of the books themselves. The subject matter contained in James, Peter, John and Jude is very basic.

Peter tells us about Paul's epistles.

II Peter 3:16, "as also in all his [Paul] epistles, speaking in them of these things hard to be understood, which those that are unlearned and unstable wrest and twist as they do also the other Scriptures." Peter recognized that Paul was a writer that you have to read very carefully. Paul was a deep thinker. He wrote very complex sentences. Any of you, if you were an English teacher, would have a great time trying to diagram one of Paul's sentences. Some of them take up almost two paragraphs. He wrote a lot of very complex thoughts. Because of his style of writing, you really have to carefully go through what Paul said. He was a very deep thinker; he expounded very many deep truths.

Paul is not for beginners in the sense that Peter said Paul wrote things that are hard to be understood. So that tells us you start with what's easy to be understood and progress to what's hard to be understood. If you start with what's hard to be understood, and you don't understand that, then you are all "balled up" by the time you come to something easy. Then the whole thing is a mess. It's kind of like starting with Algebra and then trying to work your way back to two plus two. That's not the approach to use. You start with the most basic and work up to what is more complex. Paul wrote things that were more complex. He wrote some very deep spiritual things.

When you go through the Gospels, you have what Jesus Himself said and did. When you go through the book of Acts, we find the continuation of the story of what the apostles said and did, but the emphasis is on action. When we come to James, Peter, John and Jude, there are basic things that are further developed. We will find what those things are in just a few moments. The material is very basic and provides a proper prelude to the study of Paul's letters.

The apostles who wrote the General Epistles are James the brother of Jesus, Peter who was the chief of the twelve apostles and John who was part of that inner circle of the twelve. He was the last of the original apostles left alive. Peter and John were basically responsible for the completion of the New Testament canon. James, of course, had died prior to the time the canon was completed. James died two or three years prior to the death of Peter. He was not involved in canonization of the New Testament. James the brother of John had died much earlier (Acts 12:2). He had been martyred much earlier.

In Galatians 2:9, Paul acknowledged James, Peter and John as being the pillars of the Church. Paul recognized and acknowledged them as such. James, as I said, was the brother of Jesus. He was the apostle who presided over the headquarters' Church in Jerusalem. Peter was the one that Jesus utilized as the chief of the twelve. John was a part of that inner circle of Peter, James and John. There are two James. You recognized that. James who wrote the book of James was not the James who was the brother of John (Acts 12:2). James who wrote the book of James was the son of Joseph and Mary; therefore, he was technically the half-brother of Jesus Christ. Jude was a younger brother of James and, therefore, also a half-brother of Jesus.

When we look at James, Peter, John and Jude, we are looking at the writings of apostles who were centered and had been focused there in Jerusalem. The apostles were, in the case of Peter and John, a part of the twelve; in the case of James and Jude, they were literal brothers of Jesus Himself.

Even though Jesus' brothers were not converted during His lifetime, you have to recognize the benefit they had. They had grown up with Him. They knew Jesus in a way that basically no one else did. They had grown up with Him and were with Him up until He was thirty years old when He left home to begin His ministry. They were at least in their mid-twenties by that time. They had been around Him; they had worked with Him; and they had associated with Him all their life. They knew how He thought. They understood a lot of things that they didn't fully grasp until they were converted. Once they were converted, they had that tremendous background of that intimate day-after-day exposure for years and years.

The exposure of the twelve apostles had been more limited to a three and one-half year period, but it was a very intense exposure. It was the time of Christ's ministry. It was a time when they were more mature and more receptive—even though they weren't really converted and didn't really get the point of a lot of what Jesus said until after they were converted. Once these individuals were converted and really began to get the point, a lot of things came together.

The greatest importance of the books of the General Epistles is the basic knowledge and warnings that they provide the Christians. They give the knowledge about the real meaning of Christianity and the attempts that were being made to subvert and to corrupt it. There is a great deal of warning in these epistles concerning the apostasy, attempts to subvert the truth and to raise up what ultimately became the great false church.

It's interesting because there have probably not been any books of the New Testament that have been more objected to over the years than most of the General Epistles. In the early centuries, the church at Rome, Alexandria and Carthage rejected most or all of these books. The Catholic Church likes to claim the credit for having given us the Bible. That, of course, is not true. When you first come upon the early Catholic Church conference, the Bible, as we know it, was already in existence. The only thing they were arguing about was taking books out of an already existent canon. They were arguing about whether or not certain books should be included that were already included. We find something already extant, and we find individuals objecting to it.

The interesting thing is that when you look at the Churches that Paul raised up or the Churches that John administered in the latter years of his life, there was never any objection to the canon of the New Testament. When you look at the Churches in Asia Minor and in Judea, you don't find any record of any objection to these epistles or to any of the New Testament. There was never a question in the areas of Judea or the area of Asia Minor. There was never any objection from any of those Churches to the canon of the New Testament as we have it.

The only places objections came from were Rome, together with Alexandria, Egypt, which should tell you something. What did God ever do in Egypt, other than tell His people to come out of it? Rome is not where you look as the repository of truth. That is made plain and is one of the reasons they so greatly objected to the book of Revelation. You know, you don't even have to be really perceptive to read Revelation; by the time you get to Revelation 17, you come to this great city that reigns over the kings of the earth that sit on seven hills. You don't have to scratch your head too long to figure out which one that is. There are not very many cities that will fit that definition—the great city of the ancient world that was very famous for being the city of seven hills. That, clearly, was the city that reigned over the kings of the earth. They didn't have to read too far. They could even figure out a few things and knew that it was directed at them—and they didn't like it.

The Churches in Syria and Jerusalem accepted these books from the earliest time. There was never a question in the Churches in Asia Minor. The real reason for the argument was a desire to discredit the instructions and the warnings that are contained in these books.

It's interesting that you can come all the way down to the Protestants and Martin Luther; Martin Luther didn't like these books, particularly the book of James. The Lutherans derive from Martin Luther. The German translation of the New Testament is based on Martin Luther's translation in the German language and is the equivalent of what the King James is in the English. It is kind of standard.

To this day in this German translation, there is a verse in Romans that is mistranslated because Martin Luther added a word in where it talks about being justified by faith. Martin Luther didn't think that was strong enough, so he added in "alone." So it reads, "justified by faith alone." Martin Luther referred to the book of James as "an epistle of straw." He didn't like the book of James because it talked about faith without works is dead. He called it "an epistle of straw."

Well, if you wait a few years, you will get to find out what James is going to call Martin Luther. We found what Martin Luther called James; wait a few years and you will get the rest of the story. We will hear what James calls Martin Luther, and I daresay James will have the last word. In the long run, his word is going to carry a whole lot more weight. The ways things are headed, you may not have to wait too, too, long to find out what James thinks on the subject.

Then we will see some of the scholars who want to argue about the Greek and the Hebrew. They can be arguing about it while the bombs are falling and the Germans are marching down the street. They can be arguing about how many people wrote Isaiah, that the Bible doesn't mean what it says and prophecy doesn't really tell about the future. We will just stick around for a few years and see who has what to say.

The objections to these books go back to certain areas. The objections to these books ultimately go back to the subject matter. These books were clearly written to encourage Christians during times of increasing stress and persecution, of increasing turmoil and dissensions within the visible Church. You have to get the picture. You have to realize a little of what was going on at the time.

The book of James and the books of Peter (certainly James and II Peter) were written within a five-year period prior to the destruction of Jerusalem. Both of the books of Peter were written within, let's say, a six- or seven-year period of the destruction of Jerusalem and the temple. John's books were written in the 90s, but James, Peter and Jude were written in the early to mid-60s A.D. II Peter was written perhaps around 67 A.D. What we are looking at is a time just a few years prior to the destruction of Jerusalem and the temple.

You have to understand what that meant. From the time that the Church had its beginnings on the Day of Pentecost 31 A.D. up to this time, things had been centered in Jerusalem. If there were questions, controversies or problems, they could come up to Jerusalem, to the apostles and elders there, and the matter could be resolved.

Look at the case in Acts 15. It was clear that this is where the apostles were and where things centered. If there were questions, you go to Jerusalem and you get them resolved. The Jerusalem Church was the nucleus. Paul admonished the Gentile Churches to be followers of the Churches of God in Judea. Everyone was directed to look to headquarters, to Jerusalem, to the Churches in Judea because that was where the Churches had been established for the longest period of time. This is where the people who were the most deeply grounded in the Law and scriptures were. This was the logical place.

Even for the Jews who were converted, a great deal of their life revolved around Jerusalem and around the temple because the temple was the focal point for Jerusalem. Even those who were converted still went to the temple and viewed it. Jerusalem was a visible symbol of where God had been working, of God's work and what God was accomplishing and doing. There were many things that focused in on it.

It was very difficult for them to perceive of how things could go on with Jerusalem "wiped off" the map and with the temple "wiped off" the map, which meant of course that the headquarters Church scattered. There was a remnant that went to nearby Pella, but they ceased to have influence. You have to realize the extent to which this was going to shake up people and the extent to which this was going to be a problem. These events would seem so drastic that those who had understood some of what Jesus said in Matthew 24 must have thought for something like that to happen, it would mean that the end was here—Christ was going to come back.

After all, didn't Jesus say in Luke 21:20, "...when you see Jerusalem encompassed about with armies..." They were going to perceive that.

Now there were things that had to be pointed out. That's part of why the General Epistles were written. Paul wrote Thessalonians right around the same time.

II Thessalonians 2:1-3, "Now, brethren, concerning the coming of our Lord Jesus Christ and our gathering together to Him, we ask you, not to be soon shaken in mind or troubled, either by spirit or by word or by letter, as if from us, as though the day of Christ had come. Let no one deceive you by any means; for that Day will not come unless the falling away comes first, and the man of sin is revealed, the son of perdition."

He was warning them. He said, 'You are going to see things going on and are going to scratch your head and say, "How can this be?"' Here are people introducing heresies, people who were doing and saying things. In some cases, whole congregations were being subverted.

Paul warned those in the Greek-speaking world in II Thessalonians 2:3 to understand that at the time of the end, that day shall not come except there was a falling away first and the man of sin was revealed—the son of perdition.

II Peter 3:3-4, "knowing this: that scoffers will come in the last days, walking according to their own lusts, and saying, 'Where is the promise of His coming? For since the fathers fell asleep, all things continue as they were from the beginning of creation.'"

Peter wrote and explained, 'Don't think when you see things happening, and it doesn't happen on your time schedule, that God is slack concerning His promises or that God is careless or that God is not paying attention to things. Don't think that.'

Verses 8-9, God is not slack concerning His promises. God has a time plan; in God's plan, one day is representative of a thousand years. You draw the conclusion from that—a day is representative of a thousand years in God's plan. In Revelation 20:4-6, John makes plain that period is a thousand years. We know that there is a Sabbath that God reserves to Himself at the end. That's made plain in the Major Prophets. Isaiah and others describe that God reserves a period of time. The time of the Messiah, the time of the Messiah's reign, is likened unto a Sabbath (Isaiah 14:7). John tells us in Revelation that that Sabbath will be a thousand years of duration. Peter tells us in II Peter 3:8 that a day is illustrative of a thousand years in God's time schedule. God is not slack, but He is on a time schedule. You begin to perceive a seven thousand-year plan—six thousand years allotted to man and the seventh thousand-year period, the millennial Sabbath, reserved for God. You begin to understand some of that, but it really doesn't become clear until these things were written.

One of the purposes of these epistles was to encourage Christians during the times of increasing stress and persecution, of increasing turmoil and dissension within the visible Church. There were going to be problems, things they were going to see. I think we have to understand that sometimes God allows things to take place. You think, 'Why would God allow this?' Well, God over the years has chosen to allow many things. What we have to do is stay close to God, walk with God and realize God has a plan and a purpose that He is working out.

God allowed some of these things; these epistles were to encourage them and to build them up during those times. It was to give instruction on points of basic Christian doctrine and Christian living. There are some very fundamental issues addressed in the General Epistles. We will see what those were in just a few moments. The most fundamental basic issues of Christian life were addressed here. These are things people needed to know.

The General Epistles serve to warn the people about the heresies that were increasingly rampant and to exhort them to continue in the faith once delivered. Jude exhorted the people to contend for the faith once delivered (Jude 3). Here was Jude writing in the 60s A.D., thirty to thirty-five years downstream from the Day of Pentecost (not even a full generation away from it). He had to tell the Christians of his day to really contend for the faith once delivered.

Other things were coming in—a little change here, a little watering down there, a little something here, a little something there. Heresies were coming in; various ideas and philosophies of people were coming in. Jude said, 'You have to honestly contend for the faith once delivered.

Contending for the faith once delivered is what we want, not the corruption that man has introduced or the customs and traditions that man has introduced. We want the faith once delivered.'

Too many times people look at a lot of books that come out. In many cases, they start from today's social customs, attitudes and ideas, and then they try to read some of those things back into the Bible. Well, you can't do that. That is not the perspective. What we have to contend for is the faith once delivered—not trying to read the attitudes of a liberal, permissive western society back into things that God had written almost two thousand years ago.

Let's notice a little bit of these individual books. Let's get the theme of these books and understand why they are so basic.

What did James talk about?

James 1:3-6, "knowing that the testing of your faith produces patience. But let patience have its perfect work, that you may be perfect work, that you may be perfect and complete, lacking nothing. If any of you lacks wisdom, let him ask of God, who gives to all liberally and without reproach, and it will be given to him. But let him ask in faith, with no doubting..."

Verse 12, "Blessed is the man who endures temptation; for when he has been proved, he will receive the crown of life which the Lord has promised to those who love Him."

Verse 22, "But be doers of the word, and not hearers only, deceiving yourselves."

James 2:1, "My brethren, do not hold the faith of our Lord Jesus Christ, the Lord of glory, with partiality."

Verse 17, "Thus also faith by itself, if it does not have works, is dead." He talks about faith and works throughout the remainder of Chapter 2. As you go through, James continues to address this subject of faith. When you look at the book of James, he addresses the subject of faith. He explains what living faith is. He explains that faith without works is dead, that the trying of your faith works patience. James is the one that addresses the subject of healing.

James 5:14-15, "Is anyone among you sick? Let him call for the elders of the church, and let them pray over him, anointing him with oil in the name of the Lord. And the prayer of faith will save the sick, and the Lord will raise him up. And if he has committed sins, he will be forgiven." Again, the emphasis is on faith.

Verse 17, "Elijah was a man with a nature like ours, he prayed earnestly that it would not rain; and it did not rain on the land for three years and six months.” Elijah prayed the prayer of faith. Throughout the book of James we have an emphasis on faith. James explains what real faith is. Real faith is living faith. It is faith that is mingled with actions.

Now, this is the thing that Martin Luther objected to. It bothered him, and this is the thing that has bothered many about James’ writings. They consider James as too “Jewish” because he stressed the importance of what we do. Faith is not simply what you believe. Real faith carries over into action. I can say I believe something, but unless I act on it, I don’t really believe it very much. If you tell me this building is on fire, if I believe you, I will get up and get out. I can sit here all night, and say, ‘Oh, I believe you. I am sure you are right. I know you are telling the truth. I surely believe that.’ But if I don’t do anything, it is pretty evident that I don’t believe it too much. If I believe something, I am going to act on it.

That happens sometimes in a natural disaster. A hurricane is going to hit here, and you have people that aren’t going to believe it. They say, ‘Oh, I don’t think it’s going to be that kind of damage. I don’t think it will hit here. I’ve lived here for forty years. I don’t think I am going to leave.’ They don’t believe it. That’s the point! Because they don’t believe it’s going to happen to them, they don’t do anything. Others believe it and do something. They get up and leave. They do various things.

Faith! If we really believe something, we act on what we believe. The kind of faith that the Christian-professing world pays lip service to—the kind of faith they talk about—‘Oh, brother, do you believe?’ It is dead faith. If they really believed, they would act on what they claimed to believe. James tells us that faith without works is dead. If you believe something, you act on that belief. If you don’t act on it, you don’t believe it.

He tells us that our faith is tried so that we can build endurance. God does not just instantly answer or give us an instant response every time where faith is involved. If our faith were never tried, we would never learn to endure. Our faith is tried and tested when what we see and what God says contradicts. Then, which evidence do you believe? Do you believe what God says or do you believe what your eyes see? When the two are in contradiction, do you believe what the five senses discern or do you believe what God tells you? What do you believe?

Remember when Jesus was walking on the water and Peter said:

Matthew 14:28-31, “...‘Lord, if it is really You, tell me to come, and I’ll come, and walk on the water too.’” Christ said, ‘Come on,’ and Peter impulsively acted. He believed what Jesus said, and he stepped off the boat and started walking. Then all of a sudden, he started looking around and he said, ‘Wait a minute! I can’t do this. You can’t walk on water.’ And about that time, glug, glug, glug, down he went. Before we laugh too hard at Peter, we need to realize at least he took a few steps. He took a few more steps than any of us have taken, and few more than any of the other apostles took. He believed at least for a little while.

But what happened? What his five senses discerned and told him contradicted with what Jesus said. Jesus said, ‘Yes, you can—come on.’ While he believed and acted on it, he was fine. But as soon as he began to think, ‘Wait a minute, I can’t do this,’ when he began to notice and pay attention to what the five senses told him, faith “went out the window.” Faith and sight often contradict. The question comes: what do you believe? Do you believe what your five senses tell you or do you believe what God says? That is the issue of faith. James addresses faith. You can’t get much more basic than faith.

What does Paul tell us?

I Corinthians 13:13, “And now abide faith, hope, love, these three; but the greatest of these is love.” The things that are permanent abiding values are faith, hope and love. Those are the basic fundamental values that are necessary for the Christian life. Without faith it is impossible to please God (Hebrew 11:6). Without faith you can’t please God because the very basis of our relationship has to be a relationship of trust. That’s what faith involves. It involves trust. James discusses the subject of faith. He goes through and expounds what real faith is. That is pretty fundamental.

Now guess what Peter talked about. Hope! We start out with faith and we get to hope. Guess what we are going to find John talks about? You guessed it. Love! John talks about love all through the books of I, II, III John.

I John 4:16 he talks about, “God is love.”

I John 5:3, “This is the love of God that we keep His Commandments.”

I John 4:20-21, “If someone says, ‘I love God,’ and hates his brother, he is a liar; for he who does not love his brother whom he has seen, how can he love God whom he has not seen? And this commandment we have from Him: that he who loves God must love his brother also.” You can’t love God and hate your brother. It talks about all kinds of things about love.

It’s kind of interesting. You start out with one book of James, two books of Peter, and then three books of John. It’s kind of building up, step by step—faith, hope and love—and the greatest of these is love. Step by step it builds up. These are fundamental Christian doctrines. These are fundamental abiding Christian values.

We have gone through what Jesus said and did in His life, and what the apostles continued to do in the book of Acts. Then, we come to the epistles. They are not so much a story of the actions, but they now begin to explain certain concepts and principles in more detail. We start out with a focus on the fundamental Christian principal: faith, hope, and love. Jude primarily warns about apostasy and the need to contend earnestly for the faith once delivered (Jude 3). Then you go into Paul’s epistles.

At that point, with the background of the General Epistles, you are prepared for the book of Romans and for some of the things that Paul says there. Peter has already warned us that there are things that Paul wrote that are a little difficult to be understood. When you understand that Paul builds on what the others have said, you don’t go off the “deep end” when Paul talks about not being justified by works. James didn’t say we’re justified by works; he said faith without work is dead. Your works don’t justify you. But if you don’t have any works, you clearly don’t have any faith. So while it is your faith that justifies you, if your faith doesn’t have any works, then your faith is dead. A dead faith won’t save anybody.

You have to approach it step by step to really get the point or else you wind up where the Protestants are. Some of the Protestants have gone off the “deep end” because they have laid aside James, Peter, John and Jude; they jump directly into some of the great complex parts of Paul. ‘Well, all you have to do is believe.’ They don’t understand what kind of faith is living faith. They don’t understand the difference between a living faith and a dead faith. That’s right; faith is all you need, but it has to be a living faith and not a dead faith. What you need is faith and love. That’s right! But if you read I John, you’d know that.

I John 5:3, “This is the love of God, that we keep His commandments.” You’d know that love is the fulfilling of the law. You’d know what love is. We would understand these things.

What happens is the Protestant world skips over the General Epistles and jumps immediately into Paul’s epistles. Then they come up with a couple concepts: all you need is to believe and all you need is love. If you understand what is involved in belief and in faith, if you understand what’s involved in love, that’s right—that’s what you need. But those things involve a lot more than most of the Christian-professing world thinks they do.

Let’s notice here. James starts out with faith. Faith has to do with our relationship with God. It has to do with trust in God, with believing God, with holding onto the promises God makes. We build and develop our relationship with God as we go through certain things, certain trials and tests. It may be in regards to healing or jobs or family problems. It may be in regards to many different things. I think almost all of us look back at certain things in our lives. I can look in my life and can look at some things that I hope I never have to go through again. But I wouldn’t take anything for having gone through them, in the sense of what I learned and the fact that my faith was deepened as a result of it. What do you need over faith? Faith is fundamental. But hope comes in there. What does hope do?

I Peter 1:3, “Blessed be the God and Father of our Lord Jesus Christ, who according to His abundant mercy has begotten us again to a living hope through the resurrection of Jesus Christ from the dead.”

Verse 13, “Therefore gird up the loins of your mind, be sober, and rest your hope fully upon the grace that is to be brought to you at the revelation of Jesus Christ.” Peter talks about trials and the basis of surviving trials. The means of surviving trials is the reality of the hope that is before us.

I Peter 3:15, “But sanctify the Lord God in your hearts, and always be ready to give a defense [KJV, “an answer”] to everyone who asks you a reason for the hope that is in you, with meekness and fear.”

Peter emphasizes the importance of that hope being real to us, of the hope of the resurrection being real to us, and the hope of the reward that God has in store for us being real. It is because that hope is real and because that hope is fixed in our minds that we are able to go through what we encounter here and now.

Brethren, we need to understand. We look at the things that are happening on the world scene, and we get excited about it. Well, we should in some ways. But we also need to be sobered by it because if we are where we think we are, we haven't seen anything yet. You haven't seen anything yet. Jesus said very plainly that before He returns, there is going to be a time of tribulation that is going to be greater than anytime that has ever been on the earth until then (Matthew 24:21). When you look back and see some of the things that have happened, you realize that's going to be pretty bad. When you look at what has happened, Christ said there is going to come something that is going to pall all of the other things into insignificance. It's going to be so much worse. It's going to be so much greater. It's going to be the culmination. We are going to go through these things.

I know God holds out promises of a place of protection, a place of safety, a place where at least the Philadelphia era of the Church is going to be kept and protected for a time, times, and half a time—for three and one-half years—the period of the tribulation. I understand that. But how do you think that's going to be divided out? Do you think God's going to have an announcement made, 'All right, everybody who wants to be a Laodicean and go through the tribulation, would you please form a line over here on this side of the stage. And everybody who wants to be a Philadelphian and would like to be protected from the tribulation, please get over here and form a line. We are on our way.' You think that's the way it is going to be? No!

One of the things we are told about the Laodiceans is that they don't see themselves as they are. They think they are the ones in great shape. Do you ever think about that? They think they are rich and increased with goods. They have need of nothing; they are in great shape. They don't perceive themselves as Christ perceives them.

You know, we are in for a time of trial and testing in the Church, as well as in the world. I think God allowed us to go through things. Don't think all the time of trial and testing for the Church ended in 1979. Not that we will go through exactly the same things, but if we think that all of the trials and tests on the Church were over ten years ago and that it's just kind of "riding a greased sled" from now on into the Kingdom, I think we grossly deceive ourselves.

That's not what I read in the prophecies of the Bible. That's not what I read in Matthew 24 when it talks about people becoming offended and even hating and betraying one another (v. 10). It talks about love growing cold (v. 12) and about various other things. In other words, brethren, we are going to go through and live through some very real events. Some have emphasized it in the context of watching world news. We most definitely need to watch ourselves. You know, God is on schedule. Am I? That's what I need to look at. God's plan, what God is doing and what God is working out in the world is on schedule. What about me? We need to take heed of ourselves to make sure that my life, my growth and my development is on schedule. That's the thing that I need to take note of. That's the thing in your life that you need to take note of.

Peter emphasizes the reality of the hope. The means of surviving trials is seeing the reality of the hope.

He tells us in I Peter 1:3-6, "Blessed be the God and Father of our Lord Jesus Christ, who according to His abundant mercy has begotten us again to a living hope through the resurrection of Jesus Christ from the dead, to an inheritance incorruptible [this is what our hope is] and undefiled and that does not fade away, reserved in heaven for you, who are kept by the power of God through faith for salvation ready to be revealed in the last time. In this you greatly rejoice though now for a little while, if need be, you have been grieved by various trials."

We go through a lot of trials, a lot of difficulties. He didn't say that we don't get "down" with things sometimes. He says we rejoice in hope. Not that we don't get "down" and discouraged by some of the many problems we encounter here and now. What we rejoice about is the fact that there is something on the other side. There are a lot of people that have gone through a lot of trials and tests, a lot of things a lot worse than any of us have encountered.

While the celebration was going on in Germany for the ending of the Wall, there was a very solemn occasion that was being noted in Israel—an occasion known as "Kristallnacht" which means "the night of glass." That was the night, approximately fifty-six years ago, that the Germans came through and broke all the windows in the Jewish shops and Jewish homes. It was the beginning of the end for the Jews. They called it the German term which meant "the night of glass" or "the night of broken glass." Here were people who saw everything that they had worked for, everything that they had built, destroyed by a mob. Over the next few years, in many cases, their lives, their families, everything was wiped out. They went through those things and they died. For many of them, they didn't really have any practical hope. They didn't know what lay ahead.

The world is filled with people who have gone through suffering, whether it's been diseases, whether it's been terrible family calamities or various problems. The world is filled with people who have problems. We go through trials but trials are not unique to the Church of God—whether it is financial trials, health trials, family trials or whatever. People all over the world have problems, trials and difficulties. What is unique is that we have a hope. We have an understanding of the reality of what lies on the other side of those trials and difficulties. That is what we are told to rejoice in—to rejoice in hope.

I Peter 2:1 we continue to be admonished, "Therefore, laying aside all malice, all guile, hypocrisy, envy, and all evil speaking."

Verse 5, "you also, as living stones, are being built up a spiritual house, a holy priesthood, to offer up spiritual sacrifices acceptable to God through Jesus Christ."

Verse 6, it describes the analogy of laying in Zion the chief cornerstone, and that is Jesus Christ.

Verses 7-8, "Therefore, to you who believe, He is precious; but to those who are disobedient. 'The stone which the builders rejected has become the chief cornerstone,' and 'A stone of stumbling and a rock of offense.' They stumble, being disobedient to the word to which they also were appointed."

Verses 9-12, "But you are a chosen generation, a royal priesthood, a holy nation. His own special people, that you may proclaim the praises of Him who called you out of darkness into His marvelous light; who once were not a people but are now the people of God, who had not obtained mercy but now have obtained mercy. Beloved, I beg you as sojourners and pilgrims, abstain from fleshly lusts which war against the soul, having your conduct honorable among the Gentiles, that when they speak against you as evildoers, they may, by your good works which they observe, glorify God in the day of visitation."

Verse 20, "For what credit is it if, when you are beaten for your faults, you take it patiently? But when you do good and suffer for it, if you take it patiently, this is commendable before God." If I get in trouble for something I did and I take it in a good attitude, big deal! I brought it on myself. If I am persecuted for righteousness' sake and I take it well, now that counts for something because then I am doing what Jesus did. He never suffered for anything He did; He suffered for righteousness' sake. I can't say that the only suffering I have ever done is for righteousness' sake. Can you? Then it go through in terms of human and personal relationships, husbands and wives, people dealing with one another.

In I Peter 3:14-15 we are told, "But even if you should suffer for righteousness' sake, you are blessed. And do not be afraid of their threats, nor be troubled. But sanctify the Lord God in your hearts, and always be ready to give a defense [KJV, "an answer"] to everyone who asks you a reason for the hope that is in you, with meekness and fear."

You don't have to worry if you suffer for righteousness' sake. We can suffer for righteousness' sake and maintain a positive attitude. People are going to wonder, 'What's with you?' That's kind of the context in which people ask you what it is about you that is different. How can you go through this and handle it the way you do? We are told to be ready to give an answer to anyone who asks concerning a reason of the hope that is within us. It is the reality of that hope that enables us to endure.

It goes on and talks about trials and all of these things. The means of survival is the reality of that hope.

II Peter 3:9, "The Lord is not slack concerning His promise, as some count slackness..." That hope is not something that is far removed. But we do look for a new heavens and a new earth.

Verse 13, "Nevertheless we, according to His promise, look for new heavens and a new earth in which righteousness dwells." The reality of that hope is emphasized.

II Peter explains a great deal of important material. It even explains and gives us some insight into the beginnings of the false church. It gives us insight into understanding how we came to have the New Testament preserved as we do. We will focus on that a little later. There is an emphasis on hope.

Faith, hope and love. John talks about love throughout the books of John.

I John 2:10, "He who loves his brother abides in the light..."

Verse 15, we are not to love the world or at least the things of the world.

I John 3:1, "Behold what manner of love the Father has bestowed upon us that we should be called the sons of God..."

Verse 16, “By this we know love, because He laid down His life for us. And we also ought to lay down our lives for the brethren.”

Verse 18, “...let us not love in word, or in tongue, but in deed and in truth.”

I John 4:7-8, “...let us love one another, for love is of God; and everyone who loves is begotten of God and knows God. He who does not love does not know God, for God is love.”

Verses 10-11, “In this is love, not that we loved God, but that He loved us and sent His Son to be the propitiation for our sins. Beloved, if God so loved us, we also ought to love one another.”

Verse 16, “And we have known and believed the love that God has for us. God is love, and he who abides in love abides in God, and God in him.”

Verses 18-19, “There is no fear in love; but perfect love casts out fear, because fear involves torment. But he who fears has not been made perfect in love. We love Him because He first loved us.”

I John 5:2-3, “By this we know that we love the children of God, when we love God and keep His commandments. For this is the love of God, that we keep His commandments. And His commandments are not burdensome.”

You know, you’d almost think that John was talking about love! Faith, hope and love. John explains what real love is.

James explains what real faith is. Real faith is living faith. It is a faith that is coupled with action and results in action. In other words, we act on what we believe. That’s what having faith with our works means. We act on what we believe. If I really believe it, I am going to act on it.

Peter explains how to keep on acting on it when everything is going wrong around you. You are able to keep going because you have a hope that is living, a hope that is real and a hope that is on the other side of the trial. How did Christ go through and survive what He went through? – Because of the reality of the hope that was set before Him. Peter explains the living hope that we have is the means of our enduring the trials.

We start out with faith and we demonstrate our faith by acting on it. Our faith is tried and tested. Our means of going through and surviving trials and tests is the hope that is real to us.

Then we come to understand the most fundamental aspect of God’s character, which needs to be made a part of us. Love! We find that love and law go together. We find that love is the fulfilling of the law.

I John 5:3 explains, “...this is the love of God, that we keep His commandments.” We are to love God and love one another. God loved us. We see this emphasis, this explanation, of what is real love.

If you go through the Gospels, you find that Jesus kept the Sabbath. He entered into the synagogue on the Sabbath, as was His custom (Luke 4:16). You go through the book of Acts and find out that the apostles did the same thing. Then James tells you that you need to have works with your faith. Then Peter tells you that Paul wrote a few things that were sometimes misunderstood. John tells you that sin is the transgression of the law (I John 3:4), and the love of God is that we keep His commandments. Jude tells you to contend earnestly for the faith once delivered (Jude 3). You are not going to get to Romans that Paul wrote and think that Paul must have done away with the Sabbath and the Ten Commandments. We have a basis of understanding on some of the things Paul wrote because you understand these fundamental areas of faith, hope and love, which Paul said were the things which were going to abide (I Corinthians 13:13). How do you understand what faith, hope and love are? You go back to James, Peter and John. John tells us that.

II John 6, “This is love, that we walk after His Commandments. This is the commandment that you have heard from the beginning, you should walk in it.”

Then he talks about deceivers that have gone out into the world who are bringing this doctrine (vv. 9-11).

In III John 9-10, he talks about certain congregations being subverted.

We find that there was a church that was appearing on the scene that did not continue in the faith and actions of the apostles. Therefore, it should not surprise us to find that there were those who were trying to get rid of these epistles, and get them out of the canon. Who were they? Well, it’s a good bet that the ones that John and Jude were warning you of were the ones that you read of a few years later that were trying to get rid of those books. If people want to get rid of something, it is generally because it points them out.

Then you come to Jude who warns about apostasy, the falling away and contending for the faith once delivered.

Jude 3-4, “Beloved, while I was very diligent to write to you concerning our common salvation, I found it necessary to write to you exhorting you to contend earnestly for the faith which was once for all delivered to the saints. For certain men have crept in unnoticed, who long ago were marked out for this condemnation, ungodly men, who turn the grace of our God into licentiousness and deny the only Lord God and our Lord Jesus Christ.”

Oh, so the problem was going to involve a misunderstanding of grace. Peter said Paul wrote some things a little difficult to be understood—or that can be misunderstood—if you don’t take them in the right way, which those that are unlearned and unstable twist (II Peter 3:16). In other words, they take it out of context. The way you misunderstand Paul is you don’t take him in context. He wrote long complicated sentences. You can extract something out of the middle of it, take it out of context, and totally miss the point. So, Peter warned that’s what some did, the same way they twisted other parts of the Scriptures.

Jude tells us that those who were trying to subvert and to mess things up were the ones who were turning grace into lawlessness. They were distorting what God’s grace is about. Now, God’s grace is wonderful. God’s grace is what makes possible our forgiveness and our opportunity to be a part of His Family. But God’s grace does not diminish from our responsibility of obeying Him. God’s grace is extended to us because our best efforts are not good enough. There is nothing we could ever do on our own to atone for what we have done in the past. God extends His grace and His mercy. If we believe that, we are going to act on that belief.

Jude goes through and really gives us warnings about some of these things. We have here material that is fundamental. We might look, just very briefly, at these books.

Jude was addressed to the twelve tribes of the dispersion. It was not just to the Jews but also to all of the Israelites. James was the presiding apostle at the headquarters Church in Jerusalem. He was the half-brother of Jesus Christ. This book was probably written around 60 A.D. James was a remarkable individual. He was known, even among the Jews, as James the Just or James the Righteous. He was martyred about 62 A.D. by being thrown over the side of the temple. He was pushed, shoved or thrown off of the high wall down on the rocks below.

Many of the Jews, interestingly enough, felt that the Roman invasion was retribution for their martyrdom of James. The Jews greatly respected him and, in a sense, knew that what they had done was wrong. It is interesting in some of their own writings, some of the statements that are made concerning that.

James was an individual of quite renown. We will note some things when we get into the book of James. We will note the area of circulation and the areas of prominence that the book of James had throughout the Middle East, and even some of the areas of Britain and Parthia where Israelites were settled.

Peter was written to Israelites dispersed along the southern shore of the Black Sea. There is a lot of emphasis on hope in the midst of persecution. II Peter was written shortly before Peter’s death. It explains the origin and purpose of the New Testament canon.

John wrote about thirty years later. He wrote after all the others had written. He gives kind of a wrap-up and a summary. He zeroes in on two things. Interestingly enough, what did Christ warn?

Matthew 24:12, ““And because lawlessness will abound, the love of many will grow cold.”” It’s interesting. The thing that John focuses on is the fact that (1) lawlessness is multiplying and (2) love is growing cold. John focuses in on the relationship between love and law. He shows the antidote to what Christ had warned of because that’s what happened. That was what sapped the spiritual strength and stamina of the New Testament Church.

What did Christ tell the Ephesians Church? Revelation 2:1, 4, ““To the angel of the church of Ephesus write...nevertheless I have this against you, that you have left your first love.”” What sapped the spiritual strength and stamina? Well, there was a certain watering down. There was a disregard for law that began to grow; as a result, love began to diminish.

It doesn’t matter how much you emphasize love if disregard for the law and a casual approach to the law begins to grow. Love inevitably will dim because law and love go together. You cannot separate them. The reason is because a lawless attitude is a selfish, self-centered attitude. The law reflects our relationship with God and with other people. When you have a disregard for the law, you have an increase in selfishness and self-centeredness. Why do people want to break the law? Because they don’t want to be inconvenienced by doing what they are supposed to do. They want to do what they want to do. That is selfish. That is self-centered. When people have that kind of selfish, self-centered approach, it is obviously going to diminish the love that they show toward others.

John zeroes in on these things. John wrote in the 90s A.D. What John wrote has specific connections with the heresies that were extant at the time.

Jude was written about the same time as II Peter. It shows the extent that the apostasy was in “full swing.” It has the warnings and the insight that helps us to understand what was actually taking place in the early New Testament Church.

Next Bible study we are going to cover the book of James. The following Bible study we will cover I and II Peter. Then the following study after that, we will cover I, II, III John and Jude. That may seem like a lot to lump together, but when you look at II John and III John, you realize they are little short chapters. They are just little short one-chapter books. Jude is just one chapter. I, II, III John and Jude, taken together, are very short amounts of material.

So I think it will give us a basis, a kind of an overview of this section of Scripture. This section is very basic in terms of understanding practical day-by-day Christian life. We can kind of take it from there.

When we conclude the General Epistles, we will save the remainder of the New Testament until later. We will come back and do a series on the “Life and Letters of Paul” at a later time. We will also save the book of Revelation until later. When we finish this, we will go back to the Old Testament. We will pick up the Major and Minor Prophets, and then we will see where we go from there.

General Epistles Series—James

This evening we are in the book of James. We want to get into and address this book of James. We have already mentioned the theme that runs through each of these General Epistles—James, Peter, John and Jude—the theme of faith, hope and love. We went through and saw that in quite a bit of detail last time. Of course, Jude contains warnings against apostasy, against falling away and the exhortation to contend earnestly for the faith once delivered.

The book of James was written in the early 60s A.D. We would date it about 61 A.D. Of course, James wrote it. There are several James mentioned in the New Testament. The James who wrote the book of James was the brother, or more properly stated, the half-brother of Jesus Christ. Jesus had several brothers as well as sisters. His brothers James, Simon and Jude are all mentioned and are enumerated in the Gospels. He also had several sisters.

James had grown up with Jesus Christ. He was somewhat younger, perhaps two to four years younger than Jesus Christ. Even though he was not one of the twelve and was not one who followed Christ in His ministry, yet it seems clear that James was converted in the immediate aftermath of the resurrection. There certainly had been nothing of greater impact to have struck him than to have seen his brother, who was dead, stand before him alive.

We are told by Paul in I Corinthians 15:7 that He specifically appeared to James, as well as the others. Christ, in a very personal way appeared to James. He manifested Himself after the resurrection. We are not given the details of the account in the Gospels, but Paul alludes to it. There was that forty-day span between the time of His resurrection and the time of His ascension into heaven during which Jesus appeared many times (Acts 1:3). In the aftermath of this, James was converted and became a very leading apostle.

He was the presiding apostle at the Church in Jerusalem, serving as the pastor and overseer of the headquarters Church. He is the one who presided at the ministerial conference of Acts 15. He is the one that is enumerated, along with Peter and John, as one of the three pillars of the Church. He is catalogued by Paul in Galatians

2:9 as being one of the upright supports, one of the strong stays and supports of the New Testament Church. He is one of the key figures. He was looked up to and was highly respected.

The book of James was a letter that went out and was addressed not simply to the Jews or to those in Judea where James was, but to all the tribes of Israel.

James 1:1, “James, a servant of God and of the Lord Jesus Christ, to the twelve tribes which are scattered abroad: Greetings.” This is to whom the book of James is addressed. It was an address to all of the tribes of Israel, not simply the tribe of Judah.

Realize that there was a certain awareness of where the tribes had scattered. The identity of the twelve tribes had not been entirely lost by this time. We find a concentration of remnants of the twelve tribes in the area to the east of the Euphrates, which was not at this point a part of the Roman Empire but of what was called the Parthian Empire. The Parthian Empire was the other great empire that lay east of the Euphrates. The Euphrates was pretty much the dividing line between Rome and Parthia. There were a number of Israelites who were in the area east of the Euphrates because after the captivity of the ten tribes (II Kings 17), they had settled in that area to the east and up on the southern shore of the Black Sea.

According to Ezekiel’s prophecy, a three hundred ninety-year period would transpire for northern Israel (Ezekiel 4:5). We date the three hundred ninety years from the time that northern Israel went into captivity in 721 B.C. If you bring it down three hundred ninety years, you come down to 331 B.C., which is the year that Alexander the Great conquered the Persian Empire. It was the year that saw the release of the Israelite captives who had been subject to the Medes and the Persians. Within the next couple of decades was the beginning of the so-called Celtic invasions into Europe, which came up across and around the Black Sea. It was the time of the coming of the Galls. Really, it was many of the Israelite tribes.

There’s a lot that we could go into on some of that, but the point is these people came up from the Black Sea, up the Danube River basin, up into the area of modern day France, and many crossing up into Britain. There had been an earlier migration to Britain at the time of the captivity of some who had escaped. There had been previous migrations in that area. There were concentrations of Israelites in Europe, as well as the Parthian Empire who were remnants of the twelve tribes. We could go into many things, of pinning down specific tribes and where they were located at the time. And there were a number of migrations yet to occur. But do you realize that most of the original twelve apostles actually went to one or the other of the twelve tribes—and we could track them? Perhaps, we will at a later time.

So the book that James wrote was very widely circulated. It circulated as far as Britain. It circulated in the Parthian Empire. It circulated throughout the Middle East, in terms of Judea, and in the area of Asia Minor.

James is a very basic book. It deals with practical, basic principles of Christian living. We have seen that James has a primary theme of faith. It sets the stage for the progression of faith, hope and love that we see through the General Epistles. James deals with faith, but he deals with faith in a very practical way. He deals with faith in action. He addresses faith in our lives.

We are going to go through and note twelve component parts of the book of James. One of the things that James addresses is the importance of becoming a completely mature Christian.

James 3:2, “For we all stumble in many things. If anyone does not stumble in word, he is a perfect man...”

The word translated “perfect” is a word that means “fully mature” or “a completely developed person”—a completely mature Christian. It is the same word that is used when Paul addresses spiritual maturity in Hebrews 5.

Hebrews 5:12-14, “For though by this time you ought to be teachers, you need someone to teach you again the first principles of the oracles of God [in other words, the most basic principles of God’s word]; and you have come to need milk and not solid food. For everyone who partakes only of milk is unskilled in the word of righteousness, for he is a babe. But solid food belongs to those who are of full age, that is, those who by reason of use have their senses exercised to discern both good and evil.”

Paul draws a point here in terms of spiritual maturity. He describes the difference between being spiritually mature and spiritually a baby. He says a little baby can’t sit down and eat a big rib eye steak. He can’t digest it; he can’t handle it. He needs milk! That’s all that a little baby’s stomach can digest.

Paul compares that to the most basic elemental principles of Christianity and then says that strong meat belongs to them that are of full age.

It’s for those who are mature. The word that is translated “of full age” is exactly the same word that is used back in James 3:2 and is rendered “perfect.” That’s what it means. It means someone who is “fully mature,” someone who is “completely developed.” It means someone who is a “fully-developed Christian.” James wants each of his readers to become a completely mature and fully developed Christian. With this idea in mind, we are going to note a little more as we go through that this is really faith in action. This is a mature, developed faith that produces fruits, works and actions in our lives.

Let’s notice, as we go through the book of James, the twelve themes that reflect the various components of a mature Christian. James 1:1 is the introduction.

(1) The first component in James 1:2-18 is the attitude a mature, fully-developed Christian has toward trials and temptations. It addresses the response of a fully mature Christian towards trials and temptations.

James 1:2, “My brethren, count it all joy when you fall into different trials.” You know, when you read that, that’s talking about something that’s a little more mature than what most of us have come to. Do you just get all excited and jump up and down and you’re so happy every time you have a trial? ‘Boy, I have a trial. It just really makes my whole day.’ What did James mean when he said, “count it all joy when you fall into different trials”? It’s not that the trial is fun. A trial isn’t fun for anybody. I don’t care how mature you are or how long you’ve been around or anything. It’s not the trial that’s enjoyable or pleasant.

In vv. 3-4, he says, “knowing this, that the trying of your faith works patience. But let patience have her perfect work...” Again, you have the same word “perfect”—this complete, mature, fully developed work. Let patience be fully developed and matured in you that you might be perfect, that you might be complete, that you might be fully, entirely, whole, completely developed and matured, not lacking in anything.

Verses 5-6, “If any of you lack wisdom, let him ask of God that gives to all men liberally...But let him ask in faith, with no doubting, for he who doubts is like a wave of the sea driven and tossed by the wind.” If you approach it that way, God doesn’t answer that.

Verse 7, “For let not that man suppose that he will receive anything from the Lord. He is a double minded man, unstable in all his ways.” God requires a commitment. To be double-minded is to lack commitment; you're not really resolved in a specific course of action. You're pulled in two different ways. You're kind of "hedging your bets," as it were. It is a lack of total commitment. When God says to ask in faith nothing wavering, what needs to not waver is the depth of our commitment. If our commitment is wavering because we are double-minded, we're not really totally committed. Until we come to that level of commitment, God's not going to pay a lot of attention.

In vs. 12-18, he goes on and says, "Blessed is the man that endures temptations [endures trials], for when he is tried he shall receive a crown of life...Let no man say, when he is tempted, that I am tempted of God. God can't be tempted with evil; neither does He tempt any man...Every man is tempted when he is drawn away of his own lust and enticed. Then when lust is conceived, it brings forth sin and sin when it is finished brings forth death. Do not err, my beloved brethren. Every good and perfect gift comes down from above, from the Father of lights...He has begotten us...that we should be a firstfruits of His creatures."

You see here that the subject of trials and temptations is addressed. The thing that is joyful about a trial is not the going through of the trial; it's not the trial itself. The joy is the result, the consequence. It is the spiritual character that is developed as a result. Our faith when it is tried works patience. We learn to wait on God. We need to develop that kind of relationship with God.

When we lack wisdom, we don't understand. We can ask God for wisdom, but we need to ask in faith, not wavering in our commitment, but single-minded in our approach. We need to go to God in faith, asking Him for the wisdom to understand and to have the perception of what is going on in our lives. God says that He will answer that prayer. The joy comes from the results, the spiritual character that results from the trial.

I don't think anybody enjoys having a problem. But we can probably all look back and see results of trials. I know I certainly can look at certain trials I have gone through in my life, and I hope that I never have to go through them again. But I wouldn't take anything for having gone through them. I wouldn't take anything for some of the results, the consequences and certain things that I learned as a result. Even though it was not at all pleasant in the process of going through it, there was a certain relationship with God that was built.

James initially addresses the attitude towards trials and temptations of a completely developed, fully mature Christian.

(2) The second component in vv. 19-27 is the reception of God's Word. He addresses the way in which a fully mature Christian receives God's Word.

James 1:19-20, "...let every man be swift to hear, slow to speak, slow to wrath; for the wrath of man does not produce the righteousness of God." He says be swift to hear and slow to speak. So many times we reverse that. Ever been quick to speak and slow to hear? I guess with all of us it has happened one time or another. It should tell us something that God gave us two ears and one mouth. He didn't reverse it. He could have given us a mouth on each side of our head and one ear in the middle. God didn't choose to do it that way. I don't know all the reasons why. Maybe part of it was He wanted us to spend twice as much time listening as talking because He said that we're to "be swift to hear, slow to speak, slow to wrath"—not quick to "fly off the handle," not quick to form an opinion, not quick to jump to conclusions because that doesn't lead to the righteousness of God

Then he says in vv. 21-22, "...lay aside all the filthiness and excess of wickedness, and receive with meekness the implanted word, which is able to save our souls. But be doers of the word, and not hearers only, deceiving yourselves."

Then he draws the analogy that if you listen and don't do, you are like somebody looking in the mirror and not acting on what they see (vv. 23-24).

Verses 25-26, "But he who looks into the perfect law of liberty and continues in it, and is not a forgetful hearer, but a doer of the word, this one will be blessed in what he does. If anyone among you thinks he is religious, and does not bridle his tongue but deceives his own heart, this one's religion is useless." We are kidding ourselves because real religion involves action.

Verse 27, "Pure religion and undefiled before God and the Father is this, to visit the fatherless and the widows in their afflictions, to keep himself unspotted from the world."

We focus here on how a mature developed Christian receives the Word. He is quick to listen, not quite so quick to speak and receives with meekness the implanted (KJV, "engrafted") Word. He desires to look into that perfect law of liberty, to have God's Word actually put into him and to become a part of him. There is receptivity to the Word. There is an approach we see in terms of trials and temptations. We learn to value and appreciate the character that is developed and to be receptive to the Word.

(3) The third component in James 2:1-3 is our attitude toward others. It involves impartiality in the spiritual area when it comes to regarding the worth and the value of someone else.

James 2:1, “My brethren, do not hold the faith of our Lord Jesus Christ, the Lord of glory, with partiality. For if there should come into your assembly a man with gold rings, in fine apparel, and there should also come in a poor man in filthy [vile] clothes, and you pay attention to the one wearing the fine [KJV, “gay”] clothes and say to him, ‘You sit here in a good place,’ and say to the poor man, ‘You stand there,’ or ‘sit here at my footstool.’”

In other words, don’t make spiritual distinctions based on physical criteria. Don’t use outward physical things or economic status to decide someone’s worth. Someone comes in to your assembly with gold rings and goodly apparel, and someone comes in and is poor and in worn, tattered clothes. If you have respect to him who wears the gay clothing, you are showing partiality.

Let me just pause for a second. I want to call your attention to something to illustrate a point. Notice how the English language has changed since 1611. Sometimes things are not a matter of a mistranslation, it is that the meaning of a word in English has simply changed.

He’s talking about someone having “gay clothing.” If you were talking today and said somebody had on gay clothing, the connotation would be a little different than what Paul was addressing here. Here’s a word that’s basically changed its meaning. In this case, it meant something that was bright or something that was festive. We have seen people in what we would today term “gay apparel.” You see them and you don’t have to do too much figuring to figure what they are. And certainly in some of our major cities, there are areas like that. There are an awful lot of them that are easy to pick out, out there on the street. It’s kind of hard to describe, but if you were to drive down the street you would know what I mean—I don’t think you would be in doubt.

That’s not the meaning of the word in James. A lot of words in the English language have simply changed their meaning over a period of years. Sometimes when you read something in the KJV translation, you have to consider what the word meant at the time it was translated because sometimes it has taken on a different meaning over the years, and we don’t always get the same impact of it that people who read it a hundred or three hundred years ago received.

He says two people come in and one is dressed very nicely and indicates a very wealthy, prominent individual. Someone else comes in and by his appearance, gives the impression of abject poverty. Don’t make a distinction based on that. To the person who looks rich, influential and impressive, you say, ‘We have something special for you.’ You give him the best seat in the house and really go all-out to try to make him welcomed. Then someone comes in and appears to be poor, to have a very low economic and social status, and they are kind of relegated to the “back burner.” ‘Maybe we can find a spot for you.’ They are kind of ignored and shunted off to the side. James is addressing this matter of respect of persons in terms of power, status and economic circumstance.

Verse 9, “but if you show partiality, you commit sin, and are convicted by the law as transgressors.” Because the law says you shall love your neighbor as yourself, that’s the royal law (v. 8). In other words, we are to treat every human being with proper respect. There is, in the context of relationships in the Church, the realization that all human beings are of special worth and value before God. God does not judge the worth and value of someone based on the size of that person’s bank account or the degrees that person has after his name. God does not look at economic criteria, race, education or physical components to determine spiritual worth and value—and neither should we.

Now there are obviously physical relationships that we have in this world. The scripture tells us that there’s neither Jew nor Greek, male nor female, bond or free; we’re all one in Christ (Galatians 3:28). That is relative to our spiritual relationship (our relationship with God) and the basis of our proper relationship and valuing of one another as Christians. It’s the basis of loving our neighbor as ourselves.

Obviously, there are physical relationships in this physical life. We are still male and female on a physical level. There is that physical distinction, but it does not carry over in terms of our worth and our value to God. God does not look at someone as being of more worth or more value or as being spiritually superior because of race, sex or economic status. Those are not spiritual criteria. James is bringing out that there were circumstances of that matter in the Church at this time, just as there are today.

Servitude was a very common thing in the Greek and Roman world. You have many circumstances of that even existing in the Church. In fact in several of Paul's Epistles, he addressed instructions to masters and instructions to servants because there were Christians in both categories. But there was a spiritual relationship that transcended all earthly physical components. In some cases today, some of us may work for others of us. There are various things that are there, but that is not something that determines the spiritual worth and value.

James brings out that the fully developed Christian properly esteems his neighbor as himself and does not make some distinction based on economic status. The same principle would apply to other criteria as well, whether it is race or whatever. Any of those things that would be the outward physical distinctions are not the basis of a spiritual judgment or spiritual valuing. We are to love our neighbor as ourselves and not get into this attitude that the world has of wanting to show special favor to someone who is in a position of power, kowtowing to someone who has power and status and taking advantage of someone who is defenseless. God says to deal with people fairly and equitably regardless of their status. This is addressed in the first thirteen verses. We need to recognize that all of us are judged by this perfect law of liberty.

I might just add one other thing in regard to the matter of dress. The matter of dress is not the basis of making distinctions. What is appropriate is that we, as individuals, show a respect for God. This is not advocating that people should show a lack of respect for God by just dressing in the worse thing they have when they come to Church. That's not what is being described at all. In fact, the clear implication is that the person who came in the vile raiment came in the best that he had. It just wasn't much. In some cases, if there is someone who is not able to buy what is appropriate to wear, we can have an attitude of love and concern toward our neighbor and share with them. Perhaps, we can give them some of what we have. We could have that attitude of sharing and helping rather than standing back and kind of looking down on them. They're doing the best they can do, but they are very limited in what they have. Part of that is the principle behind our "used clothing."

(4) The fourth component in James 2:14-26 is our credentials of living faith. It describes the kind of faith that will characterize a mature, fully developed Christian.

Verse 14, we see that it is the kind of faith that is living faith—faith that is coupled with action.

Verses 15-16 bring out that we see our brother or sister destitute, and we have an attitude of "depart in peace, be warmed and filled." 'Hope things get better for you.' But, you don't help them; you don't do anything. You don't avail yourself of the action you could do to help them in their circumstance. What does it profit? Faith that has not works is dead. If we really are concerned and our heart is really in the right place, then we are going to desire to do something.

Then James goes on, v. 18, to address the fact that we demonstrate our faith by our actions and, v. 20, that "faith without works is dead."

Verse 21, he showed Abraham was justified by works, but we are also told Abraham was justified by faith. That's right! It was his faith with his works.

Verse 22, "...and by works was faith made perfect?" –Made complete, made fully mature, fully developed. This is the same word here. His faith was completed. He completed his faith by acting on it.

Verse 23, "...Abraham believed God..." And because he believed God, he acted on what God said—the same with Rahab (v. 25). We find here the living faith that is a component of the completely mature, fully developed Christian.

(5) The fifth component in James 3:1-12 is the use of the tongue.

James 3:1, "My brethren, be not many masters, knowing that we shall receive the greater condemnation." This word "masters" is a word that has changed its meaning over a period of time. It is used in the older English sense of "teacher," as in "schoolmaster." That's a term that you don't hear very much anymore. It used to be common years ago to talk about the schoolmaster. The term "master" in that sense is still commonly used that way in England, referring to teacher.

Actually many people don't realize there are three totally different words in the Greek language that are all translated by the one English word "master." One of them is a common word referring to a teacher. There is a second Greek word, "kurios," also translated "master" that was a title of respect. It literally referred to someone who was an owner or possessor of property. It was a title of respect and most closely akin to our English word “Mister,” which is derived from “master.” It is a title of respect for a property owner and has come to be the universal title of respect in the English language. The Greeks had a word that was very similar to that and used in the same way that is translated “master” in the New Testament.

There is a third word that is translated “master” that’s only used one time in the New Testament. That’s in the verse in Matthew in the Sermon on the Mount.

Matthew 23:8-10, when Jesus said, “don’t call any man ‘master.’” Remember when He said, “don’t call any man Father, and don’t call any man Master.” It’s a totally different word. It’s not the word that’s the title of respect, and it’s not the word that means teacher. It was a term that had the connotation of a spiritual guide. It was more of a religious title. It was used in the Greek world to refer to someone who guided them through the maze of the mystery religions. It had the connotation of someone who you gave over your spiritual guidance to; he was going to guide you through the mysteries.

That was a relationship that’s alien to the Scriptures. We may have those who teach us, but ultimately, in that sense, God, His Spirit and through His Word is our guide. While God may use human instruments to help teach and expound that Word, they are not the source of it.

James 3:1, when he says (KJV), “...be not many masters,” the word here is teacher. ‘Don’t all desire to be teachers’ is what he is saying. “Knowing that we shall receive the greater [the sterner, the more strict] judgment” (v. 1).

The point he is making is don’t think that it’s some “glory” job to be the one who is teaching. Understand something; with that responsibility comes a stricter, sterner judgment. God is going to scrutinize much more closely what those who are in the role of teachers say and do than anyone else because there is a responsibility. The teacher impacts those who are learning; therefore, he is more highly accountable. James warns of that. People should not be quick to want to volunteer to do the teaching.

Then he begins to address the subject of what we say.

Verse 2, “For we all stumble in many things. If anyone does not stumble in word, he is a perfect man, able also to bridle the whole body.” The fact is that all of us offend in one way or another.

Verses 3-5, “Indeed, we put bits in horses’ mouths that they may obey us, and we turn their whole body. Look also at ships: although they are so large and are driven by fierce winds they are turned by a very small rudder wherever the pilot desires. Even so the tongue is a little member and boasts great things....”

Verse 10, “Out of the same mouth proceed blessing and cursing. My brethren, these things ought not to be so.” Sometimes out of the same mouth proceeds blessings and cursing.

Verses 11-12, “Does a spring send forth fresh water and bitter from the same opening? Can a fig tree, my brethren, bear olives, or a grapevine bear figs? Thus no spring can yield both salt water and fresh.” Some things need to be one way or the other. We have the use of the tongue that is brought out—the way we utilize the tongue. The use of his tongue is shown to be a very important part of a mature, fully developed Christian.

(6) The sixth component in James 3:13-18 is true wisdom.

James 3:13-14, “Who is a wise and understanding man among you? [Is there someone who really has knowledge among you?] Let him show by good conduct that his works are done in the meekness of wisdom. But if you have bitter envy and self-seeking in your hearts, do not boast and lie against the truth.” That is not something to be proud of.

Verse 15, “This wisdom does not descend from above, but is earthly, sensual, demonic.” This is wisdom that does not come from God; it is earthly, sensual and devilish.

Verses 16-17, “For where envy and self-seeking exist, confusion and every evil thing will be there. But the wisdom that is from above is first pure, then peaceable, gentle, willing to yield, full of mercy and good fruits, without partiality and without hypocrisy.” These are the seven components of wisdom.

Verse 18, “Now the fruit of righteousness is sown in peace by those who make peace.” Righteousness and peace go together. We see godly wisdom, true wisdom, wisdom that results in appropriate actions. Wisdom is not based on striving for status and position, but is based on humility, on serving, on giving, on helping, on a willingness to humble the self and serving others. Wisdom that is pure and peaceable, gentle, easily entreated. In other words, it is full of mercy, of good fruits, with no partiality, “wrangling” and hypocrisy. We see this contrast here. We see the wisdom that will characterize the mature, fully developed Christian.

(7) The seventh component in James 4:1-10 is the amiability, humility and lack of worldliness.

James 4:1-4, “Where do wars and fights come from among you? Do they not come from your desires for pleasure that war in you members? You lust and do not have. You murder and covet and cannot obtain. You fight and war. Yet you do not have because you do not ask. You ask and receive not because you ask amiss that you may spend it on your own pleasure...Do you not know that friendship with the world is enmity with God? Whoever therefore wants to be a friend of the world makes himself an enemy of God.”

We have to make a choice. We have to choose between God and the world. We cannot desire to fit in with the world and fit in with God at the same time. Friendship with the world is enmity with God because God does not value and approve of the things that the world takes for granted. God does not value the things that the world values and approves.

It’s proper and appropriate that God’s people should be different. We shouldn’t be just like the world. If we look like the world, act like the world, be like the world and fit in with the world, then we’re not fitting in with God.

In v. 5, the scripture warns us that the Spirit that dwells in us yearns jealously or it lusts enviously. There is that nature in us that really kinds of desires and yearns after, in kind of an envious way, the glitter and the glamour that the world holds out. It looks enticing, and there is a nature in us that is constantly pulling us in that direction.

Verse 5, “Do you think the Scripture says in vain, ‘The Spirit who dwells in us yearns jealously?’” No. We are warned of that. That’s our nature and that’s the constant pull. That desire, that pull, has always been since Adam and Eve in the garden until now. Yet it is something, if yielded to, which alienates us from God.

So we are told that God gives more grace.

Verses 6-10, “But He gives more grace. Therefore He says: ‘God resists the proud, but gives grace to the humble.’ Therefore submit to God. Resist the devil and he will flee from you. Draw near to God, and He will draw near to you. Cleanse your hands, you sinners; and purify your hearts, you double-minded. Lament and mourn and weep! Let your laughter be turned to mourning and your joy to gloom. Humble yourselves in the sight of the Lord, and He will lift you up.” We are told how to get close to God. We are told to renew that relationship with God. It addresses the concept of how we get along with one another, which ties right on into our relationship with the world, which leads right on into the attitude of humility, which is really our relationship with God. These are tied together. The way we get along with one another, the way we get along with the world and the way we get along with God are all tied together in this matter of relationship. The types of relationships that characterize the mature and fully developed Christian are described in the first ten verses of James 4.

(8) The eighth component in James 4:11-12 is our consideration of our fellow man.

James 4:11, “Do not speak evil one of another, brethren. He who speaks evil of a brother and judges his brother speaks evil of the law and judges the law. But if you judge the law, you are not a doer of the law but a judge. There is one Lawgiver, who is able to save and to destroy. Who are you to judge another?” The attitude of the completely mature, fully-developed Christian is his consideration of his fellow man which is described here. It’s not an attitude of speaking evil and sitting in a judging and condemning way.

(9) The ninth component in James 4:13-17 is the attitude and the approach of business affairs.

James 4:13, “Come now, you who say, ‘Today or tomorrow we will go to such and such a city, spend a year there, buy and sell, and make a profit.’” You have all these great plans.

Verse 14, “Whereas you do not know what will happen tomorrow. For what is your life? It is even a vapor that appears for a little time and then vanishes away.” It doesn’t say you shouldn’t make any plans, but it says our plans need to be subject to God’s will.

Verse 15, we need to say, ‘If the Lord wills, we shall live and do this or that. My plans are to do this or that, if God is willing.’ We are not to just go charging off, thinking we will do this or that and making this money, etc. We must have a state of mind of recognizing that our plans are subject to God’s will.

Verse 16, we are not to rejoice in boasting like that. That kind of boasting is evil.

We are still dealing with the subject of business affairs and our attitude toward business.

James 5:1-7, “Come now, you rich, weep and howl for your miseries that are coming upon you! Your riches are corrupted, and your garments are moth-eaten. Your gold and silver are corroded, and their corrosion will be a witness against you and will eat your flesh like fire. You have heaped up treasure in the last days. Indeed the hire of the laborers who mowed your fields, which you kept back by fraud, cry out; and the cries of the reapers have reached the ears of the Lord of Sabaoth. You have lived on the earth in pleasure and luxury; you have fattened your hearts as in a day of slaughter. You have condemned, you have murdered the just; he does not resist you. Therefore be patient, brethren, until the coming of the Lord. See how the farmer waits for the precious fruit of the earth, waiting patiently for it until it receives the early and latter rain.”

It describes here the attitude that has caused some to mistreat others and to hold back the hire of their laborers. In other words, they are so greedy and anxious for gain that they take advantage of those who work for them.

Just yesterday there was an interesting thing in the news. There is a major component, really the starting component, of the whole American computer industry—the industry that makes the tools that fetches the chips that then are the basic components for all the electronic devices. Well, there is only one company in the United States that manufactures the tools that make the chips, and it’s up for sale. Guess who is buying it. The Japanese! They will have absolute control of the starting point because without the tools, you can’t make the chips, and without the chips, you can’t make anything else. The Japanese will be in control.

The interesting thing that is pointed out as to why an American company wouldn’t buy it—it kind of ties in with this—IBM, none of them, wanted it. They said the problem was the approach the American companies were taking was the desire for big profits very quickly. In this industry, the profits were stretched out over a much longer period of time. There were not going to be any big profits really quickly; you had to take a more long-term view. Nobody here in the United States wanted to do that.

This attitude of greed or people who are out to get everything they can get has led to a lot of the economic problems we are having. Very shortsighted economic decisions have been made in this country. God shows what’s going to happen.

Verse 4, people will take advantage of those who work for them and hold back what would be rightfully theirs. People who have this greedy attitude take advantage.

The scriptures are very clear and describe in a very picturesque way the aftermath of some nuclear confrontation. I think that is what is described here in v. 3, when it talks about the gold and the silver being corroded and how it will eat your flesh as it were fire. I don’t think that can describe anything else but the results or the aftermath of some nuclear confrontation where you have vast stores of precious metals that become radioactive. Gold does not rust in that sense of the word, but it is very receptive to radioactivity. The exposure becomes very highly radioactive, and it will eat your flesh like fire.

When you compare this with Isaiah 2:18-21 and with Revelation 6:14-16, you find the description of the day of the Lord. It describes the great, the mighty and the rich throwing their gold to the moles and the bats in the caves of the earth, trying to get rid of it.

If you put Isaiah 2, James 5 and Revelation 6 together, what you find is the description of what happens when this horde of precious metals that a bunch of greedy people have put together to try to buy their way out of trouble becomes radioactive. They are going to find out that they are in a big hurry to get rid of it. The point it is making here is the futility of putting your trust in selfish, greedy things but having an attitude of being fair and realizing that our plans are very subject to God’s disposal.

(10) The tenth component in James 5:7-12 is patience and endurance.

James 5:7-8, “Therefore be patient, brethren, until the coming of the Lord. See how the farmer waits for the precious fruit of the earth, waiting patiently for it until it receives the early and latter rain. You also be patient. Establish your hearts, for the coming of the Lord is at hand.” Realize that we have to wait on God and that patience and endurance of waiting on God is a vital component of a mature, fully developed Christian.

(11) The eleventh component in James 5:13-18 is conduct in affliction.

James 5:13-18, “Is anyone among you suffering? Let him pray. Is anyone cheerful? Let him sing psalms. Is anyone among you sick? Let him call for the elders of the Church, and let them pray over him, anointing him with oil in the name of the Lord. And the prayer of faith will save the sick, and the Lord will raise him up. And if he has committed sins, he will be forgiven. Confess your trespasses to one another, and pray for one another, that you may be healed. The effective, fervent prayer of a righteous man avails much.

Elijah was a man with a nature like ours, and he prayed earnestly that it would not rain; and it did not rain on the land for three years and six months. And he prayed again, and the heaven gave rain, and the earth produced the fruit.”

The point is we see this description in terms of our conduct in affliction. We need an attitude of growing closer to God, praying and walking with God, drawing closer to God, learning to trust God, having our confidence directed in God, having an attitude of praying for one another, seeking to encourage one another and recognizing that the great men and women of the Bible of whom we read were human beings just like we are. They had the same weaknesses, the same problems. They had the same things that make them human, just as we do.

Elijah was a man subject to like passions as we are. He was just as weak and fallible a human being as all of us. He was a human being. He wasn't some unique different sort of person that couldn't be touched with the feelings of human weakness and frailty. But he was close to God and God listened.

(12) The twelfth component in James 5:19-20 is the effort in behalf of an erring brother.

James 5:19, “Brethren, if anyone among you wanders from the truth, and someone turns him back, let him know that he who turns a sinner from the error of his way will save a soul from death and cover a multitude of sins.” That is the final component.

If you go through, there are twelve components that outline the book. The various components comprise what it means to be a completely mature, fully-developed Christian.

Let's notice briefly our study questions. I think most of them have been commented upon.

Why are we told to count it all joy when we have problems? This is brought out in James 1:3. Our character is purged and refined and strengthened by the trials through which we go through. Hebrew 12:11 brings that out as well, “Now no chastening seems to be joyful for the present, but grievous; nevertheless, afterward it yields the peaceable fruit of righteousness to those who have been trained by it.” It is not going through the problem that's enjoyable, but it is the aftermath, the consequence.

Does God tempt us? No. God may try us, but He never tempts us. “Tempt” carries with it the connotation of trying to “trip up” someone. God never tries to trip us up, never tries to get us to fall.

James 1:13 brings that out. God may “try” us, but He never tempts us in the sense of trying to trip us up. We are basically tempted to sin; our human nature takes care of most of that.

James 1:14 says we are drawn away of our own lust and enticed. That's where the temptation comes in.

James 1:27, “Pure and undefiled religion before God and the Father is this: to visit orphans and widows in their trouble, and to keep oneself unspotted from the world.”

There are two components. One involves helping those who are not able to return the favor, those who are not in a position to make it worth your while. It is helping others from a disinterested standpoint.

It is another thing to help somebody who is in a position to help you back. Kind of like the scandal involving several senators who are in trouble now because they interceded on behalf of this fellow who owned this big savings and loan. They said, ‘We were just trying to help. We felt sorry for this guy. He is constituted, this poor American.’ Well, the fact that he kicked in a few million bucks for their campaign funds gave them a little incentive to have a little more interest in helping him then they would have had to help you or me were we in trouble. They just wouldn't have gone quite the length to help us. I don't see five of them lining up to go see somebody on my behalf or yours either.

The point is a lot of people are quick to try to help somebody when they think the guy can do a lot of good for them. God says pure religion is when you help somebody who's not in a position to “make it worth your while”—the widow, the fatherless or those who are really in the least position to defend themselves. You are to visit them, to pay attention to them, to give them help. That's one of the components of pure religion. Pure religion is service that is directed from a pure motive and is directed toward those who need it most and are least able to make it “worth your while.”

The other component is to keep ourselves unspotted from the world. That is a constant battle because if we're not careful, bits and pieces kind of rub off on us. The need is to keep ourselves unspotted and unpolluted from the world around us. Those are important components of pure religion.

What is the relationship of faith and works? Faith without works is dead. We show the depth and sincerity of what we believe by what we do. James 2:14-26 bring this out. Faith and works go together; they don't contradict. We demonstrate our faith by our works. If we believe something, we are prepared to act on it. If we don't act on it, then we obviously don't believe it very much.

James 3:1, we have already commented on that (KJV), "...be not many masters..." The Greek word here is "didaskaloi." That's the word that's translated "master" here which means "teachers." The other word was a common title of respect. It meant "someone who owned property"; it is a totally different word, "kurios." And the third word—the one that Christ said was not to be used as a title—was a totally different word, "kathegetes."

The specific words aren't important. I mention them because you don't even have to know Greek to be able to tell those words in the Greek language are totally dissimilar words. They are words that are totally different from one another even though they are all rendered by the same English word "master." Sometimes the same Greek word is rendered by two or three English words; sometimes the same English word is used to render two or three different Greek words. It can sometimes be a little bit confusing of not realizing the distinctions.

Let's notice the seven components of Godly wisdom. This is James 3:17-18: (1) pure, (2) peaceable, (3) gentle, (4) easy to be entreated, (5) full of mercy and good fruits, (6) without partiality and (7) without hypocrisy.

James 4:3 tells us why we sometimes don't receive what we ask. It tells us it is because we ask amiss. We ask in the wrong way or not from a proper perspective. That's one reason why we sometimes don't receive the answer we desire; we ask amiss.

What James tells us concerning sin in James 4:17, "To him that knows to do good and does it not, to him it is sin." God imputes sin based on what we know. We are judged on the basis of what we do with what we know, and the more we know, the more we are accountable for.

James 4:14 compares life to a vapor. It's just a little trail of water vapor. That's pretty insubstantial, isn't it? That's what comes out of your teakettle. James says that's what life is like. It's here and it's gone. It goes by. It's something you can't hold on to. Ever try to hold on to water vapor, get a good hold on it, and won't let it go? Doesn't work, does it? Life is that way. You can't just grab hold of it and say you are just not going to turn it loose.

The point that James makes is our life is in God's hands. God gave us our life, and none of us has any guarantee of how long it is going to be. We need to live our lives with the realization that our life is in God's hands; that the plans we make are at God's disposal; and that we try to order our lives by recognizing God's role and how temporary we are.

The matter of oaths or of using an oath in James 5:12, "But above all, my brethren, do not swear, either by heaven or by earth or with any other oath. But let your 'Yes' be 'Yes,' and your 'No' be 'No,' lest you fall into judgment." He says don't swear. That is why we don't swear, even in legal matters. We can simply "affirm" something rather than swearing an oath. The law recognizes that. James says don't do that because when you swear, then in a sense, what you're doing is you're making a distinction. He says, "Let your 'Yes' be 'Yes,' and your 'No,' 'No.'" In other words, say what you mean and mean what you say!

You make this big distinction, 'Boy, this time I am really telling the truth. I'm swearing to all this stuff, and I'm really telling the truth this time.' Well, what's the implication of that? The implication is that you normally don't tell the truth. But you stick your hand up, put your other one on the Bible and you're really telling the truth this time. James said to just simply tell it. When you get any further than that, then you get into making distinctions as to whether you're telling the truth or not. As a Christian, we just should tell the truth—period. There shouldn't be any need for a Christian to have to take some kind of an oath because we're to be consistently telling the truth. If we say it, it is true.

God's instruction to the sick is a familiar verse, one many of us memorized years ago when we first came into the Church.

James 5:14-15, "Is anyone among you sick? Let him call for the elders of the Church, and let them pray over him, anointing him with oil in the name of the Lord. And the prayer of faith will save the sick..."

This is one of the basic instructions in term of anointing for illness and looking to God in terms of recognizing God as our Healer. One of the blessings and the benefits that God allows us as His people to partake of is the fact that we can have access to Him in the midst of our sicknesses and afflictions.

What kind of prayers gets answered? James 5:16, "...The effective, fervent prayer of a righteous man avails much." There are several components to prayer. We are to really put our heart into it. We are to be obeying God.

That's the kind of prayer that God really takes note of.

Hopefully, this has given you a little bit more insight and a little bit of an overview of the book of James. There is so much that is packed into the book of James. It is one of the most basic books of the New Testament in terms of practical day-to-day Christian living. It tells us the way that we should live our lives and conduct ourselves on a day-in, day-out basis. There is a very practical, basic approach towards applying the teachings of Jesus Christ in our own life. It's one that I think we can all profit from going back to again and again.

Next Bible study we will go through the books of I and II Peter; then we will have one more Bible study on this series. We will get into I, II, III John and Jude. That may seem like a lot to string together, but when you look at the fact that II and III John and Jude are all very short one-chapter books, you're really not stringing that much together. I John is only five chapters. It's a fairly short section. Basically, we have two more Bible studies in this brief series on the General Epistles. Hopefully those will be of help in terms of focusing in on some basic areas here in the Scriptures.

With that, we will be concluded this evening.

General Epistles Series—I & II Peter

This evening we will be in the books of I and II Peter. The Apostle Peter wrote them and they are called by his name. I Peter was written in the early-to-mid 60s A.D. We would date it approximately 65 A.D. II Peter we would date two to three years later—perhaps the winter of 67-68 A.D. There was not a long period between them. II Peter was clearly written at the very end of Peter's life. It was written, evidently, after the martyrdom of Paul or at least right around that time. Peter was martyred within a matter of months after Paul. II Peter would have been written shortly prior to Peter's martyrdom. We'll notice some of that as we go through the books.

The book of I Peter was written and addressed primarily to Israelite Christians scattered in the area that is up along the southern and western shore of the Black Sea—the area of what is now northern Turkey. This is an area in which Paul never went.

You might just notice here in I Peter 1:1, "Peter an apostle of Jesus Christ to the pilgrims of the Dispersion [KJV, "strangers"—a term that was utilized to refer to Israelites] scattered throughout Pontus, Galatia, Cappadocia, Asia and Bithynia."

If you have a map in the back of your Bible, let's notice a little bit of the sequence of these areas; let's notice where they are located. You will notice that they are coming across from east to west. It comes across from Pontus, to the areas of Galatia and Cappadocia, to Asia, then to Bithynia. We're moving across from east to west.

As far as Galatia is concerned, there were two portions of Galatia—northern and southern Galatia. It's pretty clear, when we put the whole picture together, that northern Galatia was addressed by Peter. Southern Galatia is the area where Paul went. We know that the portions where Paul went are Derbe, Iconium, and Lystra—those areas down on the southern portion of Galatia.

There was a difference in the peoples. The peoples scattered along the southern shore of the Black Sea were the remnants of some of the Israelite tribes that had been settled in those areas. In fact, the Gauls who crossed the Black Sea and invaded Europe gave their name to what is known as modern-day France. Gaul and Galatia are both derived from the same word. The Gauls inhabited northern Galatia. It is from the southern coast of the Black Sea that the Gauls invaded Europe. The Gauls were ancestors of the French people, some of whom were actually settled in this area at that time.

Gaul, if you check it out, was derived from the Hebrew, "Galad," which was a form of Gilead. Gaul came to be applied to the descendants of Reuben because the land that Reuben anciently settled in was on the east side of the Jordan River in what is now modern-day Jordan. The east side of the Jordan River was the land of Gilead. That tribe was, in some cases, simply referred to as Gilead from the geographic location-place name. That's where Reuben settled at the time when Joshua brought the Israelites across to their inheritance (Joshua 13:8). This term "Galad" or "Golwa" is derived from "Gilead." It is the term from which Galatia was derived. They gave their name to that area of the southern portion of the Black Sea, and it was the name they took on up into Europe. That is just kind of an aside, but it's where the name came from.

Galatia came to be applied as a general place-name to central Asia Minor. At the time of the New Testament apostles, the southern portion of what had come to be designated by the Romans as Galatia was basically Greek Gentiles. But the northern portion close to the Black Sea was Israelites.

We would note, when Peter begins to address these locations of Pontus, Cappadocia, Galatia, Asia and Bithynia, he is addressing—as you would come from east to west, going from Pontus to Cappadocia to Galatia, to Bithynia, to Asia—what would be a mail route. You can track that out, and it would make like a little bit of a circle around that area. That would be the logical sequence if you were coming from the east to the west.

I bring that up because Peter says in I Peter that he is writing from the city of Babylon. He says I Peter 5:13, "the Church that is at Babylon salutes you." The city of Babylon, which Peter referred to, was a city that was built nearby but not exactly upon the location of ancient Babylon. It was the capital of the Parthian Empire in the east. There was still a very significant Israelite settlement in that area. There was a Jewish community in Babylon itself. Babylon is where Peter clearly spent a goodly portion of the latter years of his ministry. His headquarters was based from Babylon.

The Parthian Empire was what lay east of the Roman Empire. It was east of the River Euphrates, which meant it would include, let's say, portions of modern-day Iraq and virtually all of modern-day Iran. It stretched on into portions of what we would term today as Pakistan or India—kind of stretching up the border area of Pakistan and India, but it primarily consisted of Iran and portions of Iraq today. It was a sizable empire to the east.

I bring it up because there isn't any evidence that Peter was in Rome. Peter was not the first pope, and he was not in Rome. There isn't any evidence that he was there, and there is plenty of evidence to show that he wasn't there. One of the most clear-cut evidence that Peter wasn't in Rome is that when Paul wrote the book of Romans, he saluted people by name. He is greeting them by name in the end of the book (Romans 16). Greetings to "so-and-so," to this one, and that one—he goes through and addresses them by name. He says "hello" to more people in the book of Romans than in any other book that he wrote, and he never so much as mentioned Peter.

Now, if Peter was the pope in Rome and Paul writes a letter to the Roman church and says "hello" to everybody except Peter, it would be quite an insult. Also, Paul wrote the book of Romans and told the Romans, "I am anxious to come to you in order that you might be established" (Romans 1:11). Again, that would have been a terrible insult if Peter had been there since the mid-40s A.D. (according to the Catholic tradition, since about 44 or 45 A.D.) in the position of pope or bishop of Rome. That would have been a terrible insult. But obviously Peter was not there.

In fact, the Catholic Church is confronted with a dilemma because when Peter wrote I Peter 5:13, it is obvious he was writing from Babylon. You know what they say? Look it up in the Catholic Encyclopedia or Catholic Commentaries. They say that by Babylon, Peter really meant Rome. They say he was utilizing that name as symbolic of Rome. Why doesn't Babylon symbolize Rome—especially when you read of it in the book of Revelation? If Babylon symbolizes Rome when you read of it in Revelations, then why doesn't it symbolize it in the book of I Peter? If it does, it's got some pretty rough stuff to say about it. They're kind of on the "horns of a dilemma."

The book of Revelation is written in symbolism. Symbolic terms are used. But I Peter isn't written in symbolic terms. When it mentions Babylon, he means Babylon. He is talking about a geographic place-name, not using terms in a symbolic way. There isn't any evidence that Babylon was used to refer to Rome until John wrote the book of Revelation, and it was utilized in a prophetic sense. The only thing the Catholic Church has come up with to try to put Peter in Rome is the fact that he said he wrote from Babylon and that Babylon was a reference to Rome in this particular case.

If he had been writing from Rome, his letter would have been traveling from the west to the east, and logically it would have been addressed to Asia, Bithynia, Pontus, Cappadocia, Galatia—or something of that sort. The letter would have traveled in a different way. When you look at the way the letter traveled, it is clear the letter came from the east to the west. It first went to Pontus, then down to Cappadocia, across to Galatia, up into Asia and up to Bithynia. It made the logical mail route coming from east to west. I think we can dismiss the idea that Peter was writing from Rome.

The only reason to identify Babylon that Peter wrote from with Rome is in order to preserve the Catholic tradition that Peter was in Rome as the first pope. We will go into that in a later Bible study on the history of the first-century Church (the lost century), and who the first pope really was. Some of these things can be interesting and intriguing. We don't have time to get into all of the details this evening.

It's clear from Matthew 10:5-6 that we would expect Peter to be writing primarily to an Israelite audience because that was the commission that Jesus gave to the twelve apostles. In Matthew 10:5-6, Jesus told the twelve not to go into the way of the Gentiles, but to the lost sheep of the house of Israel. Now, Paul was sent as the apostle to the Gentiles (Acts 9:15; Galatians 2:7-8). God's work was organized.

God has always been the author of organization. He didn't have the various apostles tripping over one another, each going into the other's area and territory. I don't go over into other areas to do visiting and counseling or another minister coming over here to visit and counsel—just kind of "hodge-podge" around. There is organization. Galatians 2 makes it plain that Paul was assigned as the apostle to the Gentiles, just as Peter and the twelve were to the ten tribes of the house of Israel. We have that as a background for I Peter.

II Peter was written basically to the same audience. It was written a little later, right at the end of Peter's life. It was written at a time when, as we are going to see, the mystery of iniquity was at work and making inroads into the Church. Some of these Samaritans were utilizing many spurious gospels and epistles in order to trigger their deception. There were a lot of books that were, supposedly, written by some of the apostles. There were books that purported to be gospels accounts or epistles from some of the apostles.

II Peter is written as a warning to the Church and also to demonstrate the need of a clear canon of New Testament Scripture that Peter was responsible for introducing at the end of his life. It was written just prior to his arrest and execution. We will note some of that. Let's just briefly survey the books. We will note certain material as we go through it.

He addresses in I Peter 1:1, "...the pilgrims [KJV, "strangers"]..." in this area of what we would term northern Turkey.

He addresses those who are the elect.

Verse 2, "Elect, according to the foreknowledge of God the Father, through sanctification of the Spirit unto obedience and sprinkling of the blood of Jesus Christ. Grace to you and peace be multiplied." Elect simply means "chosen"; to elect is to choose. The elect are those whom God has chosen to be a part of the firstfruits. We are elect according to the foreknowledge of God the Father. God has determined ahead of time that we would have the opportunity of being part of the firstfruits. We're elect! What makes us elect? What sets the elect apart? We are set apart through sanctification of the Spirit. We're set apart and made holy by the indwelling of God's Holy Spirit. We are set apart through God's Spirit; the Spirit of God dwelling in us makes us holy. We are set apart to exemplify God's way through obedience and through the sprinkling of the blood of Jesus Christ.

We are reminded in v. 3, "...according to His mercy has begotten us again unto a living hope by the resurrection of Jesus, from the dead." We have a hope that is living, a hope that is alive—not a hope that is dead. Our hope is based on eternal life. Our hope is based upon the fact that Jesus Christ was raised from the dead. He didn't stay in that tomb; He came out. That living hope is defined.

Verse 4, "To an inheritance incorruptible and undefiled, and that fades not away reserved in heaven for you." Does that mean you go to heaven? Some read that verse and think, 'When we all get to heaven....' It doesn't say anything about going to heaven. We have an inheritance that is incorruptible and undefiled. In other words, it doesn't deteriorate. It doesn't rust, rot or decay. It is kept in a very safe place; it's kept in heaven. It is reserved in heaven. If it's in heaven and we are here, how are we going to get it? If the reward is in heaven and we are on earth, there are only one or two things that can happen. Either we have to go to heaven to get it or it has to come down here to us. So which is it?

Notice what Jesus says in the end of the book of Revelation 22:12, "'Behold I come quickly, and My reward is with Me, to give every man according as his work.'" The last thing Jesus said in the book of Revelation was "Behold, I come quickly, and My reward is with Me." So Christ is going to bring the reward with Him when He comes. We are not going to heaven to get it. The reward is being reserved in heaven until Christ comes. And when He comes, He is going to bring the reward with Him to give us in accordance with what we have done. It's very clear when we look at I Peter 1:4 and put it together with Revelation 22:12 that Christ will bring that reward with Him when He comes.

II Peter 1 describes this reward and the hope of which we are to have our hearts and minds set upon.

In v. 6, he tells us that even though, right now, we may be undergoing various trials and tests, we are to rejoice.

II Peter 1:7, "that the genuineness of your faith, being much more precious than gold that perish...." Gold deteriorates and will wear away a molecule at a time. Maybe you've had a piece of gold jewelry or ring for many years; you will notice that gradually it begins to wear away. It will smooth down and will gradually wear away. Gold will perish. The reward that God has for us will not wear away and perish. The character that we are to build is not something that will wear away and perish.

He compares the trial of our faith to being like gold. For gold to have value and to be used, it has to be refined. Precious metal has to be refined because normally there are impurities that are mixed in with it that have to be purged out and gotten rid of. To separate the pure metal from the impurities present in the ore, the ancient metal workers or silversmiths had an interesting approach in refining precious metal. Using silver for an example, the method that they had of being able to determine when the silver was pure and purified to the point that they wanted it, they would melt the silver, the impurities (the dross) would come to the top, and they would skim it. Their method for determining when they had it right was that the silversmith would look into the molten metal, and when it had gotten to the point that he could see his own reflection without distortion, he considered that all the impurities were removed. It was considered finished and completely refined. Today, that's not the way they do it. We have a little more sophisticated technology.

There's a lot of analogy to be drawn by the way that it was anciently done. The trials, tests and difficulties that we go through are compared to fire. It is through fiery trials that our character is purged. The dross and the impurities are purged away. And, interestingly enough, what is God doing? Isn't He, in effect, looking into us, looking into our character until He can see His own reflection without distortion? Isn't that the kind of character that we are to be developing? We are to be developing the mind of Christ and the character and nature of God. Just as the ancient silversmith, the worker with precious metals, looked into the molten substance to see if their reflection was there without distortion, so in effect, that is part of what we are going through as God is seeking to refine our character to reflect Him.

We find the tests, trials and difficulties that we go through mentioned here.

Verses 13-16, "Therefore gird up the loins of your mind, be sober, and rest your hope fully upon the grace that is to be brought to you at the revelation of Jesus Christ; as obedient children, not conforming yourselves to the former lusts, as in your ignorance [we are not to go back and be the way we were when we didn't know any better]; but as He who called you is holy, you also be holy in all your conduct, because it is written, 'Be holy, for I am holy.'"

God says we are not to fashion and shape ourselves according to the former lusts—to the cravings, desires and pulls of human nature. We're not to be like the world. We are to be holy in all aspects of our conduct and in every area of our life because God is holy and He wants us to reflect His values. He wants us to reflect His nature.

Verses 17-21, "And if you call on the Father, who without partiality judges according to each one's work, conduct yourselves throughout the time of your sojourning here in fear [or reverence, as it actually means]; knowing that you were not redeemed with corruptible things [our lives have not been purchased with money]... but with the precious blood of Christ, as of a lamb without blemish and without spot. He indeed was foreordained before the foundation of the world, but was manifest in these last times for you, who through Him believe in God, who raised Him from the dead and gave Him glory, so that your faith and hope are in God."

We are reminded in v. 24, "...All flesh is as grass, and all the glory of man as the flower of the grass..." In other words, everything that appears so real and permanent to us is here today and gone tomorrow. It is just that passing and transitory.

Then we are told, going on from that, in I Peter 2:1, "Therefore laying aside all the malice, all the guile, all the hypocrisy, the envying, the evil speaking." Lay aside the evil motives, the resentment, the play-acting, the envy, the gossip and the backbiting. Lay aside all of these things.

Verse 2, "As newborn babes, desire the sincere milk of the word, that you may grow thereby." The analogy God draws, in terms of the way we are to crave and desire God's Word, is in the same way that a little baby earnestly desires its mother's milk. Now, if there is ever an example of fervent desire, it's a little baby wanting to nurse. Any parent can remember. You can just see that little baby just bobbing its head just so anxious to get to it. It's like he has to have it, and he has to have it right now. It is the exact description of this fervent desire. I have to have it, and I've just got to have it right now. It's kind of funny to watch them sometime, as to how excited they can get at mealtime when they are ready to nurse.

God points that out and He says look how a little baby earnestly desires his mother's milk because he needs that in order for him to grow. He says you need to take a lesson from that little baby. You need to have the same attitude when it comes to My Word. You need to be just as eager and excited about My Word, about the milk of the Word, as a newborn baby is after his own mother's milk. That's quite an analogy because you think about that little baby and the way he is. We realize that God wants us to recapture some of that zeal, that eagerness, that anticipation for learning more of His way because that's our spiritual nourishment.

Then he tells us in v. 4, “Coming to Him as to a living stone....” He draws an analogy here that describes us.

Verse 5, “You also as living stones are built up a spiritual house, a holy priesthood, to offer up spiritual sacrifices, acceptable to God by Jesus Christ.” We’re compared to living stones. There is a spiritual temple being built. Think a little bit. Do you remember the most unusual aspect of the construction of Solomon’s temple? If you had come there, it would have been the most unusual construction site you would have ever seen.

We are told back in I Kings 6:7 that there was not the sound of a hammer or of an axe at the temple site. Have you ever been to a construction site, and you didn’t have all this clang, clang, bang, bang? All of the stones were cut at the quarry and they exactly fit. Everything was brought to the site exactly pre-cut. Three thousand years ago that must have been pretty primitive, but their measurements weren’t too primitive because they cut those stones to where they fit exactly. They didn’t need to get the sledgehammer out to it.

Have you ever wondered why God did that? What was the big deal? Was God primarily concerned about the sound of hammers at the temple site? The construction of the temple, just as the construction of the tabernacle and the furniture for it, was symbolic. God instructed Moses to do it exactly the way He showed him in the Mount. Why? Because it symbolized something! When the time came for Solomon to build the temple, God instructed him how to do it. God inspired him exactly how it was to be done because it was symbolic of certain things.

We are compared to living stones. God is building up a spiritual edifice, a spiritual temple that is going to completely come together at the time of the resurrection. The construction site, so to speak—when the spiritual temple comes together at the resurrection—is not when God’s going to get out the axe and hammer and start working on us. We’re going to fit exactly because right now we are at the quarrying stage. That’s why we get the knots on our head. He’s banging away right now. There’s a lot of banging and noise right now in our lives. The hammers, the axes and the saw, everything is at work right now trimming us to specification. When the time comes, we’re going to fit. We’re coming as living stones. Solomon’s temple was built with physical stones—just plain old Jerusalem sandstones—but God’s spiritual temple is being built, not with physical sandstone, but with living stones.

Verses 6-7, Jesus Christ Himself is compared to the chief cornerstone. In other words, the cornerstone is the one that is first laid and everything else derives from there in terms of its measurement. Everything has to fit around the cornerstone. That’s the one that is the basis by which everything else is measured out. What it amounts to is that we all have to fit around Jesus Christ. We have to be cut and shaped where we will fit with Him. That’s quite an analogy describing how Christ is the chief cornerstone.

Verse 8, “and a stone of stumbling and a rock of offense.” He has become a stone of stumbling and a rock of offence to some.

Verse 9, “But you are a chosen generation, a royal priesthood, a holy nation, a peculiar people, that you may proclaim the praises of Him who called you out of darkness into His marvelous light.”

Verse 11, “Beloved, I beg you as sojourners and pilgrims, abstain from fleshly lusts....” We are not part of this society. We are strangers and pilgrims.

Verses 13-14, “Therefore submit yourselves to every ordinance of man for the Lord’s sake, whether to the king as supreme, or to governors, as to those who are sent by him for the punishment of evildoers....” We are to respect the laws of society, but we are not to be a part of it. We are not part and parcel of this society. We’re strangers and pilgrims. In other words, we are passing through. Because this is not our society, we are not part and parcel of this world’s military and political establishment. We are to submit ourselves to ordinances of man. We are to recognize and respect the laws of the land, but we are to realize that we are not a part of this society. There is that distinction. We are to try to set an example that people will notice in the way we live.

Verse 17, “Honor all men. Love the brotherhood. Fear God. Honor the king.” We are to show proper love, respect and honor. We are to show proper esteem for others.

Verse 18, servants are enjoined to be subject to their masters, not simply to the ones that are good. There were, undoubtedly, those who were kind and considerate people. Just as today, some may work for a boss that is considerate and tries to be fair and equitable. There were servants then who had masters who sought to be just, masters who were equitable and reasonable men who tried to conduct themselves in an appropriate way. Peter says here to be subject to the harsh, not simply to the ones that do what they ought to do because there are plenty of those that are the other way.

Verses 19-20, “For this is thankworthy, if a man for conscience toward God endure grief, suffering wrongfully. For what credit is it if, when you are beaten for your faults, you take it patiently? But when you do good and suffer for it, if you take it patiently, this is commendable before God.” When you get in trouble for something you did wrong and you take it in a decent attitude, God says, ‘Big deal! What does that count? You had it coming. You’re getting what you deserve. You are just simply receiving what you earned.’ If you haven’t done anything wrong and you take it in a proper attitude, this is commendable before God.

Verse 21, “For to this you were called, because Christ also suffered for us, leaving us an example, that you should follow His steps.” What were His steps?

Verse 22, He didn’t do any sin.

Verse 23, “who, when He was reviled, did not revile in return; when He suffered, He did not threaten....” Christ suffered. Sometimes, if we are going to live godly, we will have to suffer wrongfully. Will a Christian ever suffer wrongfully? Sure, sometimes. Christ did; Christ suffered wrongfully. He never suffered for what He did because He didn’t do anything wrong and He suffered for it. He left us an example that we should follow.

We realize that as a Christian there may be times when we are persecuted for righteousness’ sake. God takes special note when someone is receiving something that they did not incur. The character that is established and the attitude that is exemplified by one who suffers wrongfully is something God takes note of.

Christ set the perfect example.

Verse 24, “who Himself bore our sins in His own body on the tree, that we, having died to sins, might live for righteousness—by whose stripes you were healed.” We see that Christ paid the ultimate sacrifice. He gave His life for us. It is through His death that we have access to God. That access makes possible both our forgiveness of sin and our healing. That’s one of the benefits that we have as God’s people.

It’s one of the benefits that we have by having access to God. Christ certainly made that possible. The healing that He made possible certainly includes the whole gamut, whether you’re talking in spiritual or emotional terms and certainly in physical terms because that is one of the blessings and benefits that God has made available to His people. Christ gave Himself for us. He suffered in our stead, dying in our stead. Through Him we have access to God, and through Him we have access to the benefits that God extends—the benefits of God’s mercy, His forgiveness and of God’s healing.

He talks about servants in 2:18. Then he talks about Christians in general—those who suffer wrongfully.

Then he says in I Peter 3:1-2, “Likewise [in the same way], you wives be subject to your own husbands, that if any obey not the word, they may without the word, be won by the conduct of the wives, when they observe your chaste conduct accompanied by fear [KJV, “respect”].” He addresses here the example that wives are to set.

Verse 3, “Do not let your beauty be that outward adorning of arranging the hair, of wearing gold, or of putting on fine apparel, but let it be the hidden person of the heart, with the incorruptible ornament of a gentle and quiet spirit, which is very precious in the sight of God. For in this manner, in former times, the holy women who trusted in God also adorned themselves....”

The word “adorned” is the word “cosmos” in the Greek. Interestingly enough, it is the same word that our modern English word “cosmetic” derives from. “Cosmos” in the Greek can be rendered several different ways, but in this context, it refers to “adorning.” The point that he is making is that it becomes a matter of priority. The world’s priority is on what goes on the outside. This is what life is all about to people in the world.

God says to His people (and specifically here addressing women), your life should not revolve around the outside but around the inside. The adornment that needs to be primarily focused upon is the inner person. The attitude, the ornament of a meek and quiet spirit, is priceless in God’s sight. This is the ornament that the holy women of old utilized. It was an attitude that shined out. It is the inner person that manifests itself.

Obviously, this is not saying that you should never comb your hair and walk around in a sack all the time. I think we understand there are plenty of scriptures that show we should be properly neat and clean and groom ourselves appropriately. There’s nothing wrong with dressing nicely and tastefully and appropriate grooming. God is not saying you should never take a bath, never comb your hair and put on an old feed sack. That's not what He is saying at all.

He's talking about a set of priorities. He's talking about what your life revolves around. Let's face it. In the world, in so many cases, the emphasis is on the external. All the things that can be put on the outside are considered what beauty is all about. What God thinks is beautiful is not something that derives from what you put on the outside. It derives from what you are on the inside. It's a matter of perspective and a matter of priority. This is an emphasis.

Verse 5, this is an example of the attitude of the holy women of old who trusted God and who were in subjection to their own husband. They had an attitude of respect.

Verse 6, "as Sarah obeyed Abraham, calling him lord, whose daughters you are if you do good and are not afraid with any terror." That is kind of an obscure statement; it means as long as you do well and do not let anxieties unnerve you. It requires faith. God's government is based on faith. To step out and to show the proper respect for God's government in the home requires faith that God will do His part and make it work.

Our daughters grow up to aspire to being counted by God as a daughter of Sarah. That is a very complimentary term. God looks upon Sarah as one of the most outstanding women of the Bible. She was a remarkable person. You read what Sarah went through and you read that Sarah had trials.

Abraham may have been the father of the faithful, but he was not perfect. You go back and read the story, and you find out that he wasn't perfect in some of the things that he did. And Sarah wasn't perfect either. But there was an example, there was an attitude, there was something that God saw that He greatly valued in those two individuals. They were called out as a unique and special team. Peter hearkens and utilizes this; I think there is a lot to be gained from focusing on the details of this instruction.

Then he begins to go into instructions for the husbands.

Verse 7, "Likewise you husbands, dwell with them with understanding, giving honor to the wife, as to the weaker vessel...." This term "weaker" could just as easily be rendered "fragile." The word literally means "more fragile." The point is a husband is told to be understanding of his wife, to give honor and respect to his wife. There is a proper chivalry, a proper attitude of manners. Give honor unto the wife as the one who is the more fragile, the more sensitive, perhaps the more easily hurt or crushed. There is generally a greater sensitivity that women have. They tend to be more sensitive emotionally, a little more sensitive in their feelings. She is a little more fragile in that way. The husbands are told to realize that your wife tends to be more sensitive; show special honor and respect towards her.

There are many concepts of matters of chivalrous conduct that we should seek to practice in our own lives and certainly with our own wives. We want to teach our young boys to be polite, to treat the young ladies like ladies, to open and hold the door, to let the ladies go first and to show this kind of attitude of respect. It's proper and an appropriate kind of thing. Our society is so geared the other way that it takes a lot of instruction because that's not the message that they often get from society around.

Verse 8, "Finally, all of you be of one mind, having compassion for one another...."

Verse 9, "not returning evil for evil or reviling for reviling...." Have this attitude of being kind and giving a blessing.

Verse 7, He tells Christian husbands to deal with their wives in this way that your prayers be not hindered. Certainly, if we don't fulfill our responsibilities in the way that we handle our life and our families, it can certainly impact our prayer life and our relationship with God.

Verses 14-15, "But even if you should suffer for righteousness' sake, you are blessed. 'And do not be afraid of their threats, nor be troubled.' But sanctify the Lord God in your hearts, and always be ready to give a defense [KJV, "an answer"] to everyone who asks you a reason for the hope that is in you, with meekness and fear."

The context is suffering for righteousness' sake. When you're happy, even though you're suffering wrongfully, people can't figure that out. In that context, we're told to be ready to give an answer. If you really act like a Christian and live like a Christian, sooner or later somebody is going to ask you, 'What's with you? What's the source of this attitude, this peace that you have?' We're told, 'If it is the will of God to suffer, it is a whole lot better to suffer for well-doing than for evildoing.'

This is the example that Christ had.

Verses 18-21, "For Christ also suffered once for sins, the just for the unjust, that He might bring us to God, being put to death in the flesh but made alive by the Spirit, by whom also He went and preached to the spirits in prison, who formerly were disobedient, when once the longsuffering of God waited in the days of Noah, while the ark was being prepared, in which a few, that is, eight souls, were saved through water. There is also an antitype which now saves us, namely baptism (not the removal of the filth of the flesh, but the answer of a good conscious toward God), through the resurrection of Jesus Christ.” It’s compared to baptism.

What is this talking about? There are those who go off to great things. The Catholic Church teaches when Jesus was crucified, He went to hell and preached down there to all the souls in hell. Of course, He couldn’t have been there for three days and three nights because they only had Him dead for a day and a half. If He was doing that, He surely pulled a dirty trick on the people on the cross because He told the thief that, ‘Today you are going to be with Me’ (Luke 23:43). If that was the case and He went to hell, the thief surely got a surprise and wound up in the other place. You can’t have it both ways, as they sometimes tend to do.

Let’s notice the context. Jesus Christ died in the flesh. As a physical human being, He died. Through the power of the Spirit, He was made alive. It is through the power of that same Spirit, by that same spiritual power, that He went to the spirits in prison—not to men in prison, not unto souls in prison—but to spirits in prison. God makes His angels spirits (Psalm 104:4), and here were spirits who were in prison. Here were spirits in restraint (“tartaroo” in the Greek). This is the only place where “tartaroo” is used; it refers to the place where these spirits (or angels) are under restraint. These spirits are fallen angels or demon spirits. Here was a time when Jesus exhorted certain demon spirits who were in prison or under restraint. God has placed certain restraints upon them. They were cast down to earth (Isaiah 14; Ezekiel 28). They had been, at various times, very disobedient.

The specific occasion that is addressed is the time when the patience of God waited in the days of Noah. So the time when Jesus did this was not when He was dead. It was the time when Noah was building the ark. It was many, many centuries earlier at the time when the ark was being built. In effect, things had been stirred up to the point that God was going to have to intervene and wipe out humanity from the face of the earth. He was wiping out life on the planet, and He was going to start over.

addressed the demon spirits and exhorted and warned them. Their final fate and punishment has not yet been assigned to each of them because we are told in I Corinthians 6 that we will judge the angels. We will have a part in judging them and giving a final sentence. Christ evidently exhorted them that they had better consider the consequences of what they were doing. He exhorted them that He was going to step in and put a stop to what they were doing. The magnitude of what they were doing was simply making it worse and harder on them. There is an exhortation, warning, and admonition to them at that time that their final judgment and sentencing had not yet been passed. They were simply getting themselves in deeper and deeper by the magnitude of some of what they were doing. He brings this in at this point.

I Peter 4:1, “Therefore, since Christ, suffered for us in the flesh, arm yourselves also with the same mind, for he who has suffered in the flesh has ceased from sin.” Part of the purpose of going through trials and tests is that it enables us to grow. It helps us to overcome, to put sin behind us. It helps us to really get our priorities straight. It helps us to see things in proper perspective.

Verse 4, the world may think it strange that we don’t do the things that we used to do. They should notice a difference.

Verse 5, we are all going to give an account to Him who is ready to judge the quick (living) and the dead. The term “quick” simply means “those who are alive.” It doesn’t mean if you’re slow you won’t be judged. “Quick” means “those who are living”; it simply means that everybody is going to get judged. If you’re dead, you will be raised up and will be judged. If you’re still alive, then you’ll be judged, too. You’re either dead or alive. There’s not much way you can be in between—so that takes care of everybody.

Verse 6, “For this reason the gospel was preached also to those who are dead, that they might be judged according to men in the flesh, but live according to God in the spirit.” There are those who take that scripture and think they should preach to the dead. There are some who believe in being baptized for all their dead relatives. They think they can get people into heaven if they get baptized for them. Does this mean you should go down to the graveyard and preach to the dead? That wouldn’t do much good.

Ecclesiastes 9:5 says, “the dead know not anything.” So, it’s not going to do any good to preach to them.

What does this mean, “the gospel preached to the dead”? Notice what it says. “For this reason the gospel was [past tense] preached also to them that are dead [present tense].” The verb tense makes it plain the gospel was preached (past tense) to those who are dead (present tense). Christ is going to come back, and He’s going to judge everybody—both those who are still living and those who have already died. So the fact that some have already died doesn’t mean the gospel was preached to them in vain. The gospel was preached, past tense, to those who are now dead. Christ is going to judge us all, whether we have already died or whether we are still alive. Obviously, the gospel was preached to those who are now dead—but when they were alive. It was preached, past tense, back when they were living. They are now dead, but that’s okay because Christ is going to return. They will be made alive, and judgment will be there.

Verse 8, we are admonished to have fervent love among ourselves. Love covers a multitude of sin.

Verses 12-13, “...don’t think it strange concerning the fiery trial which is to try you, as though some strange thing happened to you; but rejoice to the extent that you partake of Christ’s sufferings, that when His glory is revealed, you may also be glad with exceeding joy.” When we are partakers of Christ’s suffering, we can rejoice because when His glory is revealed, we will be partakers of that, too. We should not be shocked or surprised when trials and tests come.

Verse 17, “For the time has come [right now] for judgment to begin at the house of God....” Judgment for us, for God’s people, for God’s Church, is right now. This is our time of judgment.

I Peter 5:1-4, Peter ends up by admonishing the ministry to feed the flock that is among them, to set an example and to realize that Jesus Christ, the Chief Shepherd, will appear and demand an accounting.

Verses 5-6, “God resists the proud but gives grace to the humble.” We are to humble ourselves under His hand and He will exalt us.

Verses 7-8, “casting all your care upon Him, for He cares for you. Be sober, be vigilant....”

Verse 13, Peter closes by mentioning that he is writing from Babylon; this was his headquarters at this time.

In II Peter, Peter addresses the same basic group. II Peter 1:4, “by which has been given to us exceedingly great and precious promises, that through these you may be partakers of the divine nature....”

Then he goes through and enumerates seven characteristics: virtue, knowledge, self-control, perseverance, godliness, brotherly kindness and love. These are to be added to faith.

Verse 9, he tells us that if we lack these things, we’re blind.

Verse 10, he goes on to tell us that if we do these things, we shall never fail.

Peter tells us the basis in vv. 4-11, “by which have been given to us exceedingly great and precious promises, that through these you may be partakers of the divine nature, having escaped the corruption that is in the world through lust. But also for this very reason, giving all diligence, add to your faith virtue, to virtue knowledge, to knowledge self-control, to self-control perseverance, to perseverance godliness, to godliness brotherly kindness, and to brotherly kindness love. For if these things are yours and abound you will be neither barren nor unfruitful in the knowledge of our Lord Jesus Christ. For he who lacks these things is shortsighted, even to blindness, and has forgotten that he was purged from his old sins. Therefore, brethren, be even more diligent to make your calling and election sure, for if you do these things you will never stumble; for so an entrance will be supplied to you abundantly into the everlasting kingdom of our Lord and Savior Jesus Christ.”

He gives us a sure-fire means to guarantee that we will never “fall by the wayside.” He tells us how to go about being productive and growing spiritually. There is a tremendous amount that is packed into these verses. These verses are certainly a way of ensuring that we will grow in grace and in knowledge (II Peter 3:18). We will not “fall by the wayside” if we are putting these things into practice.

Verse 12, “Therefore I will not be negligent to remind you always of these things, though you know them, and are established in the present truth.” He said, ‘I want to continually remind you of these things. I know you’ve heard it, but I want to always remind you.’

Verses 13-14, “Yes, I think it is right, as long as I am in this tent [as long as I am still living], to stir you up by reminding you, knowing that shortly I must put off my tent....” In other words, ‘I am going to die.’ Peter said, ‘As long as I am alive and here in the flesh, I think it’s important that I stir you up and remind you of these things. I realize that I’m not going to be around a whole lot longer.’

Verse 15, 'I will endeavor that you may be able, after my decease [after I am dead], to have these things always in remembrance.' Clearly this is a reference to a permanent canon of Scripture that Peter was responsible for bringing about. This would ensure that the things he had reminded and exhorted the brethren might be remembered after he was dead and gone.

In v. 16, you notice there is a change from first person singular to first person plural. In vv. 12, 13, 14 and 15, he said "I"—first person singular. He says, "I will not be negligent...I think it's fitting...I will soon die...I will endeavor...."

In vv. 16-19, notice the switch, "For we have not followed cunningly devised fables, when we made known unto you the power and coming of our Lord Jesus Christ, but were eyewitnesses of His majesty. For He received from God the Father honor and glory when such a voice came to Him from the Excellent Glory: 'This is My Beloved Son, in whom I am well pleased.' And we heard this voice which came from heaven when we were with Him on the holy mountain. We also have the prophetic word made more sure [KJV, "a more sure word of prophecy"]...."

Sometimes this can get read over, but it's important to note because it points out something very specific. Who is the "we"? Clearly it is those who were with Jesus in the holy mountain who heard the voice from God that said, "This is My beloved Son in whom I am well pleased." Who was that? You go back to Matthew 17, and it is clearly defined.

Matthew 17:1-2, "Now after six days Jesus took Peter, James, and John his brother, brought them into a high mountain...and was transfigured there before them...."

Verse 5, "...a bright cloud overshadowed them...there was a voice, 'This is My beloved Son in whom I am well pleased, hear you Him.'" Who heard that? Peter, James and John were the ones with Jesus in the holy mount.

James the brother of John had been martyred. He was the first of the apostles martyred. We have reference to it in Acts 12, which is dated about 44 A.D. James the brother of John was killed with a sword (Acts 12:2). James the brother of John was the first one of the twelve that was martyred.

James was long dead, and that meant that Peter and John were the only two still living. There had only been three originally; one was dead, so that meant Peter and John were the only individuals living who had been with Jesus in the mountain.

They had seen Him transfigured and heard the voice from heaven that announced, "This is My beloved Son." Therefore, the ones who had the sure word of prophecy were Peter and John.

II Peter 1:19, "We also have the prophetic word made more sure...."

Verse 16, 'We have not come off and followed cunningly devised fables. We saw; we were there. We [Peter and John] have the sure word of prophecy.' They were the ones that God utilized to give us the New Testament. They were set aside through this unique experience. They were imparted with what Peter terms here as the sure word of prophecy. They were the ones that God utilized to designate what would be New Testament Scripture.

Peter singles this out, as he tells them, 'I am going to die. I've been reminding you of these things, and I want to make sure that after I'm gone, you will continue to be reminded. We [John and I], have the sure word of prophecy. So you take heed to what we say as opposed to what others may say.'

Peter then begins to warn them.

II Peter 2:1, "But there were also false prophets among the peoples, even as there will be false teachers among you, who secretly bring in destructive heresies...."

This was specific reference to the problems that came into the first-century Church. It describes what resulted in bringing together and what became the great false church.

We have already commented on II Peter 1:15 that Peter was putting together this canon of Scripture so that after he was dead, there would be a permanent record that would be available to continually remind them.

Then in chapter 2, Peter begins to point out these false prophets. He brings out the fact that God will deal with everyone in His time. God knows those that are His.

Verse 4, He dealt with the angels who sinned. Verse 5, He dealt with the world at the time of Noah.

Verse 6, He dealt with Sodom and Gomorrah. Verse 7, He delivered Lot and then dealt with them. God knows who's who.

Verse 15, God describes those who followed the way of Baalam, who loved the wages of unrighteousness. Baalam was willing to preach anything for a price.

Verse 18, it describes individuals speaking great swelling words of vanity, who seek to entice those that have come into the group and to lure them back.

We are told in vv. 20-21 that it is better never to have known the way of righteousness, than to have known it and turned away from it. You're better to have never had your opportunity than to have had it and "blown" it. That's what he is saying, which evidently was the case in some of these.

II Peter 3:1-2, "Beloved, I now write to you, this second epistle (in both of which I stir up your pure minds by way of reminder), that you may be mindful of the words which were spoken before by the holy prophets, and of the commandment of us, the apostles of the Lord and Savior."

Peter is here equating the New Testament with the Old Testament in terms of authority. He said, 'I want you to remember the Bible and what it says in the Bible. I want you to remember what was spoken before by the holy prophets [the Old Testament] and the commandments of us, the apostles of the Lord.' Peter is equating the Commandments that the apostles gave with the writings of the prophets of the Old Testament.

He is explaining this because at the time Peter is writing (up until that point), when you said "Bible" or when you talked about "Scripture" you were talking about what we think of as the Old Testament. That had been the Bible—the Scriptures—for many, many years. That had been the Bible, and these other things had been letters. There had been a letter from Paul or a letter from Peter, a letter from this one or that one. This is a clear designation of which books were official, and he is putting them on the same par with the prophets of old. He is saying that the writings of the apostles and the writings of the prophets of old are to be mutually adhered to.

Then he says in vv. 3-4, "knowing this first: that scoffers will come in the last days, walking according to their own lust, and saying, 'where is the promise of His coming? For since the fathers have gone asleep, all things continue as they were from the beginning of creation.'" There will come those in the last days who follow their own lusts and desires and who say where is the promise of His coming? Things just go on the way they always have.

II Peter 3:5-7 he then says, 'they are willingly ignorant of the fact that God has intervened in the past. They ignore the evidence of the flood. They ignore that God has stepped into history and judged the world in times past, and He will do so again.'

Verses 8-9, "But, beloved, do not forget this one thing, that with the Lord one day is as a thousand years, and a thousand years as one day. The Lord is not slack concerning His promise...." God has not forgotten what He said. He has a time plan; a day is representative of a thousand years. God is going to do what He says He is going to do.

Verse 13, "Nevertheless we, according to His promise, look for new heavens and a new earth in which righteousness dwells." We are looking for something that is to come.

Verse 15, then he ends up by reminding them of what Paul had written. All the things Paul wrote had been gathered together. He reminds them that Paul wrote some things that are difficult to be understood. They can be taken out of context and misunderstood.

Verse 16, "as also in all his epistles, speaking in them of these things, in which are some things hard to understand, which those who are untaught and unstable twist [KJV, "wrest"] to their own destruction, as they do also the rest of the Scriptures." They take it out of context. That's what it means to wrest; it means "to pry loose." If you wrest something loose, that means you are prying it loose. The way people misunderstand Paul is by taking what he said out of context, prying it loose from the overall context in which it's written. They take it out and say Paul did away with the law—which he didn't.

But he wrote some things that are not easily understood unless you really carefully examine the context in which he says them. Peter addresses that and equates what Paul wrote with all the other scriptures.

Why did he write II Peter? He summarizes his purpose of writing.

II Peter 3:1-2, "Beloved, I now write to you this second epistle...[Those of you in Spokesman Club, this is called SPS—Specific Purpose Statement]...(in both [both letters I wrote] of which I stir up your pure minds by way of reminder) [of trying to remind you of something], that you may be mindful of the words which were spoken before by the holy prophets, and of the commandment of us the apostles of the Lord and Savior."

In other words, he wanted to stir them up to study the Bible—the Old Testament, which they already had and the New Testament, which God was using Peter to compile. He wanted to stir them up, to continue to go back over the Bible, to pay heed to it, to be reminded of what God was doing and of God's plan and purpose.

I hope that from this survey, this overview, we can perhaps have a little more insight into some of the things that God revealed through Peter. There is a lot that is packed in here.

I am passing out questions on I, II, III John and Jude. That sounds like a lot of books when you “rattle them off,” but when you look at the number of pages involved, it is very short. Since II, III John and Jude each consist of one short chapter, I don’t think that will be too lengthy a set of Scriptures to study between now and next time. We will focus in on these very important books. You can’t always equate length with importance. A lot can be packed into a short space.

When we conclude the epistles of John and Jude, we will have completed this short series on the General Epistles, and we will be prepared to launch another Bible study series. I think, at this time, we will get into the Major Prophets. There is so much going on and happening in the world that I think that it would do us well to go back and take note of Isaiah, Jeremiah and Ezekiel. We will find that today’s and tomorrow’s headlines are already in the Bible.

With that we will conclude.

General Epistles Series—I, II, III John and Jude

This evening we want to finish up this short series that we have had on the General Epistles. We are going to do so by focusing in on the epistles of John (I, II, III John) and also the book of Jude—a short one-chapter book.

All three of John's books were written near the close of the first century A.D. John was the last of the apostles to die. He outlived the others of the twelve by close to thirty years. He lived into the late 90s A.D.—close to about 100 A.D. John clearly, at that time, would have been close to a hundred years of age; he lived to a very advanced age.

He was in exile for a period of time in the 90s A.D. on the isle of Patmos. Patmos is a small island off the coast of Asia Minor (what is today modern-day Turkey). He was placed in exile by Emperor Domitian. This exile ended about 96 A.D. John had been in Ephesus prior to his exile. In the latter years, he was in Ephesus for several years. He was exiled from Ephesus to the island of Patmos, yet he did have mail contact. It was from the island of Patmos that he wrote most of the writings for which he is noted.

The book of Revelation, in particular, was written at that time. He wrote to the Churches in Asia Minor. This is the area around Ephesus—the very area to which the book of Revelation was addressed. It was addressed to the seven Churches of Asia Minor.

John was released from exile in 96 A.D. After his return from exile on the island of Patmos, evidently he returned to Ephesus where he was said to have died in 98 A.D. John was writing toward the close of the early apostolic era of the Church. He was addressing problems that needed to be addressed. The books that he wrote put, in a sense, the final touches of the New Testament.

We focused last time on how Peter was responsible for collecting together the books that comprise most of our New Testament. We focused on how Peter had borne testimony of the fact that he and John had been given that sure word of prophecy (II Peter 2). Peter was responsible for collecting probably twenty-two books of the New Testament, which would be all of the New Testament books except John's five books. Twenty-two books, and in that sense, would have corresponded exactly with the Jewish reckoning of the number of books in the Hebrew Bible. What Peter did (even though it was what God wanted at that time) was not the final capstone. There was information that yet needed to be written. At the time Peter died, in the late 60s (just prior to the destruction of Jerusalem in 70 A.D.), events had not yet come to the point where some of these final things needed to be written.

John wrote and was able to address things from a perspective of thirty years down the road from the time of the rest of the New Testament. Many of the problems that were in the beginning stages at the time that Peter addressed it—or James or Paul addressed it—had continued on and developed further for a period of about thirty years. The heresies that had begun to creep in ultimately gave rise to the false church—the false church that calls itself “Christian” yet does not practice the religion of Jesus Christ.

Paul said in II Thessalonians 2:7, when he was writing in the 50s A.D., ‘the mystery of iniquity does already work.’ The mystery religion of lawlessness was already at work even in the 50s A.D. Paul spoke in the book of Galatians of some coming and bringing another gospel (Galatians 1:6-7).

In the book of Acts written by Luke under Paul's auspices, we were introduced to an individual by the name of Simon the Sorcerer (Acts 8) or Simon the Magician known in history as Simon Magus.

Acts 8:9, Simon Magus was the religious leader of the Samaritans. He was an individual who professed Christianity and yet never truly repented.

Verses 18-20, Peter rebuked him very strongly when Simon sought to purchase with money the office of an apostleship in the New Testament Church. Peter rebuked him very strongly. It is clear that while Simon was baptized and professed belief in Christ, he never repented.

That is stated very clearly because Peter told him in v. 20, “...your money perish with you, because you thought that the gift of God could be purchased with money!” ‘Your money is going to go where you are and you are both going to burn up. Your money perishes with you because you have thought this.’ We are introduced to something just kind of on the surface level.

In v. 10, we are told that this man was the great religious leader of the Samaritans and that all of them paid attention to him. We are introduced to that fact in other books.

In II Peter 2:1, for instance, we are told that ‘false prophets were creeping in.’ There were things that were being taught by some who were seeking to water down the gospel message and to undermine the importance of keeping the commandments and obeying God. There was a different message that was coming in and being introduced.

Now, when John was writing thirty years later down the line, many of these heresies had developed to the point that, in some cases, certain whole Churches were, literally, being taken over by the heretics and true Christians put out (III John: 9-10). Many of the so-called Gnostic heresies (“Gnostic” means “we know”) dated back to Simon the Magician and gave rise to a lot of teachings of the professing Christian Church. Perhaps we can go into that at a later Bible study.

In the books of John, we have, in a sense, a final admonition to a Church that had lost a lot of its first love. The Church at Ephesus typified the first stage of the Church of God. The Church at Ephesus typified the whole beginning stage or era of the Church. That Church was rebuked because they lost their first love. The Church to which John is writing had lost its first love, and as a result, it did not have the power of God to really resist the insidious encroachments of the heretics.

The books that John wrote, particularly I, II, III John, serve not only as a warning to the Church of that day, but it also provides for us a record of what actually transpired. It gives us the beginning of the events that developed. Many historical writers say that with the conclusion of the New Testament, a curtain rang down on Church history. We aren’t really able to penetrate that curtain for almost the best part of a century. Towards the end of the second century when the curtain begins to rise, the church that calls itself “Christian” is in so many ways totally different from the Church of which we read in the book of Acts.

This has puzzled many of the historians. We see Easter being substituted for Passover. We see a controversy having erupted and Easter having replaced Passover. We see Sunday worship having replaced the Sabbath, and we see the introduction of the mass and things of that sort taking the place of the Passover service. We see the introduction of many things that are radically different from the Church of which we read in the book of Acts.

The books of I, II, III John serve not only as a warning to the Church of that day, but they also serve to record for us what actually transpired that eventually resulted in what developed into the Roman Catholic Church. What we see starting here ultimately developed into the Catholic religion of the fourth century, which came to dominate the visible Church.

There were many different heretical movements that entered into the Church through the first century. One of these emerged, and by the time of the fourth century, with the political muscle of the Emperor Constantine, the brand of religion that had come to dominate in Rome was made the official religion. Everybody was expected to conform to that religion or they had to flee outside the bounds of the Roman Empire to avoid persecution.

Constantine saw the need, as he viewed it, to put the empire together with religion. He could see that nobody believed the old Roman religion any more. There was a need to have the unifying force of religion. He could see the vitality of the Christian religion. But there were different approaches and different variations to that, and he took the side of the bishop of Rome. He called a church council at Nicea and enforced on everyone that particular brand.

The books of John show us the beginnings of the heresies that gave rise to these events. It is a warning to us by way of example. The authority of John’s epistles and their authenticity are easily attested to from the earliest times in the area to which they were addressed—the Churches of Asia Minor. In the area of the Churches of Asia Minor, the books of I, II, III John and Revelation were never questioned; there’s never any question recorded in terms of the authenticity of these books.

Even Catholic historians preserved the writings of Polycarp, for instance, who was a disciple of the Apostle John and wrote in the 140s A.D. Polycarp was involved in a dispute with the bishop of Rome over the issue of Passover and the importance of observing the Holy Days. There are records that are preserved that date back to that time.

In those areas, there was never any question that John wrote these books and of their authority. The only places where we find the authority and the authenticity of these books questioned at early times was in Rome and perhaps in Alexandria, Egypt, and some of the areas that took their cue from Rome. The reason they were questioned was because there was an attempt to undermine them. It was an unsuccessful attempt. It was an attempt to undermine them because of the indictment that they contained. Because they were uncomfortable with the message, they sought to attack the messenger and to try to cast doubt on the credibility.

Jude wrote the book of Jude. Jude was the brother of James who wrote the book of James, which makes him also the half-brother of Jesus Christ. It was written about the same time that Peter wrote II Peter. Jude is a book that primarily warns about the advancing heresies of the day. It was evidently addressed to the same areas that James had addressed his Epistles. It was written to pretty much the same audience that James had written to. It was written a little later than James who had written in the latter 60s A.D. It was written after James' martyrdom, in a sense, as kind of a warning to those areas. Jude was written earlier than the Epistles of John, but there is a sequence that we have already gone through on James, Peter, John and Jude as to why that was the logical sequence. Even though John's works were written later, they were inserted between the writings of Peter and Jude because of the subject matter and the flow that it gave.

We pick it up in I John. We will notice some things as we go through the book of I John. One thing that ought to be readily apparent is that there are two basic themes that John stresses all through I John. One theme has to do with the importance of love, real and true love, toward God and toward neighbor. John stresses the subject of love and he also stresses the subject of keeping the Commandments. He stresses law and love. He stresses commandment keeping and love over and over and over. If you go through the book of John, you'll see he talks about this type of thing.

In I John 1, he starts out by discussing the subject of fellowship. Brethren, the basis of our fellowship in the Church is explained right here in I John 1:3. Sometimes we hear the term "disfellowship." That's a term that's used in the Bible. It refers to someone who is put out or excluded from the fellowship of the Church. Many times that term has been used, and we have not understood where it originates. Why do we use that term? It's the term the Bible uses. But why does the Bible use that term? Notice what we're told about fellowship and we'll understand if we make the connection.

I John 1:3, "that which we have seen and heard we declare to you, that you also may have fellowship with us; and truly our fellowship is with the Father and with His Son Jesus Christ." That is the basis of our fellowship, our communion and our close intimate family relationship. John is saying, 'The things that I know, I am going to tell you because I want us to have a close relationship with one another. I want us to have fellowship and a close communion. I want us to have a close intimate family relationship with one another.'

He goes on to say that close relationship, that fellowship that we have, is not simply with one another—that fellowship is with God the Father and with Jesus Christ.

Then he continues in v. 5, "This is the message which we have heard of Him and declare unto you. God is light and in Him is no darkness at all."

There are many places in the Bible where it talks about God's word being a lamp unto our feet, a light to our path (Psalm 119:105).

I John 1:5-7 talks about the analogy of light and darkness and that God is the source of light. Matthew 17:2 talks about how, in His glorified state, Jesus' face shone as the sun in its glory. It is that sense of light chasing out darkness.

Whoever came into this room first this evening flipped a light switch. Here was a room that was dark, and all of a sudden, light came on and filled the room; now everybody can see. If the light suddenly went off, we would have trouble seeing where we are. That's the analogy that is used to refer to this whole world. God is the source of light. His truth is light. It comes out from Him. There is no darkness, no spiritual darkness, in God. God is perfect. He is complete. His Word is truth (John 17:17).

I John 1:6, "If we say that we have fellowship with Him, and walk in darkness, we lie and do not practice the truth." The point is you can't run with the devil and walk with God.

Amos 3:3, "Can two walk together lest they be agreed?" If we have fellowship with God, that means we are where God is. We're walking with God, which means we agree with God. You can't have fellowship with God if you don't agree with Him.

That's why the devil doesn't have fellowship with God. Because the devil didn't agree, he was cast out of heaven. It talks about the angels that kept not their first estate.

Jude 6, "And the angels which kept not their first estate, but left their habitation...." They were cast down to the earth (Isaiah 14).

Jude 13, "...wondering stars to whom is reserved the blackness of darkness forever."

If you have fellowship with somebody, the basis of fellowship is because you have something in common; you are where they are.

In I John 1:6-7, John says that if we say that we're in fellowship with God, but our lives reflect darkness, then we're lying. We're not in fellowship with God unless we're dwelling in the light. God is in the light of His way, His truth. You can't be in close contact and fellowship with God, walking with God, have that relationship with God and be living like the world—living in spiritual darkness.

I John 1:7, "But if we walk in the light as He is in the light, we have fellowship with one another..." The basis of our fellowship with one another is, first and foremost, our fellowship with God and with Christ. We have fellowship with them when we're where they are—which is in the light. If we are outside the circle of light, if we're over here in the darkness, then we don't have fellowship with them. If we don't have fellowship with them, we don't have a basis for fellowship with one another. The basis of fellowship for the people of God is that we're in fellowship with God and with Christ.

When our actions take us outside of fellowship with God and Christ, it excludes us from any longer having a basis to fellowship with one another. That's what the term "disfellowship" means. It simply means "somebody who is removed from the fellowship." They are no longer in fellowship because they are no longer living like God's people live.

Look around. Most of you here wouldn't even know one another if it weren't for the truth of God. That's what brought most of us together. We represent a wide variety of backgrounds: different ages, different ethnic backgrounds, different educational backgrounds, different interests, different social backgrounds and different economic circumstances. Most of us would be total strangers to one another.

The thing that gives us what we have in common is the truth of God. If we weren't all in the Church, we wouldn't all be sitting here. We wouldn't know one another. We might not even like one another. We probably wouldn't have gotten to know one another well enough to know whether we liked one another or not. The basis of what brings us together is our relationship with God. We can't lay aside the relationship with God and expect to maintain the relationship and the rapport we have with one another. The reason we can be in agreement with one another is because we agree with God; when we cease agreeing with God, we no longer agree with the people of God.

Heresies were creeping in. There were various problems that were coming in. John is addressing the subject. John is laying a foundation and explaining what is the basis for true Christian fellowship. The basis is not some mistaken idea of love and that you tolerate all kinds of sins and heresies, where you kind of put up with everything. The very basis of Christian fellowship is, first and foremost, fellowship with God. That's the basis of our fellowship with one another. Mistaken ideas come in and sometimes people don't understand.

One person explained it, and I thought he put it very aptly. Years ago, back in the mid-70s when certain ones were seeking to water down various things and bring in all kinds of things, they kept talking about being open-minded. One minister finally pointed out that there was a vast difference between being open-minded and empty-headed. Some failed to see the difference.

This was a problem in the New Testament period. They failed to really see the difference. They confused love with toleration of sin and heresies. They allowed certain of these problems to grow and to fester; it was not dealt with in accordance with God's government and God's way. Because it was not dealt with in the way that it would have been dealt with at an earlier time, some of the problems grew to the point of what we see happened. John is explaining things and is setting the stage.

Then he continues and talks about forgiveness of sin. He talks about the fact that if we say we don't have sin, we are kidding ourselves (v. 8). We all have sinned and made mistakes. When we seek to excuse and justify ourselves, we're just kidding ourselves.

Verse 8, "If we say we have no sin we deceive ourselves, and the truth is not in us." When we justify and excuse ourselves, then we're not getting anywhere. That's not the way to get out from under guilt. The human way to get out from under guilt is to want to blame somebody else. People have an excuse.

Ever notice when things go wrong and some governmental investigative body starts calling all these people in. Everybody has an excuse; it's always somebody else's fault. The ideal thing is that somebody has died, then they can all blame it on him—he's not around to defend himself.

The guy that's dead can be the ideal scapegoat because you can't ask him any questions. This is human nature. People have been "passing the buck" ever since God asked Adam 'Why did you do it?' Adam "passed the buck" to Mrs. Adam. The whole human race took a lesson from that and has been doing it ever since. God wasn't impressed then and He's not any more impressed now. That's not the solution. How do you get out from under guilt? –The solution?

Verse 9, "If we confess our sins, He is faithful and just to forgive us our sins and to cleanse us from all unrighteousness." Not by making excuses and justifications and blaming others, but by confessing our sins, by facing the truth and admitting it. The way to get out from under guilt is to be forgiven, to have God clean us up. There's a way out from under guilt. We don't have to live under guilt. God holds out mercy, but mercy is contingent upon judgment. If we won't bring ourselves under judgment, God will have to.

I John 2:1, "My little children these things I wrote to you, that you may not sin..." John is telling us the importance of not sinning. John is stressing this because some of the heresies that were coming in were based on the idea that you don't have to keep the law—it's not necessary to really obey. They claimed that's what grace is all about and that the law is done away. Peter warned that certain ones were taking what Paul wrote and were twisting it out of context. Peter had warned them about that almost thirty years earlier. The process had continued and had grown so that some were taking things Paul had written about—how we are justified by faith—out of context and using that as though the law was done away.

I John 2:1-2, "...And if anyone sins, we have an Advocate with the Father, Jesus Christ the righteous. And He Himself is the propitiation for our sins, and not for ours only, but also for the whole world." John says, 'I am telling you not to sin, but if you do, we have an Advocate with the Father. Jesus Christ is the propitiation [payment] for our sins.'

Verses 3-6, "Now by this we do know that we know Him, if we keep His commandments. He who says, 'I know Him,' and does not keep His commandments, is a liar, and the truth is not in him. But whoever keeps His word; truly the love of God is perfected in him. By this we know that we are in Him. He who says he abides in Him ought himself also to walk just as He walked."

John is stressing over and over that we have to obey; we have to do what God says.

Verse 7, he says, 'I am not telling you something new. I'm telling you something that you've had from the beginning.'

Then he begins to stress the importance of loving one another.

Verses 9-10, "He who says he is in the light [if we say that we're obeying God], and hates his brother, is in darkness until now. He who loves his brother abides in the light, and there is no cause for stumbling in him." If we really love our brother, we're abiding in the light, and we're not going to be an occasion for stumbling. The word in the Greek is "scandal of stumbling." There is no scandal of stumbling in him; that is an important aspect. If we are really doing what we should do, our conduct is not going to be a scandal. We're not going to be involved in scandalous conduct—carousing around and escapades that cause a source of stumbling to others. We are going to be careful where we go and what we do.

He says in v. 12, "I write these things to you little children..." John is in his 90s when he is writing this. That's his perspective as he looked at the people in the Church.

In v. 13, he talks to fathers and to young men of the importance of obeying God and of overcoming the wicked one.

Verse 15, "Do not love the world or the things in the world. If anyone loves the world, the love of the Father is not in him." He addresses the subject of not loving the world. Don't be in love with this world. Don't be in love with this world's values, its ways or its set of priorities. He brings out that the world's set of values and God's set of values are totally different and distinct. You can't really love God and love the world at the same time.

He summarizes the value system of this world.

Verse 16, "For all that is in the world—the lust of the flesh, the lust of the eyes, and the pride of life—is not of the Father but is of the world." What it feels like, what it looks like and to what extent is it going to impress other people—this is the value system the world revolves around. That is something that is passing away, and if you focus on that, you are going to pass away with it.

Verse 17, "And the world is passing away, and the lust of it; but he who does the will of God abides forever."

Verse 18, he brings up the subject of antichrist. There are many antichrists. Antichrists are those who are against Christ or whose message is against Christ.

Verse 19, "They went out from us, but they were not of us; for if they had been of us, they would no doubt have continued with us..." Here are those who had been in fellowship with the Church who had gone out. They had left the fellowship of the congregations and were bringing in many of these heresies. They had separated themselves.

Verse 20, "But you have an unction [KJV, "anointing"] from the Holy One, and you know all things." What did he mean by that?

Verse 27, "And the anointing which you have received of Him abides in you and you need not that any man should teach you; but as the same anointing teaches you concerning all things..." The term "anointing" is talking about "the outpouring of God's Holy Spirit or the indwelling of God's Holy Spirit." "Unction from the Holy One" or "anointing from the Holy One" simply means "the receiving of God's Holy Spirit." "...the anointing which you have received from Him..."

When the ministry anoints you with oil, such as when we pray for someone's healing, the oil is a symbol. Olive oil is used in the Bible as symbolic of God's Holy Spirit. The physical anointing with oil is simply an outward symbol of the reality, which is the outpouring of God's Holy Spirit.

The audience to whom John was writing had an outpouring of God's Holy Spirit. God had given them His Spirit. They knew and understood these things.

In v. 27, he says this outpouring of the Spirit, "...which you have received of Him abides in you and you need not that any man teach you; but as the same anointing [or outpouring of the Spirit] teaches you all things, and is true..." What did he mean when he said, 'you don't need anybody to teach you?' What was John doing when he wrote this letter? Wasn't he instructing them?

The point is that the basis of the teachings of many of these heretics was a development of the mystery religion. The idea was: 'You couldn't understand the Bible; you don't need to study the Bible. We'll tell you what it means. You can't understand. You have to be initiated in the mysteries. It's all written in allegories, and it doesn't mean what it says.' That was the way they sought to do away with it. They claimed it didn't mean literally what it says; it was an allegory, an illustration. They claimed these physical stories were simply to illustrate a spiritual truth. They spiritualized away all of the literal accounts of everything that happened.

John is saying you don't need somebody else to come along and interpret. You have God's Holy Spirit and you can understand. The Bible isn't written in some way that a converted mind doesn't understand. That doesn't mean that there is not a need for a ministry or for teaching. But we don't tell you in the Church that you don't need to study the Bible—you can just take my word for what it means. Some of you may come out of a church where you were basically told that. We don't tell you that. Yes, you can understand it if you are yielded to God.

Psalm 111:10, "...A good understanding have all those that do His commandments..." If you are really acting on what God is teaching you, if you really act, obey and do what God says, you will grow in understanding. God's Spirit will lead you into a deeper understanding. John is stressing to them the opposite of what many of these heretics were telling them. That was what he is stressing right here.

I John 3:1, "Behold what manner of love that the Father has bestowed upon us that we should be called children of God..."

Verse 2, "...it does not yet appear what we shall be, but we know that when He shall appear we shall be like Him, for we shall see Him as He is." That's what we are going to be like in the resurrection. We are going to be like God. We are going to be like Jesus Christ. If you want to know what you are going to be like in the resurrection, study and see what God is like. We are His children, and it's not demonstrable yet. We don't see what we are going to be like in the resurrection, but we are going to be like Him.

Verse 4 is a very familiar scripture (KJV), "Whosoever commits sin transgresses also the law, for sin is the transgression of the law." That's what sin is! People will tell you the law is done away. Well, if the law is done away, so is sin.

John, again, is stressing in v. 5, "...He was manifested [talking about Christ], to take away our sin, and in Him is no sin."

Verse 6, "Whosoever abides in Him, does not sin..." If we are abiding in Christ, if we are letting Christ live His life in us, we are following Him and are not sinning because Christ didn't sin. To the extent that we are really walking with God, we are not going to sin either. When we sin, it's because we're not walking with God; we're not abiding with Christ.

Verse 7, “Little children, let no man deceive you, He that practices righteousness is righteous....” Why did John have to say something so self-evident? There were those who were saying that wasn’t necessarily so—you don’t really have to do anything. The Gnostics had really sought to kind of spiritualize away the statements in the Bible. Their teaching was that the Bible was written in some kind of unintelligible allegory that only those initiated into the mysteries could understand. Once you get people away from the Bible, then you can introduce all kinds of human tradition and custom and just go on from there. John makes it plain, “if you do righteousness, you are righteous.”

Verse 8, “He that commits sin is of the devil, for the devil sins from the beginning....” It’s a matter that Christ is righteous; if we are going to be righteous, we have to live like Him. The devil sins; if we are going to sin, we’re living like the devil. It’s our choice. It’s our choice between right and wrong, good and bad, God and the devil.

Verse 9, when the times comes that we’re ultimately born of God, we won’t sin at all because we are born of God.

Verse 10, “In this the children of God and the children of the devil are manifest: whosoever does not practice righteousness is not of God, nor is he that loves not his brother.” We demonstrate who our Father is by the way we act.

John stresses again in v. 11, “For this is the message that you have heard from the beginning, that we should love one another.”

I John 3:9 makes plain that when we are born of God, we can’t sin.

Verses 7-8 bring out that we still sin from time to time right now. So we are obviously not born of God yet. We are not yet born; we are begotten. God’s Spirit is in us.

Verse 2 says it does not yet appear what we shall be. We’re His sons. We’re begotten sons and we will be born. When He returns, we are going to be like Him. We are going to be changed, transformed—born again. We are going to be born a second time, not born of a literal human mother but born of the Spirit.

John 3:6, “That which is born of the flesh is flesh, and that which is born of the Spirit is spirit.” Right now we are flesh, but we shall be spirit.

John stresses the subject of love and the fact that we can’t be born into God’s Kingdom if we have enmity toward a brother.

Verses 14-16, “...He who does not love his brother abides in death. Whoever hates his brother is a murderer, and you know that no murderer has eternal life abiding in him. By this we know love, because He laid down His life for us. And we also ought to lay down our lives for the brethren.” We are to give, to help, to sacrifice. We are to give of ourselves and of our time. We are to give of our life. What is your life? Your life is composed of time. If we perceive and really grasp God’s love, we’re going to demonstrate that in our dealings. An evidence of not having God’s love is if we have this world’s goods, we see a brother in need and refuse to do what we could to help. You can’t say that’s really a manifestation of the love of God. If we are in a position to help someone and we just turn our back—if we don’t have a caring and compassionate attitude—that’s not God’s way.

Verse 18, “My little children let’s not love in word, neither in tongue, but in deed and in truth.” Certainly there is a matter of wisdom. Sometimes there may be factors where we need to get some counsel in terms of the best way to help someone. Sometimes a person is bringing a problem or problems on themselves and the best help is to let them learn a lesson. But we are to have an attitude of wanting to give, wanting to help, wanting to share—not to just stand by and have this attitude of selfishness. Not having this attitude of, ‘I am going to take care of me, and I don’t care what happens to you.’ We live in a world that is very much that way, a very self-centered world. People are going to take care of “number one” and not have a concern for helping others. We are instructed to love one another in deed and in truth.

John tells us in I John 3: 22, “...whatsoever we ask we receive of Him because we keep His commandments and do those things which are pleasing in His sight.”

We are going to look at two keys to answered prayers. One of the keys to answered prayers is obedience. Whatever we ask we receive because we keep His commandments and do the things that are pleasing to Him. We are obeying God.

The second key is given in I John 5:14, “Now this is the confidence that we have in Him that if we ask anything according to His will He hears us.” John mentions two keys to answered prayer: (1) obedience to God and (2) ask in accordance with God’s will.

I John 4:1, “...believe not every spirit, but test [try] the spirits whether they are of God; because many false prophets are gone out into the world.”

Again, he warns that not everybody is what they say they are. Because of all the problems that were extant, he was warning them to not think that everybody is what they say they are. He told them to try the spirits. He tells us how to do that.

Isaiah 8:20, “To the law and to the testimony! If they speak not according to this word, it is because there is no light in them.” If they speak not according to the law and the testimony, it’s because there’s no truth in them. He tells them to try the spirits. There are many false prophets.

I John 4:2, “By this you know the Spirit of God: Every spirit that confesses that Jesus Christ has come in the flesh is of God.” What did he mean by that?

Matthew 24:5, “Many are going to come in My name, saying, ‘I am Christ,’ and will deceive many.”

In Matthew 15:9, Christ talked about people worshipping Him in vain, teaching the doctrines of men.

In Matthew 7:21, He talked about those who would say, ‘Lord, Lord.’ But Jesus said, ‘not everyone who says unto Me, ‘Lord, Lord’ shall enter into the Kingdom, but he that does the will of My Father.’

So, what did John mean when he said, “Every spirit that confesses that Jesus Christ is come in the flesh is of God”? Part of the understanding comes from the most literal translation of v. 2; the tense of the verb “is come” in the Greek is the present progressive. Every spirit that confesses that Jesus Christ is coming (present progressive) is an evidence of God. That is the fact that the Spirit of God—the teaching of God’s Spirit, the confession, the admission, the acknowledgment that Jesus Christ comes into our flesh (into our life) to live His life in us—is coming in the present tense.

John 16:7, “Nevertheless I tell you the truth. It is to your advantage that I go away; for if I do not go away, the Helper will not come to you; but if I depart, I will send Him [It] to you.” Jesus described how He would send the Comforter and that it was expedient for us that He should go away. Jesus Christ comes into us.

In Philippians 2:5, the Apostle Paul tells us, “Let this mind be in you which was also in Christ Jesus.” Christ is coming to live His life in Christians through the Holy Spirit.

I John 4:12, “No one has seen God at any time. If we love one another, God abides [present progressive] in us, and His love has been perfected in us.”

Paul says in Galatians 2:20, “I am crucified with Christ, nevertheless I live, yet not I, but Christ lives in me; and the life which I now live in the flesh I live by faith in the Son of God, who loved me and gave Himself for me.” What I am doing, I am not simply doing on my own. It is Christ living in me because He is alive; He has been resurrected; He is at the right hand of the Father; and He is dwelling in me through the power of the Spirit of God to live His life in me. I have surrendered myself to Him to where He is my Lord and my Master. I am getting out of the way and letting Him live in me. John brings out that this is the test.

Satan always mixes a little truth in with his heresy. He has a variety of heresies, and each one will have maybe a little glimmer of truth. But one thing Satan is never going to stress is the fact that you have to let Christ live His life in you. That is what Satan does not want. The evidence of the true Spirit of God is the acknowledgment and the teaching that we have to yield ourselves for Christ to come into our flesh, to dwell in us and to live His life in us.

I John 4:4, “...He who is in you is greater than he who is in the world.”

Verse 6, “We are of God. He who knows God hears us; he who is not of God does not hear us. By this we know the spirit of truth and the spirit of error.” He is showing that there were those who were going to listen to what he had to say, and there were those who wouldn’t.

Verse 7, “Beloved, let us love one another, for love is of God...”

Verse 8, “...God is love...”

Verse 13, “By this we know that we abide in Him, and He in us, because He has given us of His Spirit.”

Verse 19, “We love Him because He first loved us.” That’s why we love God. We learn to love. God loved us first. He took the first step. Because God loves us, we learn to respond to that love. That’s the way a little child learns to love. A little child responds to his parents’ love. Little children who grow up in a house where there is no love grow up very stunted emotionally. They need to have that love demonstrated to them in order to learn to love and to respond to that love. We learn to love God because God first loved us.

Verse 18, “There is no fear in love; but perfect love casts out fear....” If we really grasp the depth of God’s love and God’s mercy, there is a confidence that we have.

Verse 20, we can’t love God and hate our brother. The love of God and the love of the brethren go hand in hand. If we love God, we need to love our brother also.

As we continue in I John 5:2-3, “By this we know that we love the children of God, when we love God and keep His commandments. For this is the love of God that we keep His commandments, and His commandments are not burdensome [KJV, “grievous”].” This is how the love of God is defined. The commandments tell us how to love God and how to love our brother. The first four commandments tell us how to love God; the last six commandments tell us how to love our brother. The love of God is not just a feeling or emotion. It’s not just this feeling in your heart somewhere. It is a way of living and an attitude.

I John 5:1, “Whosoever believes that Jesus is the Christ [the Messiah] [Now if you really believe that, you are going to act on it.] is born [the better rendering is “begotten”] of God, and everyone that loves Him who begat, loves him also who is begotten of Him.” The sense here is “begotten,” not “born.” If we really believe that Jesus is the Messiah, the Anointed of God, the coming Lord of lords and King of kings, then we are begotten children of God; we love God; and we love God’s children. You have to take what John said in its own context.

Verse 5 talks about overcoming the world.

Let’s notice something.

Verse 6, “This is He who came by water and blood—Jesus Christ; not only by water only, but by water and blood. And it is the Spirit who bears witness because the Spirit is truth.”

In vv. 7-8, you will find in the NKJ Bible and in many other translations a footnote for, “For there are three that bear record in heaven, the Father, the Word and the Holy Spirit, these three are one. And there are three that bear witness on earth....”

The footnote says, “NU, M omit the rest of v. 7 and through ‘on earth’ of v. 8, a passage found in only four or five very late manuscripts in Greek.”

Verses 7-8, “For there are three that bear record in heaven, the Father, the Word and the Holy Spirit, these three are one. And there are three that bear witness in earth: the Spirit, the water, and the blood; and these three agree as one.”

All of v. 7 and the words “and there are three that bear witness on earth” of v. 8 are words that don’t exist in any of the original Greek manuscripts. It’s not something that existed in any of the early Greek manuscripts. It first existed in the Latin version of the Bible (the Vulgate) when it was inserted in the Middle Ages. Any commentary will point that out.

The reason it’s in the KJ translation of the Bible is because the KJ translation was made from the Greek manuscript published by Erasmus of Rotterdam who flourished just prior to the beginning of the Protestant Reformation. He flourished right around the beginning period of the Protestant Reformation in the late 1400s. He published a Greek New Testament text. The first text that he published got him in “hot water” because the text that he produced did not have this verse in it, though this verse appeared in the Latin Vulgate, which was the only place that it appeared. It wasn’t in any of the Greek. This really drew the wrath of the church there in Europe when Erasmus published his text and he didn’t have this “proved” text to the trinity. Because there is no “proved text” to the trinity, this one had been inserted. It created quite a stir. In fact, Erasmus was threatened with his life. When they explained it to him that way, he kind of “saw the light.” So when he republished his text, he put in there what they told him to put when it came to this verse—which did not come out of any of the Greek manuscripts but simply came out of the Latin.

It is not something we have a monopoly on. If you check it out in any good commentary or scholarly Bible dictionary, they all admit that there isn’t any evidence that this was ever part of the original text. It was inserted into a Latin manuscript. It was translated from the Greek text published by Erasmus. The only problem with it was the fact that when the pressure got put on Erasmus, he decided discretion was the better part of valor; rather than have his head chopped off, he stuck in this fictitious verse that he was pressured to put in.

Verse 6 should read, “...And it is the spirit who bears witness, because the Spirit is truth.”

Verse 8, which would probably be v. 7, would read, “...and there are three that bear witness, the Spirit, the water and the blood [God’s Spirit, the water (baptism), and the blood (of Jesus Christ)]; these all agree in one.”

Verse 9, “If we receive the witness of men, the witness of God is greater, for this is the witness of God which He has testified of His Son.”

Verses 11-12, “And this is the testimony: that God has given to us eternal life, and this life is in His Son. He that has the Son has life; and he that has not the Son of God has not life.”

Verses 16-17, “If anyone sees his brother sinning a sin which does not lead to death, he will ask, and He will give him life for those who commit sin not leading to death. There is sin leading to death. I do not say that he should pray about that. All unrighteousness is sin, and there is sin not leading to death.” He describes the unpardonable sin and the fact that we can pray for a sin not leading to death.

Verse 19 (KJV), “We know that we are of God, and the whole world is under the rule of the wicked one.” (NKJV), “...the whole world lies under the sway of the wicked one.”

Verses 20-21, “And we know the Son of God is come, and has given us an understanding, that we may know Him that is true; and we are in Him that is true, even in His Son Jesus Christ. This is the true God and eternal life. Little children, keep yourselves from idols. Amen.” Already idolatrous objects of worship were beginning to come in. John concludes here.

Then we have the very short little book of II John addressed to the elect lady and her children (v. 1). There’s been a lot of speculation as to whom John meant by this.

In II John 4 after his greeting, he says, “I rejoice greatly that I found of your children walking in truth, as we have received a commandment from the Father.”

Verses 6-7, “This is love, that we walk according to His commandments. This is the commandment, that as you have heard from the beginning, you should walk in it. For many deceivers have gone out into the world who do not confess Jesus Christ as coming [or, “is coming”] in the flesh. This is a deceiver and an antichrist.”

There are many who say that Christ does not come to live His life in you. They say He did it all for you, and He is not coming (present progressive) to live His life in us. That it is not we who live, but Christ living in us. They say you don’t have to yield yourselves to Christ living in you. There are many deceivers that say that.

John continues in vv. 9-10, “Whosoever transgresses and does not abide in the doctrine of Christ does not have God. He who abides in the doctrine of Christ has both the Father and the Son. If anyone comes unto you and bring not this doctrine, receive him not into your house, nor greet him [KJV, “neither bid him Godspeed”].” John is warning them that there were false brethren. There were those who were sowing discord. There were those who were bringing in heresies. John said don’t have this distorted concept of love, to think that you just tolerate heresy and lawless actions. If somebody comes bringing you another doctrine, don’t invite him in, don’t wish him well, don’t help him out. If you do, you’re part of it.

Verse 12, “Having many things to write to you, I did not wish to do so with paper and ink....” He had some names to name and some specifics to say. God did not have some of those things written down in detail because, frankly, some of the very ones whose names John was going to name were the ones, in some cases, who wound up actually helping to preserve the Book. So God did not choose to have some of those things spelled out in that way. But John just mentions that there were specifics that he was going to explain in more detail when he would see them face-to-face.

III John 2, “Beloved, I pray that you may prosper in all things and be in good health, just as your soul prospers.” God desires good things for us. He desires that we may prosper and be in health physically in the same way that we might prosper and be in health spiritually. God’s first concern is for our spiritual well being, but He is concerned for our physical well being as well. God does desire good things for us.

Verse 4, “...I have no greater joy than to hear that my children walk in truth.”

As we continue, notice what John says—notice the state that the Church was getting into.

Verses 9-10, “I wrote unto the church but Diotrephes who loves to have the preeminence among them receives us not. Therefore, if I come, I will call to mind his deeds, which he does, prating against us with malicious words. And not content with that, he himself does not receive the brethren, and forbids those who wish to, putting them out of the church.”

When John wrote I John, he said, I John 2:19, “they have gone out from us, and they weren’t of us.” By the time he wrote III John, perhaps a couple of years later, the situation had progressed to the point that in some cases the heretics were literally taking over congregations and putting true Christians out. This was the situation that was becoming extant in the Roman world at the close of the first century A.D.

There were many heretical groups that acknowledged the name of Christ but did not practice the doctrine of Christ. There were a variety of different heresies that were extant. The truth was being undermined. John was bearing witness of the truth. He was, in a sense, laying emphasis on the things that needed to be emphasized in that context. That's why additional books needed to be written to the New Testament.

He says in v. 11, "Beloved, do not imitate what is evil, but what is good. He who practices good is of God, but he who practices evil has not seen God." He says don't follow that which is evil.

Verses 13-14, "I had many things to write, but I do not wish to write to you with pen and ink; but I hope to see you shortly, and we shall speak face to face...."

Then there is a somewhat unique situation. There is no "Amen." There are only three books in the New Testament that do not conclude with "Amen": the book of Acts, the book of James and the book of III John. "Amen" signifies completion and finality. The book of Acts does not have an "Amen" because there is not that note of finality. It is the acts or the actions of the apostles, but there is much that was not recorded. The rest of the story wasn't recorded.

There were reasons for that. There was information God did not choose to have preserved in the Scriptures for us. And yet He made it plain that, in a sense, you look elsewhere for the information because there is no "Amen" at the end of the book. The book of Acts ends and we don't have the actions of the rest of the twelve. We don't know where the twelve went after they disappeared from Judea. We don't know where they went. We are not told in the book of Acts where they went. We are told where Paul went, up until the end of his first Roman imprisonment.

When you look at the commission to the twelve, Jesus told them they were not sent to the Gentiles but to the lost sheep of the house of Israel (Matthew 10:5-6). Acts 9:15, Paul was told that his commission was to bear the name of Christ before the Gentiles, before kings and before the house of Israel. Those three were his commission and in that order. The book of Acts tells you the story of Paul going before the Gentiles and before kings. But the third part of Paul's commission to the lost sheep of the House of Israel is not recorded because God allowed the identity of Israel and where the twelve tribes went to be lost from view.

The story of the actions of the twelve and the story of Paul's final portion of his ministry is not recorded because it would have made plain where the tribes of Israel were at that time. The book of James is addressed to the twelve tribes scattered abroad. Normally, there would have been names and place-names given at the end of the book, saluting certain individuals. That information is left out because, again, it would have made plain where the twelve tribes had been scattered.

In III John, there were things and details that if John had written them, it would have clearly named names of actually some of the earliest Church fathers. It would have named some of the ones who were responsible for what has developed into the professing Christian Church. There was information that God simply did not allow. Some of the specifics God did not want recorded in that way; so it ends not entirely complete.

Let's notice, briefly, the book of Jude. Again, Jude is a short one-chapter book. Jude was written approximately the same time as II Peter or a little while earlier than that.

Verse 1, Jude was the brother of James.

Jude 3, "Beloved, while I was very diligence to write to you concerning our common salvation, I found it necessary to write to you exhorting you to contend earnestly for the faith which was once for all delivered to the saints." Here was Jude in the 60s A.D. telling the Church to earnestly contend for the faith once delivered because heresies had crept in. That's something that God wants us to be conscious of.

Verse 4, "For certain men have crept in unnoticed, who long ago were marked out for this condemnation, ungodly men, who turn the grace of our God into licentiousness and deny the only Lord God and our Lord Jesus Christ."

The situation at the time Jude wrote was that it was necessary to earnestly contend for the faith once delivered because there were heresies that were creeping in. There were certain men who had crept in who were turning the grace of God into lawlessness. Jude tells us that certain ones have crept in.

Paul said in II Thessalonians 2:7 that the mystery of iniquity was already at work in the 50s. Jude tells us in the 60s that certain men had crept in unawares and had sought to turn the grace of God into lawlessness—to do away with the law. John says in I John 2:19 that 'they had gone out from us because they were not of us.' By the time he wrote III John, he said they were taking over and were putting true Christians out of the Church. So this was a progression of the story of the incursion of heresies into the visible Church. Jude then reminds the Church of God's judgment and that God will deal with these things—He will deal with these individuals.

Verse 9, he talks about Moses showing proper respect.

Verse 11, "Woe to them! For they have gone in the way of Cain, have run greedily in the error of Balaam for profit and perished in the rebellion of Korah." The "way of Cain" was the way of "get" for self. The "error of Balaam for reward" was for profit. Balaam was willing to preach anything for a price. The "gainsaying of Korah"—Korah sought to usurp the priesthood for himself. We see this attitude of "get." We see the attitude that Balaam sought to introduce. Balaam introduced the attitude of compromise that would bring about the destruction of God's people. Korah sought to usurp the authority and the government that God had.

Verse 12, "These are spots in your love feasts, while they feast with you without fear..." Here they were pretending to be part of the Church. They were taking part in the feasting and things of this sort. They were feeding themselves without fear.

Verses 12-13, "...they are clouds without water, carried about by the winds; late autumn trees without fruit, twice dead, pulled up by the roots; raging waves of the sea, foaming up their own shame; wandering stars for whom is reserved the blackness of darkness forever."

Jude begins to illustrate the power behind the throne. This is descriptive of demon spirits who are really the power behind the throne. Jude then shows that Christ is going to come, and He is going to deal with these things, with these individuals.

Verse 16, "These are murmurers, complainers, walking according to their own lusts..."

Verses 18-19, "how they told you that there would be mockers in the last time who would walk according to their own ungodly lusts. These are sensual persons, who cause divisions, not having the Spirit." (RSV), "These be they who set up divisions, sensual, having not the Spirit."

We are told to look to Jesus Christ, to recognize that and to have our focus on what God is doing. Hopefully from some of this we begin to get a little bit of a focus as to the events that were going on in the latter part of the New Testament period. We see the events that were shaping up and the things that were developing that ultimately gave rise to a Church that, in the midst of history, disappears. And when the curtain is pulled back, what we see on the scene is not what we read of in the Gospels and Acts. We see a church using the name of Christ but not following His teachings. How did that occur? A lot of the understanding of that is given in I, II, III John and the book of Jude.

John lays great emphasis on the importance of love—love to God and love of the brethren. John lays emphasis on the fact that we are to love, but that you cannot separate love from obedience. Real love involves keeping the commandments. That is the basis of our relationship with God and our relationship with the brethren.

Jude warns of heresies. He warns of the necessity of earnestly contending for the faith once delivered. One thing that we ought to note is the tendency of human nature to run down. Throughout the Scriptures, from the beginning and all the way down, is the story of God's people. The tendency of human nature is toward compromise, toward watering down, toward letting down the barriers. It is toward blending in and being absorbed with the world around.

When you go through the story of Israel in the Old Testament, when you go through the story of the judges, the kings and all through the Old Testament, over and over again that was the problem. The tendency of human nature, the tendency of the people of God has always inevitably been to wear down. They get stirred up and are zealous for a short time, but then that begins to wear down. The tendency is to begin to compromise here and there, to begin to blend in, to begin to lose that distinction and that separate identity and to blend in with the world. That's kind of a summation, but when you go through the Old Testament and you find that cycle repeated over and over again.

It happened even in the context of the New Testament Church. When you read the seven stages through which the Church would pass, outlined in Revelation 2 and 3, we see that up and down, that up and down. That is the tendency.

And, brethren, we have to recognize that tendency in our own lives. It's not simply that it was the tendency of the ancient Israelites in the time of the judges or kings. It's not simply that was the tendency then, and we think how could those people in the early New Testament Church do things like that? How could they begin to drift away from the truth? They had heard it from the apostles. They had seen some of these things. They had gone through these things. How could that happen? It's not simply a matter of dead history. We look at it and we say, 'We don't see how those people could be so carnal.' Is that what we think of when we read the book of Numbers? Do we think, 'If I had been back there, I wouldn't have done anything like that. It would have been Moses and me. We would have been standing up there—three of us going into the Promised Land—Joshua, Caleb and me.' We just automatically think that. We assume we would have done it, and all the others wouldn't have.

We have to realize that this is here as a testimony and a witness to us. This is my tendency and this is yours. It is the tendency of human nature. The tendency of the people of God is to start out all fired up, begin to let down and eventually begin to water down, compromise and blend in. That goes along until something happens that kind of stirs things up and "lights the fire" again. The only trouble is that the last go-around, those who can be stirred up by nothing else are going to get stirred by the tribulation.

It's important that we read some of these things and realize that this is not simply a matter of history. It's not something that only God's people in the early New Testament period had to be warned of. They are not the only ones who had to be encouraged, stirred up, made conscious of loving and obeying God and loving the brethren. They were not the only ones warned of being separate from the world and contending for the faith once delivered. They are not the only ones warned of being zealous, maintaining that identity and that distinction as a peculiar people. It is something that applies to us.

We have to watch because the same things that came on them are there to come on us. The same tendencies of human nature have been repeated over and over. Hopefully, we study the Bible; we study these accounts, not simply from a standpoint of those long dead, but to realize that it also applies to each of us. If we're not careful, we will fall into the same trap because so many have had to contend with it. Those are the tendencies for all of us. But with God's help, we don't have to go that route. We can learn. We can apply and maintain through God's help that faithfulness to God and His way that God wants to characterize all of us as His people.

With that we will conclude the General Epistles this evening. When we start up Bible study again, we will begin a series on the Major Prophets. I think we will see that Isaiah, Jeremiah and Ezekiel have an awful lot to say about today's world news. They have a lot to say about the headlines of today and tomorrow and the weeks and months immediately ahead of us. That will be a timely subject, and I think we will get into that next time.

Major Prophets Series—Introduction

This evening we are going to get into the Major Prophets. We want to examine a little bit about who the major prophets were. We want to look at their place in the Scriptures, the roles that these individuals played, and the role that these books play in the Bible—and that they should play for us. We are going to look specifically at Isaiah, Jeremiah and Ezekiel. We are going to look at a little bit of background in each of these three books and perhaps gain some insight that can help us to understand a little more of what is involved. Then we will begin, step by step, through the book of Isaiah, then Jeremiah and Ezekiel. I have study questions that I will pass out at the end of the Bible study that will carry us through the first fourteen chapters of the book of Isaiah, which is what we will cover next time. As you can see, we will go through this in some detail.

To begin with, let's understand a little bit as to who were the prophets. The prophets served as God's spokesmen to His covenant people. God made a covenant with the ancient Israelites at Mount Sinai, which was based upon the covenant that He had made with their forefather Abraham several centuries earlier. God began to deal with the covenant people by sending His spokesmen, His messengers.

The sense of the word "prophet" was "one who proclaimed or announced." We think of prophecy as something being predicted—as simply concerned about the future. This is one aspect of prophecy. That is generally what we think of when we use the term, but the word for prophecy or prophet is used in a broader sense in the Bible. Some aspects that are referred to are certainly predictive and deal with future events. There are other aspects that deal simply with God's announcement, God's proclamation, and God's message to His people. The prophet was the one who announced or proclaimed. God's prophet announced or proclaimed God's message.

Samuel is reckoned as the first of the prophets. The term "prophet" began to be applied first to Samuel. This term came into vogue, into use, at the time of Samuel.

In I Samuel 9:9, we are told that, "(Formerly in Israel, when a man went to inquire of God, he spoke thus: 'Come, let us go to the seer'; for he who is now called a prophet was formerly called a seer.)" The term "prophet" is a broader term than "seer." "Seer" was restricted to "one whom God gave insight to see the future or to see what others did not see." The term "prophet" included the one to whom God gave that insight but it reflected, let's say, a larger role. The prophet came on the scene at a time when the priesthood began to deteriorate in terms of its faithfulness in fulfilling their function. Had they been faithful, the role of seer, spokesman or messenger from God was a role that would have been played by the high priest and those assisting him.

At this point, God began dealing with Samuel who was not of the high priestly line. Samuel was of the Levitical line but not of the high priestly line. He was not in line to become high priest, but God used him as a spokesman. The high priest of the family of Eli continued to hold that position. Because of the example they had set, God ceased to work through that hereditary line in the way that He had previously. While they functioned in an official and ceremonial capacity, God now began to raise up spokesmen and messengers, beginning with Samuel. With Samuel God began a prophetic succession. The term "prophet" came into vogue at the time of Samuel.

Samuel evidently established schools or colleges (using our modern term) for the training of the prophets.

This is mentioned in I Samuel 19:18, "So David fled and escaped, and went to Samuel at Ramah, and told him all that Saul had done to him. He and Samuel went and stayed in Naioth." "Naioth" means "schoolhouse" in Hebrew.

Verse 19, the word got back to Saul that David was there.

Verse 20, it describes a company of the prophets prophesying. Now the term "prophesying" is a term that can include a variety of things. It can in context (depending on the way it's used) describe everything from an inspired message to a song service that is particularly inspiring or inspirational. It can describe inspired preaching, the spirit of song service or a delivery of a message that has to do with future events. It can, depending on context, mean all of those things.

Verse 20, "Then Saul sent messengers to take David. And when they saw the group of prophets prophesying, and Samuel standing as leader over them, the Spirit of God came upon the messengers of Saul, and they also prophesied." In the context here, we have those who were of Samuel's school of the prophets there at what we call the schoolhouse. What it describes is this group who were having what we would term a “song fest” or something of that sort. They were going through, perhaps, what is included in the book of Psalms today. Samuel gathered about him a company of what were called “a company of the prophets” or “sons of the prophets.” It simply meant those who were students at his prophetic school.

These schools are mentioned at the time of Elijah and Elisha, about one hundred twenty years after Samuel’s death (II Kings 2). It describes Elijah having been responsible for three schools of the prophets: one at Gilgal (v. 1), one at Bethel (v. 3) and one at Jericho (v. 5).

In vv. 3 and 5, it describes the students as “sons of the prophets.” The term “sons of the prophets” is a term that simply refers to the students at the school that Elijah ran.

Evidently, Samuel was responsible for beginning the schools. It was the “Ambassador College” of the day. The schools were a means of teaching, a means of instruction. There was not, as in the priesthood, a direct hereditary father-son succession. Rather, the prophet filled the position or role because God called him and used him in that way, as a messenger or as a spokesman. There was generally a certain amount of training that was involved. All of those who were trained did not go on to be used in some significant fashion. The roles varied.

There are two basic categories of prophets: Those who were oral prophets and those who wrote down their prophetic message. The oral prophets had messages that pertained primarily to their own time, their own people, in their own day. Elijah and Elisha were primarily oral prophets. There isn’t a book of Elijah nor is there a book of Elisha.

We read of Nathan, the prophet in the time of King David. We read of various ones that are mentioned in passing in the Old Testament of whom there is very little record of what they said. We have an example more of what Elijah did than we do of what he said. Clearly the bulk of the message that those individuals were given by God pertained to their own day, their own people, and it pertained to that time. That’s why it was not recorded and preserved for us because the portions that pertained to us were recorded.

Primarily, the example that those individuals lived and set was the portion of their work that had the greatest relevance for us today. That’s why that’s what we have. We have far more of the story of what Elijah did than we have the story of what he said because the primary thrust and impact of his message was for people at that time. While what he did and the way he did it had a primary impact on the people at that day, it also set a pattern. His ministry set a pattern that would characterize the ministry that prepared the way for Jesus Christ. John the Baptist did that prior to the first coming of Jesus Christ.

There is an Elijah work to prepare the way for the second coming of Jesus Christ. Elijah’s work and ministry set a pattern that would be noted, let’s say, in preparing the way for the Messiah. The message Elijah delivered was not what we think of as a prophetic message in the sense that the books of Daniel, Revelation, Isaiah, Ezekiel, Hosea, Malachi, or whatever have as far as relevance to us today. The oral prophets were messengers of God, but the primary thrust of their message was a relevance to the audience to whom it was delivered.

Now, on the other hand, we have the written prophets. The books of the Major and Minor Prophets in our Bible are clearly written prophets. The thrust of their message was not primarily for their time. They delivered messages that were relevant for their time, but God gave them a revelation that had more significant for us today than it had for the people of twenty-five hundred years ago. Their message was written down, and not only was it written down, it was preserved. There is an enduring significance not simply to the messenger or to the work that the messenger did, but there is an enduring significance to the message itself—the message that was delivered. As I have mentioned, the term “prophet” in the original use of the term was viewed not so much as a foreteller of events, but as “a bearer of God’s message.”

We use the terms “Major” and “Minor” Prophets. It is important that we understand the difference. The terms “Major” and “Minor” as applied to the prophets was not an attempt to catalog their worth or their value. It does not catalog the importance of the message, as saying that Isaiah’s message was more important than Malachi’s or Jeremiah’s was more important than Hosea or Haggai. That’s not what the terms mean. It is simply a reference to length. There is a vast difference between Isaiah, Jeremiah and Ezekiel in terms of the length, as compared with the twelve minor prophets of Hosea through Malachi. So the terms “Major” and “Minor” have been used relative to the size of the book.

Isaiah, Jeremiah and Ezekiel are the ones who are recognized or have been considered as the Major Prophets. Their books are arranged for us in the order that these three men began their prophetic ministry. That's the reason why we have it that way. Why isn't it Ezekiel, Isaiah and Jeremiah or some other arrangement? Well, generally there is either the subject matter that is the basis of arrangement or it is simply arranged chronologically.

Isaiah began to prophesy at an earlier time. The beginning of Isaiah's ministry was prior to the time that northern Israel went into captivity, which was in the late 700s B.C.—what would be termed the late eighth century. His ministry was a very lengthy ministry. He lived up until a ripe old age. He prophesied many years.

Jeremiah's ministry, in the same way, was a lengthy ministry. It began much later than Isaiah. Jeremiah began his ministry a couple of decades prior to the time that Judah began to go into captivity. In other words, he began his ministry a good one hundred years or more later than Isaiah did.

Ezekiel's ministry overlapped with Jeremiah's but it began perhaps thirty to thirty-five years later than Jeremiah's began. Jeremiah's was a rather lengthy ministry. Ezekiel's was a fairly short ministry. We will go through and we will note, in a few moments, the similarities and the differences between each of these books.

Isaiah is where we start. Isaiah began his writings in the last year of King Uzziah or in 732 B.C.

This is dated by Isaiah 6:1, "In the year that King Uzziah died I saw the Eternal sitting on a throne, high and lifted up, and the train of His robe filled the temple." Isaiah described his calling. This is descriptive of the beginning of his ministry, of his calling.

Verse 5, he sees this vision of God; he is awestruck and overcome by a sense of his own unworthiness. Obviously, any time we really see and grasp the glory and the grandeur of God, we should correspondingly be struck with a sense of our own inadequacies.

That's what's meant by the term Jesus said in Matthew 5:3, "Blessed are the poor in spirit." The "poor in spirit" are those who recognize their own lack of spiritual self-sufficiency. They recognize how much they need what God has to offer. They are not as the Pharisee was when he and the Publican went out to pray. You remember the story Jesus told.

Luke 18:10-13, the Pharisee lifted up his eyes and said, 'Lord, I thank you that I'm not as other men are. I am this wonderful person. I'm glad you noticed me because I really deserve it.' This was the sense of it. His perspective on life was a total contrast to the Publican who recognized his own unworthiness.

When we get it in proper perspective, we recognize that none of us is worthy of God's mercy. God extends His mercy and His love, but it's not because He looked down and was so impressed with us that He thought 'I have to do something special for that fellow. I've never seen anybody that great. I'm really impressed with him (or her).'

Isaiah clearly did not have that perspective on life. He was impressed when God revealed Himself in this vision.

Isaiah said in Isaiah 6:5, "...'Woe is me, for I am undone! Because I am a man of unclean lips, and I dwell in the midst of a people of unclean lips...'” 'I am not holy enough to see. I do not deserve this. I'm not worthy of a revelation like this.'

In the vision described in Isaiah 6:6-7, an angel took a coal off the altar of incense, came and touched it to Isaiah's lips, and he was symbolically purified.

Verse 8, God said, 'I need somebody to do a job', and Isaiah said, 'Here I am! Send me.' It was recognition of what God could do through him. We have the description in Isaiah 6 of what was clearly the beginning of Isaiah's ministry. It dates it to the last year of King Uzziah.

The first five chapters of Isaiah set the stage for the message of Isaiah. The book of Isaiah was not a diary that Isaiah kept. He didn't just start writing this on the first day, and the second day he wrote—and the book just kind of goes through in the order of his life. That's not the case. There is more of a message content. The first five chapters kind of set the stage and introduce the book in terms of subject matter. Chapter 6 then picks up the story at the beginning by showing us how Isaiah began his ministry. Then the theme continues on.

We are told in Isaiah 1:1, "The vision of Isaiah, the son of Amoz which he saw concerning Judah and Jerusalem, in the days of Uzziah, Ahaz, and Hezekiah, kings of Judah." We are told in chapter 6:1 that this began in the last year of Uzziah—which was 732 B.C. This is about ten years before the Assyrian invasion of northern Israel. Isaiah's message was a message that utilized the events that were happening in his time, the things that Judah and Israel went through in his day, but the primary thrust of the book of Isaiah is for the last days. We are told in Isaiah 2:2, “Now it shall come to pass in the last days....” The emphasis, you see, is a message for the last days—“in the last days” or “in that day.” Isaiah 1:1 is a message concerning Judah and Jerusalem. Now at one time when the whole nation was united, Jerusalem was the capital city, not only of Judah, but the capital of the whole nation. When all the twelve tribes were united as one nation, Jerusalem was the combined capital. Jerusalem is used symbolically to describe the entirety of Israel. It refers symbolically to all of Israel. The book of Isaiah is very clear—there are specific references to the house of Israel, as well as of the men of Judah.

For instance in Isaiah 5:7, “For the vineyard of the Lord of hosts is the house of Israel and the men of Judah are His pleasant plant...” It is clear that there is a distinction between the house of Israel and the house of Judah. The term “Jerusalem” is used symbolically. Many of the things that were going on in Judah were used symbolically to refer to all of Israel. But at the time Isaiah began to write, there were two totally separate nations of Israel and Judah.

Israel went into captivity beginning about ten years after Isaiah began his ministry, but the deportation of the Israelites took place over the next couple of decades or so. They didn’t have the cattle cars and the railroad trains available to them to herd the people and ship them out, but they were pretty efficient. It took a little longer, and they had to rely on the methods they had available. So the depopulation of Northern Israel actually took place for a little over two decades. Isaiah’s ministry went through this period of time.

We don’t have any information in the book of Isaiah about the end of Isaiah’s life, but according to Jewish tradition, he was sawn asunder by order of the wicked King Manasseh during the first year of his reign. Manasseh, the son of Hezekiah, was the most wicked king that Judah ever had. There is a reference in Hebrew 11:37 to the men and women of faith. It mentions the tribulations endured by some, describes the fate of certain ones and mentions “sawn asunder.” There is no place in the Old Testament where it specifically describes that martyrdom. However, there is a Jewish tradition that says that was the fate of Isaiah during the first year of Manasseh’s reign.

Isaiah’s ministry began in 732 B.C. (the last year of Uzziah) and continued down to the end of the lifetime of King Hezekiah, which would bring it down to 686 B.C. We’re looking at a forty-five to fifty-year period of his prophetic ministry. It was a lengthy ministry. He started out as a relatively young man, and he was clearly in advanced years at the end of his ministry.

We’re not told a lot about Isaiah’s background. In Isaiah 1:1, we are told that he was the son of Amoz. According to the Soncino commentary (a Jewish commentary on the Old Testament), Amoz was the brother of Judah’s King Amaziah. This would mean that Isaiah was a cousin of the royal line of the kings, and this connection would explain the ease with which Isaiah had continual access to the kings of Judah.

Let’s look at the authorship of the book of Isaiah. If you want to look in any of the commentaries, particularly any of the more modern commentaries, you will find that the question of the authorship of Isaiah has been greatly disputed by all of the modern critics. Most modern critics claim that only the first thirty-nine chapters of Isaiah were written by Isaiah; the rest were written by one whom they called “Deutro-Isaiah,” which means “the second Isaiah.” There are some who even postulate a “Trito-Isaiah”; they think there were “three who wrote Isaiah.”

There is a very important reason why the critics divide the book of Isaiah and why some say part of it was written by Isaiah and part of it was written quite a bit later by another man who claimed to be Isaiah. There’s a real problem that they have with the latter part of the book of Isaiah, and that is because of how specific certain prophecies were. The real problem that the critics have is with the idea that there is a God who steps into history and literally inspires His servants—a God who reveals the future because He determines and He governs in the affairs of men (Daniel 4:32). So, any time you get into something that is clearly prophetic, the critics always want to say that it really wasn’t prophetic, that it was written after the fact.

One of the problems they run into is a message recorded in Isaiah 44 and 45.

Isaiah 44:23-28, “Sing, O heavens, for the Lord has done it! Shout you lower parts of the earth; break forth into singing, you mountains, O forest, and every tree in it! For the Lord had redeemed Jacob and glorified Himself in Israel. Thus says the Lord, your Redeemer, and He who formed you from the womb: I am the Lord, who makes all things, who stretches out the heavens all alone, who spreads abroad the earth by Myself; who frustrates the signs of the babblers, and drives diviners mad; who turns wise men backward, and makes their knowledge foolishness; who confirms the word of His servant, and performs the counsel of His messengers; who says to Jerusalem, 'You shall be inhabited,' to the cities of Judah, 'You shall be built,' and I will raise up her waste places; who says to the deep, 'Be dry! And I will dry up your rivers;' Who says of Cyrus, 'He is My shepherd, and he shall perform all My pleasure,' even saying to Jerusalem, 'You shall be built,' and to the temple, 'Your foundation shall be laid.'"

Isaiah 45:1-5, "Thus says the Lord to His anointed, to Cyrus, whose right hand I have held—to subdue nations before him and loose the armor of kings, to open before him the double doors, so that the gates will not be shut; 'I will go before you and make the crooked places straight; I will break in pieces the gates of bronze and cut the bars of iron. I will give you the treasures of darkness and hidden riches of secret places. That you may know that I, the Lord, who call you by your name, am the God of Israel. For Jacob My servant's sake, and Israel My elect, I have even called you by your name; I have named you, though you have not known Me. I am the Lord, and there is no other; there is no God besides Me. I will gird you, though you have not known Me.'"

God is naming, by name, Cyrus who God was going to raise up to do a job to free the Jews from Babylonian captivity and to allow them to return and rebuild Jerusalem. At the time the book of Isaiah was written, the Jews hadn't even gone into captivity, much less Cyrus coming along. Isaiah died one hundred fifty years before Cyrus ever conquered Babylon. Cyrus wasn't even "a gleam in his father's eye" when Isaiah wrote Isaiah 44 and 45.

This really bothers the critics. They say, clearly Isaiah 44 and 45 weren't written by Isaiah because that would mean that this man was known by name years before he was ever born, and that's impossible! Why is it impossible? It said right in the context that God said, 'Look, I'm God; I call things that are not as though they were' (45:5).

Let's look at the problem of somebody else having written part of the book of Isaiah. According to their teaching, this last part of the book of Isaiah could not have been written until after the Jews returned from exile in Babylon because the fulfillment of some of these things described what happened after the Persians had conquered Babylon. Now, what's the problem with that? What is the likelihood of being able to add in something like that? When you're looking at something that was considered a part of Scripture, you're looking at what was considered the basic law of the land.

What do you think would be the likelihood of getting in and forging something on the end of the Bill of Rights and being able to fool everybody to think there are not ten amendments, but thirteen, to the Bill of Rights—amendments kind of written there in the margin, saying this is a part of it. That's ludicrous! There are too many copies and it's too well known. If you tried to tack on the bottom and claim that this was part of the original, that's silly! You'd never pull off a fraud like that because it's too well known.

Here you are looking at something that there was no way a fraud like that could be pulled off. Here was a book that had been accepted and established as a part of Scripture for many, many years. How can you come along and tack something on the end of it and claim it's been there all along? How can you pull off a fraud like that?

The only reason for objecting to it is the fact that the critics object to God. They object to the fact that there is a God in heaven who declares the end from the beginning (Isaiah 46:10). As a result, they reject all prophecy. They reject anything that smacks of God's intervention in the affairs of man. They say, 'Well, there are certain differences in style or differences of language of some chapters at the end of Isaiah, as opposed to the beginning.'

Isaiah's ministry spanned forty-five years. The message that he gave was the same. But, obviously, in a period of forty-five years, from a young man to an old man, depending on what he's writing about, certain styles changed. Just the fact of the passing of years, there may be certain stylistic changes.

You can look at things that Mr. Herbert Armstrong wrote. If you have a copy of something he wrote in the 40s and compare it with something he wrote in the 80s, while the message and the thrust is the same, you may notice certain differences in terms of style of presentation. You may notice that there were periods, let's say earlier on, when some of his style of writing had emphasis of punctuation, capitalization or things like that which reflected a lot more of his early advertising training. And as the years progressed, some things that he wrote in later life did not reflect that exact same style of writing. There were certain changes that took place. The message was the same, but you can have differences just over a period of time.

When you look at something you wrote years ago and then look at something you would write today, there are differences. I can look back at things that I wrote twenty years ago, and I don't think I would write it exactly the same today. I'm not saying that I wouldn't come to the same conclusion. A paper I wrote in college, I don't think I would express it exactly the same way today. I like to think I would express it a little better, but that may be an open question.

The point is that as the years go by, it is natural and normal that there are going to be certain stylistic variations. That doesn't disprove the same person wrote it. We are looking at a forty-to fifty-year time period. By the book's own claim, we would normally expect that there's going to be certain variations in terms of style over that long a period of time—plus the fact that the style of writing is going to vary somewhat with the subject matter that is being addressed. That's normal and natural also.

Isaiah 46:10 makes plain that this portion of Isaiah is intended as a prophecy, “Declaring the end from the beginning, and from ancient times the things that are not yet done, saying, ‘My counsel shall stand and I will do all My pleasure.’”

Verses 9-10, “Remember the former things of old, for I am God, and there is no other; I am God, and there is none like Me, declaring the end from the beginning...” How do you think you can write something like this and tack it on to the end of a book that people have been familiar with. Then you say, ‘This is prophetic here. Look at how amazing this prophecy is,’ when it is talking about an event that happened fifteen years ago. How do you plot out something like that if it doesn't make sense?

In fact, it's interesting because you see, Isaiah is probably one of the books of the Old Testament that the critics dispute the most in terms of its authorship. Yet Isaiah is referred to probably more than any other one prophet in the New Testament. Isaiah is quoted by name twenty-one times in the New Testament. Isaiah is quoted ten times from the first portion of Isaiah and eleven times from the last portion. So it is well divided.

There are four specific instances where Jesus Christ Himself quotes the prophecy and says Isaiah wrote it. Now, if anybody ought to know, Jesus ought to know, and He thought Isaiah wrote it. And if Jesus thought Isaiah wrote it,

Paul thought Isaiah wrote it, Peter thought he did and John and James thought he wrote it, I kind of figure that they may have known a little more about who wrote it than some character that thinks he is the world's greatest expert here in the last few years. Isaiah is referred to by name twenty-one times, and his prophecies are referred to eighty-five times in the New Testament. Isaiah is the most heavily quoted Old Testament prophet in the New Testament.

It's interesting that God bore extra witness of the one the critics want to dispute the most. It's like God just kind of “rubbed their face in it” by saying, ‘You are going to have to dispute not only Isaiah, but you are going to have to dispute everything that came afterwards.’

Isaiah's name means “God is salvation” and that seems to be the main theme of the book. The book of Isaiah has a lot of prophecies dealing with the Messiah. Many of the most striking prophecies of Tomorrow's World are there in the book of Isaiah. The book of Isaiah contains the most graphic prophecies of the coming of Jesus Christ, the promise of the Messiah, the prophecy that Christ would be born of a virgin, the prophecy that He would give His life as a ransom and of His scourging. All of these things are prophesied in the book of Isaiah, as well as the prophecies of Tomorrow's World, the prophecies that He would come as King of kings and Lord of lords. The book of Isaiah is filled with a lot of prophecies that really focus our attention on the fact that God is the only salvation; that's really the meaning of the name Isaiah, “God is salvation.” That's what Isaiah's message focuses on. Over and over it focuses on showing us why we need God's salvation and what we need God to save us from.

Part of the book of Isaiah is an indictment, but the other part of it is the good news that lies ahead. You have the indictment, the consequences of the indictment and the long-term results of salvation that God brings about. This is the thrust of Isaiah.

Jeremiah began his ministry, as I mentioned, a couple of decades prior to the time that Judah began to go into captivity. Jeremiah began his ministry one hundred years or more later than Isaiah did.

Jeremiah 1:1-2, he began his ministry during the thirteenth year of King Josiah, which would date it to 625 B.C., and about sixty years after the death of Isaiah. Jeremiah began his prophetic ministry when he was quite young; tradition says he was seventeen. Notice Jeremiah's response when God told him he was being ordained a prophet.

Jeremiah 1:5-6, “Before I formed you in the womb I knew you; before you were born I sanctified you; and I ordained you a prophet unto the nations. Then said I: “Ah, Lord God! Behold, I cannot speak, for I am a youth.””

I would like to note a couple of things about Jeremiah and why God used someone this young. Jeremiah began his ministry during the thirteenth year of King Josiah. Josiah, during his thirteenth year, would have only been twenty-one years old himself.

In II Chronicles 34:1-3, we are told Josiah began to really seek God when he was sixteen. His thirteenth year would have been when he was twenty-one years old. This is when he really began to institute his reforms. Even though Jeremiah was quite young, he would have been close to the same age or perhaps four years younger than Josiah.

Jeremiah 1:1, Jeremiah’s father was Hilkiah, the high priest who was responsible for serving as the guardian of the young King Josiah during his growing up years. Hilkiah was responsible for a lot of the teaching and training that Josiah had. Jeremiah, the son of Hilkiah the priest, would have sort of grown up with Josiah. Here was a young king, and God then began to work through Jeremiah when he was quite a young man. Jewish tradition says he was age seventeen, and that would certainly be in line with the statement of v. 6.

I want to point out that so many times the concept that we have of prophets is an elderly man with a long gray beard leaning on a staff. I think all of us, at some time, have that concept. I think a lot of times our young people kind of have the idea that God’s prophets were all elderly men with long gray beards, kind of leaning on their staff because that was the only way they could get around. There were some of God’s prophets that continued to function well on up into their later years, and certainly some of God’s prophets reached a very elderly age. But the point is that some of God’s prophets were very young, some of them were middle age and some of them were elderly. Even some of God’s prophets who may have functioned well on into their latter years began to be servants of God when they were very young.

In other words, you don’t have to be old to be a servant of God, and you don’t have to be young. You can be a servant of God at any age. You can be a servant of God as a teenager, a young adult, middle-aged adult or as an elderly person. And I think it’s important for us to understand that, in a sense, there are role models and servants of God in every stage of life. Whatever stage of life we find ourselves, some of God’s servants were also at that point. The idea young people by default have to be out being little hellions and “sowing their wild oats” is not always the case. There is an alternative. That’s not what Jeremiah was doing when he was that age. That’s not what Josiah was doing at that age.

It’s interesting that Josiah was one of the most remarkable kings in all the history of Judah. The reforms he carried out were some of the most thorough going. He exemplified all of the zeal and the idealism of youth. God has worked through young people, just as He has worked through older people. Jeremiah started out as a very young prophet, and instead of a long gray beard, he may not have even had a beard at all. He continued his ministry for a number of years, and in the latter period of the book, in the latter period of his prophecy, he was a very elderly man. He had served God for many, many years. He had served God very faithfully over an extended period of time.

Josiah came to the throne at a very crucial time in the history of Judah. The wicked King Manasseh had ruled for a long period of time. Things had really gotten in a mess. It was at the point that God was ready to remove Judah. The only thing that stood between Judah and captivity was a zealous young king by the name of Josiah. God was so impressed by the zeal of Josiah that He made the promise that He would protect Judah as long as Josiah lived. When Josiah died, “the show was just about over.” God ceased protecting Judah. He allowed the nation to reap the consequences of what it had sown. But it shows, in a sense, what difference one person can make. In the case of Josiah, God looked at his attitude. He looked at his zeal. God looked at what Josiah did, and He took note of it. God honored Josiah’s obedience and zeal and spared the nation during his lifetime.

The reforms of Josiah are recorded in great detail in II Chronicles 34 and 35. We won’t go into them at this time, but Josiah had been greatly influenced by the priest Hilkiah who was the father of Jeremiah. Hilkiah presided over the priestly part of the reforms launched by King Josiah; Josiah, in turn, was spurred on by Jeremiah. These two young men grew into early adulthood, undoubtedly having known each other and spending time together as boys when Jeremiah's father was the guardian of the young king. In many ways, the boys would have spent time together, kind of growing up together. This was an example of two young people who were a very positive influence on one another and who brought out the best in one another. They made a remarkable combination.

Jeremiah's name means "the Eternal establishes" or "the Eternal founds." This is very directly tied in with the commission that God gave to Jeremiah. The commission that is recorded in Jeremiah 1:10, "'See, I have set you this day over the nations and over the kingdoms, to root out, to pull down and to destroy, and to throw down, to build and to plant.'" We are going to see, when we get to the book of Jeremiah, the remarkable aspect of Jeremiah's prophecy. Because, you see, a very remarkable event occurred during Jeremiah's lifetime.

The beginning of his lifetime was marked by the reign of King Josiah—a righteous king—the last righteous king of Judah. The man for whom, in a sense, God spared the nation for a period of time. But in the aftermath of Josiah's death (within a matter of a few years), the Babylonians invaded and Jerusalem was taken in 604 B.C. Over the next seventeen or eighteen years, the Babylonians dominated until finally Nebuchadnezzar came, completely destroyed Jerusalem and destroyed the temple in 587 B.C. He burned the temple to the ground and took all the rest of the Jews that were left. He had taken a small group to Babylon in 604 B.C. He had come back, and this time he burned the city and burned the temple. First he looted it of the things of value; then he burned the temple and the city and finally took everybody to Babylon. He killed the last king, Zedekiah.

Now, if you remember, God had made a promise to David.

In I Kings 2:4, He said, 'There will never want a man to sit upon your throne.'

I Kings 9:5, "'then I will establish the throne of your kingdom over Israel forever, as I promised David your father, saying, 'You shall not fail to have a man on the throne of Israel.''"

Here, during the lifetime of Jeremiah, outwardly, visibly, as it would appear, that throne ceased. God preserved it when the ten tribes rebelled against the house of Solomon (I Kings 12). God established and continued that throne in Jerusalem reigning over Judah. But here was Judah gone into captivity, and here was the last king killed. Did God's promise fail? No, because when we look at the book of Jeremiah and when we look at his contemporary Ezekiel, we will see the role that Jeremiah played in transferring the throne of David from Jerusalem to the location that it was set. If you want to be specific, it was actually transferred from Jerusalem to Tara, Ireland.

You've heard of Tara, the famous plantation in the movie "Gone with the Wind." Well, it takes its name from the ancient capital of Ireland. That was the location of the ancient high kings of Ireland, at Tara. Then it was later transferred from Tara, Ireland to Scone, Scotland. That's where the term "stone of scone" comes from because it was later transferred from Scone, Scotland down to London, England. It was overturned three times: once, to Ireland; the second time, to Scotland; and the third time, to England. We will notice some of that when we go through the book of Jeremiah.

Jeremiah 1:10, Jeremiah was set over nations and over kingdoms. He was set to root out, to pull down, to destroy and throw down. But he was also set to build and to plant. We are going to see what Jeremiah rooted out, pulled down, destroyed and threw down, and what he built and what he planted. It is a remarkable story.

Jeremiah 1:1, Jeremiah was born in the priestly city of Anathoth, which is a short distance from Jerusalem. He was born near the end of the reign of the wicked King Manasseh.

The period of Manasseh's reign was a period void of an active prophet, though evidently, there were some like Jeremiah's father Hilkiah who continued to maintain the truth privately. The temple, of course, was closed during most of those years, and there wasn't an active prophetic ministry. Manasseh, evidently, put Isaiah to death at the beginning of Jeremiah's reign, and there wasn't an active, prophetic ministry that was done openly.

But the truth was maintained privately, and Jeremiah was the next significant prophet raised up. Jeremiah took an active part in helping King Josiah launch his reform movement. Throughout the book of Jeremiah, Jeremiah warns against the rampant sins of the people: adultery, idolatry, violence and oppression.

Now, with the death of Josiah, Jeremiah composed the book of Lamentations. It was a lament for King Josiah—the last righteous king of Judah—but it was also a lament for the nation because the prophecy had been made that God would protect the nation of Judah as long as Josiah lived. The obvious implication of that is, when Josiah dies, you had better watch out. And that's what happened. It was a lament, not simply for the death of this righteous king, but for the captivity that was going to come upon this sinful nation.

The calamities that came upon ancient Judah in Jerusalem by the Babylonians in 587 B.C. (prophesied in the book of Lamentations) were, in a sense, duplicated again centuries later in 70 A.D. when the Romans came in, destroyed Jerusalem and destroyed the second temple. Both of those destructions of Jerusalem and the temple were simply a type of the Great Tribulation, which is to come. Jesus said in Matthew 24:21 that is going to be a time of trouble such as has not been since the world began. Clearly, Jesus makes it plain in Matthew 24 that the events that happened to Jerusalem and the temple in 70 A.D. were a type of the end-time events that were going to happen to His people.

Lamentations becomes a very prophetic book of the great tribulation—of the destruction and end-time captivity. We are not going to go through Lamentations at this time, but we will pick it up a little later in the proper sequence. We need to understand that Jeremiah wrote it, and he wrote it in the context of King Josiah's death.

Jeremiah's message of captivity and destruction for his nation brought him into great reproach from the kings that came after Josiah. It brought him great reproach from the royal court and from the citizens of Judah because people don't like to hear the truth when the truth is unpleasant; Jeremiah told it the way it was.

Jeremiah was an older contemporary of Ezekiel and Daniel. He corresponded with Daniel. There's direct reference to that in Daniel 9.

Daniel 9:1-2, "In the first year of Darius the son of Ahasuerus of the seed of the Medes, who was made king over the realm of the Chaldeans. In the first year of his reign, I Daniel, understood by books [the margin rendering it "understood by letters"], the number of the years specified by the word of the Lord, given to Jeremiah the prophet, that he would accomplish seventy years in the desolations of Jerusalem." Daniel came to understand, as a result of correspondence, what this seventy-year prophecy Jeremiah had made was all about. Evidently, the question had been, 'What was the full significance of it, and when did it begin?'

Jeremiah 25:11-12 was a prophecy that Jeremiah made of a seventy-year captivity on Judah.

Ezekiel flourished at a little later time. Ezekiel, we are going to see, went captive with the second invasion of Nebuchadnezzar in 596 B.C.

Jeremiah continued to prophesy in Jerusalem through this period of time.

Let's notice Jeremiah 29:1, "Now these are the words of the letter that Jeremiah the prophet sent from Jerusalem to the remainder of the elders who were carried away captive—to the priests, the prophets, and all the people whom Nebuchadnezzar had carried away captive from Jerusalem to Babylon." See, Jeremiah wrote a letter to the ones that Nebuchadnezzar had carried away captive. This group would have included Daniel and Ezekiel.

Jeremiah 29:10, "For thus says the Eternal: after seventy years are complete at Babylon, I will visit you and perform My good word toward you, and cause you to return to this place." This was the seventy-year prophecy that Jeremiah made. Jeremiah greatly influenced Ezekiel and Daniel. Ezekiel and Daniel were in Babylon. Jeremiah was in Jerusalem. He was older than they were. They both went captive as very young men. Daniel was certainly even younger than Ezekiel. Jeremiah wrote to the group in Babylon and instructed them in certain things concerning this prophecy. Daniel makes reference that he sought for a number of years to clearly understand exactly what was meant. Since Nebuchadnezzar had invaded several times, what time did we start? Which invasion begins the countdown of the seventy years? What was the full sense of it?

Northern Israel had gone into captivity long before Jeremiah wrote. Jeremiah focuses in using the backdrop of Judah and Jerusalem in his day, over one hundred years after the northern tribes had gone into captivity. Jeremiah uses that as a backdrop to illustrate that the events that transpired at that time served as a parallel to events that were going to occur in the end time. There are many things in Jeremiah that clearly focus in on the end time, on the final punishment and captivity and then the subsequent renewal of God's people in this end time. The things that ancient Judah went through at the time Jeremiah wrote were a parallel to events that our people are going through in the end time. In effect, what you have is the same sins, which lead to the same consequences and the same punishment. But you will ultimately see the conclusion and the answer that Jeremiah records.

I mentioned that Jeremiah was an older contemporary of Ezekiel and Daniel. After the fall of Jerusalem in 587 B.C., Jeremiah took the king's daughter from Jerusalem, through Egypt and ultimately to Ireland. That's where he finished his prophetic ministry. We will go into some of that when we go through the book of Jeremiah.

A great deal of Isaiah's prophetic ministry centered on the time of King Hezekiah. He was a contemporary of at least one righteous king. Isaiah and Hezekiah were a very important combination in the history of ancient Judah. Jeremiah and Josiah were another important combination in the history of Judah and played a major role.

Let's notice briefly about Ezekiel. Ezekiel, as Jeremiah, was of the priestly family. Ezekiel's name means "God will strengthen." He was taken captive in the second invasion of Nebuchadnezzar in 586 B.C., and he spent the remainder of his life among the Jewish captives near Babylon. Jeremiah and Isaiah both wrote in the vicinity of Jerusalem. Ezekiel wrote in the captivity; Ezekiel wrote at a time after the captivity had become a reality. The final destruction of Jerusalem had not occurred at the time that Ezekiel began his ministry. Ezekiel's ministry continued for a period of a little over twenty years. The complete destruction of Jerusalem did not occur until several years after Ezekiel's ministry began. Ezekiel's ministry was totally limited to the time he was in captivity in the area of Babylon.

As mentioned, he went into the captivity in the second invasion in 596 B.C. He spent the remainder of his life in that area. His years of prophecy were from 591 B.C. until 569 B.C. We are not told what happened to Ezekiel. The book just simply ends. Jewish tradition says his fellow captives murdered him.

From Jeremiah 29:1, we would conclude that Ezekiel was at least partially instructed and influenced by Jeremiah.

We are told in Jeremiah 29:1-2, "Now these are the words of the letter that Jeremiah the prophet sent from Jerusalem to the remainder of the elders who were carried away captive—to the priests, the prophets, and all the people whom Nebuchadnezzar had carried away captive from Jerusalem to Babylon. (This happened after Jeconiah the king, the queen mother, the eunuchs, the princes of Judah and Jerusalem, the craftsmen, and the smiths had departed from Jerusalem.)" This was the second captivity of 596 B.C.

We are told Ezekiel was a priest. We will notice here in the beginning of Ezekiel.

Ezekiel 1:3, "The word of the Eternal came expressly unto Ezekiel the priest, the son of Buzi in the land of the Chaldeans by the River Chebar, and the hand of the Eternal was upon him there."

So Ezekiel was a priest. He was in captivity near Babylon. Now, Ezekiel had a very clear-cut mission. He was assigned to be a watchman to the house of Israel.

Ezekiel 2:3, "And he said unto me: 'Son of man, I send you to the children of Israel, to a rebellious nation that has rebelled against Me...'"

Ezekiel 3:4, "And he said to me: 'Son of man, go to the house of Israel, and speak with my words unto them.'"

Verse 17, "'Son of man, I have made you a watchman unto the house of Israel...'"

There's one thing about that. The house of Israel had been in captivity for well over a hundred years when Ezekiel wrote. They had been in captivity for almost one hundred forty years when Ezekiel wrote. Now, why would you write a message warning of captivity to people who had been taken captive one hundred twenty or one hundred thirty years earlier? Clearly, the message was not for them.

You see, Ezekiel never delivered his message to the house of Israel. Ezekiel wrote his message down. Ezekiel's message is for the house of Israel today! Some of you who remember back, remember the radio broadcast over the years. You remember Mr. Herbert Armstrong going through the book of Ezekiel and emphasizing the message of the watchman. The message of Ezekiel was clearly a message for today because Ezekiel never left the area of Babylon. He was there with a bunch of Jewish captives hundreds of miles from where Israel had been taken captive.

Ezekiel 1:3, the tribes of Israel had been settled, not down by Babylon in southern Mesopotamia by the River Chebar, but they had been settled where? II Kings 17:6 says they were settled by the Assyrians in the cities of the Medes. They were settled up by the River Gozan, which is up in the area between the Black and the Caspian Sea—a little south of where all the fighting is going on right now in the Soviet Union. Azerbaijan is kind of between the Black and the Caspian Sea. It is north of where the Israelites were settled. The Israelites were a little south of that mountain range but in kind of that vicinity up north of the Tigris-Euphrates area in the cities of the Medes.

The Medes eventually migrated from there, up through the heartland of the Soviet Union, and are in the area that we would call the Ukraine today. The Israelites, centered there around the Black Sea, later crossed the Black Sea and went up through the heartland of Europe. This was the invasion of the Gauls—the coming of various tribes into northern Europe.

Ezekiel never went to that area. At the time Ezekiel wrote this, he was in the boundaries of a totally different empire. What do you think the likelihood of Ezekiel coming up and saying, ‘Listen, I just got a message from God. You guys are going to have to turn me loose because I cannot be a slave here in Babylon anymore. God just told me that I have this message, and I need to take a hike about two hundred miles from here. There are these people who need to hear what I have. Turn me loose because God’s given me a job.’ –“Fat chance” getting loose on that. What’s the likelihood? Do you think they said to Ezekiel, ‘Oh, you can’t be a slave here in Babylon if God told you to go up there. Well, we will surely turn you loose.’

No, Ezekiel wrote his message! That’s why Ezekiel wrote it down. It is a message that applied for our time, our day and on out ahead of us. There are some very remarkable things in the book of Ezekiel, but the real impact, the real message of the book of Ezekiel, is for the House of Israel today. The warnings of the future captivity had no immediate relevance to a people already in captivity; that, of course, is what we see.

There’s an awful lot in the books of Isaiah, Jeremiah and Ezekiel. As I mentioned, we are going to get into the book of Isaiah first. The questions will be dealing with the first fourteen chapters of the book of Isaiah. That is what we will want to read and study by the next Bible study, as we begin to get into this.

This evening we are getting into the book of Isaiah. We are going to cover the first fourteen chapters. Isaiah's name means "the Eternal is Salvation," and that name ties in very closely with the subject matter of Isaiah's writing.

Isaiah makes very plain that God will permit no uncleanness in His covenant people. God will punish them for their iniquities. However, God will also restore and bless Israel following their national repentance. The book of Isaiah deals with this.

It is one of the most Messianic books of the Old Testament. It is a book that focuses in on the prophecies of the Messiah—the prophecies of Jesus Christ. The most detailed prophecies of Jesus Christ—both in His first coming and what will be His second coming—are contained in the book of Isaiah. We will notice them as we go through.

There's a continual contrast that is drawn in the book of Isaiah. On the one hand is God's punishment for various evils, and on the other hand is the ultimate restoration and glory that will come when the Messiah appears. There is this contrast that is being drawn, developed and explained as we proceed through the book of Isaiah.

The backdrop of events in Judah at the time, the place and circumstance in which Isaiah was writing provides a backdrop for the prophecies and the details that he goes into. Isaiah lived in Judah and wrote in Judah. Some of his ministry overlapped the closing days of the Kingdom of Israel (the northern kingdom) who ultimately went into Assyrian captivity. The sins of the nation had been continually worsening, and God was going to use Assyria to chastise the people.

Assyria conquered Northern Israel and took them captive during Isaiah's ministry. Most of Judah's territory was occupied at a later time. The Assyrian armies came in and conquered Northern Israel around 721 B.C. There was a period of deportation of the Northern Israelites that continued over a period of about the next twenty years.

There was an invasion of Judah that took place in the fourteenth year of Hezekiah (II Kings 18:13), which was 701 B.C. This invasion threatened to take Judah into Assyrian captivity at the time.

Hezekiah went to God, and God miraculously delivered them by wiping out the Assyrian army encamped around Jerusalem (II Kings 19:35). God put a stop to that.

Isaiah brings out the ultimate fall of his own nation. The backdrop of crisis in his day and time served to set the stage for the prophecies that relate to our day. Isaiah laid continual stress on the fact that beyond the destruction the people could see lay ahead, ultimately lay the salvation of God—the only hope of Israel. Throughout the book of Isaiah, there is this thrust, this emphasis on the fact that God's salvation is the only hope of Israel.

In order to set the stage for the fact that this is the only hope, Isaiah emphasizes and describes at various points the sins of the nation and the punishment that will come upon the nation. But he then shows the fact that's not the end of the story. There is a salvation that lies on beyond. One of the reasons he goes into some of the things that he does and to the extent that he does is to demonstrate the fact that Israel needs something beyond itself to save itself.

Let's look at a brief outline. Chapter 1 is sort of an abrupt introduction to the book of Isaiah. In Isaiah 1, the nation of Israel is indicted for its sins. It is indicted as a sinful nation, which must receive God's wrath.

Isaiah 2 through 5 begins with a picture of Christ's millennial rule. Then there follows a detailed indictment of Israel's sins as a society and a prophecy of captivity and destruction. God starts out with an introductory indictment in chapter 1.

In chapter 2, He focuses in on the way the story will end up, with a brief description of the millennial reign of the Messiah. Then He proceeds into a very detailed indictment of the sins of the nation and the captivity and destruction that will come.

In chapter 6, we go back and pick up the story of Isaiah's calling. The first five chapters are really introductory material that sets the stage for what the prophecies of the book are all about. In chapter 6 we go back and pick up the story of how God called and began to work through Isaiah.

In chapters 7 and 8, there is a prophecy that God would help Judah against a combine of Israel and Syria (7:1-9). That event is used as a backdrop of prophecy of the Messiah (vv. 10-16). Then there is a prophecy of the ultimate canonization of the Bible in the New Testament by the disciples of Jesus (8:16, 20). We will notice those prophecies as we go through.

In chapters 9, 10, 11 and 12, Christ's coming is prophesied. It tells us of God's use of Assyria to punish Israel (10:5-11). Then we have His redemption of Israel, His punishment of Assyria (v. 12) and the establishment of the government of God (11:10). These events are detailed in sequence.

In chapter 13, we have a prophecy of the destruction of Babylon, which is really a type of the ultimate, future destruction of Rome. It is paralleled in Revelation 18.

Chapter 14 is where we will end up this evening. In the beginning of chapter 14, we have the description of the house of Israel restored to prosperity during the Millennium. We culminate that chapter with a section that describes the origin of Satan the devil.

Let's notice here, as we begin to go through. Isaiah 1:1, "The vision of Isaiah the son of Amoz, which he saw concerning Judah and Jerusalem in the days of Uzziah, Jotham, Ahaz, and Hezekiah, kings of Judah." We have a time span here of about sixty years (a lengthy time span) of Isaiah's ministry. It began quite a way back. We have the prophecies that he saw concerning Judah and Jerusalem.

Jerusalem is used to typify the entire nation—to typify Israel as well as Judah because Jerusalem was the only city that was a combined capital of Israel and Judah. The prophecy deals not only with Judah but it deals with the whole nation, all the tribes of Israel. Jerusalem is used symbolically to represent all of the tribes of Israel because Jerusalem was the focal point, the center place. This was the city from which David and Solomon reigned as king over all the tribes. So Jerusalem is used in a symbolic way.

We use terms like that even in our modern terminology. Today, on the radio, there was the statement made about the arms talks and Moscow's response to Washington's proposal. Moscow is the capital city of the USSR, and the name is used to symbolically refer to the whole nation or government of the nation. The city of Washington symbolizes the government of the United States. We use some of the same terminology; so when you see Jerusalem referred to in this way it is used in a symbolic fashion to refer to the whole nation—to the combined twelve tribes.

Isaiah saw this over a period of time. God begins with His indictment. God makes comparisons here.

Verses 2-3, "Hear, O heavens, and give ear, O earth! For the Lord has spoken: 'I have nourished and brought up children, and they have rebelled against Me; The ox knows its owner and the donkey its master's crib; But Israel does not know, My people do not consider.'"

God says, 'My people don't seem to have as much sense as a dumb animal.' Have you ever fooled with animals? A cow knows where the feed and stall is. A cow is not too smart. God says, 'I feed and take care of them, and they don't have as much sense as an ox or a donkey because at least these animals know who feeds them, where to go and respond to their master and their owner. My people don't seem to be able to figure that out.'

We pride ourselves on being very educated, very far-advanced people. God says that He doesn't think we really rank all that smart. We haven't figured out something that dumb animals have figured out. God says He has nourished Israel like children. He draws the analogy of providing for children. He gives the analogy that even an animal recognizes its owner and Israel doesn't.

The consequence is given as He continues. Verses 4-6, "Alas, sinful nation, a people laden with iniquity, a brood of evildoers, children who are corrupters! They have forsaken the Lord, they have provoked to anger the Holy One of Israel, they have turned away backward. Why should you be stricken again? You will revolt more and more. The whole head is sick, and the whole heart faints. From the sole of the foot even to the head, there is not soundness in it, but wounds and bruises and putrefying sores; they have not been closed or bound up, or soothed with ointment."

There's consequence. God says that the nation is sick from head to toe. A sickness is internal. There are prophecies later on in Hosea where it talks about Ephraim seeing his sickness and Judah seeing his wound (Hosea 5:13). When we get into that a little later, we will notice specifically that a sickness refers to an internal condition; a wound is something that is externally imposed.

Our nation, Israel, is described as a nation sick from head to toe. And remember, while the term "Israel" refers in a general way to all of the tribes of Israel, it refers primarily to Ephraim and Manasseh. Jacob crossed his hands and laid hands on Ephraim and Manasseh, and he said, Genesis 48:16, "...Let my name be named on them..." His name, Israel, was named on those boys and their descendants in a very special way.

Prophetically, the term “Israel” generally refers to Ephraim and Manasseh in a specific way and in a general way to all of the tribes.

God’s indictment here is of a nation sick from head to toe. God describes an internal moral deterioration and decay. That is the condition that God describes, and there is a consequence that is going to come from that condition. First, God diagnoses the problem: ‘You’re sick from head to toe, and the sickness is not healing up. It is breaking out in putrefying wounds and sores’ (1:6). He says there is going to come a consequence—the prognosis. First you have the diagnosis; then you have the prognosis.

Verses 7-10, “Your country is desolate. Your cities are burned with fire; strangers devour your land in your presence; and it is desolate, as overthrown by strangers. So the daughter of Zion is left as a boot [cottage, shelter] in a vineyard, as a hut in a garden of cucumbers as a besieged city. Unless the Lord of hosts had left to us a very small remnant, we would have become like Sodom, we would have been made like Gomorrah. Hear the word of the Lord you rulers of Sodom; give ear to the law of our God you people of Gomorrah.”

Simply put, there is going to come a desolation on Israel as a nation as a punishment. The destruction will not be total because God will preserve a remnant. A remnant will survive, but there is going to come a devastation of this nation. This is described here. This massive destruction is ultimately going to occur. If it weren’t for God’s stepping in, there would not be anything left (Matthew 24:21-22).

God compares our nation to Sodom and Gomorrah (Genesis 18 and 19). Why do you think He would do a thing like that? We have come so far, that in many of the major cities of this nation, they celebrate with parades what they call “gay-pride” week. I suspect they must have had one of those in Sodom and Gomorrah. They were pretty proud of things. There’s not even a sense of shame. It’s like, ‘We do these things, and not only do we do them, we are proud of it.’ It’s absolutely incredible. If you have a talk show and they’re interviewing somebody, chances are they don’t go very far before this character may wind up talking about some celebrity and his homosexuality. That’s how far we’ve come. Things like that are just openly talked about and discussed as though it’s no big deal.

Verse 10, God even compares the nation to rulers of Sodom and people of Gomorrah.

Verse 11, “‘To what purpose is the multitude of your sacrifices to Me?’ says the Lord. ‘I have had enough of burnt offerings of rams and the fat of fed cattle. I do not delight in the blood of bulls, or of lambs or goats.’” He says, ‘What are you going through the motions of religion for? I’m sick and tired of your going through the outward form of religion.’ And we call ourselves a religious nation. Let’s notice.

Verse 14, “‘Your New Moons and your appointed feasts My soul hates; they are trouble to Me, I am weary of bearing them.’” This verse is often taken out of context and misapplied by certain Protestants who say, ‘See, God hates the Sabbath and the Holy Days; you shouldn’t keep them.’ “Your New Moons and your appointed feast My soul hates....” He didn’t say, ‘My appointed feasts, My Sabbaths, My day’—He said ‘yours.’

There’s a difference between the ones that God says belong to Him and the ones that He says belong to the people. Whose are they? Whose days does God hate? Does He hate His own? That wouldn’t make sense. Does God say, ‘I am going to give you these days, but I surely hate them’? What sense would that make? The problem wasn’t with God; the problem was with the people.

There were two problems. In some cases, they substituted in their own festivals. Northern Israel did that right after they rebelled against Solomon. Jeroboam, the son of Nebat, changed the Feast from the seventh month to the eighth month (I Kings 12:31-33). They introduced their own festivals. In some cases, it was a substitute for God’s; in other cases, while they held on to the outward form of the day that God had set, they didn’t celebrate it the way He said. It was a matter that they had come to the point, as it’s described here, of going through the motions of religion, but there was no substance of the heart.

For that matter, we can come to Sabbath services every week and warm a seat. We can go through all the various motions. We can do everything the Pharisees did, and God is not impressed with that—not any more than Christ was impressed with the Pharisees. The point is we are what we are on the inside. Our religion is something that needs to be lived and not something that is simply put on.

God says, speaking of this in v. 15, “‘When you spread out your hands, I will hide My eyes from you; Even though you make many prayers, I will not hear. [‘I’m not going to even look when you make your prayers. I'm not going to listen. Why? Because'] Your hands are full of blood.”

Verse 16, “Wash yourselves, make yourselves clean; Put away the evil of your doings from before My eyes. Cease to do evil.” ‘You’re going to have to clean up. You are going to have to cease to do evil.’

Verse 17, “Learn to do good; seek justice, reprove the oppressor; defend the fatherless, plead for the widow.” God says you are going to have to repent. It’s not a matter of going through the forms of religion. It’s not a matter of when you get into trouble saying, ‘Oh, God, please deliver me.’ If you’re really sincere, then you’re going to have to change your actions. You are going to have to start doing what’s right. You’re going to have to have an attitude of give, help, love and concern; not an attitude of greed, materialism, selfishness, pride, vanity and violence. God says, ‘There has to come a change if you want Me to listen.’

Coming on down, He describes and indicts the leadership of the nation.

Verse 23, “Your princes are rebellious, and companions of thieves; everyone loves bribes, and follows after rewards. They do not defend the fatherless, nor does the cause of the widow come before them.” It talks about ‘...the princes are rebellious and companions of thieves; they all love gifts...’ That sounds like the front page of the paper. It’s almost a badge of status.

If a state official in Louisiana hasn’t been brought before the Grand Jury to be investigated about something, it’s like he almost doesn’t have any status. Everybody who’s anybody gets called before the Grand Jury. Some of them get indicted, and occasionally they beat the rap. On a federal matter, they may even be sent to jail. Right now, there are about four U.S. senators that are being investigated. They were tied into some big Savings and Loan bailout that involved about a billion dollars of government money. It just so happened that the guy who owned the Savings and Loan was the major contributor to each of their campaigns. Some are Republicans; some are Democrats—doesn’t make any difference. You can buy one vote as well as the other. He wasn’t a respecter of persons.

“Your princes are...companions of thieves.” This is the crowd they keep company with. “...And they follow after reward. They do not defend the fatherless, nor does the cause of the widow come before them.” They are not judging the cause of the fatherless and looking after the widow. They are not concerned about those who can’t take care of themselves. They can vote themselves a massive pay increase and turn around and be ready to cut the Social Security benefits taking care of the elderly. There ultimately comes a day of reckoning. God is not impressed. He just doesn’t think that some of the priorities are exactly where they should be.

God then begins to talk about what is going to happen.

Verse 28, God says that there is going to be a destruction of the transgressors. After this kind of preliminary indictment where Isaiah sets the stage, he now goes into prophecies of what is going to come. It is not just going to stay this way. It’s not simply going to end with destruction because what’s going to happen in the last days?

Isaiah 2:2, “Now it shall come to pass in the latter days that the mountain of the Lord’s house shall be established on the top of the mountains, and shall be exalted above the hills. And all nations shall flow into it.” The government of God is going to be established. All the different nations and different groups and tribes of people are going to begin to flow up to it. What are they going to say?

Verses 3-4, “Many people shall come and say, ‘Come, and let us go up to the mountain of the Lord, to the house of the God of Jacob; He will teach us His ways, and we shall walk in His paths,’ for out of Zion shall go forth the law, and the word of the Lord from Jerusalem.”

God is going to set up His government here on this earth. Jerusalem is going to be the future capital. It’s going to be worldwide in scope. It will be established in the top of the mountains. All nations shall flow into it. It will be headquartered in Jerusalem. Different groups of people are ultimately going to come up.

Later on in the book of Isaiah, we’re actually given a little bit of the sequence of the order in which some people are going to start coming up. We are going to see the way the government of God is actually established. We won’t get into it this time, but next time we will. It is interesting because it even names specific peoples who will be among the first to send ambassadors up to Jerusalem and say, ‘Will you please come down here and teach us? We want some of these things.’

Verse 4, “He shall judge between the nations, and shall rebuke many people...” Some people need to be instructed; others need to be exhorted and admonished. There are a few that are going to have to be rebuked and corrected. It is a matter that depends on the attitude. Some are going to be willing. They just don't know; God instructs. There are others that are going to be pretty self-willed and are going to think they have a better way. God's not going to put it to a vote. One vote, all right! And the vote will be God's. The ballot will be unanimous. Man has proven and is going to have opportunity to prove he can't govern himself. If people are ignorant of the right way and you put it all together, then you have "collective ignorance"—and what good is that?

Isaiah 2:4, "...They shall beat their swords into plowshares, and their spears into pruning hooks; nation shall not lift up sword against nation, neither shall they learn war anymore." God is going to rebuke among many nations until they beat their swords into plowshares and their spears into pruning hooks. God is going to put a stop to the war-making ability. He sets the stage showing what is ultimately going to happen.

Verse 6, "For You have forsaken Your people, the house of Jacob, because they are filled with eastern ways..." or "full of divination from the east." This is one of the first things that God indicts the nation as He begins to get very specific. He sets the stage in chapter 2 as to what's ultimately going to happen. God is going to set up His government, and this is the way it is going to work out.

But what is happening right now? Why is God forsaking His people? God's people (the nations of modern day Israel) aren't looking to God or the Bible. They are looking to some crackpot "new movement" or they are looking to some Eastern mysticism. They are looking to all kinds of ideas and crackpot philosophies—the so-called great wisdom of the East that God is not impressed with. Frankly, using a little common sense, look at the nations of India, China, etc., nations that have produced so-called great wisdom—the great philosophies of the East. What have those things ever done for the East? You find there some of the most poverty-stricken, superstitious, backward, ignorant areas on the face of the earth. What has it done for them? We want to import it over here and say maybe we should get a little of that. It's insane! Yet this is what God says in v. 6, and this is what we find.

Verse 7, "Their land is also full of silver and gold, and there is no end to their treasures..."

Verse 8, "The land is full of idols; they worship the work of their own hands..." God indicts the nation for seeking answers elsewhere than from the God of Israel and His word. The nation is indicted for materialism and for idolatry. These are the things that are going to happen and are happening—the materialism, the idolatry, the looking elsewhere for answers, looking away from the God of Israel. God says there is going to come a consequence.

Verse 11, "The lofty looks of man shall be humbled, the haughtiness of men shall be bowed down, and the Lord alone shall be exalted in that day."

Verse 19, "They shall go into the holes of the rocks, and the caves of the earth, from the terror of the Lord and the glory of His majesty, when He arises to shake the earth mightily." I'll tell you what. When the earthquakes begin to hit and it culminates in the earthquake that occurs at Christ's return—which is going to be an earthquake of such mammoth proportion that it is actually going to reshape the topography of the earth—nobody is going to be strutting around as to how great they are. Let the forces of nature shake the ground right under you, and about that time, nobody is really impressed with himself. It has this humbling effect. God is going to get everybody's attention, and they are all going to be humble because it is kind of hard to be anything else when the ground is shaking. The most solid thing you know is shaking like a dishrag. God has a way of solving that.

He goes into details of the condition and state of our own society.

In Isaiah 3, He gives an indictment on society; there is a lack of wise, competent leadership in the nation. He describes a period of juvenile rebellion and women's lib, a society dominated largely by haughty women. He talks about the leadership, the mighty men, the judge, the prophet and the prudent. These all passed away; they are gone. God says you are not going to have the great, wise, competent leadership that has been available at certain times of crises in the past.

Isaiah 3:4, "I will give children to be their princes and babes shall rule over them..." They are children and babes by comparison.

Verse 5, "The people shall be oppressed, every one by another and every one by his neighbor..." We are talking about internal strife and civil strife. We are talking about people seeking to oppress one another to gain selfish, greedy advantage. We are talking about a society divided against itself.

Verse 5, "...The child will be insolent toward the elder, and the base toward the honorable." Here is a breakdown in the structure of society, a breakdown in respect.

I think one of the most fundamental things that we see has occurred in our society since the 1960s has been the breakdown of respect. Anybody who has been involved in the public school system over a period of let's say a twenty-five-year period of teaching to look back on, will point out and zero in on the absolute breakdown of respect as one of the major changes that has taken place in our society since the mid-60s. And when respect breaks down, the entire foundational units of society begin to crumble. When you lose respect in society—whether it is those who are younger respecting those who are older, whether it is for the structure of society, the respect and way others look up to those who are in a leadership capacity or the respectful interaction of people in society—when that respect begins to break down, the entire foundational units of society begin to crumble. This is zeroed in on.

Verse 6, “When a man takes hold of his brother in the house of his father, saying, ‘You have clothing; you be our ruler...’” This part is not here yet. Right now everybody and his brother are trying to be President. But believe me, before the end of this age, there's going to come a time when they almost can't find anybody who wants to be President because they are going to say (v. 7), ‘Look, this thing is about to collapse, and I don't want to be responsible for it.’ A time will come when the “rats” are going to be trying to desert the ship, trying to blame somebody else.

Verse 9, “The look of their countenance witnesses against them, and they declare their sin as Sodom; they do not hide it...”

Driving here this afternoon, I was listening to a talk show interview, and they were interviewing this guy. It started out how he had gone from being an athlete to being a dancer; before they got very far, he was talking about his lover, when he “came out” and all this kind of garbage. I wanted to pull over to the side of the road and throw up. “...They declare their sin as Sodom; they hide it not...” There's no shame, no embarrassment. Drive down and look at the movie marquee. We advertise it.

Later part of v. 9, “...Woe unto their soul! For they have brought evil upon themselves.”

Verse 12, “As for My people, children are their oppressors, and women rule over them. O My people! Those who lead you cause you to err, and destroy the way of your paths.”

God continues.

Verses 16-18, “Moreover the Lord says: ‘Because the daughters of Zion are haughty, and walk with outstretched necks and wanton eyes, walking and mincing as they go. Making a jingling with their feet. Therefore the Lord will strike with a scab the crown of the head of the daughters of Zion, and the Lord will uncover their secret parts.’ In that day the Lord will take away the finery: The jingling anklets, the scarves, and the crescents.” He describes all of these various ornaments and things.

He talks about the time of captivity.

Verse 24, “And so it shall be: Instead of a sweet smell there will be a stench; Instead of a sash, a rope; Instead of well-set hair, baldness; Instead of a rich robe, a girding of sackcloth; and branding instead of beauty.” This is talking about the destruction. When it talks about hair falling out, in some cases, perhaps, it is the results of radiation sickness, the destruction that is ultimately going to hit.

God describes a society whose priorities are upside down. The structure of society has been displaced. God designed proper roles for men, women and children, not roles of superiority and inferiority. God didn't create inferior people. God created human beings in His own image, but He created male and female. God structured a proper and appropriate role for each. One role is just as important as the other. Try eliminating one bunch and see how long the human race stays around.

God established that society have a certain structure. The family is the foundational unit of the structure of society. But we have here a society that is based on materialism. We have a society where the structure is turned upside down. We have a society where the hallmark is pride, haughtiness and what goes on the outside, not what comes out from the inside. There is a replacement, a substitution of the “daughters of Jezebel” in place of the “daughters of Sarah.” It is a totally different set of priorities and values. What was looked up to, what was idealized, what was viewed as proper and appropriate, what was the ideal to aspire to, has been thrown aside and replaced with something new. God is not impressed.

We come on down and it talks about the destruction and the consequences of some of these things.

Isaiah 4:4-5, “When the Lord has washed away the filth of the daughters of Zion, and purged the blood of Jerusalem...then the Lord will create above every dwelling place of Mount Zion, and above her assemblies, a cloud and smoke by day and the shining of a flaming fire by night....” God will bless the nation when He restores them and when the lesson has been learned.

What has happened to the nation?

Isaiah 5:1, “Now let me sing to my Well-beloved a song of my Beloved regarding His vineyard.”

He describes God’s vineyard (Israel) is protected, hedged about, walled off and protected from other nations.

Then in v. 5, God says that because the nation has not appreciated and valued what God has given, He is going to take away the hedge. He is going to allow the protection to be taken away.

I think we have not fully realized the extent to which our nation, the nations of modern Israel (Ephraim and Manasseh), have been hedged off and protected. We are the only nations that have not been invaded by foreign troops. The United States, Britain, Canada and Australia haven’t had foreign troops set foot on their soil. Can you name other nations that haven’t? Try to come up with one.

Look at Latin America and the other nations of Europe. Why could Hitler not go beyond the English Channel? Why couldn’t he get across? Why couldn’t he get beyond? Why couldn’t the Kaiser get beyond? Napoleon? Why hasn’t anyone ever been able to get beyond since the last migration of Israelites in 1066 under William the Conqueror? Since that time, foreign troops have never been able to set foot on British soil. Why? Why haven’t there been any invasions by foreign troops?

The only destructive war we ever had in this country was the war between our states where the states of the North and South fought against one another. That was a war so destructive that there were more American lives lost in that war than in every other war that we’ve ever fought added together. But those weren’t outside forces. Those were forces right here within the nation of Manasseh. We haven’t fully appreciated and valued what it means to not have foreign troops on our soil and not have our land devastated.

Russia can’t say that. Moscow was burned and destroyed. There was a tremendous loss of life, literally running up into many, many millions, tens of millions during World War II. I don’t think we recognize the devastation that Russia went through in the time of World War II. There were great quantities of the area that was occupied. They had gone through an invasion during the time of Napoleon. There wasn’t destruction on quite as massive a scale, but there was an invasion. Nations like China, Japan and India have been invaded. God says, ‘I have put a hedge, a wall, but I am going to tear that wall down. I am going to open you up and let them come in.’

Then He begins an indictment as to why He is going to do that.

Verse 8, “Woe to those who join house to house, who add field to field, till there is no place where they may dwell alone in the midst of the land!” We haven’t properly used the things we have, even the way we’ve built our cities. God says selfishness and greed have been the motivating factors.

God says there is going to come a famine.

Verse 10, “For ten acres of vineyard shall yield one bath, and a homer of seed shall yield one ephah.” Ten acres are going to yield about three-quarters of a bushel. That’s not very much. You’re not going to stay in the farming business very long.

Verses 11-12, “Woe to those who rise early in the morning, that they may follow intoxicating drink; who continue until night, till wine inflames them! The harp and the strings, the tambourine and flute, and wine are in their feasts; but they do not regard the work of the Lord....” They are partying. They are out abusing alcohol and various other drugs—wanting to party. That’s what they want to spend their life doing. They are not concerned about the work of God. They are not concerned about doing what God says. It’s pretty descriptive.

Verse 13, “Therefore my people have gone into captivity....” They are going to go into captivity.

Verse 20, “Woe to those who call evil good, and good evil....” There is an upside-down set of values.

Verses 21-22, “Woe to those who are wise in their own eyes, and prudent in their own sight! Woe to men mighty at drinking wine, Woe to men valiant for mixing intoxicating drink.” Last of the big boozers! Their pride is how much they can manage to “put down” before somebody has to carry them out. There is this upside-down set of values that produced the epidemic of chemical abuse in this country. This is catastrophic!

Then there are very descriptive terms that describe the legal profession.

Verse 23, “Who justify the wicked for a bribe, and take away justice from the righteous man!” They are not out trying to find justice. It’s an adversarial system with each side trying to win.

Back two or three years ago, I heard an interview with one of the most prominent criminal defense attorneys in this nation. He was being asked about his clients. He just made the point that he has seldom, if ever, defended a really innocent man. 'I am not after justice; I am out to try to get my client off. My job is to win the case for my client. That's what I'm being paid for. I don't have any apology for that. The District Attorney is out trying to win the case for the state. He's not trying to get justice. He's trying to win the case for the state, and I'm trying to win the case for my client.'

That was an analysis. God says woe unto them who justify the wicked for reward. They are not concerned about what's right, just and equitable. They are out to do what they can do and to get what they can get.

Verse 24, God says they are going to be devoured like fire devours stubble. Ever burned off a field? You know how that fire goes. God says, 'When I light the match, it is going to go like fire through a stubble field. It's going to go, "...Because they have rejected the law of the Lord of hosts, and despise the word of the Holy One of Israel."

We have a very descriptive area, describing an overview of the nation. It describes the greed, corruption and materialism. It describes the breakdown of respect, the very foundational force that holds society together. The structure of respect should begin in the home and reflect throughout all of society. It describes the emphasis on the external—the materialism and the things that God says are not of value in the long-term—and the rejection of the true values, rejection of the things that really proceed from God.

God set the stage having briefly introduced in chapter 2 the fact that, in the last days, the ultimate conclusion is the God of heaven is going to set up a kingdom.

In Isaiah 6, we come to the calling that Isaiah received.

Verses 1-5, in the year that King Uzziah died, Isaiah sees this vision, and in vision, he sees God sitting upon a throne. He is overwhelmed with this. He goes through symbolically the things that occur. He doesn't feel worthy.

Verse 6, in his vision, God symbolically cleanses him.

And then in v. 8, God says, 'I have a job to do.' Isaiah's response is, "Here am I, send me." God then says that He will.

Isaiah 6:11-13, Isaiah asked the question, "Then I said, 'Lord, how long?' And He answered: 'Until the cities are laid waste and without a man, the land is utterly desolate, the Lord had removed men far away and the forsaken places are many in the midst of the land. But yet a tenth will be in it, and will return....'" There is going to come a captivity from which only a tenth of our nation will return. God is going to save out a tithe. We're looking at ninety percent destruction that will occur. That is destruction on a scale that we cannot imagine or comprehend. We don't realize what is taking shape, what is occurring right now and the things that are beginning to shape up in Europe.

In Isaiah 10:5, God talks about that, "Woe to Assyria, the rod of My anger and the staff of whose hand is My indignation." This nation is blindly negotiating away. We are talking about Germany reuniting, and will they stay in NATO or not. We are ultimately going to find out that with a reunited Germany, NATO is going to be the least of their concerns. Whether or not they stay in is going to be the least of our concern because we are going to find that the Assyrian is going to be the rod of God's anger. God is going to use the Assyrian nation (the modern-day Germans) to chastise and correct our nation. That is going to occur.

We have to look at things that God indicts our nation for and the things that He hates. We have to look at these things as we go through. What we need to do is to ask God to change our set of values from the inside out. We want to learn to hate the things God hates; we want to learn to love and value the things that God values. In our lives as men, women, children, families, employees, employers and human beings, we want to learn to value and appreciate what God values and appreciates. We want to recognize the contrast in the values that are so common in our society.

We live in this society and are influenced by it. Our children are even more influenced by it. We must really dedicate ourselves to try to fill our minds with a godly set of values and to instruct our children as to why the set of values that they see at school, on television, entertainment and in all of the things around are not the values to hang on to because there are consequences that are going to come. These things are destroying an entire nation.

In Isaiah 7, God then begins to describe the alliance of Syria and Ephraim and the conflict that was taking place with ancient Judah at the time Isaiah was writing this—and the fact that was not going to be a successful combine. The Assyrians were going to take them into captivity (vv. 17-20). There were events that were going to happen that really, in a sense, foreshadow events that would happen way on down the line.

Notice the sign of salvation that God would give. Isaiah 7:14, “Therefore the Lord Himself will give you a sign: Behold, the virgin shall conceive and bear a Son, and shall call His name Immanuel.” “Immanuel” means “God with us.” This is a prophecy of Jesus Christ. It is quoted in the New Testament (Matthew 1:23). This is set into the context of the prophecy as the nation is looking at what is sure destruction. They are looking at what they can see, and the warning is don’t base what is going to happen on what you can see.

At the time Isaiah wrote this, Judah saw Northern Israel (headed up by the tribe of Ephraim) was making an alliance with the nation of Syria. They were going to invade the Jews. It looked like destruction was on the horizon. This combine was going to come in and really “put it” to them. But before any of that really happened, the Assyrians came in and conquered the whole thing. The picture can radically change. Events can happen very quickly. So Isaiah’s message was, ‘Look, don’t depend on what you see. God is the source of salvation.’

In Isaiah 8:7-8, He continues talking about Assyria, how He is going to bring the king of Assyria into the nation and how it will pass through Judah. It describes the destructive conquest; after describing the invasions and the things that occur, then it begins to focus in on salvation.

Isaiah 8:13, “The Lord of hosts, Him you shall hallow; Let Him be your fear, and let Him be your dread.” Don’t be worried. Don’t be impressed with what all these other nations and people are going to do. Focus on God!

Verse 14, “He will be as a sanctuary, but a stone of stumbling and a rack of offense to both the houses of Israel, as a trap and a snare to the inhabitants of Jerusalem.” He is speaking of the Messiah who was to be a stone of stumbling and a rock of offense. People took offense.

Verse 15, “And many among them shall stumble; they shall fall and be broken, be snared and taken.”

Verse 16, “Bind up the testimony, seal the law among My disciples....”

Verse 20, “To the law and to the testimony....” That is a description of the Bible. You remember in the book of Revelation 12:17, when it describes the saints of the Most High who keep the commandments of God and have the testimony of Jesus Christ? That expression is used two or three places. That is a description of the Church. “To the law and to the testimony” is simply another way of saying the Old and the New Testament. The law is reference to what we term “the Old Testament”; the testimony of Jesus Christ is what we refer to as “the New Testament.”

Verse 20, “...If they do not speak according to this word, it is because there is no light in them.” We ultimately look to the Bible, to the law and to the testimony, to the law of God and to the testimony of Jesus Christ. Genesis to Revelation—we look to the whole book.

Who’s going to be responsible for putting it together?

Verse 16, “Bind up the testimony, seal the law among My disciples.” This canon of Scripture would be completed among the disciples of the Messiah, the One who would be the stone of stumbling. Who gave us our New Testament? The disciples of Jesus! The disciples of Jesus Christ are the ones who sealed it up and finished it. It wasn’t the Catholic Church in the Nicene Council or something two or three hundred years later. The only thing they ever tried to do was take it apart. It was already in existence when you read of the first Church Council discussing it. The only thing they discussed was trying to get rid of some of the books that were in it. The testimony was bound up and sealed up among the disciples. We have gone into that before, focusing in on Peter and John specifically.

Verse 17, “And I will wait upon the Lord....”

Verse 19, “And when they shall say to you, ‘Seek those who are mediums and wizards, who whisper and mutter,’ [seeking out astrology, fortune-tellers, séances and things of that sort] should not a people seek their God? Should they seek the dead on behalf of the living?”

Verse 20, “To the law and to the testimony [that’s where you look—to the Bible]! If they do not speak according to this word, it is because there is no light in them.” If someone claims to represent God, the real test is whether he is teaching what the Bible teaches. “To the law and to the testimony.” Is he teaching the entire Bible? Isaiah 9 is prophecy of the Messiah, a prophecy that He would come from beyond Jordan and Galilee of the Gentile nations (v. 1).

Isaiah 9:2, “The people who walked in darkness have seen a great light; those who dwelt in the land of the shadow of death, upon them a light has shined.” The reference here is a prophecy of Christ.

Verse 6, “For unto us a Child is born. Unto us a Son is given; and the government will be upon His shoulder....” Jesus Christ was born to be a King.

Verse 7, “Of the increase of His government and peace there shall be no end, upon the throne of David and over His kingdom, to order it and establish it....” Jesus Christ is going to sit upon the throne of David when He returns. This is describing a prophecy of where salvation will come from. It will come from the Messiah who we know to be Jesus Christ.

God continues showing that the nation does not recognize its need for salvation.

They say in v. 10, “The bricks have fallen down, but we will rebuild with hewn stones; the sycamores are cut down, but we will replace them with cedars.” We will work it all out. We will fix it some way or another.

Verses 14-16, “Therefore the Lord will cut off head and tail from Israel, palm branch and bulrush in one day. The elder and honorable, he is the head; the prophet who teaches lies, he is the tail. For the leaders of this people cause them to err, and those who are led by them are destroyed.” God indicts the leadership for causing the people to err. He says those who are in the responsible positions, those in the leadership positions, are causing error. They are not leading the nation in the right way.

Isaiah 10:1-7, “Woe to those who decree unrighteous decrees...To rob the needy of justice, and to take what is right from the poor of My people, that widows may be their prey, and that they may rob the fatherless. What will you do in the day of punishment...Woe to Assyria, the rod of My anger, and the staff in whose hand is My indignation. I will send him against an ungodly nation, and against the people of My wrath I will give him charge, to seize the spoil, to take the prey, and to tread them down like the mire of the streets. Yet he does not mean so, nor does his heart think so; but it is in his heart to destroy, and cut off not a few nations.”

Right now, as they are planning German reunification, that’s not what they mean in terms of the destruction. ‘He means not so, neither does his heart think so.’ At this point, they don’t really think that they are going to do it again, but it’s in their nature. When they go to war, they go to it with brutal efficiency, and they are going to do it. God says they don’t realize what they are up to; right now at this point, that’s not necessarily what they are actively planning. But the circumstances are going to come about and Satan is going to stir them up; they are going to come—and God is going to allow them to do so. God is going to remove the hedge, the fence, and He’s going to allow the Assyrians to be the rod of His anger, to chastise and correct this nation in a way we have never experienced. He indicts us as a hypocritical nation. Then God is going to deal with the Assyrians after that.

Verse 12, “Therefore it shall come to pass, when the Lord has performed all His work on Mount Zion and on Jerusalem, that He will say, ‘I will punish the fruit of the arrogant heart of the king of Assyria, and the glory of his haughty looks.’”

God is going to use the Assyrians (the Germans) to punish us, and then He’s going to “take care” of them. He’s going to turn around and use the Russians and Chinese to punish them. There’s going to be a succession. We’re going to see the succession as we go through the Major Prophets. And we will ultimately see the battle that will actually be fought several years into the Millennium. There are events that are going to occur.

Isaiah 10:20, “And it shall come to pass in that day that the remnant of Israel, and such as have escaped of the house of Jacob, will never again depend on him who defeated them, but will depend on the Lord, the Holy One of Israel, in truth.” They are going to come back from captivity. They are going to learn a lesson.

In Isaiah 11:1, we are told, “There shall come forth a Rod from the stem of Jesse, and a Branch shall grow out of his roots.” This is speaking of Jesus Christ, the Messiah, who was born of the seed of David. David was the son of Jesse.

Verses 2-5, “The Spirit of the Lord shall rest upon Him, the spirit of wisdom and understanding, the Spirit of counsel and might, the Spirit of knowledge and of the fear of the Lord. His delight is in the fear of the Lord, and He shall not judge by the sight of His eyes, nor decide by the hearing of His ears. But with righteousness He shall judge the poor, and decide with equity for the meek of the earth; He shall strike the earth with the rod of His mouth, and with the breath of His lips He shall slay the wicked. Righteousness shall be the belt of His loins, and faithfulness the belt of His waist.”

He is going to judge in righteousness; He’s going to judge with equity. There’s going to have to be correction and things straightened out. But notice the extent of change, which is going to take place.

Verses 6-7, “The wolf also shall dwell with the lamb, the leopard shall lie down with the young goat, the calf and the young lion and the fatling together; and a little child shall lead them. The cow and the bear shall graze; their young ones shall lie down together; and the lion shall eat straw like the ox.”

Verse 9, “They shall not hurt nor destroy in all My holy mountain, for the earth shall be full of the knowledge of the Lord as the waters cover the sea.” When the knowledge of God is pervasive, God is literally even going to change the nature of the animals. God uses wild animals as a description of the way many of the kingdoms of this world act.

When God describes the great world-ruling Gentile kingdoms in the book of Daniel and later in Revelation, He describes them under the guise of wild animals. He describes them as animals that are out for prey, out to devour and to destroy—under the analogy of lions, leopards, bears and this type. God says this is the nature human beings have; they act like a bunch of wild animals. That very nature, even in the animals, is going to be changed to symbolize, to demonstrate, that there is a different way of life. There’s going to come peace, rest and tranquility. There’s not going to be the danger and the harm.

Verse 10, ““And in that day there shall be a Root of Jesse, who shall stand as a banner to the people [in other words, stand like a “flag” that everybody can seek to]; for the Gentiles shall seek Him, and His resting place shall be glorious.” It really is!

Verse 11, “It shall come to pass in that day that the Lord shall set His hand again the second time to recover the remnant of His people who are left, from Assyria and Egypt, from Pathros and Cush, from Elam and Shinar, from Hamath and the islands of the sea.” The remnant of Israel is scattered in Assyria, North Africa and various areas.

Verse 12, “He will set up a banner for the nations, and will assemble the outcasts of Israel, and gather together the dispersed of Judah from the four corners of the earth.”

Verse 13, “Also the envy of Ephraim shall depart, and the adversaries of Judah shall be cut off; Ephraim shall not envy Judah, and Judah shall not harass Ephraim.” There is going to be peace that is going to occur because the nations of Israel will have learned a lesson when God begins to bring them back from the captivity. At the end of the captivity, at the beginning of the Millennium, they are going to come back in a humble, submissive and teachable attitude.

Verse 15, “The Lord will utterly destroy the tongue of the Sea of Egypt...”

Verse 16, “There will be a highway for the remnant of His people who will be left from Assyria, as it was for Israel in the day that he came up from the land of Egypt.” God is going to begin to bring His people back from that captivity at the beginning of the Millennium. He’s going to gather them back by way of a highway God’s going to have constructed right through part of what’s now sea. There’s going to be a highway to bring them down directly so that they can come back.

Isaiah 12 is a very short chapter that ties in with this. ‘Praise to God!’ It describes the time of the Millennium.

Isaiah 12:3, “Therefore with joy you will draw water from the wells of salvation.” A time of salvation will be opened up. God indicts the nation of Israel, shows their sins, shows what He disapproves of, shows the calamitous events that are going to occur and then He shows the salvation that God holds out—the only source of salvation.

Now He begins to focus in on some of the nations God uses as a tool against Israel and what is going to happen to them.

Isaiah 13:1, “The burden against Babylon...”

Verse 6, ““Wail, for the day of the Lord is at hand! It will come as destruction from the Almighty.” This is the day of the Lord that is going to come. The day of the Lord comes after the tribulation.

Verse 10, it talks about the heavenly signs.

Verses 11-12, ““I will punish the world for its evil, and the wicked for their iniquity; I will halt the arrogance of the proud, and will lay low the haughtiness of the terrible. I will make a mortal more rare than the fine gold, a man more than the golden wedge of Ophir.” God will give a sense of priorities. When all this is over, people won’t place value on material things. People place a lot more value on material things than they do on other human beings. God says, ‘When I get through, they are going to learn what’s important.’

Verse 13, “Therefore I will shake the heavens, and the earth will move out of her place, in the wrath of the Lord of hosts and in the day of His fierce anger.” This describes the day of the Lord.

Speaking of Babylon in v. 17, ““Behold, I will stir up the Medes against them, who will not regard silver; and as for gold, they will not delight in it.” The Medes are the nation that’s settled in the area of what is now the modern-day Ukraine. That is part of Russia, the Soviet Union. What you have and what we are going to see is the pendulum swings that take place.

Right now there is coming into a greater European orbit what is Eastern Europe, Central Europe and Western Europe. There is coming a European orbit that is certainly going to include many of the nations of what we've considered behind the Iron Curtain nations—nations of Central Europe that we've tended to think of as the Eastern Bloc. We are even seeing some of the nations that are constituent parts of the Soviet Union in that European orbit. I think that much of Russia and some of the other nations are going to, at least for a time, be allied with the Beast Power. Some of the nations of Central Europe will actually be part of it. I don't think there's any indication that Russia will not ever be one of the ten kings. But I think, clearly at the beginning, there is a very great likelihood that they are going to be allied with it. It may be part of that nuclear arsenal that winds up being used against us. Where is Germany going to get their nuclear arsenal? It's evidently going to be in the context of a European defense force. Where's it going to come from? The scripture shows that as events go on, there is going to come disillusionment and a lack of trust between Germany and Russia that is going to involve a "double-cross."

If you remember, World War II started out with Hitler and Stalin being allies. Stalin was Hitler's ally. That's the way he picked up Lithuania, Latvia, Estonia, a good chunk of Poland, parts of Romania and parts of "this" and "that." That's where he got it all at the beginning of the War. He stole it at the beginning of World War II when he and Hitler were allies. They made a deal and split it up between themselves.

And then Hitler stabbed him in the back. Hitler didn't trust Stalin. So when he thought he was in a position to do it, he launched an attack on Stalin. He caught him by surprise; then Stalin launched his counter-attack on Hitler. Hitler bogged down as the Russian front won by "General Winter"—the most formidable "soldier" the Russians have. When it drops to forty degrees below zero, things don't work very well. The mechanized equipment the Germans brought in froze up, literally.

It's an interesting story if you read it. It was the last successful use of horse cavalry in modern warfare. Do you realize that took place in World War II? The weather dropped to forty, fifty, sixty degrees below zero, and all the mechanized equipment froze up. The Russians brought in Mongol horsemen from Siberia. The Germans were on foot and about to freeze. All their tanks and lubricating oils froze up. The Russians brought in by train these Mongol horsemen and thousands and thousands of Siberian ponies from Siberia. Those things you couldn't freeze them out if you tried. They lived for thousands of years in Siberia. They brought in all these Mongol horsemen. They hitched those horses up to Russian stuff, pulled it around and "rode circles" around the Germans. The Germans couldn't even get their guns to fire. The things froze up. That's what defeated Hitler on the Russian front. It's amazing when technology breaks down—you go back to old faithful. There are things that survive.

Anyway, what did you have? You had the pendulum swing. You're going to have the same thing. Basically what is going to happen, the first woe is Europe coming against Russia. The Germans and the Russians have never trusted one another. They have worked together at various times in history, but there's a lack of trust. The first woe is Europe attacking Russia. They are going to try to get a pre-emptive attack. They are not going to be successful.

The second woe is the Medes (Communist bloc of nations) are going to come. There is going to be a backlash. Communism right now is being phased out, but don't think that all the hard liners and that entire bunch will disappear. They may fade from power. But what's going to happen when this newfound prosperity and what promises to be success in linking up with the West turns to dust? When this turns into dust, you are going to have a pendulum swing, and you are going to have an alliance of Russia and China coming back.

It describes the Medes in v. 17, "Behold, I will stir up the Medes against them, who will not regard silver; and as for gold, they will not delight in it." There's going to be a revival, a takeover, of the old hard-liner communists. They are going to rise up and unite the whole Asiatic area of China and India, and it will be dominated by Russia. This will occur well on into the tribulation. These are the events of the Day of the Lord. These are the events in the last year before Christ returns. That pendulum swing will swing back, and they will come in and devastate Europe. They will devastate Babylon. The destruction that you read of in Revelation 18—the destruction and nuclear devastation of modern Rome—that's who's going to do it.

Verses 19-20, ““And Babylon, the glory of kingdoms, the beauty of the Chaldeans' pride, will be as when God overthrew Sodom and Gomorrah. It will never be inhabited....”” Now that occurred to ancient Babylon, and it's going to occur to modern Babylon.

Revelation 18 makes plain it's going to occur to modern Babylon because Revelation 18 was written way after it had happened to ancient Babylon. That was already old stuff when Revelation 18 was written. Isaiah prophesied it and it happened to ancient Babylon. But it's going to happen to modern Babylon. Revelation 18 makes that plain.

Isaiah 14:1-2, “For the Lord will have mercy on Jacob, and will still choose Israel, and settle them in their own land. The strangers will be joined with them, and they will cling to the house of Jacob. Then people will take them and bring them to their place, and the house of Israel will possess them for servants and maids in the land of the Lord; they will take them captive whose captives they were, and rule over their oppressors.”

When Christ comes back and all of this occurs, those who were the keepers of the concentration camps and whatever are going to come bringing the captives out, kind of “dusting them off” and taking them back gently. They are going to try to do what they can to get out of trouble. The “shoe is going to be on the other foot.” The way God is going to get the point across to those who were part of the Beast power is by making them servants. They are going to be brought back, and they are going to be made servants. Everybody needs to learn to serve.

Here's a group of people brought back to Israel in the position of servants. Very possibly, it may be a generation or may even be the time of the first Jubilee that the people of the Beast power are brought back to Israel in the position of servants. So, they'll have the opportunity of learning to serve. That's a good place for those who were the haughty, the mighty, those who dominated, to learn how to serve and to perform lowly functions as servants.

We all have to learn to serve. There is nothing wrong with being a servant. Jesus came as a servant. He was willing to wash the feet of the disciples. We need to have that attitude of service. Leadership from God's standpoint is service. There are those whose opinion of themselves and their status are such that they are going to need to be in the role of servants in the beginning of the Millennium.

Obviously, the law of God will be such that certainly by the time of the Jubilee, they will go out and be given back their own land. They will have a chance after they have had a generation or two to really learn the lesson and have it impressed. Then they will be to a point where they can be trusted to go back to their land and be instructed by those of the government of God.

Verse 3, “It shall come to pass in the day the Lord gives you rest from your sorrow, and from your fear and the hard bondage in which you were made to serve.” God is going to give rest from sorrow, fear and from hard bondage.

Verse 4, “that you will take up this proverb against the king of Babylon....”

Verse 7, “The whole earth is at rest and quiet; they break forth into singing.” That's descriptive of the time of the Messiah, of Tomorrow's World, a time of a millennial Sabbath.

Verses 12-15, we have a description of the one who is really the power behind the throne, the ultimate king of Babylon—Lucifer. His desire was to ascend into heaven and to exalt his throne above the stars of God. He wanted to be like the Most High. Lucifer became Satan and is ultimately the source of all of the problems because this satanic attitude is the source of all the problems.

We end up here in chapter 14 with Lucifer desiring to take God's place and the events that are going to occur.

There's an awful lot packed into the book of Isaiah. There is an awful lot that deals with the things that are going on here and now. It gives God's view of our society. It gives His perspective. It gives the events that are going to occur immediately ahead and then on beyond that into the World Tomorrow. There is an awful lot that we have yet to uncover as we continue through the Major Prophets.

This is where we will conclude this evening. Next time we are going to cover chapters 15 through 35. I will hope to see you here the next time for that.

Major Prophets Series—Isaiah 15—35

We are looking at the second section of Isaiah. This particular section of Isaiah, that we are looking at this evening, deals primarily with prophecies against some specific Gentile nations, as well as some directly against Israel. This section concludes with accounts of God's intervention in human affairs and also a description of the time when God's government holds sway during the Millennium. We will also notice prophecies relating to the Church in the place of safety. I think there are a couple of prophecies that many of you may not have been familiar with before that I think you will find of interest. It gives us at least a little bit of insight.

Isaiah 15 opens up with a prophecy against Moab. The Moabites are a people who inhabit much of modern-day Iraq and some of modern-day Jordan. The Moabites and the Ammonites are basically in the area of Jordan and Iraq. The Ammonites are centered in Jordan. The capital city of Jordan takes its name from that ancient tribal name. It's spelled the same way and pronounced "Ammon" today. Basically, this is where those peoples were anciently, and the modern nation is still pretty much in the same geographic boundaries that exist today. In many cases, you have several different ethnic groups that are lumped together inside the same modern nation-state. It's not exact. Iraq, for instance, consists of several different groups such as the ancient Moabites, as well as a certain amount of Arab stock from Arabia that moved in there at an earlier time, as well as other ethnic groups such as the Kurds and others like that.

The description here describes some of the waste in which Moab is laid.

Isaiah 15:1, "...Because in the night Ar of Moab is laid waste and destroyed, Because in the night Kir of Moab is laid waste and destroyed." Moab is laid waste.

Certainly in this context, we are told that the Euphrates River will ultimately be the demarcation line between East and West, and that the kings of the East will assemble their army east of the Euphrates. The Euphrates will be dried up, and they will cross it and will invade. The Euphrates goes through a goodly portion of Iraq. It kind of divides the nation of Iraq, which would give us the indication that Iraq is ultimately going to be devastated and at least partially occupied if that's the case. Chapter 15 kind of fits in with some of the other prophecies. Isaiah 16 is an interesting section.

Isaiah 16:1, "Send the lamb to the ruler of the land, from Sela to the wilderness, to the mount of the daughter of Zion." The word "Sela" in the margin says "Petra." "Sela" is the Hebrew name, while "Petra" is the Greek name of the same geographic location. It is known today by its Greek name "Petra." "Petra" and "Sela" mean the same thing. They both have the meaning of a great rock. The modern place-name of this location, Petra, is known by its Greek name, but it is referred to here in the Hebrew text by the Hebrew name. Many of the commentaries recognize the location to which is being referred as the area that we would term modern-day Petra.

Here is a description that mentions "the ruler of the land from Sela [the area of Petra] to the wilderness, to the mount of the daughter of Zion." It is describing the area that would include Petra. Now the modern-day ruler of that area is King Hussein of Jordan. That is currently in his territory. "Send a present," as it were, "to the ruler of this area from Petra to the wilderness."

Verses 2-5, "For it shall be a wandering bird thrown out of the nest; so shall be the daughters of Moab at the fords of the Arnon. 'Take counsel, execute judgment, make your shadow like the night in the middle of the day; hide the outcasts, do not betray him who escapes. Let My outcasts dwell with you, O Moab be a shelter to them from the face of the spoiler. For the extortioner is at an end, devastation ceases, the oppressors are consumed of the land. In mercy the throne will be established; and One will sit on it in truth, in the tabernacle of David, judging and seeking justice and hastening righteousness.'"

By the time we get down to v. 5, it is pretty obvious from the context, time wise, it brings us down to the return of Christ because it brings us down to a time when the extortioner will be at an end, when the spoiler will cease, when oppressors will be consumed out of the land, when finally, in mercy, the throne will be established and a King will reign in righteousness there in the tabernacle of David. That is something that is yet to happen and will occur at the return of Christ.

We're looking at prophecy that centers around the area of Petra. It has to do with Moabites, many of whom have been dislodged from location. At least a portion of Iraq has been invaded, at least up to the Euphrates River. There are many dispossessed, homeless people. They're coming into an area that is inhabited by many of their kinsman.

Actually Moab and Jordan were of the same family. Until Iraq overthrew the monarchy back around 1960 or something like that, the monarch of Iraq was the uncle of King Hussein of Jordan. They were very closely related; it is the same family that ruled both kingdoms. So they are related peoples, related kingdoms in related areas. They border. So if you become dislocated, the logical place you flee is into Jordan there in the area of Petra, which is a fairly empty area.

In v. 2, the statement describes the Moabites as a "wandering bird."

In v. 1, there is a statement made basically to "the ruler of the land" because he is the one who is addressed.

Verses 3-4, "...Make my shadow like the night in the middle of the day; hide the outcasts, do not betray him who escapes. Let My outcasts dwell with you, O Moab..." Moab is not God's outcasts. God addresses Moab and He says, "Let My outcasts dwell with you Moab." This is one of the indications that we have looked at to make us wonder in terms of the location of the place of protection—the place of safety for God's people during the tribulation—as perhaps being the area of Petra. You have probably heard that speculation. Well, this is one of several verses in the Bible that seems to indicate Petra as being a place where at least some of those who are called "God's outcasts" will dwell and be protected until the time of the return of Christ. So this is kind of the setting and context here.

Isaiah 17:1, "The burden against Damascus..." This chapter discusses Damascus. We have addressed the burden of Damascus or modern-day Syria. Damascus is the ancient and the modern capital of Syria. It's one of those unique situations. Damascus, to my knowledge, is the oldest continuously inhabited city. It has continually been the capital of that area since way back in Biblical times. It is a rather unique situation when you consider all the fighting and the wars that have gone on with so many invading troops, off and on. Most cities have been destroyed a long time ago, and others have been built to take their place. Damascus is still there. But Damascus is not going to remain because it will ultimately be taken away from being a city and become a ruinous heap (v. 1).

The timing of that is brought out.

Verses 7-8, "In that day a man will look to his Maker, and his eyes will have respect for the Holy One of Israel. He will not look to the altars, the work of his hands; He will not have respect what his fingers have made..." That's looking on into the future. The setting of this prophecy is at the time of Christ, the time when Damascus will ultimately be destroyed.

In Isaiah 18, we are addressing an interesting prophecy in terms of what it describes. What it describes are the very first people who are going to voluntarily send emissaries up to Jerusalem and say, 'Come and teach us your ways.'

Isaiah 18:1-2, "Woe to the land shadowed with buzzing wings, which is beyond the rivers of Ethiopia, which sends ambassadors by sea, even in vessels of reed on the waters, saying, 'Go, swift messengers, to a nation tall and smooth of skin [KJV, "scattered and peeled"; margin reference, "outspread and polished"]..." The Jewish translation renders it "a people who are very tall and who are oiled"—a reference to a style of presenting themselves.

The KJV is very awkward, but it is descriptive of the area south of Ethiopia—the area beyond the rivers of Ethiopia where the headwaters come down. We are looking at the area that centers on southern Ethiopia, Uganda and down into the area of Kenya—that area in East Africa is what is described. One particular tribe of the people who inhabit that area, the Watusi, is noted for their height. They are a people who are very tall and slim as compared to the peoples in other areas of Africa. That particular group of people is the dominant people there in East Africa. It's a descriptive term of a rather unique situation as we are going to notice here in chapter 18.

Let me summarize it. That is one of the areas that is the most devastated today. Look at the news of the Ethiopia, Uganda areas where large amounts of people have been dying of starvation and various diseases. It is one of the most tragic circumstances on the face of the earth today when you look at the destruction that has been wrought by the civil wars and the various things. What is described here? This describes the very first people who are going to voluntarily send emissaries up to Jerusalem and say, 'Come and teach us of your ways.'

Verse 7, "In that time a present will be brought to the Lord of hosts from a people tall and smooth of skin [People who are tall and oiled as their traditional style of native presentation. They are noted for that.], And from a people terrible from their beginning onward, a nation powerful and treading down, whose land the rivers divide—To the place of the name of the Lord of hosts, to Mount Zion.” What it describes here is at the time of Christ’s return. There is nobody who’s going to be more ready to respond than these people down below the rivers of Ethiopia, who have perhaps suffered more in the latter portion of the twentieth century than any other area of the earth. When you read a little bit of what is going on and what has been going on there, it is a very terrible circumstance.

You read in Isaiah 2 of how many nations are going to say, “Come let us go up to the house of the Lord, and He will teach us of His ways.” Those who are evidently singled out here as being the first to respond are those in the area in East Africa, an area that has been trodden down, an area that has really suffered quite a bit of tragedy and trauma, particularly in recent years. It’s kind of an interesting inset as it describes their response. By that time, they will have had enough of what man’s system produces, and it won’t take a whole lot of convincing that they want what Jesus Christ has brought there to Jerusalem.

Isaiah 19:1, “The burden against Egypt....” We address the subject of Egypt. We find what is ultimately going to come about in Egypt.

Verse 2, “I will set Egyptians against Egyptians; everyone will fight against his brother, and everyone against his neighbor, city against city, kingdom against kingdom.” Egypt is ultimately going to be confronted with a great deal of internal unrest and civil strife. There’s a great deal of that below the surface in Egypt right now, and this is what is ultimately going to occur.

Verse 4, “‘And the Egyptians I will give into the hand of a cruel master, and a fierce king will rule over them,’ says the Lord, the Lord of hosts.” This is, evidently, the Beast power. Other prophecies in Daniel show that they will come in and occupy Egypt.

In v. 5, we find the drought that is going to afflict Egypt.

Verse 17, “And the land of Judah shall be a terror to Egypt; everyone who makes mention of it will be afraid in himself...” That certainly has already come about. Remember the Six-Day War and the Yom Kippur War? You realize that the land of Judah has become a terror to the land of Egypt, to the point that it says “everyone who makes mention of it will be afraid in himself.” It scares them to even say the word. It singles out that it is the land of Judah because the nation that calls itself Israel in the Middle East is really, in Biblical terminology, the land of Judah.

It describes what is ultimately going to occur in v. 21, “Then the Lord will be known to Egypt, and the Egyptians will know the Lord in that day, and will make sacrifice and offerings...” God is going to have to smite Egypt. God is not going to have to smite Uganda, Ethiopia and Kenya when He comes back.

Verse 22, He is going to have to smite Egypt. But after He smites it, He will heal it, and they will return to the Lord. Other prophecies in Zechariah show that it’s going to take a while to get the point. They are not going to want to come up to the Feast and do certain things at the beginning (Zechariah 14:18-19). God will have to punish them, but He will do so for the purpose of bringing them to repentance. And when they repent, He will heal them.

There will ultimately be a highway out of Egypt to Assyria.

Verses 23-24, “In that day there will be a highway from Egypt to Assyria, and the Assyrian will come into Egypt and the Egyptian into Assyria, and the Egyptians will serve with the Assyrians. In that day Israel will be one of three with Egypt and Assyria, even a blessing in the midst of the land.”

Here we find described that in Tomorrow’s World when the lessons have been learned, Egypt and Assyria (modern-day Germany) will rank up near Israel as the great nations there in the midst of the land. They will serve as a blessing and as a conduit of God’s truth.

Of course, ancient Egypt gave their pagan religion to much of the rest of the world—not only to the rest of Africa, but also to other areas of the world. Greece borrowed their religion from the Egyptians, and the Romans borrowed it from the Greeks. So much of paganism goes back to the ancient Egyptians. They were responsible for that, both in Africa as well as in Europe. They have been a source of a great deal of problems in the past. The Germans (Assyrians) have been a source of problems and destruction, but when those people finally are converted, they will be a source of things that are positive. They will be blessings in the midst of the land. It even describes a great highway that is going to be built that is going to connect Egypt with Germany, going through the land of Israel. It will be something at that time that will serve as a source of blessings to all nations.

Isaiah 20 is more of a historical prophecy inset. It describes an ancient Assyrian captivity of the Egyptians and Ethiopians, based on what had occurred a little earlier in Ashdod.

Isaiah 21 addresses the areas of Elam and Media. This refers to the Slavic world; the Slavic peoples are basically descended from Elam. Media is a related people. This would refer, particularly, to the Ukraine. This would be an area that would be descriptive of much of Eastern and Central Europe.

Isaiah 21:2, “A distressing vision is declared to me; the treacherous dealer deals treacherously, and the plunderer plunders, Go up, O Elam! Besiege, O Media! All its sighing I have made to cease.”

Verse 9, “And look, here comes a chariot of men with a pair of horsemen! And he answered and said, ‘Babylon is fallen, is fallen! And all the carved images of her gods he has broken to the ground.’”

This section describes these areas, the alliance that is put together (of East and West in Europe); there’s going to be a lot of treachery involved in that. The peoples involved are ultimately going to betray one another, just as Napoleon and the Czar betrayed one another. Napoleon betrayed the Czar way back in the early 1800s, and that ultimately led to Napoleon’s defeat. Hitler didn’t learn anything from history and did exactly the same thing with Stalin. And there are ultimately going to be more treacherous dealings in the future. It is going to lead to the destruction of Babylon (modern Rome).

Verse 11, “The burden of Dumah [Dumah is an Arab tribe that lives in the area of Petra. That’s their modern-day location.]. He calls to me out of Seir [“Seir” is the ancient name for the area of which Petra was the capital.], ‘Watchman, what of the night? Watchman, what of the night?’” Here’s another indication of a group of people in the area of Petra. The modern-day native inhabitation right around that area is addressing one whom they regard as the watchman. If you go back to the book of Ezekiel, you will find that’s a term used to describe God’s work in the end time. They address one who they regard as the watchman. They see what’s going on, and they inquire of him how much time is left.

Verse 12, “The watchman said, ‘The morning comes, and also the night. If you will inquire, inquire; Return! Come back!’” The watchman simply tells them that they had better turn to God and then come again.

Verse 13 concludes with the burden directed toward Arabia (Saudi Arabia, the modern Arabian Peninsula).

Verses 16-17, Kedar is addressed. Kedar is the main tribe of Saudi Arabia. It describes their destruction and being diminished (KJV, “overwhelmed”).

Isaiah 22:1, “The burden against the Valley of Vision....”

Then it refers to the time of the Day of the Lord.

Verse 5, “For it is a day of trouble and treading down and perplexity by the Lord of hosts in the Valley of Vision....” It describes some of the events that are going to come about.

Isaiah 23:1, “The burden against Tyre....”

Ancient Tyre, addressed here, is symbolic of the state of Babylon the Great (modern Rome). In fact, some of the statements from Isaiah 23 are actually quoted and paraphrased back in Revelation 18 when it describes the fall of Babylon the Great. It describes the destruction of how it’s going to be overthrown.

Tyre was the great coastal trading city of the ancient world. It is used to typify the great trading combine that will ultimately arise. Actually, many of the descendants of the ancient people of Tyre have settled in portions of the southern part of Italy. Tyre, as the great trading capital of the ancient world, in that sense, is symbolic of Babylon the Great, which will not only be the religious, military and political capital, but it will also be a great trading economic combine.

It describes how God will bring about its destruction.

Isaiah 24:1, “Behold, the Lord will make the earth empty and make it waste, distorts its surface and scatter abroad its inhabitants.”

Verse 3, “The land shall be utterly emptied and utterly plundered....”

Verse 5, “The earth is also defiled under its inhabitants, because they have transgressed the laws, changed the ordinance, broken the everlasting covenant.” You can go back to Exodus 31 and see where the Sabbath is described as an everlasting covenant.

As a result of that, v. 6, “Therefore the curse has devoured the earth, and those who dwell in it are desolate. Therefore the inhabitants of the earth are burned, and few men are left.”

I will point this out because this is a verse that is quoted by the Seventh Day Adventist. If any of you are familiar with the writings of Ellen G. White and the Seventh Day Adventist Church, their teaching is that the earth will be desolate during the Millennium. The Seventh Day Adventists, those who followed Ellen G. White, were split-off from the Church of God back in the 1850s-1860s. There were those who had been associated with the Church who accepted her as a prophetess and followed her visions; that gave rise to the Seventh Day Adventist Church, which dates from about 1860. Her teaching is that the saints will spend the Millennium in heaven taking part in the investigative judgment—pouring over the books—kind of like one great one thousand-year soap opera. And you get to find out everything your neighbors were doing that you always suspected but never knew. Who in the world wants to spend a thousand years watching a sordid soap opera with every detail of every thing? This is what they anticipate doing. Their statement is that Satan is chained by circumstances because there is nobody on earth to deceive. That's their explanation.

In her writing, The Great Controversy, to prove her point that the earth is desolate during the Millennium, she quotes (or misquotes) Isaiah 24:6. The way she quotes it in the book is, "Therefore the curse has devoured the earth, and those who dwell in it are desolate. Therefore the inhabitants of the earth are burned [period]." If you read her book, you would not know that there were four words left out. She didn't quote the last part of the verse. She put a period where the Bible has a comma and left out the words, "...and few men left." Yes, there is going to be great destruction and great devastation, and all kinds of things are going to happen. But there are going to still be a few people who live through it. Verse 10, "The city of confusion is broken down, every house is shut up..."

Verses 19-20, "The earth is violently broken, the earth is split open, the earth is shaken exceedingly. The earth shall reel to and fro like a drunkard..."

Verse 21, "It shall come to pass in that day that the Lord will punish on high the host of exalted ones..." It describes the destruction that is going to come about, but there are going to be people who survive the events of the Day of the Lord. There will be a few men left.

In Isaiah 25:6-7, once the earth has come to this point and the world has come to this devastation, God steps in and says, "And in this mountain the Lord of hosts will make for all people a feast of choice pieces [KJV, "fat things"], a feast of wine on the lees, of fat things full of marrow, of well-refined wines on the lees. And He will destroy on this mountain the surface of the covering cast over all people, and the veil that is spread over all nations." In other words, the veil that covers the eyes of people so they cannot see and understand is going to be removed. God is going to make a feast of fat things to all people. There is going to be a time of abundance and a time of blessing. To make that possible, the veiled understanding that has kept people from being able to really see and understand is going to be removed.

Verses 8-9, "He will swallow up death forever, and the Lord God will wipe away tears from all faces; the rebuked of His people He will take away from all the earth; for the Lord has spoken. And it will be said in that day: 'Behold, this is our God; we have waited for Him, and He will save us....'" Certainly God is going to pour out His blessings once the world has come to its senses.

Isaiah 26 continues with this theme. It's basically a song of praise to God.

Isaiah 27:1, "In that day the Lord with His severe sword, great and strong, will punish Leviathan the fleeing serpent, Leviathan that twisted serpent..." This is descriptive of Satan the devil. It's the terminology back in Revelation 12:9 referring to Satan, that great dragon.

Verse 6, "Those who come He shall cause to take root in Jacob; Israel shall blossom and bud, and fill the face of the world with fruit." Once the remnant is re-gathered and brought back, they are going to begin to have families. They are going to blossom and bud. They are going to begin to multiply, and they will ultimately fill the face of the earth with fruit. Israel, at that time, will really be the blessing to all nations that God had intended for them to be. They will be a blessing as they begin to spread out once again evidencing God's way.

Verse 13, "So it shall be in that day that the great trumpet will be blown; they will come, who are about to perish in the land of Assyria, and they who are outcasts in the land of Egypt, and shall worship the Lord in the holy mount at Jerusalem." This refers to the return of Jesus Christ and the effect that it will have on the Israelites ready to perish in the concentration camps of the future. It will be that final fulfillment of the great day of Trumpets.

Isaiah 28 begins an indictment on Israel of the things that lead to their captivity.

Isaiah 28:1, "Woe to the crown of pride, to the drunkards of Ephraim [It might be pointed out that one of the highest concentrations of alcohol abuse in the western world is in the area of Britain.], Whose glorious beauty is a fading flower....” That has been the case. The glory of the British Empire has faded like a flower.

Verse 5, “...To the remnant of His people....” Only a remnant is left.

In v. 3, it describes this crown of pride that is there, and they are going to be brought down. God will bring them to repentance.

We have a little insight in terms of how the Bible is written.

Verses 9-11, ““Whom will he teach knowledge? And whom will he make to understand the message? Those just weaned from milk? Those just drawn from the breast? For precept must be upon precept, precept upon precept, line upon line, line upon line, here a little, there a little.’ For with stammering lips and another tongue he will speak to this people.”

Verse 13, “But the word of the Lord was to them, ‘precept upon precept, precept upon precept, line upon line, line upon line, here a little, there a little,’ that they might go and fall backward, and be broken....” The Bible is written where you have to get a little here and a little there, and you have to build on it. One line upon another, here a little, there a little, but you build it taking precept upon precept, line upon line—build it in a step-by-step way. Those who will be taught have to mature.

Verse 9, ““Whom will he teach knowledge? And whom will he make to understand the message? Those just weaned from milk? Those just drawn from the breast?” They have to take it a step at a time. The Bible is written so that those who are not being called are simply deceived. Even though they can read the Book, they don’t understand it.

Verse 16, “Therefore thus says the Lord God: ‘Behold, I lay in Zion a stone for a foundation, a tried stone, a precious cornerstone, a sure foundation; whoever believes will not act hastily.’” This refers to Jesus Christ.

In Isaiah 29, we continue with prophecies about Israel.

Isaiah 29:1, ““Woe to Ariel, to Ariel, the city where David dwelt!” “Ariel” is a poetic term used to refer to Israel which means “lion of God.” That is the Hebrew translation of Ariel.

Verse 13, “Therefore the Lord said: ‘Inasmuch as these people draw near to Me with their mouths and honor Me with their lips, but have removed their hearts far from Me....’”

Verse 14, God says He is going to work a marvelous work among them. The nation is ultimately going to hear, but God describes a nation that pays lip service—and that’s all. They are not sincerely seeking God. They pay lip service to God and to religion, but their heart, their priorities are elsewhere.

Verse 15, “Woe to those who seek deep to hide their counsel far from the Lord, and their works are in the dark; they say, ‘Who sees us?’ and, ‘Who knows us?’” Can you imagine anybody being so dumb as to think that what he is doing is secret and nobody knows? Yeah, we can all have imagined that. The point is that God says “woe” to somebody who thinks he is “putting it over” by doing it secretly in the dark and nobody will ever know. God knows! Whom are we serving? God knows!

The fact that no human being saw us doesn’t prove anything. If I do something in a dark closet, God can see in the dark as well as He can see in the daylight. I haven’t hidden anything from God, and God’s the One who ultimately judges. I better live my life in sincerity and truth before God, recognizing that God sees and hears. God will ultimately deal with the nation and with those who take this approach. It describes some of that through the rest of chapter 29.

Isaiah 30:1-2, ““Woe to the rebellious children,’ says the Lord, ‘who take counsel, but not of Me, and who devise plans, but not of My Spirit, that they may add sin to sin. Who walk to go down to Egypt, and have not asked My advice, to strengthen themselves in the strength of Pharaoh, and to trust in the showdown of Egypt!’” Israel is not seeking God but is seeking Egypt and other nations.

Verse 7, “For the Egyptians shall help in vain and to no purpose. Therefore I have called her Rahab-Hem Shebeth [Rahab sits idle].” (KJV, “...therefore have I cried concerning this, Their strength is to sit still.”) They won’t accomplish anything, and our nation won’t accomplish anything by trying to work something out with them. Perhaps they will be looking to them trying to work out something over the issue of oil or the Suez. We need to look to God.

Verse 8, “Now go, write it before them on a tablet, and note it on a scroll, that it may be for a time to come [margin, “the latter day”], forever and ever.”

Verses 9-10, “That this is a rebellious people, lying children, children who will not hear the law of the Lord. Who say to the seers, ‘Do not see,’ and to the prophets, ‘do not prophesy to us right things; speak to us smooth things, prophesy deceits.’”

‘We want you to tell us something nice.’ People don’t want to be told their sins by religious leaders. They don't even want to be told the problem by the analysts and political leaders. They want to believe that everything is going to get better and better, and if somebody comes along and starts telling the seriousness of what's going to happen, people don't like that.

Because the politicians are aware of that, none of them want to talk about the seriousness of some of the things that are happening or are going to happen because that's a good way to lose an election. You have to make people think that they can have a free lunch, take a free ride, put it all on their Visa and MasterCard and the bill will never come due.

That's what we are doing as a nation. We have over a hundred billion dollars a year deficit as a nation (1990). You can't live beyond your means indefinitely. You try it. I don't recommend that you do. Perhaps some of you have. Sooner or later, somebody shows up at the door and they are there to collect. That's life and it happens to nations as well as individuals. But the nation doesn't want to hear that. We don't want to be told. We don't want to pay higher taxes, but we don't want to get any of our government services cut either. We want everything! Everybody's for cutting the government, but they never want to cut anything that applies to them. Cut defense!

Boeing has a big plant in Lake Charles, Louisiana. What do you want to do—cut the Boeing contracts? We have people here that are involved in that, and a lot of people in Lake Charles are involved directly or indirectly. You want to cut defense? Fine. That means you're going to cut out a lot of Boeing's contracts, and that means they are going to shut plants and lay off people. Not only lay off people, but what about all the related service industry? You'd shut down bases, etc.

The point is nobody wants whatever he's getting money from to close down. We don't want anything cut off, but we also don't want to pay. You can't do it that way. You can't live life on a MasterCard or Visa forever and think that the bills will never come.

We say to our seers, to our prophets (both the secular and the religious sort), 'Tell us nice things; don't tell us bad news.' We don't want to hear bad things. 'Tell us what nice people we are and how everything is going to get better and better. Paint a rosy picture. Give us some confidence. Make us feel good about ourselves.' People want that in the secular realm and in the religious realm. Hopefully, we will never get to the point in our lives that we don't like being told bad news.

If we really find ourselves getting upset when corrective sermons come, then maybe we should go back and read Isaiah 30:10 and say, 'No, that's not the category I want to be in.' When we don't want to be told any bad news, then we are really cutting off our opportunities to grow. Correction hurts! I don't enjoy being corrected, in that sense. It's not pleasant at the time, but we can appreciate it afterwards because that's the way we learn and grow.

God tells us in Hebrew 12:11, "no chastening for the present is pleasant, but afterwards it yields the peaceable fruit of righteousness." I didn't enjoy it when my dad put his belt on my rear end. I look back on it, and I am very thankful that I had a father who loved me enough that he put that belt on me when I needed it. He held a tight rein on things, and I appreciate and value that.

It describes the nation and their attitude. They don't want correction; therefore, they don't want the plain word of God. This problem is ultimately going to be solved because when the Millennium comes and God's government is set up, and after all these things are over with, they will be taught.

Verses 20-21, "And though the Lord gives you the bread of adversity and the water of affliction, yet your teachers will not be moved into a corner anymore. But your eyes shall see your teachers. Your ears shall hear a word behind you, saying, 'This is the way, walk in it.' Whenever you turn to the right hand or whenever you turn to the left."

That is going to be a very interesting thing at the beginning of the Millennium as people get used to that. No longer will they just be able to ignore it and not want to hear the truth. The teachers won't be far off in a corner anymore; you'll see them! Suddenly, a spirit being will materialize behind somebody, and they will hear, 'Wait a minute. This is the way; walk you in it.' Talk about getting someone's attention! That will kind of put a damper on things.

But it will give us a level of supervision that sometimes, as parents of small children, we wish we could have when we're trying to keep them totally in our sight. The minute they get out of sight, they are into something. You're trying to make sure they don't get hurt, and you find yourself having to say, 'No, stop.' Probably one of the very first words kids learn is "no" because that's the one they hear the most often. So many things that little children think of could be harmful or dangerous.

We're going to have to deal with people and keep things pretty strict. Strictness does not mean a lack of love or a lack of mercy. But if you're going to get things back on the track, things have to be strict. When things start getting loose and lax, things start wandering off the track, and pretty soon you have a mess—not because they started out to have a mess, but because things wander astray. If a shepherd doesn't keep his flock together and where they are supposed to be, if he gets lax and careless, pretty soon they all wander off. Some may get lost in the woods and wolves (or whatever it may be) get them.

God is strict because He does love us and doesn't want us to get hurt. He is certainly going to have to be strict at the beginning of the Millennium to get things back on track because people are going to have so much to unlearn. It is going to take them a while to get the point that God's way really is the best way.

It describes the things that are going to take place.

Isaiah 31:1, "Woe to those who go down to Egypt for help, and rely on horses, who trust in chariots because they are many, and in horsemen because they are very strong, but who do not look to the Holy One of Israel, nor seek the Lord!" Their trust is not in God. Their trust is in human deliverance. That is an important matter of faith. God wants us to look to Him as our Deliverer. One of the sins of the nation is looking elsewhere, looking to physical resources to deliver us.

It describes the events that are going to occur in v. 4, "...So the Lord of hosts will come down to fight for Mount Zion and for its hill."

Verse 7, "For in that day every man shall throw away his idols of silver and his idols of gold—sin, which your own hands have made for yourselves." It describes the events when Jesus Christ returns and how they are going to throw away their idols. When the Day of the Lord comes, things are going to "melt down" in a hurry, but the result of that is that it will bring about the event of chapter 32.

Verse 8, "'Then shall the Assyrians fall by a sword not of man...'"

Isaiah 32:1, "Behold, a king will reign in righteousness, and princes will rule with justice." In v. 2, as a result of that and that society, "A man will be as a hiding place from the wind [A man will be a welcome sight. You see a stranger today, and you don't know how to react and respond.], and a cover from the tempest, as rivers of water in a dry place, as the shadow of a great rock in a weary land." It will be like water in a dry place, like a shadow on a hot day. It's going to be a welcome sight because there will be a basis of trust and confidence.

Verse 15, "Until the Spirit is poured upon us from on high, and the wilderness becomes a fruitful field, and the fruitful field is counted as a forest."

Verses 17-18, "The work of righteousness will be peace, and the effect of righteousness, quietness and assurance forever. My people will dwell in a peaceful habitation, in secure dwellings, and in quiet resting places." Peace is the result of righteousness. That's why there is not peace on earth today, and there will not be peace because first a king must reign in righteousness. The work of righteousness will be peace, and the effect of righteousness is quietness and assurance.

The world has all kinds of peace marches, peace crusades, peace groups, etc. Peace is an effect! It is the effect, the result and the consequence of righteousness. You are never going to have peace until you first have righteousness. Righteousness must precede peace. Peace is simply a logical result. When people are living in righteousness, they have peace. When we are conducting our lives righteously, we have peace with one another. The lack of peace comes in as a result of a lack of righteousness on somebody's part.

The world has to learn righteousness before it's going to have peace. The world wants peace, but they want to have their own variety of peace. The devil, in effect, has sold people on the idea that there's more than one way to have peace. The devil has sold the idea that you can come up with some other way and you can work it out your way. The great peace conferences that men have put together have always set the stage for the next war.

The Spirit is going to be poured out from on high.

Verse 15, "Until the Spirit is poured upon us from on high..." Peace is going to come through Jesus Christ. Human nature will be transformed. Christ will establish the rule of righteousness, and together with that, the Spirit of God will be poured out. That sets the stage for a transformation of human beings.

Isaiah 33:1, "Woe to you who plunder, though you have not been plundered; and you who deal treacherously, though they have not dealt treacherously with you!" This is referring to the Beast power. They are going to receive consequences for their actions.

Notice a couple of interesting verses.

Verses 5-6, “The Lord is exalted, for He dwells on high; He has filled Zion with justice and righteousness. Wisdom and knowledge will be the stability of your times. And the strength of salvation; the fear of the Lord is His treasure.”

We live in a very unstable world. Everything is in transition, and that has served to destabilize the lives of many, many people. “Wisdom and knowledge shall be the stability of your times.” There is a source of stability that we can have in our lives as the world is “topsy-turvy” around us. We don’t have to feel like everything is changing around us because if we have wisdom and knowledge, there is a source of stability.

Psalm 111:10, “The fear of the Lord is the beginning of wisdom; a good understanding have all they that do His commandments.”

Proverbs 9:10, “The fear of God is the beginning of wisdom, and the knowledge of the Holy One is understanding.” It is the starting point.

We have a source of wisdom and knowledge that can provide stability in our lives—a stability that the world does not have because the world doesn’t know where to look for any absolutes. The world doesn’t have absolutes. Everything is “topsy-turvy” and changing. A lot of people feel their whole lives are destabilized because it seems like everything is in a state of flux and changing. All the rules have changed.

The reality is none of the rules have changed if you are going to go back to God’s rules. God is consistent.

Hebrews 13:8, “Jesus Christ is the same yesterday, today, and forever.” All we have to do is get back to God’s rules. The wisdom and knowledge that comes from God is an eternal wisdom and knowledge and a source of stability. What’s right today was right yesterday and will be right a year, ten years, a hundred years and a thousand years from now. What was wrong five, ten, fifty, one hundred and a thousand years ago, is just as wrong today. If it’s wrong, it’s wrong; if it’s right, it’s right. We have the source of stability that the world doesn’t have.

That lack of stability is one of the things that contribute to so many problems, even the psychological and emotional problems that so many are beset with. They look around and see everything changing, and they feel like they have to change to be “up” with the times—or maybe I should say to be “down” with the times. The times are on a toboggan slide. There is no agreement on things that even a generation or two ago there was agreement on. You watch old reruns on television made back in the early 60s, and you can see the differences in what was taken for granted as normal. There was, at least, a certain agreement in society about what constitutes normal. Society has lost much of that agreement now. I’m not setting up any period as an ideal time because, no, it wasn’t. But there was, at least, more of a Biblically-based value system that tended to be taken for granted. That has been lost, and there is a lack of stability because of that.

What it describes is in the context of the end-times.

Isaiah 33:7-8, “Surely their valiant ones shall cry outside, the ambassadors of peace shall weep bitterly. The highways lie waste....” It describes the time of the end that is going to bring about all of the destruction and all of the things that’s going to catch people by surprise. But, we have a source of stability during those trying times.

Let me call your attention to something in vv. 14-16, “The sinners in Zion are afraid; fearfulness has seized the hypocrites: ‘Who among us shall dwell with the devouring fire? Who among us shall dwell with everlasting burnings?’ He who walks righteously and speaks uprightly, he who despises the gain of oppressions, who gestures with his hands, refusing bribes, who stops his ears from hearing of bloodshed, and shuts his eyes from seeing evil: He shall dwell on high [or dwell on the heights]; His place of defense will be the fortress of rocks [KJV, “munitions of rocks”]....”

That’s a very awkward translation. The marginal rendering is “the stronghold of Sela or Petra”—“Sela” is the Hebrew term.

Verses 16-19, “He shall dwell on high; His place of defense will be the fortress of rocks; bread will be given him, his water will be sure. Your eyes will see the King in His beauty; they will see the land that is very far off. Your heart will meditate on terror [you will meditate on what is going on]: ‘Where is the scribe? Where is he that weighs? Where is he who counts the towers?’ You will not see a fierce people, a people of obscure speech, beyond perception....” You won’t see these events. You won’t be there at that time.

Verse 20, you will be able to look upon Zion, the city of our solemnities, of our festival seasons; your eyes will see Jerusalem, a quiet habitation. It describes a time when the sinners of Zion are afraid. Who is going to dwell with the devouring fire? Who is going to be able to survive all these burnings? Who is going to be protected during the time of this catastrophe?

Verse 15 says, “He who walks righteously and speak uprightly....” –The one who does what’s right. How are they going to be protected? They will dwell in the heights. Their place of defense will be the stronghold of Sela; bread and water will be provided for them—and they will ultimately see the King (Jesus Christ) in His beauty. Again, this is one of those verses that seem to indicate the possibility that Petra may very well be the place of protection for God’s Church in the end time.

Notice what Jerusalem is going to be like in Tomorrow’s World.

Verse 20, “Look upon Zion, the city of our appointed feasts; your eyes will see Jerusalem, a quiet habitation, a tabernacle that will not be taken down....” It is truly going to be the city of peace. That’s what the word “Jerusalem” means, and that’s what it will be in Tomorrow’s World. It will be the city of peace.

Isaiah 34 describes the Day of the Lord.

Isaiah 34:2, “For the indignation of the Lord is against all nations, and His fury upon their armies....”

Verse 8, “For it is the day of the Lord’s vengeance, and the year of recompense for the cause of Zion.” Very likely, the Day of the Lord will be that final year of the three and one-half-year period. The tribulation begins three and one-half years before the return of Christ. But the last year of that is going to be God’s wrath—the day of the Eternal’s vengeance. It comes down and describes that.

Then it describes what is ultimately going to be the consequence afterward. There is going to be rejuvenation to the whole world.

Isaiah 35:1, “The wilderness and the wasteland shall be glad for them, and the desert shall rejoice and blossom as the rose.” The geographic transformation that will take place will make Tomorrow’s World a wonderful, habitable place for all humanity. We see the description of the great transformation that is going to take place. It will be a time of tremendous healings.

Verse 5, “Then the eyes of the blind will be opened, and the ears of the deaf shall be unstopped.”

A time when the desert will bloom and, vv. 6-7, dry land will produce water. God will divide their inheritance to the nations, but another aspect of that is that everybody’s inheritance is going to be a nice place to be. In today’s world, nations covet what other nations have and try to take it away from them. That won’t be the case. Christ won’t allow that. But He’s also going to make sure that everybody’s heritage, everybody’s habitation, is going to be a beautiful, productive place.

Scripture describes a highway that is going to be built, and they are going to call it the “Way of Holiness.” I like this description.

Verse 8, “A highway shall be there, and a road, and it shall be called the Highway of Holiness. The unclean shall not pass over it, but it shall be for others. Whoever walks the road, although a fool, shall not go astray.” I like this description. Road directions are going to be simple in Tomorrow’s World. You’re not going to get turned around and lost. If you’ve ever been in one of our big cities and gotten turned around on some of these expressways, sometimes it’s like a bowl of spaghetti. You go to Houston and it’s all headed every which way. You don’t have to be a fool to be lost on something like that.

The highway that God is going to build in the Millennium is going to have a name. It is going to be called the “Way of Holiness.” It’s going to be a highway. It will be for the wayfaring man, and even if he’s not really smart, he’s still not going to get lost on it because it’s going to be simple. That’s descriptive of God’s way of life. The Bible is simple. It’s not all easy. Everything God says is not easy to do, but it is simple and clear-cut. Anytime somebody starts making it so complicated you can’t understand it, you better sit back and have a big “question mark” because God talks about the simplicity of Christ (II Corinthians 11:3). God’s way is simple. It’s clear-cut. There’s a difference between “easy” and “simple.” A program can be simple but not necessarily easy to put into practice. God’s way is simple and clear-cut, and this highway is, in a sense, going to be a reflection of that. Many times God uses physical things to symbolize something, and this is evidently going to be the case here.

This brings us down to a concluding point. The next Bible study we will cover chapters 36-49.

This particular portion provides a historical inset into the main theme of the book. It gives us events in the life of Hezekiah and the invasion of Judah. It gives Hezekiah's subsequent illness and healing. Throughout the book we have an emphasis on the promises of God. This historical inset, as it were, serves an appropriate place for faith-building realities of God's promises. It gives us some insights into what God does and the way He does it.

In chapter 40, a new section of the book opens up. The critics call it "Deutro Isaiah"—a second Isaiah. Critics have a problem with chapters 40-66. There is a prophecy concerning Cyrus, a king of the Medes and Persians. He was prophesied to come on the scene. They could not accept this, and the alternative is to say that it was written after the fact. One of the problems that the critics have is acknowledging the fact that there is a God who rules in the kingdom of men (Daniel 4:17) and declares the end from the beginning (Isaiah 46:10). Those prophecies are introduced with the statement, "Here is the proof that the God of heaven is far above all idols because He declares the end from the beginning." Prophecy is a proof that God exists. It singles out that this could not have been written on the human level. A person obviously changes certain methods of style and expressing oneself. We don't express ourselves always in the same way. The subject matter varies and the time of his life that it was written varies. Why should it be surprising that there are certain variations in that way?

Chapters 36 and 37 deal with the Assyrian invasion of Judah, Hezekiah's reaction to that invasion and God's deliverance.

Chapter 38 deals with his illness and his subsequent healing.

In chapter 39, we see what ultimately proved to be a mistake in terms of Hezekiah's dealing with the Babylonian ambassador.

Chapter 40 deals with a commission that God gives to this world—to His end-time work—to speak comfortably to Jerusalem and to prepare the way before Jesus Christ.

Chapter 41 focuses in on the fact that prophecy is a proof of God. God's greatness is contrasted with the puniness of man.

Chapter 42 continues to focus in on the coming of the Messiah. Prophecy is again pointed out as a proof of God and that Christ is coming to magnify the law. This is all brought out in chapter 42.

Chapter 43 deals with the re-gathering and the redemption of Israel.

Chapters 44 and 45 show how God will ultimately pour out His Spirit upon Israel. It also has a prophecy of Cyrus, and the greatness of our Creator is praised.

Chapter 46 again points out prophecy as a proof of God.

Chapter 47 deals with actually what is Rome or the Catholic Church, as you will notice here.

We see in chapter 48 a prophecy that points out that modern Israel uses the name of God, but is not really practicing what they preach. They will ultimately be punished and then redeemed. Chapter 49 shows that God will not abandon Israel. They will be re-gathered from the entire earth from their captivity. They'll prosper and increase under the government of God.

We come to the fourteenth year of King Hezekiah, which we would date as 701 B.C. Isaiah 36:1, "Now it came to pass in the fourteenth year of King Hezekiah, and Sennacherib, king of Assyria came up against all the fortified cities of Judah and took them." The Assyrians had previously invaded and conquered northern Israel. The process of deportation had been ongoing. The Assyrians returned now in the fourteenth year of Hezekiah and invaded Judah. They very quickly overran the nation of Judah and came to the point of laying siege to Jerusalem. They very quickly overran the whole land. They wanted to intimidate the Jews into surrendering the nation and Jerusalem without a fight. So they began to tell them, 'Look, you'd better surrender.' We see the representative of the king of Assyria trying to intimidate them.

Verse 4, "Then the Rabshakeh said to them, 'Say now to Hezekiah, "Thus says the great king, the king of Assyria: 'What confidence is this in which you trust?'"'"

Verses 6-7, 'What are you going to depend on to defend yourself from me? Why there is nothing you can depend on! You depend on the Egyptians; they are not going to do it. You depend on your God and He is not going to do it. Didn't Hezekiah just get through tearing down all these altars?' Of course, what the Assyrians didn't understand was God didn't want all those altars. God wanted to be worshipped in spirit and in truth (John 4:23; Joshua 24:14) there in Jerusalem.

Verse 10, “Have I now come up without the Lord against this land to destroy it? The Lord said to me, ‘Go up against this land, and destroy it.’” He said, ‘God wants us to come here and destroy this land. Why we’re here doing God’s will.’

About this time a couple of Hezekiah’s servants came out.

Verse 11, “Then Eliakin, Shebna and Joab said to the Rabshakeh, ‘Please speak to your servants in the Aramaic language....’” They asked the Assyrians, Rabshakeh, ‘Why don’t you speak to us in Aramaic rather than Hebrew?’ Aramaic was the common language of diplomacy throughout the Middle East at that time.

What it amounted to was the representative of the Assyrian king was down below the city wall, everybody was gathered up there, and they were “all ears.” He was trying to sap their confidence and undermine their faith; therefore, he was speaking in Hebrew because he wanted all the people to understand him. He wanted those who were up there to hear and understand so they could go and spread the rumor. He was hoping this would undermine any credibility King Hezekiah had, and they would surrender without a fight. Hezekiah’s servant asked, ‘Why don’t you speak to us in Aramaic?’ He didn’t want to do that; he wanted to intimidate them.

Verses 16-17, “Do not listen to Hezekiah; for thus says the king of Assyria: ‘Make an agreement with me by a present and come out to me; and every one of you eat from his own vine and every one from his own fig tree, and every one of you drink the waters of his own cistern; until I come and take you away to a land like your own land, a land of grain and new wine, a land of bread and vineyards.’”

‘Why, we Germans have your best interest at heart. We are going to give you the Millennium, German style. We’re concerned about you Jews. We have some nice cattle cars out here that we’re going to load you up into, and we’re going to take you to this nice place. We have this nice place in mind for you. Just surrender and come out; you can sit under your own vine and under your own fig tree.’

Now that expression is only used a couple of other times in the Bible. It’s used once to refer to the time of King Solomon (I Kings 4:25), and the other time it’s used is in Micah to refer to the Millennium (Micah 4:4). Solomon’s reign was a type of the Millennium.

It is a descriptive phrase to describe what it’s going to be like in the Millennium. It’s going to be a time of peace and prosperity. So, in effect, they showed up and said, ‘We will offer you the Millennium our style.’ Kind of sounds like the one thousand-year Reich. It’s kind of funny how some of the tactics and inspiration that Satan has given to those who have done his bidding have not changed. He usually tries to present some sort of a counterfeit of what God promises. ‘We will take you to a nice place.’ Sure they will!

Verses 18-20, ‘Your god can’t deliver you.’

In Isaiah 37, word came to Hezekiah and he went to the house of God.

Verses 1-4, he was very concerned and had been deeply praying to God about this whole matter.

Verses 9-13, Hezekiah received a letter that laid out all kinds of accusations and demanded unconditional surrender.

Isaiah 37:14-17, “And Hezekiah received the letter from the hand of the messengers, and read it; and Hezekiah went up to the house of the Lord, and spread it before the Lord. Then Hezekiah prayed to the Lord, saying: ‘O Lord of hosts, God of Israel, the One who dwells between the cherubim, You are God, You alone, of all the kingdoms of the earth. You have made heaven and earth. Incline Your ear, O Lord, and hear; open Your eyes, O Lord, and see; and hear all the words of Sennacherib, who has sent to reproach the living God.’”

In effect, when Hezekiah got the letter, he went into the temple, laid it before God and said, ‘Look, You can read this. You see what they are saying. They are comparing You to the gods of the nations. Now truly they have triumphed over all these nations, and those nations’ gods couldn’t deliver them because they are really no gods. You are the Creator God.’ He really besought God and earnestly talked to God. God sent word to Hezekiah by Isaiah that said, ‘I will take care of this; I will intervene in your behalf. I will defend this city.’

Verses 35-36, “For I will defend this city, to save it for My own sake and for My servant David’s sake.’ Then the angel of the Lord went out, and killed in the camp of the Assyrians one hundred and eighty-five thousand; and when people arose early in the morning, there were the corpses—all dead.” The dead corpses didn’t get up and discover they were dead. It was the people who were alive who got up the next morning and saw the one hundred eighty-five thousand soldiers (the army of the Assyrians) who had died the night before.

Verse 37, “So Sennacherib king of Assyria departed and went away, and returned home, and remained at Nineveh.” KJV, “When Sennacherib king of Assyria departed and went and returned and dwelt at Nineveh.” You can just imagine. He got up the next morning, started calling for his servant, and nobody came. You can visualize in your mind how mad he must have gotten that nobody was there to bring him whatever it was that he wanted. He walked out of the door and what he saw was dead soldiers lying around—everywhere he looked he saw dead soldiers. I would suspect that he departed and went away and returned—all three of them—about as quickly as he could get on a horse and get out of there. He was “high-tailing” it.

Verse 38, when he got to Nineveh, he went in to worship in the house of his god. His sons came in and assassinated him. He had been saying some derogatory things about the God of heaven earlier, and he found out very quickly who was able to deliver whom. He was challenging the armies of the Living God.

We see Hezekiah’s response. When he was confronted with a problem of this magnitude, Hezekiah went to God. He recognized that the source of our solutions, the source of our health, is God. He went to God in faith and in confidence.

Isaiah 38:1, “In those days Hezekiah was sick and near death. And Isaiah the prophet, the son of Amoz, went to him and said to him, ‘Thus says the Lord: “Set your house in order, for you shall die and not live.”’” Isaiah came in and told him, ‘You had better get things in order because you’re about to die.’ Josephus tells us that this was the last three days of this Assyrian siege of Jerusalem. Interestingly enough (we know this from history and from Josephus), the night the Assyrian army died was the night of the Passover. The death angel passed through the camp, and guess who wasn’t under the blood of the lamb? The Assyrians! It was the same as the Egyptians many centuries earlier. It was in the context of the Passover that God intervened and wiped out the Assyrian army. And it is also in that same context that God healed Hezekiah.

Have you ever seen that “when it rains, it pours”? Everything that can go wrong happens at the same time. Hezekiah must have felt like that. Realize that we read it and think, ‘Boy, wasn’t that great! Hezekiah had faith!’ And we go right on. But you realize this thing had been building for months and months. The Assyrians had been sending ultimatums. They had been invading other nations. They had invaded Northern Israel much earlier, and God had spared Judah.

Hezekiah had been serving God. Remember the story of his great Passover—the most tremendous observance of the Passover since the days of Solomon (II Chronicles 30:1-26). Since that had happened twelve to thirteen years earlier, all this had been going along for a period of years. Now the Assyrians invaded and began to pour through the land. As a few weeks went by, they overran more and more of Judah. They went down and smashed the Egyptians. Then they came back up and brought both armies together to come against Jerusalem.

Don’t you think all through these months, and now particularly in the last few weeks, Hezekiah has really been praying and crying out to God for deliverance. The Assyrians kept overrunning more and more until they finally overran the whole land. They had Jerusalem surrounded. They put siege around it. Then they began waging this psychological warfare to wear down and discourage the people. Then to top it all off, right at a moment like that, Hezekiah gets sick—really sick. He “takes” to his bed. God’s servant, Isaiah, finally comes in and says, ‘I have bad news. You’re going to die, so you had better just get your affairs in order. You’re going to die of this.’

Hezekiah must have been feeling pretty low about that time. He began to really cry out to God. He went to God with it. He besought God for His intervention in terms of healing. God intervened, healed Hezekiah and that evening wiped out the Assyrian army—that evening of the Passover. That was a tremendous intervention that God performed.

We need to recognize as we go through some of these things, Hezekiah lived through his trial the same way you and I live through ours—one day at a time. When it’s over and we look back on it, we know how it turned out and it seems simple enough as time distances us from it. But when you’re in the midst of it and you haven’t read the end of the story yet, you don’t know exactly what will happen. You only know by faith.

Hebrews 11:1, “Now faith is the substance of things hoped for, the evidence of things not seen.” It is fundamental to our relationship with God.

Hebrew 11:6, “But without faith it is impossible to please Him...” Hezekiah stands out as an example of faith—an example of one who looked to God and trusted God, and God performed a tremendous miracle. God added fifteen years to the life of Hezekiah.

Isaiah 38:5-6, “Go and say to Hezekiah, “Thus says the Lord, the God of David your father: ‘I have heard your prayer, I have seen your tears; and I will add to your days fifteen years. I will deliver you and this city from the hand of the king of Assyria, and I will defend this city.’””

All of a sudden at one time, the whole thing began to break. But can you imagine how Hezekiah must have felt. He must have felt like the whole world was caving in on him at the same time. Here were the Assyrians about to lay waste to the city, and he was about to die. And where was God? God does not always step in at the moment that we think that He should do so. God chooses His time.

God worked a tremendous miracle here, and there were actually fifteen Psalms added to Scripture, Psalms 120—134. These are termed the Psalms of Degrees or the Psalms of Ascents, as each one is entitled. Psalms 120—134, there are fifteen of them.

Isaiah 38:20, Hezekiah said that he would establish songs that would be sung to the stringed instruments all the days of our life in the house of the Lord. This would refer to sacred music, music that we would refer to as Psalms. The fifteen psalms of degrees are considered to be added by Hezekiah at this time.

In Isaiah 39, we find even people of faith and those close to God sometimes make mistakes. There is a time to speak and a time to keep silent (Ecclesiastes 3:7). We can sometimes say things we would be better off not saying.

The king of Babylon sent an ambassador to Hezekiah in the aftermath of Hezekiah’s illness. The Babylonians were glad to see what had happened to the Assyrians because the Assyrians were threatening them. Hezekiah wanted to impress this visiting representative, so he showed him through the temple treasury and the palace treasury. He really kind of “laid it on thick,” which in the long run was not a very smart idea because the Babylonians took note of what wealth the Jews had—which they hadn’t realized before. In a later generation (when Nebuchadnezzar ruled), they remembered it and decided that Jerusalem was worth attacking after all.

Verses 5-7, God warned him of that and told him that it would eventually happen that way. We should not seek to go around and to impress other people. It will ultimately lead to problems.

This ends this inset. This inset is, in a sense, to bolster our faith, to encourage us and to point us to the reality of God’s fulfillment of His promises.

A new section opens up. We begin to get back into prophecy.

Isaiah 40:1-3, “Comfort, yes, comfort My people!” says your God. ‘Speak comfort in Jerusalem, and cry out to her, that her warfare is ended, that her iniquity is pardoned; for she has received from the Lord’s hand double for all her sins.’ The voice of one crying in the wilderness: ‘Prepare the way of the Lord; Make straight in the desert a highway for our God.’”

We find part of the mission of this work defined here in v. 3. It refers to John the Baptist who prepared the way for Christ’s first coming. That statement is quoted in reference to John the Baptist (Matthew 3:3; Mark 1:3). It would also be in reference to the work that God has done through this work—through the Philadelphia era of His Church—to prepare the way for the second coming of Christ.

Mark 1:3, “‘A voice crying in the wilderness, prepare you the way, make ready.’” What is it that should be said as we go out with the gospel message? Let’s notice an interesting statement that we over the years have taken to perhaps refer to Radio Jerusalem.

Isaiah 40:9-10, “O Zion, you who bring good tidings, get up into the high mountain; O Jerusalem, you who bring good tidings, lift up your voice with strength, lift it up, be not afraid; say to the cities of Judah, ‘Behold your God!’ Behold, the Lord God shall come with a strong hand, and His arm shall rule for Him; Behold, His reward is with Him, and His work before Him.” Here is the proclamation of the good news of the Kingdom of God.

Verse 9, “...you who bring good tidings [the gospel]...lift up your voice with strength...” Broadcast it to the cities of Judah with strength. This gives the impression—and we have sometimes taken that as a possible indication—that there would be, before the end, a broadcast going forth from Jerusalem announcing the gospel to the cities of Judah.

It’s interesting. You know, God has a time scale and a time schedule. I remember very clearly, and many of you will remember back in 1967, I received a co-worker letter in the end of May where Mr. Herbert Armstrong was telling of the exciting news that he had just signed a contract with Radio Jerusalem. In fact, it was the largest contract in radio history with King Hussein of Jordan. At that time, the old city of Jerusalem was under Arab/Jordanian rule. We were to begin a broadcast on Radio Jerusalem, and it was to begin on Pentecost of 1967. He was actually going to fly to Jerusalem and make that first broadcast live. I remember where I was when the Six Day War broke out and I heard the news.

Mr. Armstrong was on his way from Ambassador College in Bricket Wood, England, to the airport. He was in transit in a car on his way to the airport, ready to board a plane and touch down in a couple of hours in Jerusalem. Then he was to go in and make that live broadcast. So it was within a matter of just a few hours, from the time that the broadcast was to go out, that all of a sudden, just like that, a war broke out, which lasted six days. Interestingly enough, it ended prior to sunset on Friday evening. It was an incredible event that totally changed the complexion of the Middle East. That portion of Jerusalem was no longer under Arab rule. All of a sudden, the Jews had taken the West Bank, the Golan Heights and the Sinai. You name it and they took it.

We all thought that we were on the verge of Isaiah 40:9 being fulfilled. Now that has been a few years ago—twenty-three years ago. It was not yet God's time to accomplish this prophecy in 1967; we thought it was. The doors had opened, everything had fallen into place, and we thought this prophecy was on the verge of being fulfilled. It came within about five hours of being fulfilled. But it wasn't God's time. God is the One who opens doors and no man can close them when he opens them. But He is also the One who closes doors and when He closes them, no man can open them (Revelation 3:7-8). I think the time is ultimately going to come when this verse is going to be fulfilled.

From everything that I can see here in vv. 9-10, it gives a clear indication that the gospel will be proclaimed from Jerusalem prior to the return of Christ because it says, "Behold your God shall come" or "is coming." That is a statement that is made prior to the return of Christ. He will come. It doesn't say He has come and He's already here. It says He is going to rule. His work is before Him and His reward is with Him. This proclamation that is going to have to be made to the cities of Judah has not really gone out. It has not really reached them as a warning and a witness yet. God will do so in His time.

As we come down, we focus on the magnitude and the greatness of God in v. 15, "Behold, the nations are as a drop in a bucket, and are counted as the small dust on the balance...." All the nations are as a drop of a bucket compared to God. They are like "nothing" before Him.

There is an interesting statement. At the time of Isaiah, the various pagans believed that the earth was flat, that it rested on the back of a great turtle. You have to ask yourself, 'On what did the great turtle rest?' They evidently never got that far. The Greeks, Romans, Assyrians and the Egyptians and Babylonians all had these crazy ideas.

But Isaiah writing under the inspiration of God's Holy Spirit wrote in v. 22, "It is He [referring to God] who sits above the circle of the earth, and the inhabitants thereof are like grasshoppers...." God sits upon the circle of the earth! The word that is translated "circle" is a word that literally means "a sphere" in the Hebrew language. God sits upon the circle of the earth or "chuwg" in the Hebrew. This is a term that refers literally to "a sphere." He understood under the inspiration of God that the earth was round. The contemporary pagans didn't understand that.

Verse 25, "'To whom then will you liken Me, or to whom shall I be equal?' says the Holy One." To whom will we compare God?

Isaiah 41:4, "'...I, the Lord, am the first; and with the last I am He.'"

Verses 21-23, "'Present your case,' says the Lord. 'Bring forth your strong reasons,' says the King of Jacob. 'Let them bring forth and show us what will happen; Let them show the former things, what they were, that we may consider them, and know the latter end of them; or declare to us things to come. Show the things that are to come hereafter, that we may know that you are gods; yes, do good or do evil that we may be dismayed....'" What is brought out here is that fulfilled prophecy is a proof of God. It is brought out in Isaiah 41 as a means of telling the true and all-powerful ruling Creator God from the idols of men's invention. It is the great contrast.

Here, the critics want to come along and say, 'Well, Isaiah didn't write this part of the book. This was just added in later.' The whole context (the way that it is brought out) is, 'Look, I am telling you things that are going to come to pass afterwards.' Prophecy is a proof.

How do you stick in something like that afterwards and have it accepted? How do you make an issue out of the fact that you're going to tell things that are going to come to pass and that's a proof that you speak for God, when you're telling about things that happened fifty or one hundred years ago. That doesn't give you any credibility.

How does something like that ever get accepted as Scripture? It makes no sense! The critics don't think it through. They simply don't want to acknowledge that there is a God who rules in the affairs of men. If they acknowledge that, then they may have to acknowledge the fact that He may have something to say about the way they live, and that maybe they had better clean up their dirty little lives. They don't want to do that. So the simplest thing to do is say, 'We just discount this.'

Then, in Isaiah 42:1-7, a prophecy of Jesus Christ, "'Behold! My Servant whom I uphold, My Elect One in whom My soul delights! I have put My Spirit upon Him; He will bring forth justice to the Gentiles. He will not cry out, nor raise His voice, nor cause His voice to be heard in the street. A bruised reed He will not break, and smoking flax He will not quench; He will bring forth justice for truth. He will not fail nor be discouraged, till He has established justice in the earth; and the coastlands shall wait for His law.'" Thus says God the Lord, who created the heavens and stretched them out, who spread forth the earth and that which comes from it, who gives breath to the people on it, and spirit to those who walk on it: 'I, the Lord, have called You in righteousness, and will hold Your hand; I will keep You and give You as a covenant to the people, as a light to the Gentiles, to open blind eyes, to bring out prisoners from the prison, those who sit in darkness from the prison house.'"

As we see here, this is a clear reference to Jesus Christ. A portion of this is quoted in Matthew 12:17-21 and the remainder is quoted in Luke 2:32. It is an interesting reference to God's Servant, to Jesus Christ the Messiah who came in the role of a servant. He did not come trying to lead some kind of great demonstration or reform movement. He was not out trying to overthrow anything. He did not come to change things at that time. "A bruised [KJV, "braided"] reed He will not break." He did not come to fix things then, but He is going to come with judgment. And when He does come, He will not fail nor be discouraged until He sets judgment in the earth. He is coming as a light to the nations (v. 6). He is coming to open the eyes of the blind and to bring out of darkness those who are imprisoned in it. These prophecies and statements are referred to in the New Testament as a reference to the Messiah.

As we come down, there is another reference to what the Messiah will do.

Verse 21, "The Lord is well pleased for His righteousness' sake; He will magnify the law and make it honorable." He will magnify the law and make it honorable! That was what Jesus Christ came to do. He fulfilled that on the Sermon on the Mount as well as other places. Christ did not come to minimize the law or do away with the law. He came to magnify the law.

Matthew 5:17, "'Do not think that I came to destroy the Law or the Prophets. I did not come to destroy, but to fulfill.'" He came to fill it up. He came to make it complete and full. He came to magnify. That was actually prophesied right here in Isaiah 42:21.

In Isaiah 43, we have a clear reference to the fact that the Lord of the Old Testament is the One who actually became Jesus Christ in the New Testament. Let's pick it up in v. 10 so that there is no misunderstanding on that.

Isaiah 43:10-13, "'You are My witnesses,' says the Lord, 'and My servant whom I have chosen, that you may know and believe Me, and understand that I am He. Before Me there was no God formed. I, even I, am the Lord, and besides Me there is no savior. I have declared and saved, I have proclaimed, and there was no foreign god among you; Therefore you are My witnesses,' says the Lord, 'that I am God. Indeed before the day was, I am He; and there is no one who can deliver out of My hand; I work, and who will reverse it [who shall hinder it or turn it back]?'"

When it says in v. 10, "...Before Me there was no God formed, neither shall there be after Me," the word "God" is "Elohim." The "im" ending is a plural ending in Hebrew. Any word in English when we make it plural, we add an "s." "Elohim" is the term that is used for God referring to the God Family.

Genesis 1:1, "In the beginning God [Elohim] created the heavens and the earth." The word "God" is "Elohim."

Later in v. 26, "...Let Us make man in Our image, after Our likeness..." This clearly shows the use of the plural pronoun. God said, "Let Us make man in Our image, after Our likeness." We understand that this was a conversation between the One that we know as the Father and the One that we know as the Son, Jesus Christ.

When He says in v. 10, "...Before Me there was no God formed," there was no Elohim formed; there was no other God Family formed and neither would there be after Him. We are not coming as some other Elohim. We will be a part of that Family. We will be born into that Family because Elohim is the Family name that, at this point, includes the One who we know as the Father and the One we call Jesus Christ, the Messiah.

In John 1, Jesus Christ is called the Word.

John 1:1, “In the beginning was the Word...the Word was God...” There was that unity from the beginning. The God Family consisted of the Father and the Word. We can ultimately be born (born again) into that Family as a son of God. So there is no contradiction to what it says here in v. 10.

Then the One who is here speaking to Isaiah, inspiring these things, says, v. 11, “I, even I, am the Eternal, and besides Me there is no savior.”

Acts 4:12, “Nor is there salvation in any other, for there is no other name under heaven given among men by which we must be saved.” This clearly shows that the One who is referred to in Acts 4:12—the One we know as Jesus Christ—is clearly the Eternal, the Lord of the Old Testament and the One who is identified as the Savior. Christ came to reveal the Father. The Father was not the One who had dealt with the Old Testament patriarchs; it was the Word, the One we know as Christ. He came to reveal the Father because they did not know the Father (Matthew 11:27; Luke 10:22).

Isaiah 44:1-4, “Yet hear now, O Jacob My servant, and Israel whom I have chosen. Thus says the Lord who made you and formed you from the womb, who will help you: ‘Fear not, O Jacob My servant; and you, Jeshurun, whom I have chosen. For I will pour water on him who is thirsty and floods on the dry ground. I will pour My Spirit on your descendants, and My blessing on your offspring. They will spring up among the grass like willows by the watercourses.’” Here we are shown that God is going to pour out His Spirit upon Israel, and it is going to cause Israel to flourish like willow trees on a riverbank.

Verse 3, “I am going to pour out My Spirit upon your descendants.” That is ultimately going to occur in completion in Tomorrow’s World.

Verse 6, “Thus says the Lord, the King of Israel, and his Redeemer, the Lord of hosts: ‘I am the First and I am the Last; Besides Me there is no God.’” There is no Elohim. There is no other God Family. God is used here, in that sense, as the Family name. It refers to the Father and Christ.

In vv. 9-11, He talks about the idols and they are ridiculed. He describes how they make this idol.

Verse 12, “The blacksmith with the tongs works one in the coals, fashions it with hammers, and works it with the strength of his arms. Even so, he is hungry, and his strength fails; He drinks no water and is faint.” He is a human being.

Verses 13-14, “The craftsman stretches out his rule, he marks one out with chalk; he fashions it with a plane, he marks it out with the compass, and makes it like the figure of a man...He hews down cedars for himself, and takes the cypress and the oak; he secures it for himself among the trees of the forest. He plants a pine, and the rain nourishes it.”

Verses 15-17, he cuts down a tree and some of it he uses for firewood to warm himself or as wood for a cook stove to bake bread. Then part of it he takes and makes a god out of it. How silly that is. A guy cuts down a tree. He takes parts of it and builds a fire. And he takes a part out, carves it out, makes a god out of it and starts bowing down and worshipping it. God says what sense is that? The tree was growing. The rain made the tree grow. You’ve used some of it for productive purposes. Then you carved up some of it, started worshipping it and started thinking that’s your god. That’s pretty silly.

We can drive around, even in our area of the country, and see all these little shrines that sit out there in people’s yards. In effect, that’s their god, even though they may not want to express it that way. That’s the way they treat it. They venerate it. They think that’s somehow going to deliver them. They can take the plaster of Paris and make a figurine or this or that for their bookshelf. They make a religious artifact out of it. They stand it up, put all kinds of devotional things around it, kneel down and pray and do the rosary. It’s the same thing. Human nature hasn’t changed a whole lot. People still do the same things.

God begins to address Cyrus in v. 28, “Who [referring to God] says of Cyrus, ‘He is My shepherd, and he shall perform all My pleasure,’ even saying to Jerusalem, ‘You shall be built,’ and to the temple, ‘Your foundation shall be laid.’”

Isaiah 45:1-4, “Thus says the Lord to His anointed, to Cyrus, whose right hand I have held—to subdue nations before him and loose the armor of kings, to open before him the double doors, so that the gates will not be shut: ‘I will go before you and make the crooked places straight; I will break in pieces the gates of bronze and cut the bars of iron. I will give you the treasures of darkness and hidden riches of secret places that you may know that I, the Lord, who call you by your name, am the God of Israel. For Jacob My servant’s sake, and Israel My elect, I have even called you by your name; I have named you, though you have not known Me”.”

It is a very interesting story when you go through the story of Cyrus and see all the things that Satan tried to do to prevent this prophecy from being fulfilled. God prophesied what Cyrus would do one hundred fifty years prior to the time he would do it. What was Cyrus going to do? Cyrus was the one who put together and united the empire of the Medes and Persians. He went in and besieged and conquered Babylon. That was the night of the handwriting on the wall (Daniel 5:5-6). And he, in turn, issued the decree that allowed the Jews to return from Babylon and to go back and rebuild Jerusalem (II Chronicles 36:22-23).

If you go back into history, you will see that the Persians ruled over the Medes. The Persians looked down on the Medes and ruled over them. This king of the Persians (Cyrus' grandfather) had a dream. In his dream (as it was interpreted), he would have a grandson who would overthrow him and would take his place. He was determined that was not going to happen. When the time came for his daughter to get married, he decided that he would not marry her to anyone who would potentially be a rival to him; he would marry her to a Mede. He would not marry her to a Persian, but to a Mede who was subject people. So he married her to a son of a Median chief.

He didn't give a whole lot more thought to it. A little later he had the dream again and began to get worried. He found out his daughter was pregnant. He made arrangements for her to come to his palace to have the baby. He decided what he would do; he would take the baby when it was born and would have it killed. He called his servant who he trusted and said, 'Look, when the baby is born, I want you to take it out and kill it.'

The servant took the baby, and when he went out of the palace, he couldn't bring himself to kill the baby. So he "passed the buck" to somebody else. He gave it to a shepherd who kept some of the royal sheep and told him to take the baby, to go and expose it out on the mountain and let the animals kill it. He got himself off the hook where he didn't have to do the "dirty work" with his own hands.

It just so happened that the shepherd's wife had a child exactly at that same time, and the child was stillborn. So the shepherd got the idea that rather than kill this baby, he and his wife would raise it as their own. They would take their stillborn baby and put it in the basket out on the mountain; the king would never know the difference. They would have this little child to rear—and they did.

Things went on until the child grew to a pretty good size. Eventually, the child found out the story. He went on to rally all the Medes and he led in a Median army. The story of the Persian king's dream had gotten around, and when Cyrus showed up with an army of the Medes, the Persians were so overwhelmed and so intimidated—because they felt like this prophecy was certainly going to happen—they all surrendered without a fight. They all went over to his side because they figured they were doomed. He had escaped death until now; and sure enough, his grandfather was out of a job. Now Cyrus was the king of the Medes and the Persians. He became king out of what had sought to be his death.

It's interesting because this story comes from the Greek historian Herodotus about 500 B.C. who wrote a story out of secular history. A pagan Greek historian recorded the story. Even the pagans recognized and even, in effect, testified to the authenticity of the story of Cyrus. Herodotus was a Greek historian who wrote the story of the Persian wars and the history of that empire.

When Cyrus united the Medes and the Persians, he headed for Babylon. Remember the story from the book of Daniel? Daniel 5, they showed up, and Babylon thought that it was impregnable. The Babylonians were feasting and having a big "blowout," a real orgy there in the palace. They were laughing because they said it was impossible for anybody to get in there.

In the meantime, Cyrus had dug a channel and diverted the flow of the Euphrates River so that the water level dropped and dropped. Within a few hours the water level had dropped down so low that he marched his soldiers through the riverbed and up under the fortification. The city was thought to be impregnable, but the Euphrates flowed through the midst of it. They had this big iron grating that came down into the water so you could not even sail a boat under the wall. But Cyrus' engineers dug a channel canal to divert the Euphrates. When they broke the dike, the river began to divert and the water level began to drop. Pretty soon it was below this iron grating that stuck down beneath the wall. The river got so shallow that soldiers just waded through the mud and muck and came right in under the wall. Before daylight dawned, the Persian army was inside and Babylon had fallen without a shot. So from being impossible to fall, Babylon fell into his lap. The gates were actually opened. He didn't have to break through the gates. God said the gates were going to be opened.

Isaiah 45:1, "...to open before him the double doors..." That's what happened. Cyrus rode through on his horse.

Verse 18, "For thus says the Lord, who created the heavens, who is God, who formed the earth and made it, who has established it, who did not create it in vain, who formed it to be inhabited: 'I am the Lord, and there is no other.'" The word translated "in vain" is the exact same word that is used in the book of Genesis where it describes the creation.

Genesis 1:1-2, "In the beginning God created the heavens and the earth. The earth was without form and void..." The word translated "without form" in Genesis 1:2 is the word "tohu." Genesis 1 tells us that God created the heavens and the earth, and the earth was without form and void. The earth was "tobu" and "bohu."

Here in Isaiah 45:18, it says God created the earth and He established it. He did not create it "tobu." Genesis 1:2 tells us the earth became that way. Isaiah 45:18 says God didn't make it that way. So something happened between the time God made it and the time we pick up the story in Genesis 1:2. What happened in between was the rebellion of Lucifer that resulted in the destruction, the chaos and confusion that came to take place on the earth. This is just an aside that is good to note.

God says He declares the end from the beginning.

Isaiah 46:9-10, "Remember the former things of old, for I am God, and there is no other; I am God, and there is none like Me, declaring the end from the beginning, and from ancient times things that are not yet done, saying, 'My counsel shall stand, and I will do all My pleasure.'" God says, 'I am God. I can tell you in the beginning what the end is going to be.'

There are people who are all amazed at some of the events that are going on in Europe. Those of us in this room are not amazed at those things. Some of you have been reading the literature and listening to the broadcast for decades. You heard Mr. Herbert Armstrong say those things decades ago. Why could he do that? Was it just a lucky guess? No! He read the Bible. He believed what the Bible said, "God declares the end from the beginning." God knew the way the twentieth century was going to end up, way back centuries and centuries ago. God is able to declare the end from the very beginning, and He's able to bring it about. This bothers the critics because that means that there really is a God and He has something to say about the way we should live.

Verse 11, "...Indeed I have spoken it; I will bring it to pass. I have purposed it; I will also do it." God shows there is none like Him because He alone is able to declare the end from the beginning.

Prophecy, in general, and the prophecies of Christ and His coming, in particular, are proofs of God. God is going to bring these things to pass.

Isaiah 47 is a reference to Babylon. It is not referring to the Babylon of old, but to the daughter of Babylon (v. 1)—in other words, the modern-day descendant, which would be modern-day Rome.

Isaiah 47:8, "Therefore hear this now, you who are given to pleasures, who dwell securely, who say in your heart, 'I am, and there is no one else besides me; I shall not sit as a widow, nor shall I know the loss of children'..."

Remember in Revelation 17:5, where we're told of the great whore, "... the mother of harlots and abominations of the earth." She had children. She had harlot daughters who came out of her. She was not going to know the loss of children. She didn't think she would, but God describes some of the destruction that is going to come upon that entity.

Isaiah 48 discusses the subject of prophecy.

Isaiah 48:2-3, "For they call themselves after the holy city, and lean on the God of Israel; The Lord of hosts is His name: 'I have declared the former things from the beginning; they went forth from My mouth, and I caused them to hear it. Suddenly it did them, and they came to pass.'"

Verse 5, "Even from the beginning I have declared it to you; before it came to pass I proclaimed it to you, lest you should say, 'My idol has done them, and my carved image and my molded image have commanded them.'" Again it is clearly showing as it was written that this was prophetic. It was understood to be prophetic. In terms of prophecy, it clearly pointed out the proof of God.

Isaiah 49:8, "Thus says the Lord: 'In an acceptable time I have heard You, and in the day of salvation I have helped You; I will preserve You and give You as a covenant to the people, to restore the earth, to cause them to inherit the desolate heritage.'" Here is a statement referring to the fact "... in the day of salvation..." "The" is not a definite article used in the Hebrew. This is showing the fact that there is not simply one and only one (“the day”) but there is “a day.” There will ultimately come “a day.” There is simply not one day (“the day”), but “a day” of salvation. There is a day that pertains to us, and there is a day that pertains to the world that is yet to be experienced.

Isaiah 49 (the latter part) shows that the time for the salvation of Israel is a day of salvation. Today is a day for the Church (I Peter 4:17), but there is another day. There is a day that is coming, a day of national salvation for Israel that is yet to come. This is not that day right now.

Verse 15, ““Can a woman forget her nursing child, and not have compassion on the son of her womb...?”” He says that He is going to bring back His people.

He describes when Israel is re-gathered.

Verses 19-20, ““For the waste and desolate places, and the land of your destruction, will even now be too small for the inhabitants; and those who swallowed you up will be far away. The children you will have, after you have lost the others, will say again in your ears, “the place is too small for me; give me a place where I may dwell”.””

After the Millennium sets in and as the remnant of Israel is re-gathered to the Middle East, God describes how the population of Israel will begin to increase and to multiply within a relatively short period of time. That little narrow area in the Middle East will begin to be outgrown. Here’s a remnant that is scattered, comes back from captivity and is re-gathered. It looks like they’ve been destroyed and devastated; yet within a matter of a few decades, the population is increasing and is growing to the point that the descendants begin to say, ‘This place is too small. We really need to expand; we need a place to go.’ They are going to spread back. Israel is going to begin to re-colonize the areas that God had given them. They will spread back to the United States, Canada and Australia—to the areas of Israel. That is going to occur in the beginning of the Millennium.

Well, we have focused in on this section of Isaiah. I think you will find the remaining portion (chapters 50-66) to be especially meaningful for the Passover and Days of Unleavened Bread season. There are a number of prophecies that refer clearly to Jesus Christ as the Messiah. There are a number of very meaningful statements. Really, in many ways, the most powerful portion of this book is chapter 53. It particularly deals with the sacrifice of Jesus Christ. It deals with a number of things that I think will be helpful to us to focus on at this time. This is a good section to read and study during the Passover season. On the next Bible study, we will conclude the book of Isaiah.

We are dealing with a wrap-up of the book of Isaiah—chapters 50-66, the concluding chapters of the book of Isaiah. This particular section deals with prophecies that almost entirely look forward to the time of the Messiah. There are a lot of details given concerning Christ's first coming and His crucifixion in Isaiah 53, as well as 50 and 52. This section gives some of the most detailed prophecies of His scourging and subsequent execution. The events and reasons surrounding these actions are given in the material we are covering this evening. The Jews did not understand these things. They did not understand at the time that these events occurred and they really have no real idea of the meaning of this section of Scripture to this day.

Acts 8:27-39 is a good illustration of the lack of understanding that the Jews had as to the meaning of this section of Scripture. We have the story of the Ethiopian eunuch. He was an individual of great ability and obviously he was one of the major leaders in the nation of Ethiopia. He was right under the Queen in charge of the treasury. He was a highly educated man, and like many of the upper class and educated class of Ethiopians of his day, he practiced the religion of Judaism.

A number of the upper-class Ethiopians had practiced the religion of Judaism from the time going back to the visit of the Queen of Sheba to King Solomon (I Kings 10). The leadership of the Ethiopian people practiced many aspects of the religion of Judaism. In fact, Ethiopia and their connection with Scripture and with the level of understanding that was maintained there is probably a major factor in why Ethiopia is the only place in Africa that was never colonized. It has maintained its independence from the time of antiquity. Until the death of King Helai Selassie, the royal line of Ethiopia traced itself from generation to generation for three thousand years of unbroken succession.

This leader from Ethiopia had been to Jerusalem. Being able to travel to Jerusalem was evidence of wealth and education. It was a long trip. He had come there to worship and he was returning. He was in his chariot, which was being driven by a servant that he had. He was sitting there reading the book of Isaiah. He was reading this section of Scripture from Isaiah 53 and he did not understand what it meant. His lack of understanding was not due to his lack of education. It was simply due to the fact that the Jewish community did not understand this section of Scripture. This man, who had been up to the temple to worship in observance of one of the Festivals, was not able to understand it because nobody had ever been able to explain it to him before. The Jewish religious leadership, the priests, none of them understood it. This is brought out. This Ethiopian man in Acts 8 was reading Isaiah the prophet and he was reading from Isaiah 53:7-8.

He asked Philip who was the prophet speaking of? Who was this individual that was being described in this prophecy? Philip began to explain to him about Jesus Christ. This eunuch did not know that. The Ethiopians did not know and understand because it was not known and understood in the circles of Jewish religion then—nor do the Jews understand to this day.

We are going to notice some very specific prophecies of Jesus Christ and what He was going to do. In this section, we also have some fairly specific and detailed prophecies of the Millennium. It goes into how Israel will be restored and the way that it will be brought about. In this section, God also focuses on the requirements of individual religion. God continually flashes back, as it were, on the requirements of individual religion if it is to be acceptable in God's sight.

God brings out in Isaiah 50:2, "...Is My hand shortened at all that it cannot redeem? Or have I no power to deliver? Indeed with My rebuke I dry up the sea, I make the rivers a wilderness; their fish stink because there is no water, and die of thirst." God describes what He is capable of doing. He says the problems and punishments that Israel has are not because of God's lack of ability to deliver them.

Verses 5-7, "The Lord God has opened My ear; and I was not rebellious, nor did I turn away. I gave My back to those who struck Me, and My cheeks to those who plucked out the beard; I did not hide My face from shame and spitting. For the Lord God will help Me; Therefore I will not be disgraced; therefore I have set My face like a flint, and I know that I will not be ashamed."

This is a prophecy of Jesus Christ. This is a prophecy of His smiting and His scourging.

In Isaiah 51:1, we are told, "...Look to the rock from which you were hewn and to the hole of the pit from which you were dug." In other words, look back to our origin; look back from where we came.

Verse 2, “Look to Abraham your father, and to Sarah who bore you....”

Verse 3, “For the Lord will comfort Zion, He will comfort the waste places....” God is going to bring comfort. He is going to bring relief to His people, nationally and spiritually. He is going to comfort Zion. He is going to comfort the nation of Israel. Continuing, “...He will make her wilderness like Eden, and her desert like the garden of the Lord....” The land of Israel will be healed. It will be restored.

Verses 4-5, “Listen to Me, My people; and give ear to Me, O My nation: for law will proceed from Me, and I will make My justice rest as a light of the peoples. My righteousness is near, My salvation has gone forth....” God is going to make waste places blossom and through His righteous law, He will make the whole land rejoice. In that way, he will provide comfort to His people, to Zion. We go through God’s comforting of Zion and some of the events that will transpire.

Isaiah 52 describes the work of God.

Isaiah 52:7-8, “How beautiful upon the mountains are the feet of him who brings good news, who proclaims peace, who brings glad tidings of good things, who proclaims salvation, who says to Zion, your God reigns! Your watchmen shall lift up their voices, with their voices they shall sing together; for they shall see eye to eye when the Lord brings back Zion.”

Here we see a description of God’s work. The Church is described as bringing the Gospel. It very thoroughly describes the Gospel message—the good tidings that publishes peace, publishes salvation and announces the establishment of God’s government. How descriptive can you get to the New Testament message—the Good News of the Kingdom of God—which Jesus Christ came proclaiming? It describes the work of those going forth as a messenger. Maybe you never thought of yourself as having beautiful feet, but v. 7 shows that, at least by analogy. It describes it in that way because feet are what the messenger walks on. It is descriptive of going forth with a job to do, doing that job and announcing that message.

There is a very strong admonition that God gives to those in His work.

Verse 11, “Depart! Depart! Go out from there, touch no unclean thing; go out from the midst of her, be clean, you who bear the vessels of the Lord.” If we’re going to do the work of God, if we’re going to be God’s people, we must be clean. We must not be tainted and polluted by the uncleanness of this world and society. We live in a society that God describes as unclean. We’re told that if we are going to carry on the work of God, we are to be clean.

In ancient Israel, the priests of God had laws that regulated the ritual cleanness. There were laws that regulated things. If the priests came in contact with something that made them ceremonially unclean, they could not serve in the temple. Basically, the things they came in contact with were things that would physically pollute them. If they touched a dead body or an unclean animal, they were unclean. What it meant to be ritually unclean was that they had to go and take a bath, wash their clothes and wait for the end of the day before they could come back in. This was to impress upon them the importance of cleanness. And if you are unclean, what you touch becomes unclean also.

This lesson was impressed in the ceremonies the priests went through. The priests and the Levites were the ones who, literally, bore the vessels of the Eternal. They bore the vessels there in the temple and the temple worship. There were strict regulations given about the importance of their being clean. These lessons were written really to teach the principle of cleanness and the importance of being clean—if we’re going to fulfill God’s work in a way that is pleasing to Him.

We, today, are spiritually bearing the vessels of the Eternal. We are doing the work of God. That’s what that meant—doing God’s work. We are doing God’s work. If ritual uncleanness made them unacceptable in God’s sight to carry that out, how much more would moral and spiritual uncleanness make us unfit in God’s sight to carry out God’s work. If we’re going to carry out the work of God, we have to be clean. We have to uphold God’s standards. This is a part of the message that Christ had.

Let’s notice some information concerning Christ’s scourging. There are several prophecies concerning Christ’s scourging.

Verse 13, “Behold, My Servant....” It describes Him as God’s Servant.

Verse 14, “Just as many were astonished at you, so His visage was marred more than any man, and His form more than the sons of men.” It describes His visage as being marred. It describes Him in the aftermath of that beating. He was virtually unrecognizable.

I remember someone, a number of years ago in Corpus Christi, Texas, who had been through an automobile accident—a man who later went on to become a local elder. If you've ever seen someone who's been through an automobile accident, you know what I mean. God certainly can and does intervene and that was a very remarkable case. It made a very vivid impression in my mind.

It describes here Jesus Christ being marred more than any man. Many were astonished at Him. His visage was marred more than any man. After the beating He was unrecognizable. Even those who knew Him would not have been able to recognize Him. When He was resurrected, Mary Magdalene stood there and thought He must be the gardener (John 20:14-15). She did not recognize who He was until He spoke to her. At that point, He manifested Himself in the way He had been as a result of that beating rather than in the form that would have been totally recognizable to her.

Isaiah 53:3-5, “He is despised and rejected by men, a Man of sorrows and acquainted with grief. And we hid, as it were, our faces from Him; He was despised, and we did not esteem Him. Surely He has borne our grief and carried our sorrows; yet we esteem Him stricken, smitten by God, and afflicted. But He was wounded for our transgressions, He was bruised for our iniquities; the chastisement for our peace was upon Him, and by His stripes we are healed.”

This shows what Jesus Christ went through. The word translated “grief” is a word that is in almost every case in the Old Testament (other than here and one or two other places), a word that is normally translated “pain” or “disease.” What we see here is that Jesus Christ died for our sins. He was wounded for our transgressions and bruised for our iniquities. Through His sacrifice we have access to God; through that access to God, we have access to all of the benefits God offers and extends to His people. Access to God is made possible through the sacrifice of Jesus Christ. It culminated in His death.

Verse 6, “All we like sheep have gone astray; we have turned, every one, to his own way; and the Lord has laid on Him the iniquity of us all.” That is made plain. He died for us, for the sins of the world.

Verse 8, “He was taken from prison and from judgment, and who will declare His generation? For He was cut off from the land of the living; for the transgression of My people He was stricken.” He died for us.

Verses 9-10, “And they made His grave with the wicked—But with the rich at His death, because He had done no violence, nor was any deceit in His mouth. Yet it pleased the Lord to bruise Him; He has put Him to grief. When You made His soul [His life] an offering for sin, He shall see His seed, He shall prolong His days....” He was resurrected.

Verse 12, “...because He poured out His soul unto death, and He was numbered with the transgressors, and He bore the sin of many, and made intercession for the transgressors.” He died for the sins of the people. He was executed with criminals, buried with the rich and raised from the dead. These aspects of His sacrifice are all made evident here. We have the description of His scourging, how He was brutally beaten with stripes. His countenance was totally disfigured.

Verse 7, He didn't answer His accusers. We are told how He was like a sheep brought to the slaughter. As a sheep before His shearers is dumb, so He opened not His mouth. He went through all of these things to suffer in our stead.

Isaiah 54 describes God's relationship with Israel and Israel's redemption.

Isaiah 54:5, “For your Maker is your husband, the Lord of hosts is His name; and your Redeemer is the Holy One of Israel; He is called the God of the whole earth.” It describes God's redemption.

Isaiah 55:6-8, “Seek the Lord while He may be found, call upon Him while He is near. Let the wicked forsake his way, and the unrighteous man his thoughts; Let him return to the Lord, and He will have mercy on him; and to our God, for He will abundantly pardon. ‘For My thought are not your thoughts, nor are your ways My ways,’ says the Lord.”

We are to seek God while He is accessible. We have the opportunity right now to seek Him. He is near and He is available. We are told to not procrastinate and put it off. There are events coming, the tribulation and the Day of the Lord. There are things that are going to transpire. We are told to seek God and to draw near to Him. We are told the way to do that. We are told to change both our actions and the way we think. It's not enough simply to change what you do. It is not enough for the wicked to forsake his ways, but rather, we must forsake our thoughts. The reason is because our thoughts are not God's thoughts nor, for that matter, are our ways His ways.

Our ways are a reflection of our thoughts. Our actions reflect our thinking and if we are going to make fundamental change in our life, we have to change—not merely the outward action, we have to change the inward thought. We have to change the way we think. Otherwise, what we have is mere external conformity. We are people that just go along. You can comply with what the Church says in doing this or doing that (or not doing this or that), but if you don't change the way you think, you won't understand why you're doing it other than, well, the Church says you shouldn't do this or that. People go along and they make external conformity, but they never make internal change. And if the pressure to conform is taken off, they go back to being the way they were because they never learned to think any differently. I think that's fundamental. It is something we have to understand. God is not concerned merely about what we do. More fundamentally than what we do, He is concerned about what we are and what we think on the inside.

The Pharisees conformed to all kinds of things outwardly. Now God is concerned about what we do in the sense that you can't be right on the inside and wrong on the outside. I think we understand that. You can't be keeping the spirit of the law on the inside and outwardly be murdering, raping, pillaging, stealing, committing adultery, taking God's name in vain, breaking the Sabbath and all these things. I think we all understand that. You can outwardly be keeping the various points of the law and conforming to what we are told, but inwardly be something else.

Many people conform to what the law requires. They even conform to what man's law requires out of fear of the trouble they would get into. But if they thought they could get by with it, they would do it. That's not the kind of attitude that God wants to perpetuate forever. That's why He said to not only change your action but to change your thoughts because 'your thoughts aren't My thoughts.'

What are our thoughts? Human nature kind of follows the line of vanity, jealousy, lust and greed. That's what makes up a large part of human nature and human reaction. The thoughts of vanity, jealousy, lust and greed come naturally to the natural man. That's what people tend to be motivated by. Advertisers know that; that's why they appeal to vanity, jealousy, lust and greed. These things sell. That's not the way God thinks and He wants us to exchange our way of thinking to His way of thinking.

In v. 11, God explains that His word will not return to Him void. What God says will be accomplished.

In Isaiah 56, God addresses the importance of keeping the Sabbath—the importance of all keeping the Sabbath regardless of background or whatever circumstance. The Sabbath is not simply for the Jew.

Isaiah 56:2-3, “Blessed is the man who does this, and the son of man who lays hold on it; who keeps from defiling the Sabbath, and keeps his hand from doing any evil.’ Do not let the son of the foreigner who has joined himself to the Lord speak, saying, ‘The Lord has utterly separated me from His people....’” God says blessed is the man that does this, not simply the Jew, but the man, the person, the human being. The “son of the foreigner” (KJV, “stranger”) would apply to someone who is not a native-born Israelite. It would be someone who is not born physically of the seed of Abraham; it would be a Gentile.

God says, ‘Regardless of your ethnic heritage, regardless of anything, when you obey Me, when you embrace My ways and you serve Me, you are acceptable in My sight.’ You are not somehow separated off into some separate spiritual category. Physical factors are not the basis of spiritual categories. Spiritual categories, basically, come down to those who obey and those who don't. And nobody has a “leg-up” because of ethnic origin, wealth, education, position, social status or anything else whatever it may be. Those may be physical factors in physical society, but God looks on the heart to judge human beings. God looks to the one who is humble and trembles at His word (Isaiah 66:2).

Here, in Isaiah 56:2-4, it specifically mentions the Sabbath as an outward sign and how God counts as His own those who obey Him and take this outward sign of the Sabbath, regardless of other physical factors.

We are told that through obedience anyone—Gentiles, eunuchs—can become part of God's covenant people and share in His blessings. The Ethiopian eunuch mentioned in Acts 8 is an example of one who, in that sense, fits both categories that are mentioned here—the son of the stranger and the eunuch. The Ethiopian eunuch was a man singled out to be mentioned in a positive light. We will, undoubtedly, have the opportunity to meet him in Tomorrow's World as a part of the firstfruits of God's plan. There have been many, but he is singled out as a literal fulfillment. We've read his account earlier and it describes one who obeys God and is therefore counted as one of God's people.

Then there is the statement that Christ quoted in the New Testament.

Verse 7, "...For My house shall be called a house of prayer for all nations." This is quoted in Matthew 21:13.

God characterizes the leadership of the nation as being, in effect, blind, asleep on the job and consumed by greed.

Verses 10-11, "His watchmen are blind, they are all ignorant; they are all dumb dogs, they cannot bark; sleeping, lying down, loving to slumber. Yes, they are greedy dogs which never have enough...."

This is a rather apt description. If you've ever seen a bunch of dogs trying to eat, you will realize that they can be the personification of greed. They all "muscle" in there and try to suck it up like a vacuum cleaner. God uses these vivid descriptions to describe human beings. He describes watchmen who are blind. They are like dogs that have lost their ability to bark. They've gone to sleep. And yet they are greedy dogs. God says the watchmen of Israel are that way.

Then a point to consider: why God allows some of the righteous to die before their time.

Isaiah 57:1, "The righteous perishes, and no man takes it to heart; merciful men are taken away, while no one considers that the righteous is taken away from evil." He is taken away from the evil to come. So, in some cases, God allows that.

Who is going to dwell with God?

Verse 15, "For thus says the High and Lofty One who inhabits eternity, whose name is Holy: 'I dwell in the high and holy place, with him who has a contrite and humble spirit, to revive the spirit of the humble, and to revive the heart of the contrite ones.'"

In Isaiah 66:2, God describes those who are going to be a part of His Family as those who are humble, contrite and who really tremble at His word—those who really take God seriously. God is not impressed with people who are impressed with themselves. It is a matter of recognizing our dependence upon God and humbly seeking Him. That is the way to have access to God and to dwell with God.

God give His ministry and His work a commission.

Isaiah 58:1, "Cry aloud, spare not; lift up your voice like a trumpet; tell My people their transgression, and the house of Jacob their sins."

In other words, we have not been commissioned to play a lullaby and put the world to sleep, but rather, we have to play revelry to wake them up. That's what God wants His work to do. That's what God holds His work responsible for; it's what He holds His ministry responsible for.

It will ultimately be part of the basis of what He is going to use to judge us upon. We all are judged for our areas of responsibility. You are judged for your areas of responsibility; I am judged for my areas of responsibility. If I just kind of play a lullaby, speak smooth things and prophesy deceits, if I just kind of go along and put you all spiritually to sleep, then I am ultimately going to have to give an account to God for that because His calling is that He wants the ministry and His work to, figuratively speaking, play revelry—to play "wake up" on the bugle. God wants the ministry and His work to sound the trumpet, to sound the alarm, to say, 'Hey, it's time to wake up and to go forth.' There is that responsibility.

God describes a people who are going through the outward motions of religion but are not accompanied by the inward change, the inward things.

Verse 3-5, He describes the kind of fasting that God takes note of. It describes a people who fast, but their fasting is in the wrong way and for the wrong reasons. God describes the kind of fasting that He is after.

Verse 4, "Indeed you fast for strife and debate...." We don't fast to get our own way.

Verses 6-7, "Is this not the fast that I have chosen: To loose the cords of wickedness, to undo the heavy burdens, to let the oppressed go free, and that you break every yoke? Is it not to share your bread with the hungry, and that you bring to your house the poor who are cast out; when you see the naked, that you cover him, and not hide yourself from your own flesh?"

In other words, we are to fast in order to get our lives straightened out. We fast to make changes. Fasting is for the purpose of drawing close to God and seeing ourselves. Fasting is for getting the spiritual strength to cut the things that bind us to wickedness, that bind us to sins. We are to cut the ties to sin. We are to be cut free from that and to get the help to make the changes that we need to make.

Verses 9-10, God does not want us simply pointing the finger at others and speaking wickedness (KJV, "vanity"), but rather, of having an attitude of giving, serving and helping.

Let's notice what God says about the Sabbath.

Verses 13-14, "If you turn away your foot from the Sabbath, from doing your pleasure on My holy day, and call the Sabbath a delight, the holy day of the Lord honorable, and shall honor Him, not doing your own ways, nor finding your own pleasure, nor speaking your own words, then you shall delight yourself in the Lord; and I will cause you to ride on the high hills of the earth, and feed you with the heritage of Jacob your father. The mouth of the Lord has spoken.”

We are to turn away our foot from trampling God’s Sabbath. It means we are not to be doing our own pleasure or pursuing our own interest and our own endeavors. Some translations render it “business”—not doing your own business on the Sabbath. But that can be misunderstood. Some have read it that way and have misunderstood it to mean your regular job. They say, ‘Well, if I’m not doing my regular job, it doesn’t matter what else I do.’ That’s not what it means. It says, ‘from doing my own pleasure.’ That doesn’t mean that if you enjoy it, it is sin.

God says that we should call the Sabbath a delight. It should be a delight and we should delight ourselves by a proper focus. It’s not a day to pursue our own interests and endeavors. It is not a day to pursue secular recreation and entertainment. It is not a day to go to the ball game or to lay up watching television—the Saturday cartoons or whatever is on. I assume that’s what is still on; at least it was twenty-five years ago. The point is that whatever is being pursued, it should be in conformity with making the Sabbath a delight, a holy day of the Lord and honorable—showing honor and respect to God.

That doesn’t mean you sit in the corner or closet and don’t eat all day. There is nothing wrong with eating a meal and having a meal of fellowship with brethren or something of that sort. We should enjoy the fellowship and the company of one another as God’s children fellowshiping together. But it’s not a time for secular pursuits, secular entertainment and recreation. Even things that are not necessarily wrong, of and by themselves, but they’re not things you would do on God’s time, and the Sabbath is God’s time.

If you work for someone, on the boss’s time, there are certain things you don’t do (at least you’re not supposed to do), not because those things are always wrong, but because they’re not things you would do on his time. Well the Sabbath is God’s time and He gives us certain things as to the way that He wants us to deal with it.

In Isaiah 59, God brings out the biggest factor as to why sometimes God does not seem to answer.

It brings out that, when the answer is held back, the problem is never God’s inability to respond.

Isaiah 59:1-2, “Behold, the Lord’s hand is not shortened, that it cannot save; nor His ear heavy, that it cannot hear. But your iniquities have separated you from your God; and your sins have hidden His face from you, so that He will not hear.” Our iniquities can separate us from God. If God doesn’t answer, the problem is not that God is unable to respond. There may be factors that interfere with our closeness to God and our access to God.

In v. 4, it describes the iniquities of the nation and how none calls for justice.

Verse 7, “Their feet run to evil, and they make haste to shed innocent blood...”

Verse 8, “The way of peace they have not known, and there is no justice in their ways.” It describes the tragedies that beset much of our nation.

Isaiah 60 describes the restoration of Israel under God’s government in the Millennium. It describes many of the gentile nations who were part of the Beast power that took Israel captive and how they are going to come and to begin the Millennium as servants of the restored nation of Israel. They are going to have certain lessons to learn.

Isaiah 60:10, “The sons of foreigners shall build up your walls, and their kings shall minister to you; for in My wrath I struck you, but in My favor I have had mercy on you.”

Verse 12, “For the nation and kingdom which will not serve you shall perish, and those nations shall be utterly ruined.” They’re going to have an attitude of service. There will be a willingness to serve and learning to serve. Many of these nations are going to have that lesson brought to them. They are going to be taught that.

Verse 5, “Then you shall see and become radiant, and your heart shall swell with joy; because the abundance of the sea shall be turned to you, the wealth of the Gentiles shall come to you.” God mentions the wealth that is going to be restored to Israel.

There is an interesting statement. He talks about the abundance of the sea to be turned to you. Do you realize that even a few years ago, Dow Chemical manufactured over five hundred items from seawater? How can the abundance of the sea be converted? One cubic mile of seawater stores over one hundred seventy-five billion tons of dissolved chemicals that are worth upwards of thirty to fifty billion dollars. Just one cubic mile of sea water—maybe around thirty billion dollars—a substantial amount. Several hundred million of that would be gold alone in just one cubic mile of seawater. “...the abundance of the sea will be converted to you and the wealth of the Gentiles will come unto you.” There’s a lot involved there.

Isaiah 61:1, “The Spirit of the Lord God is upon Me, because the Lord has anointed Me to preach good tidings to the poor; He has sent Me to heal the brokenhearted, to proclaim liberty to the captives....”

This is what Jesus read in Luke 4:16-20 as prophetic of His mission to proclaim the acceptable year of the Lord.

Verse 4, “And they shall rebuild the old ruins, they shall raise up the former desolations, and they shall repair the ruined cities....” That’s going to happen in the beginning of the Millennium. The cities will be rebuilt.

Verses 5-6, many of those who have taken Israel captive are going to learn to serve in the beginning of the Millennium by coming back in that way as servants.

Israel will finally set an example.

Isaiah 62:2, “The Gentiles shall see your righteousness, and all kings your glory....”

It describes what God is going to do.

Isaiah 63:4 describes the day of vengeance of God, the day of the Lord. It describes some of the events dealing with that.

There is a plea for Christ to return and for God to establish His government.

Isaiah 64:1-2, “Oh, that You would rend the heavens! That You would come down! That the mountains might shake at Your presence—as fire burns brushwood, as fire causes water to boil—to make Your name known to Your adversaries, that the nations may tremble at Your presence!”

Notice what God has to say about our human righteousness.

Verse 6, “But we are all like an unclean thing, and all our righteousnesses are like filthy rags; we all fade as a leaf....” On our own, we can’t become what Christ would have us be. It’s not our own humanly devised righteousness. It’s not what we can do, of and by ourselves. It’s what God can do in us and through us.

In v. 8, we are told that God is the Potter and we are the clay, the work of His hands. We are to be shaped and molded by Him. We are not to take on conformity to the image of this world and this society, but we are to be molded, shaped and refashioned by God to reflect Him.

Isaiah 65 describes God dealing with our nation and with our people.

Isaiah 65:2-5, “I have stretched out My hands all day long to a rebellious people, who walk in a way that is not good, according to their own thoughts; A people who provoke Me to anger continually to My face....” A people who do everything I told them not to do. Continuing, “...who sacrifice in gardens, and burn incense on altars of brick; who sit among the graves, and spend the night in the tombs; who eat swine’s flesh, and the broth of abominable things is in their vessels; who say, ‘Keep to yourself, do not come near me, for I am holier than you!’ These are smoke in My nostrils, a fire that burns all the day.”

After they do all these things, they say, ‘Don’t come near me; I am holier than thou.’ That’s not an attitude that God is pleased with. God says, ‘I am not going to put up with that.’ This kind of attitude is offensive to God. God takes note of people who provoke Him to anger by pursuing all the things they shouldn’t and then culminating with an attitude of looking down on their neighbor, an attitude of condemnation.

Verse 20, “No more shall an infant from there live but a few days, nor an old man who has not fulfilled his days; for the child shall die one hundred years old, but the sinner being one hundred years old shall be accursed.” What does that have reference to? The indication is that we are looking at a time at the conclusion of the Millennium. The time setting of Isaiah 65 is at the end of the Millennium.

Verse 17, it is a time setting when God is going to create a new heavens and a new earth. The time described here is at the conclusion of the Millennium, the conclusion of the White Throne Judgment period and right on the threshold of eternity.

In v. 20, we arrived at a point in human history when there will be no infants, no children. There won’t be anyone who has not fulfilled his days. It describes here a one hundred-year period. It describes the child living to a hundred, but the one who is still a sinner, at a hundred, he will be accursed. It is from this verse that we have come to derive the understanding that we know there will be children born during the Millennium. We also know that at the end of the Millennium, at the time of the White Throne Judgment, there’s a time when all people will be resurrected and will be given an opportunity for salvation.

There has to come a point at which no new children are born because, otherwise, how can everything physical pass away and everything that is spiritual remain? There will come a time when there will be no more children born. And all of those who have been born will have an opportunity to grow to adulthood. When will that be? That is after the Millennium and during the White Throne Judgment period. How long will it last? The indication of Isaiah 65:20 is that the White Throne Judgment period will last a hundred years, and we have described here what it's going to be like.

Verse 25, "...They shall not hurt nor destroy in all My holy mountain," says the Lord." It will be a time of peace.

We conclude here with chapter 66. We see that God is not impressed with the mere form of religion.

Isaiah 66:1-2, "Thus says the Lord: 'Heaven is My throne, and the earth is My footstool, where is the house that you will build Me? And where is the place of My rest? For all those things My hand has made, and all those things exist,' says the Lord..." I have made everything. Continuing, "...But on this one will I look: On him who is poor and of a contrite spirit, and who trembles at My word."

Then, in vv. 3-4, He describes those who go through the outward form of religion, sacrifices and things of that sort. The sacrifices, the outward forms of religion by the disobedient, are an abomination to God. God looks to basic attitude and motivation. God is not impressed with outward form unless it is accompanied by inward substance. For someone to hypocritically go through the outward motions of religion and yet not to be as they should be is offensive in God's sight.

Verse 3, "...Just as they have chosen their own ways..."

Verse 23, "And it shall come to pass that from one New Moon to another; and from one Sabbath to another, all flesh shall come to worship before Me," says the Lord." The focus is on the Sabbath. This is showing clearly that the Sabbath will be kept during the Millennium.

Verse 24, "And they shall go forth and look upon the corpses of the men who have transgressed against Me. For their worm does not die, and their fire is not quenched. They shall be an abhorrence to all flesh." This is not speaking of the immortal worm. The description is of those who will be outside and will be cast into the lake of fire, cast into the Valley of Gehenna. Some seize on this and say it is talking about hell, and there are worms there that never die. That's not the focus of it.

Outside of Jerusalem there was a valley called the Valley of Hinnon (or Gehenna). It is the term that Jesus used in the New Testament to refer to the place of punishment for the wicked (Mark 9:43-46). It was an area where trash, refuse, bodies of dead animals and even of certain terrible criminals were thrown. They were thrown down there, and there was a fire that was always kept burning because things were added to it. It wasn't quenched; it wasn't put out. It continued to burn and the worm didn't die. This worm refers to maggots. It just simply refers to the fact that there were always dead carcasses there for them to eat on. Maggots turn into flies and then they fly away. They lay eggs and those eggs become more maggots. There is a continual diet there to feed these maggots. That's what it is describing. It's not a description of the immortality of worms.

You will ultimately either be a part of God's Kingdom and share life with Him, or simply be destroyed with those who rebel and pursue wickedness. That is the reference here.

At this point, we have pretty well concluded the book of Isaiah. There is a lot packed into Isaiah. I think we will see when we get into Jeremiah that there is certainly a lot packed into Jeremiah. These things written down in the Prophets are descriptive of attitudes and circumstances of our time today. There's a tremendous amount of insight into God's mind, nature and character, as well as insight into events through which we will live in the years ahead of us. We will cover Jeremiah in three sections and Ezekiel in three sections.

Major Prophets Series—Jeremiah 1—15

This evening we are getting into the book of Jeremiah. We are getting into the account of Jeremiah's prophetic ministry. Jeremiah's ministry covered a period of about forty years. He began his ministry during the reign of King Josiah. He continued during the reign of King Josiah and all the way down until the final invasion of Judah by Nebuchadnezzar. From Judah, Jeremiah went into Egypt with the Jews who fled into Egypt. From Egypt, he proceeded by way of Spain all the way into Ireland. Some of that is gone into in the booklet, What's Ahead for America and Britain?

A major part of Jeremiah's commission involved the transferring of the throne of David from ruling over the house of Judah to ruling over the house of Israel. There would be a continuation of his throne and dynasty. A lot of that culminates in the book of Jeremiah. It was during the time of Jeremiah's ministry that there was what appeared to be an apparent end to that promise because the Babylonians came in and conquered Judah.

They took the Jews into captivity. They conquered Jerusalem and burned the temple. They sacked Jerusalem and killed the sons of King Zedekiah. They put out the eyes of Zedekiah and transported him in chains to Babylon. He came to a very gruesome and horrible end. In fact, the very last sight that he saw was the murder of his sons. The Babylonians murdered his sons before his eyes and then they blinded him. His sons being murdered was the last sight that he saw. Then they led him in chains to Babylon—a very horrible end.

Was that the conclusion of the story of David's dynasty? No, it wasn't. Zedekiah's sons were killed, but other Scriptures show that his daughters were not. Jeremiah was responsible for safeguarding the daughters. There was one, in particular, who traveled with Jeremiah to Ireland that had a major part in the transferring of the throne of David from ruling over Judah to ruling over Israel.

One of the interesting things that we come upon in the story of Jeremiah is the relationship that Jeremiah had with King Josiah. It kind of sets the stage for the story. King Josiah was the king when Jeremiah first began to prophesy. There is something rather unusual about this. Generally when we picture a prophet, the picture that comes to our mind is of an elderly man with a long white beard and kind of leaning on his staff. Some of God's prophets were elderly. But Jeremiah was, from all indications, about seventeen years old when he started as a prophet. You don't generally think of a teenage prophet. Jeremiah was seventeen and Josiah, who was the king, had just turned twenty. They were a couple of young men just barely out of their teens. In fact, in a lot of ways Jeremiah and Josiah kind of grew up together.

Remember the story of Josiah? He was proclaimed king when he was eight years of age (II Kings 22:1). He did not actually have authority and power as king. He was under the oversight of the high priest, Hilkiah (II Kings 22:4, 8). When we read Jeremiah 1:1, we find that Hilkiah the priest was none other than Jeremiah's father. Josiah was about three years older than young Jeremiah.

The father of Jeremiah, Hilkiah the priest, was the guardian of the young king. Hilkiah was responsible not only for the training and teaching of his own children but serving as guardian of the king while he was a minor. Hilkiah was what would be termed the Chairman of the Counsel of Regency—in other words, the group that oversaw the affairs of state until the king became of age.

In II Chronicles 34:3, we're told that when Josiah became sixteen, he began to really, very seriously seek to learn more of God's way. He took a very serious interest in God's truth as a teenager. When he became twenty years of age, he assumed the full authority of kingship. He launched the most vigorous reform movement in the history of the nation.

It is interesting to note that a twenty-year-old king and a teenage prophet spurred the most vigorous, intense and complete reform movement in the history of the nation. I think that is a picture that is not often grasped or realized. God can and has worked, through the years, with young people, as well as middle-aged people and old people. It is certainly possible for young men to respond to God. It is possible for young people to respond to God working in their lives.

It's important to realize that it was a time when all of the zeal, drive and intensity of youth was channeled in a very positive way. Even though Jeremiah was quite young, he was dealing with a king who was only about three years older than he was. That relationship continued on through the years of Josiah's active kingship.

There was about a fifteen-year period of Josiah's life that remained. Josiah died fairly young. He was cut off in his prime.

II Chronicles 35:25 and the book of Lamentations was written by Jeremiah to lament the death of Josiah. Josiah was not only his friend but also his king. Lamentations served as a lament for what was going to happen to the nation.

God was impressed by the zeal Josiah evidenced. God had said the nation was going to be punished, but God also promised that He would not do it during the lifetime of King Josiah. God had promised that as long as Josiah lived, He would protect the nation; but when Josiah died, it was all over with—and that is basically what happened.

Lamentations was a lament at the death of King Josiah and for the events that would transpire to the nation of Judah and of Jerusalem in the aftermath of his death. And in that sense, it was prophetic of the events of the Great Tribulation ahead of us. Later, when we go through the book of Lamentations, we will notice the extent that it is a prophecy of the Great Tribulation. The events and captivity that befell ancient Judah prefigured the events of the Great Tribulation, which will be the same thing but in a much grander scale.

This evening we'll cover the beginning of Jeremiah's prophetic ministry. His ministry stretched over a period of over forty years. It began when he was quite young and continued on up into his latter years. Actually, it continued past forty years, but it is at that point that we lose sight of it because the story drops in the book of Jeremiah after Jeremiah's departure to Egypt. We don't have the continuation of the story of his ministry in Egypt in the areas of Tarsus and Spain and then on up to Ireland, but we do have accounts of it in secular history.

The first fifteen chapters of the book of Jeremiah, which we will cover this evening, focus primarily on God's indictment of the sins of Israel—the forsaking of Him as the true God. God lists the indictment. He starts out by setting the stage. One of the themes that runs through so many of the prophets is first a formal indictment of their sins. This formal indictment of their sins sets the stage for the punishment that is to come. The punishment, in turn, sets the stage for the repentance that will result. The repentance, in turn, sets the stage for God's deliverance and then God's ultimate blessing, which is what God wanted to give all along.

But for God to continue a blessing in the midst of disobedience is to be detrimental to the overall long-term welfare of the person. If God continues to just indefinitely bless us in the midst of disobedience, it serves to harden us in the way of disobedience. God wants us to be a part of His Family. God desires to give the nation His blessing, but the nation has to come to an attitude of obedience. They had to come to repentance, and God was going to deal with them to bring them to that repentance.

God starts out by indicting them. He showed why He was going to have to deal with them severely—why He was going to have to punish them. Then He explained what the punishment was, what the result of the punishment would be in terms of repentance, and then what the final deliverance would be.

The indictment against Israel focuses in on their forsaking of the true God. They forsook the true God. They went after false religion in place of the true God; added to that are the sins of violence, sexual immorality and a total lack of seeking for real truth and justice. There's also a condemnation of Israel learning the way of the heathen. We'll notice in Jeremiah 10 a reference to the Christmas tree. God shows the punishment and the captivity that He is going to bring on the nation. In these chapters, He also alludes to Israel's final repentance, deliverance and restoration.

We will pick it up in Jeremiah 1:1, "The words of Jeremiah the son of Hilkiah, of the priests who were in Anathoth in the land of Benjamin." As I mentioned earlier, Jeremiah's father was Hilkiah the priest. Anathoth was a small village on the outskirts of Jerusalem. It was one of the priestly locations; it was one of the cities of the priests. Actually, it was more of a village.

In v. 2, we are told that the word of the Lord came to Jeremiah in the days of Josiah, in the thirteenth year of his reign. Josiah became king when he was eight years old; that would be when Josiah was twenty-one years of age.

God told Jeremiah in v. 5, "'Before I formed you in the womb I knew you; before you were born I sanctified you; and I ordained you a prophet to the nations.'" God said, 'I had you picked out for a job before you were ever born.'

Some of these Scriptures are quoted in the New Testament by the Apostle Paul (Galatians 1:15; Romans 11:5) to explain what he termed "the election of grace." "Election" is simply another way of saying "selection." The point is that you and I were selected. God chose us in accordance with God's plan and purpose. It was an act of God's grace, of God's mercy. We were not chosen because of some particular thing about ourselves. We didn't earn or deserve it. It was not because God was so impressed with us that He said, 'Boy, I certainly need him. I can't make it without him.' God does the choosing and God chooses on the basis that He chooses. God has the right to make decisions. He has the right to decide.

God chose to deal with Jeremiah and He chose to deal with Jeremiah before Jeremiah was ever born. He had done nothing good or bad, one way or the other, to deserve this calling. God had made up His mind about the job that He had for Jeremiah before he was ever born. God began to deal with him and said, 'I have you in mind; I have set you aside as a prophet to the nations.'

Jeremiah's response was that he couldn't do that. Verse 6, "Then said I, 'Ah, Lord God! Behold, I cannot speak, for I am a youth.'" He said, 'I'm just a kid; how can I go out and go to the nations? How can I do those things? I'm just a kid.'

Verse 7, God said, 'Don't say that because I'm the One who's sending you. You're going to go wherever I send you; whatever I tell you, that's what you're going to say. I'm with you and I'll take care of you and inspire you. I will give you the words you need to speak.'

Then Jeremiah's commission was laid out. He had a specific commission.

Verse 5, he was ordained a prophet unto the nations. He had a specific commission to go to nations (plural), not simply to ancient Judah.

Verse 10, "'See, I have this day set you over the nations and over the kingdoms, to root out and to pull down, to destroy and to throw down, to build and to plant.'"

He was to root out and pull down, destroy and throw down. And he was to build and to plant. This is a poetic illusion to what he was to do. He would preside over, as a prophet, the pulling down of the temple, the destruction of the city of Jerusalem, the rooting out of the nation and the pulling down or the overthrow of the throne. But his commission was not to stop there. His commission was also to build and to plant. He was to preside over the transfer of the throne to the house of Israel because God had made a promise to David that He would establish his dynasty and his throne forever. He would not deal with David's family as He had dealt with Saul's. The family of Saul was absolutely removed from the kingship.

God told David in II Samuel 7:13-16, 'If your sons [your descendants] sin, I will punish them, but I will not remove them. I will not take My mercy away from them; I will not remove them.'

God continued His explanation to Jeremiah of the job that He had for him.

Jeremiah 2:2, "'Go and cry in the hearing of Jerusalem...'"

What did God say to Israel?

Verse 3, "'Israel was holiness to the Lord, the firstfruits of His increase, all that devour him will offend; disaster will come upon them,' says the Lord." God has never intended to confine His dealings to Israel or to never move beyond Israel in His dealings. Rather, God started with Israel. Israel was the firstfruits. The fact that Israel was designated as firstfruits presupposes there was an increase that was to come—an increase that would include all of mankind. Israel was simply God's starting point.

If you remember, the law of the offerings and the firstfruits was holy to God. God told Israel that when they began to harvest their crop, the firstfruits (the first part) was holy to Him. They gathered in the whole crop, but the firstfruits was holy to God. In the same way, God has begun His harvest of mankind. He chose Israel to be His firstfruits. That's where He started. Israel was chosen as the firstfruits and was to be holy to God.

Exodus 19:5-6, God offered them a covenant and an opportunity to be a holy nation. They were to be holy in the same sense that they would be set apart by having God's law. If they followed God's law, God would dwell in their midst. God would be the source of their holiness. God promised them protection and deliverance.

Jeremiah 2:3, "'...All that devour him will offend; disaster will come upon them,' says the Lord." God said He would bless, defend and protect them. But we're going to see that there was a problem. He said, 'Look what I did for you. This is My message. This is the calling I gave you. This is what I chose you to have a part in. This is what I've done.'

Verse 7, "'I brought you into a bountiful country, to eat its fruit and its goodness. But when you entered, you defiled My land and made My heritage an abomination.'" This is what God has to say about the land that He's granted our forebearers. He brought them into a bountiful country. But the land has been defiled. God's heritage has been made an abomination. We have defiled it. We have polluted it physically, morally and spiritually. We've made God's heritage an abomination. We look at some of the things that have been done, the things man has done with what God has given us.

Then God goes into an indictment of the religious leadership.

Verse 8, “The priests did not say, ‘Where is the Lord?’ And those who handle the law did not know Me; the rulers [pastors] also transgressed against Me; the prophets prophesied by Baal, and walked after things that do not profit.” He said, ‘The people that should have been teaching you, those to whom you looked for religious guidance, have deserted Me.’

Verse 9, “Therefore I will yet bring charges against you,’ says the Lord, ‘and against your children’s children I will bring charges.” He said, ‘I am going to continue to deal with you and to get the point across.’

Verse 11, “Has a nation changed its gods, which are not gods? But My people have changed their Glory for what does not profit.” Look around and see if you can find an example of a nation that has changed their gods, which are yet no gods. God says to look at the pagan nations; they have been faithful to their paganism.

Isn’t it incredible? You go over to some of these pagan countries and they’re still worshipping the same idols they worshipped centuries and centuries ago. God says, ‘The pagans have been faithful to paganism, and yet My people haven’t been faithful to the truth.’ Isn’t that an incredible thing!

This is the tendency. We see it throughout the Scriptures. The tendency of the people of God who have the truth is to not appreciate it. They take it for granted and gradually let it be watered down. This has always been the tendency of human nature. It’s easy to take it for granted. This is what ancient Israel did. We read that and say, ‘How could those people be so carnal and do that?’ Yet we have to recognize the tendency that can come up, even with God’s people and with God’s Church. God’s Church can gradually take God’s truth for granted and not really be excited about it, to value and appreciate it and then to gradually kind of water it down—to let it water down until it becomes blended more and more with worldliness. After a while, it finally comes to a point where God’s people have lost their identity.

This is the story repeated over and over in the Old Testament, and it is the warnings we have in the New Testament. It is the tendency of human nature. We have those examples, and it should be a warning for us. That’s going to be the tendency of human nature. We’re going to have to swim against the tide to do anything else.

Verse 13, “For My people have committed two evils: They have forsaken Me, the fountain of living waters, and hewn themselves cisterns—broken cisterns that can hold no water.” Talk about a bad trade! Here, on the one hand, you have an artesian well and you don’t appreciate that. You want to make a cistern. A cistern is not an ideal source to depend on for water. This is a broken cistern, which means whatever you are going to put in is going to dribble out, and you won’t have anything at all. If someone were willing to trade an artesian well as his water source for a broken cistern, you would think that’s pretty dumb.

It’s a very descriptive picture. When you get the picture, you see that’s what God says our people have done spiritually. Here is God, the source of living waters. The Holy Spirit is compared to living waters. That’s like an artesian well. The water comes bubbling up. There’s a source of flowing water there that anybody can have—a source of pure water, bubbling up from down deep inside the earth. God compares that to His Holy Spirit that is a source of life. It flows out. He contrasts it with a trade for a broken cistern. He says, ‘My people, Israel, have made a trade and they have really made a bad deal.’ We certainly want to make sure that we don’t make that trade. God indicts them for not only rejecting the truth but for choosing error.

Verse 19, “Your own wickedness will correct you, and your backslidings will reprove you....” A lot of the punishments that are going to come upon us are cause and effect; there are consequences to our actions that will come upon us. A lot of things that are going to happen to this nation are the results of the things we have sown. We reap what we sow.

In Jeremiah 3, He begins to draw another analogy to His relationship with Israel. Now we get into the relationship of a marriage relationship. In Exodus 19, God entered into a covenant with Israel. That covenant was a marriage covenant. God established with ancient Israel a marriage relationship.

In Jeremiah 3:1, He describes Israel having played the harlot with many lovers, and yet God says that He is still offering them an opportunity to return. Here was Israel who had been so unfaithful to God, figuratively, having played the harlot. Israel lived as a prostitute with all sorts of other lovers—with other nations. God says Judah didn’t learn anything from what Israel did.

Jeremiah 3:8, “Then I saw that for all the causes for which backsliding Israel had committed adultery, I had put her away and given her a certificate of divorce; yet her treacherous sister Judah did not fear, but went and played the harlot also.”

Verse 14, “Return, O backsliding children,’ says the Lord; ‘for I am married to you. I will take you, one from a city and two from a family, and I will bring you to Zion.’” God is putting away faithless Israel and removing His protection from her. Even so, God pictured Himself in the role of the husband. He was the Protector and Provider. Israel was to be faithful and be a faithful helper. Israel was to further the plan and purpose that God had. Israel was to be supportive, a helper, one who is fitting and suitable. Instead of being faithful, Israel was faithless. But God says that He was still going to give them an opportunity to repent, to change, to learn, to turn around and go the other way. He tells them to repent, to “return, O backsliding children.” He says, ‘Eventually when you do, I am going to bring you back out of captivity.’

Verses 15-18, “And I will give you shepherds according to My heart, who will feed you with knowledge and understanding. Then it shall come to pass, when you are multiplied and increased in the land...At that time Jerusalem shall be called The Throne of the Lord, and all the nations shall be gathered to it, to the name of the Lord, to Jerusalem; they shall walk no more after the stubbornness of their evil heart. In those days the house of Judah shall walk with the house of Israel, and they shall come together out of the land of the north to the land that I have given as an inheritance to your fathers.” —“The land of the north.”

If you go north of Palestine, you’re going up into Europe. Judah and Israel are going to be re-gathered together. Now that has not happened yet. Judah is the only part of the twelve tribes that ever returned to the Promised Land. When Israel went into captivity, they never came back. They never returned. We will notice that at a later time Judah returned. But this is a time yet future, a time when Judah and Israel would return together. That’s after the return of Christ. At that time they will have right and proper leadership and be re-gathered from the land of the north. It is brought out that God is our source of help.

Jeremiah 4:1, “If you will return, O Israel,’ says the Lord, ‘Return to Me; and if you will put away your abominations out of My sight, then you shall not be moved.’” There is a need for change.

There is a need to repent, to put away sin, and to put away the abominations out of God’s sight. We can’t continue in sin and expect God will approve.

God talks about circumcision of the heart in v. 4, “Circumcise yourselves to the Lord, and take away the foreskins of your hearts, you men of Judah and inhabitants of Jerusalem...” Clean up our lives. This is prophetic of the Holy Spirit and is an allusion to the understanding that came about in the New Testament, of the circumcision that had a spiritual implication. It talks about God’s word going forth and the results.

Verse 15, “For a voice declares from Dan and proclaims affliction from Mount Ephraim.” That had to be a future prophecy because Ephraim, Dan and all the others had long since gone into captivity well over a hundred years before Jeremiah ever prophesied. It was looking all the way down to our day to God’s work going forth from the British Isles and throughout Europe—going forth from that area. It was something that was not fulfilled until this point in time.

It talks about what is going to happen in v. 20, “Destruction upon destruction is cried, for the whole land is plundered....”

Verse 22, “For My people are foolish, they have not known Me. They are silly children, and they have no understanding. They are wise to do evil, but to do good they have no knowledge.”

God talks about the destruction that is going to come, and yet He says in vv. 27-30, “For thus says the Lord: ‘The whole land shall be desolate; yet I will not make a full end. For this shall the earth mourn, and the heavens above be black, because I have spoken, I have purposed and will not relent, nor will I turn back from it. The whole city shall flee from the noise of the horsemen and bowmen. They shall go into thickets and climb up on the rocks. Every city shall be forsaken, and not a man shall dwell in it. And when you are plundered, what will you do? Though you clothe yourself with crimson, though you adorn yourself with ornaments of gold, though you enlarge your eyes with paint, in vain you will make yourself fair; your lovers will despise you; they will seek your life.’”

God describes Israel under the guise of a harlot. She arrays and adorns herself in the traditional manner of the harlots, the harlots of antiquity. You can go through certain districts of many cities; you drive down the street and you can see some that are pretty much “decked out.” Jeremiah 4:30 comes to mind. They have the “look.” They don’t have to hold up a sign saying what their profession is. All you have to do is look at the way they're "decked out"—how they're dressed, all painted up and "bleached out." You know exactly what they're peddling.

God describes Israel in that connotation, 'You're looking at your lovers (other nations). You think that somehow you are going to be able to appeal to them.' He describes Israel under the guise of an unfaithful wife; when confronted with calamity, she thinks somehow she can be pulled out of the calamity by trying the old trick of enticing the lovers. He uses descriptive, poetic language that was descriptive of the women of ill repute. God describes that even when Israel was confronted with her calamities, instead of turning to Him, she started trying to "finagle" around as to how she could entice allies to come to her rescue. God says it's not going to do any good. You have to learn the lesson.

Jeremiah 5:1, "Run to and fro through the streets of Jerusalem; see now and know; and seek in her open places if you can find a man, if there is anyone who executes judgment, who seeks the truth, and I will pardon her." Look and see if there's any truth in judgment. God says you are not going to see much of that.

Verses 7-8, "How shall I pardon you for this? Your children have forsaken Me and sworn by those that are not gods. When I had fed them to the full, then they committed adultery and assembled themselves by troops in the harlots' houses. They were like well-fed lusty stallions; every one neighed after his neighbor's wife."

God describes the immorality. God says, 'When I blessed you, when you were prosperous and you had everything, instead of appreciating and valuing it, you lined up like troops for the harlots' houses for every kind of immorality.' It describes the allusion of everyone neighing after his neighbor's wife—absolute rampant immorality. Immorality absolutely undercuts and is destructive to a society because morality is the guardian of the family. Morality guards and protects the family. It gives sanctity and "specialness" to the family. When morality breaks down, the family falls apart; when the family falls apart, the community and nation fall apart.

The family is our basis of connecting to the past and to the future. When you think in terms of family, you think of those who've come before you and whose contribution you appreciate and value. But you also think in terms of the future. You have children and grandchildren, and in terms of what you're doing, you're thinking not just for yourself, but it's for them. There's a sense of connection with the past and with the future. When people think in terms of family, they build the future. When people think only in terms of "here and now" and self, there is no concept of the future. When all they're after is self-gratification, they don't care what the consequences are tomorrow. The attitude is 'I don't care what happens, I'll be dead by then.'

It's kind of like the famous quote that is attributed to King Louis XV of France. His son Louis XVI was the king when the French Revolution came about. Louis XV was pretty much of a waster. He squandered things and he knew that he was not properly governing the nation. He made the statement on more than one occasion, "After me, the flood!"

Some say, 'I don't think it will happen in my lifetime, but when I'm gone, it's all going to come tumbling down. But I don't care because I'm not going to be here.' No sense of concern or loyalty. What kind of world am I leaving to my children and grandchildren? 'I won't be here and if I'm not here, who cares!' That's a pretty selfish, self-centered approach. The world is filled with that, and the more there is a disintegration of the family and family loyalty, the more people don't care what kind of world they are leaving. 'Hey, I'm not going to be here; what do I care?' Even economically we are running up this astronomical debt. The ones who are running it up think the bill won't come due until after we're dead—let the children and grandchildren worry about it.

We don't care if we build up something that won't last. All it needs to do is last through our lifetime. That's all we care about. This is a selfish, self-centered approach. That means you're setting up a society to collapse—a society where immorality is rampant, a society that is selfish, self-centered and greedy. It's only thought is for "here and now." Right now! The problem with "only right now" is that, eventually, tomorrow and the day after are going to come. A society that will endure and last is a society that is in preparation, a society that is building something that will last. The whole concept of craftsmanship is building something that will last. We talk about the extent to which we have become a "throw-away" society. So many things that are built, within a few years they are falling apart. They are not even built to be fixed—just throw it away and get another one.

A lot of this attitude gets back to the whole concept of morality—a selfish, self-centered society. A society that has lost its moral bearings is a society that cannot long endure. God describes that.

Jeremiah 5:11, “For the house of Israel and the house of Judah have dealt very treacherously with Me,” says the Lord.”

Verse 15, “Behold, I will bring a nation against you from afar, O house of Israel,” says the Lord. ‘It is a mighty nation, it is an ancient nation, a nation whose language you do not know, nor can you understand what they say.’”

Notice here that this is a prophecy to the house of Israel, not a prophecy to the house of Judah. Jeremiah had prophecies for Judah (referring to his own day and his own time), but the house of Israel had gone into captivity over a hundred years before Jeremiah ever wrote this. So these prophecies look way beyond his day. These prophecies come on down to our day, at the end time. He talks about that and the events that are going to come in. He says, ‘I’m going to bring this nation upon you.’

Verse 16, “Their quiver is like an open tomb; they are all mighty men.” It’s interesting that the word “German” literally means “man of war.” “Ashur” who is the ancient ancestor means “strong.” So when He says they are mighty men of war, it is really a play on words of the name of the nation that was going to be used as the instrument of punishment.

Verses 17-19, “And they shall eat up your harvest and your bread, which your sons and daughters should eat. They shall eat up your flocks and your herds; They shall eat up your vines and your fig trees; they shall destroy your fortified cities, in which you trust, with the sword.’ ‘Nevertheless in those days,’ says the Lord, ‘I will not make a complete end of you. And it will be when you say, “Why does the Lord our God do all these things to us?” then you shall answer them, ‘Just as you have forsaken Me and served foreign gods in your land, so you shall serve aliens in a land that is not yours.’”

God says, ‘You haven’t wanted to serve Me; I’m going to let you find out what service is.’ Those who don’t want to voluntarily submit to God are going to have a chance to submit at the end of the point of a bayonet to the German Gestapo of the future. Then they will find out it really wasn’t so bad to serve God. How glad we would be for the chance to serve God instead of serving the Beast power of the future.

It’s going to give new meaning to the verses in Matthew 11:28, 30 when Christ said, “Come unto Me, all you that labor and are heavy laden...For My yoke is easy and My burden is light.” You think it’s hard to serve God? Stick around for a few years and try serving the Germans. You’ll find out we never had it so good.

The events that are going to happen in the Great Tribulation are going to far overshadow the events of World War II and the Holocaust; there will be no comparison. The magnitude of the events of the Tribulation will so overwhelm and overshadow those events that there will be no comparison. The events of World War II won’t even be mentioned because the events of the future are going to be so much worse and on such a greater scale. That’s hard to imagine.

Jesus said in Matthew 24:21, “For then there will be great tribulation, such as has not been since the beginning of the world until this time, no, nor ever shall be.” It’s going to surpass everything and anything that has ever happened, which means it is going to surpass the Holocaust, the atrocities that Stalin wrought in Russia, that Hitler wrought, and that all the dictators have wrought. These things are going to be paled by the magnitude of what is going to occur.

Jeremiah 5:23, ““But this people has a defiant and rebellious heart; they have revolted and departed.””

Verse 25, ““Your iniquities have turned these things away, and your sins have withheld good things from you.””

Verse 31, ““The prophets prophesy falsely, and the priests rule by their own power; and My people love to have it so....”” People don’t want to hear the truth; they like it that way. That’s the incredible thing. People don’t like it if you start telling them the truth. They resent that. They want to be told that everything’s great and everything’s fine. They’re not anxious to have the leaders tell them the truth.

Let’s see a little more of what God has to say about the religious leaders.

Jeremiah 6:13-15, ““Because from the least of them even to the greatest of them, everyone is given to covetousness; and from the prophet even to the priest, everyone deals falsely. They have also healed the hurt of My people slightly, saying, “Peace, peace!” when there is no peace. Were they ashamed when they had committed abomination? No! They were not at all ashamed; nor did they know how to blush. Therefore they shall fall among those who fall; at the time I punish them, they shall be cast down,’ says the Lord.”

God says that from the least of them to the greatest, they're given to covetousness. God says that is really the motivating factor. A lot of people in the world have begun to recognize that. Turn on the Sunday morning "comedy hour" if you want to call it that way. They spend more time begging for money than anything else. Then we had all these scandals that hit. God says, 'Look, the whole bunch is given to covetousness. That's what they're after. They're in it for what they can get.' He says, 'They are all dealing falsely. They've healed the hurt of My people slightly.' Did God say that none of them have ever done anything that's any good? No, He didn't say that. They may have helped a little bit here and there, slightly. But they haven't really solved the problem. They say, "Peace, peace, when there is no peace." They weren't ashamed of what they had done. They hadn't really turned from the abominations that are done in God's sight.

God says in v. 17, "Also, I set watchmen over you, saying, "Listen to the sound of the trumpet!" But they said, "We will not listen"." God sets a watchman. This work was raised up when God raised up Mr. Herbert Armstrong and threw him into this work. We are now a part and a continuation of this end-time work of God.

God raised up His work (the Philadelphia era of His Church) to be a watchman, to proclaim a message, even though the nation is not really going to listen and to hearken.

Jeremiah 7:2-9, "Stand in the gate of the Lord's house, and proclaim there this word, and say, "Hear the word of the Lord, all you of Judah who enter in at these gates to worship the Lord!" Thus says the Lord of hosts, the God of Israel: "Amend your ways and your doings, and I will cause you to dwell in this place. Do not trust in these lying words, saying, 'The temple of the Lord, the temple of the Lord, the temple of the Lord are these.' For if you thoroughly amend your ways and your doings, if you thoroughly execute judgment between a man and his neighbor, if you do not oppress the stranger, the fatherless, and the widow, and do not shed innocent blood in this place, or walk after other gods to your hurt, then I will cause you to dwell in this place, in the land that I gave to your fathers forever and ever. Behold, you trust in lying words that cannot profit. Will you steal, murder, commit adultery, swear falsely, burn incense to Baal, and walk after other gods whom you do not know?"

You do all these things and then you say, v. 10, "and then come and stand before Me in this house which is called by My name, and say, "We are delivered to do all these abominations?"

People were trusting in lying words, saying, v. 4, "...the temple of the Lord..." In other words, God's house is here. We are God's people and God won't let anything happen to us. A lot of people think, 'The United States is the bastion of democracy, the best hope of mankind. God wouldn't let anything happen to us. After all, we're the best He has.' Well, let's not kid ourselves! Here's their approach: the law is done away and we're delivered to do all these abominations (v. 10). They say that it's okay because the law is done away. God says, 'That is not the case.'

Verses 17-18, "Do you not see what they do in the cities of Judah and in the streets of Jerusalem? The children gather wood, the fathers kindle the fire, and the women knead their dough, to make cakes for the queen of heaven..." This describes the origin of hot cross buns and why they come out at Easter time. "Easter" is the English spelling and pronunciation of the ancient Babylonian god Astarte, the queen of heaven.

The Catholic Church has simply taken the old Babylonian goddess Astarte or Easter (as they call her now) and they continue to worship the queen of heaven. Those of you who come out of a Catholic background realize who the queen of heaven is, don't you? They talk about the queen of heaven; they call her Mary. Mary was the mother of Jesus. She was certainly given the greatest honor that any human woman could ever be given. She was chosen by God to literally give birth to God in the flesh—to give birth to Jesus Christ—and to be entrusted to bring Him up, to train Him and to teach Him. There is no place in the Bible where Mary is called the queen of heaven.

The one called the queen of heaven here was the old Babylonian goddess. That's why, today, what's called the Roman Catholic Church is nothing but a continuation of "Mystery Babylon the Great, the mother of harlots and of the abominations of the earth" (Revelation 17:5). That's what it is, just a continuation of the same old Babylonian Mystery Religion. The same old customs are right on down to our day. Everything they do goes right back to ancient Babylon. You can read about it. In just a page or two (Jeremiah 10), we come to the Christmas tree. All these things go way back.

Jeremiah 7:22-24, “For I did not speak to your fathers, or command them in the day that I brought them out of the land of Egypt, concerning burnt offerings or sacrifices, but this is what I commanded them, saying “Obey My voice, and I will be your God, and you shall be My people. And walk in all the ways that I have commanded you, that it may be well with you.” Yet they did not obey or incline their ear....”

The sacrifices were not a part of the Old Covenant. The Old Covenant was not based on the sacrifices. When God brought Israel out of Egypt, He did not originally speak to them concerning sacrifices. That’s not what the Old Covenant was about. The sacrifices were added after they broke the Old Covenant. They were added because of disobedience. They were added as a schoolmaster. The Sabbath wasn’t added. The holy days weren’t added. The laws of God were not added; that was part of the Old Covenant to begin with. The sacrifices were added. God didn’t originally speak of the sacrifices when He brought them out of Egypt.

Galatians 3:24, “Therefore the law was our tutor....” KJV, “Wherefore the law was our schoolmaster....” God added the sacrifices as a schoolmaster.

God talks about the things the nation did.

Jeremiah 7:25-26, “Since the days that your fathers came out of the land of Egypt until this day, I have even sent to you all My servants the prophets, daily rising up early and sending them. Yet they did not obey Me or incline their ear, but stiffened their neck....” God said, ‘Yet you haven’t listened.’

Jeremiah 8:5, “Why then has this people slid back, Jerusalem, in a perpetual backsliding? They hold fast to deceit, they refuse to return.”

Verse 9, “The wise men are ashamed, they are dismayed and taken. Behold, they have rejected the word of the Lord; so what wisdom do they have?” When you reject God’s word, what kind of wisdom are you going to find?

Verses 10-11, “...Because from the least even to the greatest everyone is given to covetousness; from the prophet even to the priest everyone deals falsely. For they have healed the hurt of the daughter of My people slightly....” Slightly, that’s all it amounts to.

In Jeremiah 9 is the prophecy of the catastrophes and calamities that are going to happen.

Jeremiah 9:11, “I will make Jerusalem a heap of ruins and a den of jackals [KJV, “dragons”]....” The word actually means “coyotes” and things of that sort. “Dragons” is a bad translation. In other words, it is going to be deserted. There will be wild animals. Continuing, “...I will make the cities of Judah desolate, without an inhabitant.”

Verses 12-14, “...Why does the land perish and burn up like a wilderness, so that no one can pass through? And the Lord said, ‘Because they have forsaken My law which I set before them, and have not obeyed My voice, nor walked according to it, but they have walked according to the imagination of their own heart and after the Baals, which their fathers taught them.’” They have done these things and as a result, there will be war and captivity.

Verse 16, “I will scatter them also among the Gentiles, whom neither they nor their fathers have known. And I will send a sword after them until I have consumed them.” This shows that the nation was going to go into captivity for its sins.

Verses 23-24, “Thus says the Lord: ‘Let not the wise man glory in his wisdom, let not the mighty man glory in his might, nor let the rich man glory in his riches; but let him who glories glory in this, that he understands and knows Me, that I am the Lord, exercising lovingkindness, judgment, and righteousness in the earth. For in these I delight,’ says the Lord.”

God says don’t glory in the physical things. Don’t glory in what you know or how strong you are or what you have. Don’t place your confidence in the physical. Those things will let you down. Money can be wiped out overnight. You can have a stock market crash; rapid inflation occurs. You can have all kinds of things happen. That’s not something that is foolproof. Physical strength can fail. Wisdom is limited. Whatever you know, it’s human knowledge and it is limited. Don’t take pride in the physical, but rather, the thing to have confidence in is that you know the true God.

Verse 26, “Egypt, Judah, Edom, the people of Ammon, Moab, and all who are in the farthest corners, who dwell in the wilderness. For all these nations are uncircumcised, and all the house of Israel are uncircumcised in the heart.”

This shows that God is concerned about circumcision of the heart. Circumcision of the heart is a cutting away of the old attitudes and thoughts, the cutting away of the old attitudes of mind. He describes the Gentile nations as being uncircumcised and all the house of Israel as uncircumcised in the heart. Circumcision of the heart is the most important circumcision of all.

In Jeremiah 10:1-8 is the description of the Christmas tree—a pagan custom that God’s people are not to follow.

Jeremiah 10:1, “Hear the word which the Lord speaks to you, O house of Israel.” This is not addressing Judah because this sin is not the sin of Judah; it is the sin of the house of Israel—our people, our nation.

Verse 2, “Thus says the Lord: ‘Do not learn the way of the Gentiles [KJV, “heathens”]....” Don’t learn heathen pagan customs.

Verses 3-4, “For the customs of the people are futile [vain]... [Then He describes one of them.] ...For one cuts a tree from the forest, the work of the hands of the workman, with the ax. They decorate it with silver and gold; they fasten it with nails and hammers so that it will not topple.” They go and cut a tree. They bring it back and make it stand up straight. They decorate it and make it all glittery and pretty. Kind of sounds familiar, doesn’t it? God says that’s the custom of the heathens. Don’t learn the way of the heathen.

Every year right around Christmas time, an article will come out in one of the local newspapers about the origin of Christmas. They will readily tell you that Christmas trees go back to pagan customs and pagan traditions and ideas. They will readily admit, ‘We got this custom from the ancient Babylonians or that custom from the Egyptians or the Assyrians, and aren’t all these nice pagan customs okay?’ People sometimes make the excuse, ‘That’s not why we do it.’ God says, ‘Don’t learn the way of the heathen.’

You can look at any number of worldly customs mentioned in the Bible in a negative way, and people say, ‘Yeah, but that’s not why we do it today.’ No, the reason we do it today is because we’re trying to be just like everybody else. Why do people decorate their house for Christmas? It’s not because they are trying to worship the sun god. It’s because they’re trying to be like their neighbors. They are trying to blend in. Would you like to be the one to explain to Christ when He asks why you did do so and so? ‘Well, everybody else was doing it. I didn’t want to stand out.’ Wouldn’t you feel really good about giving that explanation? Don’t you think He would be really impressed with that? Somehow, I just don’t think it will “wash” too well. People miss the point. If we just learn the way of God, we have all we can handle. Why go out and start learning the way of the heathen, trying to mix it in and creating our own way of doing things?

Jeremiah 10:23 is a very important verse, “Oh Lord, I know the way of man is not in himself; it is not in man who walks to direct his own steps.”

That is just another way of saying, Proverbs 3:5-6, “... lean not on your own understanding; in all your ways acknowledge him, and He shall direct your paths.”

It’s not just inherently a part of us to know just what we should do. The way of man is not in himself; it’s not in man that walks to direct his steps. We don’t know by ourself. That’s why God tells us; God reveals to us. We are like God’s little children and God teaches and tells us.

Can you imagine just turning a little baby loose and not giving him any guidance? The way that they should go is not just inherent in them. They’ll do all kinds of things because they don’t know better. Some things they do can be so dangerous and destructive. We’re just grown up little babies. Spiritually we are still just kind of crawling along. The way of mankind is not in himself. Apart from God revealing it to us, we don’t know by ourselves. God reveals it to us not because He’s trying to give us a hard time, but because He loves us and doesn’t want us to hurt ourselves. Why did you set rules and restrictions for your little babies and your little children? Was it because you didn’t want them to have fun? Of course not! It’s because you didn’t want them to hurt themselves, to do something dangerous and wind up inflicting permanent damage upon themselves.

Jeremiah 11:2-5, “Hear the words of this covenant, and speak to the men of Judah and to the inhabitants of Jerusalem; and say to them, “Thus says the Lord God of Israel; ‘Cursed is the man who does not obey the words of this covenant which I commanded your fathers in the day that I brought them out of the land of Egypt, from the iron furnace, saying, “Obey My voice, and do according to all that I command you; so shall you be My people, and I will be your God,” that I may establish the oath which I have sworn to your fathers....””

Verses 7-8, ““For I earnestly exhorted your fathers in the day that I brought them up out of the land of Egypt, until this day, rising early and exhorting, saying, “Obey My voice.” Yet they did not obey or incline their ear, but everyone walked in the imagination of his evil heart; therefore I will bring upon them all the words of this covenant, which I commanded them to do....”” God says, ‘I have warned them. I have told them.’

Verse 10, “They have turned back to the iniquities of their forefathers who refused to hear My words, and they have gone after other gods to serve them; the house of Israel and the house of Judah have broken My covenant which I made with their fathers.” God describes the covenant. God’s covenant message to our people, over and over again, has been a simple direct message: “Obey My voice!” Verse 7 brings that out.

Verse 8 shows that Israel proceeded to go its own way and will therefore receive, as a result, all of the curses mentioned in the book of the covenant. Go back and read Leviticus 26 and Deuteronomy 28. Read the curses of the book of the covenant. God made a covenant and He said, ‘Obey My voice; just obey My voice.’ And the nation has not done that. It has refused the admonition that has been given and repeated over and over. There are going to be consequences to come about. They have gone in the imagination of their evil heart, in the stubbornness of their own heart. They’ve just done their own thing. They do the things they want to do. God describes that.

Let’s notice a couple of places to illustrate that the house of Israel and the house of Judah are distinct and separate. I would suggest you read the booklet, What’s Ahead for America and Britain? Understanding where our nations are identified in the Bible is the basis of understanding much of prophecy. If you don’t understand who is being talked about when it says “Israel,” then you can’t understand Isaiah, Jeremiah, Ezekiel, Hosea, Joel, Amos and all the others.

Jeremiah 11:10 is one place that shows a clear distinction between Israel and Judah, “...the house of Israel and the house of Judah have broken My Covenant which I made with their fathers.” That’s one place that shows a clear distinction between Israel and Judah. It shows that they are distinct.

Jeremiah 13:11, ““For as the sash clings to the waist of a man, so I have caused the whole house of Israel and the whole house of Judah to cling to Me,” says the Lord, “that they may become My people, for renown, for praise, and for glory; but they would not hear.”” God describes the events that were going to come.

He shows in Jeremiah 11:10 and Jeremiah 13:11 that the House of Israel and the House of Judah are distinct and separate. Jeremiah was writing over one hundred fifty years after Israel had ceased to be a nation. Northern Israel had gone into captivity. Jeremiah still regarded them as a distinct, separate people. Israel is not the same thing as the Jews. The term “Jew” only refers to “the descendants of Judah.” It refers to the House of Judah; “Jew” is an English slang term for “Judah.”

In Jeremiah 12, the events of the captivity are cited.

Jeremiah 12:4, “How long will the land mourn, and the herbs of every field wither? The beasts and birds are consumed, for the wickedness of those who dwell there, because they said, ‘He will not see our final end.’” It talks about all the things that have happened and the events that have occurred.

Verse 7, “I have forsaken My house, I have left My heritage; I have given the dearly beloved of My soul into the hand of her enemies.” God allowed the punishment to come.

Verses 15-16, “Then it shall be, after I have plucked them out, that I will return and have compassion on them and bring them back, everyone to his heritage and everyone to his land. And it shall be, if they will diligently learn the ways of My people, to swear by My name, “As the Lord lives,” as they taught My people to swear by Baal, then they shall be established in the midst of My people.” God will deal with them and He will bring them back.

Jeremiah 13 describes what He is going to do and how He’s going to call them to repentance. He talks about Judah being carried into captivity.

Jeremiah 13:19, “The cities of the South shall be shut up, and no one shall open them; Judah shall be carried away captive, all of it; it shall be wholly carried away captive.”

Jeremiah 14 talks about the drought that was coming.

Jeremiah 14:2, “Judah mourns and the gates thereof languish.”

Verse 4, there was a lack of rain.

Verse 14, “...The prophets prophesy lies in My name. I have not sent them, commanded them, nor spoken to them; they prophesy to you a false vision, divination, a worthless thing, and the deceit of their heart.”

He says that they will perish along with the others.

Verse 15, “Therefore thus says the Lord concerning the prophets who prophesy in My name, whom I did not send, and who say, “Sword and famine shall not be in this land”—“By sword and famine those prophets shall be consumed!””

In Jeremiah 15, we see a description showing three categories of the calamities and events that are going to occur.

Jeremiah 15:2, “...Thus says the Lord: “Such as are for death, to the sword; and such as are for the sword, to the sword; and such as are for the famine, to the famine; and such as are for the captivity, to the captivity”.” He describes all the calamities and events that are going to occur and the reason that these things were going to happen to Judah.

Verse 4, “I will hand them over to trouble, to all kingdoms of the earth, because of Manasseh the son of Hezekiah, king of Judah, for what he did in Jerusalem.” God says Judah went into captivity because of the sins of wicked King Manasseh. The nation never recovered from that. Things go so far off the track for so long, they never got back.

God tells us that when they get into trouble, they say, “I’m sorry,” but they don’t mean it.

Verse 6, “...I am weary of relenting!” What He is talking about is the old “broken record” of people. When they get in trouble, they say, “I’m sorry” and do not really mean it. He’s not talking about a genuine turning away from our own ways. He’s talking about the same old thing, over and over and over again. That gets old. The events are described.

Jeremiah describes his regard for God’s word in a very descriptive poetic term.

Verse 16, “Your words were found, and I ate them, and Your word was to me the joy and rejoicing of my heart; for I am called by Your name, O Lord God of hosts.” Jeremiah describes God’s word. It was delightful food. The word of God should be like our spiritual food. Part of the way we are spiritually nourished is taking in God’s word. Jeremiah says, ‘Your words were found and I did eat them.’

Jesus said, Matthew 4:4, “...Man shall not live by bread alone, but by every word that proceeds out of the mouth of God.” That needs to be our attitude toward God’s word. Jeremiah describes in the latter part of the chapter the attitude that God is pleased with, the attitude of desiring God’s word and, Jeremiah 15:17, an attitude of not sitting in the assembly of the mockers. Having the right attitude toward God and God’s word—not taking it for granted, not mocking, but really appreciating and valuing what God says. Our attitude needs to be one of really appreciating God’s truth and calling and our valuing what God says.

We are clearly living in very momentous times. You do not, at all, want to take for granted the tremendous things that God has opened our minds to see and understand. We want to value and appreciate them.

With that, we will conclude the Bible Study.

We are continuing our survey through the book of Jeremiah. We are dealing with the middle section of the book of Jeremiah—chapters 16—34. This section deals with various prophecies of Judah's impending captivity. He uses it as a type of events that will come upon the whole house of Israel at the end time. In the context of material we will look at this evening, another thing that comes out is the persecution that Jeremiah faced as God's spokesman. This is important to realize because down through the centuries, God's message has not been a popular message. Many times God's servants have suffered great adversity and difficulties for delivering that message. We will see that here in the book of Jeremiah and we will see some of the things Jeremiah went through.

I think it is important for us to realize that there are probably a lot of things that we're going to have to face and go through between now and the end of this age. We don't know every detail of what it's going to be, but the Bible certainly gives indications and certainly shows by example the fact that God's message has never been popular. It wasn't popular at the time of Jeremiah. It certainly wasn't popular at the time of Jesus Christ, and it's not going to be popular in our time and in our day.

The Scriptures talk about events, a Great Tribulation, and various things. As I have mentioned before, we are in a time of a relative lull; a calm before the storm. We see events—things flash upon the world scene and then they fade. But what we have to realize is that the time is going to come when these events are going to flash on the world scene and they won't fade. It will be time for things to begin to culminate and come together.

As you watch what's going on in the Middle East right now, you realize what a volatile situation it is. I'm not saying that this situation is not going to settle down, but it demonstrates the depth of emotions and the lack of real solutions that is there. As we see in the book of Daniel, when the timing is ultimately right, the events in the Middle East will come to a head, but only when things in Europe have developed to the point that Europe is ready to respond—as the book of Daniel and other prophecies show that they will.

We are not at that point now, but we're certainly moving far closer to it than we were a year ago. Consider what has transpired just since the last Feast of Tabernacles and all of the events that have happened in Eastern Europe since last Pentecost. We've gotten so adjusted to some of these things, I think we don't realize how shocking it would have been had we announced it even last Pentecost. These things really began to come together at the fall Festival season.

Things are moving along, and we are in a period of relative calm. A period of relative calm can be used in one of two ways. It makes an ideal time to go to sleep. There is not a whole lot to disturb your rest, so people can use it to either "go to sleep at the switch" or they can use it for time of preparation, recognizing that it is going to come to an end and they need to be prepared. Because when things happen, they will happen quickly enough, that if you're not prepared, there won't be time to prepare. That's part of the parable of the ten virgins (Matthew 25:2-12)—the five wise and the five foolish. The five wise were prepared. The five foolish weren't. It ultimately comes down to that.

Mr. Herbert Armstrong drew the analogy many, many years ago, not as a matter of a dogmatic statement, but his own personal feeling was that the parable of the ten virgins—the five wise and the five foolish—would ultimately see fulfillment in the Laodicean and the Philadelphian eras. He felt the Church would, at that time, divide down the middle—five wise and five foolish. That was his personal opinion on that. I heard him say that over twenty years ago. When I heard him say it, to me at the time, it seemed very far-fetched. I couldn't imagine that. But as the years have gone by, I have appreciated his wisdom and insight more and have realized that as a possibility. I am not saying dogmatically that is exactly what it is going to be, but that is certainly a possibility. I know that it is one possibility that Mr. Armstrong leaned towards.

The point that I am making is as we go through Jeremiah, and as we focus on the events of Jeremiah, it is important that we realize that we're not simply looking at dead history. We're not simply looking at old remote events. There are events, in some cases, directly prophetic of our own time, and in other cases, we are looking at events that are typical of the kind of things that happen to God's servants and God's work. We're looking at events that parallel things through which we may very well go through—things through which many of God's servants down through the centuries have gone through. We have lived in a time of relative tranquility and peace. Individuals may have faced persecution perhaps on the job or in a family context because of their beliefs. But in terms of organized systematic governmental persecution, we have not faced anything very intense and very long term for quite awhile.

Another thing we will notice in this section is specific information of Jeremiah regarding the king and what was to happen to the house of David. The promise had been made that the dynasty of David would continue. Jeremiah, in his ministry, was actually there at a time when the temple was destroyed and when all the things that seemed to be a part of the fulfillment of God's covenant and God's promise were swept from the scene. The temple was destroyed, the king's sons were executed, and the king was blinded and taken prisoner. The independence of the nation ended, the city of Jerusalem burned, and the Jews were taken into captivity. You had a destruction take place. Did that mean that God's promises were of no avail? Absolutely not! Those promises were to continue, and Jeremiah played a vital role in the fulfillment of some of those promises.

We also have an interesting section that deals with Judah's partial observance of the Sabbatical year and the events that transpired afterwards. Basically, what it amounted to was that the Babylonians put a siege around Jerusalem and the Jews were scared. They figured they had "had it." Ever see how, when people really get scared, they are ready to "cut a deal" with God? Maybe you've done that. The Jews knew that they weren't doing what God said to do. One of the outstanding things they weren't doing was that they had not been observing the Sabbatical year.

The Sabbatical year is a law that applies to a nation. It is a national economic law. It has to do with a release of private debt in the seventh year. It had to do with servants being given liberty at the end of that time and various things. It had to do with the land being able to lay rest, with servants being given their freedom and with private debt being forgiven. It was a law that God instituted to keep the nation economically on an "even keel."

Right now our nation is so burdened down with debt that it's just a matter of time. God made for periodic adjustments because wealth will become mal-distributed, and there can come such inequities that things eventually collapse. The Sabbatical made provision for a fresh start. Those who worked harder were rewarded for it. But the Sabbatical made provision for a fresh start, an opportunity for private debt to be forgiven. You could not build up massive debt because private debt was going to come to an end every seventh year. You simply didn't build up a gigantic private debt. The economy would not be based on something like that.

The Jews (those who were in position of power) were looking at opportunities to make money. They didn't want to release debt. They didn't want to release slaves. Since they didn't want to do these things, they hadn't. When the Babylonians surrounded the city and they thought they were all going to be killed, they got scared and started trying to "cut a deal" with God. Oh, they were repentant and sorry; they would do all of this stuff. Jeremiah laid it out to them. He told them what they needed to start doing, so they did. They made an announcement. They released all the debt and turned loose the slaves. They did everything. They started observing the Sabbatical year.

Just a short time after they did that, the Egyptians launched an army that headed up to the area of northern Mesopotamia, toward Carchemish. The Egyptian army was going to launch an attack on the Babylonians. The Babylonians, who had Jerusalem surrounded, pulled the siege. They lifted the siege and the armies left. They went to fight against the Egyptians.

You know what the Jews did? They sat back and said, 'Boy, that's a relief. We didn't have to depend on God to rescue us after all. The Egyptians came to our aid. We knew those Egyptians would help us out. Let's forget about this Sabbatical year stuff. Bring the slaves back. We're going to exact a debt. We're going to do all the stuff. We're not going to wind up losing this money. We don't have to worry about that; the Egyptians have bailed us out.'

Immediately they went back to doing what they had been doing before. The Babylonians promptly smashed the Egyptian army and came back to Jerusalem. If you make a deal with God, you better fulfill your part of it. God can deliver us in various ways. Humanly, people want to trust what they can see. The Israelites wanted to put their trust in Egypt. They felt like if they could just get the Egyptians on their side, the problems would be solved. What they needed to realize was that the only way problems can be solved is to get God on your side. It's not a matter of talking God into seeing it our way; it's a matter of coming to see it His way and making sure we get going in that direction.

There's a lesson of faith here. Again, we see the tendency of human nature—it wants to walk by sight. It does not want to walk by faith. We want to trust what we can see, touch, taste and feel—what we can sense with the five physical senses. And, in reality, the only thing that can be depended on is something that can't be discerned by the five physical senses. It is the power of God.

We find in this section, Jeremiah 17:9-10, the Biblical definition of human nature.

In Jeremiah 17:19-27, we see God's rebuke of people for failure to properly keep the Sabbath.

In chapter 18, we focus in on a lesson of God being the Potter and we being the clay. We look in on false shepherds.

In Jeremiah 31:31-34, we see a prophecy of the New Covenant and the Holy Spirit.

In Jeremiah 16, Jeremiah was told how bad things were going to get. In fact, he was told not to marry and raise a family at that time because of the terrible captivity and the things that were going to occur. Notice the attitude of the people as God's servants told them of these things.

Jeremiah 16:10, ““And it shall be, when you show this people all these words, and they say to you, ‘Why has the Lord pronounced all this great disaster against us? Or what is our iniquity? Or what is our sin that we have committed against the Lord our God?’”” They said, ‘Why we are good people! God wouldn't do those things to us. What's so bad about us?’ That's what people still think. ‘We're better than old “so-and-so.” We're better than somebody else. We are not the best, but we're sure not the worst. God wouldn't do those things to us.’

God makes it very plain.

Verses 11-12, ““then you shall say to them, ‘Because your fathers have forsaken Me,’ says the Lord; ‘they have walked after other gods and have served them and worshiped them, and have forsaken Me and not kept My law. And you have done worse than your fathers, for behold, each one walks according to the imagination of his own evil heart, so that no one listens to Me.’””

Each one of you just doing your own thing; you're walking after the imagination of your evil heart.

If that was descriptive of ancient Judah, is it descriptive of us today? Have we not, as a nation, forsaken God? Have we not refused to keep God's law? We can say that our ancestors did that, and we've done worse than they did because we have turned away from the portions of right and wrong that they clung to. We are getting to the point where we want to legalize sin and outlaw righteousness—a very upside-down perverted approach.

Verse 13, ““Therefore I will cast you out of this land....””

Up until now, the great event that has defined the history of God's people and the history of Israel was the Exodus. That was kind of the great point from which everything else flowed.

Verses 14-15, ““Therefore behold the days are coming,’ says the Lord, ‘that it shall no more be said, ‘The Lord lives who brought up the children of Israel from the land of Egypt,’ but, ‘The Lord lives who brought up the children of Israel from the land of the north and from the lands where He had driven them.’ For I will bring them back into their land which I gave to their fathers.’”

God talks about the events of the future when Israel goes into captivity and they will finally be delivered again. It will be an event that will greatly overshadow, in terms of size and magnitude, the events of the Egyptian captivity and the Exodus from Egypt.

There is going to be a future Exodus of bringing the children of Israel from the land of the north and from all the lands where He will drive them. He will bring them back. This is a prophecy that goes beyond Judah.

Verse 15 makes plain that it is a prophecy to the children of Israel. Realize that Jeremiah was writing one hundred twenty years after the ten tribes of Israel had already gone into captivity. The ten tribes were gone; they were history. Jeremiah is talking about events yet future. He is talking about events concerning the children of Israel, the house of Israel. The events that occurred to Judah were, in many ways, a type of end-time events to the house of Israel. These things are made plain. He describes what is going to happen. He describes that captivity is ultimately going to come. Eventually, God will deliver and He will bring them back. It will be an event of such magnitude that it will absolutely overshadow everything that has ever gone before.

Verse 19, ““...The Gentiles shall come to You from the ends of the earth and say, ‘Surely our fathers have inherited lies, worthlessness and unprofitable things.’”” As He deals with the nations, they will come up to be converted. They will want to learn God's way.

Notice what God says about putting our faith in human help.

Jeremiah 17:5, “Thus says the Lord: ‘Cursed is the man who trusts in man and makes flesh his strength, whose heart departs from the Lord.’” “Cursed be the man who trusts in man”—putting your faith and confidence in human beings and what they can do and losing sight of God and the reality of His power. If you get your focus on the human element, you’re under a curse. What’s the curse? The curse is that you are dependent on a weak, frail, human being, just like you are. You are trusting in a human being who is just as limited as you are. We cut ourselves off from access to the great power of the Eternal God and we put confidence in human beings.

He goes on and compares that.

Verses 7-8, “Blessed is the man who trusts in the Lord, and whose hope is the Lord. For he shall be like a tree planted by the waters....” You have a continual source of help.

Then we have some things about human nature defined for us.

Verses 9-10, “The heart is deceitful above all things, and desperately wicked; who can know it? I, the Lord, search the heart, I test the mind, even to give every man according to his ways, and according to the fruit of his doings.” We are told that the primary ingredient of human nature is self-deceit. We kid ourselves. One of the hardest things for any of us to do, as human beings, is to be totally, brutally, frankly honest with and about ourselves and about our motives.

Have you ever noticed that if you want to do something, you can find a lot of good excuses as to why you should buy this, you should do that, or go here, etc. You can come up with a lot of good reasons that justify it. If you don’t want to do something, you can come up with a lot of pretty good-sounding excuses as to why you shouldn’t or you can’t. ‘I don’t think I can’—all these things that come to mind. We can come up with all these good things as to why we don’t think we can. There is a difference between a reason and an excuse.

“The heart is deceitful above all things.” It’s hard for us to really come to grips with our motives. We can kid ourselves. We can deceive ourselves. That is a crucial part of human nature. We can “lock in” and we can never work on a problem we don’t see. We have to see it in order to work on it. We have to honestly face something in order to deal with it. This is a very crucial part of human nature. “Who can know it?” “The heart is deceitful above all things.” First and foremost we kid ourselves. We make up excuses and justifications. It’s hard for us to really come to grips with the real reason we do things.

God says He searches the heart. He tries the mind. If we really want to see as God sees, God will show us, but you have to want to see. It’s a matter of examining why we do what we do. Why do we do or refrain from doing certain things? It takes time to get down to the heart and core of our real motivations. That’s a part of what Christianity and internalizing the law of God is all about. Christianity is much more than merely external observance. Christianity is about internalizing a new way of thinking. Obviously, if we internalize a new way of thinking, it’s going to be reflected in what we do on the outside. If we’re externally disobedient, then it’s a pretty good indication we’re not internally doing what we should do either.

However, the reverse is not true. A person can outwardly conform to everything and yet inwardly, be simply like the Pharisees. We’re told that our heart is the seat of our emotions and of our thinking. The heart is deceitful above all things. We need God’s help to really properly perceive and not kid ourselves.

God begins to rebuke the nation concerning some of the sins. He refers to Sabbath breaking.

Verses 21-23, “Thus says the Lord: ‘Take heed to yourselves, and bear no burden on the Sabbath day, nor bring it in by the gates of Jerusalem; nor carry a burden out of your houses on the Sabbath day, nor do any work, but hallow the Sabbath day, as I commanded your fathers. But they did not obey nor incline their ear, but made their neck stiff, that they might not hear nor receive instruction.’”

He talks about the consequences of not hallowing the Sabbath.

Verse 27, “But if you will not heed Me to hallow the Sabbath, such as not carrying a burden when entering the gates of Jerusalem on the Sabbath day, then I will kindle a fire in its gates, and it shall devour the palaces of Jerusalem, and it shall not be quenched.” The specific reference to bearing a burden was burdens of merchandise, particularly from agricultural districts. People were simply bringing in merchandise into Jerusalem. They were bringing forth things from the house with which to barter and trade for produce.

The Jews went to great lengths, after the captivity, to define as to what was a burden. They got into great debates among the rabbis trying to define how much is a burden. By the time of Christ, they had so “nit-picked” the thing apart that they had come out with the rabbitical ruling that anything exceeding the weight of three figs constituted bearing a burden on the Sabbath. That is a carnal-minded approach.

Let’s understand why it’s a carnally-minded approach. The carnal mind wants a line drawn so they can get as close to it as possible. The carnal mind is not subject to the law of God. It really does not want to be as close to God as it can be. It wants to be as close to the world as it can be, and it wants an exact line. It wants to get up just as close as it can and kind of lean over the cliff but not lean over so far as to fall.

The rabbis said, ‘Since the attitude of the people is that they are going to go as far as we’ll let them, then what we need to do is to draw the line way back over here. That way, nobody gets really close to the cliff.’ Nobody went too far because they drew the line so far that no one could get close. What the rabbis said was that they were going to build a hedge around the law. Their reasoning was, ‘Look, we went into captivity because we violated the law, particularly idolatry and Sabbath breaking. What we need to do is build a hedge around the law so that people can’t even get close to breaking the law. We’ll stick on all these “do’s” and “don’ts.”’ You will have to go far beyond the limits we set in order to break the law. It will keep everybody “in line.”’ That’s a carnal-minded approach because it’s dealing from the premise that people are going to go as far as they can go, as far as you’ll let them get by with.

I think we need to understand that God is not going to have anybody in His Kingdom with that approach. The approach that God wants is to get as close to Him as we can. Our whole direction needs to be that we want to get as close to God as we can get. Not as close to the world as we can get by with, but as close to God as we can get. It’s a different approach. When you have that approach, you don’t have to build a hedge around the law because you’re not trying to get up to the edge to lean over. You’re not trying to “cut the corners” and take the liberties. You’re trying to apply the principle.

We’re not only to observe the law but also to understand and to apply in our hearts and minds the principles behind the law. That’s why the Pharisees got into this contention with Christ. Remember where He had healed the man who was paralyzed and He told him to rise, take his bed and walk—and the guy did. And the Pharisees got all “bent out of shape.” The fellow wasn’t picking up his Sealy Posturepedic; that wasn’t what he was carrying. What he had was like a sleeping bag. It probably wasn’t even that much. It was just a little mat. He rolled it up and put it on his shoulder. Christ didn’t have the guy staggering down the street carrying a king-size bed and headboard on his back. That was not the point. He was healed. What was he going to do? Was he going to go off and leave it and not have the mat to lie down on anymore? It was silly. There was nothing in God’s law that forbade the fellow to roll up the mat or blanket, stick it on his shoulder and go on. The Pharisees took the approach of trying to build a hedge around the law of humanly imposed “do’s” and “don’ts.”

We have to understand that the tendency of human nature is to veer from one ditch to the other. We need to realize that we need to obey the law, but we need to go beyond simply obeying the letter of the law. We don’t need to go beyond in the sense of inventing a whole lot of humanly-imposed ideas. We need to understand the principle and we need to apply the principle. We need to realize that when God talks about some of these things, there is a principle involved. There is a particular way that God wants His people to be, and we want to fit in with that. We want to be made conformable to the image of Jesus Christ (Romans 8:29), not conformable to the image of the society around us (Romans 12:2).

It goes on and further develops that in chapter 18.

Jeremiah 18:1-6, we have the story where Jeremiah was told to rise and to go down to the potter’s house.

I want to mention something. A number of years ago, there was an art show that was going on. It sounded interesting and we decided to go down and take a look and see what they had. The thing that I particularly remember about it was the potter that they had there. He had some beautiful vases and art objects that he had made. He was working at a potter’s wheel. It was very interesting to watch him. I had never seen a real potter working before. As I watched him, Jeremiah 18 was running through my mind.

When a group of us gathered around, he started fresh. He picked out a lump (or brick) of clay. The first thing he did with this brick of clay that he picked out was to lay it down on this table and start beating on the thing with his fist. It was hard and it wasn’t very pliable. He pounded on it for a little bit. After he had beat on it for a little while, he had this little bowl of water and he sprinkled a little water on it. After he had beat on it for a little bit with his fist, it began to kind of lose that rigid brick-like shape. He sprinkled a little water on it and pounded on it a little more. He tore it in two and then put the two together. He'd reach back, put a little water on it and work with it. Gradually, instead of being hard and very difficult, it became more and more pliable. He was working it back and forth. When he had it really loosened up and really malleable, he plunked a big lump on the potter's wheel and began working with the treadle to make this potter's wheel turn. It was just incredible. Within a matter of minutes, this beautiful vase took shape. Before, it had just been a lump of clay; now it was a beautiful vase. The potter's wheel kept turning it around. He got out some instruments, put some fine touches on it and got it just right. Then he ran a string under it to separate the bottom of it from the potter's wheel. He got it loose and set it aside. He said he would let it dry for a little bit and then he would oven bake it to harden it. Then it would be painted and baked again. He described the rest of the process. What happens when God first selects us? What happens when God calls us and begins to work with us? He's the Potter; we're the clay. He selects us. He calls us out. He chooses us from the midst of all these other lumps of clay. But then He has to bring us to the point that we can be worked with. Some of us are a little harder lump of clay than others. What does He do? Well, He has to pound on it for a little while. He has to bring us to the point that we can be molded and shaped because you can't shape a lump of clay until it is malleable and can be worked with.

You have to be pliable. Therefore, the first thing you have to do is get some of the stiffness out of it. What does God do? He pounds on us a little bit. A few trials come along. It gets our attention and takes a little of the stiffness out. What does He do? He begins to add some of His Spirit. That's what the water is. Water is even used in the Bible as a symbol of God's Spirit. God begins to add in some of His Spirit, and that Spirit makes us more and more pliable. He keeps working with us and working with us, adding in a little more Spirit. He keeps working with us until finally we're responsive to Him. Then at the point that we really become responsive, He can make us what He wants us to be. Then that character is hardened.

There is an analogy that is drawn; the trials and tests we go through are like being put through the fire (I Peter 1:7) and hardened. Because once you've fired a piece of pottery, nothing else can ever be made out of it. It can be destroyed and made into dust, but you could never take it, reshape it and make something else. It has lost that elasticity, that ability to be shaped. God ultimately gets us just like He wants us. In effect, He fires our character to where it hardens and to where we are set. There may be a few little decorative touches that He puts on, but, basically, it becomes set. It's an interesting analogy.

God goes through that with Jeremiah. It's a good analogy to think about and to realize that God says, 'I am the Potter and you are the clay. Jeremiah, you want to find out how I work with you and what I'm doing. Go down to the potter's house; look and see what he does.'

Is prophecy conditional?

Jeremiah 18:8, "'if that nation against whom I have spoken turns from its evil, I will relent of the disaster that I thought to bring upon it.'" If a nation against whom God has pronounced punishment turns from their evil, He will turn from what He was purposing to do. The example of that is Nineveh, in the book of Jonah, repenting of their sins. Prophecy is conditional if a prophecy of punishment is given. Upon a lack of repentance, God describes the things that He is going to do—how there would be a captivity that would come and, v. 17, the nation would be scattered. These events were going to occur.

In Jeremiah 19, he talks about some of those things.

Verse 8, he talks about the city being made desolate.

Verse 9, he describes that the nation will have such an extent of famine that there was, literally, cannibalism that occurred. That literally occurred during the first siege of Jerusalem. Josephus records that there were some instances of it in the siege of Jerusalem by the Romans. Undoubtedly, it is going to be paralleled again in the events that mark the beginning of the tribulation, the famine and the things that are going to occur. There are going to be some very, very serious things.

Then there is the response to God's message being delivered. They weren't happy. They didn't like it and the government officials didn't like it.

Jeremiah 20:1-2, "Now Pashhur the son of Immer, the priest who was also chief governor in the house of the Lord, heard that Jeremiah prophesied these things. Then Pashhur struck Jeremiah the prophet, and put him in the stocks that were in the high gate of Benjamin, which was by the house of the Lord.” Here he was ready to throw Jeremiah in jail. He was going to punish him. He said, ‘You shouldn’t say things like this.’ People become very antagonist when the truth is told. Jeremiah made it plain to Pashhur what was going to happen to him.

Jeremiah 21:1-2, “The word which came to Jeremiah from the Lord when King Zedekiah sent to him Pashhur...‘Please inquire of the Lord for us, for Nebuchadnezzar king of Babylon makes war against us....’” He said, ‘The king of Babylon is making war against us, and we want to know if God will intervene for us.’ Here’s the irony of it. They were ready to throw him in jail. They were mad at him. Yet when they got scared and their “back got against the wall,” they came to him and asked him to inquire of the Lord for them. They knew where God was working.

There are some interesting examples that are mentioned in Mr. Herbert Armstrong’s autobiography of some similar type events in the early years of the work. There are certain ones that he mentioned. There was a particular church that really had no use for him. They were of a Pentecostal variety, and they figured that they were spiritual and he wasn’t. They had all kinds of things to say about him until the time when the pastor’s wife fell over “under the spirit” and they couldn’t revive and bring her back. Immediately, they set out to look for him. When “push came to shove,” they knew whose prayers were answered. It’s the irony sometimes, and this attitude is reflected right here in Jeremiah 21. Jeremiah came and explained what was going to occur. He told them exactly what was going to happen and how.

Verse 10, “For I have set My face against this city for adversity and not for good....”

He goes on to explain why all these calamities were going to come.

Jeremiah 22:9, “...“Because they have forsaken the covenant of the Lord their God, and worshiped other gods and served them.”” They hadn’t obeyed God. They hadn’t served God.

Verse 21, “I spoke to you in your prosperity, but you said, “I will not hear.” This has been your manner from your youth, that you did not obey My voice.”” Again they had this attitude and this lack of obedience to God.

Jeremiah 23:1-6, “Woe to the shepherds who destroy and scatter the sheep of My pasture,’ says the Lord. Therefore thus says the Lord God of Israel against the shepherds who feed My people: ‘You have scattered My flock, driven them away, and not attended to them. Behold, I will attend to you for the evil of your doings,’ says the Lord. ‘But I will gather the remnant of My flock out of all countries where I have driven them, and bring them back to their folds; and they shall be fruitful and increase. I will set up shepherds over them who will feed them; and they shall fear no more, nor be dismayed, nor shall they be lacking,’ says the Lord. ‘Behold, the days are coming,’ says the Lord, ‘That I will raise up David a Branch of righteousness; a King shall reign and prosper, and execute judgment in the earth. In His days Judah will be saved, and Israel will dwell safely; now this is His name by which He will be called: THE LORD OUR RIGHTEOUSNESS.’”

The term “pastor” is a term that means “shepherd.” This certainly can apply both in the national sense as well as in the religious sense. It certainly would apply to false ministers and false religious leaders. It simply refers to those who are to be the shepherds of God’s flock. Instead of properly tending the flock, they have been fleecing the flock. God says, ‘I am going to deal with that. I am going to hold them accountable, and things are ultimately going to change.’

It shows the righteous Branch that God will raise up. The One who is characterized as David’s Righteous Branch will be ruling over all—in other words, Jesus Christ. Ruling under Him will be various righteous shepherds—that’s us. It describes the consequences of what has occurred, the things that set the stage for the prophecies.

Then it describes the future Exodus.

Verse 8, “...“As the Lord lives who brought up and led the descendants of the house of Israel from the north country and from all the countries where I had driven them.” And they shall dwell in their own land.””

Here we have a prophecy that clearly comes down to the end time.

Verses 10-11, “For the land is full of adulterers; for because of a curse the land mourns...For both the prophet and the priest are profane....”

Verse 14, “Also I have seen a horrible thing in the prophets of Jerusalem: they commit adultery and walk in lies; they also strengthen the hands of evildoers, so that no one turns back from his wickedness. All of them are like Sodom to Me, and her inhabitants like Gomorrah.”” We have a description of how God characterizes the nation and the result of what He is going to do as a consequence of that.

Jeremiah 24 has the parable of the figs. We have two baskets of figs: one is characterized as very good fig and the other is characterized as very bad figs. The good figs symbolized those who had already been taken captive to Babylon, over whom God would watch and would ultimately bring back to the land. This happened a generation later under Zerrubabel. The bad figs symbolized those left behind and those who had gone to Egypt.

Verses 9-10, they would suffer many punishments which were yet to come.

In Jeremiah 25, Jeremiah continues his prophecies and the things that were going to occur. He explains they were going into captivity and why they were going into captivity.

Jeremiah 25:5-7, ““They said, “Repent now everyone of his evil way and his evil doings, and dwell in the land that the Lord has given to you and your fathers forever and ever. Do not go after other gods to serve them and worship them, and do not provoke Me to anger with the works of your hands; and I will not harm you. Yet you have not listened to Me,” says the Lord, “that you might provoke Me to anger with the works of your hands to your own hurt.”””

Verses 11-12, “““And this whole land shall be a desolation and an astonishment, and these nations shall serve the king of Babylon seventy years. Then it will come to pass, when seventy years are completed, that I will punish the king of Babylon and that nation, the land of the Chaldeans, for their iniquity,” says the Lord; “and I will make it a perpetual desolation.”””

God describes the events that were going to occur and the seventy years that were prophesied. It wasn't totally clear, even at that time, as to what exactly the seventy years was about. In fact, it's interesting. Daniel who was a younger contemporary of Jeremiah had been studying this.

Daniel 9:2, “in the first year of his reign [speaking of Darius] I, Daniel, understood by the books the number of the years specified by the word of the Lord, given through Jeremiah the prophet, that He would accomplish seventy years in the desolations of Jerusalem.” Daniel had been studying this. He had been trying to understand it. He was in Babylon. He had been taken captive from Jerusalem. He didn't understand exactly what the seventy years meant—when did it start and when did you stop it? How did this seventy years run? He had been studying the book of Jeremiah.

Daniel 1:2, the books of the Bible had been taken to Babylon along with the artifacts that had been taken from the temple. Daniel had access to them. He had been studying it trying to understand. Finally he did. He understood it shortly before it happened. The details generally become plain as we get closer to the time of fulfillment. The seventy years, basically, would extend from about 604 B.C., which was Nebuchadnezzar's first invasion, down to 534 B.C., which is when the Jews actually returned. Cyrus issued the decree in 535 B.C., but it took several months to get back. It was actually 534 B.C. before they returned. So it was seventy years from the time of the first invasion and captivity until the return of the captives from Babylon.

The people got upset in what Jeremiah had to say.

Jeremiah 26:11, “And the priests and the prophets spoke to the princes and all the people, saying, ‘This man deserves to die! For he has prophesied against this city, as you have heard with your ears.’”

‘Boy, we need to get rid of this guy.’ Great persecution began to come. I think we can understand that and even some of the parallels right on down to our day.

In Jeremiah 27:1-7, we have indication of how God was going to give Babylon dominance.

In vv. 12-18, we have Jeremiah's advice to the king and the information that he brought out.

By the time you get to chapter 29, Jeremiah had some advice for the captives of Babylon. He wrote a letter.

Jeremiah 29:1, “Now these are the words of the letter that Jeremiah the prophet sent from Jerusalem to the remainder of the elders who were carried away captive—to the priests, the prophets, and all the people whom Nebuchadnezzar had carried away captive from Jerusalem to Babylon.” This would include Ezekiel who was one of the priests who had been carried captive. And it would include Daniel. This was the letter that was written and it described the seventy years. Undoubtedly, this was the letter that Daniel was referring to in the book of Daniel when he was trying to understand, trying to grasp the significance of it.

Verses 4-7, “Thus says the Lord of hosts, the God of Israel, to all who were carried captive, whom I have caused to be carried away from Jerusalem to Babylon: Build houses and dwell in them, plant gardens and eat their fruit. Take wives and beget sons and daughters; and take wives for your sons and give your daughters to husbands, so that they may bear sons and daughters—that you may be increased there, and not diminished. And seek the peace of the city where I have caused you to be carried away captive, and pray to the Lord for it; for in its peace you will have peace.”

They were told that they were to settle down there, build houses, get married and raise their families. They were told they would not be coming back, to not put off those events and to pursue them day in and day out. The time would come when they would be delivered, but they should be pursuing their normal activities in the meanwhile. That was the appropriate way.

In some ways, we could parallel that today. What should we be doing? We need to go about pursuing our normal activities and being productive individuals. Yet we need to be spiritually prepared and ready, realizing that this society, the Babylon in which we live, is not going to last.

It continues and describes some of the persecution that came in.

Jeremiah 30:2, “Thus speaks the Lord God of Israel, saying: “Write in a book for yourself all the words that I have spoken to you.”” Jeremiah was told to write in a book the words that God had spoken, and this is the book of Jeremiah. Jeremiah was told to write down and describe all these things.

Then we’re told of Jacob’s trouble.

Verse 7, “Alas! For that day is great, so that none is like it; and it is the time of Jacob’s trouble, but he shall be saved out of it.” Now this is clearly referring to the Great Tribulation Jesus talked about.

Matthew 24:21, “For then shall be great tribulation, such as has not been since the beginning of the world until this time, no nor ever again shall be.”

In Jeremiah 30:7, we are told, ““...that day is great, none is like it...”” You can’t have two times that are worst than any other time. Clearly, both describe the worst time; therefore, it’s the same time. One of the things that characterize the Tribulation is that it is the time of Jacob’s trouble. He also brings out what will occur after God brings them back from captivity, after He saves them out of that Tribulation.

Verse 9, ““But they shall serve the Lord their God, and David their king, whom I will raise up for them.”” King David is going to be resurrected and is going to be king. They are going to serve Jesus Christ and they are going to serve King David. God will bring them back.

Verse 10, ““...Jacob shall return, have rest and be quiet, and no one shall make him afraid.””

There is no way you can take the description here and apply it to the return of the Jews to Judea in our time because they certainly are not dwelling at rest and with no one making them afraid. That area is filled with terrorists, and there are all kinds of things going on. That is not the fulfillment of this event right here. This is yet future, after the return of Jesus Christ.

Verse 18 describes the great Exodus of the future.

Verse 24, “...In the latter days you will consider it.” It brings out that this prophecy is set in the latter days.

Jeremiah 31 describes the return of Israel.

Verses 7-8, Israel is being re-gathered and the remnant will be saved and brought up from the north country. They are going to be taken, not to Egypt, which is south, but they are going to be taken to the north country. The clear reference is the area up in Europe, the area where the Beast power is centered, which is north of Jerusalem. They are going to be re-gathered and brought back.

Jeremiah 31:10, “Hear the word of the Lord O nations, and declare it in the isles afar off, and say, “He who scattered Israel will gather him, and keep him as a shepherd does his flock.”” It describes that gathering together.

It describes a time of rejoicing after the re-gathering.

Verse 13, “Then shall the virgin rejoice in the dance, and the young men and the old, together; for I will turn their mourning to joy, will comfort them, and make them rejoice rather than sorrow.”

One thing as just a kind of aside—it’s interesting that when you read of music in the Bible, it is a unifying factor, a culturally unifying factor. The idea of different music for different generations is a concept alien to the Bible. Music in our age and society, in the twentieth century (particularly the latter portion), has become a divisive factor in society. It has become divisive to generations.

Different music is appropriate for different occasions. There is formal music that is appropriate for occasions of public worship, to set an atmosphere of worship and reverence. There was the Levitical choir and orchestra. But there is also music that is appropriate for other occasions, music that is more informal. Here it describes a time of rejoicing. Music in this case was appropriate for a kind of impromptu street dance—a time of festivity and rejoicing. We find that this is the role that it traditionally played.

We have to understand the extent to which our modern problems are something unusual. That's not always been. When you go back years ago, some of you remember that normally when there was a dance in the community, everybody was there, young and old people. They all enjoyed and took part in the occasion.

This is what is described here. We are looking at what God intends music to be; music is a culturally unifying factor. Music can express emotions and feeling in a way that virtually nothing else can. God has designed that and designed the laws that actually regulate music in terms of why music affects us as it does because music does have an effect. Certain music can stir you up or slow you down. It can raise or lower your blood pressure and heart rate. They have proven that in clinical studies. You can play a stirring march or soft lullaby, and it has a different effect. There is different music for different occasions.

There is a reference to Rachel.

Verse 15, "...A voice was heard in Ramah, lamentation and bitter weeping, Rachel weeping for her children, refusing to be comforted for her children, because they are no more." This scripture is quoted in Matthew 2:17-18. The reason Bethlehem is considered the city of Rachel is because Rachel died in Bethlehem giving birth to Benjamin. She died and was buried there. Bethlehem was in the territory of Benjamin. In that sense, it was considered Rachel's city. She was identified with it because she died there and was buried there. The Benjamites (Rachel's descendants) dwelt there.

In Matthew 2:18, Jesus Christ was born in Bethlehem. Herod knew that the Messiah had been born, at least the One who was reported to be King of the Jews. Because Herod didn't want any competition, he sent the soldiers in to kill all the babies there in Bethlehem. This verse was quoted. It was a poetic reference to the devastation that took place. It describes, figuratively speaking, Rachel weeping for her children. It is a poetic reference to the destruction and devastation that occurred, and it specifically referred to Rachel because of Bethlehem being identified with her. Herod very directly fulfilled it at the slaughter of the infants. Figuratively, it could even refer forward to the time and events of the tribulation when many of Rachel's end-time descendants will be slaughtered.

We have a description of the New Covenant.

Jeremiah 31:31-33, "'Behold, the days are coming,' says the Lord, 'when I will make a new covenant with the house of Israel and with the house of Judah—not according to the covenant that I made with their fathers in the day that I took them by the hand to bring them out of the land of Egypt, My covenant which they broke, though I was a husband to them...But this is the covenant that I will make...I will put My laws in their minds, and write it on their hearts; and I will be their God, and they shall be My people.'"

This will ultimately be fulfilled after the return of Christ. It will be a time when that covenant is being written in the hearts of everyone, and there won't be anybody left to be taught. The new covenant will ultimately be completed when all have been converted or have rejected it and been destroyed. God is making the new covenant. It is made with us right now, and the rest of the world will have the opportunity to enter into the new covenant at a future date.

The basis of the new covenant is not that the law is being done away; it is that the law is being written in our hearts and in our minds. In other words, we are trying to learn to think like God. We are not trying to edge as close to worldliness as we can. We are trying to think like God. We are not trying to see what we can get away with. It's having the mind of Christ (Philippians 2:5). God will put His laws into their hearts and into their minds—convert them. That's what "conversion" means. It means "a change, a transformation." It is more than just external conformity; it is an internal transformation. This is very, very crucial and important.

Jeremiah 32:2-3 goes back and describes Jeremiah's imprisonment.

Verses 3-5, people were upset at what he was saying, the things he was doing and the message he was proclaiming.

I call your attention to more references to the fact that there was a difference between Judah and Israel.

Jeremiah 32:30, "'because the children of Israel and the children of Judah have done only evil before Me from their youth...'"

Verse 32, "'because of all the evil of the children of Israel and the children of Judah...'"

We have this clear reference to the fact that there is a distinction between them.

Jeremiah 33:7, "'And I will cause the captives of Judah and the captives of Israel to return, and will rebuild those places as at the first.”” This has not yet been fulfilled. Judah came back; Israel has not. That is yet future. It is another reference that clearly shows that Israel’s identity would be preserved down to the end; otherwise, how could they be brought back?

Verses 17-18, “For thus says the Lord: “David shall never lack a man to sit on the throne of the house of Israel; nor shall the priests, the Levites, lack a man to offer burnt offerings before Me, to kindle grain offerings, and to sacrifice continually.””

Verses 20-21, “Thus says the Lord: “If you can break My covenant with the day and My covenant with the night, so that there will not be day and night in their season, then My covenant may also be broken with David My servant, so that he shall not have a son to reign on his throne, and with the Levites, the priests, My ministers.””

God describes this covenant. This message was spoken shortly before the destruction of Jerusalem, and with it, the cessation of the functioning of the Levitical priesthood and of the reign of the house of David from Jerusalem.

This scripture shows that in spite of appearances, vv. 25-26, God intended to keep His covenant. He would preserve the house of David and the house of Levi. Other scriptures show that while David’s dynasty would continue an uninterrupted reign over the house of Israel, it would not be restored to Jerusalem until Christ comes. The Levites would also be restored to a functioning priesthood at that time.

Notice what he said about David.

Verse 17, “...“David shall never lack a man to sit on the throne of the house of Israel.”” Now the family of David had not ruled over the house of Israel for more than three hundred years. By the time Jeremiah was writing this, the house of David and the family of David had not ruled over the house of Israel for over three hundred years. They had been ruling over the house of Judah. But this says they are going to rule over the House of Israel. We will notice that there are clear references in Jeremiah and Ezekiel to Jeremiah’s role in transferring the throne of David from Judah to Israel. We will notice some of that next Bible study. We will notice the commission that Jeremiah was given and how it ended up.

Jeremiah 34 recounts the occasion that I mentioned at the beginning of the Bible study. It recounts the siege of the city of Jerusalem by the Babylonians. It recounts Judah’s temporary repentance and observance of the Sabbatical year, then the Egyptians coming and the Jews thinking they were “off the hook.” They went back to their old ways. Then God said, ‘Just look out. You’re going to get the old punishment.’

You can tie that in with the statement in Galatians 6:7 where God said, “Do not be deceived, God is not mocked; for whatever a man sows, that he will also reap.”

You don’t “put one over” on God. It just doesn’t work that way. Human nature finds it difficult to realize that God sees and knows and that there isn’t any way that we would ever “put something over” on God. This is a clear lesson and parallel, here in Jeremiah 34, of the attitude of wanting to get out of trouble. But they didn’t have an attitude of really wanting to change. Sometimes that happens. We have to examine our own life and make sure we don’t do something just trying to get out of trouble and not really motivated by a desire and a heart that wants to change. We want God’s law in our hearts and in our minds. That’s the new covenant, being converted, being changed and transformed by a renewing of our minds (Romans 12:2).

As we go to God for that and for that help, God will work with us. He will add in His Spirit. He may have to work us like the potter does the clay. He may have to pound on us for a little bit to get us softened up where we can be worked with. Some of us take a little more pounding than others. God is going to do it because He is preparing to shape and form us and make us a vessel fit for the Master’s use. We are being shaped and transformed.

A lot is packed here in the book of Jeremiah. We will conclude the book of Jeremiah next Bible study.

Major Prophets Series—Jeremiah 35—52

We are ready to finish up the book of Jeremiah. The first eleven chapters that we are going to cover this evening, Jeremiah 35-45, provide a historical inset to the theme of the prophecy. What we have, primarily, in these chapters is a historical account of the events of Jeremiah's ministry. We have the account of his warning to the governmental leaders in his day, the story of his subsequent arrest and, finally, the story of the Babylonian invasion of Judah and subsequent captivity of Jerusalem and Judah. We have the account of those Jews who were left behind and their electing to move to Egypt in spite of Jeremiah's warnings to the contrary. We have the consequences of that.

These chapters deal primarily with contemporary events and yet they also provide lessons for us today. There is a lot of insight, a lot of things that we can gain and learn from parallels with the work that God did through Jeremiah, the work that God is doing in our day and on out ahead of us. Also, these historical inset chapters provide kind of a summary or setting to help us to understand the context in which Jeremiah was writing.

One of the things about prophecy is that much of it is dual. To a great extent, what the prophet was writing or delivering had certain meaning and application for his contemporaries, for those people there at that time and that day. However, the prophecies that were written down generally had implications way beyond that day and down to the end time. That's one of the reasons that certain prophecies are written and recorded and preserved for us, while other prophecies are not. Men such as Elijah, Elisha, Nathan, Gad and many others are mentioned in the Bible as prophets. Yet the prophetic messages that they delivered evidently had primary implications to their day and their society because those messages were not written down and preserved for us.

But when we come to something like the book of Jeremiah, it clearly was preserved for us today. The implications of the book are things of which we need to take heed. Even the events that were contemporary accounts of Jeremiah's life, or things that he was going through, provide a background setting and stage and help us to understand the circumstances of what happened. Many times when you understand the way it happened the first time (when you understand the circumstances and background of it), it helps you to have a clearer picture of the way some of these things may have implications for us today.

Jeremiah 46-51 provides an insight into God's punishment on the surrounding nations. You have the Egyptians, the Philistines, the Moabites, the Ammonites, the Edomites, Damascus, Kedar, the Elamites and the Babylonians. These are all focused on and they all have their fates outlined. God will not only punish Judah.

Acts 10:34 KJV, "God is no respecter of persons." God will ultimately punish all nations for their sins. We have this brought in. We can understand some things as we note the modern identity of some of these nations that come down to us today.

Let's note in Jeremiah 35 an example and illustration that is given. We read of an interesting account of a group of people known as the Rechabites who are addressed here. The Rechabites were, in one sense, related to the Israelites in that they were descendants of Jethro, Moses' father-in-law. Jethro himself was a Midianite. The Midianites were descendants of Abraham through his son Midian who he had with Keturah (Genesis 25) after Sarah's death. The Midianites were a kindred people. They were also descendants of Abraham. The Rechabites were descended specifically from Jethro, Moses' father-in-law.

God calls the Rechabites to Jeremiah's attention. What we are told about them is that they had kept and observed from generation to generation precepts that were laid down by their human ancestor Jonadab, the son of Rechab. Jonadab had established a rule for his family. That rule was that his family was not to consume alcohol and they would not settle in towns and in fixed dwellings. They would live as nomads and they would forbear the use of alcoholic beverages.

Now, interestingly enough, you find the descendants of those people in the Middle East still doing the same thing. They are still nomads and they still don't drink alcohol. One thing you have got to hand it to them for is that they have a knack for consistency. They are not a people who are given to a lot of radical innovation. They are rather consistent from one generation to the next.

The Rechabites had come inside the wall of Jerusalem. The Babylonians were laying siege and set up camp inside the walls of Jerusalem.

God told Jeremiah he wanted him to do something. 'I want you to invite the leader of the Rechabites and some of the chief men. I want you to invite them into the temple and set a meal and wine before them. Invite them to sit down and have a nice meal.' Jeremiah did this. When it came to the occasion, the leader of the Rechabites told him he couldn't do this because it was not their custom to drink wine.

Verses 6-8, he said, 'We have not done this [by this time about three centuries] going back to the time of our father Jonadab, the son of Rechab. He established the rule for our family and we have all adhered to it ever since.'

Verses 13-16, God told Jeremiah, 'I want you to notice what has occurred. Notice how these Rechabites have observed the commandment of their ancestor. What about Israel observing My commandments? These people have such honor and veneration for their human ancestor. He laid down a humanly-devised rule, and his children and his descendants for generations down all observe the rule. He established a rule for the family and it was observed out of honor and veneration for him. It was observed for generations to come. I gave rules to My people, My children Israel, and they didn't last "until the water got hot." They didn't honor Me at all. These people honor their human ancestor, and Israel did not honor Me.'

Interestingly, God made a promise to the Rechabites. God was impressed at the dedication that those people had.

Jeremiah 35:18-19, "And Jeremiah said to the house of the Rechabites. Thus says the Lord of hosts, the God of Israel: 'Because you have obeyed the commandment of Jonadab your father, and kept all his precepts and done according to all that he commanded you,' therefore thus says the Lord of hosts, the God of Israel: 'Jonadab the son of Rechab shall not lack a man to stand before Me forever.'"

In other words, 'I am going to preserve this little tribe; I am going to preserve it as a witness. I am going to preserve them because I am impressed that a group of people who have had such an attitude of respect and such a tenacity, that I point them out as an example to Israel. I am going to make a promise to you that this tribe will never cease. It is not going to die out. It is not going to be wiped out by all the invading armies.'

They were never a great nation. They were never a mighty people. Many of the mighty peoples of the past have come and gone. Here is a group what is still today a small Bedouin tribe, probably about the same size they always were. Here is just one more little Bedouin tribe out there in the desert regions in the Middle East.

It's an interesting commentary. God pointed it out as an example to Jeremiah for the fact that all they had was a human instruction and commandment; yet they were faithful to it. They acted on what they knew and held on to it. They had a respect there. God said to Israel, 'You had so much more. You didn't simply have a humanly-devised set of rules.'

Actually, it is interesting if you go back to the context in which Jonadab lived. It was a time when there was a lot of social strife. A lot of things were going on in Israel and Judah. In effect, what Jonadab did was to say, 'We are getting out of this. We see the vice and the luxury. We see the problems. We see the materialism, the idolatry, all of these things. We're going to leave city life behind us. We're going from the things that I view as a corrupting influence. We're going to go out of here, mind our own business, leave everybody alone and live our lives.'

Now God has not called us as His people to go off and hide in a cave and wait for the end. But we have the commandments of God. Israel had the commandments of God. Judah had the commandments of God Himself. They weren't as faithful to what God said as these people had been to what their own simple human ancestor had said.

Jeremiah 36 is kind of an interesting story.

Verses 1-2, this is the account during the fourth year of King Jehoiakim, the son of Josiah. Jeremiah was told to take a scroll and to write all the things that he had been told to say from the day that God had first spoken to him. Really, what he was doing was writing the book of Jeremiah.

Verse 10, he was writing the book and Baruch, who was his assistant, actually wrote the words down. He copied the words and went in and read those words in the temple. This created quite a stir when he went through and read all the prophecies and all the things Jeremiah had said. Some of the princes were a little bit upset. They had Baruch come in and read the book to some of them.

Jeremiah 36:15, "...So Baruch read it in their hearing."

Verses 16-17, they were a little bit taken aback and said, 'We really better take this to the king because there were some very strong things that were said.' So they had Baruch come in.

Notice, I think this is kind of funny. People who are in charge or think they are in charge of some level of functioning like to give the idea that they have some important questions to ask and that they are really making a determination. I think it is kind of humorous. Since they did not want to appear overly impressed, they said they needed to ask something.

Verse 17, "And they asked Baruch, saying, 'Tell us now, how did you write all these words—at his instructions [with his mouth]?'” What do you say after you have just gotten through having the first two-thirds of Jeremiah read to you and you're told all the things that are going to happen to you? Well they said, 'Tell us now, are you the one who wrote this? How did you exactly write all these words at his mouth?'

Verse 18, "So Baruch answered them, 'He proclaimed with his mouth all these words to me, and I wrote them with ink in the book.'”

Baruch said, 'It wasn't really hard. He pronounced all these words with his mouth. That was the first step; he just kind of said the words [pronounced it with his mouth]. I took some ink and I wrote it in this book. Is it really difficult to figure out how I managed to write this thing down?' I think there was maybe just a tinge of sarcasm that Baruch had when he answered that and kind of described it in graphic detail. What it gets back to is a stupid question deserves a stupid answer. They asked a silly, self-evident question, and he just gave it back to them.

I think you will notice that Jesus dealt with people in that way. For people who asked sincere questions, Jesus always had time to explain in clear terms. He never put them down for asking. But some of these self-important individuals whose attitudes were wrong, when they asked the question, they were trying to be argumentative anyway. They were pompous and trying to appear important. He had no problem at really "pricking their balloon." There were times when He answered in a sarcastic manner because they asked the question that way. He never answered people who were sincere in that way; they simply wanted to know. There were times when people simply needed to be answered that way—applying Proverb 26:5, "Answer a fool according to his folly, lest he be wise in his own eyes [KJV, "conceit"].”

Jeremiah 36:19, they told Baruch, 'You and Jeremiah had better lay low. We are going to take this book in and we're going to read it to the king.' They read it to the king.

Verse 22, "Now the king was sitting in the winter house in the ninth month [this would be December], with a fire burning on the hearth before him." There was a fire there in the hearth. He was sitting there in front of the fireplace and they were reading this to him. They'd read a little ways—this was a scroll—and they would unroll it.

Verse 23, "And it happened, when Jehudi had read three or four columns, that the king cut it with the scribe's knife and cast it into the fire....” He took his knife, cut it and pitched it into the fire. He didn't pay any attention to this stuff. He wasn't impressed.

Word came to Jeremiah.

Verses 27-28, "Now after the king had burned the scroll with the words which Baruch had written at the instruction of Jeremiah, the word of the Lord came to Jeremiah, saying: 'Take yet another scroll, and write on it all the former words that were in the first scroll which Jehoiakim the king of Judah has burned.'”

'Take another roll and write on it everything you said the first time; then we have a few things to add.' One thing is evident; God ensures the preservation of His word in spite of human efforts to destroy it.

People ask, 'How can you be sure that we really have the Bible? How can you be sure that some of it didn't get lost in the shuffle?' Well, how can you be sure there is a God? If you can prove there is a God (and that is something that clearly can be done), God is certainly capable of preserving His word. He did right here in Jeremiah 36.

The king said he'd show them; he'd burn up the scroll. God said, 'Big deal! I'll just have it written down again. You won't destroy it at all.' Plus they added in a few details—a few little points about what was going to happen to the king, which were none too good.

Verses 30-31 record the punishment that happened to Jehoiakim. It records how he died. He was not even to be given a decent burial and his descendants would not sit on the throne.

Verse 32, "Then Jeremiah took another scroll and gave it to Baruch the scribe, the son of Neriah, who wrote on it at the instruction of Jeremiah all the words of the book which Jehoiakim king of Judah had burned in the fire. And besides, there were added to them many similar words.” They added in the rest of the story.

In Jeremiah 37, we pick up the story a few years later. We have a story of Jehoiakim being replaced. Nebuchadnezzar came in and put Jehoiakim “out of business.” He went out of the “king” business really quickly. They got rid of Jehoiakim and his brother Zedekiah was placed on the throne instead. Jehoiakim was dealt with here.

Nebuchadnezzar had three invasions of Jerusalem. He came in 604 B.C. He came back in 596 B.C. Finally he returned in 587 B.C. and wiped out the place. He burned the temple and ended the Jewish independence. Nebuchadnezzar came in; his first step was to collect tribute money and to set up a vassal king. When he kept having trouble from the Jews, he finally came back and decided to put a stop to it.

Jeremiah delivered a message. He was willing to speak God’s word and tell it like it was. When you tell it like it is, that is not popular. God’s servants have never won popularity contests. They are never going to win some great popularity contest in their own societies. When you deliver an unpleasant and unpopular message, people don’t like what’s said. There were a lot of people who liked Jesus Christ personally. He was a very likeable individual, but they didn’t like what He said. They didn’t like what Jeremiah said, to the point that when Jeremiah called it like it was, they got mad and threw him in prison.

Jeremiah 37:15-16, “Therefore the princes were angry with Jeremiah, and they struck him and put him in prison in the house of Jonathan the scribe, for they had made that the prison. When Jeremiah entered the dungeon and the cells, and Jeremiah had remained there many days.” They kept him in a dungeon and he stayed there for quite a while.

Verse 17, Zedekiah the king called him out privately and asked him if he had heard any word from the Lord. ‘Got any news?’ Zedekiah was not a very courageous sort. He was kind of an opinion-poll politician; they have to read the opinion polls to find out what they are for and against. Their position on the issue changes somewhat from day to day. They’re rather intimidated by others around them. Zedekiah seems to have been this sort of fellow.

Can you imagine what some kind of an old dug-earth cellar that they had him in down there? Then they put him in the court of the prison. They moved him upstairs.

Verse 21, “Then Zedekiah the king commanded that they should commit Jeremiah to the court of the prison, and that they should give him daily a piece of bread from the bakers’ street, until all the bread in the city was gone. Thus Jeremiah remained in the court of the prison.”

There was a famine. They gave him a little bit of bread every day and moved him out of the dungeon. They really had him in just a terrible situation where he was, and he was anxious to get out of it. He was accused of all sorts of things.

Verse 13-14, they accused him of being in league with the enemy saying, ‘You are falling away to the Chaldeans.’ Again, he was falsely accused.

People suspect our motives. This is something that happened historically to Jeremiah. We, brethren, should not be surprised or shocked to realize the time is coming when we’re going to be vilified, accused and have our motives suspected. We’re going to have things said about us in terms of why we’re doing what we’re doing. People tend to want to accuse and be suspicious of motives.

For years people said of Mr. Herbert Armstrong that he’s in it for the money. Now they never could explain why he was in it for so many years when there wasn’t any money. Nevertheless, that was what they said. Some of you were associated with the work and go back to a time when there wasn’t any money to be in it for. People look for a reason to accuse.

They accused Jeremiah and said, ‘You’re in league with the enemy. You’re on the payroll from King Nebuchadnezzar. You’re just trying to subvert the nation.’ In reality, Jeremiah wanted to save the nation. He told them the only way to salvation was repentance. If they didn’t repent, they were all going to be wiped out. People didn’t like to hear it. It’s kind of interesting the way Jeremiah was treated by his own people (the Jews) and by his own government. They threw him into prison.

In Jeremiah 38, the siege continues. They threw Jeremiah back into the dungeon, a different dungeon.

Jeremiah 38:6, “So they took Jeremiah and cast him into the dungeon of Malchiah the king’s son, which was in the court of the prison, and they let Jeremiah down with ropes. And in the dungeon there was no water, but mire. So Jeremiah sank in the mire.” It was like throwing somebody into the swamp. Actually, when you check it out, it was an area where there was refuse. It was kind of the worst sort of fate. Actually, what they put him in had originally been dug as a cistern to store water. But there wasn't any water there. There was mud and all kinds of gunk.

Verses 10-13, finally the king did have Jeremiah taken out before he died. You keep going through this. The king really didn't have the courage to listen to Jeremiah and act on what he had to say.

Jeremiah 39 is the story of the final invasion in 587 B.C.

Jeremiah 39:2, "In the eleventh year of Zedekiah, in the fourth month, on the ninth day of the month, the city was penetrated." The enemy came in and burned the walls.

Verses 6-7, "Then the king of Babylon killed the sons of Zedekiah before his eyes in Riblah; the king of Babylon also killed all the nobles of Judah. Moreover he put out Zedekiah's eyes, and bound him with bronze fetters to carry him off to Babylon." This was a very horrible punishment. They burned the city. They did all of these things, but, interestingly enough, Jeremiah was freed.

Verses 11-12, "Now Nebuchadnezzar king of Babylon gave charge concerning Jeremiah to Nebuzaradan the captain of the guard, saying, 'Take him and look after him, and do him no harm; but do to him just as he says to you.'" You talk about "carte blanche!"

King Nebuchadnezzar told the commanding general, 'Look, this Jeremiah, you get him out of the prison and you treat him well. And you let him do whatever he wants. He's got "carte blanche.'" This was significant because what really occurred, in effect, Jeremiah was given a passport.

Jeremiah 40:4-5, "'And now look, I free you this day from the chains that were on your hand. If it seems good to you to come with me to Babylon, come, and I will look after you. But if it seems wrong for you to come with me to Babylon, remain here. See, all the land is before you; wherever it seems good and convenient for you to go, go there.'...So the captain of the guard gave him rations and a gift and let him go."

What in effect happened: Jeremiah, if you remember, had a commission. This commission was given at the beginning of the book of Jeremiah.

It was detailed in Jeremiah 1:10, "...to root out, to pull down, to destroy, to throw down..." But he was also "to build and to plant." Jeremiah's commission involved both tearing down and building up. He was responsible to prophesy about the tearing down of Jerusalem, the rooting out of the people from that area, the overthrow of the throne and the transfer of it. But he was also responsible to build and to plant.

The final part of his ministry involved building and planting, which he had not done up until then. Actually, building and planting involved removing the throne of David from Jerusalem to the British Isles. If you check it out, the actual location to which it was transferred was to Tara, Ireland.

This was the seat of the old high kings of Ireland. Ireland was divided up into several component parts (each of which had a king), and there was a high king who dwelt in Tara. The throne was transferred there. Then quite a few centuries later, it was transferred from Tara, Ireland, to Scone, Scotland. That was at the time of Kenneth McElvyn, King of Scotland, about 800 A.D.

Then several centuries later, it was transferred a third time from Scone, Scotland, down to London, England, at the time of King Edward. That's why there is a stone called the "Stone of Scones." The Queen of England was crowned on it. It's called King Edward's chair. It was built for the coronation of King Edward. The stone was transferred from Scotland and is the symbol of the house of David. The rulers of the house of David have been crowned on it going all the way back to antiquity.

I made comment on it when we went through the book of Chronicles. There are several different places where it describes the fact that during the king's coronation, he stood upon the pillar or stood upon this stone. This was the custom that is identified.

The king's sons were killed before him (Jeremiah 39:6), but we read of the king's daughters in Jeremiah 41:10. We also read of them a little later in Jeremiah 43:6-7. We read that they were taken down into Egypt. Jeremiah went down to Egypt and from Egypt he took at least one of the daughters of the king and maybe more. They traveled with him. They went from Egypt, crossed the Mediterranean and went to the southern tip of Spain. From there, they sailed up to Ireland.

Jeremiah, here in chapters 39 and 40, was given a "carte blanche." He was given a passport from the king of Babylon, along with expense money, to enable him to carry out the job. He was now under the personal protection of the king of Babylon. He was basically free to travel wherever he wanted to go by order of the king of Babylon. If you "messed" with Jeremiah, you weren't "messing" with Jeremiah—you were "messing" with the king of Babylon.

He gave specific instructions. It now enabled Jeremiah to carry out the job God had given him. God opened that door for Jeremiah to be able to travel and to carry out the job he had been given to do. It points out to us how God can work through circumstances—sometimes in the most improbable circumstances—to make it possible for His servants to accomplish the job He has set before them.

We don't know what parallels that we may find. In effect, Nebuchadnezzar was the leader of the Beast power of his day. He was the original Beast, if you want to look at it that way. What is the answer to the booklet, Who is the Beast? Well, if you had lived in the days of Jeremiah, you could have answered it very succinctly. It was King Nebuchadnezzar. Daniel told him that. Remember?

Daniel 2:37-38, ““You, O King...are that head of gold.”” ‘You're the one.’ Everything since then has been the succession because the Beast system is symbolized both by the image that Nebuchadnezzar saw in Daniel 2, as well as the creatures that Daniel saw in Daniel 7. They reflect a succession of empires that date from the time of ancient Babylon, all the way down to our day and to the time immediately ahead of us.

The point we can realize is that God can work through circumstances, sometimes in the most improbable of ways. We don't want to limit God by determining ahead of time how God has to do things. God can work things out. People have wondered sometimes how are we going to get here or there? How is this going to happen? How in the world could the Church ever get to a place of safety? God doesn't tell us the details because it's not the physical details that He wants us to focus on.

Luke 21:36, Christ told His disciples to pray, to stay close to God, to be watchful and to be vigilant so that they might be accounted worthy to escape the events of the Great Tribulation.

Revelation 12:14 talks about the woman (the Church) being taken into the wilderness into her place (a specific location) where she is nourished there for a time, times, and a half time (the duration of the Tribulation), and protected from the face of the serpent. We're not given the specifics in terms of how it is going to happen. We're not given all the details. There may be certain indications here and there, but you have to be careful of being overly dogmatic on some of those indications. Nevertheless, they are there.

The real point is that God has a variety of ways He can work out the details and He hasn't seen fit to reveal all of that. We see some examples and realize that God could do it in a lot of ways. God can sometimes give us favor in the most improbable of people. God gave Jeremiah great favor with King Nebuchadnezzar. Later, God gave Daniel great favor with King Nebuchadnezzar. God sometimes has ways of working things out we don't expect. We want to look to God and not limit God by our own humanly-devised things. Jeremiah was now free to go and do the job God set him to do.

In Jeremiah 42:1-6, the Jews wanted Jeremiah to pray for them. They said, ‘We will do what God says; we just want you to tell us.’ Jeremiah told them under God's inspiration.

Jeremiah 42:19-21, ““The Lord has said concerning you, O remnant of Judah, “Do not go to Egypt!” Know certainly that I have admonished you this day. For you were hypocrites in your hearts when you sent me to the Lord your God, saying, “Pray for us to the Lord our God, and according to all that the Lord your God says, so declare to us and we will do it.” And I have this day declared it to you, but you have not obeyed the voice of the Lord your God, or anything which He has sent you by me.””

‘Don't go to Egypt.’ He said, ‘I know you're going to do it because you never listen. But that's what you're supposed to do—don't go to Egypt.’ In Jeremiah 43:1-2, when they heard a message they didn't want to hear, they got mad and said, ‘You're not telling us the truth.’

Verses 4-7, they said, ‘We're going to do it. We're going to show them.’ Here's the attitude. People want to know. You tell them and then they don't want to know. They are not going to do it. They don't believe it. They don't accept it. They are self-willed. This is pointed out. And, again, as God's servants today, we can't expect a whole lot better response or a whole lot better reaction.

They didn't believe Jeremiah and said, ‘We'll go down and the Egyptians will take care of us.’ Jeremiah said, ‘Guess again! Guess where Nebuchadnezzar's going next? Egypt is next on his list’ (vv. 10-11). People found it difficult to believe. Egypt had been a dominant, independent nation for centuries and centuries and centuries. It was the oldest nation. They couldn't believe that anything could happen to Egypt. Surely not! Egypt had been a major power since antiquity. Well, it did happen.

We call attention here to Jeremiah 43:6. Specifically, "...the king's daughters..." This shows that all of the royal family was not wiped out; the king's daughters were spared. That's the way the line of David was continued.

Jeremiah 44 shows how God dealt with the Jews that went down to Egypt and why He did it.

Jeremiah 44:12-13, ""And I will take the remnant of Judah who have set their faces to go into the land of Egypt to sojourn there, and they shall all be consumed and fall in the land of Egypt. They shall be consumed by the sword and by famine. They shall die, from the least to the greatest, by the sword and by famine; and they shall be an oath and an astonishment and a curse and a reproach! For I will punish those who dwell in the land of Egypt, as I have punished Jerusalem, by the sword, by famine, and by pestilence.""

'I am going to punish them because they wouldn't listen. They went down there and they wouldn't listen. They just "tuned it out.'" If they couldn't hear what they wanted to hear, they would ignore it. God said, 'I am going to take care of that.'

This is a reference and certainly a parallel to what happens. Our people today have that same obstinate approach. They are going to do it their way and don't see why their ways won't work. The only way that works in the long run is God's way.

Beginning in Jeremiah 46, we notice over the next few chapters that we have specific statements about various foreign nations. We start out dealing with the Egyptians. This is against Egypt.

Jeremiah 46:2, "Against Egypt..." Certainly it has an application to that time and day. It was a reference to what God was going to do to Egypt through the Babylonians.

But as we come down to v. 10, we will see that the prophecy and the significance of what was told to the Egyptians went beyond that time. It comes down to our day and on beyond.

Verse 10, ""For this is the day of the Lord God of hosts, a day of vengeance, that He may avenge Himself on His adversaries. The sword shall devour; it shall be satiated and made drunk with their blood; for the Lord God of hosts has a sacrifice in the north country by the River Euphrates."" It talks about the day of the Lord of hosts.

Verse 27, ""But do not fear, O My servant Jacob, and do not be dismayed, O Israel! For behold, I will save you from afar, and your offspring from the land of their captivity; Jacob shall return, have rest and be at ease; no one shall make him afraid.""

That did not occur in that time and in that day; it is sometime yet future. It describes a successful invasion and destruction. It describes that there were implications of that invasion of Egypt on beyond our time. Read in the book of Daniel where the Beast power comes into the Middle East.

Daniel 11:42, "...and the land of Egypt will not escape." They are going to invade Egypt. In a sense, there are implications that modern Babylon is going to invade modern Egypt, just like ancient Babylon invaded ancient Egypt.

In Jeremiah 47, we focus on the Philistines. The term "Palestine" is simply an alternate spelling. It is an English form of the Greek form "Philistine." It is kind of derived from that with a little different ending. That's why you will never hear a Jew use the term "Palestine." The Arabs refer to it as "Palestine." If you've heard Yassar Arafat interviewed, he will talk about Palestine. "Palestine" means "the land of the Philistines." "Israel," of course, means "Israel."

That's what the whole dispute is. To whom does it belong? Well, some of the descendants of the Philistines are right there and have always been there. That's why the Gaza strip is such a problem. If you go back and find out where the ancient city of the Philistines was, it was Gaza. If you look on a map of the area there, you will find those little villages. They probably haven't changed much—the same bunch of people and the same place. They are still mad; they are still fussing—same old thing.

Some of the descendants of the Philistines left from there. In fact, some of the Berbers of North Africa are descended from them. The Berbers are there in North Africa, particularly in the area of Libya. I haven't done any research on it to see Khadafy's ancestry, but it wouldn't surprise me that he is of Berber extraction. That is one of the dominant people in Northern Libya, which would make him a Philistine by ancestry. He certainly is by temperament and inclination. What you have, in a lot of cases, is the same people getting along just the same as they always did. There's no new thing under the sun.

Then God talks about the consequences of things that were going to happen anciently to Gaza. The Egyptians were coming in and they took over Gaza. They ruled Gaza until the Israelites took it away from them back in the time of the Six-Day War. The Philistines (the Palestinians) have been living there all along.

In Jeremiah 48 and 49, Moab and Ammon are addressed: Moab in Jeremiah 48 and Ammon in Jeremiah 49. The Moabites and the Ammonites are pretty much located in the area of Jordan and a portion of Iraq. The modern capital of Jordan, Amman, takes its name from Ammon in the Bible; it's the same people. The Ammonites and Moabites are kindred peoples. Some of these tribes you find concentrated primarily in the area of Jordan and a portion of Iraq. The Moabites concentrated perhaps more in the area of Iraq and perhaps some of them in Jordan. The Ammonites more directly centered in Jordan. We find them addressed and some of the things we see prophesied. They will suffer destruction. Jeremiah 48:47 and Jeremiah 49:6 show this.

Jeremiah 48:47, “‘Yet I will bring back the captives of Moab in the latter days,’ says the Lord.”

Jeremiah 49:6, “‘But afterward I will bring back the captives of the people of Ammon,’ says the Lord.” They are going to face the Babylonian invasion that is going to come in.

Jeremiah 48:25-26, “‘The horn [leader] of Moab is cut off...for he magnified himself against the Lord....’” It talks about the pride of Moab.

One of the ancient locations of Moab was the area of the modern Petra. Petra is a Greek name. The Jews call it Sela. The Greeks call it Petra. It basically has the same meaning in Hebrew or Greek. It is located in Jordan and it is known by the name that the Greek geographers gave it in the time of Alexander the Great. It was the ancient location of many of the Moabites.

There is an interesting allusion to it in Jeremiah 48:40, “‘For thus says the Lord: ‘Behold, one shall fly like an eagle, and spread his wings over Moab.’” Some have taken that as an allusion to the place where God would protect His people in the end time.

Compare it with Revelation 12:14 and how the woman will be taken into her place in the wilderness on the wings of a great eagle. Also compare that with other Scriptures.

Isaiah 16:1, “‘Send the lamb to the ruler of the land, from Sela [margin, “Petra”] to the wilderness, to the mount of the daughter of Zion.’” Sela was the Old Testament name. Petra is the modern name. There is a reference in Isaiah 16:1-2 to someone who is the ruler in that area, and it talks about the daughters of Moab.

Verse 4, “‘Let My outcasts dwell with you, O Moab; be a shelter to them from the face of the spoiler....’” Some of these things are taken together.

Jeremiah 48:28, “‘You who dwell in Moab, leave the cities [talking about after Nebuchadnezzar’s invasion] and dwell in the rock [or dwell in Sela], and be like the dove which makes her nest in the sides of the cave’s mouth.’” “‘You who dwell in Moab’”—Speaking of the Moabites.

This is what the Moabites did anciently when the Babylonians invaded. Those Moabites who escaped fled from the cities of Moab and went there into the area of Petra. They did do that, so there has been an allusion from this. “...dwell in the rocks [in Sela or Petra], and be like the dove....” It describes the making of a nest.

Isaiah 16:4, “‘Let My outcasts dwell with you Moab, be a cover to them from the face of the spoiler.’” If you put this together with Jeremiah, several of these verses have been taken as an allusion to the place where God would protect His people in the end time. Certainly, it cannot conclusively prove that is the location. There are a couple of others in the book of Isaiah that even appear a little bit stronger than that. When you take them all together they may give an indication, but they certainly are not total conclusive proof.

Nevertheless, it is the basis of why we have felt for many years that the spot that seemed most likely indicated by the Bible as the place where God would protect His people in the end time is the area there of Petra. That, together with a number of other scriptures in Isaiah, has been where the idea came about or why we speculated along that line for many, many years.

In Jeremiah 49:1, we come to the Ammonites.

Jeremiah 49:7, “‘Against Edom....’” We pick up the Edomites. There are several groups that are descendants of the Edomites. We have felt that many of the modern-day Turks trace their ancestry back to at least some of the tribes of Edom. The Amalekites were also the descendants of Edom. Many of them intermarried with the Philistines in the Middle East as well as in North Africa. Many of the Palestinians trace back to the Philistines and the Amalekites who are descendants of the Edomites. It describes the destruction that is going to come upon them. We also find that alluded to in the book of Obadiah.

Jeremiah 49:11, 17-18 show that the Edomites will simply be totally destroyed. The women and children will be left alive, but the male population will be destroyed.

In v. 23, Damascus is addressed. Damascus is the ancient capital of Syria and also the modern capital of Syria.

Verse 28 picks up the story of Kedar. Kedar would be primarily identified with Saudi Arabia. A lot of people don't realize that Ishmael also had twelve sons; Jacob's not the only one who had twelve sons. There are twelve tribes of Arabs, just as there are twelve tribes of Israelites. The primary tribe of the Arabs in Arabia is the tribe of Kedar. They are the ones who are the dominant tribe there in Saudi Arabia. We would take the reference in v. 28 to perhaps be referring to the European invasion of Saudi Arabia as they pour into the Middle East.

The Elamites are addressed in v. 34. They were anciently neighbors of the Babylonians. To a great extent, the Slavic people in Eastern Europe are descendants of Elam. Many of the Slavic peoples trace back to the Elamites.

In v. 36, it describes the Elamites anciently being scattered; this is what happened. They were scattered and basically went into Europe as a captive people, captive to the Assyrians (Germans). They have kind of always lived there, sandwiched in and dominated by either the Germans on the west or the Russians on the east. It's been the story of Middle Europe in the area of Poland and down through Czechoslovakia and some of that area. It is kind of a tragic story because their whole history has been one of being sandwiched between two strong and aggressive peoples.

Jeremiah 50 has prophecies of Babylon and God dealing with Babylon. We find that Babylon is going to be utterly destroyed.

Verses 9-15 describe Babylon being destroyed and not inhabited.

Jeremiah 50:39, “Therefore the wild desert beasts shall dwell there with the jackals, and the ostriches shall dwell in it. It shall be inhabited no more forever, nor shall it be dwelt in from generation to generation.” Ancient Babylon was overthrown. The city of Nimrod was overthrown.

Now, interestingly enough, some of the statements here in Jeremiah 50 are paraphrased back in Revelation 18 when it describes Babylon the Great being overthrown by the Medes and the Persians. There is the allusion that modern Babylon (Babylon the Great and coming down to modern Rome) will be overthrown by an attack by the modern descendants of the Medes and the Persians. This will ultimately be fulfilled with a Russian counterattack (a pendulum swing) that is going to occur. There is going to be a Russian falling out with the Beast power and destruction.

When you read Revelation 18, you read of something in terms of destruction that went beyond the implication of anything available in the time that John wrote it because it was really a nuclear destruction. It describes the ships and the sea standing afar off for fear of her torment. They saw the smoke of her burning coming up and they stayed afar off for fear of her torment (Revelation 18:9-10). A very apt description of what you would see in a nuclear attack. What do you see? You see a mushroom-shaped cloud and you stay far off for fear of her torment, the fallout that comes as a result—a very apt description.

Jeremiah 50 describes what is going to occur to Babylon.

Verse 15, “...her foundations have fallen, her walls are thrown down; for it is the vengeance of the Lord. Take vengeance on her. As she has done, so do to her.”

Verse 23, “...How Babylon has become a desolation among the nations....”

Verse 31, “...For your day has come, the time that I will punish you.”

Verse 38, “...For it is the land of carved images, and they are insane with their idols.”

How is God going to deal with Babylon?

Verses 9-15 show that Babylon will be utterly destroyed and will no more be inhabited.

Verse 23, “...becomes a desolation....”

Verses 35-39 show that.

God is going to use the Medes and the Persians to inflict this (vv. 31-42).

Verse 41, “...a people shall come from the north, and a great nation and many kings shall be raised from the ends of the earth.”

Verse 42, “...they are cruel....”

Jeremiah 51:11, “...The Lord has raised up the spirit of the kings of the Medes. For His plan is against Babylon to destroy it....” It describes the destruction.

Verses 27, “Set up a banner in the land, blow the trumpet among the nations! Prepare the nations against her, call the kingdoms together against her: Ararat, Minni, and Ashkenaz....” This is describing certain geographical areas between the Black and the Caspian Seas, Soviet Central Asia, some of that area where there is a lot of trouble and strife going on right now—the area of Soviet Armenia. “... the area of Ararat, Minni and Ashchenaz....”

It describes these people being allied with the king of the Medes who is going to come and make Babylon a desolation (vv. 28-29). The kings of the Medes would trace back to modern Ukrainians; some of the modern peoples of the Soviet Union and European Russia go back to the ancient Medes. They all go back to the ancient Medes. The Medes did it anciently and they are going to do it again.

I think what we are clearly seeing is a transition that is taking place in Europe. There is a vacuum being created by the falling apart of a strong, unified, cohesive, dominant Soviet Union. We are seeing a fracturing taking place. I think that it is very likely that portions of the Soviet Union will come into the orbit of the Beast power, at least for a period of time. It's not clear to what extent some portions of it will be formally part of the Beast power and to what extent some will simply be allied with it. But the Beast could never rise or have risen had the Soviet Union stayed the dominant power that it was.

What we are seeing is a fracturing. We are seeing disillusionment with Communism. What's going to occur yet future is disillusionment with the resurging Catholic Europe that is going to take place. We are going to see a pendulum swing, a reaction that is going to take place at least in some of the nations that were constituents of the Soviet Union. Whether they come back together again in exactly the same configuration, we don't know. But there will be an alliance of many of those nations that are going to turn on that end-time Beast power and are going to attack it. The modern descendants of the Medes are going to literally sack modern Babylon (Rome) and leave it absolutely totally desolate, as Revelation 18 describes in detail.

Clearly, Revelation 18 is describing our time today because the ancient city of Babylon that Jeremiah is discussing here was destroyed. John was not talking about the ancient Babylon. He was talking about a modern end-time event.

Jeremiah describes the Beast power in Revelation 17:2, “with whom the kings of the earth committed fornication, and the inhabitants of the earth were made drunk with the wine of her fornication.”

It's a paraphrase of Jeremiah 51:7, “Babylon was a golden cup in the Lord's hand, that made all the earth drunk. The nations drank her wine; therefore the nations are deranged.”

Revelation 18:2-4, “And he cried mightily with a loud voice, saying, ‘Babylon the great is fallen, is fallen, and has become a habitation of demons, a prison for every foul spirit, and a cage for every unclean and hated bird! For all the nations have drunk of the wine of the wrath of her fornication, the kings of the earth have committed fornication with her, and the merchants of the earth have become rich through the abundance of her luxury.’ And I heard another voice from heaven saying, ‘Come out of her, my people, lest you share in her sins, and lest you receive of her plagues.’”

That great city, Babylon the Great, is the name that is written in Revelation 17:5, “And on her forehead a name was written: MYSTERY BABYLON THE GREAT, THE MOTHER OF HARLOTS AND OF THE ABOMINATIONS OF THE EARTH.”

Revelation 17:2, “with whom the kings of the earth committed fornication, and the inhabitants of the earth were made drunk with the wine of her fornication.”

Now compare that with Jeremiah 51:7-9, “Babylon was a golden cup in the Lord's hand, that made all the earth drunk. The nations drank her wine; therefore the nations are deranged. Babylon has suddenly fallen and been destroyed. Wail for her! Take balm for her pain; perhaps she may be healed. We would have healed Babylon, but she is not healed. Forsake her, and let us go everyone to his own country; for her judgment reaches to heaven and is lifted up to the skies.” What John wrote in Revelation 17 is a paraphrase of Jeremiah 51:7.

Let's go on a little further.

Revelation 18:2-4, “And he cried mightily with a loud voice, saying, ‘Babylon the great is fallen, is fallen, and has become a habitation of demons, a prison for every foul spirit, and a cage for every unclean and hated bird! For all the nations have drunk of the wine of the wrath of her fornication, the kings of the earth have committed fornication with her, and the merchants of the earth have become rich through the abundance of her luxury.’ And I heard another voice from heaven saying, ‘Come out of her, my people, lest you share in her sins, and lest you receive of her plagues.’”

Verse 10, “standing at a distance for fear of her torment, saying, ‘Alas, alas, that great city Babylon, that mighty city! For in one hour your judgment has come.’” John paraphrased some of the statements that Jeremiah made in Jeremiah 51:6-8.

Jeremiah 51:11, “Make the arrows bright! Gather the shields! The Lord has raised up the spirit of the kings of the Medes. For His plan is against Babylon to destroy it, because it is the vengeance of the Lord, the vengeance for His temple.”

It was to be the king of the Medes who was to come and to destroy Babylon. The quotation in Revelation shows that the main application is to the end time and the end-time Babylon because Revelation 18 clearly has the context of the end time. But there is a reference and an allusion in Revelation 18 back to Jeremiah 50 and 51.

In fact, we would also note in Isaiah 21:9, “And look, here comes a chariot of men with a pair of horsemen! And he answered and said, ‘Babylon is fallen, is fallen! And all the carved images of her gods He has broken to the ground.’” “Babylon is fallen, is fallen.”

Revelation 18:2, “And he cried mightily with a loud voice, saying, ‘Babylon the great is fallen, is fallen, and has become a habitation of demons, a prison for every foul spirit, and a cage for every unclean and hated bird!’”

Notice any similarities? You think John ever read the book of Isaiah or Jeremiah? You find that one prophet picks up and goes into greater detail where the other one left off.

Isaiah and Jeremiah looked forward to the literal destruction of the literal city of Babylon, but what they said went beyond their time and day and had implications for the future. John, in the book of Revelation, saw an event on out beyond. He saw events of modern Babylon, the daughter of Babylon, as it is sometimes called in prophecy (Isaiah 47:1; Jeremiah 50:42; Jeremiah 51:33)—Modern Babylon, Babylon the Great.

John picks up and quotes or paraphrases a quotation from Isaiah and Jeremiah and gives more details. So you have to go back to Isaiah and Jeremiah to understand part of it. When does this destruction come? When does this fire come on Babylon? Her plagues as we are told in Revelation 18:8 are going to come in one day. Death, mourning and famine mean she is going to be utterly burned with fire (v. 18). It describes this fiery destruction of Babylon.

Verses 9-10, it is going to have smoke that ascends so high that ships way out at sea see it from a distance and stay far off for fear of her torment.

In reading it today, we can see it in the context of modern technology; we realize that’s what happens if you drop a nuclear bomb on a place. The ships that are at a far distance see that mushroom-shaped cloud on the horizon and they keep their distance. Who is going to do that? Who is going to drop it? When we fit in the book of Isaiah, we see that the allusion is clearly the Medes or the end-time descendants of the Medes.

Another indication in Jeremiah 50:18-20, “Therefore thus says the Lord of hosts, the God of Israel: ‘Behold, I will punish the king of Babylon and his land, as I have punished the king of Assyria. But I will bring back Israel to his habitation, and he shall feed on Carmel and Bashan; his soul shall be satisfied on Mount Ephraim and Gilead. In those days and in that time,’ says the Lord, ‘The iniquity of Israel shall be sought, but there shall be none; and the sins of Judah, but they shall not be found; for I will pardon those whom I preserve.’”

This is the end time. This is future. This is the time when Israel and Judah are going to be pardoned, the time when they are both going to be brought back. Israel is going to come back to their habitation. It ranks the destruction of Babylon with the redemption of Israel.

In v. 20, it mentions both Israel and Judah. It will be a time when they are going to be pardoned and their sins are going to be forgiven. Israel and Judah are going to be re-gathered. Clearly, this shows Babylon’s punishment in the light of God’s deliverance of Israel at Christ’s second coming.

We see that while there was a literal fulfillment, it also looked beyond their day to our day and beyond. It is important for us to realize these things are sure. They are going to happen, and God provides word of it here through His prophets.

Jeremiah 52 concludes the book of Jeremiah. This is just kind of an historical inset. It shows the total destruction that the Babylonians wreaked upon Judah, Jerusalem and the temple.

Jeremiah 52:10-11, “Then the king of Babylon killed the sons of Zedekiah before his eyes. And he killed all the princes of Judah in Riblah. He also put out the eyes of Zedekiah; and the king of Babylon bound him in bronze fetters, took him to Babylon, and put him in prison till the day of his death.” They killed the sons of King Zedekiah, slew the princes, blinded Zedekiah and took him as a slave to Babylon.

Verses 12-13, “Now in the fifth month, on the tenth day of the month (which was the nineteenth year of King Nebuchadnezzar king of Babylon), Nebuchadnezzar, the captain of the guard, who served the king of Babylon, came to Jerusalem. He burned the house of the Lord and the king’s house, all the houses of Jerusalem....”

They burned the city, destroyed the temple and the palace and, v. 14, they broke down the walls.

Verse 15, “Then Nebuzaradan the captain of the guard carried away captive....”

They totally destroyed that area. We get a little bit of insight into the destruction that the Babylonians wreaked upon ancient Jerusalem. Interestingly enough, the Romans, the successors of ancient Babylon, did the same thing to Jerusalem and Judah in 70 A.D. And, ironically, they did it on the same day. They did it on the anniversary of the destruction—the tenth day of the fifth month, the ninth and tenth of Ab. Ab is the fifth month of the Hebrew calendar, which corresponds to our July/August (latter part of July, first part of August). The Jews, in commemoration of the Babylonian destruction, made the ninth day of Ab a day of national fasting and mourning—kind of like the Fourth of July in reverse. It was a day of mourning for the destruction of their nation, loss of independence and the destruction of the temple. They read the book of Lamentations and fasted on that day.

When the Romans destroyed Jerusalem in 70 A.D., they did it on the same day. The Orthodox Jews to this day continue to observe it as a day of mourning. It now commemorates the destruction of both temples.

Next time, we will get into the book of Ezekiel. We are now two-thirds through. We have just the book of Ezekiel left. There is an awful lot that is packed into these Major Prophets and these things that God has inspired to be recorded. Ultimately, the Bible has been preserved for us. It has been preserved for our admonition that we might study it and learn from it. Some things may have direct reference in terms of prophecy. Other things we may learn simply by example and illustration—seeing examples of what has happened to God’s people and God’s servants in the past and realizing that God’s people today, undoubtedly, will face parallel things between now and the end of the age. There will be many things that we will face and go through.

Major Prophets Series—Ezekiel 1—16

We are getting into the book of Ezekiel this evening, and I think it's appropriate to start out with an illustration. The term "watchman" is a term that we don't frequently use anymore. Years ago there was what was termed a "night watchman." Everybody else was in bed sleeping; this one person was supposed to see if anything happened—fire breaks out or some vandalism occurs.

Going back further than that, at the time Ezekiel was written, generally towns were almost like a little fort. There was a wall around these towns. The fields that the people farmed were outside the wall. When there was danger, people came into the town inside the wall. The gates were closed and they were in a fortified situation where they were protected.

There was an important responsibility in these areas, and this was the job of the watchman. Normally, on any city wall, there was a high tower at a strategic point along the wall and in that tower was an individual whose job was to watch. In the type of terrain that you have in many areas in the Middle East, you could look out quite a distance and you could observe something out of the ordinary.

Particularly, you would see a dust cloud. A lone horseman or one individual walking wouldn't make much dust (a horse would make a little more than an individual walking), but a whole gang of horses and chariots would really kick up a lot of dust. You could see that quite a way on the horizon. It took them time to get there. The very fastest traveling was on horseback or in a chariot pulled by a horse, so you had a little time.

The watchman would observe, and if it appeared that danger was approaching, his responsibility was to sound a blast of alarm. They sounded a blast. Generally, the Shofar (a ram's horn) was customarily used because it made a high shrill sound that could be heard for a long distance. It wasn't long ago that bells were often used to signal the time—a dinner bell, etc. This ram's horn carried a sound more like what we would think of as a brass trumpet today. It was a very important job because the survival of the community could depend on the watchman doing his job. In many cases, there would be marauding bands of robbers out to get what they could.

As we go through the book of Ezekiel, we find that he was told that he was to be a watchman for the house of Israel. He was the one responsible for standing on the pinnacle observing, taking note of what was happening and sounding the blast of alarm warning the nation of impending danger. But there was one problem with that.

As we go through it, we find that the book of Ezekiel was written about 596 B.C. There were three Babylonian invasions and all three were led by King Nebuchadnezzar. The first one took place in 604 B.C. Right after he became king, he launched the first Babylonian invasion there in the Middle East. He came all the way down through Judea and down toward Egypt. At that time he did not destroy those nations or deport the population. He took a few back, but what he basically did was ensure that a king friendly to him was on the throne and that they would start paying him tribute. He was satisfied with that.

Things "rocked along" for about eight years. Because things weren't working the way he had anticipated, he came back in 596 B.C. and changed kings (II Chronicles 36). Nebuchadnezzar took the king (Jehoiachin or Coniah) as a prisoner of war and hauled him back to Babylon. He also took a number of leading citizens and increased the taxes.

Another nine years later, about 587 B.C., the Jews again rebelled against him; this time he came in ready to do serious damage. He burned the temple, burned Jerusalem, destroyed the area and deported the population.

There were three invasions that took place over a period of time. Ezekiel is writing in the context of the second invasion, about 596 B.C. The point that I would like to make and as we are going to notice in going through the book of Ezekiel is that Ezekiel addresses the house of Israel. He says that he was given a message as a watchman to the house of Israel. Do you see what the problem is with that? The house of Israel went into captivity—not to the Babylonians but to the Assyrians about 721 B.C.—over one hundred twenty-five years before Ezekiel wrote. The northern ten tribes, the house of Israel, had long since been in captivity.

One hundred twenty-five years is a long time. One hundred twenty-five years ago takes us back to 1865 A.D., the year that saw the end of the War Between the States. That's been a long time ago. Anybody remember that? No, there is nobody alive that remembers that. One hundred twenty-five years is a long time. When you start talking about the War Between the States, it seems like ancient history to many people; particularly to young people, it's so long ago.

That's how long had transpired between the time Ezekiel was writing his message and the time earlier when the house of Israel had gone into captivity. So there was a problem. Ezekiel was writing a warning about impending captivity, but the people he's warning have been in captivity for one hundred twenty-five years. If that's who he was really warning, then you have to say he was a little bit late. And, in this case, I don't know if "better late than never" would have applied. If you are already in captivity, it's a little bit late for somebody to warn you that if you don't "straighten out," boy, are you going to be in trouble. One problem was the time element.

We will see that there is a distinction between the house of Israel and the house of Judah. That distinction is made plain in the book of Ezekiel. Solomon died two hundred years before Northern Israel went into captivity. When King Solomon died, what happened? His son came to the throne. But that didn't last until the "water got hot" because the first thing the son was going to do was keep taxes high. Things haven't changed; "read my lips, no new taxes."

They were fighting about it centuries ago in ancient Israel. Solomon had taxes high. Jeroboam, the son of Nebat, came along promising a new deal. Elect him king and he would lower taxes. So he swept into office. The northern ten tribes said, 'You are going to be our king. That's what we like; we don't like high taxes.' Rehoboam kept the southern tribe, the area around Jerusalem.

At that point, you had what was called the kingdom of Israel or the house of Israel in the north and the kingdom of Judah or the house of Judah in the south (I Kings 12). Two hundred years came down since that time. The Assyrians invade and take the house of Israel into captivity and settle them in an area between the Black and the Caspian Sea, in the area of the River Gozan and the city of the Medes (II Kings 17:5-6). Israel is in that particular vicinity, an area that was quite a bit to the north of Babylon.

At a little later time, the Assyrians began to pass from the scene; after they did, the Babylonians came onto the scene. They rise to prominence, invade Judah and take the Jews into captivity. Where do they settle them? They settle them down around Babylon. Here is the northern house of Israel living up in an area that is not even part of the Babylonian Empire. They are in an area that is independently ruled by the Medes, up in the area between the Black and the Caspian Sea.

And here is Ezekiel coming along as a watchman for the house of Israel and warning the house of Israel. First, he is late because they were taken into captivity one hundred twenty-five years ago; second, how is he going to get there? He is a slave in Babylon. He was taken prisoner of war to Babylon.

Was he going to come up to the soldiers and say, 'I think I need to leave; I have this important message and it's for these people who live a long way away. So, I'll see you later. God told me to leave.' Would they say, 'We'll open up the gates of Babylon and let you right out'? That "wouldn't fly" now and "wouldn't fly" then. Ezekiel was stuck there. He didn't have any way of getting out. How is he going to do it?

The point of the fact is that Ezekiel's message was not for his day. It is warning of captivity for Northern Israel, after Northern Israel was already captive. So it can only apply to a time yet future when Northern Israel would again be established as a nation. It is a prophecy as to what was going to happen.

Ezekiel differentiates between the house of Israel and Judah. The split had occurred three hundred twenty-five years prior to the time of Ezekiel's writings. Northern Israel had its capital at Samaria. They had already gone into captivity and were settled in the city of the Medes, the northern-most part of the Tigris-Euphrates Valley, the area slightly south and between the Black and Caspian Sea. The House of Judah was taken captive between 604 B.C. and 587 B.C. by the Babylonians under Nebuchadnezzar. They were transported to the area of Babylon and settled in the southern Tigris-Euphrates Valley. The area where Israel had been settled over one hundred twenty years earlier was not ruled by Babylon. Ezekiel could not possibly have delivered his message to the people intended in his day. His message was warning of future captivity and destruction. This would have been meaningless to a people already in captivity.

The real impact of the message of the watchman for Israel is our time today. Mr. Herbert Armstrong began to understand that back during World War II and he began recognizing the responsibility of proclaiming Ezekiel's message. If it had meaning and impact for our peoples at that time—during World War II and the time right after—how much more does it have meaning for our people in the years immediately ahead. We live at a very crucial and critical time in the history of mankind, and I think we all realize that. Somebody would have to be blind, indeed, to look at the world around and say they don't see anything that relates to Bible prophesy going on—those things must be for a hundred years from now. Dream on! You can turn on the evening news, pick up a news magazine or newspaper and read things that a few years ago, the only place you ever saw it was in the Church magazines and telecast. Those of you who have been around for a few years know that. You remember that.

The first 16 chapters of the book of Ezekiel, which we are going to focus on this evening, focus on the commission of the watchman. There are specific warnings of calamity to Israel. There is a cataloging of Israel's sins. There are even a couple of inset chapters that give us a little insight into God's throne.

We will pick up the story in Ezekiel 1. God gets Ezekiel's attention. Ezekiel was here "minding his own business," so to speak.

Verse 1, he was among the captives by the River Chebar and, all of a sudden, he saw a vision of God. Ezekiel sees a vision that opens up. It was an incredible thing. Have you ever thought about how God goes places? Sometimes people have the idea that God just sits there.

When we were in Washington with the youth group, one of the places we went was the Lincoln Memorial. It's a very impressive place. There's this giant carved white marble chair, much larger than life. In this large throne-like white marble chair sits Abraham Lincoln, also carved out of white marble. This is sitting up on a high platform at the back of the memorial. It really dominates the inside. It is very impressive. I couldn't help but think as I saw that immovable, impassive white marble visage much larger than life, sitting there on that great throne-like chair, that's the way a lot of people conceive God.

Some people conceive God as just sitting there not changing expression, not moving and never getting up out of His throne. They think He just sits on His throne. It's like He is glued to His chair. God has a throne in heaven and He sits on that throne. But God doesn't just sit there immovable twenty-four hours a day, seven days a week, throughout all eternity, never getting up out of His throne. The fact that the scripture says He sits on the throne doesn't mean that He never does anything else.

I think it's kind of interesting in Ezekiel 1 because here's a picture of God—the One who actually dealt with Israel, the One who we know as Jesus Christ—actually traveling through the universe in this conveyance, a rather impressive, striking sort of thing. When Ezekiel saw it, it appeared to be like this great circle of crystal. There was fire and flames shooting out. There were great brilliant lightening flashes. There were these unusual creatures under it. It describes wheels within a wheel—which is something like a gyroscope—and it can travel in any given direction. This wheel within a wheel enables it to turn in any way.

These creatures that were under it would strike us as very strange looking; yet they were there. They had four faces; therefore, whichever direction they went was straightforward. Think of the advantages if you had four faces. Any direction you went was straightforward. That's the way these creatures were. When Ezekiel looked up, he thought there was a whirlwind. It looked like a tornado or something. As it came closer, he saw it was like fire unfolding itself. As it came closer, he saw this great brilliant device that had come there, very, very quickly. He describes it moving like lightening.

Ezekiel 1:14, "And the living creatures ran back and forth, in appearance like a flash of lightning." They had slowed down to the speed of light, which was slow by comparison to the speed they usually moved because if you just moved at the speed of light, you would spend a long time going across the universe.

Our closest star, Alpha Centauri, is somewhere around a couple of light years away. That means if you are traveling at the speed of light (186,000 miles per second), it would still take you two years to get there. That's a long way. There's nothing man knows that can travel at the speed of light—except light.

Here it describes these creatures that are attached to the transportation of the throne. When they ran and returned, it was like a flash of lightening. It was just instantly there. And that was in slow-motion. Because when they really wanted to go fast, they went beyond that to where they could transverse the universe virtually at the speed of thought. Some of the science fiction talks about another dimension. Well, there is another dimension; it is the spirit dimension. That is the dimension of eternity. That is the dimension that God inhabits. There are some incredible things. We are just given a little bit of it.

I think it is important for our young people to realize that God's Kingdom is not going to be dull. Sometimes the concept of being in God's Kingdom is, 'Life sure is going to be dull because what does God do? He just sits on this throne.' Well, God does a lot of things, and I'll tell you one thing that God doesn't do. God doesn't look down on human beings and say, 'I wish I were a person; they have all the fun. They get to do all this exciting stuff and all I get to do is sit up here on My throne.' God never looked down envious of us and wished He could come down and have fun.

It's important to realize that there is nothing that we give up for being part of God's Family. It's like you better have all your excitement and fun now because the end is coming. You'd better pack it all in because once the kingdom gets here, that's the end of anything exciting. Well, if you like to ride fast, hold on to your hat because you have never ridden anything like this. You think it is a thrill? Well, it is!

I remember riding on horseback rapidly or coming down a hill on a bicycle. I remember the thrill of the first time you experience that sense of speed. Well, you have never moved with speed like God can move with speed. When we are a part of His Family, we will have access to all kinds of things.

God gave Ezekiel a little bit of a vision of the greatness and the power and splendor of God; he recorded it for us. I think it is important for us to realize that because sometimes we can have this kind of concept that comes out of religious art, which comes out of certain ideas that have been built up, which really doesn't come out of the Bible. There's no Being in the Universe who lives a more exciting, more scintillating and more enjoyable, wonderful existence than God does. And He offers to share it with us.

It's not a matter of having to give up excitement, fun and thrills. Who designed you to where you could enjoy things? Who made it possible for you to even experience emotions? Anything you can experience right now is only enough to whet your appetite, and it is only a tiny shadow of what God can experience on the spirit realm. I think that's important for us to realize and for our young people to realize.

Ezekiel sees this vision, this throne.

In Ezekiel 2, Ezekiel is given a commission. What is he told?

Ezekiel 2:1-5, "And He said to me, 'Son of man, stand on your feet, and I will speak to you.' Then the Spirit entered me when He spoke to me, and set me on my feet; and I heard Him who spoke to me. And He said to me: 'Son of man, I am sending you to the children of Israel, to a rebellious nation that has rebelled against Me; they and their fathers have transgressed against Me to this very day. For they are impudent and stubborn children. I am sending you to them, and you shall say to them, "Thus says the Lord God." As for them, whether they hear or whether they refuse—for they are a rebellious house—yet they will know that a prophet has been among them.'"

Based on v. 5, I would conclude that there remains yet a very powerful conclusion to this work to be accomplished. When all these things come crashing down, they are going to know that there has been a prophet among them. I don't think that would entirely be the case were everything to end up now.

There are, in certain sections in the United States, many who know some things about the Church and a little bit of what we've taught. But in terms of having really shaken this nation—particularly Britain, as well as Australia, New Zealand, Canada (the portions of modern-day Joseph), as well as the other areas of the house of Israel in northwestern Europe—I don't think we have really shaken them in the way that God has yet for us to do. So there remains a work to be done. At the right time, God will open the doors and will enable us to go through those doors if we are close to Him, walking with Him and if we're not "asleep at the switch." That may be in some cases.

Ezekiel's commission is described.

Ezekiel 3:4, "And He said to me: 'Son of man, go to the house of Israel and speak with My words to them.'"

Verse 17, "'Son of man, I have made you a watchman for the house of Israel; therefore hear a word from My mouth, and give them warning from Me.'" He was told to go and do this.

Verses 18-19, "'When I say to the wicked, "You shall surely die," and you give him no warning, nor speak to warn the wicked from his wicked way, to save his life, that same wicked man shall die in his iniquity; but his blood I will require at your hand. Yet if you warn the wicked and he does not turn from his wickedness, nor from his wicked way, he shall die in his iniquity but you have delivered your soul.'"

Basically, you give the warning. You do your part, but you don't control the response. But if you don't warn them, their blood will be required at your hands.

Verse 20, “Again, when a righteous man turns from his righteousness and commits iniquity, and I lay a stumbling block before him, he shall die; because you did not give him warning, he shall die in his sin, and his righteousness which he has done shall not be remembered; but his blood I will require at your hand.”

The job of the watchman carries with it a great responsibility. God’s servants will be held accountable for the consequences if they don’t convey God’s message. Satan would like nothing better than to have us get caught up in our own problems, to get caught up in petty squabbling and various things that divert our attention and our resources from the work that God has set before us to do. Satan would like to divert our attention and to subvert our efforts. I think we have to keep that in mind. It’s a matter of keeping priorities in mind.

Notice how clearly Ezekiel distinguishes Judah and Israel as two separate people. He told him he was to portray a siege.

Ezekiel 4:1-5, “You also, son of man, take a clay tablet and lay it before you, and portray on it a city, Jerusalem. Lay siege against it, build siege wall against it, and heap up a mound against it; set camp against it also, and place battering rams against it all around. Moreover take for yourself an iron plate and set it as an iron wall between you and the city. Set your face against it, and it shall be besiege, and you shall lay siege against it. This will be a sign to the house of Israel. Lie also on your left side, and lay the iniquity of the house of Israel upon it. According to the number of the days that you lie on it, you shall bear their iniquity. For I have laid on you the number of years of their iniquity, according to the number of the days, three hundred and ninety days; so you shall bear the iniquity of the house of Israel.” This had to do with portraying the punishment that was going to come upon the house of Israel.

Verse 6, “And when you have completed them, lie again on your right side; then you shall bear the iniquity of the house of Judah forty days. I have laid on you a day for each year.” He was to bear the iniquity of Israel three hundred ninety days, and for the house of Judah he was to bear it forty days. This shows a very clear-cut distinction between the house of Israel and the house of Judah.

By the way, the three hundred ninety years, if we figure from the fall of the house of Israel (the Assyrians captivity and invasion) in 721 B.C. and come down three hundred ninety years (v. 6, a day for a year), it would bring us to 331 B.C. Now, 331 B.C. was a significant date because that is the year when Alexander the Great conquered the Media-Persian Empire.

Remember, the house of Israel had been settled by the Assyrians up in the city of the Medes. We are told that in II Kings 17:6. The empire of the Medes had been a subject people to the Assyrians. In 612 B.C., they gained their independence from Assyria. They conquered Nineveh. Nineveh was actually overthrown by a confederation of peoples and collapsed. The Medes gained their independence.

The Babylonians rose as a great empire. The Medes remained a little independent entity up in the north. Things “kicked along” for almost a hundred years until the Medes and the Persians united, overthrew the Babylonians, and ruled as an empire. The Northern Israelites had remained captives. They had remained in a servant status for three hundred ninety years—from the time the Assyrians brought them up and settled them in the city of the Medes, all through the time of the Median Empire until Alexander the Great conquered the Medes in 331 B.C. When Alexander the Great overthrew the Medes, then the servants of the Medes (the Israelites) were freed and were free to migrate. That marks the beginning of the great Celtic invasion of Europe—coming across the Black Sea and up into Europe. This is a rather remarkable thing, and the dates exactly correlate. It dates back to this time. This was the three hundred ninety years.

As we come down, notice we are given some information about what is going to happen. Ezekiel was told to take some hair and divide it in three portions.

Ezekiel 5:1-3, “And you, son of man, take a sharp sword, take it as a barber’s razor, and pass it over your head and your beard; then take balances to weigh and divide the hair. You shall burn with fire one-third in the midst of the city, when the days of the siege are finished; then you shall take one-third and strike around it with the sword, and one-third you shall scatter in the wind: I will draw out a sword after them. You shall also take a small number of them and bind them in the edge of your garment.”

Then he was told that this is what is going to happen to the house of Israel.

Verse 12, ““One-third of you shall die of the pestilence, and be consumed with famine in your midst; and one-third shall fall by the sword all around you; and I will scatter another third to all the winds, and I will draw out a sword after them.””” That is what Ezekiel warned was going to happen to the house of Israel when they were taken captive.

That’s a warning that applies to our time yet future. We understand the great invasion, the things that are going to take place, the fact that there is literally going to be famine and disease epidemics that are going to sweep this nation. The gods that our modern nations trust in to deliver them from such things are going to fail. They are going to find that the gods in which they have placed their trust as a nation are going to fail in their time of crisis. The American people trust in a multitude of gods. They trust in the gods of war, military might, economic power, the gods of technology, and of medical science—of all the various modern-day gods at whose altars people virtually worship in our modern nation. They stand in awe and think that surely, whatever problem, they have some humanly-devised solution that can solve it or there is some humanly-devised protection that can shield them. Well, we are going to find that is not the case.

The only ones who are going to be spared—a handful—are the remnant that is bound up in the skirt. They’re in a place of protection. This shows the calamity and events that are going to occur and the magnitude on which it will occur.

As we come down, we see what is going to happen to our cities.

Ezekiel 6:6, ““In all your dwelling places the cities shall be laid waste....”” There is going to be bombing and destruction. There are going to be tremendous cataclysmic events that are going to occur. It is something just beyond the mind of most modern Americans to even imagine or conceive of. We think those are the things that happen to other people in other nations. We see the stories of what happened to other people in other countries, and it’s difficult for the average American to conceive that such things could happen here because they never have. But why haven’t they? –Because as the book of Lamentations brings out, God has set a hedge about our people (Lamentations 2:6; KJV, margin). But He’s going to remove the hedge. Is it going to be an all-out battle? Are we really going to be able to mobilize and put on a great show?

There’s an interesting verse in Ezekiel 7:14, “““They have blown the trumpet and made everyone ready, but no one goes to battle for My wrath is on all their multitude.””” He says they have blown the trumpet to make ready, but nobody goes out to battle. The indication is we’re not even going to be in shape to retaliate. Why? I don’t know. It doesn’t say exactly. Maybe the people we have manning the nuclear arsenal are all “stoned” out of their minds when the word comes. That’s not too farfetched. It doesn’t say exactly. The indication is a very demoralized circumstance will have occurred and tremendous internal strife and tumult.

Amos 3:9 talks about the tumults in the midst of her, referring to our people. In other words, there will be civil strife and unrest.

When you let serious economic crisis come, then the consequence of that is that people in the cities get hit the hardest of all because they are the least able to independently survive. Generally, the people who are at the bottom of the economic rung are going to be the hardest hit. That’s always the way it is. You’re going to have a lot of really severe problems. There’s going to be civil strife and great unrest because when people start getting laid off, when there begins to be a great deal of economic calamity in a nation that has known plenty, it’s hard for us to conceive there not being plenty.

There are some few of you here who remember the depression. As hard as it was on people then (people were better equipped to survive it then they are now), it’s going to have a lot more calamitous results when it happens again. People are accustomed to having it so easy.

Some think the solution is to stock up on gold, guns, food and to defend themselves. They will have their own place of protection. There are various survivalist groups that have some of these concepts. They, at least, have a little bit of insight into some of the problems that are going to occur, and they think that’s the solution.

Notice what God says about those who take that way out, those who decide that what they are going to do is stock up on gold, guns, hoard their food, maybe get them a cave somewhere and defend what they have.

Verse 15, “““...whoever is in the field will die by the sword; and whoever is in the city, famine and pestilence will devour him.””” So kind of take your choice here.

Verses 16-18, “““Those who survive will escape and be on the mountains like doves of the valleys, all of them mourning, each for his iniquity. Every hand will be feeble, and every knee will be as weak as water. They will also be girded with sackcloth; horror will cover them; shame will be on every face, baldness on all their heads.””” It talks about being weak. The indication would be of a nuclear destruction. It talks about their hair falling out. These are symptoms of nuclear fallout.

Verse 19, ““They shall throw their silver into the streets, and their gold will be like refuse; their silver and their gold will not be able to deliver them in the day of the wrath of the Lord...””

One thing about gold—it becomes very highly radioactive when exposed to radiation. One of the first things you would want to get rid of is your gold. It’s kind of an interesting thing. In the book of James, it talks about how the gold will burn them. It’s very descriptive if you read a little bit about nuclear fallout and radiation. It’s very descriptive of what happens with nuclear fallout and radiation.

James 5:3, “Your gold and your silver are corroded, and their corrosion will be a witness against you and will eat your flesh like fire. You have heaped up treasures in the last days.” It talks about the effects of becoming radioactive, and it will just eat your flesh like it was fire. It is so very, very descriptive.

Some of the things that are described here, you know, people must have read that for centuries and scratched their heads and wondered how in the world could something like that happen? What could that mean?

You read about Babylon the Great in Revelation 18:17, ““for in one hour so great a city comes to nothing.”” People must have read that for centuries and scratched their heads. People must have figured that must be just kind of a poetic expression because you can’t destroy an entire city in an hour. It’s impossible! It was up until 1945. Then a great city was destroyed in an hour. All of a sudden, we realize that Revelation 18 is not just a poetic exaggeration, not just poetic license; it was a very literal description of what happens when a nuclear bomb is dropped. You see the smoke of the torment—that famous mushroom-shaped cloud—ascending up miles out to sea.

Verses 9-10, everybody keeps his distance for fear of her torment; the torment of radiation sickness, a slow death. It is very, very descriptive.

We see some of what is said.

Ezekiel 7:19, ““They will throw their silver into the streets, and their gold will be like refuse; their silver and their gold will not be able to deliver them in the day of the wrath of the Lord; they will not satisfy their souls, nor fill their stomachs, because it became their stumbling block of iniquity.”” Human beings put their trust in these things to deliver them. In the day of the final calamity, they are going to find that it is not going to be of any avail. If that is what we trust in to survive the Day of the Lord, we are going to be disillusioned. We certainly should be wise stewards of our resources and should use wisdom in terms of riding out the ups and downs of our day-to-day economic fluctuations. Yes, but in terms of counting on something like this for deliverance and as a protector when the calamity comes, forget it!

Verse 23, ““Make a chain, for the land is filled with crimes of blood, and the city is full of violence.”” “Make a chain.” It is link joined to link; one thing is linked to another—cause and effect. This is so descriptive of our cities in this country today.

God says, as a result of it, there are going to be consequences that are going to come.

Verse 24, ““Therefore I will bring the worst of the Gentiles, and they will possess their houses; I will cause the pomp of the strong to cease, and their holy places shall be defiled.””

Ezekiel 8 gives an interesting description. God says, ‘I am going to show you some of the abominations of the house of Israel.’

Ezekiel 8:6, “Furthermore He said to me, ‘Son of man, do you see what they are doing, the great abominations that the house of Israel commits here, to make Me go far away from My sanctuary? Now turn again, you will see greater abominations.’” He said, ‘You see this? It looks bad, but you are going to see greater abominations than this.’

Verses 13-14, “And He said to me, ‘Turn again, and you will see greater abominations that they are doing.’ So He brought me to the door of the north gate of the Lord’s house; and to my dismay, women were sitting there weeping for Tammuz.”

Verses 15-16, “...‘Turn again, you will see greater abominations than these.’ So He brought me into the inner court of the Lord’s house; and there at the door of the temple of the Lord, between the porch and the altar, were about twenty-five men with their backs toward the temple of the Lord and their faces toward the east, and they were worshiping the sun toward the east.”

Now, when is the sun in the east? When it is rising, right? So what he saw was a sunrise service. The only time you would worship the sun toward the east is when it is rising. If you would like to do a little research on “weeping for Tammuz,” you will find that this is the origin of Lent. It was a period of penance in the spring (going back to the ancient Babylonians) that culminated in a sunrise service—and it still is!

If you dig hard enough, you will find somebody who will come up with the idea of Mardi Gras back there, too—to kind of “kick it off.” If you’re going to do penance for forty days, you want to make sure you have something to do penance for. No need doing penance for nothing. God looks at these things and He doesn’t like it.

People say today, ‘But we don’t do it for that reason. We are not weeping for Tammuz. We’re not actually worshiping the sun. We’re worshiping God. We just go out there and have this service at sunrise, but we’re not doing it for that reason.’ It’s the same thing people will tell you about putting up a Christmas tree; they’re not worshiping the sun god. They put up a tree because everybody else puts up a tree. It’s pretty and decorated with the lights—anything wrong with lights? Does God hate trees?

People use human reasoning and say, ‘I don’t see what difference it makes. We are not doing it to worship Tammuz or to worship the sun god. It’s just kind of a cute little custom and everybody is doing it. We don’t want to stick out like “sore thumbs” and we don’t want our kids to be deprived.’

Well, I would like mine to be deprived—deprived of the Great Tribulation, deprived of the wrath of the Day of the Lord. There are a lot of things I would like to be deprived of and I hope my family is deprived of. I think there are things you would like to be deprived of. People say they don’t see what difference it makes. That’s the whole point; they don’t see what difference it makes! It doesn’t make a difference to other people. Maybe they are doing it for that reason. No, generally the reason they are doing it is because everybody else does. Show me any place in the Bible that says that just because everybody else does it, it is a good reason and that’s what God wants His people to do.

I do find where God says in Deuteronomy 12:30-32, “‘Take heed to yourself that you are not ensnared to follow them, after they are destroyed from before you, and that you do not inquire after their gods, saying, “How did these nations serve their gods? I also will do likewise.” You shall not worship the Lord your God in that way, for every abomination to the Lord, which He hates, they have done to their gods, for they burn even their sons and daughters in the fire to their gods. Whatever I command you, be careful to observe it; you shall not add to it nor take away from it.’”

God says not to look around and see how all these pagans serve their gods and think that’s kind of a cute little custom. We should not do that.

John 4:23, God wants to be worshiped in spirit and in truth. What is truth?

John 17:17, “‘...Your word is truth.’” God wants to be worshiped in accordance as He reveals. He doesn’t want us adding to it or taking away from it and kind of adapting it. He doesn’t want us looking around and adapting all these cute customs.

‘We won’t call it by the old pagan name; we will just change the name.’ So the ancient Romans celebrating the Saturnalia started celebrating Christmas. They did the same thing at the same time, but they just called it by a different name. That makes it okay? Right?

You can read Deuteronomy 12 and Ezekiel 8 as well as I can. God directs how He wishes to be worshiped. We are responsible as individuals for what we do, and I think we have to understand that. You can do all kinds of things; maybe nobody else is going to know it and maybe nobody in the Church finds out. Big deal! We all ultimately give an account to God for what we do and what we know.

James 4:17, “‘Therefore, to him who knows to do good and does not do it, to him it is sin.’” We all have to keep that in mind. Ezekiel has these warnings here, and we are admonished to take heed.

Ezekiel 8:17, “‘Then He said to me, ‘Have you seen this, O son of man? Is it a trivial thing to the house of Judah to commit the abominations, which they commit here? For they have filled the land with violence; then they have returned to provoke Me to anger. Indeed they put the branch to their nose.’” The more literal translation is “‘they have put the branch to My nose.’”

There are several who are called “emendations of the Sopherim.” The Sopherims were the scribes. They made several little emendments to the text. They didn’t erase the text. They just made a little note up above it in terms of the way it was to be read. There were several places that they thought the language was kind of strong or offensive or they knew that what was described was almost blasphemous and they didn’t want to say it that way. So they emended it to kind of soften the sound of it. When it said, “‘they put the branch to My nose,’” they thought that was a very harsh statement and changed it around.

When you actually look up that phrase, it is a reference to a very ancient pagan symbolism, an ancient phallus symbol. The Hebrew “zmowrah” is the term for “branch.” It refers to the phallus symbol, the obelisk. Actually, it is the origin of the steeple. That’s why you find it on the top. It goes back to the ancient “zmowrah.” God views it as offensive. People don’t see what difference it makes. It is irrelevant whether it makes a difference to people. The question we all should ask ourselves is, ‘Does it make a difference to God?’ That’s really the issue—does God care one way or the other? That is Who we have to be primarily concerned about pleasing.

I remember many years ago, back in the early to mid-70s, back around 1973 or 1974, things had gotten to such a point that there was an individual, who was even in the ministry at that time (he has long since been out of the ministry and out of the Church), who absolutely shocked me. I was at a district ministerial meeting and I was absolutely shocked by what I heard. Several of us were standing around, and he mentioned very casually that he had put up Christmas decorations that year. My mouth must have dropped open. I couldn’t believe what I was hearing.

His excuse was he was not doing it really to celebrate Christmas. He just didn’t want to be offensive to all of his worldly neighbors. They all go in for this and put it up. He just didn’t want to stand out as being different. They may have been offended because he didn’t have decorations up. My question was, ‘Aren’t you concerned about being offensive to God? If I were you, I would be a whole lot more concerned about offending God than I would the guy next door.’ Well, no, evidently he wasn’t. I guess he figured God would understand.

God understands—that’s the whole point! God understands when we are not doing what we should do. God offers mercy and grace, but He offers it upon repentance. God offers to save us from our sins, not in our sins. God is very merciful and compassionate when we repent. God doesn’t have a casual “anything-goes” and “I-don’t-care-what-you-do” attitude. He doesn’t say, ‘Whosoever will, may come. Just do anything you want to do and it is fine with Me. No big deal.’ I go through the scriptures and I find God made an awfully big deal out of a lot of things.

Ezekiel 9:4, “and the Lord said to him, ‘Go through the midst of Jerusalem and put a mark on the foreheads of the men who sigh and cry over all the abominations that are done within it.’”

Verses 5-6, then He told His angels standing by, “To the others He said in my hearing, ‘Go after him through the city and kill; do not let your eye spare, nor have any pity. Utterly slay old and young men, maidens and little children and women; but do not come near anyone on whom is the mark; and begin at My sanctuary.’”

This is not the mark of the beast; rather, this is the sign of God. God sent Ezekiel and He said, ‘I want you to go through and set a mark upon the foreheads of the men that sigh and cry for all the abominations of Israel. Set a mark on those who are really bothered and grieved and moved by all the trash and the filth that they see around. But do not set a mark on those who are comfortable and complacent with it, who want to be part and parcel of it and dabble their toe in the cesspool. Set a mark on those who are bothered by it, take offense at it, are grieved by it, hate to see it and are yearning, “Thy Kingdome come.”’ God says, ‘I want you to note all of those because those are the ones I’m going to protect. When I do that, then it’s all going to break loose.’

You might read the parallel back in Revelation 7:2-3 and Revelation 14:1 about the sealing of the servants of our God in their foreheads. That is what is pictured here. After the sealing, then the plagues of the Day of the Lord come sweeping across. He says, ‘Start at My sanctuary, at My house; start with My people.’

It is important that we be among those who sigh and cry for the abominations of Israel. It’s important that the things that we see happening in society bother us—not in the sense that we should just sit around and be horribly depressed all the time. We should not have a casual, careless, indifferent attitude to what we see because God doesn’t have a careless, casual attitude to what He sees.

God sees the consequences. Little things lead into big things. It leads to grief, suffering and harm for people—human beings made in God’s image who are suffering unbelievably the consequence of sin. It is important that we be bothered by that in the right way.

We are told in Ephesians 1:13-14 that we are sealed. God’s Holy Spirit has sealed us unto the day of redemption. That is symbolic—there on our foreheads, the sealing of God’s servants.

In Ezekiel 10, we again find this portable throne that God utilizes. It’s very descriptive. We don’t have time to go into all of this, but it must have been quite a remarkable thing. Ezekiel had to describe it in the language of which he was familiar. How would you describe an airplane, an automobile, a train or something of that sort if you had never seen anything like that before? You would use the language that is known to you. You would try and describe it using terms and comparisons that you are familiar with.

That's like our forefathers when the car first came out. They called it the horseless carriage. Mr. Herbert Armstrong told about when he was a little boy that his father was standing at the window and said, 'Everybody come quick and see a horseless carriage.' This was quite an event. They had heard of them, but none of them had ever seen one. They came running to the window and looked out, and there was a wagon pulled by a couple of mules. His father had a big laugh and said, 'See, that's a horseless carriage.' It was not being pulled by horses but by mules. That was back in maybe 1896. People utilized phrases like "horseless carriages" because how do you describe them? There wasn't a name for it. Eventually, a name was invented.

Ezekiel saw this throne. He saw this conveyance. He couldn't use the language of modern technology to describe it. It would be beyond our ability to describe. To try to describe it, he used the language and the phrases that it looked most like to him.

Ezekiel 11 describes why God will give His Spirit to Israel.

Verse 17, he talks about bringing them back after the nation has been punished and the consequences—gathering the remnant and bringing them back. That is yet future after Christ returns.

Ezekiel 11:19-20, "Then I will give them one heart, and I will put a new spirit within them, and take the stony heart out of their flesh, and give them a heart of flesh, that they may walk in My statutes and keep My judgments and do them; and they shall be My people, and I will be their God." God says, 'I am going to change them.' He is going to give His spirit for the purpose of conversion, of changing us, of transforming us, and enabling us to walk in His statutes and His ordinances. A transformation by the Spirit of God makes us the people of God.

We see the way that Israel is characterized in Ezekiel 12.

Ezekiel 12:1-2, "Now the word of the Lord came to me, saying: 'Son of man, you dwell in the midst of a rebellious house, which has eyes to see but does not see, and ears to hear but does not hear, for they are a rebellious house.'"

In v. 6, He says, "...for I have made you a sign to the house of Israel."

Verse 9, "Son of man, has not the house of Israel, the rebellious house, said to you, 'What are you doing?'" It goes down and describes the nation as a rebellious nation.

As we continue, there is an interesting description.

Ezekiel 13:2, "Son of man, prophesy against the prophets of Israel who prophesy, and say to those who prophesy out of their own heart, 'Hear the word of the Lord!'"

Let's understand a little bit about this word "prophet." The Hebrew word for prophet, "nabiy," is a word that means "those who announce or who proclaim." The prophet of God is one who announces or proclaims God's message. In some cases, it might be a revelation of future events. We think of the word "prophet" as being one who foretells the future. But the word "prophet" has a much broader meaning than that. A prophet is simply one who announces a message, one who conveys, proclaims or announces. A prophet of God is one who proclaims or announces God's message.

A false prophet is anyone who proclaims or announces a false message. In some cases, the message was a foretelling of future events. But that's not the only thing that God can convey. Here we see false prophets describing the false prophets of society.

I think sometimes we have tended to very narrowly view this and to think of some of the preachers on the radio and television of some of the worldly churches. We have identified it with them and said that these are the false prophets. Well, yes they are, but they are not the only false prophets. And, frankly, they are not the false prophets that are primarily listened to in this nation. The various ones on radio and television are not really the ones that most people in this country pay a whole lot of attention to. Only a tiny fraction of the people in this country really give a lot of credence and really pay a lot of attention to what the radio and television "false prophets" say.

The term "prophet" in the Hebrew—those who announce or proclaim a message—would certainly in our modern society refer in a general sense to the whole realm of the media. It is something that really did not exist in that way in ancient Israel, but it exists as a very powerful force in our society today. They (the media) are the opinion molders. They are the ones who announce or proclaim a message that shapes the thinking and the opinions of people. This includes both the secular false prophets as well as the religious false prophets. It includes everything from the major television, radio, newspaper and news magazines—the whole realm of the opinion molders. It includes those who announce and proclaim, those that people look to for explanation and understanding of what is transpiring in the world around.

God says of them in v. 6 (KJV), “They have seen vanity and lying divination...” NJKV, “They have envisioned futility and false divination...”

Verse 10, “Because, indeed, because they have seduced My people, saying, “Peace!” when there is no peace—and one builds a boundary wall, and they plaster it with untempered mortar—” He says, “They’ve built up this edifice, and others have come along, whitewashed it and made it look good.”

But, v. 11, the whole thing won’t stand up because it is going to fall when a wind and storm comes. When the events that are going to transpire come, it is going to show what a shaky edifice has been built by those who claim to be “in the know,” those who are the “experts” and those who are the opinion molders and opinion shapers. It’s going to become very apparent when this occurs.

Verse 14, “So I will break down the wall you have plastered with untempered mortar, and bring it down to the ground, so that its foundation will be uncovered; it will fall, and you shall be consumed in the midst of it...” It is going to be apparent on what a faulty foundation the whole society has been built.

Frankly, the biggest things that are the foundation of our modern society are the concepts of science (I Timothy 6:20 KJV, “falsely so called”), evolution and all the things that are the spin-off of that. If there’s anything or any concept that underlies the thinking of modern “educated” people, it is the concept of evolution. The concept of evolution is the idea that there really isn’t a God who intervenes in human affairs. And if there is any kind of God at all, it is some kind of remote vague “first cause.” They claim there really isn’t any God at all and this “first cause” really doesn’t have any relevance to us. It certainly doesn’t tell us how to live our lives and certainly does not intervene in the world or have controlling influence in the affairs of the world around us. The foundation of this society is based on the fact that there isn’t a God who steps into history. They believe everything just continues along, just as it always has been.

Verse 17, it describes the daughters of My people. Some of the symbolism that’s used here is not entirely clear, but the concept is all of these various “do-gooder” causes and various movements that are out there.

Supposedly, all these various “do-gooder” causes go out and as it says in Jeremiah 6:14, it “heals the hurt of My people slightly.”

Ezekiel 13:19, “And will you profane Me among My people for handfuls of barley and for pieces of bread, killing people who should not die, and keeping people alive who should not live, by your lying to My people who listen to lies?”

In so many cases, the consequence of some of these “do-gooders” is that all the sympathy is dished out for the criminal and the people who are out causing all the problems—“...keeping people alive that should not live...” And as a consequence, those who are innocent and are going around minding their own business die a needless death. The professional “do-gooders” and sympathizers always seem to have their sympathy with the perpetrators of the problems and very little sympathy left over for the victims. They are out trying to do all these things. There are soup kitchens and all these things, and it’s not the solution to the problem. “...by your lying to My people who listen to lies.”

Verse 20 (KJV), it describes all their various good works and the pillars that they sew and the things that they do.

Verse 22, “Because with lies you have made the heart of the righteous sad, whom I have not made sad; and you have strengthened the hands of the wicked, so that he does not turn from his wicked way to save his life.” You’ve been there to bail him out, to help him out and keep him from suffering the consequences of his actions. Really, what you’ve done is kept him from coming to repentance because you’ve been there to try to soften the blow. What he needed was not somebody to soften the blow. You’ve wound up making the righteous sad because the result has been a society that is filled with violence and all sorts of things. It’s a sad commentary as we see it.

Ezekiel 14:4, “Therefore speak to them, and say to them, “Thus says the Lord God: ‘Everyone of the house of Israel who sets up his idols in his heart, and puts before him what causes him to stumble into iniquity...’”” He sets up the idols in his heart. That’s ultimately where idolatry is. It is what we set up in our hearts. It's what we look to, what we stand in awe of, what we're really deeply impressed with.

What does it mean to "worship"? Sometimes you need to look up synonyms because we think we know what it means to "worship." It talks about the world worshipping the beast. What does that mean? It means they are very deeply impressed with and they stand in awe of. That's what it means: to have that worshipful attitude, to just be most impressed with, to really stand in awe of.

In our society, if you'd ask most people, 'Do you worship idols?' They would say, 'No.' Take a poll in this country; go up to people on the street and ask, 'Do you worship idols?' You'd go through and say, 'Ezekiel must have been wrong; nobody worships idols. Everybody says they don't worship idols.'

We're familiar with the statues and things that we think of with the Catholic Church. If you were to go to them and ask if they worshipped those things, they'd say, 'No, of course not.' They don't worship idols. Nobody claims to worship idols. But God says somebody is worshipping idols. You can't read it and all the things God has to say about idolatry and not come to the conclusion that somebody, somewhere, is worshipping an idol. In fact, it kind of sounds like a bunch of people is worshipping idols. They set up idols in their heart.

Idols can be set up. They can be some literal figure that you see, bow down to and burn incense to. God very clearly says not to do that. But some people, who wouldn't dream of setting up this image and bowing down to it, have an idol in their heart. If we're not careful, that's the kind of idols we can set up. We'd be so careful not to bow down to some great big fat leering golden Buddha and burn incense to it. I don't think any of us would ever dream of doing such a thing. But we can set up an idol in our heart if we're not careful by really standing in awe of and being impressed with something other than God in a way that should be reserved for God.

God says, v. 13, "...I will cut off its supply of bread, and send famine on it..."

Verse 14, even though Noah and Daniel and Job were there, they wouldn't save anybody but themselves. Things are going to get so bad, and God says that nobody is going to be able to save anybody else. God says He's not going to make a deal like He did with Abraham (Genesis 18:32)—'if there are ten righteous men in the city, I will spare the whole city.' God singles out these three individuals as three of the most righteous men who ever lived: Noah, Daniel and Job. These individuals are certainly singled out as men of outstanding righteousness. God says if they were there, He would save them. But He wouldn't save the city even for their sake.

Verse 13, "...I will cut off its supply of bread, send famine on it, and cut off man and beast from it."

Verse 15, "If I cause wild beasts [KJV, "noisome beasts"] to pass through the land, and they empty it, and make it so desolate that no man may pass through because of the beasts." Animal plagues, noisome beasts that pass through the land, rabid animals—whatever it may be. You've heard some of these things about killer bees. So far nothing has really come of it. People can sit back and say, 'Well, you know something like that could never happen.' Well, God says it will. I don't know exactly how it's going to happen, but I believe it's going to happen.

Some of these things we've talked about, and Mr. Herbert Armstrong talked about them many, many years ago. We may have speculated about "time" in certain areas, as anticipating certain of these events happening. We may have "jumped the gun" on some of that in our eagerness. We may have introduced speculation about "time." God has reserved the times and the seasons to Himself (Acts 1:7). We tried to read God's mind, as we do sometimes. That's human nature. The disciples tried to do that, too. None of that diminishes from the accuracy of what is going to happen. We should never kid ourselves. We need to make a distinction between what's speculative and what's not.

There's nothing speculative about the fact that God is going to call noisome beasts to pass through the land to spoil it and make it desolate. That's what it says. That is not speculation. If I said, 'Well, He's going to do it in "x" amount of years,' now that would be speculation. The fact that He is going to do it is not speculation. That's a clear statement of fact.

Verse 17, "Or if I bring a sword on that land, and say, "Sword, go through the land," and I cut off man and beast from it."

Verse 19, "Or if I send a pestilence into that land..."

Verse 22, "Yet behold, there shall be left in it a remnant [just a handful], who will be brought out..." We see that there are going to be a lot of these things that are going to come about.

Ezekiel 16 is an analogy of Israel. Israel is pictured as a castoff infant and reared by God.

After her maturity, she marries God. Then in the aftermath of the marriage, Israel is pictured as entering into idolatry. God draws this analogy, which is brought out. He describes Israel in this poetic symbolism and, in a sense, shows the absolute horror of what Israel did in turning their back on God who rescued and nurtured them, who brought them up and married them, as it were in a symbolic sense.

There are many principles that we can deduce from this. There are many things that we can learn. We see the symbolism that God describes. He describes what Israel did. We understand the primary implications of it. I think that even in cases like this, it is one of the ways of learning how to be governed by the Bible and to let God reveal His will.

We know from the New Testament certain general principles, for instance, of proper modesty and not gaudy attire. Ezekiel 16 gives a picture symbolically of God arraying Israel. It is sometimes helpful to look at it, realizing that it's symbolic; but we realize that if God utilized it, then it is not inappropriate. He describes beautifully crafted shoes, beautiful garments with linen and with silk. He describes jewelry. He describes these things.

Ezekiel 16:9, "...I anointed you with oil [in the sense of perfumed oil]." We can see that Israel is arrayed as a bride or arrayed as a queen. There are appropriate occasions where it's not wrong to wear something that is appropriate for the occasion. Here is shows the utilization of jewelry, the utilization of beautiful clothes or even perfume. The things God utilized, the specific things that He mentions—basically perfumed oil, shoes, clothing and jewelry—show that it is not wrong for a Christian woman to utilize jewelry, for instance. Some religions totally prohibit the use of any jewelry. And yet we read from Ezekiel 16 and understand that it is not wrong.

Obviously, there are principles in the New Testament that show that we should be modest in our apparel. We are not to be gaudy and we are not go to an extreme; jewelry is used tastefully and obviously for certain occasions, such as a wedding. Here, the sense is not only of a wedding but the coronation of a queen with a crown. Obviously, there would be things that would be appropriate that are not wrong in and of themselves as long as they are used properly, tastefully and not in a wrong manner. Some things God utilizes; other things He doesn't. You can draw contrasts between God arraying Israel as His queen and Israel arraying herself as a harlot later on in other passages. But we can deduce here that it is not wrong that certain things are utilized. They are not intrinsically wrong in and of themselves—as certain ones have sometime thought—as long as it's done properly, appropriately, in proper taste and at the proper occasion.

It goes through and describes the contrast of Israel being called by God and God providing all of these wonderful things, offering Israel the opportunity as His wife, as His queen. And yet what did she do? She went and involved herself with all of the nations around. God compares that to harlotry. That's the way God views the unfaithfulness, spiritually, as a betrayal. He draws the analogy as a husband betrayed by his wife. In that sense, God pictured Himself as the husband. There is a sense of betrayal that is described.

This pretty well takes care of the first sixteen chapters in the book of Ezekiel. There's an awful lot packed into the book of Ezekiel and an awful lot packed into the Major Prophets. There is a tremendous amount that is there. There are things that we would do well to take notice of and pay attention to because they're things that very directly impact us and the world in which we're living—events that are transpiring oh so rapidly and quickly.

Major Prophets Series—Ezekiel 17—32

This evening we are covering the mid-section of Ezekiel—chapters 17—32. There are crucial parts in this section that focus in on the prophecies of the continuity of David's dynasty in spite of the Babylonian captivity of the Jews. This is something to note because God had made a promise to David at the time David desired to build the temple. He told David, 'You're not going to build a house for Me.' There were reasons for that. God said, 'Instead, what I will do, I will build a house for you. I am going to establish your dynasty.' God said, 'I'm going to establish that forever' (I Chronicles 17:4-14).

God made that promise to David and the dynasty had continued along for, let's say, in the neighborhood of over four hundred years. Now, we come to a time of the Babylonian captivity where Jerusalem is going to be destroyed. To all apparent visible signs, the dynasty of David is going to cease to rule. Was God's promise proved to be of no effect? God made a promise to David and even specifically told him, 'If your descendants, who sit upon your throne, sin, I will chasten him, but I won't turn away from him as I did from Saul. I will chasten him, but I will not reject him as I did the family of Saul' (II Samuel 7:14-15). God had made a covenant, a promise, to King David.

The people of God who were alive at that time had understood that promise. At least, they understood there was a promise and they had, as many times is the case, read things in. God made a promise that He was going to preserve the throne of David and, undoubtedly, they had assumed it would be done in Jerusalem over Judah. Therefore, that meant the uninterrupted continuation of the line there in Jerusalem in Judah. That's not what God said. But we can all have a tendency to read things in and to assume things that aren't necessarily there.

This is a lesson for prophecy (and prophecy even for today) to realize there are times we may have assumed things that are not always necessarily what the text says. Many of the Jews had assumed that the promise to David meant the unbroken continuation there in Jerusalem over Judah. That's not what God had in mind. In fact, the dynasty was continued and does continue, but the throne of David today is located in London. The throne was overturned, overturned, overturned (Ezekiel 21:27, KJV). It was overturned from Jerusalem to Tara, Ireland; from Tara, Ireland, to Scone, Scotland; and from Scone, Scotland, to London, England.

Ezekiel 21:27, ""I will overturn, overturn, overturn it; and it shall be no more [overturned], until He comes whose right it is; and I will give it to Him."" –In other words, Jesus Christ, the Messiah.

This evening we will notice a couple of things relating to that and relating to some of the prophecies of David's dynasty. We will notice some of the specific indictments of the sins of modern Israel and the ultimate punishment. We find some of these things outlined here in Ezekiel.

Also, the origin of Satan is addressed in Ezekiel 28. This is a section of Scripture Mr. Herbert Armstrong used to go back to many times. Isaiah 14 and Ezekiel 28—we've heard him talk about Lucifer and tie it in with Genesis 1, the two trees. He kept doing that because he felt like people didn't really get the point. I think, sometimes, some who thought they got the point didn't; that has been shown. In Ezekiel 22, there is interesting information that we will bring into focus a little more clearly as we come to it.

Ezekiel 17 is a parable to the house of Israel. Now, understand something. This is a parable to the house of Israel. Remember, as we went through the last Bible study, the house of Israel had already gone into captivity over one hundred twenty-five years before Ezekiel ever wrote this. Ezekiel was with the captives of Judah in the southern Mesopotamian area, which wouldn't be a good place to be in the modern-day Iraq.

He was kind of like some of the captives that are over there now. Saddam Hussein kind of saw himself as a modern-day Nebuchadnezzar. They had already started a construction project. He wanted to rebuild the palace of Nebuchadnezzar in Babylon with the hanging gardens. They hadn't gotten around to rebuilding the palace, but they had put up a sign saying, "The palace of Nebuchadnezzar, rebuilt in the era of Saddam Hussein." He really was kind of equating himself with being the great conqueror. He was "riding high in the saddle."

Ezekiel was dealing with his ancient counterpart and he was a hostage of centuries ago. He wasn't any freer to leave Babylon than our hostages are to leave modern-day Iraq. Ezekiel couldn't travel all the way up to the area where the Israelites were captive, which would be located on the border of modern-day Iran and the Soviet Union. The Israelites weren't in the area where Ezekiel was. They had already been taken captive one hundred twenty-five years earlier. It's kind of late to come in and give them a warning.

One hundred, twenty-five years ago—that's 1865. It's kind of like somebody standing up today and prophesying that if the South doesn't repent, it is going to lose the War Between the States. You'd say that it's a little late to address that issue.

This is exactly the time period we're talking about. To come along and tell the house of Israel, 'If you don't repent, you are going to go into captivity,' would be like getting on television today and telling Louisiana, 'If you don't repent, the Union troops are going to come in and you're going to lose the War Between the States.' What does that have to do with anything? That's over with.

The reason I emphasize that is to prove that Ezekiel's message was not for his day. It's not that God forgot to send Israel a warning—then He sent one. Then somebody said, 'That was all over with one hundred twenty-five years ago!' And God said, 'How time flies; I forgot!' God didn't forget. The message Ezekiel was given has implications down through time.

We already saw that Ezekiel makes a clear distinction between the house of Israel and Judah. A very good place to prove that is in Ezekiel 4:5, 'he is to bear the iniquity of the house of Israel for three hundred ninety days.'

In Ezekiel 4:6, 'he is to bear the iniquity of the house of Judah for forty days.'

The book of Ezekiel makes a clear-cut distinction between the house of Israel and the house of Judah.

Ezekiel 17 is a parable for the house of Israel, not the house of Judah.

In his parable, vv. 1-4, he sees a great eagle that came to a big cedar in Lebanon. He cropped off one of the young twigs, carried it into a land of traffic, and set it in a city of merchants.

Verses 5-7, he took also of the seed of the land and planted it in a fruitful field, planted it by great waters and it grew into a willow tree. And it grew. Then another eagle with great wings came. What is all this talking about?

In vv. 12-13, it talks about how the king of Babylon is going to take Jerusalem and the kings and the princes, lead them to Babylon and take captive of the king's offspring.

Then we come to something else. He is talking about Babylon captivity, but notice as we come down.

Verses 22-24, "Thus says the Lord God: 'I will take also one of the highest branches of the high cedar and I set it out. I will crop off from the topmost of its young twigs a tender one, and will plant it on a high and prominent mountain. On the mountain height of Israel I will plant it; and it will bring forth boughs, and bear fruit, and be a majestic cedar. Under it will dwell birds of every sort; in the shadow of its branches they will dwell. And all the trees of the field shall know that I, the Lord, have brought down the high tree and exalted the low tree, dried up the green tree and made the dry tree flourish....'"

He was told to take of the highest branch of the high cedar. The high cedar represented Israel. The highest branch would represent the king. He was to go to the family of the king (that's the highest branch of the tree) and from it he was to chop off one of the young twigs. In other words, this would be one of the children of the king, "a tender one." This would be a daughter as opposed to a son.

So one of the king's daughters was to be taken and planted upon a high and prominent mountain. A mountain is used in Bible prophecy to symbolize a nation. We are told in Isaiah 2 and Micah 4 how the Lord's house will be established in the top of the mountain and the hills will flow up to it. It talks about the seven mountains in Revelation 17:9. The seven mountains are seven kings. Mountain is used as symbolic of a great nation. Hill symbolizes a small nation. Here was a great nation that one of the king's daughters was to be taken.

Verses 22-23, she was to be planted elsewhere, in a high mountain, a great nation. It was to take root and it was to be fruitful. In other words, she would marry and have children, descendants; "...it will bring forth boughs and bear fruit...."

So you've taken this young tender twig; you've rooted it elsewhere. Another great tree grows up from there that will ultimately become a great empire that will have worldwide implications.

It is going to be a great tree, v. 23, "...and be a majestic cedar. Under it will dwell birds of every sort; in the shadow of its branches they will dwell."

This was symbolic of all the nations that would dwell under it. In other words, you are going to crop off a little tender twig, go root it, take it to another mountain and it's going to become a great tree. It is going to produce and be fruitful; everything is going to come and dwell there.

Zedekiah was the last king of Judah. He was the last occupant of the throne of David there in Jerusalem. One of his daughters was married to the son of the high king of Ireland. The present day British royal family traces back to that dynasty, the dynasty that was actually transferred by Jeremiah the prophet. We went through that when we covered the book of Jeremiah. You can read some of the background in the booklet, What's Ahead for America and Britain? It goes into some of that.

That dynasty ultimately ruled over an empire that came to have worldwide implications. "The sun never set on the British Empire" was the saying because literally there are far-flung British dominions around the world. Even though the British Empire is greatly dissipated and disappeared, it is still that throne—the throne of David—that is the common bond that links people. There's still people all over the world that are linked by allegiance to that common throne, whether in Canada, Australia, New Zealand or even certain areas of the Caribbean, certain Pacific islands, as well as Britain itself. A Canadian coin, stamp or dollar bill has the Queen of England's picture on it. She is not only the Queen of England; she is the Queen of Canada. That is a part of the birthright blessings—the throne of David—that God established. There is reference to it right here.

In Ezekiel 18, there are a couple of very clear-cut scriptures that show that there isn't an immortal soul.

Ezekiel 18:4, 20 both state, "...the soul who sins shall die." Here are very clear-cut scriptures that show that "soul" does not equate with "immortality."

The context of Ezekiel 18 is that God does not take pleasure in the death of the wicked (v. 32). God wants people to repent. We will ultimately have to bear the consequences of what we have done. If we repent, God will spare us; if we don't, we will die. The soul that sins, it shall die.

Verse 21, "But if a wicked man turns from all his sins which he has committed, keeps all My statutes, and does what is lawful and right, he shall surely live; he shall not die."

Here we have a definition of repentance. Repentance is defined as turning around and going the other way. To receive God's forgiveness and mercy, we have to repent; we have to turn from our sins. That means we have been going one direction, the way of sin. We have made a "U-turn" in the middle of the road. We turned around and started going the other way. We have turned from our sins and have begun to obey God.

Now, our obedience does not earn forgiveness, but it is the outward demonstration of our repentance. The sacrifice of Christ paid the penalty for our sins. There isn't any amount of law-keeping that is going to earn us forgiveness. But if we're not keeping the law, it is pretty evident that we're not trying to turn away from sin and we're not repentant. Because if I'm repentant, that means I don't want to be like the world. I don't want to be like the devil. I want to be like God. I desire to be like God. I'm trying to turn away from the old and embrace the new.

Verse 23, God has no pleasure that the wicked should die. What God desires is that the wicked will repent, that he will turn from his ways and live. This is important and it reflects the mind of God. God desires and delights to see not the punishment of the wicked but the repentance of the wicked.

Verse 31, "Cast away from you all the transgressions which you have committed, and get yourselves a new heart and a new spirit. For why should you die, O house of Israel?" This is prophecy of conversion, a new heart. God does not delight in seeing our punishment; He wants us to repent.

We also see in this section that our good past actions or of our parents are not going to get us out of trouble.

Verse 24, "But when a righteous man turns away from his righteousness and commits iniquity, and does according to all the abominations that the wicked man does, shall he live? All the righteousness which he has done shall not be remembered; because of the unfaithfulness of which he is guilty and the sin which he has committed, because of them he shall die."

That's why Jesus said in Matthew 24:13, "...he that endures to the end, the same shall be saved."

We have to keep on keeping on. You can't go along and do what's right for a while and then decide to quit, do wrong and turn away from God. Do you think God will say, 'He did keep the Sabbath for several years before he quit. He kept it for ten years; then he left the Church and broke it for five. So, we forget about these five because he kept it twice as long as he didn't.' That's not the way it works. If we turn away from obedience to God, then we've gotten off the track.

Jesus said, "He that endures to the end, the same shall be saved." We have to hang on. We can't just say, 'Way back when I used to do "such and such" or my parents used to do "such and such."' We each have to be responsible for what we do.

Ezekiel 20 is an important concept; it makes an interesting point. It talks about God's choosing of Israel.

Ezekiel 20:5, "...Thus says the Lord God: 'On the day when I chose Israel and lifted My hand in an oath to the descendants of the house of Jacob, and made Myself known to them in the land of Egypt, I lifted My hand in an oath to them, saying, "I am the Lord your God."'" He told them, 'I am your God.'

Verses 7-8, "Then I said to them, "Each of you, throw away the abominations which are before his eyes, and do not defile yourselves with the idols of Egypt" I am the Lord your God. But they rebelled against Me and would not obey Me. They did not all cast away the abominations which were before their eyes, nor did they forsake the idols of Egypt...."

God said, v. 10, I brought them out of the land of Egypt. I brought them into the wilderness.

Verses 11-13, "And I gave them My statutes, showed them My judgments, which if a man does, he shall live by them. Moreover I also gave them My Sabbaths, to be a sign between them and Me that they might know that I am the Eternal who sanctifies them. Yet the house of Israel rebelled against Me in the wilderness; they did not walk in My statutes; they despised My judgments, which if a man does, he shall live by them; and they greatly defiled My Sabbaths...."

God shows and what we find here is that Israel did not willingly forsake Egypt. They did not willingly turn its back on and forsake Egypt. God took the people out of Egypt, but taking Egypt out of the people was a different matter.

We have to understand, v. 8, they did not cast away the abominations that were before their eyes. They did not forsake the idols of Egypt. They did not forsake them in their mind. This is the important part of conversion. It is something fundamental. We have to understand; it's not enough to outwardly forsake the idols of Egypt. We have to forsake them in our mind because if we don't forsake them in our mind, when we are provided with the right set of opportunities, we will turn back to them because we never turned loose of them in our mind to begin with.

The Egyptians worshiped the golden calf, the Aphis bull. Israel did not physically take a golden calf with them out of Egypt. Israel did not take one with them, but when Moses was gone six weeks, they made one like they remembered (Exodus 32). They took it with them in their minds, and when they were given the opportunity to do what they wanted to do, that was what they wanted to do. They longingly remembered what they had ceased to do. When they got the opportunity, they went back to it.

If you had the opportunity, to what would you go back? Do you really chafe under not being able to set up a Christmas tree? If you had the chance, boy, you would like to do that. What are you longingly looking back for? Easter eggs? That's the big thing—"Surely wish we could have Easter sunrise service in the Church." What do we want to go back to? Do we want to be involved in this world's politics—trying to get old honest Joe elected because he could solve all the problems in the country and the state. He says he will. They all say they will. They've been saying that since anyone ran for office.

Jeroboam, the son of Nebet, ran for king of Israel (I Kings 12). No new taxes! That was his pledge; he was going to reduce the old taxes. That's not any great new thing. That's what got Rehoboam kicked out of office and Jeroboam put in. What did Jeroboam do? Pretty soon he had changed the Feast and done all kinds of things (I Kings 12:32). From that time on, God tells us all the kings of Israel walked in the ways of Jeroboam, the son of Nebat. He wasn't a good king, but people thought he was going to be "just the man." He was the guy they wanted. He was the people's choice.

We look at it; most of us are not going to go out, physically sit down and carve a great golden calf and start bowing down to it. We think we wouldn't do a thing like that. God uses Egypt as a type of this world. We have to understand there is a principle here. Israel left Egypt reluctantly. They kept rebelling every time they got the opportunity. They kept going back because they didn't leave it in their mind.

When we're in God's Kingdom, is God going to be worried that over in our corner of the universe we're building golden calves? God is off somewhere and as soon as we think nobody is looking over in our solar system (our galaxy or whatever it is), we're manufacturing golden calves for everybody to worship. We're instituting Christmas, Halloween and Easter; we're having people put up Christmas trees and hide Easter eggs over in our corner of the universe. God's not going to have to be worried that we're going to be trying to bring Egypt in and create little Egypt over there. God not only wants to bring us out of Egypt, He wants to get Egypt out of us. That's what conversion is all about.

Ezekiel 36:26, "I will give you a new heart and put a new spirit within you...." God says, 'I'll clean you up on the inside.' If we are cleaned up on the inside, the outside will take care of itself.

The problem with the Israelites was they got cleaned up on the outside several different times, but they never got cleaned up on the inside. As soon as they got the opportunity, the inside manifested itself on the outside. God wants more than a veneer of righteousness. He wants a heart and mind that is yielded and surrendered to Him. He wants us to walk in His ways. He wants a new heart. Israel did not willingly forsake Egypt.

Hopefully, we have willingly forsaken Egypt. Sooner or later God will give us all a chance to turn back because He wants to see if we will. He wants to see what's in our heart. That's what He said in Deuteronomy 8. That's why He led them forty years in the wilderness. He wanted to humble them and to prove what was in their heart.

Sooner or later, God will give you the opportunity to turn back to Egypt. Proverbially or symbolically, Moses will be gone for forty days. You'll have the opportunity to turn back to Egypt. Will you? God wants to know what's in our hearts. If we're really converted and yielded to God, we don't want Egypt. We saw what it was and we don't want it. We want God's Kingdom. We may not do everything perfectly, but we're striving for it. We want it and our mistakes are not mistakes of intent. Our mistakes are with the weaknesses we're struggling against and the pressures around. But we're striving and our eyes are set on the Kingdom. We want it and we want to be like God. This is fundamental to what conversion is all about.

Ezekiel 20:12, the Sabbath was given as a sign. It's made plain that God's Sabbaths are signs. They identify God. They identify that we serve the Creator God because the Sabbath harks back to the time of creation.

In vv. 21-25, it's made plain that Israel did not willingly obey God. They rebelled against Him. Every time they got the opportunity, they rebelled. I've made the point before.

After the Ten Commandments were given, Moses went up into the mountain for forty days. He wasn't up there forty days because it took God that long to write the Ten Commandments with His finger. That wasn't the problem. God could have zapped the Ten Commandments and had Moses back down in forty minutes instead of forty days. In fact, He could have saved Moses the trouble and sent an angel to bring down the Ten Commandments to them. If Moses had never left, they would have never built the golden calf because Moses wouldn't have let them, would he? Look what he did to the golden calf when he got back and found it.

God wasn't going to let them stay in the golden-calf business because they were His Church. He was going to work with them. He had a job that spanned hundreds of years—many, many centuries and millennia. God had a purpose He was working out and He was going to use Israel. He wasn't going to just let them go into the golden-calf business and forget all about it.

He brought Moses back. But He also let Moses stay gone long enough for the people to have the opportunity to do what was in their heart if they thought Moses was dead and gone and away from there. God wanted to find out what they would do. Oh, for the good old days in Egypt. Somebody comes up with an idea and here they go.

There is a very important spiritual principle we have to think about because God is working with us and God looks on the heart. He is seeking to work with us in our hearts and minds. If our hearts and minds are really yielded to Him, other things will fall into place. We will do the other things because we are motivated from the heart, as opposed to doing the other things because somebody's standing there ready to zap us if we don't. We find that they didn't willingly obey.

Ezekiel 20:24-25, "because they had not executed My judgments, but had despised My statutes, profaned My Sabbaths, and their eyes were fixed on their father's idols. Therefore I also gave them up to statutes that were not good, and judgments by which they could not live." Some misunderstand and say, 'See, God's law is bad. God says He gave them statutes that weren't good.'

Some Protestants like to point to this and say, 'The Sabbath is bad; God even says He gave them bad laws. That's why Christ had to come and do away with it. That's why Christ came and nailed the law to the cross because the law was bad. It says so right here, doesn't it? God gave them statutes that weren't good and judgments whereby they couldn't live. Boy, this really proves the Sabbath was done away!' No, that's not what it proves at all. Let's read it in context. That's always the key.

Verses 24-25, "because they had not executed My judgments, but had despised My statutes, profaned My Sabbaths, and their eyes were fixed on their father's idols. Therefore I also gave them up to statutes that were not good, and judgments by which they could not live."

Hold your place there, and let's go back to Psalm 81:11-14. This is one you might cross-reference in your Bible. I have it written in the margin in my Bible.

Psalm 81:11-14, "But My people would not heed My voice, and Israel would have none of Me. So I gave them over to their own stubborn heart, to walk in their own counsels. Oh, that My people would listen to Me, that Israel would walk in My ways! I would soon subdue their enemies, and turn My hand against their adversaries."

'If they had really yielded to Me, I would have taken care of their problems.'

But notice what He says in v. 12 (KJV), "so I gave them up to their own heart's lust, and they walked in their own counsel."

Ezekiel 20:25, "...I gave them statutes that weren't good..."

Psalm 81:12, "...I gave them up to their own heart's lusts..." 'I let them pursue things that seemed good to them.'

Acts 7:38-39, "This is he who was in the congregation in the wilderness with the Angel who spoke to him on Mount Sinai, and with our fathers, the one who received the living oracles [the living law] to give to us, whom our fathers would not obey, but rejected. And in their hearts they turned back to Egypt."

Interesting! This is the New Testament analysis! This is the application that I've just been making in Ezekiel, of treating the principles of the Exodus as a spiritual analogy. That's not some idea that I came up with. That's what Peter and Steven and the others said. They did the same thing. They used it as a spiritual example. It was a literal historical account, but it was also a spiritual type.

Verses 39-43, "whom our fathers would not obey, but rejected. And in their hearts they turned back to Egypt, saying to Aaron, "Make us gods to go before us; as for this Moses who brought us out of the land of Egypt, we do not know what has become of him." And they made a calf in those days, offered sacrifices to the idol, and rejoiced in the works of their own hands. Then God turned and gave them up to worship the hosts of heaven, as it is written in the book of the Prophets: "Did you offer Me slaughtered animals and sacrifices during forty years in the wilderness, O house of Israel? Yes, you took up the tabernacle of Moloch..."

The point of Ezekiel 20:24-25 is that when Israel did not value and appreciate God's righteous laws, He gave them over to do things that weren't good. The statutes that weren't good were not statutes that originated with God; they originated with the lusts and desires of the people—and God gave them up to do it. In other words, He allowed them to do it and to get the consequences of it.

God is going to deal with them and He is going to say, Ezekiel 20:30, "Therefore say to the house of Israel, "Thus says the Lord God: 'Are you defiling yourselves in the manner of your fathers, and committing harlotry according to their abominations?'" Do you do all these things?

Verse 31, "...So shall I be inquired of you, O house of Israel? As I live,' says the Lord God, 'I will not be inquired of by you."

We might point out that when it talks about, vv. 30-31, "...defiling yourselves in the manner of your fathers...For when you offer gifts and make your sons pass through the fire..." they sacrificed children to the idols. We think that is horrible and yet we see in our nation a generation that has literally been sacrificed on the altar of materialism. Do you think that is less grievous in God's sight? A generation has been sacrificed (been thrown away), been passed through the fires of a decadent, materialistic, selfish, convenience-oriented society of parents who don't want to be bothered. Parents want to go out and pursue their own selfish interests and ambitions and are not centered there in terms of home and family.

We see the consequences. We see the devastation that has taken place. Now, we are into the generation who are the children of the generation sacrificed. We are seeing the spiraling, colossal problems that are just devastating our nation. It goes back to a set of values. We live in a very materialistic, self-centered, convenience-oriented society. People don't want to sacrifice. They don't want to give up anything and focus in on their responsibilities. There are some very strong parallels.

Verses 31-32, "As I live,' says the Lord God, 'I will not be inquired of by you. What you have in your mind shall never be, when you say, "We will be like the Gentiles, like the families in other countries, serving wood and stone."

In other words, we want to be just like everybody else. We are willing to be like all the other nations. This is what Israel of old wanted to do. The attraction of the world around has always been the battle that God's people have had to face. If you go back to the book of Judges, you will find that's why God didn't immediately get rid of all the Canaanites out of the land. He wanted something there, in effect, for the people to have to make a choice.

Christ hasn't taken us out of the world and stuck us off somewhere in a little cave where we are totally isolated and insulated from the influences of the world. We have to daily reject the world and choose God. We're surrounded by this influence and this pull. It's a battle. That's the way we build character. How do you build your muscles? You build muscles by exercise and by pushing them against resistance. That's the way we build our spiritual character. We're resisting the world. God could have isolated us. He could have told His people to do what the Amish do, to create their own little society. Christ didn't tell His disciples to do that. He just simply didn't. That wasn't what God had in mind.

He talks about how they will go into captivity. Verse 38, "I will purge the rebels from among you..."

Verse 43, "And there you shall remember your ways and all your doings with which you were defiled; and you shall loathe yourselves in your own sight because of all the evils that you have committed." They will come to repentance.

Ezekiel 21:2, "Son of man, set your face toward Jerusalem, preach against the holy places, and prophesy against the land of Israel."

Verses 26-27, "Thus says the Lord God: 'Remove the turban [KJV, "diadem"], and take off the crown; nothing shall remain the same. Exalt the lowly, and abase the exalted. Overthrow, overthrow, I will make it overthrown! [KJV, "I will overturn, overturn, overturn, it..."] It shall be no longer, until He comes whose right it is, and I will give it to Him.'" The crown was taken off.

There were two lines that came from Judah—Zarah and Pharez. Judah had twin boys. One started to come out first and the scarlet thread was put around his wrist. But he withdrew his arm and the brother was born first. A breach was created because here was one who started to come out first, but he was not entirely born. He had the scarlet thread to identify him as first-born, but then he wasn't the first-born. The other one, Pharez, came out. Pharez was the one that actually was totally born first. He was the one who came down through the birthright of the scepter promise. In other words, the birthright of the scepter promise is in the family of Judah, not of Israel. Judah had the scepter promise, the promise of the line of kings.

You might want to be aware of the scripture, one that is good to have written down.

I Chronicles 5:2, "yet Judah prevailed over his brothers, and from him came a ruler, although the birthright was Joseph's—" Judah had the scepter, the chief ruler; the line of kings came through Judah. But the birthright (material and national promise; wealth, prosperity, power) was Joseph's. That is clearly defined in I Chronicles 5:2. It is a good verse to clearly show that.

The line of Pharez had continued down through King David and through the lines of David. The Zarah line—the descendants of Zarah, the royal family in Ireland—traced their descent back through the Trojan kings.

Now the crown was being taken off the Pharez branch. It was going to exalt the branch that is low (the Zarah branch), the one that had the scarlet thread. The one that was high (Pharez) is being put down; the one that was low is being raised up. But really it is reuniting because the daughter of the Pharez branch was marrying the son of the Zarah branch. This is reuniting it.

Ezekiel 21:26, "...Remove the turban [diadem], take the crown..." We are going to transfer it from one branch of the tribe of Judah to the other branch of the tribe of Judah.

Verse 27 (KJV), "I will overturn, overturn, overturn, it [Jerusalem to Tara, Tara to Scone, Scone to London] and it shall be no more, until He come whose right it is; and I will give it to Him."—In other words, Jesus Christ.

In Ezekiel 22, we find the sins of the people characterized. It talks about violence, oppression of the defenseless, Sabbath breaking, sex sins, greed and extortion—all these various things.

Verses 2-3, the city sheds blood. It talks about the bloody city and all of the violence.

Ezekiel 22:7, "...they have oppressed the stranger; in you they have mistreated the fatherless and the widow." Taking advantage of those who are not able to fend for themselves or who are at a disadvantage because of some minority status. Taking advantage of the fatherless and the widow is a very serious matter.

Verse 8, "You have despised My holy things and profaned My Sabbaths."

Verse 9, "...in your midst they commit lewdness." It goes on to all sorts of things.

Verses 10-13, it even talks about adultery, incest and various problems of this sort. It talks about violence and murder for hire. It talks about greed and things of this sort.

Verses 14-15, God says, 'You think I'm going to put up with this? I am going to scatter you among the nations and you will be dispersed.' The house of Israel is going to be dealt with.

Verses 25-28, "'The conspiracy of her prophets in her midst is like a roaring lion tearing the prey; they have devoured people; they have taken treasure and precious things; they have made many widows in her midst. Her priests have violated My law and profaned My holy things; they have not distinguished between the holy and unholy, nor have they made known the difference between the unclean and the clean; and they have hidden their eyes from My Sabbaths, so that I am profaned among them. Her princes in her midst are like wolves tearing the prey, to shed blood, to destroy people and to get dishonest gain. Her prophets plastered them with untempered mortar, seeing false visions, and divining lies for them....'"

God indicts the three leadership elements of society. He indicts the prophets, the priests and the princes. Now let's identify them in modern parlance.

We've often talked about false prophets. Many times we have limited our concept of false prophets to identifying them with some of the television evangelists and radio preachers. We need to understand that while they are false prophets, they are only a tiny percentage and their impact on society is minimal overall.

The word "prophet" in the Hebrew language is "nabiy" and it means "one who announces or proclaims a message." It is a word that in our modern terminology would best reflect the entire scope of the media. They're the ones who have impact and are a very powerful segment of society. They're the ones accused of daubing with untempered mortar; in other words, doing a whitewash job on what the other two have done. They have not really shown things clearly for what they are. They have not proclaimed the proper message. They kind of stick together and they have their approach. They have their line, so to speak, that they convey and people place credence in. So God indicts the media, those who announce and proclaim to society. This would certainly include the religious media but also the secular false prophets—the whole gamut of media.

Next are the priests who are the leaders of organized religion. They're indicted for the fact that they haven't done their job. They should have been teaching the people the difference between right and wrong, and they haven't done it. They have tried to water down and do away with the law. They say the law is done away. They've hidden their eyes from God's Sabbath. They have so watered down and profaned that they haven't even taught the people the difference in terms of absolute right and wrong. We have major Christian churches in this nation arguing over whether or not they should ordain homosexuals. That's incredible! Here they are claiming to be God's representatives, and they're not spending their time indicting some of these things as a sin (for which God is going to send the nation into captivity). They're talking about whether or not they want to ordain them and perform marriages between them. Incredible! Absolutely incredible!

Verse 26, "'Her priests have violated My law and profaned My holy things; they have not distinguished between the holy and unholy... [They haven't taught people the difference between right and wrong]...they have hidden their eyes from My Sabbaths....'" God indicts the media, those who announce and proclaim to the nation, those to whom the nation looks. He indicts the religious leadership, the leaders of organized religion who have molded and set the stage in that way.

Then God indicts the princes. The princes were those who controlled power and wealth in ancient times, and they are the ones who control the power and the wealth today. These would be the leaders of government and finance, the people who control the money and the governmental power.

If you're going to look at it, what we have are the segments of society, the opinion molders: the media, the religious leadership and those who control the government (those who have the power) in terms of government and wealth. He indicts each of these—the leadership, the princes, those who control the power and money—for being greedy and doing anything they can just to get dishonest gain. They misuse their power and their wealth. They are like wolves ravaging the prey. They are out for what they can get. We see some very strong indictments on three segments of society into which God divides the leadership. Their contributions are brought out.

In Ezekiel 23, God uses the illustration of whoredom to characterize the sins of Israel.

In v. 19, He describes the nation multiplying her harlotry.

Verse 38, He describes the nation profaning the Sabbath. He defines them in the analogy of harlotry and, v. 40, of arraying themselves in that way.

The point is that physical action typified what Israel did spiritually. Instead of being a faithful wife seeking to please her husband (which is what should have been Israel's relationship to God), Israel began to go out and to seek out illicit relationships with other neighboring kings and other nations. Israel began to involve itself in illicit relationships as opposed to being faithful to the covenant she made with God, which is typified as a marriage covenant. She entered into these various arrangements. Israel is pictured as a harlot. God describes the things that characterize and people identified with a physical harlot. They looked down on that. That was not good. God said, 'You've done the same thing spiritually. You haven't been faithful to Me.' We have a view of how God views it and how it looks to God.

Ezekiel 24 deals with the bloody city (vv. 6, 9), which is characteristic of Jerusalem (v. 2) and ultimately of the nation (v. 21).

Ezekiel 25 is a prophecy against the Ammonites. Verses 4, 10, they are going to be delivered to the men of the East for a possession. It is going to be interesting to see exactly what is going to happen. Ammon and Moab are in the area of Iraq and Jordan. They are ultimately going to be delivered to the men of the East for a possession. Amman is the capital of Jordan. It is going to be interesting. We read of armies that are going to mass on the River Euphrates (Revelations 16:12-14), which is right there in modern-day Iraq. At the time of the Day of the Lord, they are going to finally be able to cross that river and they are going to come in. They are going to overflow into, at least, sections of Jordan and Iraq.

Ezekiel 26 deals with prophecies against Tyre. In Ezekiel 27, the analogy that is drawn is of a great end-time commercial combine headquartered in Europe. If you read Ezekiel 27 and then go back and read Revelation 18, notice a little bit about what it talks about.

Ezekiel 27:29-35, "All who handle the oar, the mariners, all the pilots of the sea will come down from their ships and stand on the shore [land]...they shall cry bitterly and cast dust on their heads; they will roll about in ashes...In their wailing for you, they will take up a lamentation, and lament for you...When your wares went out by sea, you satisfied many people; you enriched the kings of the earth with your many luxury goods and your merchandise. But when you are broken by the seas in the depths of the waters, your merchandise and the entire company will fall in your midst. All the inhabitants of the isles will be astonished at you...."

Revelation 18:2, "And he cried mightily with a loud voice, saying, 'Babylon the great is fallen, is fallen....'"

Verse 11, "And the merchants of the earth will weep and mourn over her, for no one buys their merchandise anymore."

Then, vv. 12-13 talk about all these various merchandise, all these various traders and all these things that came in.

Verse 15, "The merchants of these things, who became rich by her, will stand at a distance for fear of her torment, weeping and wailing." The merchants would see these things.

Verse 17, "For in one hour such great riches came to nothing...." Finally, it comes to naught and the city is cast down.

Verse 19, "...For in one hour she is made desolate." If you read Ezekiel 27 and Revelation 18, you will see the parallel.

Tyre was a great commercial city, a great commercial capital located on the Mediterranean coast. It was destroyed by Alexander the Great a number of decades before Ezekiel wrote. The merchants of Tyre covered the whole Mediterranean. In fact, the city of Carthage in North Africa was settled by the people of Tyre. It was a colony of Tyre. Later, Carthage rose to such power as to challenge Rome. Rome and Carthage vied for the control of the Mediterranean world. Rome finally vanquished Carthage.

These were called the Punic Wars (if you remember your ancient history) because the land of Phut (Ezekiel 27:10) in North Africa takes it's name and goes back to the same root word from which "Phoenician" comes. These were the people of Carthage. They were a division of the Canaanites who were originally in Tyre and were later centered at Carthage, a great commercial capital.

The Romans devastated Carthage. When they finally defeated it, they forced the inhabitants either into slavery or pushed them down further into Africa. They plowed salt in the ground in Carthage to prevent it from ever being rebuilt there on the North African coast.

Tyre was a great commercial center. The Phoenicians were famous for all of this, and here was a great center, a great world market. It was a type of that final Babylon the Great. Much of the analogy in Revelation 18 is derived from Ezekiel 27. If you read the two, you get the same rhythm of scripture. It is clear that there is a relationship there.

In Ezekiel 28, we come to the prince of Tyre. This is talking about the ruler.

Ezekiel 28:12-15, “Son of man, take up a lamentation for the king of Tyre... [The prince of Tyre was the human ruler. Who is the king? He is the one who is over the prince. What are we told of the king?...]...you were the seal of perfection, full of wisdom and perfect in beauty. You were in Eden, the garden of God, every precious stone was your covering...you were the anointed cherub who covers; I have established you; you were on the holy mountain of God; you walked back and forth in the midst of fiery stones. You were perfect in your ways from the day you were created, till iniquity was found in you.”

Certainly, this is not talking about the human ruler of Tyre. This is talking about the one that we know as Satan the devil. He is called Lucifer in Isaiah 14. Here was an anointed cherub, one who had been in Eden, one in whom iniquity was found and was cast out of God’s government. He is the one who was the real ruler of Tyre (and Babylon, and Egypt), the real ruler and god of this world.

What led to his downfall?

Verse 17, “Your heart was lifted up because of your beauty; you corrupted your wisdom for the sake of your splendor....” Vanity! Pride led to his downfall. He was lifted up with pride and iniquity was found in him. It started out with pride, a self-centered attitude of pride and vanity that focused on the self and went on from there.

In Ezekiel 29, we find a prophecy against Egypt; an amazing prophecy.

Ezekiel 29:15, “It shall be the lowliest of kingdoms; it shall never again exalt itself above the nations, for I will diminish them so that they will not rule over the nations anymore.” Egypt was going to be abased and we find this is what happened.

Here was Egypt, a nation that had been a major power on the world scene for centuries and millennia. Ezekiel was writing in the sixth century B.C. Here we find, in the latter part of the sixth century B.C. (circa 591-569 B.C.), Ezekiel writing a prophecy that Egypt would cease to be a major power. Now consider, by this time, Egypt had been a major empire on the world scene for almost three thousand years. Egypt had been the dominant nation of the pre-flood world and the post-flood world. After the debacle at Babel (Genesis 11), Egypt again began to rise. Egypt had been a major power in the post-flood world all the way down until the time Nebuchadnezzar comes on the scene. Nebuchadnezzar invaded Egypt and destroyed its power.

Since that time, Egypt never again was ruled by a native prince (Ezekiel 30:13). That’s been twenty-five hundred years. The Babylonians ruled it, then the Persians and then the Greeks. Cleopatra, the ruler of Egypt was Greek. She was a part of the dynasty that was descended from Alexander the Great’s general, Ptolemy. The Greeks ruled Egypt down to Cleopatra.

Then the Romans took over and ruled it as a Roman province, down through the time of the Romans. Then later the Eastern Roman Empire (the Byzantine Empire) ruled all the way down to the seventh century A.D. when finally the Arabs, having been converted to Islam, poured out of the Arabian Peninsula (what is now Saudi Arabia), overran Egypt, and it became part of an Arab Empire ruled from Damascus and later Bagdad.

The Turks conquered it and ruled it as a part of a Turkish Empire up until the late 1800s. The British finally set up Egypt, prior to World War I, as independent. But they were under the rule of the line of kings that weren’t Egyptian. They were Albanian in origin. They ruled up until Nasser overthrew King Farouk in 1953.

Talk about prophecy being a proof of the Bible! Was it a lucky guess? How would Ezekiel make a guess of a nation that had been a dominant player on the world scene for as long as history has been around and say it’s going to be conquered and will never again be a significant force on the world scene? This is one of the prophecies that is a proof of the Bible.

Ezekiel 30:13, “...‘I will also destroy the idols, and cause the images to cease out of Noph [Ancient Memphis]; there shall no longer be princes from the land of Egypt....’” Egypt had always been famous for their idols.

It’s interesting. When the Arabs came in from Saudi Arabia, one of the first things they did was get rid of the graven images. The Arab world (the Islamic religion) does not allow any sort of graven images. In fact, artwork is pretty much limited to geometric designs. They really discourage the use of any kind of statuary things of that sort. How unlikely was it that Egypt was going to cease to be a place where they made images? There wasn't any longer going to be a prince of Egypt in the land of Egypt, no longer a prince of native Egyptian stock. And it would be a base kingdom.

Verse 23, "I will scatter the Egyptians among the nations, and disperse them throughout the countries." Most of the inhabitants of modern-day Egypt are not descendants of the ancient Egyptians. Most people in Egypt are Arab.

Just as a point of Middle Eastern history, the Arabs burst on the Middle Eastern scene and began to dominate the Middle East around 650 A.D. The Arabian Peninsula is the native area of the Arabs. They overran the rest of the Middle East, Egypt, North Africa, all the way across into Spain. They overran areas and migrated far and wide in the spread of Islam. They spread their influence far afield. The Arabs originated in the Arabian Peninsula. They are the descendants of Ishmael.

There were other people in some of these countries before the Arabs came. The people in Egypt today who are of native Egyptian stock are a very small minority. They are called "Copts." The bulk of the ancient Egyptian stock was scattered. Interestingly enough, we find a group of people scattered throughout much of the world who call themselves Egyptians. We use the modern slang "gypsy," which is simply derived from "Egyptian." A slang spelling is what it goes back to.

Actually, if you trace it back, many of them were deported and taken into the area of India. It was from there that they spread out. They were known as gypsies. You basically could trace the gypsy migration back to an area of India, and this is where many of the Egyptians were settled when Nebuchadnezzar depopulated Egypt. He settled them on the eastern bounds of his empire, which stretched to the borders of India. That was where he settled many of this group of people.

It is just kind of an interesting "aside." They were scattered and some remained. Those who remain are Copts. Interestingly enough, the Copts are not Moslem. They are members of what is called the Coptic Church, which is a branch of the Catholic Church in Egypt.

The ultimate invasion of Egypt is brought out in Ezekiel 32:11, "...the sword of the king of Babylon shall come upon you." Babylon will ultimately invade Egypt. There are many interesting things in that regard.

I'd like to read a little bit of a column. I think it was Patrick Buchanan's column. I don't know how many of you saw it, but it kind of ties in with what's going on in the Middle East. It ties in with some of this prophecy. I want to conclude here.

It says, "Even the President's critics concede that in winning King Faud's approval for United States forces in marshalling a global embargo and knitting together an Arab-American expeditionary force, George Bush's first diplomat has been superb. We've had all the pleasure of seeing America's best and greatest close an iron ring around Iraq. We find the President's rhetoric has reached war pitch. Before an assembly of pentagon generals and admirals, Saddam Hussein has been called a liar, and we are told that should he achieve his goal of becoming a master of the Gulf, our job, our way of life, our own freedom is threatened...Bush, this past Wednesday, directly compared Iraq to the Third Reich. A half-century ago our nation and the world paid dearly for appeasing an aggressor who should and could have been stopped. We are not going to make that same mistake. By using the Hitler analogy, Bush is virtually ruling out any negotiated settlement, for the modern-man Hitler is evil incarnate. Any leader who cuts a deal with him is guilty of another Munich, a fatal political charge. Is the Hitler analogy valid? Recall, that Hitler, after annexing Austria and establishing a protectorate over Czechoslovakia, overran Poland, Norway, Denmark, Belgium, Holland, France, Yugoslavia, Greece, the Baltic States, and drove a thousand miles into the Soviet Union in two years. And Saddam, so far he's managed to land-grab a tiny defenseless kingdom, not half the size of Denmark. Is Saddam a warlord of Hitlerian dimension or is he a Middle East thief, a Baghdad-bandit who stole Kuwait's oil to sell it to us and get his bankrupt country out of debt?"

It goes on. "If Hitler is on the loose, where are the British, French, Spanish, Italian, German and Japanese troops to stand alongside the Eighty-Second Airborne to stop him? Why is everyone balking at upgrading the United Nation embargo into a blockade? The great men are talking about vacations; Congress hasn't been called back to deal with the crisis that Bush says threatens not only our jobs but our way of life. The implications are clear. Here's the point. If it comes to a shooting war, the United States is going to find itself, again, virtually without allies, except for a few British. And when we begin dropping bombs on Arab towns and Arab troops, how long will our Arab allies stand beside us? It is now almost impossible for Bush to accept a Kuwait that is either a possession or vassal of Iraq. All this talk about ‘standing up to Hitler’ would be hurled back in his face at the next Democratic convention. If this embargo does not force Saddam to disgorge Kuwait, Bush will confront an alternative. Climb back publicly from the limb on which he has climbed so far out or take his country to war. But how is such a war to end? Who will keep them out after destroying Iraq’s military regime and driving its army out of Kuwait? If the army is United States troops, will not those troops become targets of the same terrorists who picked off our Marines in Lebanon? Before Saddam goes down, he will take others with him. A United States attack could ignite an Arab civil war that could do for the throngs of the Middle East what Europe’s World War I did for the throngs of Europe. Years ago an author called Britain’s attack on the Suez ‘The Lion’s Last Roar.’ Is this ‘The Eagle’s Last Scream’?”

It’s kind of interesting because the situation in the Middle East is very volatile. We know the way the story is going to end. What we don’t understand entirely is how is it going to get from here to there? It is going to culminate with a King of the South, with the Arabs getting their act together for the first time in probably seven hundred years in terms of uniting behind one individual who is going to push at a King of the North—a revived United States of Europe—the Beast power. The King of the North is going to retaliate by a blitzkrieg attack into the Middle East. The United States will have already “gone down the drain” prior to that time.

How are we going to see what is going to result in an American humiliation and Arab nationalism being stirred up to the fact that the Arabs are finally ready to unite, however briefly, behind one individual and are going to push at Europe. How is this going to trigger an attack on the United States and Britain, the modern state of Israel in the Middle East, and all of these things? Well, some of the details remain to be filled in. The Bible draws the picture as it stands at the beginning of the Great Tribulation. We look on a world scene and we see things today. We see the pictures converging, but there are many things to happen between now and then. We don’t see exactly how all of it is going to converge. We might speculate and guess. Patrick Buchanan has some speculations, which may play a factor. We will have to wait and see.

The next Bible study will end up our series on the book of Ezekiel. I hope that it will have been helpful in getting a little more insight into some of the prophecies that relate to our time and the time that’s ahead of us.

Major Prophets Series—Ezekiel 33—48

This evening we are concluding the book of Ezekiel. We are covering chapters 33—48.

This set of chapters contains two very key prophetic chapters (chapters 37 and 38) that we want to comment on. These are chapters that are almost totally misunderstood; frankly, if you look at the various commentaries and things, they are basically understood by any one.

Ezekiel 37 is a vision of the valley of dry bones. Virtually none of the commentators understand because it is only when you put it together with Romans 11 and Revelation 20 that we can understand the time setting. Ezekiel 37 describes the event, but it doesn't explain when. You have to go elsewhere in the Scriptures to understand when it happens. In fact, when is not really made plain until you come to the New Testament. It then makes it plain that Ezekiel 37 can only be referring to the period that we call the Great White Throne Judgment period.

Ezekiel 38 and 39 are also misapplied by virtually all of the commentators. This event happens after the Millennium has started, not prior to the beginning of the Millennium. In times past, many of the Fundamentalist preachers who like to comment on prophecy have tried to use Ezekiel 38 and 39 to preach about a war between the United States and Russia. They could identify that the Soviet Union is made reference to and constitutes portions of this prophecy. And that is true.

We are going to see that nations that make up so much of the Soviet Union, China and that area are certainly referred to in Ezekiel 38 and 39. Many of these commentators have made a big deal of the fact that there was going to be a big war between Russia and the United States. You don't hear them emphasizing that quite so much now because of the change in what is going on in the world. One of the reasons we never taught that was because we correctly understood the time element.

In Ezekiel 38, we're going to notice four key verses that make plain the time element. When you understand the time element, then you understand what this prophecy is talking about. When we simply take it at face value, the time setting is very clear.

Ezekiel 40—48 is a section seldom commented on. It presents a problem particularly to many of the commentators and various ones because there is a clear teaching in Ezekiel 40—48 that there is going to be a functioning Levitical priesthood, a temple and sacrifices during the Millennium. That may seem startling to some, but we are going to see that as we go through.

While some of the details of this section may not be completely understood at this time, it is clear that God is going to deal with the physical nation of Israel at the beginning of the Millennium to orient them physically to the law and to the covenant. The sacrifices will, evidently, serve as a schoolmaster for them (KJV, Galatians 3:24), as it was supposed to do for their forefathers.

It's kind of interesting. Even Jews "scratch their heads" when it comes to Ezekiel 40—48 because of some of the details that are mentioned. The Jewish Commentary dates the vision of Ezekiel 40—48 as the Day of Atonement, which began a Jubilee year. Whether that is true or not, the Bible doesn't say, but it certainly would be a very appropriate time for such a vision. The Jews solve their problems with this particular section by saying that only the prophet Elijah (who will usher the ultimate redemption) will elucidate these chapters. That is their comment on it. What they don't understand, they say the prophet Elijah will explain.

The reason they say the prophet Elijah is because of what it says in the end of the book of Malachi. Malachi 4:5-6, "Behold, I will send you the prophet Elijah before the coming of the great and dreadful day of the Lord. And he will turn the hearts of the fathers to the children, and the hearts of the children to the fathers, lest I come and strike the earth with a curse."

The Jews anticipate the fact that there will be one who comes fulfilling the role of the prophet Elijah and preparing the way for the Messiah. The issues that they don't understand, they say they will wait until Elijah comes and he will explain it. And then they pass on to something else.

There's quite a bit of what they don't know and have failed to recognize. They failed to recognize Elijah when he came and they failed to recognize the Messiah they herald. They have failed to recognize the second Elijah; the work of God that was raised up through Mr. Herbert Armstrong. They have failed to recognize that and they won't really grasp it until the time when the Messiah finally does come the second time.

We read in Zechariah 12:10, "...then they will look on Me whom they have pierced; they will mourn for Him as one mourns for his only son, and grieve for Him as one grieves for a firstborn.” They will repent. Then it will dawn on them what they did and Who this is who has come to save them from destruction. Then, at that point, things will be resolved.

Let’s pick it up this evening in Ezekiel 33. Ezekiel sets the stage, explaining the responsibility of the watchman. I’ve commented before on the symbolism of the watchman. The watchman is the one who was appointed to watch and to see what was going on. He was to stand up on the wall, to look and observe and sound the warning. Ezekiel was told throughout the book that he was being established as a watchman for the house of Israel.

We’ve already gone through the fact that Ezekiel did not fulfill that role in his day because Ezekiel did not personally go to all these various locations. Ezekiel did not do those things, and there is no way he could have. The job of taking Ezekiel’s message to those for whom it was intended was reserved for our time and our day.

He talks about the role of the watchman.

Ezekiel 33:7, “So you, son of man: I have made you a watchman for the house of Israel...” I went into quite a bit of that last time and the fact that Ezekiel did not go to the house of Israel in person. But his message has been preserved, and God raised up a work to go to the house of Israel. This was a commission that Mr. Herbert Armstrong very much understood. That’s why God revealed to him very, very early in the beginning of his conversion where the house of Israel was.

This was knowledge that the Sardis Church did not have and did not understand. Even though the leader of the Sardis Church—the Church that we identify as the Sardis era or stage in the progression of God’s Church described in Revelation 3:1-6—acknowledged in a letter to Mr. Herbert Armstrong (a letter that is reproduced in his autobiography) that this information (the identity of Israel) was true. But the leader refused to preach it for fear that everybody wouldn’t go along with it or accept it.

The point is that you can’t take a message to the house of Israel if you don’t know where the house of Israel is. God made plain the identity of the house of Israel. That was one of the things that He revealed to Mr. Herbert Armstrong very early in the very beginning of his conversion. This message began to be taken and proclaimed.

Verses 8-9, God says in terms of the message to the watchman, “When I say to the wicked, “O wicked man, you shall surely die!” and you do not speak to warn the wicked from his way, that wicked man shall die in his iniquity; but his blood I will require at your hand. Nevertheless if you warn the wicked to turn from his way, and he does not turn from his way, he shall die in his iniquity; but you have delivered your soul.”

I think it is important for us to realize as individuals and as a Church that we have a responsibility for which God will hold us accountable. There are things that are going to happen to this nation. It is important that we put our hearts into the accomplishment and the fulfillment of the work that God has set before us because we are ultimately responsible for warning. We are not responsible for results because we can’t control someone else’s results. This is important just in terms of the principle of recognizing responsibility.

Some people find themselves perpetually frustrated because they can’t get others to respond in the way they want them to. This can be in their families or in various circumstances of human relations. God makes it plain that we are responsible for doing our part, but we are not responsible for how someone else responds to what we have done. We can’t control that. The watchman is responsible for delivering the message, but he is not responsible for the response.

What was Ezekiel commissioned to do?

Verse 7, Ezekiel was commissioned as a watchman to the house of Israel. He was not sent to the house of Judah but Israel. Historically, Ezekiel never delivered the message to the people for whom it was intended. This was something that began to be done by Mr. Herbert Armstrong in our day, back in the 1930s, 40s, 50s, 60s, 70s and on up into the 80s. It is the work of God that continues right on down until now. The job of taking the message of God to the world is a job for us today because Ezekiel never delivered that message. That message was preserved. It was preserved for a warning for our time, the end time.

People are going to have a certain attitude towards this work.

It is described in v. 30, “As for you, son of man, the children of your people are talking about you beside the walls and in the doors of the houses; and they speak to one another, everyone saying to his brother, “Please come and hear what the word is that comes from the Lord.””

I am convinced that there are some things that have yet to happen in terms of the impact of this work. God is going to open the appropriate doors at the appropriate time. What we have to be doing is to make sure that we are doing our part. God is going to accomplish these things. Even if He has to raise up stones to do it, He would (Luke 3:8), but He has given us the opportunity to be His instruments. If we fail to do our part, we're not going to prevent God from accomplishing what He purposed (Isaiah 46:10-11).

We will simply have failed to heed the warning in Revelation 3:11, "...let no man take your crown." God has called us to do His work. He gives us the opportunity to have a part of it, and if we don't do it, He will get it done. But woe be to us, if we don't carry out the responsibility we have.

He speaks of a time when we are going to be the talk of the land. I think there is going to come a time, prior to the on-set of the tribulation, when the message is going to really go forth in greater power, and it's going to be the talk of the land.

Ezekiel 33:31-32, "So they come to you as people do, they sit before you as My people, and they hear your words, but they do not do them; for with their mouth they show much love, but their hearts pursue their own gain. Indeed you are to them as a very lovely song of one who has a pleasant voice and can play well on an instrument; for they hear your words, but they do not do them."

This has partially been fulfilled. There were a lot of people who listened to Mr. Herbert Armstrong and said they liked to hear that old man; they listened to him for thirty years. They never did anything he said, but they liked to hear him. They liked to read what he wrote. It's like somebody singing a pleasant song and has a nice voice. They say, 'That's a nice program,' but they don't act on it. They don't do anything with it.

The time is going to come when we are going to be even more talked about. It talks about the fact that everything is going to be "abuzz." We're going to be a subject of a lot of conversation. But, for the most part, people are not really going to be doing anything. They'll be excited about it in certain ways. It will have their interest and attention but not in a way that they are going to act on it.

Verse 33, "And when this comes to pass—and it will come—then they will know that a prophet has been among them."

That is very much the case. The time is going to come when the whole world is going to recognize that Mr. Herbert Armstrong really was God's true servant. The basic content of the booklets that he wrote, Who is the Beast? and

The United States and Britain in Prophecy, were written in the 1930s. Actually, he began writing on the subject even in the 1920s. Some of those things were first published in the 1930s. I have seen a copy of a 1935 article that he wrote. The magazine had in it the chart on "Who is the Beast?" It was the exact same chart that's in our booklet today.

The layout that is used in our booklet today was hand drawn on a mimeograph stencil. I went through and I checked and compared it; there is only one difference. You know what it is? It's where it says the sixth head. If you will look in our modern booklet, Garibaldi's reunification of Italy culminating in Mussolini is dated from 1871 to 1945 with the collapse of Mussolini. In the 1935 magazine, it had all of that except it didn't have the date 1945. That was ten years in the future. It had "1871-19__" because we didn't know the year when the sixth head was going to end. That is the only difference. Ten years later he could fill in the year. That is the only change that's been made in the chart.

The point is that the core information of The United States and Britain in Prophecy was published back in the 1930s in some of the very first magazines that came out. It was information that is the heart and core of a lot of what Ezekiel has to say.

Ezekiel 33:33, "And when this comes to pass—and surely it will come—then they will know that a prophet has been among them." They are not entirely acknowledging that yet. Though, interestingly enough, as we begin the Feast of Tabernacles after sunset on October 3, that will not only see the beginning of the Feast of Tabernacles, it's also going to see the beginning of the new unified Germany. They are uniting October 3. Interesting! It was a year ago at the Feast that the wall began to come down. Remember that? How much has happened in the year!

Remember a year ago they were interviewing all the experts and they were saying, 'This doesn't mean that Germany will reunify. This does not mean that at all. And if it does, it is far off—maybe somewhere after the year 2,000 if possible—maybe ten, twelve, fifteen, twenty years is the possibility. Most of the experts don't think it will happen at all.' A year later and it's done. Now who were the experts?

I can show you whole magazines of articles Mr. Herbert Armstrong wrote that go way back. Some of you have copies of them. Who were the experts? Well, time is going to come when they are to know that God's message has been proclaimed.

In Ezekiel 34, we have an indictment to the leadership of the land.

Verses 1-10, it shows that those responsible for overseeing the people of Israel have been motivated by personal greed and have not properly carried out their responsibility. It says, "the shepherds of Israel." We think of that sometimes in the sense of "pastor" because the word for "shepherd" and "pastor" are the same word. But the "shepherds of Israel" can also refer in the national sense as well. Certainly, here "the shepherds of Israel" would refer to the leaders of Israel.

In v. 31, Israel is described as the sheep of God's pasture, "You are My flock, the flock of My pasture...." God says, 'This is My flock, My sheep.'

The shepherds are those who are supposed to attend the sheep. God indicts the leadership of the land.

Verse 2, "... 'Woe to the shepherds of Israel who feed themselves! Should not the shepherds feed the flock?'" They have not given help to those who needed it.

Verse 4, "...but with force and cruelty you have ruled them."

Verses 5-6, "So they were scattered because there was no shepherd; and they became food for all the beasts of the field when they were scattered. My sheep wandered through all the mountains, and on every high hill; yes, My flock was scattered over the whole face of the earth, and no one was seeking or searching for them."

Verse 8, "...because there was no shepherd, nor did My shepherds search for My flock, but the shepherds fed themselves and did not feed My flock."

Verses 10-12, God is going to deal with the shepherds. He is going to seek out His sheep.

Verse 13, "And I will bring them out from the peoples and gather them from the countries, and will bring them to their own land; I will feed them on the mountains of Israel, in the valleys and in all the inhabited places of the country."

Verses 23-24, "I will establish one shepherd over them, and he shall feed them—My servant David. He shall feed them and be their shepherd. And I, the Lord, will be their God, and My servant David a prince among them; I, the Lord, have spoken."

If you go through the chapter and check the context, it is clear that the main emphasis is national Israel. God's people, nationally—Israel. His sheep, nationally, are scattered among the nations. God is going to re-gather His sheep. This time He says, 'You know, the shepherds they have had have not been faithful shepherds. But I know one I can depend on to properly shepherd My sheep because he was a good shepherd.' It's interesting the way God prepared David to be king over all of Israel in Tomorrow's World. What training did God give David before He made him king? He made him a shepherd! That's important to understand because that tells us the concept God has as far as how He wants His government administered.

David learned how to administer God's government by being a shepherd. It taught him many things. The sheep need to be protected. There was a time for action, decisiveness, for boldness. They needed to be nurtured, guided and dealt with. You don't deal with sheep in a harsh cruel way. You don't go around just knocking sheep around. There may be lions and bears that need to be knocked around. David wasn't averse to doing that (I Samuel 17:34-36). You have to deal with sheep in one way and goats another. There's a difference.

God likens His people to sheep because sheep will follow. Goats don't have the same proclivity; goats tend to want to go their own way. They have to be dealt with a little differently. God compares His people to sheep because they are seeking to follow the Shepherd. If we're not seeking to follow the Shepherd, then there's a question raised as to whether we're God's sheep. Christ said, 'My sheep hear My voice' (John 10:3-4).

Ezekiel 34 indicts the shepherds of Israel, those who were responsible for tending God's flock. He says, 'You haven't done a good job. You haven't been faithful in tending My flock. You've been greedy and selfish and out to take care of yourself. You've allowed My sheep to be scattered. I am going to re-gather them and I'm going to set a shepherd over them who will take care of them.' King David, resurrected, is going to be king over all of Israel in Tomorrow's World.

Verses 23-24 clearly show who the national leader of Israel is going to be in Tomorrow's World.

Ezekiel 35:2, "Son of man, set your face against Mount Seir and prophesy against it."

Verse 15, Mount Seir is a symbol of the Edomites.

Verse 3, "I will make you most desolate." Mount Seir is going to be made desolate. We find there are reasons for that as it talks about the things that are going to happen.

This describes both events of past history and, I think, events that we are going to see in the time ahead of us.

In Ezekiel 36, we focus in on events in the land of Israel when God re-gathers Israel.

Ezekiel 36:19, “So I scattered them among the nations, and they were dispersed throughout the countries; I judged them according to their ways and their deeds.”

Verse 24, “For I will take you from among the nations, gather you out of all countries, and bring you into your own land.” This is after the return of the Messiah.

Verses 25-28, “Then I will sprinkle clean water on you, and you shall be clean; I will cleanse you from all your filthiness and from all your idols. I will give you a new heart and put a new spirit within you; I will take the heart of stone out of your flesh and give you a heart of flesh. I will put My Spirit within you and cause you to walk in My statutes, and you will keep My judgments and do them. Then you shall dwell in the land that I gave to your fathers; you shall be My people and I will be your God.”

This is a section that has been frequently misunderstood because most of those who claim to preach the word of God do not understand the identity of modern Israel. When they read of “Israel,” they think simply of the nation of the Jews in the Middle East—the nation that calls itself “Israel” today. Many of them focused in on this and said, ‘This prophecy has been fulfilled. God has gathered Israel out of the nations.’

Verse 24, “...gather you out of all countries and bring you into your own land.” They claim that the founding of the modern state of Israel was the fulfillment of that. That’s not true. That was not the re-gathering of the house of Israel. That was the re-gathering of the house of Judah. The re-gathering of the house of Judah is prophesied elsewhere. It’s prophesied in Zechariah 8, among other places.

The proof that Ezekiel 36 is not talking about Judah is the fact that in vv. 26-28, it tells that when God brings Israel out of the nations and brings them back, He is going to convert them. ‘I am going to put a new heart in you and a new spirit. I am going to put My Spirit in you. I will convert you.’ Now the modern nation of the Jews is certainly not a converted nation. They don’t claim to be. Less than half of them are even observant Jews; the other half isn’t even that much. We have a description here of conversion. To take these scriptures in Ezekiel 36 and try to apply it to the modern state of Israel is to take it out of its context. That’s not true.

They will pick out certain verses like vv. 33-34, “...ruins will be rebuilt. The desolate land shall be tilled instead of lying desolate...” They say that’s what they are doing over in Israel now. They are going in and irrigating some of the desert area. They may be doing that, but this isn’t the prophecy of that. This is talking about something else.

Verse 36, “Then the nations which are left all around you shall know that I, the Lord, have rebuilt the ruined places and planted what was desolate. I, the Lord, have spoken it, I will do it.”

Verse 38, “Like a flock offered as holy sacrifices, like the flock at Jerusalem on its feast days, so shall the ruined cities be filled with flocks of men. Then they shall know that I am the Lord.” This is prophecy of yet future events.

Ezekiel 37:1, “The hand of the Lord came upon me and brought me out in the Spirit of the Lord, and set me down in the midst of the valley; and it was full of bones.” Here were these dry bones.

Verses 4-7, “Again He said to me. ‘Prophesy to these bones, and say to them, ‘O dry bones, hear the word of the Lord! Thus says the Lord God to these bones: ‘Surely I will cause breath to enter into you, and you shall live. I will put sinews on you and bring flesh upon you, cover you with skin and put breath in you; and you shall live. Then you shall know that I am the Lord.’” So I prophesied as I was commanded; and as I prophesied, there was a noise, and suddenly a rattling; and the bones came together, bone to bone.”

You’ve heard the song, “the leg bone connected to the hip bone.” Well, bone came together, bone to his bone—all the bones. Ezekiel sees this in a vision. He looks down and at first all he sees is like a giant graveyard. He sees all these bones lying out there, and it’s not people. It’s like you would unearth a giant graveyard. He makes a prophecy. All of a sudden these bones are rattling and shaking; all these bones are coming together bone to his bone—everyone connecting up.

Then He says in v. 8, “Indeed, as I looked, the sinews and the flesh came upon them and the skin covered them over; but there was no breath in them.” All of a sudden, where had been a graveyard, now it looked like a valley of corpses. There’s no breath. Everything’s dead.

Verses 9-10, “Then He said to me, ‘Prophesy to the breath, prophesy, son of man, and say to the breath, “Thus says the Lord God: ‘Come from the four winds, O breath, and breathe on these slain, that they may live.’” So I prophesied as He commanded me, and breath came into them, and they lived, and stood upon their feet, an exceedingly great army.”

A great multitude, a gigantic number of people stood up alive.

Verses 11-12, “Then He said to me, ‘Son of man, these bones are the whole house of Israel. They indeed say, “Our bones are dry, our hope is lost, and we ourselves are cut off.” Therefore prophesy and say to them. “Thus says the Lord God: ‘Behold, O My people, I will open your graves and cause you to come up from your graves, and bring you into the land of Israel.’””

Here is a resurrection, but it is a physical resurrection to flesh and blood life. Here are people who are resurrected to physical life. They are brought up out of their graves and brought back to the land of Israel.

After this occurs, v. 13, “““Then you shall know that I am the Lord, when I have opened your graves, O My people, and brought you up from your graves.””” Here is a group of people who were not converted prior to the time of their death. These are not those who were Christ’s at His coming (I Corinthians 15:23). They are going to know that God is God after He’s opened their graves and brought them up. Here are people who are not going to learn the truth until after the resurrection.

Verse 14, “““I will put My Spirit in you, and you shall live, and I will place you in your own land. Then you shall know that I, the Lord, have spoken it and performed it,” says the Lord.”””

It’s going to be the time when Judah and Israel will be joined together.

Verses 16-17, ““As for you, son of man, take a stick for yourself and write on it: “For Judah and for the children of Israel, his companions.” Then take another stick and write on it, “For Joseph, the stick of Ephraim, and for all the house of Israel, his companions.” Then join them one to another for yourself into one stick, and they will become one in your hand.””

It’s going to be a time when Judah and Israel will be joined back together. There are those who want to say the ten tribes don’t exist anymore, that they are among the Jews. Well, according to Ezekiel 37:16-17, Judah and Israel aren’t going to be reunited until after the resurrection. That’s not going to occur until afterwards. Now, if the resurrection has already occurred, then I think it would have made a little bit of a “splash” with all the bones of the whole house of Israel coming together and this gigantic multitude standing up in a great graveyard somewhere. I think that would have been hard to have happened without somebody hearing it. So, I don’t think that’s happened yet.

Verses 16-17 make plain when it’s going to happen.

Verse 24 makes plain that it’s the time when David is going to be king over them.

Verse 24, ““David My servant shall be king over them, and they shall all have one shepherd; they shall also walk in My judgments and observe My statutes, and do them.””

Ezekiel makes plain that God will resurrect those who have not had their chance for salvation to a physical life and give them a chance for salvation. The time setting is the White Throne Judgment after the Millennium.

It says in vv. 12-13, “““...I will open your graves and cause you to come up from your graves, and bring you into the land of Israel...Then you shall know that I am the Lord...”””

Hold your place there in Ezekiel, and let’s notice Romans 11:1-2, “I say then, has God cast away His people? Certainly not! For I also am an Israelite, of the seed of Abraham, of the tribe of Benjamin. God has not cast away His people whom He foreknew...”

Verses 25-26 (the last part of the verse), “...hardening (KJV, “blindness”) in part has happened to Israel until the fullness of the Gentiles has come in. And so all Israel will be saved...” There’s a future day of salvation. There is a time when all Israel will be saved. Right now they are blinded. God has not cast away His people whom He foreknew.

Ezekiel 37:11, ““... “Our bones are dry, our hope is lost, and we ourselves are cut off!”””

‘Our hope is over with. We don’t have any hope.’ Here it describes a people for whom it, seemingly, is all over with. They are dead. They are in the grave. Their hope is lost. God says, ‘No, I am going to open your graves and bring you out of the graves. Then I am going to bring you to the land of Israel. Then I am going to let you know the truth.’

Romans 11:2, “God hasn’t cast away His people that He foreknew.”

Verse 26, “All Israel will be saved.” When you put Romans 11 together with Ezekiel 37, the event of which he is speaking is plain. And when you put that together with Revelation 20, you get the time setting.

Revelation 20:6, “Blessed and holy is he who has part in the first resurrection. Over such the second death has no power, but they shall be priests of God and of Christ, and shall reign with Him a thousand years.” Those who are in the first resurrection are blessed and holy. They are going to rule and reign with Christ for a thousand years.

Verse 5, “But the rest of the dead did not live again until the thousand years were finished....” Those who were Christ’s at His coming are blessed and holy. They are going to be in the first resurrection. They are going to rule and reign with Christ a thousand years. The rest of the dead doesn’t live until after the thousand years are over. What about the rest of the dead?

Revelation 20:12, “And I saw the dead, small and great, standing before God, and books were opened. And another book was opened, which is the Book of Life....”

In v. 13, we find that whether these people were buried in the sea or whether they were buried in graves, wherever they were, they came up. Nobody is buried somewhere that God can’t find them. They may be in an unmarked grave.

I think we have a few here who were on our Washington trip. While we were there, we went to Arlington Cemetery. There was row, after row, after row—thousands of graves. And one of the graves that we saw was the tomb of the “Unknown Soldier.” There is an inscription that says, “Here lies the Unknown Soldier, known but to God.” —A nameless young man who died somewhere sometime during the course of World War II or World War I or the various wars in which the nation has been involved. A young man who was unable to be identified is buried there. That’s right, but God does know.

There are millions and billions of graves that have long since been lost on the face of this earth that are known but to God. God does know and God does remember. “All the dead, small and great.” —Those whose graves have been marked and preserved, for those whom monuments have been erected and their graves have been known for hundreds and maybe thousands of years, and for those whose remains have been lost and whose memory is long since gone. All of them, small and great, are dead.

Revelation 20:12, “And I saw the dead, small and great, standing before God [All of them are going to stand before God.] and books were opened. And another book was opened, which is the Book of Life. And the dead were judged according to their works, by the things which were written in the books.” This is the time spoken of in Ezekiel 37.

We could go to Matthew 12:41 where Christ talked about the men of Nineveh rising in the judgment with this generation. There is going to come a time when all the dead, small and great, are going to be judged.

Acts 10:34, “...‘God shows no partiality.’” KJV, “God is not a respecter of persons.” Because God tells us He is no respecter of persons, if He is going to give all Israel a chance to be saved, then He is also going to give all mankind a chance to be saved.

Christ made that plain in Matthew 12:41 when He talked about the men of Nineveh standing in the judgment with this generation. Matthew 10:15, the inhabitants of Sodom and Gomorrah and Matthew 12:42, the Queen of the South is going to rise up in the judgment with this generation—all the dead small and great. You have to put these things together with Ezekiel 37 to understand the time setting. If we just take it literally for what it says, it makes the time setting that we have very plain.

Ezekiel 38:1-2, “Now the word of the Lord came to me, saying, ‘Son of man, set your face against Gog of the land of Magog, the prince of Rosh, Meshech, and Tubal, and prophesy against him.’”

It has been recognized by many commentators that Magog was the ancestor of the Mongol peoples, the Asiatic groupings of people. Recently, a lot of attention has been paid to the fact that the Soviet Union is comprised of many groupings of people. There are actually three branches of Russians: The Great Russians, the Little Russians and the White Russians. There is White Russia or Belorussia, as it is sometimes called. The Ukrainians will sometimes use the term “Little Russia.” Then there are those who are called Great Russia, which is Russia proper. There are actually two branches of the Great Russians: the Moscow branch and the Talalsk branch, which are designated here by Meshech and Tubal. So, what we have is a reference to a group of people that include many of the Russians and Mongol peoples.

Verses 3-5, “‘and say, “Thus says the Lord God: ‘Behold, I am against you, O Gog, the prince of Rosh, Meshech and Tubal. I will turn you around, put hooks into your jaws, and lead you out, with all your army, horses, and horsemen, all splendidly clothed, a great company with bucklers and shields, all of them handling swords. Persia, Ethiopia, Libya are with them, all of them with shield and helmet.’””

They are allied with them. The KJV and NKJV render it Persia, Ethiopia and Libya. Ethiopia and Libya are both interpretations. The names in Hebrew are simply Cush and Put. Cush frequently refers to Ethiopia. The Ethiopians are descended from Cush. But there are two branches of Cushites: an Eastern branch and a Western branch. The context clearly shows that it refers to the Eastern branch of the Cushites and Putites.

The Eastern Cushites are in the area of Northern India. That is why you find the Hindu Kush Mountain range there. There is quite a bit of traffic between India and Egypt of ancient date. The religion of India, the sacred cow and all of this, derived from the religion of Egypt. The worship of the golden calf and all this sort of thing derived from Egypt. Even the so-called Gypsy people migrated to India from Egypt. The term "Gypsy" comes from "Egyptian." That went back in antiquity. There were Eastern and Western Cushites. The Western Cushites are in the area of Ethiopia. The Eastern Cushites are in the area of Northern India.

Again, there is an Eastern and Western branch of Put. Most of Central and South Africa trace descent back to Put. Also, the people of Southern India trace descent back to Put. The ruling class in Southern India was called "rajput," which literally meant "the ruler over Put."

Persia certainly could refer to the area of Iran as some of the Persian people.

Verse 6, "Gomer and all its troops; the house of Togarmah from the far north..." Togarmah would refer to some of the area up in Siberia. Gomer basically refers to the area of Indo-China, perhaps some of the area of Tibet and down into Korea. That area would include Gomer. What we have is clearly a conglomeration of people, basically an Asiatic alliance—a grouping that would be China, India, Indo-China and much of Russia.

We're not the only ones who can figure out where most of these identifications are. Much of this is historical, and many of the commentators have understood some of this, as to whom some of these peoples are that we are talking about. They looked at that and said, 'Russia and China and all that area—sounds like the communists are going to take over the whole East and are going to come and invade Israel [which they, of course, identify with the modern Jewish state].' Then later on it talks about fire being sent on Magog, so they say, 'There is going to be a great nuclear war and Russia is going to get defeated.' They have tried to identify this with Armageddon and various things.

This is a great Eastern conglomerate of peoples that would include China, India and much of what is now the Soviet Union. But notice the time setting.

Verses 8-12, "After many days you will be visited. In the latter years you will come into the land of those brought back from the sword and gathered from many people on the mountains of Israel, which had long been desolate; they were brought out of the nations, and now all of them dwell safely. You will ascend, coming like a storm, covering the land like a cloud, you and all your troops and many peoples with you.' Thus says the Lord God: 'On that day it shall come to pass that thoughts will arise in your mind, and you will make an evil plan: You will say, "I will go up against a land of unwallled villages; I will go to a peaceful people, who dwells safely, all of them dwelling without walls, and have neither bars nor gates"— to take plunder and to take booty, to stretch out your hand against the waste places that are again inhabited, and against a people gathered from the nations, who have acquired livestock and goods, who dwell in the midst of the land.'"

This is a time when God's people will dwell safely. The land of Israel is called the land of unwallled villages. They are dwelling without walls, having neither bars nor gates.

I am going to tell you something; that's not at all descriptive of modern-day state of Israel. They are certainly not a land of unwallled villages, and if there is anybody who is prepared for war, they are. They're stocked up on all the modern weapons and armaments. They are anything but an unwallled village.

The time setting is very clear. It's talking about the time after the beginning of the Millennium—a time after Israel has been re-gathered from the nations and has begun to prosper. It is a time when Israel is dwelling safely and at peace in their unwallled villages. There isn't any outward evidence of armaments of protection. There are not even locks on the doors.

Can you imagine not even having to put locks on the doors? No keys! The job of locksmith is going to be phased out in the early part of the Millennium. It's not a job that can be phased out today. What if no one ever broke the eighth commandment and nobody would steal. If you lived in a society where there wasn't any stealing, what would you need locks for? You could leave something anywhere you wanted to, and nobody would take it because it didn't belong to him—unless he thought you lost it and was going to bring it back to you. It is descriptive of a society that is a total contrast to our society.

Some of you grew up, as I did, in some of the rural areas in a time when we were virtually a land of unwallled villages. I remember as a kid growing up that the lock on our front door didn't work. I don't know when my parents finally got it repaired, but I never remember it working all the time I was growing up. If somebody wanted to walk in, I guess they could have—the lock never worked. We never worried about it, never gave any thought to it. We weren't unique in that. For a lot of you, the most secure lock you had was the little hook and eye on the screen door. That was more to keep the cat and dog out.

It was a situation that was a total contrast to our society today. It is a time when Israel is re-gathered and the land is prospering and blooming. What we are looking at is a period after the beginning of the Millennium because when Christ comes back, the government of God is not just instantly spread over the whole earth. The first thing He is going to do is re-gather Israel. You have to start somewhere.

Some of the prophecies we went through back in Isaiah show that, at the very beginning, certain areas (for instance down in East Africa) are going to send up emissaries and are going to want God's government extended to them. It will. But in some of these other areas, it's going to take a little while.

Now, here's a case where some who have gone through the devastation of the events that accompany the return of Christ, two or three years into the Millennium, are going to hear about the prosperity that is beginning to take place. They are going to decide they are going to come down and take it. They will say, 'Those people are defenseless and we are just going to come down there and get it.' The pendulum swing of human nature!

It's interesting what we have now, particularly in the Soviet Union. There was the attempt toward atheistic communism that has proven to be "the god that failed." There is now the beginning of a swing back and there may very well be some sort of an alliance with Europe. I think it's going to be interesting to view the role of the pope.

Are you aware that for the last several years, Pope John Paul talks weekly with both President Bush and President Gorbachev? He has weekly conversations with them. He talks with Mr. Gorbachev in the Russian language and with President Bush in English because he is multi-lingual. There isn't any need for translators. It's a one-on-one conversation; it's private phone conversations.

A year ago when all the upheaval was going on in Europe, he was on the phone for hours every day with Gorbachev discussing the situation. There was an article in U.S. News & World Report that went into a little bit of the background on that. The pope played a very important role in calming the situation in Lithuania. When Gorbachev was having all the upheaval, you noticed how everything settled down in Lithuania? Remember back when it looked like Russia was almost at the point of civil war. Things kind of settled down, and you didn't hear anything about Lithuania. You know who settled it down? The pope did. You see, Lithuanians are Catholic. All he had to do was put in a call to the Catholic archbishop of Lithuania and tell him what was going to be done in Lithuania. All of a sudden, things settled down in Lithuania. There's a lot that goes on behind the scenes. It was an interesting little article in U.S. News several weeks ago.

The point is that, now, there is a swing, and I think it's going to be interesting to see the things that are going to happen in the Soviet Union. But you will see there is going to be another pendulum swing because as they come into an orbit more aligned with Western Europe, once again they are going to realize they've "been had."

Read the book of Revelation and find the ten kings who give their power to the beast. When they realize they've "been had," it says they are going to hate the whore and are going to turn on her and make her desolate. You read it in Revelation 17:16. The pendulum swings back and here are people who are embittered about the swing back. This mentality is going to lead to this invasion.

The point is finally going to get across. They are going to come face to face with the true God. The time setting is shown if you just read Ezekiel 38 and take it literally for what it says.

Ezekiel 39:2 (KJV), "and I will turn you back, and leave but the sixth part of you, and will cause you to come up from the north parts, and will bring you upon the mountains of Israel." It shows that only a sixth part of this army is going to survive the invasion. This small portion will be left to go back and bring the facts back to the "bunch" at home.

The population at the beginning of the Millennium will have been drastically reduced, but that is going to serve its purpose because most of humanity is going to be dealt with after a thousand years of preparation. The population of these various nations at the beginning of the Millennium is going to be very small, just a handful. But that's really the best way to deal with it. It's best to start with a small nucleus to begin to build; then you have a thousand years to build it the right way and get prepared to handle the greatest population explosion in man's history. You have time to prepare.

You start with a small group. You can educate them and you can build. The families expand. The earth and its resources have time to rest, to rejuvenate, and then it comes together. There are lessons that have to be learned and God allows those lessons to be learned. God has a plan and an overview. He is working toward a conclusion and there is logic and simplicity to God's plan.

Verse 12, "For seven months the house of Israel will be burying them, in order to cleanse the land." It's going to be a mammoth job. The physical people of Israel are going to be left there trying to clean it up. It's going to take a long time to clean up everything. While they are out tending to all of this, they are going to be reminded of what happens if you rebel against God. It's not a really smart thing, and this will help to impress it on them.

The consequence of this, vv. 21-24, "I will set My glory among the nations; all the nations shall see My judgment which I have laid on them. So the house of Israel shall know that I am the Lord their God from that day forward. The Gentiles shall know that the house of Israel went into captivity for their iniquity; because they were unfaithful to Me, therefore I hid My face from them. I gave them into the hand of their enemies, and they all fell by the sword. According to their uncleanness and according to their transgressions I have dealt with them, and hidden My face from them."

Verses 28-29, "then they shall know that I am the Lord their God, who sent them into captivity among the nations, but also brought them back to their own land, and left none of them captive any longer. And I will not hide My face from them anymore; for I shall have poured out My Spirit on the house of Israel," says the Lord God."

Israel is going to learn this and the nations around are going to learn this. What lesson will the surviving Gentiles learn from all this? They are going to learn that the God of Israel is the true God and that Israel went into captivity because of transgressing God's laws.

Ezekiel 40—48 describe the topography of Israel after Christ returns. The time setting of the city and the temple is described.

Ezekiel 43:5-9, "The Spirit lifted me up and brought me into the inner court; and behold, the glory of the Lord filled the temple. Then I heard Him speaking to me from the temple, while a man stood beside me. And He said to me, 'Son of man, this is the place of My throne and the place of the soles of My feet, where I will dwell in the midst of the children of Israel forever. No more shall the house of Israel defile My holy name, they nor their kings, by their harlotry or with the carcasses of their kings on their high places. When they set their threshold by My threshold, and their doorpost by My doorpost, with a wall between them and Me, they defiled My Holy name by the abominations which they committed; therefore I have consumed them in My anger. Now let them put their harlotry and the carcasses of their kings far away from Me, and I will dwell in their midst forever.'"

It is a time when His throne will be there and 'I will dwell in the midst of the house of Israel forever.' It is a time when they will no more defile God's holy name. What we are looking at is a future time, a time that will only occur after the coming of the Messiah. We see the time setting for these chapters. It is a prophecy.

Let's notice that one of the problems that the commentators have is that the description of the temple in Ezekiel 40—48 differs from Solomon's temple. It is not an exact description of Solomon's temple. It's clear that Solomon's temple was not exactly like the one described here. And the temple of Zerubbabel / Herod were not exactly like this. Some of the commentators really "scratch their heads" and try to figure out which temple Ezekiel was describing. The point is that he wasn't describing any of the above. He was describing the temple that is going to be built after the return of Christ. The reason they don't have one like that is because Christ hasn't returned yet and it hasn't been built. We have to look at it in terms of the time setting.

Now there are similarities. Some of the commentators want to go back and say there are discrepancies in what Ezekiel says, in what we read back in Kings or Chronicles in terms of Solomon's temple. They are not discrepancies. Ezekiel is not describing Solomon's temple. He is describing the temple that the Messiah is going to build after His return. It's a time when, Ezekiel 43:7, the Messiah will dwell in the midst of Israel forever and His throne will be there. Ezekiel is writing at a time when Solomon's temple was at the verge of being destroyed. Ezekiel knew what Solomon's temple looked like. He wasn't trying to describe that. He was talking about something future.

Let's notice that there will be sacrifices offered and a functioning Levitical priesthood during this time.

Ezekiel 40:38-39, "There was a chamber and its entrance by the gateposts of the gateway, where they washed the burnt offering. In the vestibule of the gateway were two tables on this side and two tables on that side, on which to slay the burnt offering, the sin offering, and the trespass offering."

Verses 45-46, "Then he said to me, 'This chamber which faces south is for the priests who have charge of the temple. The chamber which faces north is for the priests who have charge of the altar; these are the sons of Zadok, from the sons of Levi, who come near the Lord to minister to Him.'" These verses clearly show that there will be a functioning Levitical priesthood offering sacrifices during the Millennium. One way to understand it is that there will be ceremonies of state. Israel will be both a nation and a Church.

Today God's Church is not a civil nation. We are not a nation in the sense of a civil government. We are citizens of the Kingdom of heaven, but we are residents of many different nation states. We live under the jurisdiction of various human governments. But when the Kingdom of God is established on earth, there will need to be certain protocol, certain ceremonies of state, to orient the whole world toward Jerusalem, toward the functioning of the government. There will be certain protocol, certain pomp and circumstance, certain things that are identified with an identifiable government—the Kingdom of God. There will be certain things to orient the whole world toward the world capital at Jerusalem and the things that go on there.

The role of the Levitical priesthood and what they are going to do is certainly not to atone for sin. Jesus Christ has offered one sacrifice for sin forever. But there are certain ceremonies of state that will be performed that will serve to emphasize certain lessons and certain principles.

Today, various nations have certain ceremonies and certain protocol that is observed. If you go to London, you want to see the changing of the guard at Buckingham Palace. There's certain ceremonies of state that take place that create a sense of reverence and awe and respect for the nation and for the things that the nation symbolizes. There are certain outward manifestations and ceremonies that take place that keep people oriented in that way.

This will also be in the time when the Kingdom of God will be holding sway because the Kingdom of God will be ruling over physical human beings who need to be oriented toward the one government. People will need to be oriented toward the one-world capital in Jerusalem and toward God's government. There will be a functioning priesthood that is established. There will be a functioning capital there in Jerusalem. A temple will be built that will have in it the throne on which Jesus Christ will sit (the throne of David) from which He will rule the world. There will be various things that take place. It describes certain of the things that will be carried out by physical human beings. We find emphasis of that.

Ezekiel 40, 41 and 42 describe the temple itself. There is a reference in various places in the book of Ezekiel to the prince of Israel. When you go through Ezekiel, it talks about the portion that pertains to the prince. It's very clear that this is a human leader who will function under spirit beings.

Ezekiel 44:1-3, "Then He brought me back to the outer gate of the sanctuary which faces toward the east, but it was shut. And the Lord said to me, 'This gate shall be shut; it shall not be opened, and no man shall enter by it, because the Lord God of Israel has entered by it; therefore it shall be shut. As for the prince [KJV, "It is for the prince"], because he is the prince, he may sit in it to eat bread before the Lord; he shall enter by way of the vestibule of the gateway, and go out the same way.'" It goes on and talks about the things that are going to take place.

There are more descriptions here. It describes the land around about and how some of it is going to be allocated.

Ezekiel 45:4, "It shall be a holy portion of the land, belonging to the priests, the ministers of the sanctuary, who come near to minister to the Lord; it shall be a place for their houses and a holy place for the sanctuary."

Verse 7, "The prince shall have a portion on one side and the other of the holy district..."

In vv. 16-17, it talks about the prince of Israel and what the prince will do in terms of providing certain things for burnt offerings. Various things are going to be done in that way. You can go through the details of it.

Ezekiel 47 and 48 describe some of the layout of the land. When you go through and read of the portion for the prince and the prince's sons, it's clear that we are talking about a human leader

(let's say a human heir to the throne of David), just as the human physical descendants of Levi will be occupying a position of responsibility there. The continuation of David's physical lineage will be carrying out on a human level certain responsibilities and ceremonies of state and certain things that are allocated out. There is a restoration in the time of the Millennium of things that will enable the world to function. The world will be looking to God's government as a literal functioning government.

There are several things that we might want to note as we conclude. This is important to note.

Ezekiel 41:23-24, "The temple and the sanctuary had two doors. The doors had two panels apiece, two folding panels: two panels for one door and two panels for the other door." What it describes is doors, not the veil that had always been blocking the entrance from the Holy Place into the Holy of Holies.

Remember the veil that was torn at the death of Christ (Matthew 27:51). The tabernacle and later the temple had a veil that cut off access to the Holy of Holies. In the Millennium, the temple will not have a veil. There's going to be a set of folding doors that are going to slide back and forth, indicating ready and easy access into the presence of God. The future temple won't have the heavy veil blocking entrance to the Holy of Holies and symbolically blocking direct access to God. Rather, there will be doors that open to give easy access. That's why a different symbol is used.

Notice something very mundane; God spells out every detail. A lot of these were regulations that the ancient priesthood operated under.

Ezekiel 44:20 (KJV), "Neither shall they shave their heads, nor allow their locks to grow long; they shall only poll their heads." They weren't to shave their heads like the priests of Egypt. They weren't to allow their hair to grow long, as some of the surrounding nations practiced. They were to poll their heads.

Now, if you look up that word, you find that they were to get what we would think of as simply a normal masculine haircut. The term "poll" refers to the shape of the head. There's a breed of cattle known as polled Herefords. The reason they are called that is because they don't have horns. You talk about a poll tax. The term "poll" means head and, in that sense, when you refer to cattle being polled, it means that there is nothing coming out from the head. That is simply the shape of the head and nothing coming out.

When it was used here in the context of the priests, it meant that the priests wore their hair short enough that it was considered polled. In other words, it was clipped. The concept was that a man's hair was short enough that the shape of the head was evident. A woman's hair, as it describes in I Corinthians 11, is given for a covering. There is a more flowing, feminine, softer look to it and certainly room for a variety of styles. But the point is that it's long enough to cover something, and a man's hair is not normally long enough to cover—it's a cropped haircut. According to the Talmud, the Jews understood this to mean that the priests were required to get a haircut every thirty days. This was the specific regulation that the priests operated under. That was the way they understood that.

We live in a time where we see the artwork that shows biblical characters and they have long flowing hair coming down to their shoulders. A lot of us grew up kind of conceiving this is the way that Christ, all the apostles and people—a long time ago—had long flowing hair. No, it says right here that's not the way God's priesthood was. He didn't want them to look like the Egyptians and have kind of a "Yul Brynner" look; the Egyptian priesthood shaved their heads. Some of the priests of the surrounding nations wore their hair very long. God's priesthood just looked normal. All explanations aside, the bottom line was God said He wanted His priests to look normal.

The duty of the priests is made plain.

Ezekiel 44:23-24, "And they shall teach My people the difference between the holy and the unholy, and cause them to discern between the unclean and the clean. In controversy they shall stand as judges, and judge it according to My judgments. They shall keep My laws and My statutes in all My appointed meetings, and they shall hallow My Sabbaths."

The job of God's priesthood, ancient and modern, spiritual and physical, is to teach His people the difference between clean and unclean, holy and profane, what is appropriate. They are to teach the people how to make distinctions between what God approves and what He disapproves. There are various ways you could state it, but it is important if we are going to be kings and priests in Tomorrow's World. We are going to be priests in a spiritual sense. Even in the book of Leviticus, many of the things that were given anciently to the physical priesthood had to do with learning to make proper distinction between what is clean (what is appropriate and holy) and what is not.

Ezekiel 47 describes the river of living water. Christ used that symbolically to refer to the Holy Spirit (John 7:38-39).

Verses 1-12 make plain there is going to be a literal river of living water issuing from the throne of Christ. That is going to symbolize the Holy Spirit flowing out from Him to all the nations. You remember when Christ returns to the Mount of Olives, the mountain splits in two (Zechariah 14:4, 8) and a great ripped valley runs east/west and from the Dead Sea to the Mediterranean.

Ezekiel 47:1, “Then he brought me back to the door of the temple; and there was water, flowing from under the threshold of the temple toward the east....” He saw this water that came out.

Verses 2-4, they go out and he sees this. He measures them and he saw it was a river.

Verse 5, “Again he measured one thousand, and it was a river that I could not cross; for the water was too deep, water in which one must swim, a river that could not be crossed.”

The waters rose and, vv. 6-8, there were trees on the bank. The fruit is going to be there for the healing of the nations. It describes all of this and it describes the river as it comes out.

Remember in Revelation 16:3, the waters over all the earth—the seas and the rivers—are going to be turned to blood and all the fish are going to die. Notice what happens when Christ comes back and this river begins to spring out.

Verses 8-9, “...‘This water flows toward the eastern region, goes down into the valley, and enters the sea. When it reaches the sea, its waters are healed. And it shall be that every living thing that moves, wherever the rivers go, will live. There will be a very great multitude of fish, because these waters go there; for they will be healed, and everything will live wherever the river goes.’”

What is going to happen? You know, people read in Revelation, “all the water turned to blood and the fish die,” and they say how can life continue? Well, the way it is going to continue is a river is going to spring forth. When Christ returns and the Mount of Olives splits in two, this great ripped valley occurs. There’s going to come up a gurgling spring that is going to spread out. As this water flows, anything it touches is going to be healed and the fish are going to live. This doesn’t prove that fish have immortal souls either.

Go back to Genesis 1:20 and find, “...‘Let the waters abound with an abundance of living creatures [souls].’” The word “creature” for fish means “soul.” It says here that the fish are going to live. It doesn’t mean that the fish have an immortal soul. It just means that there is going to be a healing, a restoration of life on the planet. Many times God does something outwardly, physically, that people can see. Particularly when He’s dealing with a nation, with a world, He does something outward, physical that they can see to teach a spiritual lesson. Just as life emanates out from the throne of God in a physical way, it is symbolic of a spiritual healing and a spiritual relief that will take place.

There are a lot of things in the book of Ezekiel. It’s a very intriguing book, a very powerful book. It’s a book that has an awful lot for us today. Hopefully, with this series, you have a little bit more of an overview of some of these prophecies.

Next Bible study, we will begin a brand new series; this will be a series on the life and letters of the Apostle Paul.

Life and Letters of Paul Series—Background on the Apostle Paul

We're going to get into something a little different in Bible study. Last time we completed our survey of the Major Prophets. I've given some consideration as to what would be a good place to go. At this point, we're going to take up a new series of Bible study, one entitled "The Life and Letters of the Apostle Paul." We are going to focus in on both the life of the Apostle Paul as well as going through the letters that he wrote.

I will comment a little later on the way in which we will proceed through Paul's letters or his Epistles. "Epistles" is just simply an older word that means "letters." You won't have to be like the lady in the joke I heard one time; the lady thought the epistles were the wives of the apostles. I won't belabor you with the entire joke, but that basically was the punch line of it.

This evening, to kind of set the stage, we are going to focus in on introductory material. We will focus on the background of the life of the Apostle Paul and the letters he wrote. It is important to understand the background of the Apostle Paul and these letters in order to understand the message that's contained in each of them. We are going to proceed through these letters in the order in which Paul wrote them. We will go through them in the context of the book of Acts in order to try to get them in their proper perspective and their relationship with one another.

Before we get into the letters Paul wrote, let's talk a little bit about the Apostle Paul. In order to understand and appreciate what he wrote, we have to understand some things about him. There are many things that we're told. Primarily, our biographical information on the Apostle Paul comes from the book of Acts, as well as certain information that he mentioned in some of his epistles. Particularly in the book of Galatians, he mentioned a little bit about his background.

One of the things that Paul mentions is that he came from Tarsus. Tarsus was the capital of the Roman province of Cilicia. If you have maps in your Bible, you might notice that this is in the area of what is modern-day Turkey. It is what was anciently called the Asia Minor peninsula. It has as its southern coast, the Mediterranean Sea and its northern coast, the Black Sea. Cilicia was a province that was in the southeastern section of modern-day Turkey or ancient Asia Minor.

The city of Tarsus was the capital of this province. It was a thriving and prosperous city. It was a commercial center. It was, virtually, at the crossroads of three continents—Africa, Asia and Europe. They all converged there in that Middle Eastern area. That's one of the reasons the Middle East has always played such an important role. Civilization—whether it was African civilization centered in Egypt to the south, Greece to the west or the area of Mesopotamia to the east—converged there in the Middle East. Egypt was the gateway to Africa, just as the area of Mesopotamia was the gateway to Asia, and Greece served as the gateway to Europe. They all converged there in the Middle East.

You had a convergence of civilizations, commercial trade and travel. There were all sorts of things going on. There were great caravan and sea routes that came through, caravan routes to the East and sea routes coming up from Egypt. There was commerce that traveled up the Nile coming from the Port of Alexandria there in Egypt and commercial travel across the Black Sea. A lot of things converged in this area. It was a commercial area.

Tarsus was located, as far as agriculture is concerned, in a fertile plain. It had a dense population and was very wealthy. It was also the focal point of Greek culture and one of the greatest centers of education in the ancient world. The university in Tarsus ranked third in the ancient world, right after the universities of Athens and Alexandria. Those were the most noted centers of learning in the ancient world—let's say, of the first century, anyway.

The Apostle Paul grew up in a thriving, teeming, commercial, metropolitan area. It was an area noted for Greek culture. There were many Greeks in the area; Greek was the predominant population. The Greek language was very common. It was the language of commerce all through that area. It was an area where a wide variety of people from further east in Asia, Africa and Europe would converge in the great market squares where the various things were being sold and traded.

As Paul grew up as a young boy, this was the background that he had. In fact, he was very much involved in that because we learned that his father was a prosperous tentmaker. As a prosperous tentmaker, one of the main sources of his trade would be dealing with many of these caravans and traders, providing them with tents. We learned he was a tentmaker; we know he was prosperous. I will show you a couple things later that will show how we know he was prosperous.

The family was Jewish. They were not the Hellenized Jews of the Diaspora. "Diaspora" is the term that is used to refer to the Jews who were dispersed away from the land of Judea. Those who were dispersed throughout the rest of the world tended to center in certain areas. Many of the Jews, in what was called the "Diaspora," tended to absorb a lot of Greek culture and Greek ideas. They were not that different from many of the Jews in modern-day America and Europe in that they tended to absorb the culture and the attitudes of the people around them and only cling in a very superficial way to Jewish religion.

The Apostle Paul's family was not that way. His father was a Pharisee, a member of the strictest sect of the Jews. Even though he lived in the Diaspora and had commercial dealings with the Gentile populace and the people who came and went, yet he was a very strict practicing Jew. As a tentmaker, the Gentile populace would have been his clientele. The main ones he would have sold his wares to would have been the caravans that traveled through, the traders.

Paul grew up in this environment. He grew up as a young boy being there around his father's shop, learning his father's craft. He grew up meeting and seeing these people of various nationalities and ethnic backgrounds come in there and haggle over the price of tents and put in orders for things that they wanted to buy.

There was a big university there in Tarsus. The teacher of the Roman Emperor Augustus, the great stoic philosopher, Athenodoras, was a native of Tarsus.

Tarsus had the status of a Roman free city. Many of its citizens possessed Roman citizenship. There was a sizable Jewish community there. Paul's father was a Pharisee and he was also a Roman citizen. We find that Paul inherited his Roman citizenship. Remember, in one encounter in the book of Acts, Paul brought up that he was a Roman citizen.

One of the Roman officers there was impressed and said, Acts 22:28, "...'With a large sum I obtained this citizenship.' And Paul said, 'But I was born a citizen.'"

The only way you were born a Roman citizen was if your father was one. We take citizenship for granted. If you are born in the United States, you are an American citizen. You can also acquire citizenship. Anciently, Roman citizenship was confined to natives of Rome. That's why it is called Roman.

The little city-state of Rome gradually conquered some of the other communities in the central Italian peninsula, gradually subdued the whole of the Italian peninsula and eventually they extended out. At first, they didn't allow any of these people to be Roman citizens. The only ones who possessed the rights and prerogatives of Roman citizens were people whose ancestry was in itself Roman. Gradually, they extended that out and Roman citizenship included everyone in the Italian peninsula. As the Roman Empire spread, they limited Roman citizenship to people whose origin was in the Italian peninsula (those who were born there) and to those who would go out to administer the empire in various areas.

A Roman citizen had a lot of protection. He had rights as a Roman citizen. He had the protection of Roman law. Much of our concept in terms of our American concept of Republican government and the written constitution go back to concepts of Roman law. Roman citizens had many rights.

As an area was conquered, not everybody became a Roman citizen. They were subject people of the Roman Empire, but they were not citizens. However, from time to time, individuals because of certain particular things on their part would be granted the status of Roman citizenship. When somebody was granted that status, then it was hereditary in their family from then on. They could pass it down.

Being a Roman citizen was a very coveted possession. It was not something that everyone could obtain. Generally, you had to do something of great merit for the Roman Empire. You had to help out in some way. You had to do something that they felt like they rewarded you. As time went on, it got to where (as a lot of things) it could be purchased with a price. If you were willing to pay enough or pay off the right officials, they would manage to find some way that you could be given citizenship. We find that human nature hasn't changed a whole lot and politicians haven't changed a whole lot. Some of these things went on then and have continued down.

Paul's father was a Roman citizen. How he became one, we are not told; but Paul was born as a Roman citizen. His father was prosperous. We can tell that by the fact that he was a Roman citizen. Being a Roman citizen was not common among the Jews. The other factor is that when Paul was a young man (a teenager) he was sent to Jerusalem to study at the school of Gamaliel.

Gamaliel was the foremost Jewish Rabbi of the day. In the Jewish community, to be able to be sent to study at the school of Gamaliel was the equivalent of going to Oxford and becoming a Rhodes scholar. It was like getting a law degree from Harvard University in the United States. To study at Jerusalem, the center of Jewish learning, and to study at the school of a great and famous rabbi, Gamaliel, the most renowned rabbi of his period, was a very, very prestigious thing in the Jewish community. This attests to the fact that Paul's father was a wealthy and influential man who was able to get his son into a school such as that.

What we find is that the Apostle Paul (or as he was at that time, the Jewish lad, Saul of Tarsus) grew up in a prosperous Jewish family that was very orthodox and strict in their practice of the Jewish religion. His father was engaged as a tent manufacturer. He grew up having commercial and business dealings with a variety of Gentile people from many nationalities that would converge in the crossroads there at Tarsus. This meant that he had a far broader outlook and knowledge of people than did most of the Jews who grew up in Judea who never had dealings with anyone other than other Jews and the occupying Roman troops. He grew up in a city that was dominated by Greek culture and education. He was very educated in Greek culture. We find him quoting Greek poets in Acts 17:28; on Mars Hill he was able to quote the Greek poets of the day. He was learned in the culture and in the philosophy of his day.

I might just point out something. Sometimes in school or college, our young people are exposed to the ideas, literature and philosophies of some of the so-called great philosophers, writers and thinkers of our age—some of whose stuff is nothing but a bunch of garbage. Many times the thought is: What is the value of knowing any of this? The Apostle Paul was exposed to many of the things of his day (much of which was a lot of garbage), but it enabled him to understand the thinking of the people with whom he dealt.

We live in a world that is dominated by people who think a certain way, who have a certain philosophical mind-set, a certain way of thinking and set of values. Paul understood where they were coming from. But he also understood where they were in error. He was conversant with the literature of the Greek and Roman world. He was able to quote from it when he needed.

He was also very well educated and well grounded in the Bible. The Epistles of Paul are absolutely loaded down with biblical quotations from the Old Testament. We will see that as we go through it. He was very much acquainted with the education and philosophy of his day. God had him prepared. God had a job in mind for him a long time before. He grew up in an environment that, unknown to him, prepared him. He had a business background. He learned principles of how to administer and how to handle many things. He was trained at business.

Mr. Herbert Armstrong, in his autobiography, makes comment on the way that he feels that God prepared him for his job, in terms of the advertising profession and business. These are the things that prepared him in many ways.

God prepared the Apostle Paul for many of these things in a variety of ways. He had a much broader background than did most of the other apostles who were natives of Judea and simply had a much more limited background.

To set the stage, we might notice briefly in the book of Acts. Saul of Tarsus was a very zealous individual. He was a man of strong convictions. What he believed, he believed with his whole heart. He was not a “wishy-washy” sort of person. He was not the kind of person who had a kind of “ho-hum,” lackadaisical approach. You would never refer to Paul as a “Laodicean” sort of person—there was nothing lukewarm about him. He was hot or cold. He was on fire; even when he was wrong, he was wrong in a grand way. We pick up the story.

Acts 9:1, “Then Saul, still breathing threats and murder against the disciples of the Lord, went to the high priest and asked letters from him to the synagogues of Damascus, so that if he found any who were of the Way, whether men or women, he might bring them bound to Jerusalem.”

He was stirred up. He viewed Christianity as a heresy that was a threat to the religion of God. He was determined to do whatever it took to wipe it out and he was prepared to do it. He was a “gung-ho” sort of fellow. He was not one who was simply content to sit back and say, ‘I sure think they are wrong.’ If Paul thought something, he thought it very, very strongly.

God had plans for him.

Verses 2-3, on his way to Damascus, he was struck down. We have the story of his dramatic encounter. There was this blinding light and this roll of thunder. Everybody heard the sound. Paul understood the words, but none of the others did. What Paul saw and encountered when he was blinded by this blast of light was Jesus Christ in vision.

Verse 4-5, “Then he fell to the ground and heard a voice saying to him, ‘Saul, Saul, why are you persecuting Me?’ And he said, ‘Who are You, Lord?’ And the Lord said, ‘I am Jesus, whom you are persecuting....’”

Verses 6-8, he was told to go on into Damascus.

Verse 9, “And he was three days without sight, and neither ate nor drank.”

Verses 10-12, Ananias, a disciple there, was instructed of God to go to Saul.

Verses 13-19, he went and talked with him, laid hands on him and Paul was healed. He was then baptized and received God’s Holy Spirit. We find Saul’s conversion.

One thing I would like to point out. God works through human instruments and God works in an organized, orderly way. Saul did not appoint himself to his job. God worked through the authority that He had set in His Church. When He struck Saul blind, He sent a man who served there in some capacity as an elder to come and anoint and lay hands on him, and he was healed. He sent the elder to counsel with him and then take him out and baptize him. God could have done all these things without the use of human intermediary, but He wanted it made evident that He was working through the constituted authority of His Church.

If you want a chronology of Paul’s life, we would date his birth at approximately 1 A.D. This is a general date. It places him just slightly younger than Jesus Christ and a few of the other apostles. Stephen’s stoning was in 33 A.D. (Acts 7). This is two years after Jesus was crucified and resurrected and the miracle of Pentecost. In the aftermath of Stephen’s stoning in 33 A.D., the disciples began to spread out from Jerusalem.

We’re first introduced to Paul at Stephen’s stoning. He was holding the coats for some of the men who were throwing the stones. Two years later, in 35 A.D., is when we pick up the story of the Apostle Paul in Acts 9. This is the time of his conversion. In the aftermath of this, he then spent three years in Arabia. He was being taught directly by Jesus Christ in visions and revelations. He spent a time of preparation and then returned to Jerusalem in 38 A.D. He spent two weeks with James and Peter; then he left and went back to his hometown of Tarsus in 38 A.D. where he remained until 42 A.D.

Acts 9:17, we find that Paul was healed.

Acts 9:19-23, “And when he had received food, he was strengthened. Then Saul spent certain days with the disciples at Damascus. Immediately he preached the Christ in the synagogues, that He is the Son of God. Then all who heard were amazed, and said, ‘Is this not he who destroyed those who called on this name in Jerusalem, and has come here for that purpose, so that he might bring them bound to the chief priests.’ But Saul increased all the more in strength, and confounded the Jews who dwelt in Damascus, proving that this Jesus is the Christ. Now after many days were past, the Jews plotted to kill him.”

Verses 25-27, “Then the disciples took him by night and let him down through the wall in a large basket. And when Saul had come to Jerusalem, he tried to join the disciples; but they were all afraid of him and did not believe that he was a disciple. But Barnabas took him and brought him to the apostles. And he declared to them how he had seen the Lord on the road, and that He had spoken to him, and how he had preached boldly at Damascus in the name of Jesus.”

Verse 30 describes that when the brethren found out, they brought him down to Caesarea and sent him out to Tarsus.

We actually are skimming over several years here. You wouldn’t realize that from Acts 9, but there are about three years that transpired in this account. To get the chronology of it, let’s go to Galatians 1. We have to put the Bible together to get the whole story.

Galatians 1:11, “But I make known to you, brethren, that the gospel which was preached by me is not according to man.” He said, ‘It’s not some human invention. It’s not something I got from what other people told me.’

Verses 12-24, “For I neither received it from man, nor was I taught it, but it came through the revelation of Jesus Christ. For you have heard of my former conduct in Judaism, how I persecuted the Church of God beyond measure and tried to destroy it. And I advanced in Judaism beyond many of my contemporaries in my own nation, being more exceedingly zealous for the traditions of my fathers. But when it pleased God, who separated me from my mother’s womb and called me through His grace, to reveal His Son in me, that I might preach Him among the Gentiles, I did not immediately confer with flesh and blood, nor did I go up to Jerusalem to those who were apostles before me; but I went to Arabia, and returned again to Damascus. Then after three years I went up to Jerusalem to see Peter, and remained with him fifteen days. But I saw none of the other apostles except James, the Lord’s brother. (Now concerning the things which I write to you, indeed, before God, I do not lie.) Afterward I went into the regions of Syria and Cilicia; and I was unknown by face to the churches of Judea which were in Christ. But they were hearing only, 'He who formerly persecuted us now preaches the faith which he once tried to destroy.' And they glorified God in me."

Galatians 2:1, "Then after fourteen years I went up again to Jerusalem with Barnabas, and also took Titus with me."

We have here the basis of establishing the chronology of Paul's life. The event that he makes reference to in Galatians 2:1 is the ministerial conference that is recorded in Acts 15. We date that as 49 A.D.; Paul refers to going up to Jerusalem in 49 A.D. He was going up there for the conference fourteen years after his conversion. That would place his conversion in 35 A.D.

In Galatians 1:16-17, we are told that when he was converted, he did not immediately confer with flesh and blood or go up to Jerusalem. Rather, he went up to Arabia and then returned to Damascus.

Verse 18, after his return to Damascus, he went to Jerusalem three years after he was converted. He was there two weeks, and the only apostles he talked to were Peter and James. He was instructed by them to go on back home.

Verse 21, he went back to Cilicia; Tarsus, his hometown, is the capital of Cilicia.

What we find when you put that account together with Acts 9 is that he was in Damascus and preached for a short time. He was there and had access to the synagogues. He was given letters of recommendation. He was a highly educated Jew, and there is some indication that he was a member of the Sanhedrin. The indication of that is a reference to his consenting unto the death of Stephen (Acts 8:1). Why did he have a voice in the matter? Because this was normally something that was decided in an official capacity by the Sanhedrin, it's very possible that he was even a member of the Sanhedrin. He certainly was connected with it in some capacity. He was an individual of note and highly educated; his credentials were recognized throughout the world by the Jewish community.

Acts 9:3, when he was going to Damascus, He was converted before he ever got there.

Verses 8-9, he was sitting in Damascus, blind, fasting and praying.

Verses 17-19, an elder came in, counseled with him, anointed him and laid hands on him. His sight was restored. Then he was taken out and baptized.

Verse 20, immediately, he was so excited that he did what most of us do when we start coming into the Church. We start trying to convert everybody. He stirred up a real "hullabaloo." People said, 'This is the guy who had the letters to put all these people in jail' (Acts 9:1-2). 'What in the world has happened to him?'

He didn't stay there very long. He left immediately from Damascus.

Acts 9:23, "Now after many days were past, the Jews plotted to kill him." The "many days" is the equivalent of the three years he was in Arabia.

I Kings 2:38-39, "...So Shimei dwelt in Jerusalem many days. Now it happened at the end of three years..." The expressions "three years" and "many days" are used interchangeably. "Many days" can certainly refer to a period of three years.

In fact, it refers to exactly that in I Kings 2. It makes a reference to a period of "many days" in Acts 9:23, but when you put it together with Galatians 1, we find that Paul, within a matter of a few days after his conversion and baptism, left and went to Arabia.

Verses 17-18, he was there three years and then he returned to Damascus.

When he returned to Damascus is what it talks about in Acts 9:23, "...many days were past, the Jews plotted to kill him." He disappeared and was gone from the scene; nobody heard of him for three years. Suddenly, when he came back, he appeared on the scene and began once again to speak in the synagogues. This time the attitude toward Christians had hardened to the point that he barely got out of there with his life.

Then, v. 26, he went to Jerusalem.

Galatians 1:18, the first time he went to Jerusalem was three years after his conversion. He went up to Jerusalem and talked with Peter and James.

In Acts 9:26, after Paul got away from Damascus, he came to Jerusalem. He wanted to come there and be a part of the group, but everyone was a little bit skeptical. They wondered what he was up to. He had simply dropped out of circulation. The last they had known, he had left Jerusalem going down there to arrest Christians. They had, undoubtedly, gotten the story of his baptism and the fact that he disappeared and was gone for three years. Nobody heard of him or knew what happened to him. The next thing they know, he pops up in Jerusalem as though he is a part of the Church. They are not sure of how to receive him.

How did Paul react? Did he suddenly get offended and say, 'If you people can't be more "Christian" than that, I'm going to leave.' No, he didn't say that. Maybe they didn't receive him as well as they could have, but they were suspicious. They didn't know and understand what he was up to. There was something kind of odd about this whole thing. They were nervous and acted funny around him. Nobody wanted to have anything to do with him.

Verse 27, Barnabas kind of took him under his wing, talked to him and brought him to Peter.

Galatians 1:18-19 and Acts 9:28, he spent two weeks with Peter and James, the brother of Jesus—the two leading apostles. James presided over the Church in Jerusalem and Peter was the chief of the twelve apostles. He was talking and fellowshiping with them. Undoubtedly, there were a lot of deep conversations about the things that he had experienced. At the end of this time, they came to the conclusion that it was not yet time for whatever God had in mind for him. They told him that instead of his remaining in Jerusalem as a part of the ministry, what he needed to do was go back to his hometown. In effect, “don't call us, we'll call you.”

Have you ever volunteered for something and felt like you kind of got the “brush-off”? It's important to understand that he did not simply appoint himself. We're going to read a little later in the book of Acts of his ordination as an apostle. Previously, he had been ordained as an elder.

God works in an organized way. A period of time went by. We can skim over it in a few pages and not realize years went by. He went back to Tarsus. He was respectful and responsive to the government in God's Church. At this point, they didn't have a need for him. They didn't see a place for him right there in Jerusalem as a part of the ministry at that time. He was in his hometown for four years, from 38 A.D. to 42 A.D. He lived a Christian life, was engaged in his own business and did the things that he was to do.

In the meantime, we have the story in Acts 10. Just a short time after Paul left God opened the door for the gospel to be preached to the Gentiles. Remember the vision that Peter had of the sheet coming down from heaven? God opened the door for a work to be done among the Gentile nations through Peter. Previous to this time, there was not any grasp of an organized preaching of the gospel to the Gentiles. In fact, the concept was that unless they became circumcised and converted to Judaism first, they could not be baptized as a part of the Church.

Peter's vision in Acts 10 is the story of Cornelius and his household. The revelation that uncircumcised Gentiles could be converted was major revelation.

Acts 11 continues with the story of the Gentiles accepted into fellowship.

Verse 19, we find the scattering abroad that took place after the stoning of Stephen and that the word was preached.

Verses 20-21, word came back that there was a group of disciples in Antioch.

Acts 11:22, “Then news of these things came to the ears of the church in Jerusalem, and they sent out Barnabas to go as far as Antioch.”

Verse 24, “...And a great many people were added to the Lord.”

Verses 25-26, “Then Barnabas departed for Tarsus to seek Saul. And when he had found him, he brought him to Antioch...” This is 42 A.D. Paul had disappeared from the scene; he had gone back to Tarsus.

Things had gone along. A lot of the Jews had been converted there in Jerusalem. There were a lot of Jews coming to Jerusalem for the festivals. Jews from all over the Roman world came to Jerusalem for the festivals. The word spread and several of them were baptized. They went back to their own home areas; certain areas were major commercial centers that people moved to.

Just as today, some of you are not from this area. You are here because of job circumstances. People sometimes relocate. They go to certain major urban areas because of jobs that are available there. This is what happened in ancient times as well.

So, in Antioch, there were several Jews who were converted. They were excited about it and this set the synagogues “abuzz.”

Verse 22, word got back to Jerusalem and they decided they had better send a minister down there.

Again, we see organization and leadership. We see the headquarters Church taking a leading role and making a decision. We see that the group in Antioch did not organize themselves into a Church and decide whom they would call to be their minister. For some of you who come out of a Baptist background as I did, that comes as a little bit of a revelation. They didn't send out and listen to various ones preach and then elect who they wanted to hire to be their preacher. The Church in Jerusalem heard that there were some down there and said, ‘We better send somebody down there.’ They sent Barnabas who was probably at the time holding the rank of evangelist. He went down there and preached.

He saw what the situation was and within a fairly short time, v. 25, he left and went on up to Tarsus where Paul was. He had, perhaps, kept in some sort of contact with Paul.

In Acts 9:27, we find that he had befriended Paul several years earlier when Paul had come to Jerusalem. By this time—four years later—Paul had proved himself and Barnabas offered Paul the opportunity of coming full time into the ministry (Acts 11:25-26). At this point, Paul was brought down to Antioch. He came to Antioch as an elder and entered full time in the ministry working with Barnabas in Antioch.

Acts 11:27, “And in these days prophets came from Jerusalem to Antioch.” They were dispatched by the apostles.

Acts 12 is somewhat of an inset. It is an account of Herod seeking to stir up certain trouble.

Verses 1-2, he killed James, the brother of John. James was one of the twelve apostles; this was not James, the brother of Jesus.

Acts 12:3, “And because he saw that it pleased the Jews, he proceeded further to seize Peter also. Now it was during the Days of Unleavened Bread.”

But, v. 7, God delivered Peter from jail.

In the meantime, Saul and Barnabas had taken some foodstuffs up to Jerusalem (Acts 11:27-30).

Then in Acts 12:25, they came back.

Acts 13:1, “Now in the church that was at Antioch there were certain prophets and teachers: Barnabas, Simeon who was called Niger [Niger was the term used at that time to refer to Blacks from the area of West Africa. The word “Niger” is the Greek word for Black. The term “Ethiopia” was the term used to refer to Blacks from East Africa. The Niger River in West Africa, the nation of Niger, as well as the nation of Nigeria, all derived their name from this.], Lucius of Cyrene [Cyrene is a city of North Africa up in the modern-day nation of Lybia.], Manaen who had been brought up with Herod the tetrarch [Manaen could have either been considered one of the prophets but more likely was one of the elders], and Saul.” Barnabas is mentioned first because he was the pastor of the Antioch Church.

We see that Simeon and Lucius, at least, were prophets because it mentions prophets were sent down from Jerusalem on a mission there. We read the details of that in Acts 11:27-30.

Acts 13:2-3, God revealed to the prophets (to Simeon and Lucius) that Barnabas and Saul were to be set apart (separated, ordained) for the job He had. When they had fasted and prayed and laid hands on them, they sent them away. Simeon and Lucius fasted and prayed, which is customary prior to an ordination. They laid hands on them (set them apart) and sent them away. This is the ordination of Saul and Barnabas as apostles.

Acts 13:4, “So being sent out by the Holy Spirit, they went down to Seleucia, and from there they sailed to Cyprus.” They departed.

We find here the story of Paul’s first evangelistic journey. This would bring us to 45 A.D. Paul, if we’re following through, was converted in 35 A.D. He was in Arabia until 38 A.D. and then came back to Damascus very briefly. He had to flee for his life to Jerusalem. He spent a couple of weeks there with Peter and James, the brother of Jesus. They sent him back to Tarsus in 38 A.D. He remained in Tarsus in business from 38 A.D. to 42 A.D. Then in 42 A.D., the Jerusalem Church dispatched Barnabas to Antioch. Barnabas went to Tarsus and brought Paul to Antioch to assist him and to serve in the ministry full time. Paul remained in the local ministry there in Antioch from 42 A.D. to 45 A.D. In 45 A.D., he was ordained as an apostle and began his first evangelistic journey. Interestingly enough, this is twelve years after the stoning of Stephen and ten years after his own conversion.

We see that even when God has a special mission for someone, He still works through the constituted authority that already is present in His Church. He does it in an organized, orderly way. God is not the author of confusion (1 Corinthians 14:33). God does not have all kinds of conflicting groups working against one another. There is order.

We see in Acts 13:4 Paul’s first evangelistic journey which began in 45 A.D. The journey took a period of about three years. It was completed in 48 A.D. with Paul’s return to Antioch.

He first sailed from Antioch down to the island of Cyprus. If you look on a map, you can see that Cyprus is in the Mediterranean Sea west of Antioch.

Verse 5, Paul began his teaching there.

Verse 13, he sailed from Cyprus up to Asia Minor (Galatia). He went through some of the cities of Galatia, which is in Central Turkey or Central Asia Minor. He went through there from city to city then retraced his steps back.

Acts 14:26, then instead of coming back to Cyprus, he sailed directly back to Antioch. We find the story of his first journey in Acts 13 and 14. He came to Cyprus in Acts 13:4; he preached the word. It goes through the details of what he did, and they came from Cyprus to Asia Minor.

Acts 13:13-14, they went to Pamphylia and to Antioch in Pisidia. This is not the Antioch of Syria that Paul had as his headquarters but an area in central Turkey or Asia Minor.

Verses 14-41 give the account of his sermon in the synagogue. You find the extent to which Paul was very, very conversed with the Old Testament by the amount of quotations that he gave.

A couple of things we might note.

Verse 14, he went into the synagogue on the Sabbath. When he was given an opportunity to speak, he did. Some would say the only reason he went in on the Sabbath was because he was preaching to the Jews and not because he viewed the Sabbath as a day of worship.

Acts 13:42, “And when the Jews went out of the synagogue, the Gentiles begged that these words might be preached to them the next Sabbath.” Why didn’t Paul tell them, ‘You don’t need to wait until next Sabbath? The Sabbath is done away. We are going to have church for you Gentiles ten o’clock tomorrow morning.’ That is what any self-respecting Protestant or Catholic would have done.

Verse 44, “And the next Sabbath almost the whole city came together to hear the word of God.” It wasn’t just Jews. These were Gentiles.

Verse 45, “But when the Jews saw the multitudes, they were filled with envy; and contradicting and blaspheming, they opposed the things spoken by Paul.” They were mad about it and a lot of trouble stirred up. Paul traveled through this area.

Acts 14 lists Iconium (v. 1), Lystra and Derbe (v. 6); these are areas of Galatia. He preached in many of these areas and then he retraced his steps.

Verses 21-26, “And when they had preached the gospel to that city and made many disciples, they returned to Lystra, Iconium, and Antioch, strengthening the souls of the disciples, exhorting them to continue in the faith, and saying, ‘We must through many tribulations enter the kingdom of God.’ So when they had appointed elders in every church, and prayed with fasting, they commended them to the Lord in whom they had believed. And after they had passed through Pisidia, they came to Pamphylia. Now when they had preached the word in Perga, they went down to Attalia. From there they sailed to Antioch....”

Antioch is the area that served as Paul’s headquarters for the Gentile work.

Acts 13 and 14 tell of Paul’s first evangelistic journey in the area through Cyprus and the area of Galatia. A period of three years transpired as he traveled through that area and spent time place by place. Then on the way back, he fully organized them into Churches and ordained elders. By that time, it was apparent who God was choosing to be used in those capacities. Things were organized; then he and Barnabas left and returned to Antioch.

After they returned to Antioch, Acts 15:1, individuals from Judea came and stirred up quite a bit of controversy by claiming that it was necessary to be circumcised in order to be converted and be a part of the Church.

Acts 15:2, “Therefore, when Paul and Barnabas had no small dissension and dispute with them, they determined that Paul and Barnabas and certain others of them should go up to Jerusalem, to the apostles and elders, about this question.” After the matter had been discussed and Paul and Barnabas had sought to explain the situation and settle the controversy, it became apparent that this was stirred up to the point that it was necessary to go to Jerusalem and receive an official clarification about this question.

Verse 5, “But some of the sect of the Pharisees who believed rose up, saying, ‘It is necessary to circumcise them, and to command them to keep the Law of Moses.’” There came up certain of the sect of the Pharisees who had come into the Church from this background; they were very adamant of the necessity of circumcising the Gentiles and instructing them in the ritual laws.

Verses 6-7, “So the apostles and elders came together to consider this matter. And when there had been much dispute [a lot of discussion], Peter rose up and said to them: ‘Men and brethren, you know that a good while ago God chose among us, that by my mouth the Gentiles should hear the word of the gospel and believe.’”

Verses 7-11, Peter set and expounded the matter. He explained how God made it plain to begin with that circumcision was not necessary for conversion and gave the story. James, as the pastor of the Jerusalem Church, was the presiding apostle over the conference.

Verses 13-19, he went through and reiterated what Peter had said. Then he stated the judgment of the Church.

Verse 19, “Therefore I judge [“krino,” a legal technical term which means “my decision; the binding decision of the Church”] that we should not trouble those from among the Gentiles who are turning to God.” His judgment is that we are not going to insist that the Gentiles be circumcised. God had already revealed by a direct miracle that this was not necessary.

However, v. 20, they were to be instructed in terms of other questions that had been raised involving idolatry, fornication, things strangled and from blood. They were to abstain from these things. These were not ceremonial laws and should not be regarded as such.

The issue came up as to what was ceremonial. Once you make the statement that circumcision is not necessary then the question arises. If the rituals are not necessary, then what is a ritual? There were questions they raised concerning meat offered to idols, meat improperly slaughtered and immorality (fornication). There are some who sometimes have misunderstood some comments Paul made in I Corinthians and think that Paul just arbitrarily took it upon himself to change the statement of the Jerusalem Church in regard to meat offered to idols. If you read carefully what Paul says in Romans and I Corinthians, it is very plain that Paul reiterates the decision of the Jerusalem Church (Romans 14:1-23; I Corinthians 8:4, 7-13; 10:7-8, 16-33).

The Jews misunderstood. The point that he makes is that meat offered to idols did not physically taint the meat. The only reason to avoid meat offered to idols was to avoid the appearance of being involved in idolatrous worship. The meat itself had not been hurt. If you ate meat that had been offered to an idol, this was not the issue. If you didn't know that it had been offered to idols, and somebody made comment about it having been, the meat hadn't been hurt and that was not the issue.

It was stressed that the Gentiles coming into the Church were to culturally withdraw from the society and culture of which they had been a part. The Greek and Roman culture around them took immorality very lightly. They were very casual in their approach to morality as well as the issue of idolatry.

Notice why the apostles didn't feel it necessary to go into greater detail.

Verse 21, "'For Moses has had throughout many generations those who preach him in every city, being read in the synagogues every Sabbath.'" Everything else you will hear being read in the synagogues on the Sabbath.

Verse 22, "Then it pleased the apostles and elders, with the whole church, to send chosen men of their own company to Antioch with Paul and Barnabas...." They sent a deputation back from Jerusalem.

Verse 23, "They wrote this letter by them...."

Verses 23-29 were the official decision.

The account of Acts 15 is the ministerial conference of 49 A.D.

There was the decision in Acts 15 (latter part) for Paul's second evangelistic journey.

Verse 40, Paul this time took Silas and departed.

Verse 39, Barnabas took a different route. He took John Mark and they went in a different way.

Verse 41, "And he went through Syria and Cilicia, strengthening the churches." Paul is going back to the area of Galatia, but this time, instead of sailing to Cyprus and going up by water, he travels up overland. This would be in the spring of 50 A.D.

Acts 16:1, "Then he came to Derbe and Lystra...." This is the area of Galatia where he had established Churches several years earlier. He now travels up from Antioch overland and through the eastern part of the Turkish peninsula.

Timothy (vv. 1-3), whom he had known earlier as a younger teenager, is now up in age, perhaps eighteen or nineteen. Paul takes Timothy with him. He did go ahead and circumcise Timothy because Timothy's mother was Jewish and he knew this would be a matter of controversy. Timothy was at least part Jewish; he was Jewish on his mother's side and Greek on his father's side. Paul knew the fact that Timothy was uncircumcised would be a matter that the Jews would really take exception to. At this account, Paul and Silas have traveled on across the Turkish peninsula or Asia Minor peninsula.

Acts 16:9, "And a vision appeared to Paul in the night. A man of Macedonia stood and pleaded with him, saying, 'Come over to Macedonia and help us.'" Paul has a vision; he sees a man of Macedonia, which is across into northern Greece and southern Yugoslavia, the modern area of Macedonia. Paul crossed into Europe.

Verse 13, "And on the Sabbath day we went out of the city to the riverside, where prayer was customarily made; and we sat down and spoke to the women who met there."

We can show this to be the day of Pentecost of 50 A.D. The gospel was first preached in Europe exactly nineteen years after the gospel was first preached on Pentecost in 31 A.D. The word "Sabbath" in v. 13 is a different form. It is literally "Sabbaths." "And on the day of Sabbaths..." would be a more literal rendering. It is a term that the Jews used to refer to Pentecost. We find here the preaching in Macedonia. This is his second evangelistic journey. He comes down further into Greece proper.

Acts 17:1, "...they came to Thessalonica, where there was a synagogue of the Jews."

Verses 2-4, he preaches in Thessalonica.

Then, v. 10, he went to Berea.

Verse 15, he went into Athens.

In vv. 22-31, we have his sermon on Mars Hill.

Acts 18:1, "After these things Paul departed from Athens and went to Corinth." This is the fall of 50 A.D.

Verse 11, he stays there for about eighteen months. It is during that period of time, while Paul is in Corinth from the fall of 50 A.D. to the spring of 52 A.D., that Paul wrote the first letter (actually the first two letters) that we have preserved for us in the New Testament. During that eighteen-month period that he was in Corinth, he wrote the books of I and II Thessalonians. Now we come to a period, fifteen to seventeen years after his conversion, five to seven years after his ordination as an apostle and in the midst of his second evangelistic journey, that we have the first of the letters that Paul wrote that makes up such a crucial part of our New Testament. We will go into those letters next time.

I want to give you a little background leading up to the beginning of Paul's letters. I'd like to review a couple of things. What we are going to do in this series is study the life and the writings of Paul with emphasis on doctrine and Christian living. We want to get the overview of Paul's background and the background of each book. We want to understand the message of the book in the light of its historical setting.

Paul's letters are very important. First, they are essential for understanding the historical development of the New Testament Church. They provide the record of the development of the New Testament Church over a fifteen to seventeen-year period. That was the period during which Paul wrote. We learn a lot about how the New Testament Church developed.

Second, we can learn much from the examples of the early Church. We learn about Church authority and organization. We see mistakes that were made that we can avoid. We have examples of the early Church pointed out. There are things we should copy and things we should avoid. That's why God has examples recorded. Every generation doesn't have to "reinvent the wheel." We can learn from what has gone before.

Third, Paul's letters are very important because they are the chief repositories of what might be termed "the systematic theology of the New Testament." It is the clearest and chief place where we have a detailed exposition of what the Church believed and taught.

Paul wrote fourteen letters that are preserved as a part of the New Testament canon. There are nine letters that were written to seven specific Churches. The Churches at Rome, Corinth, Galatia, Ephesus, Philippi, Colossi and Thessalonica represent seven Churches. There are nine letters written to those seven Churches because two of the letters were written to the Church at Corinth and two to the Church at Thessalonica. Paul wrote one General Epistle, the book of Hebrews. He wrote four Pastoral Epistles to Timothy, Titus and Philemon. He wrote two letters to Timothy, making four. We have fourteen letters altogether.

It's very interesting the way in which the letters of Paul are arranged. One of the things we will notice as we go through is that Paul's letters are not arranged in the order in which he wrote them. He wrote I and II Thessalonians first. Why don't we have them in the order in which he wrote them? We are going to go through and study them, in this series, in the order in which Paul wrote them because we're going to study it going through the book of Acts and from the Life and Letters of Paul.

When you go through and read it in the New Testament, the order that they were preserved in is important. There are some important concepts there. In fact, we could divide Paul's fourteen letters and there is a specific order. You might be aware that the order of the Greek Bibles (the Byzantine text of the Bible that has been preserved by the Greek Church) is different than the Latin order that has been preserved in the western world. It's the same books but a different order.

The Greek order is sometimes referred to as the inspired order because it was the order that was preserved by the Greeks who preserved the New Testament. The order they preserved the New Testament books in were first, the four Gospels and Acts, just as we have them. The next section that they preserved was the General Epistles: James, Peter, John and Jude and then the Epistles of Paul. They preserved the Epistles of Paul as we have them, with one change. They preserved Romans, I and II Corinthians, Galatians, Ephesians, Philippians, Colossians, I and II Thessalonians. Then in the Greek order came the book of Hebrews, followed by I and II Timothy, Titus and Philemon, then the book of Revelation.

This makes four sections of the Greek New Testament that the Greeks preserved: (1) the Gospels and Acts, (2) the General Epistles, (3) the Epistles of Paul and (4) the book of Revelation. You take those four sections and combine them with the three that the Jews recognized of the Old Testament: the Law, the Prophets and the Writings. Altogether, you have seven divisions or sections of scripture that constitute the Bible and shows a stamp of completion. There isn't any room for an Apocrypha. There isn't any room for some of the extra books that have gotten in. They don't fit with either the Old or the New.

Why are Paul's Epistles arranged in the order in which they are? The interesting thing is that if you look at the first ten of Paul's Epistles (Romans through Hebrews), you find that these books basically follow the order of the Holy Days and the message that they expound. Romans and I and II Corinthians are books that deal with the subject matter of the Passover and the Days of Unleavened Bread.

We have scriptures in the book of Romans that clearly deals with these subjects.

Romans 3:23, "All have sinned and come short of the glory of God."

Romans 5:8-10, "But God demonstrated His own love toward us, in that while we were still sinners, Christ died for us. Much more then, having now been justified by His blood, we shall be saved from wrath through Him. For if when we were enemies we were reconciled to God through the death of His Son, much more, having been reconciled, we shall be saved by His life."

Romans 6:12, "Therefore do not let sin reign in your mortal body, that you should obey it in its lusts."

Romans 6:16, "Do you not know that to whom you present yourselves slaves to obey, you are that one's slaves whom you obey, whether of sin to death, or of obedience to righteousness?"

What we find here is the message of Passover and Unleavened Bread. The emphasis is on the message of Passover and Unleavened Bread, the matter of Christ's atonement, the necessity of putting sin out of our lives, of being justified by Christ's sacrifice.

I Corinthians focuses in on much of the message. I Corinthians 5 is the famous chapter that we read nearly every year prior to Passover and Unleavened Bread.

I Corinthians 5:6-8, "...Do you not know that a little leaven leavens the whole lump? Therefore purge out the old leaven, that you may be a new lump, since you truly are unleavened. For indeed Christ, our Passover was sacrificed for us. Therefore let us keep the feast, not with old leaven, nor with the leaven of malice and wickedness, but with the unleavened bread of sincerity and truth."

I Corinthians 11 gives instructions about observing the Passover service.

II Corinthians 7:1, "Therefore, having these promises, beloved, let us cleanse ourselves from all filthiness of the flesh and spirit, perfecting holiness in the fear of God." This certainly deals with the matter of the Days of Unleavened Bread. The subject matter of Romans and I and II Corinthians is the subject matter of Passover and Days of Unleavened Bread—the emphasis on the Savior and the necessity of our coming out of sin and putting sin away.

The next four Epistles—Galatians, Ephesians, Philippians and Colossians—would tie in and parallel the message of Pentecost. They consist of deeper spiritual things. They talk about the covenants and about the fruits of the Spirit. We find much of these things in Galatians, Ephesians, Philippians and Colossians. The day of Pentecost focuses in on the Old and the New Covenant, on the giving of God's Holy Spirit, the fruits of God's Spirit—many, many things that could come out.

I and II Thessalonians tie in with the message of the Feast of Trumpets. There are many places we could look at.

I Thessalonians 4:16, "For the Lord Himself will descend from heaven with a shout, with the voice of an archangel, and with the trumpet of God. And the dead in Christ will rise first."

I Thessalonians 5:2, "For you yourselves know perfectly that the day of the Lord so comes as a thief in the night." It goes into details.

II Thessalonians continues and talks further about some of those same things. Clearly, there is an emphasis on the subject matter of the Feast of Trumpets, the return of Jesus Christ.

The book of Hebrews deals with the subject matter that relates to the Day of Atonement, Feast of Tabernacles and Last Great Day.

We have Hebrews 9 and 10 that deal with the subject matter of the Day of Atonement. It explains and goes through the symbolism in great detail of the high priest entering into the Holy Place. It goes through and explains the symbolism of the Day of Atonement.

We have in Hebrews 3 and 4 the information about entering into God's rest, the parallel that ties in with the Feast of Tabernacles.

Hebrews 11 also has a lot concerning the fulfillment of that.

There's insight into the Last Great Day, the time of judgment. I will summarize on some of that.

We went through it at a much earlier Bible study when we went through the canonization of Scripture. If you want more details, you can go back and get one of those tapes.

Basically, the Pastoral Epistles were in the order of the rank of the individual to whom he wrote. Timothy was an evangelist, Titus was a pastor, and Philemon was a local elder in Colossi.

We find that there is a systematic arrangement in his letters, in terms of subject matter. I think from this we can get a little bit of insight. Paul's letters come in an appropriate place.

The Gospels, the personal teachings of Jesus Christ, form the basis. That is logically where you start. The book of Acts picks up the story and goes on through and shows the continuity of the ministry of Jesus Christ. The first five books of the New Testament correspond to the first five books of the Old Testament. They correspond to the Law, to the books of Moses.

These are the books of the second Moses, of Jesus Christ who was prophesied in Deuteronomy 18:18 (KJV), “““God will raise up for them a Prophet from among their brethren like unto me...”””

Hebrews 9:15, “And for this reason He is the Mediator of the New Covenant...”

We have the direct teachings of Jesus Christ in the Gospels, and Acts continues the work of the ministry of Jesus Christ.

The General Epistles are the teachings of the senior apostles, the ones who were with Jesus, either in the case of James and Jude (two of his physical brothers) or in the case of Peter and John, two of the original twelve. They pick up the story and they deal with very basic fundamental issues.

In II Peter 3:15-16, Peter even tells us that Paul wrote some things hard to be understood. When you have that background, then you get into Paul's writings. Paul's writings are arranged in an order that follows a subject flow that really, in terms of emphasis, follows the basic outline and plan of God, concluding with letters of pastoral instruction.

Then the New Testament concludes with the book of Revelation. Revelation is the logical place to end. It is the counterpoint to the book of Genesis.

In our survey of Paul's life and letters, we are going to follow them through in the order that he wrote them. We are going to get their message in the context of the background provided by the book of Acts. Hopefully, this different approach will give us a little more of a fresh insight into these letters and into the message that they contain. They contain a timeless message. It is a message for us today. It is a message that is just as important for us today as it was for those to whom it was originally addressed.

This will be our last Bible study prior to the Feast of Tabernacles, which is an incredible thing. Our next scheduled Bible study would have been the evening that begins the Feast of Trumpets. Two weeks from tonight, we will be observing the beginning of the Feast of Trumpets and two weeks from then, we will be observing the beginning of the Feast of Tabernacles.

On the evening that we are gathered around the world observing the beginning of the Feast of Tabernacles—the evening of Wednesday, October 3—there will be something else of note that will take place at the same time we are meeting. Documents will be signed in Berlin on the evening of Wednesday, October 3, that will officially reunite Germany as one nation. One year ago at the Feast you saw the Berlin Wall begin tumbling down. An awful lot has happened in the last year. Can you imagine where we will be if the world changes as much in the next year as it has changed in the last year?

Life and Letters of Paul Series—I and II
Thessalonians

We have started into our series of the Life and Letters of Paul. We went into basic background on Paul's life. We have noted in the book of Acts the story of Paul being struck down on the road to Damascus and his conversion.

I would like to give you a little insight into why we are going through the Epistles of Paul in the order that we are. Basically, we are going through them in the order that he wrote them. How do we know in which order he wrote them? How do we know when he wrote each book? I'd like to share a little of that with you here in the beginning.

We went through a lot of these things last time. I am just going to briefly refer to his conversion in Acts 9.

In Acts 10, Peter has a vision and the gospel goes out to the Gentiles for the first time.

Acts 11 is the story of the Gentiles being accepted into fellowship; Peter explains his vision to others there in Jerusalem, and the headquarters Church sends Barnabas to Antioch to raise up a Church.

Acts 11:25, "Then Barnabas departed for Tarsus to seek Saul." This is several years after Paul's conversion. He had been dispatched back to Tarsus, his hometown. In effect, he had been told, "Don't call us, we'll call you."

You have to understand the situation. Paul was the leading persecutor of the Church prior to his conversion. He was struck down on the road to Damascus in a very dramatic way (Acts 9:3-9). He was blinded, subsequently anointed and healed of his blindness and then baptized (vv. 17-18). He went into the synagogue. They were expecting him to speak and he started teaching that Jesus was the Messiah (vv. 20-22). People couldn't believe it. It's kind of like Billy Graham getting up and preaching a sermon on the importance of keeping the Sabbath. It created quite a stir. It stirred up a hornet's nest.

Within a matter of a very few weeks, he left Damascus. Paul left and was gone for three years in the Arabian wilderness (v. 23; Galatians 1:17-18), was directly taught and worked with by Jesus Christ (Galatians 1:11-16). After three years he came back to Damascus (vv. 17-18). The situation had hardened. When he showed up, within a week or two he had to flee for his life.

They actually let him down the city wall at night in a basket so he could escape (Acts 9:23-25). Some of the Jews were literally ready to kill him. They felt he had betrayed them and that this was too much.

Therefore, he went to Jerusalem (Acts 9:26). Nobody in Jerusalem wanted to deal with him very much. Barnabas finally took him and introduced him to Peter and James (vv. 27; Galatians 1:18). He spent a couple weeks with them, and at the end of that two weeks or fifteen days, as he mentions in Galatians 1:18, they simply told him, "Don't call us, we'll call you." He went back to Tarsus (Galatians 1:21) and stayed there for about four or five years. He went back to his business and remained there. It is important to realize that God does work through the government in His Church. Paul had to prove himself. He was called and converted. God had called him for a specific job. God had revealed that to him, but he had to wait. It wasn't enough that he knew it. God had told him, but he had to wait until it became apparent to others, to the leadership in the Church.

Can you imagine what it must have been like when Ananias contacted Jerusalem with word that Paul had been baptized? Can you imagine Peter's and James' reactions and responses? It would be like calling up and saying, 'I just baptized the Pope; he's keeping the Sabbath and everything.' Because it was such a total shock, it was literally a matter of years before matters had settled to the point that Paul was given an opportunity to be directly used in the ministry.

He was converted in 35 A.D. and it was 42 A.D. (seven years later) when he came into the ministry as Barnabas' assistant to be used in Antioch. From that time, it was still about three and one-half years later before he was ordained, in 45 A.D., as an apostle. He was sent forth on the first evangelist journey. Even after he was in the ministry, he didn't start out at the top.

In Acts 11:25-26, Paul is brought by Barnabas to Antioch.

Acts 12 primarily deals with other things.

Acts 13 starts out with Paul's ordination. Paul and Barnabas were ordained as apostles by prophets sent down from Jerusalem.

Acts 13:1, "Now in the church that was at Antioch there were certain prophets and teachers: Barnabas, Simeon who was called Niger, Lucius of Cyrene, Manaen who had been brought up with Herod the tetrarch, and Saul."

"Cyrene" is an area in North Africa on the Mediterranean coast, perhaps the area of modern-day Tunisia. "Niger" was an area that would refer to West Africa. The term is still utilized in context of Nigeria or the Niger River. It was normally used to refer to West Africans as opposed to East Africans who were generally termed “Ethiopians.”

The ordination of Paul and Barnabas is recounted in Acts 13:1-3 and their first evangelist journey in Acts 13:3—14:28. Paul and Barnabas left Antioch sailing to Cypress (Acts 13:4). They went through and preached in Cypress, then sailed up from Cypress into Asia Minor (v. 13). If you have a map in the back of your Bible, you might notice the mid-section of modern-day Turkey. He went through the areas that we would term modern-day Turkey, anciently the area of Galatia. He came through, as he mentions in the latter part of Acts 13, Antioch of Pisidia (v. 14), which was part of that area, then on to Iconium, Lystra and Derbe (14:1,6), areas in Galatia, central Asia Minor or modern-day Turkey.

In Acts 14:28, they completed that first journey in the area of Galatia. They had gone through Cypress and Galatia and retraced their steps, except they didn’t go back to Cypress; they went directly back to Antioch. The first journey lasted about three years, 45 A.D. to 48 A.D.

Paul came back in late 48 A.D. He returned to Antioch and was there for a number of months. In 49 A.D., there was the ministerial conference in Jerusalem (Acts 15) to resolve the issue of circumcision in the Church and to ensure uniformity of practice. The decision was made there. Paul and others had gone up to Jerusalem about the question. We have the account of that. Paul came on back to Antioch. Basically, he wintered there in Antioch (Acts 15:30-35).

Then Paul began his second evangelistic journey (Acts 15:40 through 18:22) in the late winter or very early spring of 50 A.D., perhaps February or early March, but more likely February because of the timing a little later on and the distance it would have taken him. This time he went overland, going from Antioch, which is modern-day Syria, up into ancient Asia Minor, the area of Galatia, what is now modern-day Turkey. He went back across through Galatia to the Churches that he had been to before (Acts 15:41—16:1). This was in 50 A.D.

Paul had been there two years earlier. He had originally helped to raise up those Churches about five years earlier. He had been there, about two years earlier, at the end of his first evangelistic journey. Now on his second journey, he starts back by retracing some of the areas. He took a little different route. He went up overland all the way across Asia Minor (Acts 16). He came through Asia Minor rather quickly. By the late spring (around May), he crossed from Asia Minor into Europe (Acts 16:9-10). He came into ancient Macedonia, what is now the northern part of modern-day Greece. Actually, a portion of it is in southern Yugoslavia. But the portion Paul appears to have preached in, Philippi (v. 12), is in Greece. He crossed over from Asia into Greece, into Europe and was there around the time of Pentecost (vv. 12-13) in 50 A.D. He preached in Philippi.

In Acts 16:14-15, we have the account of Lydia being baptized. There was a synagogue in Philippi. The indication is several women who were Jews gathered outside of town in a little park-like area on the side of a river bank (v. 13). They met there every Sabbath to visit and fellowship together. Paul went out there to fellowship with them and wound up baptizing at least one lady and her household.

Paul was not able to stay in Philippi very long. Great controversy was stirred up, so he left Philippi and came to Thessalonica, a little further down (Acts 16:39—17:1).

In Acts 17:2-3, Paul went in and preached several Sabbath days; he reasoned with them out of the Scriptures showing that the Messiah must have suffered and risen again from the dead. They understood that there was a Messiah to come, but they had not grasped the fact that the Messiah was to come a first time and suffer. They had, exclusively, focused in on the prophecies in the Old Testament about the Messiah coming in power and glory. Paul focused their attention on prophecy such as Isaiah 53—of the suffering servant—showing that the Messiah was to come and suffer and to be raised from the dead. Undoubtedly, he was preaching out of Isaiah 53. The result was that it stirred up such a controversy, that Paul had to flee the city (vv. 5-10).

In Acts 17:8-9, Jason, a man with whom Paul was staying, actually had to post bond. Paul had to leave because there was about to be riots in the city of Thessalonica. After Paul was forced to leave Thessalonica, he went down to Berea. He preached there in a synagogue (v. 10) and then came down to Athens (v. 16).

In vv. 17-31, we have the account of Paul’s sermon on Mars Hill given in detail.

Acts 18:1, “After these things Paul departed from Athens and went to Corinth.”

Verse 11, “And he continued there a year and six months, teaching the word of God among them.” By this time, we are only into fall. If you trace it, there’s only a few weeks coming down through. He spent the summer going through Thessalonica. He was only there for about three weeks. He came down to Berea and stayed a longer time there. He spent, perhaps, a couple of weeks in Athens, a little travel time, and then he came down to Corinth, arriving there by September or so. He pretty well spent the summer traveling. He gets to Corinth and stays with a couple of Jews there (Acts 18:1-3). Aquila was of the same profession as he was—a tentmaker.

Verse 4, we find that shortly after he had gotten there, he was reasoning in the synagogue every Sabbath persuading Jews and Greeks.

Verse 5, Silas and Timothy came from Macedonia.

Let's go back to I Thessalonians. We find that at this point, Paul wrote I Thessalonians. He wrote it in the fall of 50 A.D., only a matter of a few months after he had been in Corinth. Our basis for saying that is that we know Paul didn't write it before this because he hadn't been to Thessalonica before and there weren't any Churches there. Paul didn't even get to Greece until around Pentecost of 50 A.D. He had worked his way down through Greece that summer and wound up in Corinth. He was there for a year and a half. Shortly after he got to Corinth, Silas and Timothy caught up with him. They were coming from Macedonia, which is the area where Thessalonica was.

I Thessalonians 1:1, "Paul, Silvanus and Timothy to the church of the Thessalonians...."

Verse 7, "so that you became examples to all in Macedonia and Achaia who believe."

I Thessalonians 3:1-4, "Therefore, when we could no longer endure, we thought it good to be left in Athens alone, and sent Timothy, our brother and minister of God, and our fellow laborer in the gospel of Christ, to establish you and encourage you concerning your faith, that no one should be shaken by these afflictions; for you yourselves know that we are appointed to this. For, in fact, we told you before when we were with you that we would suffer tribulation, just as it happened, and you know."

Verses 6-7, "But now that Timothy has come to us from you, and brought us good news of your faith and love, and that you always have good remembrance of us, greatly desiring to see us, as we also to see you—therefore, brethren, in all our affliction and distress we were comforted concerning you by your faith."

What we see here in I Thessalonians, as we put it together with the account in Acts, several weeks had gone by when Paul got down as far as Athens. Paul was the chief spokesman. He was the one who was known and recognized. They all left. They had to flee Thessalonica (Acts 17:1-10). They had only been there about three weeks, just enough time to preach. There had been some who were baptized, and then they had to leave.

He was very concerned about that because there was a need to give deeper instruction.

These were people who, obviously, had a strong background of the Old Testament. They understood the law, the Sabbath, clean and unclean meats—those things weren't issues. But there were a lot of things they didn't fully understand. There were things that needed to be more fully explained that Paul had not had opportunity to do. There wasn't a magazine or booklets or that sort of thing. There weren't any Bible lessons or literature that he could send them.

By the time things had settled down and they got to Athens, he sent Timothy back (I Thessalonians 3:1) because Timothy was not known there. Because he had not been someone who had attracted public attention in Thessalonica, he could go back and go into the city. His job was not to go back in and evangelize the unconverted. He was to go back to the Church that was meeting in Jason's house and work with the brethren. He was to instruct them, to quietly and privately deal with them, and to bring Paul a report back of how things stood. That's what we read in Acts 17.

Acts 17:16, "Now while Paul waited for them at Athens...." He sent Timothy back.

Then we are told in Acts 18:1, "After these things Paul departed from Athens and went to Corinth."

Verse 5, Paul got to Corinth and Timothy caught up with him coming from Macedonia.

We read in I Thessalonians 3:1-2, "Therefore, when we could no longer endure it, we thought it good to be left in Athens alone, and sent Timothy, our brother and minister of God, and our fellow laborer in the gospel of Christ, to establish you and encourage you concerning your faith."

Verse 6, "But now that Timothy has come to us from you, and brought us good news of your faith and love, and that you always have good remembrance of us, greatly desiring to see us, as we also to see you—"

When we put the account in I Thessalonians together with the account in Acts, we can see that Paul, obviously, wrote I Thessalonians just a short time after he got to Corinth. He wrote it from Corinth and sent it back.

Let's understand a little bit about Thessalonica. The original name of the city was Therma; it was re-named by Cassandra about 320 B.C. in honor of his wife, the sister of Alexander the Great. Thessalonica was the largest city in Macedonia in the first century. It was a major trading center located on one of the main Roman roads. It held the status of a Roman free city. It was the capital of Macedonia. It was a major city on a trading route.

There was a sizable Jewish community in Thessalonica due mainly to its status of a trading center. The majority of the population followed pagan mythology, which by that time had lost its hold. The stories and the accounts of pagan mythology were such that they really did not answer the questions that people had.

There were philosophies that had arisen that had begun to have a certain amount of influence throughout the Greek world, but there wasn't any real concept of salvation and an afterlife. The Greeks, as with many of the others, did not have much concept of the resurrection of the body. The concept of the resurrection was alien to the Greek world. Some of them following Plato had a concept of an immortal soul. The teaching of the philosophers was that the physical represented something bad and you wanted to be freed from your body. The concept that the body was going to be resurrected was a little difficult because it was so different from the ideas that most of them had grown up with.

We will see that II Thessalonians was basically written a short time after I Thessalonians. As we look at the book itself and at the message it brings, we find that there were a couple of major purposes in Paul's writing. Certainly, he wrote to strengthen them during persecution. There were a lot of problems, a lot of persecution that broke out that directly impacted him and spilled over to the brethren. He wanted to encourage and build them up during persecution.

I Thessalonians 2:2, "But even after we had suffered before and were spitefully treated at Philippi, as you know we were bold in our God to speak to you the gospel of God in much conflict." He spoke the gospel in the midst of a lot of contention and problems. He says they had already gone through problems in Philippi, but that didn't stop them from coming down there to teach them.

Verse 14, "For you, brethren, became imitators of the churches of God which are in Judea in Christ Jesus. For you also suffered the same things from your own countrymen, just as they did from the Jews." He talks about how they had gone through many things.

I Thessalonians 3:1-7, "Therefore, when we could no longer endure it, we thought it good to be left in Athens alone, and sent Timothy, our brother and minister of God, and our fellow laborer in the gospel of Christ, to establish you and encourage you concerning your faith, that no one should be shaken by these afflictions; for you yourselves know that we are appointed to this. For, in fact, we told you before when we were with you that we would suffer tribulation, just as it happened, and you know. For this reason, when I could no longer endure it, I sent to know your faith, lest by some means the tempter had tempted you, and our labor might be in vain. But now that Timothy has come to us from you, and brought us good news of your faith and love, and that you always have good remembrance of us, greatly desiring to see us, as we also to see you—therefore, brethren in all our affliction and distress we were comforted concerning you by your faith."

Paul seeks to encourage them and to build them up in the midst of trials. Timothy came back and clearly pointed out things to his attention. The people were suffering a lot of trials and persecution, so he wanted to encourage and strengthen them during persecution. Also, he wanted to give them instructions concerning the return of Christ, about the resurrection and the proper attitude for Christians to take during the time preceding these events. This was clearly a major issue.

He spent a great deal of chapter 4 and a portion of chapter 5 dealing with instructions about the resurrection. He talks about the fact that there would be a resurrection. He discusses the Day of the Lord and gave them instructions as to what they were to do. Chapter 5 has a lot of short exhortations and things that he did.

II Thessalonians, which he wrote a little while later, again gives more detailed instructions concerning events relating to the Day of the Lord, to the return of Christ and to the attitude that Christians are to have. We are going to notice that there was a problem that came in.

Paul laid great stress on the fact that Christ was going to return and there was going to be a resurrection. He laid great stress on that in I Thessalonians. Then he had to turn around in II Thessalonians and explain to them that there were things that had to happen first because some were ready to "jump the gun" and figured that things were just about over. Therefore, he had to explain that there were prophesied things that had to happen first.

The other problem was that there were those who felt that with the end being that close, there wasn't any point in them doing anything—they were just kind of “bumming” off the charity of others. Paul admonished them in I Thessalonians and then really “chewed them out” in II Thessalonians that if any would not work, neither should he eat (II Thessalonians 3:10).

Verse 11, he was concerned that some were just going around being busybodies and not really being productive.

If you put I and II Thessalonians together, one book stressed that, ‘Yes, Jesus Christ is going to return to this earth as King of kings and Lord of lords, and there is going to be a resurrection of the saints. Our focus and attention needs to be on that, and that is the basis of our hope that brings us through trials, difficulties, stresses and things of that sort, but it’s not going to happen immediately.’

I Thessalonians 5:2, “...the day of the Lord so comes as a thief in the night.” It will come on the world as a thief in the night.

Verse 4, “But you, brethren are not in darkness, so that this Day should overtake you as a thief.” He told them there were things that had to happen first. They needed to be conscious and aware of those things. Paul brings that out in I and II Thessalonians.

Until these things do happen, we need to be productive people, doing the things that we should do. We are to be living our lives in a responsible way and be in a position to help and share and give. God has not called us to go off and sit in a cave somewhere and wait for Christ to return.

Paul wrote I and II Thessalonians to (1) strengthen them during persecution, (2) to give them instruction concerning the return of Christ and the resurrection, and (3) to explain the attitude that we need to have in the time preceding these events.

It’s clear that the bulk of the Thessalonians Church was Gentiles.

I Thessalonians 1:9-10, “For they themselves declare concerning us what manner of entry we had to you, and how you turned to God from idols to serve the living and true God, and to wait for His Son from heaven, whom He raised from the dead, even Jesus who delivers us from the wrath to come.” He said, ‘You turned to God from idols.’

When we look at the background of the Thessalonians Church, we’re basically looking at people who were Greek. Acts 17:1-4 make plain that there were some Jews. You have to realize that Greeks in some of these cities made a practice of going in and sitting in the back benches of the synagogue on the Sabbath and listening to the law being read. They were searching for something. They did not participate in the life of the Jewish community, but they recognized that the religion of the Jews had answers that they didn’t have. Their own mythology and philosophies really did not provide fulfilling, satisfying answers. It was not uncommon in many of the cities, particularly of the Greek world, that people would go in and simply sit on the back benches of the synagogue and listen to the law being read and expounded on the Sabbath. The Gentiles had a certain familiarity, but we see clearly that these were people who had turned from idolatry.

We will note what seems to have been a problem in Thessalonica. Thessalonica was a big commercial trading center and tended to attract a lot of people who were what we would term some really “smooth operators,” real “sharpies”—guys who really weren’t that interested in working hard but liked to turn a “fast buck.” Thessalonica was on a major route. It was a major area where you had trading caravans coming through from the east on their way to Rome. You had a lot of different people, different nationalities, and that was a great place for a “sharpie” to try to turn a “quick buck” because you are dealing with people who don’t speak the language very well.

There seemed to be a lot of this sort of thing in Thessalonica. The city seemed to have attracted people who had this sort of attitude—people who were not anxious to be hard workers and productive but were anxious to make a few dollars quickly.

There’s a problem with that; people tend to suspect others of being like them. We will notice in Thessalonians that people seemed to have been a little bit suspicious about Paul’s motives. Paul recognized that and made a special effort to work hard while he was in Thessalonica. The first thing Paul did when he conducted a service was not to “pass the hat;” he, particularly, didn’t do it in a place like this because this was exactly what they were suspicious of.

we have been approved by God to be entrusted with the gospel, even so we speak, not as pleasing men, but God who tests our hearts. For neither at any time did we use flattering words, as you know, nor a cloak for covetousness—God is witness. Nor did we seek glory from men, either from you or from others, when we might have made demands as apostles of Christ. But we were gentle among you, just as a nursing mother cherishes her own children. So, affectionately longing for you, we were well pleased to impart to you not only the gospel of God, but also our own lives, because you had become dear to us. For you remember, brethren, our labor and toil; for laboring night and day, that we might not be a burden to any of you, we preached to you the gospel of God. You are witnesses, and God also, how devoutly and justly and blamelessly we behaved ourselves among you who believe; as you know how we exhorted, and comforted, and charged everyone of you, as a father does his own children, that you would have a walk worthy of God who calls you into His own kingdom and glory.”

Paul made a special effort there because he knew the attitude of the people. He knew they were suspicious. They were suspicious of his motives. They kept waiting for the “hook.”

Verse 6, “...when we might have made demands as apostles of Christ.” In other words, it was not that Paul did not have the right to have received monetary support. He was only there for a very short time (about three weeks). Whatever he had to say on the subject and whatever instruction he gave, he evidently made a point that any monies were to be utilized there locally. He did not take any of it. He made a special point of working during the time that he was there to set an example, not because he had to, in the sense that he did not have the right to receive monetary support. He makes the point that it was not that he couldn't have in the sight of God; it was simply that it was not the best time to stress that.

“...we might have made demands of you as apostles of Christ.” The prerogatives of the office were such that we had the right. That's what Paul means when he mentions in I Corinthians 6:12 and I Corinthians 10:23 that all things are lawful are not expedient (helpful, profitable) or beneficial. It was not necessarily going to be for the best at that particular time. Paul dealt with them in a special way because he was dealing with people who had certain hang-ups and certain problems. They were suspicious of motives. It was a city full of salesmen, a bunch of “slick operators,” and as a result, people were very suspicious of everybody else who came through. They kept waiting for “what's in it for him?” He wants to stress to them that he wasn't doing what he did to get rich. That was not his motives.

There were people who only knew or became aware of Mr. Herbert Armstrong in his latter years at a time when the work had grown greatly. They looked at Ambassador College and all the things and trappings of the work and said, ‘He was just in it for the money.’ Well, if he was just in it for the money, why was he in it for about thirty years before there was any money? Why was he in it through the years when there wasn't any money at all or during the years when his salary was $2.50 a week—not an hour, but a week! Why was he in it then? The same reason Paul was.

You don't come along and do something and say, ‘I know there's nothing now. I know I will suffer for thirty years, but when I am eighty years old, the income of the work will increase and I'll be able to fly places in a jet plane.’ There weren't any jet planes back when the work started. Do you know what will happen thirty years down the road? Of course not! You don't even know if you're going to live for the next thirty years.

We have Paul's example. Paul did not immediately lay claim on their tithes for his livelihood. He brings out in v. 6 that he wanted to make a point that he had a right to it, but he hadn't done it. Tithing was not the first sermon he preached.

He admonished them in v. 14, “For you, brethren, became imitators of the churches of God which are in Judea in Christ Jesus...” What did Paul do in the Gentile area? What did he do in Greece? He pointed the Churches there back to headquarters. How do they do it there? They became followers of the Churches in Judea. They were practicing the same thing.

The commentators like to say the Jerusalem Church kept the Sabbath. They can't deny that the Jews kept the Sabbath. You can read the book of Acts and what James told Paul in the latter part of Acts.

Acts 21:20, “...‘You see, brother, how many myriads of Jews there are who have believed, and they are all zealous for the law.’” The Jerusalem Church and the Jews were zealous of the law. There isn't any way that the modern commentators can deny that the Jerusalem Church in the first century kept the Sabbath and the Holy Days. They all acknowledge that. But they claim the Jerusalem Church kept the Sabbath and the Gentile Churches kept Sunday. No, they didn't! Paul told the Churches in Greece to be followers of the Churches in Judea. The Churches in Greece were taught by Paul to do the same thing the Churches in Judea did. And guess what? They got the same persecution. They were just as popular with their neighbors as the Church in Jerusalem was popular.

In I Thessalonians 3, Paul recounts the background of how he came to write the letter and why he was doing it.

I Thessalonians 3:13, “so that He may establish your hearts blameless in holiness before our God and Father at the coming of our Lord Jesus Christ with all His saints.” He was warning them to be established and to be dedicated in serving God.

I Thessalonians 4:3, “For this is the will of God, your sanctification: that you should abstain from sexual immorality.” Immorality was taken very lightly in the Greek and Roman world, particularly the Greek world. All sorts of immorality including premarital sex and homosexuality were treated very casually. They were very common sins. As he writes back to the Thessalonians, Paul lays stress—“this is the will of God: God wants you to be holy. He wants you to live holy lives. He wants you to be set apart as a holy people; one aspect of that is you have to abstain from immorality.”

Verse 4, “that each of you should know how to possess his own vessel [how to gain a wife, and how to do so] in sanctification and honor.” He says, ‘There is a different way of doing it then the way you’ve done it.’

Verse 5, “not in passion of lust, like the Gentiles who do not know God.” He’s telling them that they needed to go about getting married and to conduct themselves in a totally different way than their unconverted neighbors. Their conduct was not to be motivated by lust and lawlessness.

Verse 6, “that no one should take advantage of and defraud his brother in this matter, because the Lord is the avenger of all such, as we also forewarned you and testified.” What does he mean that no man should defraud or overreach (KJV, margin) his brother? This is tied in with what he is saying about immorality. You need to know how to go about obtaining a mate in sanctification and honor. You don’t do it the way the unconverted do it. You need to make sure that you don’t go beyond the bounds of propriety because if you do, you are defrauding your brother. You’re taking what doesn’t belong to you. When you engage in immorality, you are taking from the future mate of this person that which they are entitled to. Paul laid great stress on this because the whole culture of the Greek and Roman world was, frankly, very similar to some of the worse areas of our modern world.

I guarantee you that a place like San Francisco would not have been out of place in pagan Greece. The big Halloween blast they had, has been sort of adopted as “the big gay extravaganza” in San Francisco. They have big parades. It’s really a desire to flaunt a lifestyle. There were some Pentecostals who got the idea that they were going to come in. They rented the Civic Center and were going to hold a big revival service and cast out all the demons of San Francisco. Well, they didn’t cast out all the demons; they attracted all the demons. If you saw the news, I think every demon within fifty miles congregated outside there and it was literally pandemonium. “Pandemonium” is a Greek term that literally means “all demons.” There was a chaotic, confused mess. There was a horrible sort of confrontation and things that was going on there. It was the sort of thing that was certainly a very pagan extravaganza that would not have been out of place in ancient Greece.

Paul lays stress on some of these things in v. 7, “For God did not call us to uncleanness, but in holiness.”

Verses 11-12, “that you also aspire to lead a quiet life, to mind your own business, and to work with your own hands, as we commanded you, that you may walk properly toward those who are outside, and that you may lack nothing.”

God called us to be different, to be clean and not to conduct ourselves the way the world does. God wants His people to be different. He wants us to exemplify a different attitude, different actions and to carry and deport ourselves in a totally different way. The world emphasizes a totally false set of values—values that revolve around the lusts of the flesh and a lifestyle that is completely at variance with God’s law and the concept of holiness. We find it flaunted in actions, entertainment, television shows, movies, music, magazines, styles of dress and grooming—in virtually every aspect of our society.

The thing to realize is that the solution is not simply changing and cleaning up of the external. We have to realize that inner values are reflected by outer actions. The two go hand-in-hand together. In some cases, people have changed their outer actions, but the inner values really remain the same. That is backwards. If we change our inner values, our outer actions will reflect a different way. It will reflect a Godly lifestyle and set of values, as opposed to a worldly lifestyle and a worldly set of values. Paul laid great emphasis on this to the Thessalonians.

Verses 11-12, “that you also aspire to lead a quiet life, to mind your own business, and to work with your own hands, as we commanded you, that you may walk properly toward those who are outside, and that you may lack nothing.” We see over and over where he emphasizes people need to be productive and set a good example. There was a real problem. There were too many ways to get by; panhandling and making slick deals with the traders who were coming through and doing some of these things, and really not doing anything of productive value. The people had a reputation for laziness and they looked on working hard as somehow demeaning.

Verses 13-14, “But I do not want you to be ignorant, brethren, concerning those who have fallen asleep, lest you sorrow as others who have no hope. For if we believe that Jesus died and rose again, even so God will bring with Him those who sleep in Jesus.” Paul talked about the coming of the Messiah. Evidently, even some who had been baptized had, perhaps, died in just a matter of months. Some were concerned, “When the Messiah comes back, what about the ones who have died? Are they going to share in it?”

Verse 15, he said he didn’t want them to be worried about those who were asleep in Jesus. We are not going to precede them.

Verses 16-17, “For the Lord Himself will descend from heaven with a shout, with the voice of an archangel and with the trumpet of God. And the dead in Christ will rise first. Then we who are alive and remain shall be caught together with them in the clouds to meet the Lord in the air. And thus we shall always be with the Lord.” This is clearly not talking about being raptured up to heaven.

Zechariah 14:4, “And in that day His feet will stand on the Mount of Olives....”

I Thessalonians 4:17, “Then we who are alive and remain shall be caught together with them in the clouds to meet the Lord in the air. And thus we shall always be with the Lord.” We are going to be with Him from then on. Where is He going to be? Is He going back to heaven? No.

Zechariah 14:4, “...in that day His feet will stand on the Mount of Olives....” If we are with Him, then we are going to be standing there, too.

The Protestants want to read the rapture into the Scriptures. Most don’t even know where they got the idea of a rapture. The doctrine of the rapture originated with a Catholic mystic during the Middle Ages who had all sorts of visions and ideas. He was the source of the teachings about the rapture; it was absorbed by early Protestant thinkers. Now they try to take various scriptures to read the rapture into them.

I Thessalonians 5:1-2, “But concerning the times and the seasons, brethren, you have no need that I should write to you. For you yourselves know perfectly that the day of the Lord so comes as a thief in the night.”

My old Baptist preacher liked to quote the Bible about that point, and then he would close the book. He could really kind of “warm up the fires”; “The Lord is going to come as a thief in the night. He may come back tonight. You better come down and give your heart to the Lord or burn in hell forever.”

He is going to come as a thief in the night, but upon whom? The Church? God’s people?

Verse 4, “But you, brethren, are not in darkness, so that this Day should overtake you as a thief.” Paul didn’t expect that day to come upon him as a thief. A thief is someone who sneaks up unexpectedly. The return of Christ should not come upon God’s people unexpectedly.

Verse 6, “Therefore let us not sleep, as others do, but let us watch and be sober.” We are to have an approach that is going to be constructive. It will come as a thief on the world, as a whole, but not on Christians who are watching and praying.

Verses 9-10, “For God did not appoint us to wrath, but to obtain salvation through our Lord Jesus Christ, who died for us, that whether we wake or sleep, we should live together with Him.” Death, in the Scriptures, is compared with sleep. You see that over and over. The state of the death is not consciousness.

Verses 11-13, “Therefore comfort each other and edify one another, just as you also are doing. And we urge you, brethren, to recognize those who labor among you, and are over you in the Lord and admonish you, and to esteem them very highly in love for their work’s sake. Be at peace among yourselves.” He encouraged them to look to and to know the ministry and those who labored among them, to respect them for the work that they did, and to have peace among them.

Verse 14, “Now we exhort you, brethren, warn those who are unruly, comfort the fainthearted [KJV, “feble-minded”], uphold the weak, be patient with all.” He admonished and exhorted the brethren—or he beseeched (KJV, margin) the brethren. It was to warn or admonish those who are unruly or disorderly. There are those who need to be admonished, strongly corrected and exhorted because their conduct is disorderly. There are others who need to be comforted, encouraged and cheered up.

This term “feble-minded” (KJV) basically means “those who are depressed or discouraged.” That is the sense of the original word. Feble-minded has a different connotation in modern English. We think of it as someone who doesn’t have all their mental faculties. But it means those who are depressed or discouraged. There are those who need to be told to “shape up” or “ship out”; there are others who need to be encouraged because they are discouraged, somewhat depressed and need to be encouraged and comforted. There are some others who are weak who simply need to have somebody pay attention to them and give them some help. Different problems call for different things.

Verse 17, “pray without ceasing....” The concept of this is to never break the prayer habit. Never get away from prayer. Pray without ceasing. He exhorted them in these areas.

II Thessalonians 1:1 begins again with Paul, Silas and Timothy writing to the Church of the Thessalonians.

Acts 18:11, he was in Corinth for a year and a half. Clearly, this would have been written fairly soon after he wrote I Thessalonians because the problem was that some had jumped to conclusions with all his warnings about the end. He has to let them know that there are things that have to happen first.

II Thessalonians 2:3, “Let no man deceive you by any means; for that Day will not come unless the falling away comes first, and the man of sin is revealed, the son of perdition.” He had to go back and explain that there were things that have to happen first. This was to help clarify some of what he was getting across in I Thessalonians.

II Thessalonians 1:3, “We are bound to thank God always for you, brethren, as it is fitting, because your faith grows exceedingly, and the love of every one of you all abounds toward each other.”

In vv. 4-5, he says that they were still going through persecutions and tribulations. He brings out that God is going to recompense tribulations.

Verse 6, “since it is a righteous thing with God to repay with tribulation those who trouble you.”

Verses 7-9, “and to give you who are troubled rest with us when the Lord Jesus is revealed from heaven with His mighty angels, in flaming fire vengeance on those who do not know God, and on those who do not obey the gospel of our Lord Jesus Christ. These shall be punished with everlasting destruction from the presence of the Lord and from the glory of His power.”

What does “everlasting destruction” mean? The term “everlasting” here is Greek “aionios” and it means “age lasting.” The destruction that is being spoken of here is a destruction that is to endure for the remainder of that age; in other words, the Millennium. It is a wrath that is to be executed. The lake of fire is not being referred to here. It is the wrath that Jesus Christ is going to pour out at His return on those that don’t know God, those who are actively rebelling against God. They are going to be punished with age-lasting destruction. They will be destroyed for the entirety of that millennial age.

We’re told in Revelation 20:5, “The rest of the dead did not live again until the thousand years are finished.” The “rest of the dead” will rise up in the second resurrection.

But these are going to be destroyed at the return of Christ. Those who are actively opposing God and God’s people are going to be dealt with. It will be an age-lasting destruction. It is not the ultimate lake of fire because that doesn’t come at the return of Christ but rather after the Millennium and White Throne Judgment period (Revelation 20:7-16).

Verse 8 shows those who don’t know God. Christ is going to come back with power and glory and put the rebellion down; then they will be dealt with at a later time.

II Thessalonians 2:1-3, “Now, brethren, concerning the coming of our Lord Jesus Christ and our gathering together to Him, we ask you, not to be soon shaken in mind or trouble, either by spirit or by word or by letter, as if from us, as though the day of Christ had come. Let no one deceive you by any means; for that Day will not come unless the falling away comes first, and the man of sin is revealed, the son of perdition.”

Two things had to happen: a falling away and the man of sin will be revealed. This individual called “the son of perdition” or “the son of destruction” is an individual whose purpose is to be destroyed—someone who is cut out for destruction. Who is this individual?

Verses 4-11, “who opposes and exalts himself above all that is called God or that is worshipped, so that he sits as God in the temple of God, showing himself that he is God. Do you not remember that when I was still with you I told you these things? And now you know what is restraining [what’s holding things back], that he may be revealed in his own time. For the mystery of lawlessness is already at work; only He who now restrains [or hinders] will do so [will continue to restrain or hinder] until He is taken out of the way. And then the lawless one will be revealed, whom the Lord will consume with the breath of His mouth and destroy with the brightness of His coming. The coming of the lawless one is according to the working of Satan, with all power, signs, and lying wonders, and with all unrighteous deception among those who perish, because they did not receive the love of the truth, that they might be saved. And for this reason God will send them strong delusion, that they should believe the lie.”

Who is this talking about? There are those who have misunderstood and tried to apply II Thessalonians 2 to various individuals. I’ve heard various ones. Some have applied it to somebody that they are upset with in the Church in a leadership capacity—most of whom have long since gone by the wayside and are not around anymore. It doesn’t refer to any of them. This is clearly a reference to the final false prophet. I don’t care how far off track anybody in the Church gets; they are not going to be elected pope.

Verses 3-4, there will be a falling away, and the final man of sin will be revealed, the son of perdition. He is going to sit in the temple of God showing himself that he is God. What does that make reference to? What does that bring to mind?

Does that remind you of what Jesus said back in Matthew 24:15, “Therefore when you see the “abomination of desolation,” spoken of by Daniel the prophet standing in the holy place (whoever reads, let him understand).” There were those who thought it was different ones in the Church leadership. In effect, what happens is that people get mad at somebody; they get upset and then try to find something in the Bible really bad to hang on them. We don’t want to read into the Bible; we want to read out of the Bible.

Luke 21:20, “But when you see Jerusalem surrounded by armies, then know that its desolation is near.”

Mark 13:14, “But when you see the “abomination of desolation,” spoken of by Daniel the prophet, standing where it [he; “it” is not a neuter in the Greek] ought not (let the reader understand), then let those who are in Judea flee to the mountains.”

Matthew 24:15, “...spoken of by Daniel the prophet...”

What do we find? We find what’s called the “abomination of desolation.” Mark makes plain it is going to involve an individual standing where he should not. This is the abomination of desolation that Daniel spoke of. This is going to have to happen before the return of Christ. Paul brings it out here in II Thessalonians 2 but in different words. He says you are going to see this man of sin stand in the temple saying he is God. That’s pretty abominable. It is an abominable thing that brings about desolation and destruction.

We find Daniel said, Daniel 11:31, “And forces shall be mustered by him, and they shall defile the sanctuary fortress, then they shall take away the daily sacrifices, and place there the abomination of desolation.” What is Daniel talking about?

Daniel 8:11, “He even exalted himself as high as the Prince of the host; and by him the daily sacrifices were taken away, and the place of His sanctuary was cast down.”

Verses 23-25, “And in the latter time of their kingdom, when the transgressors have reached their fullness, a king shall arise, having fierce features, who understands sinister schemes. His power shall be mighty, but not by his own power; he shall destroy fearfully, and shall prosper and thrive; he shall destroy the mighty, and also the holy people. Through his cunning he shall cause deceit to prosper under his hand; and he shall magnify himself in his heart. He shall destroy many in their prosperity. He shall even rise against the Prince of princes; but he shall be broken without human hand.”

We find various other places where he is alluded to. There was a forerunner. The final abomination that makes desolate is what is going to happen just shortly before the return of Christ. It is going to begin the Great Tribulation. Christ emphasized that it would be an abomination that Daniel had talked about (Daniel 8 and 11).

In context, you find that there was a forerunner, an event that occurred in the second century B.C. when Antiochus Epiphanes was the king of the area of Syria. Antiochus Epephanes invaded Jerusalem. He came into the temple, stopped the daily sacrifices, set up an idol of Jupiter Olympus in the Holy Place. He took it into the Holy of Holies and stood there and proclaimed that he was God incarnate. “Epiphanes” (in the Greek) meant “the glorious appearing.” He claimed to be deity in the flesh; he was there as the personification of deity. He set up this idol and stopped the daily sacrifice. He had a pig slaughtered on the altar. What Antiochus Epiphanes did was a forerunner. The slaughter that he launched against the Jews is clearly referred to in context in Daniel 8 and 11. He is used as a forerunner for an individual who is his spiritual successor.

We are also told in II Thessalonians 2:9-10, “The coming of the lawless one is according to the working of Satan, with all power, signs, and lying wonders, and with all unrighteous deception among those who perish, because they did not receive the love of the truth, that they might be saved.”

Verse 8, we are looking at an individual who is going to be destroyed at the return of Jesus Christ.

Revelation 19:20, “Then the beast was captured and with him the false prophet who worked signs in his presence, by which he deceived those who received the mark of the beast and those who worshiped his image. These two were cast alive into the lake of fire burning with brimstone.” The false prophet works great signs (wonders) to impress the whole world.

Matthew 24:11, 24, “Then many false prophets will rise up and deceive many...For false christs and false prophets will arise and show great signs and wonders, so as to deceive, if possible, even the elect.”

Revelation 13:13-14, “He performs great signs, so that he even makes fire come down from heaven on the earth in the sight of men. And he deceives those who dwell on the earth by those signs which he was granted to do in the sight of the beast, telling those who dwell on the earth to make an image to the beast who was wounded by the sword and lived.” We find lying wonders (false miracles); things that are so impressive and appear so right that if it was possible, even the very elect would be deceived.

When we go back to II Thessalonians 2, we find that there will not only be a falling away from the truth, but there will be that final man of sin who will be revealed. He will oppose and exalt himself above all that is called God or that is worshipped; he’s going to stand there in the temple of God proclaiming himself God incarnate. He is going to work great lying wonders and he is going to be destroyed by Christ at His coming.

When you put II Thessalonians 2 together with Daniel 8 and 11, Matthew 24, Mark 13 and Revelation 13, it is talking about the same thing. It is talking about the events that relate to the abomination that makes desolate—that final false prophet. There is going to be a daily sacrifice stopped, which means that there is going to be a literal temple, a holy place. It doesn’t mean the temple is going to be completely built. but certainly an altar will be dedicated in some way or another. We have to take some of these things in their context.

Events are being held back until that final false prophet is on the scene.

II Thessalonians 2:6, “And now you know what is restraining [withheld], that he may be revealed in his own time.” Events are being held back until the final individuals are in place. The man and the events have to come together for things to happen as they are prophesied to happen. There are events on the world scene that can’t happen or progress too rapidly in certain areas until the right people are in place, so that when the event occurs, the response is what is prophesied.

God has a time schedule. Events are being held back until it’s time. Then the right individual will appear and be in place and things will come to a head. Paul explains that.

The mystery of iniquity was already at work even in 50 A.D., which had its beginnings with Simon Magus in Samaria in 33 A.D. Things were already stirring. The groundwork was being laid for some to fall away from the Church, but that final man of sin was not and has not been so. But once that occurs, things are going to come together very, very quickly.

Paul lays great emphasis on working. It evidently continued to be an ongoing problem.

II Thessalonians 3:7-9, “For you yourselves know how you ought to follow us, for we were not disorderly among you; nor did we eat anyone’s bread free of charge, but worked with labor and toil night and day, that we might not be a burden to any of you, not because we do not have authority, but to make ourselves an example of how you should follow us.”

Some take this out of context, and say, ‘Since Paul didn’t take a salary from the Church, ministers shouldn’t do that.’ There are many other places where it is clearly shown that Paul did receive his livelihood from his ministry. We will go through them in some of his Epistles.

When Paul was in Thessalonica raising up the Church, he did certain things, “not because we have not power [authority]...” (3:9). He did it for the purpose of setting an example. He wanted them to see a little bit of what hard work was like.

Verses 10-14, “For even when we were with you, we commanded you this: If anyone will not work, neither shall he eat. For we hear that there are some who walk among you in a disorderly manner, not working at all, but are busybodies. Now those who are such we command and exhort through our Lord Jesus Christ that they work in quietness and eat their own bread. But as for you, brethren, do not grow weary in doing good. And if anyone does not obey our word in this epistle, note that person and do not keep company with him, that he may be ashamed.”

In other words, he is to be disfellowshipped. “You are not to have company with him” is what “disfellowshipped” means. If an individual is going to conduct himself that way, then that individual needs to be noted and you need to leave him alone. He is not free to continue in the fellowship of the Church—with the hope that he will be ashamed of himself and realize the seriousness of what he’s done.

Verse 15, “Yet do not count him as an enemy, but admonish him as a brother.” You are not doing it because he is your enemy. You admonish him as a brother because you care what happens to him.

Paul had to come down really hard on this because there were some who would not do what they should do. They had this kind of lazy mentality. They didn’t want to work and wanted to “bum off” of some who were working and had money. They were saying, ‘You’re supposed to have love and you’re supposed to share—so why don’t you share with me.’

It’s not that we should be weary in well doing (v. 13) But on the other hand, it’s taking advantage and it’s taking it out of context to say, ‘You’re supposed to love me and share. I’m going to show up at your house every day to eat and “bum off” of you.’ As many times as Paul brought up the issue, it was obviously a problem—a problem that affected more than one or two. People are a product of their background.

The mystery of iniquity that Paul makes reference to certainly refers to the Simon Magus followers.

II Thessalonians 2:7, “For the mystery of lawlessness [iniquity] is already at work....” The mystery religion that teaches lawlessness—it certainly refers to the Simon Magus followers, which ultimately grew into what became the Catholic Church. It is an outgrowth of the old Babylonian Mystery Religion that taught that the law was done away. It’s called the “mystery of iniquity.”

II Thessalonians 3:14 deals with the subject of what we term “disfellowshipping.” An individual is unwilling to listen to the Church and respect admonition after he has been admonished on a serious matter, and he won’t listen. There comes a point where we simply say, ‘You really don’t have any basis for continued fellowship with those who are trying to live the right way.’ Those individuals are to be noted and simply left alone in terms of any sort of spiritual fellowship—with the idea that they will eventually wake up, realize the seriousness, repent and be restored to fellowship.

Hopefully that will give you an overview of I and II Thessalonians. There’s a lot that is packed in there.

Life and Letters of Paul Series—Galatians

We are getting into the book of Galatians this evening. It is an important book to understand. It is one that the world frequently misunderstands. There probably isn't a book that the Apostle Paul wrote that has been more misunderstood, distorted and taken out of context than has been the book of Galatians. As we get into the book itself, let's understand a little bit of the background of Galatians.

The commentators are not even sure where Galatia was. What they're not sure about, really, is what they understand best, and it kind of goes downhill from there. They are not sure where it was located and everything becomes less clear as they go along. Why do I say that they were not sure where it was?

The term "Galatia" was used in several different ways in the New Testament period. In some cases, it was used as a broad geographical term. It referred to a specific Roman province, but even the borders of the province changed a couple of times as Roman administration (in terms of the way they administered the Roman Empire) made some alterations. The result was that there's about two or three different areas that can be labeled Galatia. All of them are in the same general area.

If you were looking on a modern-day map, it would be the central area of modern-day Turkey, and what was anciently Asia Minor. Specifically, there is what the commentators call the "Northern Galatian theory" and "Southern Galatian theory" in terms of where Paul was writing. If we simply let the New Testament be our guide, then it is pretty apparent the Churches Paul was addressing were the Churches of Southern Galatia. The only areas we have any record of Paul going, in the book of Acts, are the Churches of Southern Galatia—the area of Derbe, Iconium, Listre and Antioch of Persicia. Those cities are in the area of Southern Galatia. That was the area where Paul went on his first evangelistic journey and again on the second evangelistic journey. This was one of the first areas Paul preached in and one of the first areas that he raised up Churches. It's an area where he spent a lot of time. Because it's an area from where Timothy came, this is an area where he had close connections.

There isn't any record of Paul going to the area of what is termed "Northern Galatia." There's specific reference in Acts 16:6-7 to the fact that God did not allow Paul to go there. Paul was on his way up into one of those areas on the southern shore of the Black Sea, and it says the Spirit did not allow him to do that. What we find is that the area of Northern Galatia was distinctly different from the area of Southern Galatia. Southern Galatia was Gentile. Northern Galatia, up in the area of the Black Sea, was the ancient habitation of the Gauls—the tribes that moved from that area across the Black Sea up into France and gave their name to ancient Gaul. Those up in that area were Israelites. Paul's ministry was to the Gentiles, not to the Israelites. "Galatia," the area where he went, was a geographical term in the New Testament. It stretched across the central portion of Asia Minor to the Mediterranean Sea on the south. The northern part was heavily Israelite—the Gauls who later migrated to France. Paul never went there.

There is a reference in Acts 16:6-7 to some of the specific geographic locations of that area in Northern Galatia, and the fact the Spirit did not lead Paul to go there.

Acts 16:6-7, "Now when they had gone through Phrygia and the region of Galatia, they were forbidden by the Holy Spirit to preach the word in Asia. After they had come to Mysia, they tried to go into Bithynia, but the Spirit did not permit them."

In reality, Peter went to that area.

I Peter 1:1, "Peter, an apostle of Jesus Christ, to the pilgrims of the Dispersion in Pontus, Galatia, Cappadocia, Asia, and Bithynia." Peter is addressing the area of Northern Galatia—the ancestors of some of you sitting right here because the ancestors of the French (the Gauls) were the primary group to whom Peter addressed the book of I Peter.

Southern Galatia which includes the cities of Listre, Iconium and Derbe was almost entirely Gentile. It was primarily Greek with a few Jews who settled in there. The Greeks moved into the area of what is now modern-day Turkey after Alexander the Great's conquest. They were major settlers in that area and were the predominant population until centuries later when the Turks invaded from Asia and gradually dispossessed them.

One thing that is very important to understand, in terms of the background of Galatia, is the background of the people in that area. In addition to the pagan mythology that was taught, there were the Hellenistic philosophies that were extant at the time. There were Greek philosophers who had gained great prominence throughout the Greek-speaking world. One of these philosophies was Stoicism. Stoicism was a very popular philosophy in that area. Stoicism places a great deal of emphasis on astrology. It emphasized what is termed “pagan dualism”—the concept that the flesh is evil and the spirit is good.

In Lamphear’s Classical Dictionary, the Stoics maintained that, “man alone in the present state of his existence could attain perfection.” This was the concept of the Stoics. It was a concept of penance, a matter of enough good deeds to outweigh the bad deeds. This was the background of the people who were in the Church in Galatia.

The book of Galatians itself was written by the Apostle Paul to the Churches in the Southern Galatian area in the winter of 52-53 A.D.—December of 52 to January/February 53 A.D.—from his headquarters in Antioch, Syria. Paul had visited this area on his first evangelistic journey back in 46 A.D. He went through that area on his first evangelistic journey and spent considerable time there. Then he finally went back to Antioch. It was in the aftermath of going back to Antioch that the issue of circumcision “came to a head” and he went to Jerusalem for the ministerial conference of 49 A.D. We have that recorded in Acts 15.

Subsequent to the conference in the later winter/early spring of 50 A.D., Paul visited Galatia once more on his second evangelistic journey. He came through Galatia traveling through in the spring of 50 A.D., crossing from Asia Minor into Greece (into Europe) around Pentecost of 50 A.D. He spent quite a number of months in Greece. He was originally in Philippi, then went down through Thessalonica, Berea, Athens and came down to Corinth. He stayed eighteen months in Corinth. We read that last time and saw that it was from Corinth that he wrote his letters back to the Thessalonians.

After eighteen months in Corinth, he left and sailed back over to Ephesus and went back to Jerusalem for the Feast of 52 A.D.

Acts 18:21, he needed to go back for the Feast that was in Jerusalem.

Verse 22, he wintered in Antioch, which was his headquarters for the Gentile work when he wasn’t on the road. He was in Antioch the winter of 52-53 A.D. It was from there that he wrote to the Galatians. He had heard some things that concerned him. Because he had received some disquieting news of events that had transpired, he dispatched this letter to answer the questions that had arisen. As we get into the book itself, we will see a little bit about what is addressed.

Galatians 1:2, “and all the brethren who are with me, to the churches of Galatia.” The Churches that are specifically in the area of Galatia are Derbe, Iconium and Listre. They are the main areas there. I have already made comment of the population of the area of the Galatian Churches.

Let me call your attention to Galatians 4:8, “But then, indeed, when you did not know God, you served those which by nature are not gods.” Clearly, he is addressing people who were of a Gentile background—people who at one time had not known God and had served idols. “...are not gods...” This is not a reference to Jews because they had known the true God and they had not served idols. The people Paul is addressing are people who came out of idolatry, people who had a pagan background. There were a few Jews in there, but the whole came out of a pagan background. We’re all a product of our background. We are shaped and molded by certain thoughts and concepts of which we have grown up.

Galatians 1:1, “Paul, an apostle (not from men nor through man, but through Jesus Christ, and God the Father who raised Him from the dead).” Paul lays emphasis on the fact of his apostleship, the work that God had done through him, and the scriptural authority that he had that originated from God.

Clearly, one of the major problems in Galatia was that somebody had been in Galatia and problems had been stirred up. What was the subject of things being stirred up? One issue is that somebody had been challenging Paul’s authority. They were saying, ‘Paul is really a second-rate apostle, if you can even call him an apostle. You don’t need to pay any attention to what he says. He really doesn’t have very much authority. In fact, I have more authority because I have come from Jerusalem.’ These were self-appointed individuals who had come down from Jerusalem and had not been officially dispatched by James.

The issue of the book of Galatians has to do with access to God. What all the peripherals in Galatians get back to is how you gain access to God. What is necessary to establish and maintain a relationship with God that will ultimately result in salvation? This is why circumcision was such an issue. The reason circumcision was such an issue in the New Testament period was because it concerned access to God. Understand what we mean.

Remember when God made the covenant with Abraham (Genesis 17). The physical sign of the covenant that God gave to Abraham was the physical outward sign of circumcision for Abraham and his male descendants (vv. 10-11). At the time of the Exodus when Moses gave instructions from God to the Israelites concerning the Passover, one of the things he said was that no uncircumcised person was to partake of the Passover (Exodus 12:44-49). You had to have entered into that covenant relationship.

Paul was writing at the time that is termed the "second temple," the period of Herod's temple. There was much more courtyard to the temple than there was anything else. The temple itself consisted of the Holy Place and the Holy of Holies. Only the priests went into the Holy of Holies. Out in front of the Holy Place was the altar of sacrifice. This was inside a courtyard that was the court of the Israelites. There was a gate that led out to the court of the Gentiles.

Remember the issue in Acts 21:26-39 that came up where Paul got arrested and it resulted in Roman imprisonment. Somebody nearly started a riot in the temple with an accusation against Paul. They accused him of bringing a couple of uncircumcised Gentiles into the temple compound, into the inner court. This provoked a near riot.

When emotions got all charged up, pretty soon the people didn't even know what the charge was, but they were mad and had a "lynch-mob" mentality. When one of the soldiers finally got him, he thought that Paul was the Egyptian robber. But he said, 'That's not me at all; they are accusing me of something else.' He didn't even know what the charge was. He thought they must have a terrible "desperado" in there that the people had cornered. Paul wasn't bringing anybody who was uncircumcised into the temple. That wasn't even true, but he was accused of it.

The point I am making is it was an issue of access. If you couldn't enter into the court of the Israelites, you couldn't offer a sacrifice because that's where the altar of sacrifice was. When the sacrifices were made, the animal was slain and the fat and some of the entrails were burned on the altar. Then the carcass was divided. The priest took some and the worshipper took some. The symbolism involved was one of communion or fellowship with God.

That's made reference to in I Corinthians 10:16-20, "The cup of blessing which we bless, is it not the communion of the blood of Christ? The bread which we break, is it not the communion of the body of Christ? For we, being many, are one bread and one body; for we all partake of that one bread. Observe Israel after the flesh: Are not those who eat of the sacrifices partakers of the altar? What am I saying then? That an idol is anything, or what is offered to idols is anything? But I say that the things which the Gentiles sacrifice they sacrifice to demons and not to God, and I do not want you to have fellowship with demons."

I would like to call your attention to what is not obvious from the English translation. The words "communion" in v. 16, "partakers" in v. 18 and "fellowship" in v. 20 are all the same words in the Greek language. The concept of "fellowship" or "communion" is the same root word as to "communicate with." "Community" is another word that is derived from that. The point he is making is that when we all partake of the Passover symbols, there is a fellowship that we have with one another and with Christ.

Verse 18, "...Israel after the flesh: Are not those who eat of the sacrifices partakers of the altar?" They were in fellowship with the altar.

Verse 20, the Gentiles sacrificed to demons, and if you partook of that, then you were having fellowship with demons. The concept was that God's part was burned on the altar, the priest took his part to eat and the worshiper took his part. Symbolically, what you had was fellowship between the worshiper, God and the priest.

It was the picture of sitting down at a table and enjoying a meal of intimate fellowship. It was the concept of entering into a close, intimate relationship. When you have somebody at your table and you sit down and share your food with them, a particular fellowship is involved. This was the concept. That's why some of it was burned on the altar. That was in a sense what God partook of. What the individual took, he partook of and the priest partook of. There was a fellowship, a communion, a community that included God, the priest and the worshiper.

Circumcision was crucial to entering into that relationship (fellowship) because the uncircumcised couldn't come past the court of the Gentiles. You didn't have access to the altar of burnt sacrifice. The issue at stake was: What is necessary in order to have access, communion and fellowship with God? This is where things have gone astray.

We recognize that access to God is through Jesus Christ. In fact, no one had direct access to the Father. Jesus said, 'I have come to declare the Father' (John 1:18; John 5:37; John 14:7).

In the temple itself, you had the Holy Place then the Holy of Holies. There was a big thick curtain that separated the Holy Place from the Holy of Holies. The high priest was the only one who could enter into the Holy of Holies and he went in once a year on the Day of Atonement (Leviticus 16:34; Hebrew 9:7).

Matthew 27:51, when Jesus was crucified, there was a great earthquake, the veil of the temple was torn in two, and now the way was open into the Holy of Holies. This symbolized the fact that Jesus Christ's sacrifice (His death) made possible our direct access to God. Access is through Jesus Christ. It still comes through a sacrifice, not through a lamb or a goat or ox, but through Jesus Christ who offered Himself as a sacrifice, one sacrifice for sin forever (John 1:29; Hebrew 9:12). We have access through Him. He is the source and means of our access to God.

The issue that came up in Galatia was that it was difficult for some to accept that access to God was that simple. You had various concepts that blended pagan ideas and philosophies with certain Jewish attitudes and ideas, and then they threw in an overlay of Christianity. People tended to accept a mixture of truth and error. There were those who were telling the Galatians that if they really wanted to guarantee and ensure access to God, they needed to be concerned about other things.

The issue that they had made, specifically, regarded circumcision. Their approach to circumcision was as though it were a matter of penance. This is why Paul made such a major issue of circumcision and the fact that they should not do it. It got to the very heart and core of the Gospel.

Paul was not opposed to circumcision from a physical standpoint. He himself had been circumcised and he had circumcised Timothy, who had a Jewish mother and Gentile father, when he took him with him in the ministry. Because Timothy had a Jewish mother, he felt that it would make a difference in terms of the way Timothy was regarded and accepted by the Jews.

But the issue was that there were those who were seeking to make circumcision a test of access and fellowship with God. They said that if you weren't circumcised, you weren't guaranteed access to God; therefore, there was no guarantee of salvation unless you were circumcised. That was why Paul chose to make such a crucial issue of it and not to give one inch or quarter inch. It got back to the very heart and core of whether or not the sacrifice of Jesus Christ was sufficient to gain access to God as a means of salvation, or whether there were physical things you had to do.

We need to understand that because some think you have to do "this or that" to be saved. How many Sabbaths do you have to keep in order to be guaranteed salvation? How many Passovers? How many Feast of Tabernacles? Think about it a little bit. What if somebody was baptized between Passover and Pentecost and the next year were killed in a car wreck on their way to Passover services and never kept the Passover. Is it necessary to keep the Passover to be saved? How many Sabbaths did the thief on the cross keep? He died the very day that he repented. It is not how many you have kept. The real issue gets back to the heart and the mind. If he had lived, would he have done it? Yes, he would. It's not the physical things you do that save you. It's not how many Sabbaths, Feasts, etc. that you have kept.

But if you're not willing to obey God, if you're unwilling to keep the Sabbath or Feast or do the things God says to do, then you have never repented and have never accepted Christ as your Savior. You're not on the way to salvation. It is an issue of the heart and mind. No amount of Sabbath keeping earns salvation. Jesus Christ paid the penalty for sin and through Him we have access to God and salvation. When we accept and avail ourselves of that access, we will act on the things that God tells us to do. Acting on that access means we repent and turn away from sin and accept the Lordship and rulership of Jesus Christ in our lives. We want Him to live His life in us.

Paul says that in Galatians 2:20, "I have been crucified with Christ; it is no longer I who live, but Christ lives in me; and the life which I now live in the flesh I live by faith in the Son of God, who loved me and gave Himself for me." The issue is not that we can live a life of rebellion and disobedience. No. If we are Christ's, then symbolically we are crucified with Christ and it is Christ who lives in us. He is living His life in us, so there is a yielded life, a surrendered life.

Access to God and, ultimately, salvation is not achieved by what you do. Your actions don't gain you access to God. Christ's action made possible your access to God. You could do everything perfectly and that would never earn you access to God. If it would, then why did Christ have to die? If access to God can be accomplished and achieved by simply going out and becoming circumcised or by doing “this” or “that,” then why did Christ die? He died in vain. It would have been far simpler to have just said, ‘Go and do this and you will have gained access.’ That is why it is such a fundamental issue because the issue goes back to: How do you gain access to God? If there is another way, then Christ didn’t have to die. We are saying Christ’s sacrifice really was in vain. Protestants want to twist the book of Galatians and say that Galatians means that you shouldn’t keep the law. That is not what Galatians is about.

It makes plain, in the latter part of Galatians (Galatians 5:16-26), the contrast between the works of the flesh and the fruits of the Spirit. There are tangible fruits that God’s Spirit will bear in our lives.

But how do you gain access?

Galatians 1:1, “Paul, an apostle (not from men nor through man, but through Jesus Christ and God the Father who raised Him from the dead).”

Verses 11-17, Paul addresses the issue of his apostolic authority. The message he preached was not something that he figured out for himself nor was it something other people told him, but it was revealed directly by God. He gave a little of his background and how Christ worked with him and taught him even after His resurrection. The resurrected Christ dealt with and taught Paul.

Galatians 2:1, “Then after fourteen years [after his conversion] I went up again to Jerusalem with Barnabas, and also took Titus with me.”

Verse 2, “And I went up by revelation, and communicated to them that gospel which I preach among the Gentiles, but privately to those who were of reputation, lest by any means I might run, or had run, in vain.” This is reference to the ministerial conference (Acts 15) in 49 A.D. Fourteen years previously would date Paul’s conversion in 35 A.D. He went up to Jerusalem. Notice how he went. He went up and talked to those who were the leaders but privately to them who were of reputation.

Verse 9, “and when James, Cephas and John...” Cephas is the Aramaic equivalent of the Greek word “petros” for Peter. Cephas was the name he was commonly known by his contemporaries because it was the Aramaic form of his name. It was the name that Jesus Himself would normally have used.

Verse 9, “and when James, Cephas and John, who seemed to be pillars....” “Seemed” is the same word that is rendered “reputation” in v. 2.

Those who were acknowledged and recognized to be pillars of the Church were James, who was the brother of Jesus and the presiding minister in the Jerusalem Church, Peter, who was the chief of the twelve apostles, and John, who was a part of the inner circle of the twelve. These were the ones who were acknowledged or recognized by others to be the pillars of the Church—to be the leading ministers. When Paul went up, he went up to those in authority. He privately conferred with them.

He said, v. 2, “...privately, lest by any means I should run or had run in vain.” He knew that if he was not working in harmony with the government God had set in His Church, his best efforts would be in vain. You can’t work contrary and be off in some rebellious way, doing your own thing, and think that’s acceptable. Paul recognized that and went up privately. Before he said anything to anybody else, he went to the ones who were the leading ministers. He sat down and talked it out with them because he didn’t want his efforts to be futile.

Verse 3, Titus was not compelled to be circumcised.

Verse 4, there were false brethren who came in unawares seeking to bring them into bondage. The issue was not so much that physical circumcision was such a harsh or terrible thing. The bondage was that you had to earn access to God through some form of penance. The bondage was the whole concept that the Stoics, Gnostics and various philosophers of the day had of how you went about gaining access to God. There were all sorts of concepts that the pagan world had. These pagan concepts ultimately came into what became the professing Christian church, and those were not acceptable.

Verses 7-8, the decision was made at the conference that Paul was to be placed in charge of the work for the Gentiles. He would go to the Gentiles and Peter would head up the work among the Israelites. Christ sent Peter and the twelve apostles primarily to the lost sheep of the house of Israel (Matthew 10:5-6).

Verses 11-15, at a later time Peter came to Antioch; Antioch was Paul’s headquarters. Peter visited there for a period of time. Some have speculated this may have been a Feast of Tabernacles. The implication is that this was something that took place over a period of several days.

Certain ones came down from Jerusalem and an issue of fellowship arose. Many of the Palestinian Jews had very little occasion to have fellowship with the Gentiles one way or the other because there really weren't any to speak of. There certainly weren't any in the Church there in Jerusalem and the Judean area. About the only ones would have been Roman soldiers and Roman administrators. So it had not really been an issue there because the only ones in the Church were Jews.

Antioch had a sizable Gentile community. By this time, the Church there was primarily Gentile. Peter made an error in judgment and Paul saw that it was going to create a problem and division. He met the issue head on. Peter acknowledged that he had made a mistake and the matter was resolved. He needed to make clear that the Gentiles who were uncircumcised did not have some lesser relationship with God. Their contact and relationship with God was not on a lower "rung of the ladder." There wasn't anything about these matters that regulated spiritual access to God.

Galatians 2:16-18, "knowing that a man is not justified by the works of the law... [You are not going to accomplish justification, which is what makes possible access to God, by doing physical things]...but by faith in Jesus Christ, even we have believed in Christ Jesus, that we might be justified by faith in Christ and not by the works of the law; for by the works of the law no flesh shall be justified. But if, while we seek to be justified by Christ, we ourselves also are found sinners, is Christ therefore a minister of sin? Certainly not! For if I build again those things which I destroyed, I make myself a transgressor."

It is not that we don't have to obey God and just live in sin because we're not justified by the works of the law. That's not what He said. He goes on to reiterate that because he knew people would want to take it out of context and say, 'We're not justified by the works of the law, so we can just do anything we want to.' That's not what Paul said. But the issue still is that the works of the law do not justify us.

Verse 21, "...if righteousness comes through the law, then Christ died in vain." Why did He go through what He went through if His sacrifice wasn't necessary? If you can do it yourself, then why did Christ die? This is the issue Paul keeps coming back to. That's the crucial point. There was a reason why Christ had to die. If access is not through Jesus Christ, then why do you need a Savior? Jesus Christ is the means by which we have access to the Father.

Galatians 3:2, "This only I want to learn from you: Did you receive the Spirit by the works of the law, or by the hearing of faith?" How did you receive God's Spirit? You received God's Holy Spirit when you were baptized. How did you gain that access to God? You wouldn't have the Spirit if you didn't have access to God. How did you gain that access? Was it because you circumcised yourself and you did these physical things? Did that gain you access to God? Was it because you believed the gospel, repented and was baptized? Where did you gain the Spirit? If you have the Spirit of God, then you have access and contact with God and you don't need something else in order to gain it. How did you get what you have? Where did that come from? He brings them back to the fact that they believed Paul's message.

Verse 2, "...by the hearing of faith." They believed the gospel, repented and had been baptized.

Verses 3-5, all right, you already have the Spirit, why do you need to do this?

Verses 6-9, then he goes through and begins to explain using the example of Abraham. What gained Abraham access to God? Did circumcision gain access to God? No, Abraham had a relationship with God before he was ever circumcised. Circumcision was something that was added as a physical outward sign of the covenant God made with Abraham. It was predicated upon the relationship that Abraham already had with God through faith. Abraham's relationship with God was through faith, not through something physical. God gave him circumcision as a sign when he was ninety-nine years old. God had been working with him for at least twenty-four years prior to that. God called him when he was seventy-five to come out of Ur of the Chaldeans and go to a land that he would show him (Genesis 12:1-4).

Our access to God is ultimately predicated upon faith, and that is directed toward Jesus Christ. He makes that access possible.

Verses 10-11, "For as many as are of the works of the law are under the curse; for it is written, 'Cursed is everyone who does not continue in all things which are written in the book of the law, to do them.' But that no one is justified by the law in the sight of God is evident, for 'The just shall live by faith.'"

Verse 13, "Christ has redeemed us from the curse of the law... [What is the curse of the law? The curse of the law is the death penalty. What's the curse?...]...having become a curse for us (for it is written, 'Cursed is everyone who hangs on a tree')."

Deuteronomy 21:22-23, “If a man has committed a sin worthy of death and he is put to death and you hang him on a tree, his body shall not remain overnight on the tree, but you shall surely bury him that day, so that you do not defile the land which the Lord your God is giving you as an inheritance; for he who is hanged is accursed of God.”

The curse is they will take you out and hang you. They will execute you. The wages of sin is death (Romans 6:23). The curse of the law is the death penalty. That is the curse that the law imposes. Upon whom is that curse imposed? Upon those who obey? No.

Galatians 3:10, “...Cursed is everyone who does not continue in all things which are written in the book of the law, to do them.” The curse is upon anyone who disobeys. And since all have disobeyed at one time or another (Romans 3:23), then everybody is under the curse. How do you get out from under it?

The works of the law, the labors imposed by the law, are labors that had to do with gaining access to God through the sacrificial system. The rituals, washings and all of these labors that were carried out were predicated on the fact that you had sinned and needed to regain access to God. So when you performed any of those things, you were in effect acknowledging that you had sinned. If you sinned, then you are under the curse. The way you get out from under the curse is not the performance of certain ritual acts. It is through the sacrifice of Jesus Christ, through our faith in that sacrifice and our acceptance of it. The works of the law make reference to the ritualistic labors that were imposed by the law as a schoolmaster.

Galatians 3:19, “What purpose then does the law serve? It was added because of transgressions...” Is this talking about the Ten Commandments? Remember the Sabbath is part of the Ten Commandments. Were the Ten Commandments added because of transgression? No. The Ten Commandments defined what transgression was to begin with (I John 3:4, KJV).

Romans 5:13, if there were no law, there would be no sin.

Before Israel ever came to Mount Sinai (Exodus 19 and 20), remember the miracle of the manna (Exodus 16). If they gathered extra manna on any day, it stunk and bred worms—except on Friday. On Friday, they were told to gather an extra portion. It lasted over the Sabbath and they didn’t have to go out and gather on the Sabbath. There was somebody that went out on the Sabbath because he figured it had been there the last six days; therefore, it should be there today, too. He didn’t see why it wouldn’t be. And sure enough, it wasn’t. The Sabbath was known. It was revealed miraculously to Israel and was being enforced by God before they ever got to Mount Sinai. The Sabbath was in effect. It wasn’t introduced at Mount Sinai.

At Mount Sinai, Israel said, ‘All that the Lord has said we will do’ (Exodus 19:8; Exodus 24:3, 7).

Galatians 3:19, “What purpose then does the law serve? It was added because of transgressions, till the Seed should come to whom the promise was made; and it was appointed through angels by the hand of a mediator.” The Ten Commandments were not ordained by angels in the hand of a mediator (Exodus 20:19); they were spoken by the mouth of God Himself (Exodus 20:1; Deuteronomy 5:22). After they were spoken, Moses went up into the mountain.

While he was gone for six weeks, Exodus 32, they built the golden calf. They transgressed the commandments they had accepted as part of the covenant. Clearly, idolatry and adultery stand out and everything else connected with it. What happened when Moses came back down? Remember what came next? Instructions for the tabernacle and the Levitical sacrificial system are what were given next (Exodus 36-40; Leviticus 1-7). What was added because of transgression (Galatians 3:19)? The ritual laws are the basis of what Israel went through and how they enacted regaining of access to God. There were things that were added as a schoolmaster.

Galatians 3:24, “Therefore the law was our tutor [KJV, “schoolmaster”] to bring us to Christ, that we might be justified by faith.” The “schoolmaster” is there to teach a lesson. What was added? The law was added because of transgression until Christ would come.

Hebrews 9:8-10, “the Holy Spirit indicating this, that the way into the Holiest of All was not yet made manifest while the first tabernacle was still standing. It was symbolic for the present time in which both gifts and sacrifices are offered which cannot make him who performed the service perfect in regard to the conscience—concerned only with foods and drinks, various washings and fleshly ordinances imposed until the time of reformation.”

Here was something that was added because of transgressions, until Christ, that was symbolic of how we gained access. Four things symbolized how you gained access: 1) meat offerings (the oblations), 2) drink offerings (the libations), 3) the washings (the ablutions) and 4) the physical ceremony. The sacrifice of Christ was pictured by the sacrificial offerings burned on the altar, the pouring out of the blood and the water that was ceremonially poured out at the altar, and the drink offerings. In order for the priest to go into the presence of God, first there was the sacrifice (meat offerings, drink offerings). Then he approached closer to the tabernacle and he went through the ceremonial washing. Then following specific ritual, he took the golden censor into the tabernacle or temple.

How do we gain access? Christ made it possible by paying the penalty. He offered Himself as a sacrifice. The meat and drink offering pointed to what Christ did.

Christ took the first step. What do we do in response? If we accept that, we then must clean up—we must be washed. Repentance is what the different washings pictured, a symbolic washing or cleansing. You can't come into God's presence dirty and unclean. Then we have to follow God's instructions to the letter and beyond the letter; we have to follow them in the spirit. The various physical ceremonies and rituals pointed to the fact that God has a specific way He wants things done.

Galatians 3:19, "...It [the law] was added because of transgression...." They were not the means to access. They were merely things that illustrated God's plan for how access would be given. The access comes through Jesus Christ.

Galatians 3:19, "...It [the law] was added...till the Seed should come...." It was to last until the time of Christ. It was to teach a lesson and to point out what the Messiah would do. Paul lays great emphasis on it.

Romans 6:23, "The wages of sin is death...." Death is the result of lawbreaking. If you had a need to engage in these ritualistic activities to gain access to God, then you were acknowledging that you had sinned and were cut off. The curse is on everyone who hasn't perfectly obeyed. If you ever sinned, you were in trouble, which includes all of us. We don't gain justification from that sin by doing it right from now on. We gain justification by the fact that Christ paid the penalty.

Galatians 3:13, "Christ has redeemed us from the curse of the law, having become a curse for us...." He paid the penalty in our stead.

Verse 19, "...It [the law] was added because of transgressions...."

Jeremiah 7:22-23, "For I did not speak to your fathers, or command them in the day that I brought them out of the land of Egypt, concerning burnt offerings or sacrifices. But this is what I commanded them, saying, "Obey My voice, and I will be your God, and you shall be My people. And walk in all the ways that I have commanded you, that it may be well with you.""

God did not originally speak to them about burnt offerings and sacrifices (Exodus 19, 20). When they disobeyed, there were rituals added because of transgressions. This makes reference to the whole book of Leviticus.

Galatians 3:27-28, "For as many of you as were baptized into Christ have put on Christ. There is neither Jew nor Greek, there is neither slave nor free, there is neither male nor female; for you are all one in Christ Jesus." This clearly refers to spiritual relationships, not physical relationships.

It is incredible how people will misuse and distort scriptures. I read the other day a couple of homosexuals who wanted to get married in some church—if you can even call it a church. The scripture they used to justify that was that there is neither male nor female in Christ. That is not what it's talking about. I think we all understand that. Hopefully we do.

What is obliterated is not the physical distinctions of our ethnic background, our economic status or our sex. The issue that Paul is addressing is access to God. You don't have a "leg up" in terms of how much money or how little money you have. That has no bearing on your access to God. Money will gain you access to the rulers of this world, but it won't gain you access to God one iota. You don't have a "leg up" because of your ethnic background, economic status or sex. When it comes to access to God, none of those things count for anything. That is what Paul is emphasizing.

Verse 29, "And if you are Christ's, then you are Abraham's seed, and heirs according to the promise."

Galatians 4:10 is often greatly misunderstood and taken out of context, "You observe days and months and seasons and years." At that point they like to close the book and say you're not supposed to observe the Sabbath. If that proves you are not supposed to observe the Sabbath, does it prove that you are also not supposed to observe Sunday? It just says, "observe days," not which days. The ones who are making an issue of this are observing Sunday, Christmas, Easter—all kinds of things. That is a selective use of the Bible. You have to get the context of which days and months and times and years are being referred to. It doesn't mention the Sabbath or the Feast days.

Verse 8, "But then, indeed, when you did not know God, you served those which by nature are not gods." You could make a better case for Christmas, etc. These were people who came out of a pagan background, not Jewish. These were people who were idolaters.

I was just recently going through a Bible Handbook. It's a new one and they had a quote in there in reference to Sunday. They referred to the original decree that the Emperor Constantine issued to make Sunday a day of rest. They even acknowledge that Sunday was not a day of rest until Constantine's decree about 315 A.D. In his decree, he referred to it as the venerable day of the Sun (capital "S"). Constantine was, by background, a sun-worshiper—a worshiper of the sun god. So he made this day of the sun god a day of rest throughout the Roman Empire.

Galatians 4:8, when you didn't know God you served idols.

Verse 9, "But now after you have known God, or rather are known by God, how is it that you turn again to the weak and beggarly elements, to which you desire again to be in bondage?" Here are people who came out of idolatry who are turning back to the very same thing they came out of, "to the weak and beggarly elements whereunto you desire again to be in bondage." People who came out of idolatry were turning back to some of the very things they had turned loose of.

Verses 10-12, "You observe days and months and seasons and years. I am afraid for you, lest I have labored for you in vain. Brethren, I urge you to become as I am..." Now, how was Paul?

He said in I Corinthians 11:1, "Imitate me, just as I also imitate Christ."

I Peter 2:21-22, "...Christ also suffered for us, leaving us an example, that you should follow His steps: 'Who committed no sin, nor was guile found in His mouth'."

I John 3:4 (KJV), "...sin is the transgression of the law."

Luke 4:16, "...And as His custom was, He went into the synagogue on the Sabbath day, and stood up to read."

Hebrew 13:8, "Jesus Christ is the same yesterday, today, and forever."

Acts 18:4 shows that Paul went into the synagogue on the Sabbath, "And he reasoned in the synagogue every Sabbath, and persuaded both Jews and Greeks."

Galatians 2:20, the life Paul lived—it was Christ living in him.

Galatians 4:12, "Brethren, I urge you to become as I am..." How was he? Christ lived in him. Christ set an example. Follow me as I follow Christ. Christ hasn't changed. Christ kept the Sabbath. Paul kept the Sabbath.

Is Paul condemning Sabbath keeping? No. Really, the primary emphasis in this section has to do with astrology. Astrology was a very major thing in the pagan and Hellenistic world. Clearly, it involves people who were turning back to Gentile customs.

It mentions in v. 10, "...days and months..."

Leviticus 19:26 shows that the Jews were forbidden to observe times (KJV). This is a reference to astrology.

"Elements" in Galatians 4:9 is explained in The Art Gingrich Greek English Lexicon as coming from "stoicon" and refers to the elemental spirits and to the heavenly bodies that were also regarded as personal beings and given divine honor. Heavenly bodies—the signs of the Zodiac—astrology.

Galatians 4:9, "...turning back to the weak and beggarly elements..." It was a reference to the things that controlled the elemental spirits of the universe, as one version renders it. It was a term that was used to refer to the pagan deities that controlled astrology. Here, they were getting encumbered and observing days and months and times and years. What we have in Galatia is clearly what's termed a "Gnostic" influence.

"Gnostic" was a Greek term that meant "we know." It was a philosophy and a reference to an approach that mixed elements of the Stoic. They mixed together several different things of how you gain access to God. It placed a lot of emphasis on astrology and "lucky" and "unlucky" times, "lucky" and "unlucky" days—things that you did or didn't do on certain times. It had to do with a lot of physical things you had to do to somehow gain favor.

What we have in Galatia, are people who are getting caught up in a total misunderstanding of what circumcision is all about, people who were being caught up in these ideas of what was necessary for them to gain access to God. They were beginning to slip back into some of the paganism that they came out of. They were bringing some of that in to "cover all the bases." Paul speaks very clearly in regards to this.

Galatians 4:21, we have already made reference to what "under the law" means. Paul goes through an analogy in the latter part of chapter 4, speaking of the contrast between Hagar and Sarah, and what came naturally and what came by promise from God. In other words, what you can engender, what you can do on your own, is not where the solution lies. It lies in what God can and will do if you trust Him and you believe Him.

Galatians 5:1, “Stand fast therefore in the liberty by which Christ has made us free, and do not be entangled again with a yoke of bondage.” The yoke of bondage was this concept that you have to earn it by the things that you physically do.

Verse 14, “For all the law is fulfilled in one word, even in this: ‘You shall love your neighbor as yourself.’”

Verses 15-16, “But if you bite and devour one another, beware lest you be consumed by one another!” There are two contrary natures: the desires generated by the flesh and those generated by the spirit.

There are consequences: the works of the flesh are the sins that are enumerated in vv. 19-21, “Now the works of the flesh are evident, which are: adultery, fornication, uncleanness, licentiousness, idolatry, sorcery, hatred, contentions, jealousies, outbursts of wrath, selfish ambitions, dissensions, heresies, envy, murders, drunkenness, revelries, and the like....”

The fruits of the Spirit are enumerated in vv. 22-23, “But the fruit of the Spirit is love, joy, peace, longsuffering, kindness, goodness, faithfulness, gentleness, self-control....” We need to be oriented toward serving God.

Galatians 6:7-8, “Do not be deceived, God is not mocked; for whatever a man sows, that he will also reap. For he who sows to his flesh will of the flesh reap corruption, but he who sows to the Spirit will of the Spirit reap everlasting life.” Showing that we are ultimately going to reap what we sow.

Throughout the book of Galatians, Paul emphasizes that you can’t earn access to God through what you do. You can’t earn salvation through penance. You don’t gain access to God by the carrying out of certain works or rituals.

We have a book that is written to explain God’s law to Gentiles and to explain the relationship of law and grace to those who were filled with the Hellenistic philosophy. It is a book that has been very commonly and frequently misunderstood, distorted and twisted because of the attitudes that the world has had.

We will get into I Corinthians next time.

Life and Letters of Paul Series—I Corinthians

We are getting into the book of I Corinthians this evening. I would like to comment by way of background on I Corinthians, particularly the background of the city of Corinth. Corinth was a city in Greece. It was, really, the commercial capital of Greece. It was a major port and it had all the major problems of ports. In some ways, it was the “New Orleans” of its day, perhaps in more ways than one. Corinth, at the time of the Apostle Paul, had a population of about four hundred thousand, just a little bit smaller than the city of New Orleans. It was a very major world city in that day. There were only three cities that had a larger population than Corinth at the time of Paul: the cities of Rome (Italy), Alexander (Egypt) and Antioch (Syria). The population was mainly Greek, but there were others there because Corinth was a very cosmopolitan city. As a result of being a very busy seaport, the wealth and the life of Corinth were really proverbial in the ancient world.

The temple of Aphrodite, the patron deity, sat on a large hill that overlooked the city of Corinth. “Aphrodite” was the Greek name for the one that the Romans called “Venus,” the goddess of love, or perhaps more accurately, the goddess of lust because that’s what Aphrodite amounted to. The worship of Aphrodite involved temple prostitution. There were sacred prostitutes who served there in the temple. It was a climate of immorality that, in some ways, even surpassed most places today. I don’t know that it would surpass San Francisco, but it would certainly “run them a good race.” I think the cities we have today that are proverbial for their vice and immorality really don’t have a whole lot on Corinth. Corinth was quite noted for that kind of thing.

The city of Delphi was located a few miles north of Corinth. This is where the famous Delphic Oracle, the priestess of Apollo, resided. The Delphic Oracle was quite famous throughout the ancient world. People from various areas would make pilgrimages to Delphi to ask a question of the god Apollo.

The priests there had quite a show that they put on. They would begin to dance around, “hoop” and “holler,” work themselves up into this, as the historians or commentaries term it, “ecstatic frenzy.” It was kind of like a Pentecostal church; that is about what it amounted to. They would “hoop” it up until this Delphic Oracle, a woman, would finally get so wild eyed and worked into such a state of frenzy that she would fall over and begin to babble incoherently. At that time, it was felt that she was speaking in the language of the gods. Speaking in, as the Greeks termed it, “an unknown tongue”—the tongue of the gods.

The priests would dutifully take this down and then claim to interpret what she said. Basically, they would say whatever they wanted to say and claim that this was the interpretation of what she had said. They were quite noted for coming up with some enigmatic interpretations.

One of the most famous was back several centuries prior to the time of the Apostle Paul. A king who was contemplating an attack on the Persian Empire traveled there to the Delphic Oracle. He was told by the priest who claimed to interpret what the oracle had said, ‘If you attack Persia, a great empire will be destroyed.’ He assumed that meant he would win. In reality, he lost. They said, ‘That’s what we said. We didn’t tell you which empire.’ They were kind of noted for “playing both ends against the middle” on their prophecies. You could take it a variety of different ways.

People are affected, shaped and influenced by their background and by the things that are around them. The people in the Corinthian Church grew up in a city that was noted for its wealth and luxury. It was a commercial center. There was a lot of trading and a lot of ships that came and went. Since it was a major port, the people were materialistic; they tended to think in material terms. It was a comparatively wealthy area.

They were influenced by the very casual attitude toward immorality. Immorality was taken very lightly. Many had grown up in a religious background where immorality was even utilized in that context. They were influenced religiously. We are going to notice the impact of the surrounding area, even the impact of the Oracle of Delphi a short distance away.

One of the things important to understand is that the word for “tongues” in the New Testament is very plain. When you go to Acts 2, the miraculous gift of the Holy Spirit was the gift of speaking in foreign languages. The individuals in Jerusalem from other countries were able to understand in their own language. “Glossolalia” in the Greek is translated “tongues” and means almost exactly what our English word “tongues” means. In the Greek language there are three different connotations. It was used in three different ways: (1) the physical organ in the mouth. James 3:5 says your tongue is a little member but boasts great things. (2) It refers to foreign languages. Acts 2 clearly refers to people hearing the sermon in their own language. We sometimes refer to “my native tongue,” using tongue to refer to a foreign language. (3) It is also used by the Greeks to refer to the so-called ecstatic speech of the Delphic Oracle. There were other lesser oracles, but realize that ecstatic speech (speaking in tongues) played a role in pagan Greek religion. There were aspects of pagan Greek religion that would have not been dissimilar to a lot of Pentecostal meetings. That’s not commonly recognized, but it was, nevertheless, the case that existed.

When you hear a word, you understand and interpret that word on the basis of the way you have heard it used. What it means to you is not necessarily what it means to the person who said it. That’s one of the reasons that people have a lot of problems sometimes in reading the Bible. We have grown up with certain false religious teachings and we tend to read those into the Bible. We have things to unlearn.

Many of the so-called “difficult scriptures” that people come up with are only difficult because we have a pre-conceived idea of what it means. It doesn’t “square” with the truth, but the verse seems to say that. Yet if someone just looked at it objectively, it wouldn’t say that at all. But it says it to us because we have had a background of where that has been, perhaps, misused or misapplied. This “colored” some of the problems that existed in Corinth.

We are going to see that the latter part of the book of I Corinthians deals with the subject of tongues. In reality, there are several chapters. Chapter 14 specifically deals with the subject, but chapters 12 and 13 lay the basis for what Paul is going to say in chapter 14.

Paul wrote the book of I Corinthians. He came to Corinth on his second evangelistic journey in the fall of 50 A.D. We went through that last time. Paul, after the ministerial conference of 49 A.D., returned to Antioch. Then, leaving in the spring of 50 A.D., traveled across Asia Minor, and finally entered into Greece (Europe) on Pentecost of 50 A.D. He came from Philippi, up in northern Greece (Macedonia), down through Thessalonica, Berea, down a little further to Athens, and finally wound up in Corinth. He stayed there eighteen months. It was from there that he wrote I and II Thessalonians. Then he left just in time to return to Jerusalem for the Feast of Tabernacles in 52 A.D. (Acts 18:21).

In Acts 19, we find that Paul came to the area of Ephesus on his third evangelistic journey. If you have a map, you might check. Ephesus is right on the coast of modern-day Turkey, right on the edge of Asia Minor, just across the water from Corinth. It is a little over a hundred miles away by water. Ephesus was a major port. There were ships that went back every day. Roman cargo ships carrying mail made that journey, leaving Ephesus several times a day. Paul came back to Ephesus on his third journey and he stayed there in Ephesus quite a while. It was toward the end of his stay in Ephesus that he wrote I Corinthians, which would be dated to the Days of Unleavened Bread 55 A.D. I will show you why we would date it to the Feast of Unleavened Bread of that year.

The thing that we see right off in the book of I Corinthians is that it was written in response to problems.

I Corinthians 1:11, “For it has been declared to me concerning you, my brethren, by those of Chloe’s household, that there are contentions among you.” You can imagine this went over really well. Chloe was evidently a wealthy lady who lived in Corinth, and there was a congregation that evidently met in her home. There were perhaps two or three similar home congregations that met in the greater Corinth area. They perhaps all assembled together only on Holy Days and special occasions. This was probably one of the things that created a situation where there was more divisiveness. There did not seem to have been a resident local pastor in Corinth at that time that had the oversight of the whole city. Problems existed.

So someone from the house of Chloe had been dispatched over to Paul with some news. They had evidently caught a Roman cargo ship out of Corinth to Ephesus. The trip would have taken a couple of days. They came to Ephesus and told Paul some things that were going on. Paul, in turn, wrote this letter.

He starts off by saying, ‘I’ve heard some news and I’m not really happy about what I’ve heard.’ You can just know all the people were in a “wonderful” attitude when they found out that some of Chloe’s people had gone over and told Paul what was going on. People always tend to “like” that sort of thing.

They had divisions beforehand and knowing human nature, they probably had a few more for a little while. There were problems with divisiveness. There were a variety of problems. There were problems addressed in chapter 5 with immorality. There was an individual in the Corinth Church who was living in an incestuous relationship with his stepmother. Nothing was done or said. There wasn't any Church discipline that was exercised in the matter. The people sort of prided themselves with their broad-minded outlook and all the love that they showed. They had a misguided understanding of what love is.

God is not broadminded and tolerant toward sin. God is very merciful and forgiving to repentant sinners, but there is a vast difference between being broadminded and tolerant of sin and being merciful toward repentant sinners. A repentant sinner is one who has turned away from sin.

This individual had clearly not turned away from sin because he was living in sin. Repentance is not a matter of sinning every night and repenting every morning. That is not repentance. This wasn't a situation that was acceptable. It was brought to Paul's attention, which he had evidently not known before, but was common knowledge in the Corinthians Church.

I Corinthians 5:2 "...you are puffed up...." Paul said, 'You're actually proud of yourselves about how tolerant and broadminded you are.'

Some were taking each other to court. I Corinthians 6 deals with that.

They had written to Paul at an earlier time.

I Corinthians 7:1, "Now concerning the things of which you wrote to me...." He was perhaps in the process of answering the letter when he really got stirred to action by some things that were brought to his attention. So he answered in the course of their letter. There were some questions they asked about marriage and divorce.

In chapter 8 and again in chapter 10, he addressed some issues that they had raised about things offered to idols.

In chapter 11, we come to the fact that there had been problems at Passover. There were serious problems—to the point that people had gotten drunk. Verse 21 indicates that. It was a real mess.

In chapter 12, there were misunderstandings about spiritual gifts. This was a spin-off of a lot of the divisions, and it probably aggravated a lot of the divisions and divisiveness. There was great misunderstanding about spiritual gifts and what is real spirituality. Paul had to deal with this in chapters 12, 13 and 14.

There were really serious problems that were brought to Paul's attention. The impetus of the letter seems to have been several of these things—particularly the Passover abuses and the fornicator who was there in the congregation—which prompted him to write when he did.

We date it to the Days of Unleavened Bread on the fact of chapter 5.

I Corinthians 5:7, "Therefore purge out the old leaven, that you may be a new lump, since you truly are unleavened. For indeed Christ, our Passover, was sacrificed for us."

"Since you truly are unleavened." How can someone be unleavened? What does that mean? There are two ways you can take it. He either meant it physically or he meant it spiritually. Were they spiritually unleavened? Is that the way he meant it? He had just said in v. 2 that they were puffed up. So, spiritually, they weren't unleavened. Spiritually they were puffed up. They were the very opposite of being unleavened spiritually.

The only way that they could have been unleavened was physically because it's very plain from Paul's use of the term in chapter 5 that they weren't spiritually unleavened. He could only mean it in the physical sense. He was writing during the Days of Unleavened Bread.

There had been a problem at Passover and this had brought matters to a head; this was the "icing on the cake." Someone had been dispatched from Chloe's household. They had caught one of the Roman mail cargo ships the next morning. Within a couple of days (by the second Day of Unleavened Bread), they'd have been in Ephesus. If Paul took a couple of days to compose his reply and they caught the boat back (let's say on the fourth Day of Unleavened Bread), they would have been back in Corinth by the sixth day. This letter could have been read in the congregation on the final High Day. I think this is perhaps the most likely scenario. The context of chapter 5 makes plain it was written during the Days of Unleavened Bread.

In chapter 11, you read that there were problems at Passover; it was this previous Passover. Now was the time to correct it. It was fresh and he really "lined them out." The Days of Unleavened Bread are all about putting sin out, and by the time they got through reading I Corinthians, they found out about two or three whom they needed to put out. They had only unleavened physically; they had not unleavened spiritually. That's the need that Paul addressed.

In I Corinthians 1, he addresses the subject of division and the importance of unity. The division was that people wanted to choose their own champions and do their own thing.

In vv. 26-29, he emphasized our calling.

In I Corinthians 2, he brings out the fact that his preaching had not been some clever manipulative way of impressing them. He did not try to impress them by the things that the Greeks were impressed with or by man's wisdom and great philosophies.

I Corinthians 2:4, "And my speech and my preaching were not with persuasive words of human wisdom, but in demonstration of the Spirit and of power." Paul wanted their faith to be anchored, not on the cleverness of men, but on the power of God.

He addresses something that is important to understand.

Verse 11, "For what man knows the things of a man except the spirit of the man which is in him? Even so no one knows the things of God except the Spirit of God."

We are told that there is a spirit in man. The spirit in man is what sets apart the human mind from the animal brain. It enables us to function on a human level. "For what man knows the things of a man except the spirit of the man..." If it weren't for the spirit of man that enables us to function on a human level, then we would be functioning on an animal level. "...Even so no one knows the things of God except the Spirit of God." You understand things on a physical level because of the spirit of man. The spirit of man, which is in you, enables your brain to function on something above an animal level. It imparts to you that "spark" that raises humanity above the level of animal concept. In the same way, there are things on the spiritual level. If God's Spirit is not working with someone, you simply can't grasp spiritual things.

I can't read over this without thinking about Mr. Herbert Armstrong going over and over this. He said you couldn't go out and teach arithmetic to a cow because it doesn't have the spirit of man. In the same way, it takes God's Spirit working with us to enable us to grasp and to comprehend on a spiritual level.

In I Corinthians 3, he addresses the spiritual state of the Church; their spiritual state was that they were carnal.

I Corinthians 3:3, "for you are still carnal..." They weren't spiritual.

Verses 1-3, "And I, brethren, could not speak to you as to spiritual people but as to carnal, as to babes in Christ. I fed you with milk and not with solid food; for until now you were not able to receive it, and even now you are still not able; for you are still carnal. For where there are envy, strife and divisions among you, are you not carnal and behaving like mere men?"

If you read through I Corinthians and this is the "milk" of the word, I'd hate to have been on the receiving end of the "meat" because Paul has some pretty "tall" stuff here in I Corinthians. Here were people who were not maturing spiritually. We grow and mature physically, and in the same way, we have to grow and mature spiritually.

Verse 9, "For we [referring to the ministry; himself and other ministers] are God's fellow workers together with God; you [the congregation] are God's field, you are God's building."

Verses 10-11, "According to the grace of God...I have laid the foundation, and another builds on it. But let each one take heed how he builds on it. For no other foundation can anyone lay than that which is laid, which is Jesus Christ."

Then he discusses what is built on the foundation.

Verse 12, "Now if anyone builds on this foundation with gold, silver, precious stones, wood, hay, straw." Paul uses the analogy of a building project.

It's kind of interesting. The Greek word that has been translated "bishop" in the New Testament comes from the Greek word "episcopa," which literally means "an overseer." The analogy that is drawn is that God has a building program. God is constructing a spiritual edifice, a spiritual temple.

Ephesians 2:20, Jesus Christ is the chief cornerstone. The prophets and apostles comprise the foundation.

In I Peter 2:5, Peter uses the analogy and compares us to being living stones.

Paul tells us in Hebrews 9 that the things that were done, relative to the tabernacle and the temple, all had a spiritual counterpart and were types of the heavenly. They were all typical of something.

Have you ever given consideration as to why, when you go back to I Kings 6:7, it was stressed that when Solomon built the temple, there was not the sound of a hammer or chisel that was heard on the temple site? While it was being built, all the stones were exactly pre-cut to where they exactly fit when they were constructed. You can go back and read the account of the building.

It was a very unusual building site. Normally you go to a building site and hear all kinds of noise and racket, hammering and beating away. It was a pretty quiet building site. In other words, everything fit. Why did God insist that it be done that way? One of the primary reasons is to serve as a type of a spiritual temple. It was to teach us a certain lesson.

As Paul says, Hebrews 8:5, “who serve the copy and shadow of the heavenly things, as Moses was divinely instructed when he was about to make the tabernacle. For He said, ‘See that you make all things according to the pattern shown you on the mountain.’” These were analogies of the heavenly.

Hebrews 9:24, “For Christ has not entered the holy place made with hands, which are copies of the true....” That’s why God had it done according to specific instructions.

When the spiritual temple is assembled at the resurrection, that’s not when Christ is going to get out the hammer and chisel and start working on some of us to make us fit. We are being quarried right now, and sometimes it hurts to get a few of the knots knocked off as we’re “squared off.”

Christ is the Chief Cornerstone. In the ancient practices of building, the cornerstone was crucial because it was laid and everything was measured from it. Things were measured out using the plumb bob and the plummet. The cornerstone was the basis by which everything else was set. The cornerstone was the orientation in terms of the exact direction or configuration of the building. Everything was measured off the cornerstone. If the cornerstone was out of kilter, the whole building was going to be out of kilter.

We all have to fit in around Christ. He’s not changed to conform to us; we’re changed to conform to Him. The cornerstone is laid and then everything else is fit in. Everything else has to be cut to measure, to fit the configuration that is determined by the cornerstone.

I Corinthians 3:9, Paul draws this analogy and he says, “...we [referring to the ministry] are God’s fellow workers; you are God’s field, you are God’s building.” The term “episcopos” means “bishop” or “overseer.” The analogy is that the ministry was pictured as being in the role of a construction site overseer.

We’re told, in Ephesians 4:11-13, that one of the jobs of the ministry is the building up, the edifying, of the body of Christ. “Edifying” simply means “building up.” It’s the analogy of a construction project going on.

Paul has said, I Corinthians 3:10, “...I laid the foundation....” Paul said that was his role.

We could say in terms of this work and this era today that Mr. Herbert Armstrong laid the foundation. God used him to lay the foundation for this phase of God’s work. Others have in turn built on that foundation. Various ones come in and may build different parts; maybe some are working on this area and some on that area. We’re working together to build up a temple fitly framed together (Ephesians 2:21-22; 4:16). Paul uses this analogy.

He talks about the construction material.

I Corinthians 3:12, “Now if anyone builds on this foundation with gold, silver, precious stones, wood, hay, straw.” He talked about the components that made the temple. The temple consisted of cut stones, precious and semi-precious stones, gold and precious metals. You might contrast that with something built out of wood, hay and stubble. By the time you get down to the hay and stubble, you don’t have something that’s going to last. If you light fire to it, it certainly isn’t going to last very long.

Verse 10, “...But let each one take heed how he builds on it.” Paul is addressing the ministry. In context, it applied to those in Corinth, but it’s a warning that God has given to His ministry down through the centuries through the pen of the Apostle Paul. You had better take heed what you build and what kind of construction material you are utilizing. Will it stand the test of fire? Fire is used as descriptive of the Tribulation or of fiery trials. In other words, when the pressure is on, what’s going to happen? Is it going to go up in flames or is it going to be purified and refined?

Paul says, v. 10, “...I have laid the foundation, and another builds on it. But let each one take heed how he builds on it.” Those of us in the work today have to be careful what we build because the Day will ultimately declare it.

Verse 13, “each one’s work will become manifest; for the Day will declare it, because it will be revealed by fire; and the fire will test each one’s work, of what sort it is.” As we move toward the consummation of the age and the Great Tribulation, it is going to become apparent how well things have been constructed. The quality of the work of the ministry, in any given area, is going to be revealed as the pressures and trials came on.

We’ve gone through some serious problems in the Church over the years in times past. Serious trials and difficulties came up. Some areas were devastated and lost large numbers of people; some were barely scathed. To an extent, part of it was a reflection of the quality of what had been built in that local area. When an area is devastated, it becomes apparent that there’s been an awful lot of wood, hay and stubble that went into the construction and not as much gold, silver and stone.

There is a point that applies here. It applies to the ministry in Corinth. Problems and trials, things that were going to come, would try the Church at that time, and it was going to be apparent what others had done. Paul had laid a foundation and had gone on. Others were responsible to build upon that foundation. If they didn't do it in a sound way, when the problems came, it would be revealed.

Verse 13, "each one's work will become manifest; for the Day will declare it..." It applied then, and it has applied down through the centuries. It applies down through the history of God's work in our time as far as the ministry is concerned, and it applies on further out. Also, by analogy, we can apply it in our lives. It involves the quality of the character that we build. Certainly, the analogy is a valid one, though in context, it more specifically referred to criteria by which the ministry was being judged, and the quality of workmanship becomes apparent.

We're told the importance of respecting the temple of God.

Verse 17, "If anyone defiles [destroys] the temple of God, God will destroy him. For the temple of God is holy, which temple you are." It is important that we recognize the sanctity of what God has made holy. That applies in our own lives and it applies in terms of the Church as a whole.

Verse 16, "Do you not know that you are the temple of God and that the Spirit of God dwells in you?"

I Corinthians 4:1-2, "Let a man so consider us, as servants of Christ and stewards of the mysteries of God. Moreover it is required in stewards that one be found faithful." Paul uses the example that the ministry is pictured as God's stewards. One of the great criteria of a steward is that he is faithful.

Verses 3-4, "But with me it is a very small thing that I should be judged by you...For I know nothing against myself, yet I am not justified by this; but He who judges me is the Lord." Paul says, 'I am not worried about your judgment. I am not accountable to you. I am not your steward. I am God's steward; I am accountable to God.'

The greatest criterion of a steward is that he has to be faithful. When you hire somebody to manage your affairs, if the guy is a crook, this is the quickest thing that will disqualify someone from serving as a steward (manager). Paul says, 'I am accountable to the One whose steward I am.' Paul tells the Corinthians their opinion is not what concerns him. 'God's opinion is what I'm thinking of and what I am concerned about because I know that I am going to have to give an account to Him. It's not your opinion that counts, and it's not mine—it's God's opinion. I'm going to have to give accountability to Him; I'd better be faithful with my charge. If I'm not, then I am going to be held accountable.'

He is setting the stage for what he gets into.

I Corinthians 5:1-2, "It is actually reported that there is sexual immorality among you, and such sexual immorality as is not even named among the Gentiles—that a man has his father's wife. And you are puffed up, and have not rather mourned, that he who has done this deed might be taken away from among you." Paul really begins to "lay into" them. He says, 'You don't seem to know what to do about it.'

Verse 3, "For I indeed, as absent in body but present in spirit, have already judged, as though I were present, concerning him who has so done this deed."

'I'll tell you exactly what to do.'

Verse 5, "deliver such a one to Satan for the destruction of the flesh, that his spirit may be saved in the day of the Lord Jesus." In other words, this individual was to be put out of the fellowship of the Church and from the benefits and blessings of God's Church. If you want to live like the devil's world, then you're a part of the devil's world. Just turn him over to Satan in the hope that what he goes through, no matter how painful physically, it will serve to wake him up spiritually and he will ultimately come to repentance.

Verse 13, "...put away from yourselves that wicked person."

Verses 9-10, "I wrote to you in my epistle [this was not the first time he wrote] not to keep company with sexually immoral people. Yet I certainly did not mean with the sexually immoral people of this world, or with the covetous, or extortioners, or idolaters, since then you would need to go out of the world."

If you didn't associate with immoral people in the world around you, you'd have to live in a cave somewhere. Paul said, 'That's not what I'm writing to you about. What I meant was that this kind of thing can't go on in the Church.'

Verse 11, "But now I have written to you not to keep company with anyone named a brother, who is a fornicator, or covetous, or an idolater, or a reviler, or a drunkard, or an extortioner—not even to eat with such a person."

You can't have this kind of a tolerance of sin because a tolerance of sin cheapens the sacrifice of Christ. If sin is such a big deal that God had to give the sacrifice of Jesus Christ to pay the penalty of it, then sin is a very serious matter. To trivialize sin is, in effect, to regard the sacrifice of Christ as cheap and contemptible. God made the ultimate sacrifice. Sin is a big deal. We have to take sin seriously or we trivialize the sacrifice of our Savior. Why do we even need a Savior if sin is not serious business?

We can't have a casual, careless, tolerant attitude toward sin. God's attitude is an attitude of great love and mercy toward repentant sinners because when we repent, God removes our sin. It's not that you have to live under this guilt forever because of sin. God makes it possible to have the guilt removed. Christ paid the penalty.

When we get to II Corinthians 2:6-11, we will see that the individual that Paul had to deal with very severely repented and was then received back with open arms. Paul said to make him welcome, confirm your love toward him. It's not a matter of something held against someone. God's way is a way of mercy upon repentance. But judgment precedes mercy. It sets the stage for mercy. If there was no judgment, then mercy is trivialized. It becomes of no account. It becomes your due rather than of grace.

Paul had to deal with them. It was a very fundamental concept of the Days of Unleavened Bread. They really didn't grasp the concept of the importance of putting out sin.

I Corinthians 5:2, "And you are puffed up, and have not rather mourned..." You should have been really grieved and bothered by this. Ezekiel talks about those who sigh and cry for the abomination in Israel (Ezekiel 9:4).

Paul is very explicit. He is just getting warmed up.

I Corinthians 6:1, "Dare any of you, having a matter against another, go to law before the unrighteous, and not before the saints?" Why weren't some of these matters, disputes that came up, settled in the Church? Why do we hear of members airing their dirty laundry before the outside?

In fact, v. 6, brother was going to law with brother. Christians with legal disputes should not go to worldly courts. The matter should be settled in the context of the Church.

Verse 7, "Now therefore, it is already an utter failure for you that you go to law against one another. Why do you not rather accept wrong? Why do you not rather let yourselves be defrauded?" Why wouldn't you rather suffer wrong than contribute toward open scandal for the Church? You should have an attitude where you would suffer wrong and you would put up with something that is not right. You would suffer wrong before you would contribute toward giving the Church a "black eye."

Verse 8, "No, you yourselves do wrong and defraud, and you do these things to your brethren!" Instead of not being willing to suffer wrong, you are doing wrong.

Verse 9, "Do you not know that the unrighteous will not inherit the Kingdom of God? Do not be deceived. Neither fornicators, nor idolaters, nor adulterers, nor homosexuals, nor sodomites."

Verses 8-16, he really begins to "line them out" on this. He stresses the matter of immorality.

Verse 18, "Flee sexual immorality...."

In I Corinthians 7, he gets into the questions they had raised about the state of marriage and issues involving divorce.

Verses 1-5 address the issue about the fact of a married couple having proper relations with one another and not defrauding one another.

It's kind of an amazing dichotomy that you have in some of these societies such as Corinth. On the one hand, you have rampant immorality; on the other, you have those who want to swing to the opposite end and say that celibacy is the way to go. That just sets the stage for other problems as far as morality. Paul laid stress that marriage is the proper approach.

He then deals with several specific issues.

Verse 8, he addresses the issue of those who are unmarried and those who are widows. He says that it would be good if they remained that way, even in the way that he was.

Verse 9, if it was a problem for them to remain single and they wanted to get married, they were to go ahead and marry.

He mentions a little further the present distress.

I Corinthians 7:26, "I suppose therefore that this is good because of the present distress—that it is good for a man to remain as he is." It was a time of trial—a time of impending trial and persecution in which whole segments of the population may have to literally flee for their lives. In the area where they were and with the circumstances, this was really not the ideal time to be establishing a family and taking on family responsibilities.

However, vv. 28-29, it is not a matter of sin. If you feel like it is going to be a problem, then go ahead and get married. But he was just warning them that they were entering a time of a lot of pressure and difficulties and persecution.

Verse 8, he addresses those who were unmarried or widows.

Verse 10, "Now to the married I command, yet not I but the Lord: A wife is not to depart from her husband.” The context is clearly that both mates were in the Church. His emphasis is that the husband is not to put away the wife and the wife is not to depart from her husband.

Verse 11, “But even if she does depart, let her remain unmarried or be reconciled to her husband. And a husband is not to divorce his wife.”

If she does depart, she must remain unmarried or be reconciled. There can’t be divorce and remarriage within the Church. That just flies in the face of what Christ said. He says, ‘Don’t depart.’

He recognizes that there may be certain circumstances where, at this point in time, they simply can’t live together. He recognizes that there are grounds for separations that are not grounds for divorce and remarriage. There may be grounds for not living together. “But if she does depart, let her remain unmarried or be reconciled to her husband...” When two are in the Church, you either work it out or live alone. Those are the two options.

Verse 12, “But to the rest I, not the Lord say... [In other words, he was not directly quoting Jesus Christ as he had the previous verse.]...If any brother has a wife who does not believe, and she is willing to live with him, let him not divorce her.” This is referring to being married to someone who is not a believer. The fact that she is an unbeliever is not grounds to dissolve the marriage.

Verse 13, “And a woman who has a husband who does not believe, if he is willing to live with her, let her not divorce him.” She does not have grounds to leave him.

In v. 14, he continues and stresses the unbelieving mate and children are sanctified, set apart, by the believing mate. There is a benefit and a blessing that is extended to the whole family.

Verse 15, but if the unbeliever initiates the separation, is unwilling to continue the marriage and leaves, then in that narrow circumstance the brother or sister is not bound.

Verse 16, it goes on to stress the fact that people can change.

Verse 17, “But as God has distributed to each one, as the Lord has called each one, so let him walk. And so I ordain in all the churches.” Basically, whatever our circumstance when we’re called, we just need to make the best of it. Then he addresses the subject of those who were divorced when they came into the Church. He addresses several different subjects.

Verses 27-28, “Are you bound to a wife? Do not seek to be loosed [don’t seek a divorce]. Are you loosed from a wife [are you divorced]? Do not seek a wife. But even if you do marry, you have not sinned; and if a virgin marries, she has not sinned. Nevertheless such will have trouble in the flesh, but I would spare you.” This is based on the fact of the present distress he had mentioned in v. 26.

The point was that as he addressed earlier in v. 20, “Let each one remain in the same calling in which he was called.” Basically, make the best of your circumstance. But then farther down, he addresses that he didn’t mean it to be taken out to the extreme in terms of marriage because he said that if you’re called and married, don’t seek to end the marriage. If you’re called and you have been divorced, he is not advocating that you go and seek marriage. But if you do marry, there’s not a sin involved because the sins that were a part of the previous relationship were washed away at baptism and you have a chance for a fresh start. In the same way, someone who has never been married is certainly free to marry. Paul is not forbidding marriage. He is simply counseling that in the context of the present distress, marriage may not be a really good idea. But it’s not a matter of sin. It is just the circumstances that are involved.

Where married couples are both in the Church, they are not free to divorce and remarry. Divorce and remarriage is not permitted inside the Church. There may be circumstances where they are not going to be able to live together. In that case, they will have to be single. They are to remain unmarried or become reconciled. For those who have been divorced before they came into the Church, marriage is permitted though not necessarily recommended because of certain problems. When an unconverted mate is unwilling to live with the mate in the Church and terminates the marriage, the converted mate is not bound in that case.

In I Corinthians 8, Paul addresses the issue of things offered to idols. The greatest emphasis is the importance of not letting your liberty become a stumbling block to others.

I Corinthians 8:13, “Therefore, if food makes my brother stumble, I will never again eat meat, lest I make my brother stumble.” The issue was food offered to idols. It is important to grasp the circumstances.

In many of the Gentile cities in the major areas, much of the meat that was available in the meat market had been slaughtered earlier that day at an idol’s temple. When sacrifice was made, whether to God or to an idol, it didn't mean that the entire animal was consumed on the altar. Normally, only a small portion of the blood was poured out or some of the fat or entrails were used. A certain portion was reserved for the priest. But, basically, most of the meat was available. Now, in most of the idol's temple, the priests got a lot more than what they could consume, so they would sell it. It would be sold through the meat market. It was actually a source of income.

I Corinthians 10:14-17, "Therefore, my beloved, flee from idolatry. I speak as to wise men; judge for yourselves what I say. The cup of blessing which we bless, is it not the communion of the blood of Christ? The bread which we break, is it not the communion of the body of Christ? For we, being many, are one bread and one body; for we all partake of that one bread."

He talks about the Passover cup and bread, how it has to do with the communion or fellowship of the Church with Christ, and we're all partaking of the same thing.

Verse 18, "Observe Israel after the flesh: Are not those who eat of the sacrifices partakers of the altar?" The same root word is translated "communion" in v. 16 and "partakers" in v. 18. The terms "communion" in v. 16, "partakers" in v. 18 and "fellowship" in v. 20 are all the same word in the Greek language.

The point that is being made is that there is a communion (a fellowship) that is entered into when ancient Israel sacrificed. They were picturing a fellowship, a meal, a close communion and fellowship with God that involved the one that offered the sacrifice, the priest and God. And as they all partook of the same meal, so to speak, it was a picture of an intimate, close relationship.

The Jews understood this concept. For that reason, they viewed partaking of anything that had been offered to an idol or that had been connected with an idol's temple as meat that was forever tainted and polluted; it had been rendered "common."

That's the difference, by the way, between "common" and "unclean."

In Acts 10:14, Peter said, "...For I have never eaten anything common or unclean." There is a difference, though most don't realize it. "Common" simply means it "wasn't kosher." Food can be clean and still not be kosher—not meet the standards of slaughter and bleeding, etc. Primarily, the issue at that time would have involved meat that had been offered to an idol.

The reality was that when you went into a meat market, the slabs of meat were hanging and you couldn't tell which had been offered to an idol. There wasn't anything intrinsically that had been physically changed in the meat. Some of it hadn't been offered to an idol, but probably a large part of it had. When you looked at it, there wasn't any particular way of knowing one way or the other. As a result, in most areas, if the Jews did not have a source of kosher meat slaughtered by someone who was skilled in ritual slaughter, they simply abstained from meats rather than take a chance on eating meat that had been offered to an idol.

It became an issue because the Christians were not to partake in idolatrous worship and meat offered to idols was to be avoided. But to what length did you have to go to avoid it? The Jerusalem conference said to avoid meat offered to idols (Acts 15:29). Some tried to say that Paul contradicted the Jerusalem conference. He didn't at all.

He makes it very plain in I Corinthians 10:21, "You cannot drink the cup of the Lord and the cup of demons; you cannot partake of the Lord's table and of the table of demons."

Verse 20, "But I say that the things which the Gentiles sacrifice they sacrifice to demons and not to God, and I do not want you to have fellowship with demons." Paul is very plain and speaks out extremely strong on that. But to what extent do you have to go to determine whether the meat was sacrificed to an idol? Do you have to go to the length of avoiding all meat unless you could be one hundred percent sure it wasn't sacrificed to an idol?

Paul makes the point in I Corinthians 8:4 that the problem is not that the meat has been polluted. The idol is really nothing, and the problem is not the meat itself.

The point that he makes in chapter 8, when you put it together with chapter 10, is that you have to be conscious of your example. The problem is not the meat. If you eat meat that had been sacrificed to an idol, and you don't know it, there's not a problem. The meat has not been hurt, and there's not some intrinsic act of worship. But if you knowingly and consciously partake of an idolatrous feast or in an idolatrous ceremony, that's not right because you're going to set a bad example and you're going to create a problem.

If someone not in the Church invites you to eat and you decide to go.

I Corinthians 10:27-28, "If any of those who do not believe invites you to dinner, and you desire to go, eat whatever is set before you, asking no question for conscience' sake. But if anyone says to you, 'This was offered to idols,' do not eat it for the sake of the one who told you, and for conscience' sake...." By the way, the issue is not clean and unclean meat. The issue is food offered to idols.

The Jews would not eat with a non-Jew on the basis that there was a chance that they may be served something that was offered to an idol.

That's why Peter said to Cornelius, Acts 10:28, "... 'You know how unlawful it is for a Jewish man to keep company with or go to one of another nation....'" The Jews didn't simply do it on the basis that the Gentiles were so mixed up in idolatry that there was no telling what they were going to "run past them."

Paul said that's not necessary. Sit down and enjoy the meal. But while you're there, if somebody brings it up and says, 'By the way, did you know that this came from the idol's temple?', then at that point, you don't eat it. Once it comes to your attention and you know it is connected with idolatry, you're going to give the appearance of compromise with idolatry. At that point you need to back off.

Don't do something that is going to create a stumbling block for others (I Corinthians 8:9-13). This was a problem to some. Be concerned about the effect of your actions on others. Everything that is lawful for you to do may not always be a good idea. It's not always expedient (I Corinthians 6:12; I Corinthians 10:23).

The most important factor is to consider the impact on others. Some things will look bad and may give a wrong impression. Paul was not watering it down and saying they could eat things offered to idols. What he is saying is that you don't have to go to the lengths that the Jews do of avoiding anything. The problem is not that the food has been hurt. You're not taking part in some idolatrous service. There isn't any harm done in eating a hamburger or piece of steak. But, if the issue of religion comes in, and because issues of conscience have been brought up, then you avoid it and back off. Don't let our liberty become a stumbling block for others (I Corinthians 8:9). Be concerned of the impact of our example.

I Corinthians 9 deals with the issue of money. The Corinthians were materialistic; evidently some of them were griping about money. Accusations were being made about Paul.

I Corinthians 9:1, "Am I not an apostle?..."

Verses 4-5, "Do we have no right to eat and drink? Do we have no right to take along a believing wife, as do also the other apostles, the brothers of the Lord [James and Jude], and Cephas [Peter]?" All of the others do.

Verse 6, is it only Barnabas and I that can't do these things? Paul clearly indicates here that he was the only one of the apostles who was unmarried.

The Catholic teaching on celibacy and marriage is completely contrary to the Bible. If Peter was the first pope, how is it that Christ healed his mother-in-law (Mark 1:30-31)? If he had a mother-in-law, that means he was married. If he was the first pope, then didn't he know that popes weren't supposed to be married? He wasn't the first pope, and there wasn't anything wrong with marriage. That was ordained of God.

Verse 8, "Do I say these things as a mere man? Or does not the law say the same also?" Is this just my opinion or doesn't the law say it also?

Paul brings out a couple of different things in terms of quoting from the Scriptures. He gives the example from Deuteronomy 25:4 about muzzling the ox.

Verse 9, "For it is written in the Law of Moses, 'You shall not muzzle an ox while it treads out the grain.' Is it oxen God is concerned about?" This should teach us several things. Do you think the only reason God says that is because He's worried that the oxen won't get enough to eat? There are principles that are to be derived from various statements in the Scriptures. While they may have a literal application, many times there are principles that can be derived through other circumstances. There are principles that apply.

Paul gets more specific when he refers to the Levitical priesthood.

Verses 13-14, "Do you not know that those who minister the holy things eat of the things of the temple, and those who serve at the altar partake of the offerings of the altar? Even so the Lord has commanded that those who preach the gospel should live from the gospel." The Levitical priesthood received their livelihood from the tithes of the holy things—the sacrifices. In the same way, that's what God's ministry does. Paul is addressing the fact that it was appropriate for him and the other ministers to receive compensation from the Church. The other apostles did it; they were all married and took their wives with them on trips at Church expense (v. 5).

I Corinthians 10 makes reference of a pagan religious service.

Verse 14, "Therefore, my beloved, flee from idolatry." He talks about some of these things that, as a Christian, we're not going to involve ourselves in; things in what the Bible would term “idolatrous worship.” In other words, if you want to be plain and blunt about it, you are not going to go and take communion at the Catholic Church. This is a pretty apt description right here.

Verse 24, “Let no one seek his own, but each one the other’s well-being [interest or good].” Be concerned about others.

Verse 25, “Eat whatever is sold in the meat market [KJV, “shambles”], asking no questions for conscience’ sake.” You don’t have to go in there and quiz them about whether this came from the temple of Zeus or not.

But, vv. 27-28, if an issue is ever made, then do not eat it. As long as an issue is not made, you just eat it. Take your chances on it because you’re not buying it in order to worship the idol. You’re not seeking out meat offered to idols. You don’t know that it was offered to an idol. It hasn’t been hurt, and you’re not engaged in any overt kind of worship.

I Corinthians 11 starts out with what God has given as an indication of respect and submission to His government, and an acceptance of the government that God has established, which extends down to the home. It specifically gets into the outward sign or identification of masculinity and femininity. A couple of these verses are sometimes misquoted on the premise that a woman should wear a hat in church. The issue is not a hat or a veil; the issue is hair length.

Verses 4-5 talk about a man having his head uncovered and a woman having her head covered. It discusses back and forth having his head covered or uncovered. That doesn’t mean that men should take their hats off when they come into church and women should keep their hats on, which is, by the way, where the social custom derived. Men or women don’t wear a hat very commonly any more, as they did back a few years ago. Hats began to go out when John Kennedy broke tradition and didn’t wear a hat to his inauguration as President. You can date it to about 1960.

It’s kind of interesting when you look at old pictures. Some of you can remember back. Men, who were out in public in the 50s, 40s or the 30s, always had a hat on. John Kennedy broke tradition. Because a hat messed up his hairstyle, he didn’t wear a hat on his inauguration day. Hats are just not that commonly worn anymore. This is just a little interesting footnote.

The common tradition was that men would take their hats off when they came into a building or a church. Women didn’t take off their hats. The social custom went back to a misunderstanding of the verse that a man should have his head uncovered and a woman should have her head covered.

I Corinthians 11:14-15, “Does not even nature itself teach you that if a man has long hair, it is a dishonor to him? But if a woman has long hair, it is a glory to her; for her hair is given to her for a covering.” The covering that is being discussed is hair. It is long hair that covers her head that is a glory to her. If a man has long hair, it is a shame to him. Long hair is an outward sign of a woman’s appreciation and acceptance of her femininity and her role in the government of God. A lot of people say men used to wear long hair. No, they didn’t. Long hair on men came in as a social custom, basically lasted through the 1600s and 1700s, and then went out. It was not the custom previously and it hasn’t been the custom since.

The custom derives from Louis XIII who was a transvestite. The king of France was a homosexual and liked to dress in women’s clothing. He grew his hair long and everybody else tried to copy it. His father, Louis XIV, had his own problems. He tried to go even further in more ways than one. People follow the customs. That’s why what leaders do is so important. They set styles and trends, even in matters of dress and grooming that sometimes last for decades. People have forgotten why they did it. They did it because they were copying somebody else. Styles come and go.

The subject of Passover is discussed in the latter part of the chapter (vv. 17-34).

In I Corinthians 12, Paul then addresses spiritual gifts. He is setting the stage for chapter 14 where he addresses tongues.

I Corinthians 12:1-2, “Now concerning spiritual gifts, brethren, I do not want you to be ignorant: You know that you were Gentiles, carried away to these dumb idols, however you were led.” He said, ‘You have misunderstood a lot of things because of your background; you have been influenced by things like this Oracle up at Delphi and various places to where you really don’t understand spiritual gifts. You know what kind of things have “paraded” as spiritual gifts and what has been called spiritual gifts in your society. Because you have been carried away with idolatry, the very words that are used to describe various spiritual gifts, in some cases, have a wrong connotation to you because you have come out of a idolatrous background and have heard these terms used to describe other things.’

Just like the term “communion.” For any of you who have come out of a Catholic background, when I say “communion,” you think of mass and communion in church. That’s not what the word means. That’s the way it was misused. The word has to do with fellowship and what binds us together as a community, which is our common acceptance of the sacrifice of Christ. It has been misapplied and misused.

Verses 4-5, “Now there are diversities of gifts, but the same Spirit. There are differences of ministries, but the same Lord.” There are many different kinds of gifts, but there’s one body. There is a unity. The problem of those who tend to get carried away in problems of this area is that they tend to look for something that has outward show and that points them out as being spiritual. It goes in for a lot of emotionalism, so-called ecstatic utterance and things of this sort. They get carried away with that and think that’s the only thing that counts. Paul said there are a lot of different kinds of spiritual gifts.

Verse 31, “But earnestly desire the best gifts. And yet I show you a more excellent way.” ‘Let me show you what’s most important.’

In I Corinthians 13, he says, ‘I don’t care what kind of tongue you speak with.’

I Corinthians 13:1, “Though I speak with the tongues of men and of angels, but have not love, I have become as sounding brass or a clanging cymbal.” There isn’t any evidence in the Bible of God ever giving someone the gift of speaking in the tongue of angels, but evidently that’s what some of the Corinthians claimed they were doing. Paul says, ‘I don’t care if you speak with the tongues of men and of angels; if you don’t have love, you’re just making a lot of noise.’ So he is setting the stage. He’s saying that there’s hollowness to what you’re doing; it’s like an empty shell. He goes through and shows that love is the most important Christian virtue (vv. 2-13).

I Corinthians 14:1, “Pursue love, and desire spiritual gifts, but especially that you may prophesy.” Desire spiritual gifts, but the most important spiritual gift is to speak an inspired message. Then he begins to draw a contrast between someone who is speaking an inspired message and someone who is speaking in what the Corinthians were calling a “tongue.”

Verse 2, “For he who speaks in a tongue does not speak to men, but to God, for no one understands him; however, in the spirit he speaks mysteries.” Paul is quoting what the Corinthians were saying and doing. Now, anybody who is doing that is not speaking to people; nobody understands what he is saying. The Corinthians’ excuse was that he was not speaking unto men but speaking to God. These things are coming out, and it’s a mystery to everybody (nobody knows what’s going on).

Verse 3, “But he who prophesies speaks edification and exhortation and comfort to men.” If somebody is speaking under the inspiration of God and speaking an inspired message, then he’s speaking it to people. He’s building them up, exhorting them and comforting them.

Verse 4, “He who speaks in a tongue edifies himself, but he who prophesies edifies the church.” If any of you are speaking in some kind of tongue, as the Corinthians were using the term, you’re just building yourself up. If you speak an inspired message, you’re building up the Church.

‘I wish you all had the gift that God gave in Acts 2, the gift of languages.’

Verse 5, “I wish you all spoke with tongues, but even more that you prophesied; for he who prophesies is greater than he who speaks with tongues, unless indeed he interprets, that the church may receive edification.”

Verse 6, “But now, brethren, if I come to you speaking with tongues, what shall I profit you unless I speak to you either by revelation, by knowledge, by prophesying, or by teaching?” In other words, ‘If I come to you, it doesn’t matter what language I speak in or how many languages I speak in or what kind of sounds I make if what I’m saying doesn’t make sense. If it’s not a valid message—if it doesn’t help you, if it doesn’t instruct, comfort, exhort or edify you, if there’s not some substance to it—what’s the point?’

Verse 7, “Even things without life, whether flute or harp, when they make a sound, unless they make a distinction in the sounds, how will it be known what is piped or played?” You can play a musical instrument, but if you don’t play a tune, nobody knows what’s going on.

Verses 9-11, “So likewise you, unless you utter by the tongue words easy to understand, how will it be known what is spoken? For you will be speaking into the air. There are, it may be, so many kinds of languages in the world, and none of them is without significance. Therefore, if I do not know the meaning of the language, I shall be a foreigner to him who speaks, and he who speaks will be a foreigner to me.” There are a lot of voices and all of them have significance, but if you don’t understand it, then it doesn’t mean anything to you.

Verse 12, “Even so you, since you are zealous for spiritual gifts, let it be for the edification of the church that you seek to excel.” Getting carried away with some of this nonsense and thinking you really have something. You need to concentrate on something that’s going to build you up and help somebody else—not something that points you out as being some great thing. That’s not what God does. If somebody thinks that they have a miraculous gift of speaking in another language, what they better be able to do is interpret and explain it to the Church in a language that everybody can understand; otherwise, how can they say “Amen” to it (vv. 13-16).

Verse 19, “...I would rather speak five words with my understanding, that I may teach others also, then ten thousand words in a tongue.” Paul says, ‘I would rather speak five words that are understandable and that are going to help somebody else, than ten thousand words in something that nobody understands.’

Verse 20, “Brethren, do not be children in understanding; however, in malice be babes, but in understanding be mature.” Grow up and be mature.

Verse 32, “And the spirits of the prophets are subject to the prophets.” He probably “hit it on the head.” Someone had been saying, ‘You know the spirit just grabs me and I have to say it.’ No, not if it’s from God. The spirit of the prophet is subject to the prophet. So if it takes control, you have the wrong spirit.

There is another way that you know if you have the wrong spirit.

Verse 33, “For God is not the author of confusion but of peace....”

Another way you know if you have the wrong spirit, v. 34, “Let your women keep silent in the churches, for they are not permitted to speak....”

It’s interesting. Most of the charismatic churches, Pentecostals, had women preachers years before any of the other churches thought of it. They like to take two or three verses out of context in I Corinthians 14, but they always skip v. 34.

The one chapter in the Bible they like to quote, God put the verse in here that “nails” them because what they want is this emotional free-for-all. God said through Paul things need to be done in an orderly way (v. 40).

Verse 37, “If anyone thinks himself to be a prophet or spiritual, let him acknowledge that the things which I write to you are the commandments of God.” Paul says, ‘If anybody thinks he’s a prophet or spiritual, then he had better realize I’m giving instructions from God and he had better follow them.’

Verse 40, “Let all things be done decently and in order.”

I Corinthians 15 deals with the subject of the resurrection and explains the misunderstandings about that.

I Corinthians 16 winds up with the collection for the saints (v. 1).

I Corinthians 16:2, “On the first day of the week let each one of you lay something aside, storing up as he may prosper, that there be no collections when I come.” This does not mean you drop your money in the plate on Sunday morning.

I remember years ago when I went to the Baptist Church, our little offering envelopes had a portion of I Corinthians 16 printed on them: “On the first day of the week let every one of you lay by him in store as God has prospered him.” They put a period. The only thing is there’s not a period there; there’s a comma.

Verse 2, “...that there be no collections [KJV, “gatherings”] when I come.” This is concerning the collection for the saints. He was taking up an offering of foodstuffs, and it was going to be hauled back to Jerusalem. It was read on the Sabbath. He said, ‘First thing tomorrow morning [the last Day of Unleavened Bread came on a Sabbath that year], you guys “get out” and “hit it.” Get in the field and get this stuff gathered up. Start filling these things so that there will be no gatherings when I come.’ They were going to get out and do a hard day’s work on Sunday morning—not pass the plate.

Verse 8, “But I will tarry in Ephesus until Pentecost.” He was going to remain in Ephesus. That’s the way we tie it in with Acts 19 and know the “when.” He says he was going to be there. Because he was writing it during the Days of Unleavened Bread, that would give them about six weeks. He would be there right after Pentecost. ‘I am going to stay here till Pentecost, and then I’m coming. So you guys be gathering everything up starting tomorrow morning. Don’t put it off. Get it ready because I am going to come and check on you, see what you’ve done based on what I told you, and we will dispense matters.’

We will get into II Corinthians next time.

Life and Letters of Paul Series—II Corinthians

We are into the book of II Corinthians this evening. Let's understand a little bit about the background. We have already addressed some of this in our study on I Corinthians. The background of the cities is the same. There is a similarity in terms of the background of the book because they were written within close proximity of one another.

Let's go to Acts 18, 19 and 20 because I think it is good that we understand how we can date some of these particular books. Last time we saw that Paul had remained in Corinth for about eighteen months (Acts 18:11). Then, v. 21, he was anxious to keep the Feast in Jerusalem. This would have been the Feast of Tabernacles 52 A.D. He left so as to arrive in Jerusalem in time for the fall festival. He landed at Caesarea, went up ("up" is an expression referring to Jerusalem) and saluted the Church and then, v. 22, went back down to Antioch.

He spent some time there. He would have, undoubtedly, been wintering there. Normally, winter was a difficult time to travel either overland or by sea. The weather became more unpredictable and traveling was more difficult, so he stayed in Antioch. Antioch was sort of Paul's headquarters of the Gentile work. He wintered there the winter of 52 A.D.—53 A.D.

Then, Acts 18:23, we find that he left and went on his third evangelistic journey. He traveled through what is modern-day Syria and went up into ancient Asia Minor (modern-day Turkey). He began to go overland through the peninsula, going through Galatia and that area, and then headed west toward the coast of Asia Minor. Over a period of time, he worked his way through and came to Ephesus, which was on the coast.

He found certain disciples there, and we find, Acts 19:8, he continued in the synagogues speaking there for three months. He arrived in Ephesus somewhere between Passover and Pentecost. If he left overland as soon as traveling became permissible, it would have probably been in the very early spring, maybe the end of February or the first of March. He probably spent March, April and May (about three months) working his way through to Ephesus. He wasn't in a giant hurry, trying to go straight through. He was staying in the various Churches for a week or two, preaching and spending some time, working his way across. The implication is that he was in Ephesus until around Pentecost (latter part of May). He stayed there three months, which would coincide with the summer.

Verse 9, we find that he rented a school. We're not the first ones to rent a school for services. Paul rented a school that was nearby because they kicked him out and wouldn't let him keep speaking in the synagogue. So he went next door, utilized this school and continued there about two years (v. 10). This would be from the late summer or early fall of 53 A.D. to the beginning of fall of 55 A.D. that he stayed in Ephesus. Acts 19 describes various things that were going on.

We saw last time that he wrote I Corinthians from Ephesus. We dated it to the Passover season of 55 A.D., which would have been about six months before he left Ephesus. Because of the references that are there, we find that Paul ran into problems. There wound up being a riot that broke out in Ephesus and there was quite a bit of difficulty (Acts 19:21-40).

Acts 20:1-3, "After the uproar had ceased, Paul called the disciples to him, embraced them, and departed to go to Macedonia. Now when he had gone over that region and encouraged them with many words, he came to Greece and stayed three months... [This would coincide with winter. Undoubtedly, he wintered in the area of Greece.] ...And when the Jews plotted against him as he was about to sail to Syria, he decided to return through Macedonia." He had intended to sail directly from Greece back to Antioch, but when he found out there was a plot to assassinate him if he had taken the boat, he decided to retrace his steps overland to go back to Macedonia.

Macedonia is northern Greece. That's where Philippi is. If you have a map, you may find it easier to follow by consulting that. Otherwise, it can get a little bit difficult going from this city to that city (all these places) and it kind of jumbles up.

He went to Ephesus, which is on the coast. He crossed over the straits (we call it the Dardanelle) into northern Greece (what was anciently called Macedonia) to the city of Philippi. He started up in northern Greece and worked his way down through Greece into Greece proper, which is the area where Corinth is. He spent about three months there. Undoubtedly, he wintered there the winter of 55 A.D.—56 A.D. Then he was going to return directly to Jerusalem by sailing a direct route, but when word reached him that there was an assassination plot, he decided he would just retrace his steps. So he went back overland up to Philippi.

Verse 6, “But we sailed away from Philippi after the Days of Unleavened Bread...” He had wintered down in the southern part of Corinth, retraced his steps during the month of March and worked his way up to Philippi, stopping and preaching in several Churches on the Sabbath along the way. He spent a short time in Philippi. Then it was time for the Passover, so he stayed for the Days of Unleavened Bread and then left. He caught a boat that was taking him back to Jerusalem in order to reach Jerusalem for Pentecost (v. 16). This was the Days of Unleavened Bread and the Feast of Pentecost in 56 A.D.

We saw that he had written I Corinthians during the Passover season of 55 A.D. from Ephesus. When he wrote I Corinthians, he sent Timothy to check things out.

In II Corinthians 1:1, Timothy has rejoined Paul. There are a couple of things to date it.

In Acts 20:1-2, we are told that Paul left Ephesus and went to Macedonia and worked his way down by land into Greece.

I Corinthians 16:5-6, “Now I will come to you when I pass through Macedonia (for I am passing through Macedonia). But it may be that I will remain, or even spend the winter with you....”

Verse 8, “But I will tarry in Ephesus until Pentecost.” He stayed on until a little while after Pentecost. It was hard to break loose from Ephesus, but he did. A riot broke out and that solved the problem of when to leave Ephesus. This was his plan when he wrote I Corinthians.

We find in II Corinthians 1:1, “Paul, an apostle of Jesus Christ by the will of God, and Timothy our brother....” Timothy was with him at that particular time.

What we had seen earlier in Acts 19:21, “...Paul purposed in the Spirit, when he had passed through Macedonia and Achaia, to go to Jerusalem....” That was what he told the Corinthians. He planned to go to Philippi, come down to Achaia (Corinth was the capital of the province of Achaia) and then go to Jerusalem.

Verse 22, while he was still in Ephesus, “So he sent into Macedonia two of those who ministered to him, Timothy and Erastus, but he himself stayed in Asia for a time.”

He wrote I Corinthians shortly thereafter. He sent Timothy and Erastus over there to follow up. He wrote the Corinthians a letter. Remember in I Corinthians, he really “chewed them up one side and down the other.” He told them he was going to visit. In fact, he was going to spend the winter there because he thought it was going to take more than one week. He was going to utilize the help and the financial resources from there to take him on his journey further. It was a relatively wealthy area. Putting it together with Acts 19, we find that he had sent Timothy on before, and he stayed in Asia for a while. Then there was a riot that came up and there were problems.

Acts 20:1, “After the uproar had ceased, Paul called the disciples to him, embraced them, and departed to go to Macedonia.”

Now when we get to II Corinthians, we find that Timothy has rejoined Paul because Paul mentions Timothy in the salutation in II Corinthians 1:1. So Paul is in Ephesus and he writes I Corinthians. A little while later he dispatches Timothy. Then he, himself, leaves Ephesus that summer and goes on over to Macedonia. When he gets to Macedonia, he meets Timothy. Timothy comes and reports to him. He tells him how his letter was received in Corinth and brings him up to date on the situation. Paul then writes II Corinthians from Philippi, the area where he is. He has to dispatch it. He tells them in II Corinthians that he is coming to them. He is planning on coming to where they were.

II Corinthians 9:1-2, “Now concerning the ministering to the saints [the offering taken up for the Jerusalem Church] it is superfluous for me to write to you; for I know your willingness, about which I boast of you to the Macedonians....” Paul says, ‘I am bragging about you up here in Macedonia. I have “laid it on pretty thick.”’

Verses 3-4, “Yet I have sent the brethren, lest our boasting of you should be in vain in this respect, that, as I said, you may be ready; lest if some Macedonians come with me and find you unprepared, we (not to mention you!) should be ashamed of this confident boasting.”

Paul says, ‘You had better really do well because if some of those from Macedonia come with me, you are going to be embarrassed if we get down there and you have some little paltry offering.’

Corinth was probably the wealthiest city in Greece. They were capable of doing more than any of the other places. But the reality was that some of the poorer Churches, such as Philippi, were really the ones who were giving sacrificially. In Corinth, they wanted to keep what they had. Paul was trying to stir them up a little bit because he knew that they had a tendency to be a little selfish. He was using a little psychology in the right way to embarrass them into doing what they should do.

When we put it together, it is pretty clear that Paul wrote II Corinthians a matter of a few months after I Corinthians. Paul wrote I Corinthians during Passover season 55 A.D. He probably wrote II Corinthians at the end of the summer or, let's say, the early fall of 55 A.D.—about six months later. Then, after he wrote, he worked his way down through Greece, arriving in Corinth perhaps a couple of months after he had written the letter. If he wrote the letter in what we would term early September, spent the fall festivals there in Philippi, worked his way down through the rest of Greece the remainder of October and November, then he would arrive in Corinth about December—and that's where he wintered. It gives a little bit of an idea.

Acts 20:1-6, he went back up to Macedonia, stayed through the Days of Unleavened Bread of 56 A.D.

Verse 16, he sailed from Macedonia back to Jerusalem in time to be there for Pentecost 56 A.D. That's where he was arrested. It gives us a little bit of a feel for the time flow when we put Acts together with these epistles.

As we look into II Corinthians itself, Paul has to address several things that seem to be major issues. Paul spends a lot of time in I Corinthians defending and emphasizing his apostolic authority. Why did he do that? Obviously, it was because it was being challenged. We tend to make an issue of those things that are challenged. In his letter to some of the other Churches, he doesn't make that nearly the issue. We will notice as we go through II Corinthians the fact that he was an apostle.

It reminds me of some of the things that we confronted in the Church around 1979, 80 and 81. For those who have been in the Church for a number of years and have a perspective, you realize Mr. Herbert Armstrong laid emphasis on Church government and his apostolic authority in a way he had never done in the 60s and early 70s (particularly in the 60s) because it was not an issue at that time. He virtually never raised the point in the 60s because nobody ever questioned it. The issue had to be made when it was questioned. When the state of California tried to come in and take over in some of these things, then the issue needed to be made. How does God work? Through whom is he working? –Things of that sort.

That's what Paul was doing here in Corinth. There were, obviously, some people who were seeking to challenge and undermine Paul's authority. 'Who does he think he is, telling us these things?' They were seeking in some way to put down and demean his authority.

We find in II Corinthians that Paul spends a fair amount of time emphasizing his office in a way that you don't find him doing in the book of Ephesians or Philippians. II Corinthians and Galatians stand out as the epistles where you know that Paul was under attack in Galatia and Corinth. There were people who were seeking to undermine his credibility and his claim to authority. Some, perhaps, did it in more subtle ways, others overtly. There were various motives that came in.

First he spends some time emphasizing his apostolic authority. Second, he also is involved in making the decision to re-admit this fornicator to fellowship. This individual by this time had repented; fruits of repentance had been evidenced. The issue came up as to what should occur. Paul explained it, and he was re-admitted into fellowship (II Corinthians 2:6-11).

Third, II Corinthians 1:15-17, he also had to explain why he had been unable personally to come to Corinth. He had intended to come to Corinth earlier than what he had. Originally, he had told them that he was going to stay in Ephesus until Pentecost and then he was going to come. When you put it together with Acts, you find out that he stayed longer than Pentecost. He pretty well stayed the summer. There were other things that came up. Some were saying he never intended to come. Since people had their various attitudes and accusations, he had to explain why he had not been able to get there earlier. It was not something that he had just lightly said, but there were other things that came up. Sometimes there are matters that arise in terms of fulfilling the responsibilities that he had.

Fourth, II Corinthians 8:1-24—9:1-15, he also wanted to again lay emphasis on the collection for Jerusalem that he was taking up because he was going to transport it with him when he went to Jerusalem. His original intent had been to sail directly out of the port of Cenchrea there at Corinth. As it was, he went overland back up to Macedonia and sailed out from there (Acts 20:1-16).

As we go through II Corinthians 1, we find that Paul mentions why he had been unable to come.

II Corinthians 1:15-17, "And in this confidence I intended to come to you before, that you might have a second benefit—to pass by way of you to Macedonia to you, and be helped by you on my way to Judea. Therefore, when I was planning this, did I do it lightly?...” Paul says, ‘I intended to do that. My intent was to sail out of Ephesus and come to Corinth. I intended to come see you first and then go up to Macedonia. I was going to come back and winter with you and then sail out. That was my intent, but I obviously haven’t done that.’ He is writing to them from Macedonia. ‘By now you realize my plans have changed. Some of you are saying that I never intended to come anyway.’

Verse 17, “Therefore, when I was planning this, did I do it lightly? Or the things I plan, do I plan according to the flesh, that with me there should be Yes, Yes, and No, No?”

He says, ‘Was I fickle in my promise? No, that’s not true. I make my plans, but I am a human being. Sometimes there are things that occur over which I am powerless that change those plans. You were preached to; Silas and Timothy came. God is consistent and He can keep His promises (vv. 18-20), whether we may have to change our plans or not.’

In fact, he tells them in v. 23, “Moreover I call God as witness against my soul, that to spare you I came no more to Corinth.” He says, ‘I was still pretty “steamed” from what I wrote in I Corinthians, and I decided I would give you a little longer to get this thing straightened out. I decided to spare you.’ It gave Timothy a chance to meet up with him in Macedonia and report back to him as to what was going on before he decided to go down there.

II Corinthians 1:21-22, “Now He who establishes us with you in Christ and has anointed us is God, who also has sealed us and given us the Spirit in our hearts as a deposit.” KJV, “who has also sealed us, and given the earnest of the Spirit in our hearts.”

There are a couple of things we are told here about the Holy Spirit. The Holy Spirit is the means by which we are sealed and it is the earnest of the Spirit.

It’s important to understand those two things. A “seal” is that which authenticates genuineness. If you have a legal document, you may get it notarized. One of the things the notary does is he affixes his seal to that document. You can feel that raised seal. The purpose of that is to authenticate genuineness. That’s what the notary does. He is authenticating that this is the genuine article. He is authenticating that the individual named on the document really did sign it. That seal is the mark of authenticity. In ancient times, it was very common that kings and rulers wore a special signet ring, a ring that had their seal. Today we use the same principle—the notary seal, the seal of the United States or the seal of the State of Louisiana that is affixed to official documents. Many times you may have to get a copy of something, and it has to be a notarized copy. You can’t just go in and give them any old Xerox copy. They want one that has that notary seal.

God’s Spirit seals us. It authenticates that we are the genuine article. It is the means by which we are sealed. We are authenticated as being God’s people. It identifies us. God’s Spirit seals us and it is also the earnest of our inheritance. We use that term.

If you bought a house, one of the things you did when you made a proposal (if you wanted that property taken off the market), you put earnest money. You put a small portion to prove that you really intended to come back and pay the whole thing. You made a promise and gave them something to demonstrate that you were earnest that you really meant it.

God’s Spirit is the earnest of our inheritance (Ephesians 1:14). It is, in that sense, the evidence and the proof that God really is going to transform our mortal bodies into a spirit body. God, in giving us His Spirit, sets us apart. He authenticates us as the genuine thing, a real Christian. What’s the proof (the evidence) that somebody is a real Christian? The Spirit of God is the proof.

Romans 8:9, “...Now if anyone does not have the Spirit of Christ, he is none of His.”

Verse 11, “But if the Spirit of Him who raised Jesus from the dead dwells in you, He who raised Christ from the dead will also give life to your mortal bodies through His Spirit who dwells in you.”

In II Corinthians 1:22, we are told that the Spirit seals us and Ephesians 1:14 tells us it is the earnest.

Paul then goes on and talks about the fact that the correction he had given had been motivated by love.

II Corinthians 2:4, “For out of much affliction and anguish of heart I wrote to you, with many tears, not that you should be grieved, but that you might know the love which I have so abundantly for you.” He was concerned for them.

Too many times people have the misconception that there is love and there is discipline. If somebody is viewed as being a disciplinarian, that means they don’t have a lot of love. Paul had a tremendous amount of love. The discipline that Paul imposed on the Corinthian Church and on this individual who was living in sin was motivated by love.

Hebrew 12:6, “For whom the Lord loves He chastens, and scourges every son whom He receives.” If God doesn’t chasten us, it’s because He doesn’t claim us. That’s what it says in Hebrews.

Verse 8, you’re not sons; you’re illegitimate. God doesn’t claim you.

The point is that Paul was motivated by love. He cared too much for them to just let them drift into the lake of fire without trying to shake them up and wake them up.

Now word had reached him. Evidently, Timothy had told him that this man who had been singled out in I Corinthians 5 had, over a period of months, really demonstrated a marked change.

II Corinthians 2:6-8, “This punishment which was inflicted by the majority is sufficient for such a man, so that, on the contrary, you ought rather to forgive and comfort him, lest perhaps such a one be swallowed up with too much sorrow. Therefore I urge you to reaffirm your love to him.”

Verse 11, “lest Satan should take advantage of us; for we are not ignorant of his devices.” Here, the point is made that this individual had learned a lesson and had repented. Paul said, ‘Now that he has repented, receive him back with open arms.’ Judgment and mercy are fundamental issues.

In Matthew 23:23, Jesus said that those two, together with faith, are the weightier matters of the law. Judgment has to do with drawing proper distinctions. Judgment and mercy—the two go hand-in-hand. The balance between the two is very crucial.

So many times people don’t understand the balance. The Corinthians, on the one hand, had been doling out mercy when judgment was called for. When you dole out mercy when judgment is called for, then what you’re really doing is turning grace into license. That’s what they had done and that’s what Paul had rebuked them for in I Corinthians 5. They were allowing this to just go on. Nobody did anything and the situation continued. Here was an individual just openly living in sin. It was common knowledge in the congregation and it was just accepted. Their concept of love was much distorted.

On the other hand, when an individual learns his lesson and repents, then his past is not to be held over him. He doesn’t go through life having to drag his past like a ball and chain after him.

Too many times people want to show mercy when they should show judgment. If discipline is imposed on somebody, they feel sorry for them and want to miserate with them. They say, ‘You surely got a raw deal.’

Then, on the other hand, somebody repents and they come back. People kind of view him and think, ‘You’ve been gone for a while; wonder what you did?’ Then they want to gossip about him, judge him and wonder whether he’s repented. ‘He says he’s repented, but how do I know?’—This sort of attitude.

There’s the wrong kind of mercy extended when judgment should be imposed; then there’s judgment (the wrong kind) imposed when mercy should be extended. That’s backward and it’s an important concept for us to understand. The whole purpose of judgment, whether it is directly visited by God or whether it is in the context of Church discipline, is for the purpose of bringing an individual to repentance so that mercy can be extended. God desires to extend mercy, but mercy is available to those who repent. God does not extend His mercy and forgiveness in a way that is going to perpetuate us in our sins. That wouldn’t be love. That would just serve to confirm us in a way of life that is destructive and painful.

Paul is now addressing the issue. If the man repents, receive him back lest he should be swallowed up over much sorrow. Now that he has really come to see it, he really hates the whole thing and has deeply repented. You need to encourage him because the tendency is for the pendulum to swing. The guy can become discouraged and depressed and just feel like this is so bad and terrible that God will never forgive him and he can never look anybody in the eye again. This is just horrible. He becomes all discouraged and is ready to give up.

We don’t want Satan to get an advantage with us. We are not ignorant of his devices. Satan can take advantage either way. A person can be swallowed up over much sorrow. They can become so depressed and overwhelmed by a sense of guilt as to become deeply depressed and discouraged. Satan can take advantage of that and pull a person down. On the other hand, a person can have a flippant, casual attitude toward sin and treat it in a very cavalier fashion and go “sailing” right along. That’s not good. Either way takes us to destruction. There is an appropriate balance to learn. Paul is seeking to teach the Corinthians and, through this letter, to also teach us.

II Corinthians 3:1, “Do we begin again to commend ourselves? Or do we need, as some others, epistles of commendation to you or letters of commendation from you?”

Some were asking, 'How do we really know that Paul has all of the authority that he says, and that he's really an apostle? Have you ever seen any proof or any evidence of that? What credentials did he have to prove that? Have you ever seen any letters signed by James and Peter? How do you know?' Somebody was evidently coming into Corinth saying that and trying to "stir things up."

Paul said, 'Do I need that kind of thing? Do you want to know what my credentials are?'

Verses 2-3, "You are our epistle written in our hearts, known and read by all men; you are manifestly an epistle of Christ, ministered by us, written not with ink but by the Spirit of the living God, not on tablets of stone but on tablets of flesh, that is, of the heart."

He said, 'You want proof? The fact that you exist as a Church is proof of what God has done through me because it's through me you heard the gospel. It's through me that the Church was raised up. You received God's Spirit, either through the laying on of my hands or other people on whom I have laid hands.'

It's a very apt comparison to those who wanted to challenge Mr. Herbert Armstrong back several years ago. The very existence of the Church, the institution, the knowledge and the things that we had came directly or indirectly as the result of God's work through him.

Someone in the Church wanted to ask, 'Where are your credentials?' Well, Paul says, 'The fact that you exist as a Church, that you have God's Holy Spirit and the fact of your conversion is proof that God has worked through me. Because if God hasn't worked through me, how did you learn the truth, how did you become converted, and where did you get God's Spirit? Either I taught you, baptized you and laid hands on you or someone I taught, taught you, baptized you and laid hands on you. You are my epistle. What more do I need? I don't just have something written by ink. I have something written with the Holy Spirit.'

II Corinthians 5:1, "For we know that if our earthly house, this tent, is destroyed, we have a building from God, a house not made with hands, eternal in the heavens." We will age and eventually break down and die.

Verse 2, "For in this we groan, earnestly desiring to be clothed with our habitation which is from heaven." He didn't say that we are going to heaven to get it. He is going to come and his reward is with Him.

Revelation 22:12, "And behold, I am coming quickly, and My reward is with Me, to give to every one according to his work." Eternal life is what He is going to bring. We look forward to that.

As we go through trials, difficulties and adversities and as our body begins to "grind down" and to decay, we begin to recognize how temporary it is. We begin to earnestly desire to be clothed with something permanent. When you're young and think you have all the energy in the world, you figure you are going to last forever and you don't see the point. But as the years pass, we all become more and more convinced; those who are older among us are more convinced of that need. That's just a part of it. God has designed that to make us more and more deeply aware of how temporary and transitory we are and how much we need what He has to give.

II Corinthians 5:4, "...that mortality may be swallowed up by life."

Verse 7, "For we walk by faith, not by sight."

Hebrew 11:1, "Now faith is the substance of things hoped for, the evidence of things not seen." Faith and sight sometimes contradict one another. Faith is based on what God says, what He promises. Sight is based on physical evidence, what you see. If you have to make a choice in believing what God says or what you see, which do you choose?

We look around at the world; the things we see around us look pretty firm, strong and substantial. God says this world, this orderly arrangement of things, is going to pass from the scene and a new age is going to come. There will be a new world order, and it will not be one that President Bush or Gorbachev put together. That is not the new world order that is going to come about. The real new world order that is going to come about is the one that Jesus Christ brings about. The devil may try to run his counterfeit; in fact, he is. It's called Mystery Babylon the Great. That's the counterfeit of the new world order. But the real new world order is the fact that Christ is going to return and He is going to establish it.

What's the evidence, the proof? The evidence that Christ is going to return isn't based on scientific evidence that you can measure, taste and feel. It's based on the promises of God. We walk by faith, not by sight. As a Christian, we have to live our lives predicated on faith, on what God says. We either believe God or we don't. We deepen our relationship with Him as we walk with Him. If we walk with Him and spend time with Him, we deepen our relationship with Him.

II Corinthians 5:14-15, “For the love of Christ constrains us, because we judge thus; that if One died for all, then all died; and He died for all, that those who live should live not longer for themselves, but for Him who died for them and rose again.” Christ died and gave Himself for us. When we recognize that, our lives need to be devoted to Him.

Verse 17, “Therefore, if anyone is in Christ, he is a new creation; old things have passed away; behold, all things have become new.” We don’t want the old man and the old way. We become a new creature and old things have passed away. You don’t want to go back or drift back into the things you got rid of, put away and stopped when you came into the Church. You don’t want to drift back into the things of the world. We want to go forward in newness of life. We want to be a new creature, not drift back into the world or never come out of the world. Recognize that a new creature has to do with a whole new set of priorities, a new set of values and a new set of what’s important to us.

Verse 18, “Now all things are of God, who has reconciled us to Himself through Jesus Christ, and has given us the ministry of reconciliation.” Understand where the reconciliation is. We are being reconciled to God; it doesn’t say that God becomes reconciled to us. There’s a difference.

When you get a bank statement, you can go through and reconcile your checkbook to the bank statement. You better do it the right way. If you start reconciling the bank statement to your checkbook, you may wind up in trouble. The bank really won’t be impressed with that.

Reconciliation done the wrong way won’t do anybody any good. God is reconciling us to Himself through Jesus Christ. He didn’t say He would become reconciled to us—‘I guess you’re never going to change, so I will just adapt to you.’ God says ‘no,’ and God is right. Now the bank may occasionally make a mistake, but God doesn’t even occasionally make a mistake. God never needs to be reconciled to us. We always need to be reconciled to Him. He is the standard, and we have to become reconciled to Him. We have to come to match Him, to be brought into harmony with Him. We can be brought into harmony with God through Jesus Christ. Jesus Christ makes possible our being brought from a state of disharmony into a state of harmony with God. So we have the ministry of reconciliation.

Verse 19, “that is, that God was in Christ, reconciling the world to Himself....”

Verse 20, “Therefore we are ambassadors for Christ....”

Verse 21, “For He made Him who knew no sin to be sin for us, that we might become the righteousness of God in Him.” He paid the penalty to make possible our reconciliation to God. The whole purpose of God reconciling us to Himself is to change and transform us to make us like Him. So it is important that we understand the concept of reconciliation and what it means. It is not that God says He will meet us halfway or that God is going to water down His standards. If we surrender to Him, God makes it possible for us to be brought into harmony with Him. That’s what He desires in our behalf.

II Corinthians 6:1, “We then, as workers together with Him also plead with you not to receive the grace of God in vain.” God extends His mercy. Don’t receive it in vain; use it for a good purpose.

He begins to talk about being unequally yoked together and about our relationships. He talks about our relationship with God and how that renewed relationship is made possible. Then he begins to talk about our relationship with society around.

Verse 14, “Do not be unequally yoked together with unbelievers. For what fellowship has righteousness with lawlessness? And what communion has light with darkness?” —“Yoking together.” Primarily oxen were yoked. Why were animals yoked together?

Some of us are familiar with horses or mules being hitched up. You would have a wagon pulled by two or maybe four. When you look at the way animals are harnessed together, it is so that they have to pull together. If they are not tied together, then one can go in one direction and one can go the other. Any mules I have known, that is exactly what they would do.

What if you have two creatures that are vastly unequal? In the Old Testament, they were told not to yoke an oxen and an ass together (Deuteronomy 22:10). You have a tremendous amount of disparity. When two creatures are yoked together, the larger the disparity, the more difficult it is for them to pull together. They can’t pull together on the load. Animals that are different sizes have different steps. One has a big step, the other a short step. And there is disparity in strength. It’s just a problem. It is never going to work well. It’s going to be difficult and will be hardship on both.

God utilized a physical principle that He gave to ancient Israel, but there was a spiritual lesson that was intended when He said that an oxen and an ass couldn’t be yoked together. It wasn’t just because God was concerned about donkeys and oxen, though obviously, His tender mercies are over all His works as we are told in Psalm 145:9. God is certainly concerned about the physical creation and the animals, but His primary concern was the fact that there are spiritual lessons and implications. If God gave instructions even for animals, there were principles that applied to people.

When He said the ox and the ass shouldn't be yoked together, it had to do with trying to tie together, to pull together through life, something with great disparity. You want to be able to pull together. So anything that involves the need to pull together, you make a mistake to yoke up with someone who is not going to be pulling in the same direction. There isn't any way you can pull together.

So the principle would apply to business partnerships, marriage and various things. In some cases, people find themselves in circumstances as they come into the knowledge of the truth. They are already yoked in a way that is unequal. Sometimes people have to make the best of a situation. But the principle is that if you're not yoked, don't seek an unequal yoking. Seek an equal yoking, a yoking that is going to enable people to pull together. Two working together—when they are really pulling together—can accomplish far more than either individually. Two working together can more than double what either individually can do because it consolidates and maximizes that effort.

Verse 17, "Therefore 'Come out from among them and be separate....'"

Verse 16, "And what agreement has the temple of God with idols? For you are the temple of the living God...." There is a relationship here.

II Corinthians 7:1, "Therefore, having these promises, beloved, let us cleanse ourselves from all filthiness of the flesh and spirit, perfecting holiness in the fear of God." We are to go forward and become like God. We're to recognize the importance of partnerships in any sort of thing.

Verses 8-10, Paul begins to address the issue of repentance and the fact that there are two different types of sorrow. Being sorry and being repentant are two totally different things. Being repentant is different than being sorry. There are two different kinds of being sorry. One of them leads to repentance, the other doesn't. Even godly sorrow is not repentance of and by itself. It leads to repentance. There is worldly sorrow and godly sorrow. Worldly sorrow works death. It is a one-way street.

I think that the clearest illustration or example that I know to illustrate the difference between godly sorrow and worldly sorrow is the response of Peter and Judas. Judas betrayed Christ. When he realized that they were actually going to go through the crucifixion, he was sorry. He even took the money back (Matthew 27:3-5). But it was a worldly sorrow. Whatever idea he had in mind didn't work out that way. He became despondent, went out and committed suicide. That was worldly sorrow.

On the other hand, Peter denied Christ three different times. When the cock crowed and what he had done dawned on him, he felt horrible (Matthew 26:75). His sorrow was a godly sorrow because it produced a change in his life.

With worldly sorrow, any time you get into trouble it's easy to be sorry. Ever notice that? From the time you were a little kid, any time you got caught, you're sorry—sorry you got caught. That's normal and that's natural—sorry for the penalty, consequences and sorry we're in trouble. Sometimes we're sorry and wish we hadn't done this or that.

But godly sorrow goes beyond that. Godly sorrow is not just sorry for the consequences. It is not even that you wish you hadn't done this or that particular thing. It's a sorrow for what we are on the inside. We have come to see ourselves. Godly sorrow produces repentance.

It enumerates the qualities of godly sorrow.

II Corinthians 7:11, "For observe this very thing, that you sorrowed in a godly manner: What diligence it produced in you, what clearing of yourselves, what indignation, what fear, what vehement desire, what zeal, what vindication! In all things you proved yourselves to be clear in this matter."

"Diligence" (KJV, "carefulness") is a desire to really be careful. We have confronted sin in its enormity. We don't want to cut right along the edge anymore. We don't want to live kind of skirting the edge of the cliff.

"Clearing of yourselves" is a desire to have the guilt cleared away, which means we go to God and we confess it.

I John 1:9, "If we confess our sins, He is faithful and just to forgive us our sins and to cleanse us from all unrighteousness." The way to clear yourself is not to make excuses and use self-justification. It is to admit it to God; go to Him and really acknowledge it and ask God to clear it away.

“Indignation” is really being stirred up and indignant when we see sin for what it is. We are stirred up about it.

“Fear” is reverence and awe for God.

“Vehement desire” is a yearning and earnest desire to do what’s right and that earnest yearning for more of God’s truth. We are told by Peter in I Peter 2:2 to desire the sincere milk of the word just like a newborn baby. Have a craving for more of God’s way.

“Zeal” is really being stirred up, really being on fire.

“Vindication” (KJV, “revenge”) means, literally, “an avenging of wrong.” In the context, it would be best understood as making restitution. In this context, it doesn’t mean going and doing something to somebody. We recognize that we are the one who has done something wrong. We avenge the wrong and make it right—a desire to make restitution.

You might look at an example. Remember Zacchus, the publican?

Luke 19:10, he was a little short guy who wanted to see Jesus and climbed up a sycamore tree so he could get a good view. Jesus saw him and told him to come down. ‘I am coming over to your house to eat. So you had better get down out of the tree so you can “beat it on over there.”’ Jesus talked with him. Zacchus told Him that he really saw what he had done and the way he misused his office. Half of what he had he was willing to give to the poor. Anybody that he cheated, he was going to make restitution to them plus “square things up.” He evidenced the qualities that are shown right here in II Corinthians 7:11. One of the things Zacchus did that convinced Jesus that he was really repentant was this attitude.

When he got through telling Christ what he was going to do, Christ said, Luke 19:9, “...‘Today salvation has come to this house....’” What if Zacchus had said, ‘I know I’ve been a crook; I know I have cheated a lot of people. But I tell you what, why don’t we just have kind of a clean slate? I will quit cheating people, but I get to keep everything that I have stolen so far. Can I cut a deal with you? Would you okay it if I quit cheating and stealing from people, but I get to keep everything I have stolen? We will call it even.’ What do you think Jesus would have said? Do you think Christ would have been really impressed and said, ‘Zacchus, you really have the big picture?’ Somehow I don’t see Jesus having been really impressed with that sort of an attitude.

It’s kind of like in the Old Testament—if you stole a sheep from your brother or neighbor, you couldn’t just come and offer a sacrifice. You had to make restitution for the sheep (Exodus 22:1-4). If you defrauded your neighbor, you couldn’t just go to the priest and say, ‘I really cheated that guy. I’m sorry, let me offer a sacrifice and we will call it even.’ No. You need to offer the sacrifice, that’s right, but first you go and get reconciled to your neighbor. You give him back those cattle you rustled. You can’t just keep his herd, offer one of them to square you up with God and keep all the rest. You have to make restitution. It was evidence of repentance. Repentance has to do with a changed direction. Christ brought this out.

Paul said, ‘You have evidenced that you don’t just have worldly sorrow. Timothy has told me that there has been some real change [fruits] that has taken place. I see that there have been some significant changes, and I’m very glad of that. I’m not glad I made you sorry. I don’t like to be corrective and I’m sorry that I had to do it, but I’m not sorry that you’ve changed (vv. 8-9).

I think that any of us as parents can understand what Paul meant by that. I don’t think any of us enjoy having to be sternly corrective to our children. Sometimes you really feel badly; on the one hand, you had to be corrective. Yet on the other, you’re not sorry because you know that they needed it. You just feel badly that you had to. That’s the way Paul was. He felt badly that he had to, but he wasn’t sorry for the results. He now finds some change.

In II Corinthians 8, he begins to address the subject of giving and the example of the people in Macedonia.

II Corinthians 8:5, “And this they did, not as we had hoped, but first gave themselves to the Lord, and then to us by the will of God.” That’s what God desires. God doesn’t want what we have; He wants us.

Verse 12, “For if there is first a willing mind....” The issue with God is not nearly so much the amount as it is the attitude. God wants us to develop His nature, His attitude of giving and helping and sharing.

II Corinthians 9:1-4, “Now concerning the ministering to the saints, it is superfluous for me to write to you; for I know your willingness, about which I boast of you to the Macedonians, that Achaia was ready a year ago; and your zeal has stirred up the majority. Yet I have sent the brethren, lest our boasting of you should be in vain in this respect, that, as I said, you may be ready; lest if some Macedonians come with me and find you unprepared, we (not to mention you!) should be ashamed of this confident boasting.” Paul said, ‘Some Macedonians are probably going to come with me, and we don’t want to find you unprepared.’

Verse 5, “Therefore I thought it necessary to exhort the brethren to go to you ahead of time....” He’s on his way and this is going to be taken up. He talks about giving and God loving a cheerful giver (v. 7).

This was a big issue in Corinth. The Corinthians were able to do a lot. They were a very wealthy area, but the tendency so many times in areas that have a lot of material things is that the people can be pretty possessive and covetous of that. They needed to use what God had given them as a blessing, rather than to have the attitude they tended to have.

II Corinthians 10 continues to address certain issues with them.

Verses 3-5, he talks about changing and casting down imaginations. He talks about the fact that he’s not going to get in a “match” with some.

II Corinthians 10:12, “For we dare not class ourselves or compare ourselves with those who commend themselves. But they, measuring themselves, and comparing themselves among themselves, are not wise.” We’re not out to do that.

II Corinthians 11:2, “For I am jealous for you with godly jealousy. For I have betrothed you to one husband, that I may present you as a chaste virgin to Christ.”

He is concerned.

Verses 3-4, “But I fear, lest somehow, as the serpent deceived Eve by his craftiness, so your minds may be corrupted from the simplicity that is in Christ. For if he who comes preaches another Jesus whom we have not preached, or if you receive a different spirit which you have not received, or a different gospel which you have not accepted, you may well put up with it.”

Verses 13-14, “For such are false apostles, deceitful workers, transforming themselves into apostles of Christ. And no wonder! For Satan himself transforms himself into an angel of light.”

You have several things going on. You have those, even in the time of the New Testament, who were clearly false apostles. Simon Magus and those who were in league with him, those who were seeking to subvert a congregation to their own use, were clearly false apostles. They claimed an office they never had. The heresies that sprang from them ultimately developed into what became the Catholic Church.

There were others who had various brands of heresies. All of the heretics who gave Paul problems were not necessarily united in perfect order. There was a certain amount of confusion. There were certain brands of heresies that converged in Rome that became the basis of the teachings of the church at Rome. The teachings of the church at Rome ultimately became the standard brand of “Christianity” that Constantine enforced throughout the Roman Empire. There were various groups and various ones who had their “axe to grind.” They were seeking, for whatever their reasons, to make comments about Paul.

In vv. 13-15, he talked about the fact that there were going to be false ministers, those who were in reality ministers of Satan but don’t show up claiming that. The devil doesn’t show up wearing a little red suit, a pitchfork and a sign around his neck saying, “I’m the devil and I’m here to deceive you.” He appears as an angel of light. He claims to be that which he is not. That’s always the way of it. Paul addresses a little bit of his credentials and some of his background in the latter part of chapter 11.

In II Corinthians 12, he deals with a vision of heaven that he had. He tells it in the third person. It is not something that he wants to focus attention on him in a wrong way. This would have been to address the subject of a vision.

If Paul was writing in the fall of 55 A.D., fourteen years earlier would have been the fall of 41 A.D. It’s interesting that this would have been only a few months before he entered the ministry. Paul had been sent back to Tarsus after his conversion and time in Arabia. The apostles basically sent him back home to Tarsus. They told him to go back, get a job and go to work. “Don’t call us, we’ll call you.” He stayed there for four years. Barnabas went and sought him out and brought him down to Antioch to assist him. That was in 42 A.D. So the timing of this vision would have been, maybe, just a few months prior to that. You think maybe God, in preparation for the job the He had ahead for Paul, wanted to encourage him because Paul had had to learn some patience waiting for God to work through His government. So the timing on this would have been just very shortly before Paul entered the ministry.

Verse 2, God gave him this vision of the third heaven.

The Bible speaks of three heavens. The heaven of the earth’s atmosphere—scripture talks about the clouds of heaven or the birds that fly in the midst of heaven. Heaven can be used just to refer to the earth's atmosphere. Sometimes it is used to refer to outer space—the stars of heaven. That would be the second heaven. The third heaven is the heaven of God's throne. So there are three different heavens. The term "heaven" can be used in different ways. It depends on the context. God created the heavens and the earth (Genesis 1:1). The implication is referring to the stars, sun, moon, all that, along with the third.

Paul mentions a thorn in the flesh that he had.

II Corinthians 12:7, "And lest I should be exalted above measure by the abundance of the revelations, a thorn in the flesh was given to me, a messenger of Satan to buffet me, lest I be exalted above measure." He had this revelation, but God didn't want him to get puffed up. Even though he had a very special relationship with God, there was a particular thorn in the flesh. We are not told what it was. It was something that he felt really hindered him.

Verses 8-9, on three specific occasions he really sought God with prayer and fasting; God never chose to remove that particular problem. It was something Paul needed to learn to live with through God's help. Sometimes God removes the problem. Sometimes He gives us the grace and the strength to survive through it.

Verse 13, "For what is it in which you were inferior to other churches, except that I myself was not burdensome to you? Forgive me this wrong!" In other words, Paul had not taken wages of Corinth previously, though he planned to do so. He had said earlier that he was going to come to them and let them bring him on his way back to Antioch. In other words, he would do so when he came. But he had not done so previously in the time that he had been in Corinth earlier because money had been such an issue. He allowed the money to be used there locally in Corinth; he did not take a wage from them while he was there. Paul said, 'How have you been inferior to other Churches? The only way I treated you any differently than the others is I didn't collect a salary from you. Forgive me.'

He may, by this time, have had some second thoughts and felt that maybe he was too gentle with them to begin with. It maybe gave way to some of the problems that had developed. He had allowed all the funds to be utilized there locally and not taken any of it. He had either worked or received supplies and sustenance from the Churches in Macedonia while he had been in Corinth. Now he makes allusion to that.

We have already seen why he wrote II Corinthians. In chapters 3, 11 and 12, we found Paul defending his apostleship.

In II Corinthians 3, he talks about what commendations do we need; what credentials do we need? You are our credentials (vv. 1-3).

In II Corinthians 11, he talks about false apostles and all the things he had gone through in the latter part of the chapter.

In II Corinthians 12, he continues that same theme, defending his apostleship. That's one reason he wrote the book. The second reason he wrote the book was to reinstate the repentant sinner who had been disfellowshipped in I Corinthians 5 (II Corinthians 2:5-11).

In II Corinthians 8 and 9, he dealt with the collection for the saints in Jerusalem. This was the third reason he wrote the book.

There were evidently several accusations made against Paul. Some had charged that he was fickle in his intent to come to Corinth.

We saw that earlier in II Corinthians 1:17 where he said, 'No, it wasn't with lightness that I said that.'

Some, evidently, made disparaging comments about him personally, that his speech was contemptible and his bodily presence weak. He was not very impressive.

II Corinthians 10:10, "'For his letters,' they say, 'are weighty and powerful, but his bodily presence is weak, and his speech contemptible.'" They said, 'Yeah, he sounds pretty impressive when you read those letters, but he's not much to look at.' Some were making disparaging comments of that sort. Some had evidently made allusion to the fact that he perhaps was not really on a par with the other apostles because he really didn't have the authority to take salary or wages from the Churches.

II Corinthians 11:7-9, "Did I commit sin in abasing myself that you might be exalted, because I preached the gospel of God to you free of charge? I robbed other churches, taking wages from them to minister to you. And when I was present with you, and in need, I was a burden to no one, for what was lacking to me the brethren who came from Macedonia supplied. And in everything I kept myself from being burdensome to you, and so I will keep myself."

This, evidently, had been "thrown up" to them. Some of the false apostles had come in and were trying to use that as proof. 'See, Paul really isn't an apostle because the others that have come have received salary and livelihood from the Church. Now Paul never did that. You know why he didn't? He didn't have that authority.' Some were trying to twist and distort. Paul said, 'I took wages of the other Churches.' He didn't take it of Corinth while he was there because of the issue that existed. Their tithes and offerings were used there locally. He didn't want to be subject to the accusation that he was in it for the money. We saw that some were accusing him of lacking proper credentials.

In II Corinthians 3, there were various accusations that were being leveled against him, none of which were really valid or applied.

Finally, in II Corinthians 12:14, he ends up telling them, "Now for the third time I am ready to come to you...." Paul says, 'I am finally coming to you.'

II Corinthians 13:1-2, "This will be the third time I am coming to you. 'By the mouth of two or three witnesses every word shall be established.' I have told you before, and foretell as if I were present the second time, and now being absent I write to those who have sinned before, and to all the rest that if I come again I will not spare—"

Verses 3-4, "since you seek a proof of Christ speaking in me, who is not weak toward you, but mighty in you. For though He was crucified in weakness, yet He lives by the power of God. For we also are weak in Him, but we shall live with Him by the power of God toward you."

'I want you to know that when I get there, I am going to see how things are. I hope that I can come in kindness and in gentleness, but if I have to come in power and authority, I will do that.'

Verse 5, "Examine yourselves as to whether you are in the faith. Prove yourselves...." 'Really check yourself out. Are you really what you say you are?'

Verse 11, "Finally brethren, farewell. Become complete. Be of good comfort, be of one mind, live in peace; and the God of love and peace will be with you."

He desired to come in a gentle way, a kind and encouraging way. Yet at the same time, he recognized that there were some very serious problems that threatened the very existence of the Church, as God's Church.

There are a lot of things packed into II Corinthians. Paul had to deal with some serious matters as he wrote II Corinthians. Obviously there had been some changes since I Corinthians. Things seemed to have settled out. He wrote this letter, which still had correction in it, but it was more encouraging and not as stern.

Then he came down to Corinth, spent the winter there and left things in a lot better stead. While he was in Corinth, he wrote the book of Romans. He wrote to the Church in Rome, which is what we will go into next time.

Then he left Corinth, going back to Philippi, sailing back to Jerusalem for Pentecost where he was arrested and spent several years in prison. So things are getting close to that. We will see some of those events next time.

Life and Letters of Paul Series—Romans

We are getting into the book of Romans this evening—moving through our Bible study series. This is the halfway spot in this series of the Life and Letters of Paul. After this evening, we will be halfway through this particular series. We are focusing this evening on Paul’s letter to the Romans.

Rome was the capital of the Roman Empire. It was the great city of the ancient world. At the time of Paul, Rome had a population in excess of 1.2 million. It was the largest city that existed up until modern times. I think London surpassed this population somewhere around 1800. London was the next city to reach this sort of population. Rome went into a decline in later years. During the period of the Middle Ages, the population was dramatically lower than this. After the decline of the Roman Empire, it was all the way up into the 1800s before London, and later Paris, reached a population of this magnitude.

Rome was a sizable city. A city of a little over a million people is a large population. Rome had a population about like Houston, Texas; only it was more compact. You’d have trouble getting around in Houston if you had to depend on horses and chariots. Even in being more compact, it was a big place. With that many people together, it still had to be somewhat spread out because you didn’t have the multi-story buildings that we have now.

The size of the building was limited up until the late 1800s when two things were discovered. One was the use of interior steel girder construction where they went up multi-stories. Another was the elevator. This made possible the skyscrapers. Up until then, there was much more of a limit that was imposed in terms of the height of buildings and what it was practical to do. At that time, you had to go out rather than up. There is only so far out that you can go and still have a city that’s going to get over a certain size. Then you have to go up, too. Rome was a very sizable place.

It had a pretty sizable Jewish community. Over half of the population of Rome was slaves. This was a part of the economic base of Rome and the empire. The first settlement of Jews in Rome had been somewhere around 70 B.C. At least, it was the first documented settlement of any size.

The Christians in Rome were more of what we would think of as a loose-knit Bible study rather than a fully organized Church. There wasn’t any record of any Church having been, officially, established in Rome. There were individual Christians in Rome who met together. They assembled together at homes. There were probably different groups of them because, again, if you have a city of over a million population spread out, just getting from one end to the other, if you’re depending on walking, can be a pretty sizable distance even though things tended to be more compact.

Rome would naturally have had Church members because it was a large metropolitan area. There were people continually coming in and out of Rome. It was the center of the empire. Because of trade, commercial reasons and a variety of things, there were people who were coming in. There were Jews from Rome who had been in Jerusalem on the day of Pentecost 31 A.D. They are specifically mentioned in Acts 2:10. Some of them were converted. What happened to them?

Well, eventually, they went back to Rome. People tend to move into a place like Rome. So, over a period of time, you had people from Rome who had been converted elsewhere. They had been somewhere else for a short time on business. The Jews were very much involved in trade, commerce and business, as many of them are today. These things took them to different areas; then they returned to Rome.

The nucleus there was Jewish converts. There were others who had come in contact with the Church through either friends in the synagogues or through members. Not only did the Christians in Rome have Jews among them, there were also a number of Gentiles, many of whom had come from Antioch, Greece and various places in the surrounding areas. There were individuals who had congregated there.

We are going to notice when Romans was written. We can show from the context that Paul wrote it from Corinth in the winter of 55 A.D.—56 A.D. Phoebe, who was a deaconess in the Church in Corinth, carried it to Rome. She was evidently a widow who had considerable property and was traveling to Rome on something related to business. She took the letter with her. Paul entrusted that to her, and she delivered it when she got to Rome.

There is one thing that I really want to focus in on because it has to do with a very basic claim—the claim for papal supremacy, the claim of the pope as the Bishop of Rome. His “claim to fame” is that St. Peter was the first Bishop of Rome. As Bishop of Rome, he was the Successor of Peter, the Prince of the Apostles. Bishop of Rome is part of his title. Some of the titles that he claims for himself are Pontifex Maximus, the Successor of the Bishop of Rome, the Successor of St. Peter and the Prince of the Apostles. He goes through a long list. Someday, I will bring a copy of his titles; all the titles he claims for himself takes up about six or seven typewritten lines.

The point is that the whole basis of papal authority and the authority of the Catholic Church gets back to the claim that Peter established the church at Rome. They claim that Peter was the first Bishop of Rome and that all subsequent Bishops of Rome have been successors of Peter; therefore, they have primacy over all other bishops worldwide. This was the basis of the claims to papal authority that were made even anciently.

What we are going to see, very clearly, is that Peter was not in Rome. The Catholic Church dates Peter being in Rome to 42 A.D. We’re going to show that there wasn’t any way in the world that Peter had been in Rome for the last twelve years when Paul wrote the epistle to the Romans. I’ll show you what I mean by that.

How do we date the book of Romans? As we have gone through this series, I’ve tried to cover the books in relationship to the book of Acts. Let’s go to the book of Romans and we will see a little bit of how we date the book internally.

Romans 15:24-28, “whenever I journey to Spain, I shall come to you. For I hope to see you on my journey, and to be helped on my way there by you, if first I may enjoy your company for a while. But now I am going to Jerusalem to minister to the saints. For it pleased those from Macedonia and Achaia to make a certain contribution for the poor among the saints who are in Jerusalem. It pleased them indeed, and they are their debtors. For if the Gentiles have been partakers of their spiritual things, their duty is also to minister to them in material things. Therefore, when I have performed this and have sealed to them this fruit, I shall go by way of you to Spain.”

Notice the timing; we are told the timing right here. This is when Paul is getting ready to leave and go to Jerusalem. He is going to Jerusalem to take the offering from the area of Macedonia and Achaia (Greece, Corinth and Philippi). He’s getting ready to take that back to Jerusalem.

That’s where we were in II Corinthians, where Paul told the Corinthians Church that he was on his way to come to them.

II Corinthians 9:1-5, “Now concerning the ministering to the saints, it is superfluous for me to write to you; for I know your willingness, about which I boast of you to the Macedonians, that Achaia was ready a year ago; and your zeal has stirred up the majority. Yet I have sent the brethren, lest our boasting of you should be in vain in this respect, that, as I said, you may be ready; lest if some Macedonians come with me and find you unprepared...Therefore I thought it necessary to exhort the brethren to go to you ahead of time, and prepare your bountiful gift beforehand, which you had previously promised, that it may be ready as a matter of generosity and not as a grudging obligation.”

When Paul wrote II Corinthians, he was getting ready to come to Corinth and collect the foodstuffs he had told them about earlier.

We tie this in with Acts 20:1-3, “After the uproar had ceased, Paul called the disciples to him, embraced them, and departed to go to Macedonia. Now when he had gone over that region and encouraged them with many words, he came to Greece and stayed three months. And when the Jews plotted against him as he was about to sail to Syria, he decided to return through Macedonia.”

There accompanied him these various individuals (v. 4). We find that Paul was in Corinth.

Remember the story we went into last time. Paul had written I Corinthians in the spring of 55 A.D. from Ephesus. Then in Acts 19, we see how he had to leave Ephesus. He went on over, crossed into Macedonia up to Philippi. When he got to Philippi, he met Timothy whom he had sent down to Corinth to check up and see what the results from the letter were. Timothy reported to him; so he sent a letter (II Corinthians) back.

He told them he was coming to see them. That’s when he left and came through Greece and stayed there three months (Acts 20:3). This is wintering months (December, January, February), very difficult in which to travel. He wintered there in Corinth. He was originally going to sail, but he decided to go overland back up to Macedonia. This is when he is leaving to go back to Jerusalem in the spring of 56 A.D. to be there for Pentecost.

Acts 20:16, “...for he was hurrying to be at Jerusalem, if possible, on the Day of Pentecost.”

We find here the story of Paul’s return to Jerusalem. But when Paul wrote Romans, he had not left to go back to Jerusalem. He was telling the Romans that he was planning to come visit them. He said, 'I am going to Jerusalem to minister to the saints. I am going to take this offering that I have from Greece to Jerusalem, and then when I get through with that, I am going to leave. I am planning to go to Spain and stop and visit you on my way to Spain' (Romans 15:24-28). We have the setting. The setting is right around the time before he left to go back to Jerusalem.

We know he wrote it from Corinth because he makes reference to that in Romans.

Romans 16:1, "I commend to you Phoebe our sister, who is a servant of the church in Cenchrea." The word "servant" in the Greek is "diakonos." It is the feminine form of deacon. She is a deaconess of the Church at Cenchrea. Cenchrea was a suburb of Corinth. It was the port of Corinth. Phoebe was a deaconess from Corinth. He told the Church at Rome, 'I commend to you Phoebe, our sister, who is a deaconess here at Corinth.'

Verse 2, "that you may receive her in the Lord in a manner worthy of the saints, and assist her in whatever business she has need of you; for indeed she has been a helper of many and of myself also."

Paul is sending this letter from Corinth by Phoebe. He is sending it right at this particular time. We can pretty well date when Paul is doing this. It would have been the time during the three months that he was wintering in Corinth. It was probably towards the end of that because it was approaching the time he was going to leave and it was also approaching the time Phoebe was going to be able to set sail. He wrote the letter and since she was going to Rome, he entrusted it to her that she would deliver it.

We know that Peter wasn't in Rome as the Bishop of Rome. The church at Rome wasn't even what we would call an established church.

Notice what Paul says in Romans 1:9-11, "For God is my witness, whom I serve with my spirit in the gospel of His Son, that without ceasing I make mention of you always in my prayers, making request if, by some means, now at last I might find a way in the will of God to come to you. For I long to see you, that I may impart to you some spiritual gift, so that you might be established."

Paul wanted to come and impart to them a spiritual gift so that they could be established. That says they weren't established.

Now if Peter had been there as the first pope for twelve years, that would be kind of an insult. If that was the case, it would be like if a minister in an adjoining area wrote a letter here to Lafayette and says he is anxious to come and visit you because he would really like to establish you as a Church. That would be a little odd. We have been a Church here for years. I might take a little bit of exception to that.

This is what it would have been like if Peter had been there for the last twelve years. Paul writes a letter and says he is really anxious to come and visit the people so that he can impart a spiritual gift to the end that they may be established. That's not all because, as we come back a little further in the book of Romans, we find something else.

Romans 15:19, "in mighty signs and wonders, by the power of the Spirit of God, so that from Jerusalem and round about to Illyricum I have fully preached the gospel of Christ."

Illyricum is an area north of Greece. It would be a portion (just the very bottom tip) of what is now modern-day Yugoslavia. It is right on the Adriatic Sea across and just east of Italy. Italy comes down as a boot. There's a sea that comes down. You have Yugoslavia and then Greece down on the bottom. Well, Paul had gone up as far as Greece, and even north of Greece, but he had never been over into Italy. He says, 'I have gone all the way from Jerusalem, over to north of Greece and I have fully preached the gospel.'

Verse 20, "And so I made it my aim to preach the gospel, not where Christ was named, lest I should build on another man's foundation." Paul says, 'I have been preaching the gospel all the way from Jerusalem to up north in Greece. I haven't gotten to you yet. Wherever I have gone, my purpose has been to go into areas where Christ has not been preached, so that I am not building on someone else's foundation. It's my job, my commission, to lay a foundation. Other men come in and build on that foundation.'

Paul is telling them he desires to come and see them to the end that they may be established. He's telling them that he's not in the position of going in and building on other men's foundations. He goes in and preaches in areas where the gospel has not been proclaimed. Now, if Peter's been in Rome for the last twelve years, he must be doing a "slow boil" about this time because this is quite an insult—saying Peter hadn't established them, hadn't preached the gospel and hadn't laid a foundation. That would really be insulting.

Romans 16:1-3, “I commend to you Phoebe ...assist her in whatever business she has need of you...Greet Priscilla and Aquila, my fellow workers in Christ Jesus.”

Verse 5, “Likewise greet the church that is in their house....” Priscilla and Aquila were friends of Paul that he had met at an earlier time. They were Jews from Rome who had been expelled from Rome at an earlier time. There was an expulsion of Jews from Rome that had occurred; Priscilla and Aquila had been caught up in that and had been affected by it.

We’re moving back in time several years earlier, going back about six years from the time Paul is writing Romans 16. Let’s turn the clock back six years.

Acts 18:1, “...Paul had departed from Athens and went to Corinth.” This was the first time Paul went to Corinth.

Verses 2-3, “And he found a certain Jew named Aquila, born in Pontus, who had recently come from Italy with his wife Priscilla (because Claudius had commanded all the Jews to depart from Rome); and he came to them. So, because he was of the same trade, he stayed with them and worked; for by occupation they were tentmakers.”

Paul had gotten acquainted with them because he had stayed with them and they had worked together being of the same craft. It started out as a friendly relationship where he was rooming with them. He was probably renting a room in their house, working, doing piecework out of Aquila’s shop. They had taken an interest in the Church and had become converted. In the meantime, the Jews had been allowed to return to Rome.

The reason they had left Rome was because Claudius had expelled all the Jews. Ever so often the Roman emperors would get “hard up” for cash, so they would expel the Jews. They would confiscate and liquidate their assets. It was a good way to raise a little ready cash and kind of blame somebody for all the problems going on.

This is an old story that’s been going on for a long time. Politicians always like to blame somebody else for all the problems. They like to have a scapegoat. There have been different scapegoats at different times. The Jews have traditionally been a popular scapegoat. They are easy to blame.

Priscilla and Aquila were back in Rome, and there was evidently a group of Christians who were meeting at their house.

In Romans 16:3-15, Paul greets the Church there at their house. He starts listing all these various people, a number who had come from Corinth. He names off a gigantic list of people. But, when you go through the whole list, one of the things you find is there isn’t any mention of Peter. Paul names more people by name in the book of Romans than he does any other book. Everybody that he knows in Rome, he says “Hello” to. He tacks it on the end of his letter. But there is never a mention of Peter. Now, if Peter was there as the pope, you talk about being insulted! Paul ignores him totally.

Paul says, ‘I need to come over and establish you. The foundation hasn’t been laid. I go in and preach where nobody has preached yet, so I’m going to come to you people and preach. I don’t build on another man’s foundation. And you need to be established. Say “Hi” to everybody I know, starting out with Priscilla and Aquila, whose house the Church is meeting.’ He kind of works his way down. There isn’t any way that you can truthfully and objectively look at the book of Romans and think that Peter was in Rome as the Bishop of Rome.

The whole basis of the claim of authority that the Catholic Church has absolutely collapses on the basis of an objective look at the book of Romans. It collapses on several other bases as well. We don’t have time to get into all of those. We will get into some of them at a later time. I think it’s important to understand this because it is a major issue. The claim of papal supremacy is the claim of supremacy of the Bishop of Rome because he is the successor of Peter. Peter is not in Rome. Peter didn’t establish the Church in Rome. He was not in Rome up through this time. This is made plain.

Let’s get on into more of the book of Romans. There were Jews and Gentiles in the Church at Rome; the Gentiles being primarily the Greeks and Romans. There were some problems as there traditionally are. They all had a problem with each of them looking down on everyone else. The Jews knew that they were superior to everybody else because they had the Bible. Since they were God’s own special people, this obviously made them better than everybody else. On the other hand, you couldn’t convince the Romans of that. The Romans knew they were the superior people. They were the master race because they ruled the world. That was pretty much evidenced.

The Greeks knew that they really were the ones who were superior to everybody else because they were the ones who conducted the schools to teach the Romans. So, in their minds, that proved that they were smarter than the Romans because they were employed by the Romans to teach them. The pagan religions of Rome and the great philosophers all quoted Socrates, Plato and Aristotle, the great Greek philosophers. The Greeks claim to superiority was their culture and philosophers.

The Romans claimed the superiority because they ruled everybody else. That should make them number one. And the Jews looked down on them and said, 'Neither one of you really have what we have. We're number one. We are the ones on speaking terms with God. The rest of you are not.'

You have people in the Church who have come out of these backgrounds—each of which kind of looked down a little bit on the others and figured what they had made them better than the others. They all took pride in certain things. Paul begins to address that subject.

The first thing he started into was the Greeks and Romans. He really "chewed them up and spit them out."

Romans 1:18-22, "For the wrath of God is revealed from heaven against all ungodliness and unrighteousness of men, who suppress the truth in unrighteousness, because what may be known of God is manifest in them, for God has shown it to them. For since the creation of the world His invisible attributes are clearly seen, being understood by the things that are made, even His eternal power and Godhead, so that they are without excuse, because, although they knew God, they did not glorify Him as God, nor were thankful, but became futile in their thoughts, and their foolish hearts were darkened. Professing themselves to be wise, they became fools."

Paul blasts the philosophers of the Greco-Roman world in about as strong terms as possible. He says they are a bunch of fools. Paul says, 'The things you take pride in are your great philosophers, your great educational system. Let me tell you about the great educational system; the people that founded it were fools.' You can imagine a few people were probably squirming in their seats about that time. They maybe thought he had quit preaching and gone to "meddling" because he was really beginning to take apart the things in which they had pride.

He begins to go through and talks about how God had given them over to a debased (KJV, "reprobate") mind (v. 28), and God gave them up to uncleanness (v. 24). You don't have to dig very far before you realize what a major role the sexual sins, sexual perversion and homosexuality played among the intellectuals and the intelligentsia of Greece. There were vile things that were a part of some of these things. Paul really begins to go through and "rake them over the coals" for the things in which they took pride.

This is being read orally. About the time we've gotten down this far, some of the Jews are sitting there feeling pretty smug because this is what they thought all along.

Then he gets on down.

Romans 2:11, "For there is no partiality with God."

Verses 13-15, "(for not the hearers of the law are just in the sight of God, but the doers of the law will be justified; for when Gentiles, who do not have the law, by nature do the things contained in the law, these, although not having the law, are a law to themselves, who show the work of the law written in their hearts....")

The Gentiles didn't have the Ten Commandments given to them. Moses didn't come to Rome or to Athens and give the Ten Commandments. 'You Jews are pretty proud of that; He gave them to you. But let me tell you something. It's not the hearers of the law that are just; all you Jews have heard the law. It's the doers of the law.'

Which do you think God is most pleased with: a Roman who never heard the Ten Commandments that didn't commit adultery or a Jew who heard them and did? Which do you think God is the most pleased with: a Jew who heard the Ten Commandments yet worked some shady deals and stole, lied or murdered or some Greek or Roman who never had the law taught to them (in terms of the Old Testament), but figured out you shouldn't lie or steal or murder somebody?

You have people all over the world, whether they are Arabs or Chinese or people in Africa or South America. You can go anywhere in the world and find some nice people, the kind you would like to have as next door neighbors. They don't go around raping, murdering, pillaging and doing all kinds of terrible things. Just because somebody's not in the Church doesn't mean that they are a thief, murderer and rapist. The point he's making is that the Jews were smug.

He says, 'Let's understand; it's not the hearers of the law but the doers.' There were people in Rome of Greek and Roman background. Even though the law was not delivered to them as a codified canon of law, if they understood and did some of these things, God was pleased with that.

Verses 17-20, "Indeed you are called a Jew, and rest on the law, and make your boast in God, and know His will, and approve the things that are excellent, being instructed out of the law, and are confident, that you yourself are a guide to the blind, a light to those who are in darkness, an instructor of the foolish, a teacher of babes, having the form of knowledge and truth in the law.”

‘You Jews are pretty proud of yourself, aren’t you? You rest in the law. This really gives you “one up.” Well, let me tell you something.’

Verses 22-24, “You who say, ‘do not commit adultery.’ Do you commit adultery? You who abhor idols, do you rob temples? You who make your boast in the law, do you dishonor God through breaking the law? ‘For the name of God is blasphemed among the Gentiles because of you,’ as it is written.”

Oh, now, all of a sudden, the Jews are the ones squirming in their seats. They’ve been sitting there looking pretty smug until a few minutes ago. Now, as the letter proceeds to be read, Paul says, ‘You Jews, the name of God is blasphemed among the Gentiles because of your lousy example. You rest in the law and make your boast in the law and you’re not keeping the law. People know the kind of example that you’ve been setting and the name of the God of Israel is blasphemed among the Gentiles because of your lousy example.’

About this time, there are some who are uncomfortable and squirming in their seats because they weren’t really comfortable either. He says, ‘Look, where does righteousness come from?’ The Jews’ “claim to fame” was that they were circumcised; they’re the seed of Abraham. Circumcision is the sign of the covenant; they’re identified as the children of Abraham (Israelites) to whom was delivered the law. This was the basis of their claim to a relationship with God. They had this patronizing approach toward the Gentiles, which in turn, some of the Gentiles (particularly the Greeks and Romans) had a pretty patronizing approach toward everybody else. They said, ‘Maybe you have a few things, but after all, we’ve developed this wonderful educational system and we’ve produced this great culture and civilization.’

Greek and Roman civilization was a major accomplishment. There are many beautiful things. Look at some of the great architecture and art. Many great things come from the Greco-Roman civilization. It is the basis of much of western civilization. These are positive things, but the problem is that’s the basis of people’s confidence.

Paul says, v. 25, “For circumcision is indeed profitable if you keep the law; but if you are a breaker of the law, your circumcision has become uncircumcision.” You know what circumcision profits? If you keep the law and you’re doing what God says, it is fine.

Verse 26, “Therefore, if an uncircumcised man keeps the righteous requirements of the law, will not his uncircumcision be counted as circumcision?” If he’s doing what God says, that counts a whole lot more than someone who is a Jew that is not doing what God says.

Verse 29, “but he is a Jew who is one inwardly....”

He’s gotten through “slamming” the Gentiles and the things they were proud of. Then he turned around and “slammed” the Jews and all the things they were proud of. So nobody has anything to be proud of. This is the point that Paul wanted to make.

Romans 3:23, “for all have sinned, and fall short of the glory of God.” Paul says, ‘You’re all in the same boat. You Gentiles and Jews don’t have anything to be proud of. You’re all sinners. You’re all in the same boat, and the question is how to get out of that boat and into another.’ This was Paul’s approach in dealing with a situation where there was a certain amount of rivalry and friction—this sort of attitude and problem that some had towards one another.

Now he needs to come back and address the subject of the advantage of being a Jew.

Romans 3:1, “What advantage then has the Jew, or what is the profit of circumcision?” Is there an advantage to being a Jew?

Verse 2, “Much in every way! Chiefly because to them were committed the oracles of God.” Yes, there is one great advantage because unto them were committed the oracles of God, the Word of God. The Jews were given the truth—the Bible. Even if some didn’t believe it, their unbelief will not make God’s faithfulness of non-effect (v. 3). In other words, God faithfully preserved His word through them, even if some of them didn’t believe it and practice it. So there was a tremendous advantage they had. They had access to the written and preserved Word of God.

The oracles of God, basically, consist of three things. Some of it was written; some, not written. The oracles of God consist of the Old Testament Scriptures preserved by the Jews. You know two other things the Jews preserved? They preserved the knowledge of which day is the Sabbath. You can read in the Old Testament; it tells you, “Remember the Sabbath ...keep it holy.” It tells you, “...the seventh day is the Sabbath of the Lord your God...” (Exodus 20:8-11). But, if somebody had not been keeping every seventh day, how would you know which day is the seventh? The Jews preserved the knowledge of which day is the seventh. If there had not been a people keeping the Sabbath consecutively every week through every generation, then how would you have kept up with it?

We pretty well use one standard calendar in the world today. Anciently, that was not the case. Every nation had some calendar. The Jews preserved the knowledge of which day was the Sabbath. In the Old Testament is preserved the knowledge that the seventh day is the Sabbath, but which day is the seventh day? The Jews preserved the order of the days of the week.

Another thing they preserved was the knowledge of how to calculate the calendar. That was another part of the oracles of God. God tells us that the Passover comes on the fourteenth day of the first month. That’s great. But how do you figure that out? That didn’t mean that the fourteenth of January was Passover, did it? It is not the fourteenth day of the Roman calendar but the fourteenth day of the first month of the sacred calendar. Who preserved the calendar? The Jews did. That’s why it is called the Jewish calendar or the Hebrew calendar.

So, the oracles of God consisted of: (1) the Old Testament, (2) the knowledge of the seventh-day week and (3) the knowledge of the sacred calendar and how to compute it. The Jews preserved that information.

And according to what Paul said here in Romans 3, they preserved it faithfully. Even though some of them didn’t believe it, in the full sense of the word, God used them to preserve that knowledge. That’s a tremendous advantage.

But the point is, Romans 3:10-12, “...There is none righteous, no, not one; there is none who understands; there is none who seeks after God. They have all gone out of the way; they have together become unprofitable; there is none who does good, no, not one.” Everybody’s culture and civilization has gotten off the track. ‘Greeks, Romans and Jews—you’ve all missed the point. You’ve all sinned. None of you have an inherent “leg up” in terms of a relationship with God.’ So this was important.

We get into the concept of law and grace. There’s a lot about that in the book of Romans.

Verse 28, “...a man is justified by faith apart from the deeds of the law.”

Verse 31, “Do we then make void the law through faith? Certainly not! On the contrary, we establish the law.”

Again, we get back to the issue of circumcision. Circumcision revolved around the issue of access to God. We went through this in greater detail in the book of Galatians. This was what the whole controversy was about. This was the thing that was difficult to grasp. How do you gain and maintain access to God? What is the basis of our relationship with God and of having access to God? Is it simply a matter of ceremonial requirements?

If you go into the Old Testament, there were requirements in terms of circumcision and even in terms of serving in the temple—things of that sort. There were certain bodily impairments that someone was not able to have and serve in the temple. There were physical things of uncleanness that would temporarily exclude you. There were physical things that determined your access to the sanctuary and to proximity to God.

But those were simply to teach a spiritual lesson. The issue that had to be understood was that the basis of our relationship with God is a spiritual relationship. It is not simply the performance of a ritual or a penance or doing certain things. Grace is not conferred through the seven sacraments. That’s not where you get God’s grace. Those of you who were Catholics know that’s not the way grace is conferred.

Grace is God’s gift, and Paul makes plain that our relationship with God is predicated on faith. It is a spiritual relationship. This does not make void the law (v. 31). This does not tear up the Ten Commandments and throw them away. It is not the performance of a ritual that determines access to God because we are looking at a spiritual relationship.

The Jews needed to understand that they didn’t have some inherent, automatic relationship with God simply because the ritual of circumcision had been performed. That was not the basis of a spiritual relationship with God. Circumcision was the outward, physical sign that identified them as the covenant people, the descendants of Abraham. That was fine, but it did not give them a “leg up” toward inheriting the Kingdom of God.

As the covenant people, they did have access to the Scriptures and knowledge of the truth. That’s well and good, but you still have to act on it. It’s not the hearer of the law that is going to be justified (Romans 2:13). The fact that you sat in the synagogue and heard the law read doesn’t put you one “leg up” on anybody else, unless you have acted on what you have heard.

The same can be brought down and applied to us in the Church today. It doesn't matter how many years you've sat in the Church or if you grow up in it or if your parents were in it before you were born. It doesn't matter how many generations of your family has been in the Church or how long or how short a time you've been in the Church. It's not the hearers of the law that are going to be justified; it's the doers. It's not how many sermons you've heard; it's what you've done with the ones you have heard. A person who has only heard one and acted on it is a whole lot better off than the guy who has heard a thousand and hadn't really gotten around to doing anything with any of them. It's not how many; it's what you've done with the ones you have heard. This is the key, and Paul is bringing this out.

Then he gets into the matter of justification. Again, justification is the basis of our relationship with God in the sense of gaining access to God. How are you justified? Was Abraham justified before God by circumcision? Was that the basis of Abraham's spiritual relationship with God?

Paul says, 'Let us go through and analyze.'

Romans 4:2-3, "For if Abraham was justified by works, he has something of which to boast, but not before God. For what does the Scripture say? 'Abraham believed God, and it was accounted to him for righteousness.'" Genesis 15 says this was before he was circumcised.

Verse 10, "How then was it accounted? While he was circumcised, or uncircumcised? Not while circumcised, but while uncircumcised." He says he was uncircumcised when he believed God, acted on it and when God received him.

Verse 11, "And he received the sign of circumcision, a seal of the righteousness of faith which he had while still uncircumcised...." Paul is trying to explain a concept to them.

Abraham's relationship with God was not established by the performance of the ritual of circumcision. That's not what gave Abraham his relationship with God. God established that as a covenant sign with Abraham, but there was a relationship with God that Abraham already had for over twenty years. God made the promises to Abraham before circumcision was ever mentioned.

He uses this to illustrate to the Jews who had trouble turning loose of the fact that you really couldn't be assured of access to God if you were uncircumcised. This was based on the fact of physical exclusion from the court of the Israelites. Remember, around the tabernacle and later the temple, there were courts. There was an outer court, the court of the Gentiles, beyond which someone couldn't pass unless he was a circumcised Jew.

We will see it in the next Bible study or two, Acts 21, when Paul went back to Jerusalem. He was arrested and charged with bringing uncircumcised Gentiles into the temple precinct. The issue of access is the whole thing. The issue is not doing away with the law. The issue is: what do you do that gains access to God? How do you gain access to God? What is the basis of your having access? Paul is explaining that here.

What is the promise to Abraham?

Verse 13, "For the promise that he would be the heir of the world was not to Abraham or to his seed through the law, but through the righteousness of faith." What is the promise to Abraham? He would be the heir of the world. God didn't promise to Abraham that he was going to go to heaven. He promised him he would inherit the earth.

If he is going to inherit the earth, that's why we are told, "And if you are Christ's then you are Abraham's seed and heirs according to the promise" (Galatians 3:29). Which promise? The promise God made to Abraham, the promise that he would be the heir of the world. We, spiritually, all become accounted as the children of Abraham and we inherit through him, in effect, as his spiritual offspring. The promise was that he would be heir of the world.

Therefore, it shouldn't surprise us when Christ said in Matthew 5:5, "...the meek, for they shall inherit the earth" or surprise us when we read in Revelation 5:10, "And have made us kings and priests to our God; and we shall reign on the earth." The earth is what God promised. Abraham was going to be the heir; the inheritor.

Romans 4:20-21, "He did not waver [KJV, "stagger"] at the promise of God through unbelief, but was strengthened in faith, giving glory to God. And being fully convinced that what He had promised He was also able to perform." This was the basis of Abraham's relationship with God. He believed God. He trusted God. He developed a relationship with God based on confidence. That needs to be the basis of our relationship with God.

Romans 5:1-2, "Therefore, having been justified by faith, we have peace with God through our Lord Jesus Christ, through whom also we have access by faith into this grace in which we stand...." So how do we gain access to God? Through Christ we have access by faith. Christ made the access possible, but we have to believe it. We have to act by faith, and it is through Him that we have access through faith. He discusses this and shows that God took the initiative in establishing our approach to Him.

Verse 6, “For when we were still without strength, in due time Christ died for the ungodly.”

Verses 9-10, “Much more then, having now been justified by His blood, we shall be saved from wrath through Him. For if when we were enemies we were reconciled to God through the death of His Son, much more having been reconciled, we shall be saved by His life.”

We’re reconciled by the death of Christ. We’re saved by His life. There was an old Protestant hymn about “Saved by the Blood.” We are not saved by His blood; we are saved by His life. We are reconciled by the blood—by the death and by the shedding of blood. Restitution for sin was made that paid the penalty. We have the opportunity to live because Christ not only died, He lives again and became the Captain (Author) of our salvation (Hebrew 2:10).

Again, we get into this issue of reconciliation, this issue of justification. God took the initiative to bring us into a relationship with Him. We were cut off. We were alienated by sin. Whether we are Jews, Gentiles or whatever—regardless of our ethnic origin—we were all in the same category and alienated from God through sin. God took the initiative to bring us into a relationship with Himself. That initiative was taken through Jesus Christ. Our relationship with God is a spiritual relationship, and it is not based on performance of physical rituals.

Let’s notice one thing. The question comes up about the Ten Commandments existing between the time of Adam and Moses.

Verses 12-14, “Therefore, just as through one man sin entered the world, and death through sin, and thus death spread to all men, because all have sinned—(For until the law sin was in the world, but sin is not imputed when there is not law. Nevertheless death reigned from Adam to Moses....”

If there hadn’t been any law, there wouldn’t have been any sin; if there hadn’t been any sin, there wouldn’t have been any death. Right? That’s what it says. Sin entered into the world and death entered by sin. Death passed upon all men because all have sinned.

The Ten Commandments were in effect between Adam and Moses because sin was imputed—sin was counted. It was still a sin. When Joseph, back in the book of Genesis, was tempted to commit adultery by Potipher’s wife, he said, ‘how could I do so and sin against my master and against God. How can I do this sin?’ Joseph knew it was a sin to commit adultery. How did he know that? If there is no law, there is no sin.

That’s the way they want to solve the crime problem. They want to do away with some of the law. We have a big drug problem. If we make it all legal, then it won’t be a crime anymore and crime will go down. Right? If you legalize murder, you can say the crimes of murder have dropped to zero because it’s not a crime anymore. What if you abolished the speed limit? Then you wouldn’t have the speeding violations anymore.

Up until the energy crunch in the 70s, Montana didn’t have a speed limit during the daytime on the major highways. There simply were not speed limits. There were practical reasons for that. You could probably drive fifty miles and not see another vehicle. You would have to go to some trouble to have a wreck.

The point is that if there is no law, there is no sin. We know that there was sin between Adam and Moses; therefore, there was a law. Paul had to deal with some of the misunderstandings that had arisen. He’s bringing out how we’re justified and the basis of a relationship with God is not predicated on the performance of physical ritual. Some want to “jump into the other ditch” and say, ‘It doesn’t matter about sin and keeping the law because grace comes freely; we can do whatever we want to do and God will just give more grace. Since God likes to give grace, the more we sin, the more God can give grace. God’s happy and we’re happy.’ That’s not the way it works.

Romans 6:1-2, “What shall we say then? Shall we continue in sin that grace may abound? Certainly not! How shall we who died to sin live any longer in it?” He said, ‘What do you mean? Do you mean that you can just keep on doing whatever you want to do because, after all, God will give grace?’

Don’t you realize that when you become a partaker of grace, you died to sin? You turned from sin. You said, ‘I don’t want that way anymore.’ There’s a difference between living in sin and tripping up and making a mistake sometimes. There’s a difference between missing the mark and not even aiming for the target.

It is interesting. The primary word that is most commonly used for sin, both in Hebrew and Greek, refers to sin in the sense of mistakes that Christians make. It comes from words in the original that basically mean to miss the mark. In the Hebrew, it's the word that was once used to refer to an archer who was able to shoot a target and not miss the mark. So, what it is talking about is missing the mark, not quite hitting the bull's eye. It's talking about conduct not quite being on target. Paul is bringing this out. There's a difference between missing the mark and not even aiming for the target. Missing the mark is predicated on the fact you were shooting at the target. You were aiming, but we don't always hit it "right on" as we should.

But shall we continue in sin? No. We died to sin. We're not trying to live that way anymore. We may miss the mark sometimes, but in terms of sin as a way of life, we've turned our back on it. He goes through that we're to walk in newness of life. We're not to serve sin (v. 6). Sin is not to reign in our mortal bodies (v. 12).

Verse 16, "Do you not know that to whom you present yourselves slaves to obey, you are that one's slave whom you obey, whether of sin to death, or of obedience to righteousness?"

Verse 23, "For the wages of sin is death, but the gift of God is eternal life in Christ Jesus our Lord." We are not under the law in the sense that we're not under the penalty of the law. We've died to that. We're delivered from the penalty of the law.

Romans 7:6-7, "But now we have been delivered from the law, having died to what we were held by, so that we should serve in the newness of the Spirit and not in the oldness of the letter. What shall we say then? Is the law sin? Certainly not! On the contrary, I would not have known sin except through the law. For I would not have known covetousness unless the law had said, 'You shall not covet.'"

Paul said, 'I wouldn't have known sin except God had spelled it out in the law.' The purpose of the law is to define sin. You wouldn't know right from wrong if God didn't tell you. You don't know what the speed limit is unless there's a sign posted. This is the purpose. This is what the law serves.

Verse 12, "Therefore the law is holy, and the commandment holy and just and good." The problem is not the law.

Verse 14, "For we know that the law is spiritual, but I am carnal, sold under sin." The problem wasn't the law; the problem was with the people.

Verses 18-21, "For I know that in me (that is, in my flesh) nothing good dwells; for to will is present with me, but how to perform what is good I do not find. For the good that I will to do, I do not do; but the evil I will not to do, that I practice. Now if I do what I will not to do, it is no longer I who do it, but sin that dwells in me. I find then a law, that evil is present with me, the one who wills to do good."

So what am I going to do? In my flesh dwells no good thing. I have made up my mind that I desire to serve God, but the pulls that I have inherent within me are taking me in the other direction.

Verse 22, "For I delight in the law of God according to the inward man."

Verse 24, "...who will deliver me from this body of death?"

God will through Jesus Christ.

Verse 25, "I thank God—through Jesus Christ our Lord! So then, with the mind I myself serve the law of God, but with the flesh the law of sin." With my mind I have made a decision and I'm locked on to serving the law of God. As long as I am in the flesh, I am still battling the pulls that can take me in the other direction.

Romans 8:1, "There is therefore now no condemnation to those who are in Christ Jesus, who do not walk according to the flesh, but according to the Spirit." He is talking about not continuing to walk after the flesh. We have a battle going on. We're pulled in two different directions, but we've chosen the direction we're going in. We're going in that direction even though there may be pulls and may be occasional slips in terms of completely and perfectly walking the way of God.

Verses 6-7, "For to be carnally minded is death, but to be spiritually minded is life and peace. Because the carnal mind is enmity against God; for it is not subject to the law of God, nor indeed can be." Carnally minded is being primarily motivated by the pulls of the flesh that is pulling and taking us in a direction contrary to God. In the flesh we can't please God; we need the Spirit of God.

How do you know if you're going to be in the Kingdom? Here's the key.

Verse 11, "But if the Spirit of Him who raised Jesus from the dead dwells in you, He who raised Christ from the dead will also give life to your mortal bodies through His Spirit who dwells in you."

The Spirit is the earnest of our inheritance (Ephesians 1:13-14). It's the proof that God intends to do what He says. "If the Spirit of Him that raised up Christ from the dead dwells in you...." How do you know if you're going to be in the Kingdom? –If you have the Spirit of God.

God doesn't give you His Spirit and then takes it back and then gives it back—on and off again like a light switch. That's not the way it works. When God gives you the Spirit, you have the Spirit. You can drift far enough from God to finally come to the point of the unpardonable sin. There can finally come a point of no return when God would take His Spirit from you. But it's not something that just goes back and forth. Once you have it, you have it as long as you use it, exercise it and seek it. Sometimes you may be on low supply because you haven't been renewing it. But it is something that we have as a gift of God and God does not desire to take it from us. He desires to give us more.

1 Peter 5:5, "...God resists the proud but gives grace to the humble."

Romans 8 goes through a very powerful section of Scripture.

Verse 15, we have received the Spirit of sonship.

Verse 16, we are God's children.

Verse 17, we are heirs of God and joint heirs with Christ.

Verse 23, we have the firstfruits of the Spirit.

Verse 31, if God is for us, who can be against us?

Verse 35, nothing can separate us from God's love and God's power.

In Romans 9, Paul begins to address the subject of Israel. Israel as a whole was not being converted now. That was a mystery to many trying to understand.

Verse 3, Paul had a great desire to see his countrymen converted, but he explains something.

Romans 11:25-26, "For I do not desire, brethren, that you should be ignorant of this mystery, lest you should be wise in your own opinion, that hardening in part has happened to Israel until the fullness of the Gentiles has come in. And so all Israel will be saved...."

Verse 32, "For God has committed them all to disobedience, that He might have mercy on all."

He is bringing out to the Gentiles that it's not because they were somehow inherently smarter or anything else. God has blinded or allowed them to be blinded temporarily. He's concluded them in unbelief that He may have mercy upon all. He will deal with them in His time. Israel is not converted right now because they are blinded.

God goes into the fact that He chooses whom He will call and when.

Romans 9:16, "So then it is not of him who wills, nor of him who runs, but of God who shows mercy." He chooses upon whom He will have mercy and who will be blinded. That's God's choice. You and I understand what we understand because God has opened our minds to understand. It's not because there may be others who are not somehow inherently worse than we are. It's not because we were smarter than everybody else or because of some inherent quality of us. God in His mercy chose us; we have to understand the credit goes to God, not to us. God chose us. We didn't take the initiative in our relationship with God. He took it with us. It's not that we didn't do our part in terms of seeking and searching. But if God had not revealed Himself, we could have never found Him. God revealed Himself. Paul goes through and explains some things.

There is one scripture that I always took a lot of encouragement in. I remember back at some "low times" in the state of the Church back in the 70s when there didn't seem to be very much being accomplished and there were a lot of things that shouldn't have been. This was one of the verses that I zeroed in on and took a lot of comfort from.

Romans 9:28, "For He will finish the work and cut it short in righteousness, because the Lord will make a short work upon the earth." God is going to finish His work. He's going to finish it and He's going to cut it short in righteousness. That's something to understand. God knows who's who and He knows what's what. He has a job to do and He's going to finish His work. He's going to cut it short in righteousness. He's going to make a short work.

The full prophetic implications of that short work is something that I think we will just have to wait and see in terms of what God is going to classify as the short work. I don't think that term would necessarily apply to the entire length of this age (era).

There have been various periods in the overall phase of the work. There have been times of great activity and accomplishment and times of somewhat of a lull. That's been the state of things. It is one of those enigmatic statements that become clearer at the appropriate time. But it is a basis of faith and of confidence that God knows what He is doing. I think this has to be the basis of our relationship—God knows what He is doing.

If you take a bus or plane trip somewhere, you have to operate on the basis that the pilot knows how to get to the destination. If you don't think the pilot knows how to get to the destination, then you better find a different bus or plane. I'm not going to get on a bus and tell him every turn to make, when to show down and stop. If I don't think he can drive, I am going to get off the bus.

The basis is: you identify where God is, where He is working, and then you trust Him to do it. And if you don't see why He's made that turn or this turn or why He's doing that or this other, just realize you are not the one who is driving. You don't have a road map. We have a general idea. In one sense, you can say the Bible is a road map. But all the details prophetically and exactly everything God is going to do, you can't second-guess God. God has things in mind that go beyond our ability to entirely perceive.

Romans 11:2, "God has not cast away His people whom He foreknew...."

Verse 8, "...God has given a spirit of stupor [KJV, "slumber"]...."

Verse 26, "And so [eventually] all Israel will be saved...."

You can tie this in with Ezekiel 37 and other places that show a future time when there will be a time of salvation. God is not a respecter of persons, as Paul makes plain earlier in the book of Acts (Acts 10:34, KJV). If the time is coming when all Israel will be saved, then the time is also coming when all the Gentiles—all the nations—will also have their chance for salvation. That is made plain.

Matthew 11:24, Christ alluded to that in the instructions to the Pharisees when He said, "...it shall be more tolerable for the land of Sodom in the Day of Judgment than for you."

Matthew 12:42, "The Queen of the South will rise up in the judgment with this generation and condemn it, for she came from the ends of the earth to hear the wisdom of Solomon and indeed a greater than Solomon is here."

Matthew 12:41, "The men of Nineveh will rise in the judgment with this generation and condemn it, because they repented at the preaching of Jonah; and indeed a greater than Jonah is here."

Some of these people have acted more and have done better with the chance they had than you've done with yours. They are going to rise up in judgment with you and they are going to ask, 'What's wrong with you? If we'd had the chance you had, we would have done something with it.' Christ made plain that there's coming a time when all Israel is going to be saved. Since God is not a respecter of persons, there's going to be a time when they also shall have that opportunity.

Romans 12 talks about our relationship to God as one of total sacrifice; we are to be a living sacrifice. We belong to God. We are His possession. We are to recognize that we are in the body (Church) where God has placed us and we are to carry out and serve in what ever opportunities we have available to us.

Romans 13 says we are to be subject to the civil authorities.

Romans 13:1, "Let every soul be subject to the governing authorities. For there is no authority except from God, and the authorities that exist are appointed by God." We are not to be involved in civil disobedience. We are to be subject to the civil law, realizing that God holds the civil government accountable and He deals with them. A Christian's job is not to be out trying to lead a revolution somewhere. We are to seek to live peaceably, to pay our taxes and to do the things that we should do. We are to try to be a good citizen and be respectful to government authority.

The one debt that everybody has is made plain.

Romans 13:8, "Owe no one anything except to love one another, for he who loves another has fulfilled the law." We owe a debt of love.

Verse 7, "Render therefore to all their due: taxes to whom taxes are due, customs to whom customs, fear to whom fear, honor to whom honor." We are to show proper respect and proper deference. We are to show the appropriate signs of respect. A Christian is not going to be out burning the flag, whatever country he lives in. We are to be paying our taxes. We are to show respect and honor to individuals in authority and the symbols of that authority. The one thing we owe everybody is to love one another.

In vv. 9-10, he explains a little bit of what love is.

In Romans 14, there was a problem concerning meats. But the issue was not clean and unclean meats. The issue was not that some were eating unclean foods and Paul didn't think it made any difference. The issue concerns vegetarianism.

Romans 14:1-2, "Receive one who is weak in the faith, but not to disputes over doubtful things. For one believes he may eat all things, but he who is weak eats only vegetables." What does it mean that one believes he may eat all things? Does it mean ground-up glass, arsenic, poison ivy salad? What about the verse, "...whatever is set before you eat, asking no questions for conscience's sake" (I Corinthians 10:27)? A poison ivy salad—are you going to eat that? That's not what it is talking about.

Verse 2, "For one believes he may eat all things, but he who is weak eats only vegetables." The issue is eating meat or not eating meat. The reason some were not eating meat was not because they were following Ellen G. White's vision, the Seventh Day Adventist “star.” Some say she had a vision that meat in the latter days was going to be polluted. Yeah, it is “shot” full of chemicals, that’s right. So are your vegetables; so is your water and your air. Anybody who lives along the Mississippi River is in trouble. What are you going to limit yourself to that doesn’t have any pollutants?

I am not saying that we shouldn’t try to be careful of what we eat and that we shouldn’t obtain the best that is available to us. I certainly believe that we should be careful of our health and our diet and obtain the best that is available to us. But a little bit of common sense and balance has to come into the matter, too. You may die from breathing polluted air, but you are going to die a whole lot quicker from not breathing air at all. You’ll last years longer breathing polluted air—minutes not breathing air. So, if your choice is between polluted air and not any air, then you better go for the polluted air. Now, if your choice is between polluted air and good air, then go for the good air. Go for the best you have available. A little bit of common sense comes in.

But their issue was not some crackpot theory in those ways. The issues had to do with the fact that it was meat offered to idols. Paul goes on and addresses the subject.

Verse 14, “I know and am convinced by the Lord Jesus that there is nothing unclean [KJV, margin, “common”] of itself; but to him who considers anything to be unclean, to him it is unclean.” “There is nothing common of itself....” Now the issue is not food that is unclean but food that is common. And there is a difference.

Remember when Peter had his vision in Acts 10. He saw the sheet and all the four-footed creatures.

Acts 10:13-14, “And a voice came to him, ‘Rise. Peter; kill and eat.’ But Peter said, ‘Not so, Lord! For I have never eaten anything common or unclean.’” Common or unclean are two totally different things. Food can be clean and yet not kosher. “Common” simply means it “wasn’t kosher.” Generally it was because it had been offered to an idol. That was the primary reason. Also, there were certain matters of ritual slaughter.

What it amounted to was that in the major metropolitan Gentile areas, to obtain meat at the meat market or the places you went to buy meat, many times it was difficult to obtain meat that was kosher. There wasn’t any guarantee that meat that you obtained at the major meat markets was kosher. You could not be assured that some of it hadn’t come from an idol’s temple where it had been offered in sacrifice.

They slaughtered the animals, burned the entrails there on the altar, poured out the blood and the meat was carved up. The priests had a lot more than what they needed so they sold it to the meat markets. A large part of the meat the meat market had was bought from various idols’ temples that morning.

A really strict Jew, unless he could be absolutely and totally assured that this meat had not been offered to an idol, wouldn’t eat it. They viewed it as having been polluted. It had become a major issue. Some of the people were saying they didn’t see that it was a problem for them to eat meat offered to idols. ‘If I go down to the store and buy some meat (some of the meat was not offered to idols), I don’t know if it’s offered to an idol. I’m not buying it to participate in the idol’s service.’

[Tape ends. Notes added may come from another Bible study or a sermon Mr. Ogwyn gave.]

Romans 15:23-24, “But now no longer having a place in these parts, and having a great desire these many years to come to you, whenever I journey to Spain, I shall come to you. For I hope to see you on my journey, and to be helped on my way there by you, if first I may enjoy your company for a while.”

Paul had planned on going to Rome and then to Spain after he delivered the aid to the Jerusalem Church. But he was arrested and brought to Rome (Acts 22:25—28:31). He dwelt two whole years in Rome in his own hired house (Acts 28:30). At that point the Biblical record of Paul’s life ceased.

Evidently, from what Paul had said, his plans were to go from Italy to Spain, and there is every reason to think that he did so. He said he would in the book of Romans. Secular history and tradition maintains that he did. From Spain he went on up to Britain, which was the furthestmost outpost of the Roman Empire. He spent some time there, and then by the mid 60s, he returned to the Mediterranean area, particularly to the area of Ephesus, for a short period of time. He then left Ephesus and went over to Macedonia. From there he was arrested and taken back to Rome.

Next Bible study we will cover the book of Colossians and the book of Philemon.

Life and Letters of Paul Series—Colossians and Philemon

In the last Bible study, we came up to the fact of Paul's Roman imprisonment in the book of Acts. We had noted in Acts 19 and 20 that Paul, after a great length of time in Ephesus, had written the book of I Corinthians during the Days of Unleavened Bread of 55 A.D. This was his third evangelistic journey. Then a little later after Pentecost, there came up a great deal of difficulty and problems. Paul left Ephesus and sailed across into Macedonia to the area of Philippi. He stayed there a while then came down through the area of Greece. He came down further south through Athens and into Corinth. He wintered there. He spent the winter of 55 A.D.—56 A.D.

When he crossed from Ephesus to Philippi (Macedonia), perhaps in the fall of 55 A.D., he wrote II Corinthians. He wrote II Corinthians about six months after he wrote I Corinthians. Timothy reported back to him as to how the first letter had been received and what had transpired. He made his way down over the course of the next couple of months to Corinth and wintered there.

The last Bible study we saw how he wrote the book of Romans from Corinth in the winter of 55A.D—56 A.D.; perhaps we would date it around February. It was written just prior to the time that navigation occurred once again in the Mediterranean, after the three winter months when there wasn't normal shipping. The book of Romans was taken from Corinth to Rome by Phoebe when she sailed from Corinth. This perhaps would have been in March of 56 A.D.

We see in Acts 20 that Paul had originally intended to sail directly back to Jerusalem, but he changed his mind because of rumors of a plot against him. He went back overland through Philippi (Acts 20:3) and left after the Days of Unleavened Bread (v. 6). Then we find that he took the boat to Jerusalem, stopped over and met the Ephesian elders on the way (v. 17).

Verse 16, he was in a hurry to be in Jerusalem for the day of Pentecost. It is interesting. You can go all the way through the book of Acts and you never read where Paul was in a hurry to get somewhere in time for Christmas. But he was in a hurry to get somewhere for Pentecost.

In v. 6, we find that he didn't leave until the Days of Unleavened Bread were over. People go through the book of Acts and want to claim that the Holy Days and Sabbath are just Old Testament scripture that doesn't apply to us. You go through the book of Acts and you find that Paul thought it applied to him. He kept it, and the early New Testament Church kept it. It is good that we note this.

I have made a point over the years that everywhere in the book of Acts when I come across the word "Sabbath" or the name of a holy day like Days of Unleavened Bread or Pentecost, I have taken that word and colored it in red. As I flip through the book of Acts, all these red words every couple of pages just stand out. You come across Sabbath or Pentecost or the Feast or the Days of Unleavened Bread or Passover over and over. When you do something like that you realize, as you turn through, how frequently the issue of the Sabbath and Pentecost comes up, or whatever festival it may be they were celebrating.

Paul did get back to Jerusalem in time for Pentecost. You read of that in Acts 21:17. We find, v. 30, that Paul, in fact, was arrested in the temple on Pentecost weekend. As he was there on that occasion, he was arrested on a "trumped-up" charge. The Jewish religious leadership had a great deal of animosity against him. Acts 22, 23 and 24 all deal with aspects of his trial.

In Acts 24, Paul is before Felix, the Roman governor. He winds up staying in jail two years because the governor didn't want to make a decision. He didn't want to turn him loose and antagonize the Jews, and he didn't want to convict him because he knew he was an innocent man.

We find that Felix would have done well in an elected office in Louisiana.

Acts 24:26, "Meanwhile he also hoped that money would be given him by Paul, that he might release him. Therefore he sent for him more often and conversed with him." This sounds like some recent ones we have had. Felix hoped that money would be given him by Paul, that he might release him. He wouldn't be the last one that did that kind of thing. It simply shows that human nature hasn't changed. Since he was hoping that somebody would pay him off, he just let it "sit" until the next guy came to office. It's known as "passing the buck."

In Acts 25, Paul is on trial before Festus. Because he tried to "pass the buck" to King Agrippa, this matter drags on even further. Finally, Paul gets sick and tired of it.

In Acts 26, Paul appealed to the “Supreme Court.” He wanted this case tried in Rome at the court of Caesar. They didn’t have to make a decision; they just loaded him on a boat and shipped him off.

Acts 27 is the account of Paul sailing for Rome in 58 A.D.

Acts 28, he shipwrecked in Malta. He wintered there the winter of 58 A.D.—59 A.D. and finally comes to Rome in 59 A.D. He spends two years there in Rome (v. 30) under house arrest. He was able to live in a place he rented but chained to a Roman soldier. He is allowed to receive visitors but not to go anywhere. He remained there for two years, 59 A.D. to 61 A.D.

This is the point at which the book of Acts ends. We will talk more in a future Bible study as to why Acts ends there.

This brings us to where we are this evening because we are at the point of some of the letters Paul wrote while he was in prison in Rome 59 A.D. to 61 A.D.

Colossians and Philemon were evidently written at that time. We are taking these two books together. The reason is that Philemon is a short little book and the two go together because Philemon lived in Colosse, and the books were written at the same time. It was, undoubtedly, carried by the same messenger. One was a letter to the Church; one was a letter to a Church member. We will take the two of them together because the background ties together.

Colosse started as a Greek colony. It is located in Phrygia, which is a portion of Asia Minor (modern-day Turkey). It is in the general area where the Churches were to which John wrote in Revelation 2 and 3. Colosse is right in there. In fact, it was just a few miles from Laodicea. When John wrote Revelation 2 and 3 under God’s inspiration and addressed the seven Churches of Revelation, those were not the only seven congregations of the Church of God in that area. There were many others. Colosse and Hierapolis were right in the vicinity (kind of in the middle) of those seven. They were certainly on the same mail route.

The point to understand is that those seven Churches were specifically selected because they typified something. They illustrated certain things that God wanted highlighted. There were some things that had prophetic significance, so they were selected for that reason. It was not just a general letter to all the Churches there, addressed in a random fashion. They were selected because of special significance.

Colosse was in that area. It was located on the main road between Ephesus and the Euphrates River. That made it a city of commercial importance because the main Roman road connected Ephesus, which was a major port there on the coast. It had great significance in terms of trading with Greece. Colosse lay right on the main overland road or route from Ephesus across to the Euphrates River.

There was a Jewish community in the city. There were various Greek schools of thought. There were the Stoics who were a major Greek philosophical school. There were their ideas and various other ideas.

We have to realize that many times the problems that existed in some of these Churches were not simply because some group of outside troublemakers came in and stirred up trouble. People tend to be susceptible to certain types of things because of their own background and experience.

The people in Colosse grew up with a certain religious and philosophical background that was common to the Roman world. They had a certain mind set. Stoicism certainly influenced that quite a bit. Not that all of them were Stoics, by any means, but it was a major philosophical school of thought that heavily influenced the thinking of a large number of people. Whether they actively tried to practice all the tenets or not, it still affected the way they thought.

We are going to talk a little later about another group of people, the philosophical school called the Gnostics. It’s kind of like “agnostic,” the word we use today. “Gnostic” means “we know.” They were proud of their knowledge. They had an inside track. Now, we’ve made a lot of progress today; we now have “agnostic,” which means “we don’t know.” After two thousand years, we have come from where the intellectuals prided themselves on what they knew to what they don’t know. Progress marches on.

Neither of them knew. But the Gnostics thought they did. The Gnostics represented a blend of mysticism—Jewish and pagan thought all mixed up together. There were various schools of Gnostics. Many of the early writers give credit to Simon Magus as having been the father of the Gnostics. This is mentioned in the 11th edition of the Encyclopedia Britannica. Eusebius makes reference to that.

Eusebius was a Catholic Church historian of the fourth century. He was contemporary with the emperor Constantine. If you are looking for something that is a blend of pagan and Jewish thought with a lot of mystic ideas, it shouldn't come as any surprise to find something like that originating in Samaria. After all, didn't the Samaritans appropriate a lot of the trappings of Jewish religion and pay lip service to certainly accepting the first five books of the Bible? Didn't they acknowledge and utilize the name of the God of Israel and call themselves by that name?

We are told back in I Kings 17 that the Samaritans were, in reality, Babylonians by origin; they worshipped the Eternal and served their own god. They paid lip service to the God of Israel. They acknowledged orally, YHWH, the God of Israel, the Eternal, but in reality they just continued the same old pagan religion. They practiced a mixing. The technical term was "synchronism." It's like pouring it all into a pot and mixing it all up—a little bit of this and that. It's kind of like making a gumbo, and it was just as unclean as some of the unclean gumbos today.

They borrowed things from a variety of different religions. There was an overlay that had biblical overtones in the sense that biblical terminology was used. There was a certain tie-in to the Old Testament, but it was really more Babylonian pagan religion—the Old Babylonian Mystery Religion—with the addition of much of the Greek philosophy of the day that was kind of all mingled with it. Simon and many of his followers accepted Christ.

Remember Acts 8:13, 'Simon believed.' So there were many of his followers who had this sort of acceptance, at least outwardly. They paid lip service to Jesus Christ being the Messiah.

They had an influence that began to pervade in many areas in the New Testament congregation. At first it was simply various competing ideas inside the Church. There were people inside the Church who were a part of this or were heavily influenced. Some were, perhaps, direct followers and disciples of Simon Magus and they influenced others. So you have various shades of opinion. There were many in the Church who were influenced by these things. At first, they were a part and seemingly indistinguishable in the Church. It ultimately came to a point that there was a division and a distinction—a separation—between those who were truly the people of God and those who were not.

By the time we get to John's writings in the 90s A.D., in some cases, some were actually being cast out of the Church. When John wrote in I John, he is writing to the very area of Colosse, the area of Asia Minor. There is a lot of evidence of the Gnostics and many of their teachings that come out in I, II and III John. The background of I, II and III John tie in very directly with the background of Colossians because you're looking at the same geographic area. John is thirty years downstream, so he's another generation removed. Things had degenerated quite a bit from the time Paul had written.

Paul is addressing the Church of God, but there was clearly an element that was a part of the Church that had brought in many of these ideas. It was having an influence on many of God's people. I don't want to go into great details, but I will mention a few concepts of the Gnostics. We are going to cover it in quite a bit of detail. When we finish the Life and Letters of Paul, we will have a Bible study on some of the heresies of the first century—some of the things that actually gave rise to what became the Catholic Church.

We need to understand, just a little bit, because it sets the background for why Paul stressed the things he did in Colossians. When a sermon is preached or a letter is written, not everything that can be said on the subject is said. What you tend to do is focus in on the issues that have been raised. You focus in on the questions that have been asked and you stress certain things.

Mr. Herbert Armstrong may have stressed proving the fact that the Sabbath was in force and effect today, in a way that Peter or Paul did not have to stress that in their sermons because it was simply not an issue. The audience to which they were preaching understood that the Sabbath was in effect. That was not the question. The question was: Is Jesus the Messiah?

Most people today don't have a problem with the fact that, yes, Jesus is the Messiah. The problem today is: What did He teach? Now that is an issue. But the issue that He Himself was the Messiah is not that commonly debated, at least among the professing Christian world. We tend to stress, in the context of the truth, those things that are issues and those things that are misunderstood and need to be clarified. Paul stressed certain things about the person of Jesus Christ—about His divinity and the things that He did—in his letter to the Colossians because these things were being challenged.

The Gnostics had this sort of idea that went back to a pagan dualistic approach—the idea that the spirit is good and the flesh is evil. Then the idea was, if flesh is inherently evil and spirit is inherently good, how can God who is inherently good make something that is flesh, which is inherently bad? How can something good make something bad? That created a problem for them.

They came to a solution but not a correct solution. They decided that God had created other spirits that were pretty good but were not quite as good as He was. They were the first things that emanated out from Him. They were kind of a step below Him. And they in turn gave rise to the next spirit realm that was a step below them. They went down through what they called twenty-four emanations. They kept getting a little further and further down and finally got down to something that was so far removed from God that it could come into contact with flesh. And that's what made man.

They developed this elaborate hierarchy of angels, demons and all these crazy things. They identified it with astrology, with all the names of the stars and astrological significance and various groups of angelic order and demonic order all the way down. They identified the God of the Old Testament with something that was pretty far removed from what actually gave rise to people.

If you operate on the premise that the flesh is inherently evil, then what you need to do is punish the flesh. Anything that is physically pleasurable is obviously suspect. This is not that far removed from us today.

The Catholic Church has vows of poverty, chastity and humility. The monastic vows—the idea that if you are really holy, if you're really going to be a saint, then everything that would be enjoyable you forswear. You certainly would never marry. You would never enjoy a physical husband-wife relationship. That involves fleshly pleasure. Since you couldn't be holy and do that, you have to make this vow of celibacy. You couldn't sit down and enjoy a good meal or enjoy nice beautiful things.

You get to the basis of all the monastic orders and their vows of poverty—and it kind of trickled down to the masses. By that time, it got down to meatless Fridays. They figured they couldn't really give up very much, so they give up a little bit. Now, we get down to where people give up chocolate or whatever it is for Lent, and they figure they are really mortifying the flesh. These are vows of “giving up”—this great asceticism.

You had groups of Jewish thought that absorbed some of these concepts from the pagan world around them and were somewhere between the Jews and the Samaritans in terms of their concepts. You had all these little obscure groups.

The Essenes were one. They were very, very ascetic; they had many of these things that they got from pagan thought. These were pagan concepts because they didn't come from God or out of the Bible. If you didn't get them from God, where did you get them? God is the only source of truth.

Even if they were absorbed into a small sect of Judaism (these groups of varying shades), certain concepts were popular. This concept of asceticism, self-denial and the concept of penance somehow made you holy. Some of these attitudes of the Gnostics and the concept that was a part of Gnostic philosophy certainly seemed to have impacted the Church in Colosse.

Paul wrote this letter from Rome. We would date it about 60 A.D. Evidently, Epaphras, the minister who had been instrumental in raising up the Churches in Colosse, Laodicea and Hierapolis, had journeyed to Rome to visit Paul, and it made him aware of certain problems in the area.

Paul dwelt a long time in Ephesus. He had not been to Colosse, though he had met and dealt with many of the people. Some of the individuals in Colosse, certainly some of the long-time Church members and certain ones who had probably traveled to Ephesus, knew Paul.

Philemon, for instance, had evidently been personally taught and baptized by Paul. He was a wealthy individual and would have, undoubtedly, traveled to Ephesus on numerous occasions just on business. Paul had not actually been to Colosse, and there were certainly many brethren there whom he did not personally know. But word came to him that there were problems that were creating some misunderstandings and difficulties there in Colosse and through several of the other Churches around there. Laodicea seems to have been impacted.

Paul must have written a letter to the Laodiceans about the same time because he specifically made the request in Colossians that he would like them to read the letter he wrote to the Laodiceans and to let the Laodiceans read the letter he wrote to the Colossians. This tells us Paul wrote many letters.

The idea that Paul only wrote fourteen letters in his life doesn't make a whole lot of sense. There's no telling how many letters Paul wrote. There are certain ones that God had selected to be preserved for the Church at all times. It was not necessary to preserve every word Paul wrote. All of it didn't have a universal message to it. Some of the letters dealt with things that would have been a certain amount of repetition. God selected those things that He wanted preserved. God selected the things that were going to have value for the Church at all times.

At the time this book of Colossians was written, it seems that Archippus was perhaps serving as a local pastor there in Colosse. This seems apparent in the way that he was addressed. It appears very likely that he was the son of Philemon. Philemon was an elder. He was what we would term a local elder there in Colosse. He was a wealthy individual in the Church, and they actually met in his home. It was perhaps a Roman villa type of place. He was perhaps a wealthy merchant, and the Church met in his home. He was not the Church pastor, but it's very likely that his son Archippus was the Church pastor.

We find in Colossians that Paul is seeking to smash this philosophy. Understand that the term "philosophy" was a general term that basically referred to "any school of thought" or to any school of thought that was current in the world at that time. It could refer to not merely two or three specific Greek philosophical schools of Stoics or Epicureans, etc., but even the varying groups among the Jews were sometimes designated as philosophies. Philosophy was kind of the general term.

He wanted to smash these philosophies that had grabbed hold and were influencing the Church away from the simplicity of Christ. He wanted to expound certain principles of Christian living and also to explain what the mystery of the gospel really was because these Gnostics really went in for the "mysteries." They would initiate you, and through the secret knowledge, the initiated could move up step-by-step. They could progress by degrees up to a relationship with the supreme god. But you had to be "in the know," and they had this sort of inner knowledge.

Let's also look at Philemon. It is a short little book. We are going to notice Philemon first and then summarize Colossians.

Philemon was a resident of Colosse. He was a local elder whom Paul had originally baptized. It was written by Paul from Rome at the time that he wrote Colossians, and it seemed to have been prompted by the conversion of Onesimus who was Philemon's runaway slave. There are several things that come out in the book of Philemon.

The story seems to be that Onesimus had run away, as was frequently the case. Rome was filled with runaway slaves and people from throughout the empire. Rome was a big place, and if you wanted to get lost, what you did was to go to a big city. There is certain anonymity in a big city.

Onesimus had gotten away and had come to Rome. Somehow he had met up with Paul. He had probably known Paul, maybe not personally, but had known of him. He was somewhat familiar with him because of Paul's impact on the family of Philemon. At some point, perhaps he wound up "down-and-out" in Rome. Whatever it was, at some point he met up with Paul.

Paul talked and counseled with him. He worked with him over a period of time and ultimately brought Onesimus to conversion. He was baptized, stayed on for a period of perhaps months and served Paul by doing things for him. Paul was confined to the home, and Onesimus probably took care of all sorts of physical duties—going out and shopping for food, fixing things, and running errands—just being a very valuable assistant and servant who was a lot of help to Paul.

Epaphras had come to Rome and had discussed the situation in Colosse. Paul was preparing to write this letter to the Colossians. He knew that Onesimus had been there for a period of time and he needed to go back and "face the music." He had run away from Philemon and perhaps had stolen some money when he did. That's the logical thing; you don't run away broke. It was important that he take responsibility for his actions. He needed to go back to where he had been. Yet he was apprehensive. He was afraid of what kind of trouble he was going to be in.

Paul was concerned on his behalf. He felt that Onesimus had repented of any sins that had been involved in his actions. He was prepared to follow Paul's advice and go back to the household of Philemon. But Paul wanted to do what he could to ensure that Onesimus was not going to be severely dealt with. He wanted to ensure that he was going to be kindly and gently dealt with and not punished for the problems in the past.

He wrote a personal letter to be sent to Philemon. There are a lot of things we can learn from that. We can learn about the proper psychology and tact. Paul was involving himself in what was a personal matter. He didn't choose to just get in and start ordering Philemon around. Philemon 1, "Paul a prisoner [This is part of the basis for knowing he was in Rome.] of Jesus Christ, and Timothy our brother, to Philemon our beloved friend and fellow laborer." This gives us an indication that Philemon was ordained an elder.

Verse 2, “to the beloved Apphia [a woman’s name and most likely Philemon’s wife], Archippus our fellow soldier....” The indication would be someone that was a part of the household, most likely a son. He is addressed as a fellow soldier, which would indicate that he was part of the ministry.

When you go back to Colossians, we find the last admonition Paul had.

Colossians 4:17, “And say to Archippus, ‘Take heed to the ministry which you have received in the Lord, that you may fulfill it.’” Archippus is addressed as a minister, undoubtedly as the pastor of the Church there in Colosse. He is addressed in the final admonition of Colossians, as the pastor there, to follow through on the things Paul had told the Church and to fulfill his ministry. When you put Colossians 4:17 together with Philemon 2, we would conclude that Archippus was most likely the pastor of the Church there, and based on Philemon 2, he was very likely the son of Philemon.

In Philemon 2, Philemon and his wife are addressed, as well as Archippus and the Church that meets in Philemon’s house. That would be the Colossian Church. Paul addressed and greeted them.

Philemon 4, “I thank my God, making mention of you always in my prayers.” He says, ‘I always thank God for you.’ He starts out in a very nice, kind, gentle and positive way. ‘I’ve been praying for you. I’ve heard a lot of the things you have done and how you have helped and served many people (vv. 5-7).

Verses 8-9, “Therefore, though I might be very bold in Christ to command you what is fitting, yet for love’s sake I rather appeal to you—being such a one as Paul, the aged, and now also a prisoner of Jesus Christ—” He says, ‘I realize that I could start giving you orders as an apostle, but I don’t want to do that. I’d rather, for love’s sake, just ask you a favor. I’m an old man. I’m in jail and I’d like you to do me a favor.’

Verse 10, “I appeal to you for my son Onesimus, whom I have begotten while in my chains.” This would certainly be a reference to the fact of Onesimus having been baptized by Paul while Paul was in a Roman prison.

Verse 11, “who once was unprofitable to you, but now is profitable to you and to me.” Paul says, ‘I know in times past he was unprofitable to you, but now he’s profitable to both of us.’

Verse 12, “I am sending him back. You therefore receive him, that is, my own heart.” ‘I have sent him back to you and I want you to receive him.’

Verse 13, “whom I wished to keep with me, that on your behalf he might minister to me in my chains for the gospel.” ‘I would have liked to keep him with me. He was helping me. He was serving me and taking care of a lot of needs that I had. He was really kind of taking your place here because I know if you had been here, you would have been anxious to help, to serve me and do whatever you could. It’s like he’s been doing it in your stead. He’s your servant and he’s been here; that’s kind of like you being here doing it.’

Verse 14, “But without your consent I wanted to do nothing, that your good deed might not be by compulsion, as it were, but voluntary.” He tells him, ‘I wouldn’t want to do anything without instructions from you because then your service would be of necessity, not willingly. I started to keep him, but any service you were rendering to me would have been because you were “between a rock and a hard place.” And I wanted any service to be willingly, not because you couldn’t get out of it.’

Verses 15-16, “For perhaps he departed for a while for this purpose, that you might receive him forever, no longer as a slave but more than a slave, as a beloved brother, especially to me but now much more to you, both in the flesh and in the Lord.”

‘I am going to send him back to you. Maybe the whole point of his running away and coming here was lessons he had to learn. Now he can come back and enter back into a relationship with you that is going to last forever—not simply as a servant, but above a servant, a brother. He is beloved to me, but I know more so to you because you have known him for a long time.’

Verses 17-18, “If then you count me as a partner, receive him as you would me. But if he has wronged you or owes you anything, put that on my account.” This is an allusion to the fact that he may have stolen some money when he left. Paul says, ‘Put it on my account; charge it to me.’

Verse 19, “I, Paul, am writing with my own hand. I will repay—not to mention to you that you owe me even your own self besides.” He says, ‘I will repay it. Though I am not going to mention to you how you owe me even your own life. If he stole the twenty bucks, charge it to my account. I’ll repay it if you want me to pay it. And I certainly will never mention to you how much you owe me.’ About this time, it’s going to be kind of hard for old Philemon to be too upset at Onesimus.

Verse 20, “Yes, brother, let me have joy from you in the Lord; refresh my heart in the Lord.” ‘I really want to hear some good news.’

Verse 21, “Having confidence in your obedience, I write to you, knowing that you will do even more than I say.” ‘I know you are going to do a whole lot more than I am suggesting. I’ll leave to your imagination ways that you can do this.’

Verse 22, “But, meanwhile, also prepare a guest room for me, for I trust that through your prayers I shall be granted to you.” He says, ‘I would like for you to prepare a room for me because I know you’re praying that I am going to be released from prison; as soon as I get out, I am going to come visit you.’ That carries the very subtle implication—‘I am going to know whether or not you did as I suggested because you’re praying for me to get out. I’m sure God is going to hear your prayers, and when I get out, I am going to come see you. Then I will really know whether you did as I suggested for you to do or not.’

He ends up with conclusions. He mentions various others who were there with him.

There is a lot of tact and wisdom used in Philemon. We can certainly learn an important lesson in tact and gentleness in dealing with people about personal matters. That’s one of the most important lessons we can learn from the book of Philemon in terms of how to deal with people in personal matters.

We now get on into the book of Colossians.

Paul mentions, Colossians 1:7-8, “as you also learned from Epaphras, our dear fellow servant, who is a faithful minister of Christ on your behalf, who also declared to us your love in the Spirit.” Epaphras was the one who had told them these things when he had come there. He remained there in Rome with Paul. He is referred to as a fellow prisoner with Paul in Philemon 23.

Colossians 4:12-13, “Epaphras, who is one of you, a servant of Christ, greets you, always laboring fervently for you in prayers, that you may stand perfect and complete in all the will of God. For I bear him witness that he has a great zeal for you, and those who are in Laodicea, and those in Hierapolis.” Very likely, he had actually been the one to raise up those three congregations.

When Paul was based in Ephesus, he had various ones working with him whom he sent out and they raised up these congregations. Certain ones, particularly some of the leading ones, probably traveled to Ephesus and were personally instructed by Paul.

Epaphras had traveled from Colosse and had come to Rome. He told Paul what was going on.

Paul’s writing in Colossians is based on what Epaphras had said was going on in Colosse.

Paul was sending back Tychicus.

Colossians 4:7-9, “Tychicus, who is a beloved brother, a faithful minister, and a fellow servant in the Lord, will tell you all the news about me. I am sending him to you for this very purpose, that he may know your circumstances and comfort your hearts, with Onesimus, a faithful and beloved brother, who is one of you. They will make known to you all things which are happening here.”

Paul sent Onesimus back and Tychicus to accompany him. Onesimus had a legal obligation to go back to Philemon. Paul did not presume to start interfering in some of those things, though he wanted Philemon to learn some lessons and to deal with things in a godly way. There are responsibilities depending on the state in which we find ourselves in society. That is why in Colossians Paul gives admonition both to servants and masters.

Colossians 3:22, “Servants, obey in all things your masters according to the flesh, not with eye service, as men-pleasers, but in sincerity of heart, fearing God.”

Colossians 4:1, “Masters, give your servants what is just and fair, knowing that you also have a Master in heaven.” Just coming into the Church doesn’t change all the physical and social relationships and things that exist. The point Paul makes is that there is a transformation of those relationships. If someone was in a position of a master, what he needed to realize was that he had a Master, and he had better deal with those who were his servants the way he hoped God would deal with him.

That would certainly transform the relationship, wouldn’t it? Then you have a relationship that is based on love, giving, serving and helping. You have a transformation from a despotic tyrannical overlord sort of relationship to a relationship like God has with us. God expects us to do what He says. But God deals with us in love, kindness, gentleness and mercy—all these attributes.

Paul addresses husbands, wives, parents, children, servants and masters. He addresses the whole social fabric of the world. He addresses the fact that when we become a Christian, it should transform relationships because the basis of the way we treat others has changed.

In Colossians 1:7-8, he mentions that Epaphras is the source of his information.

Paul's desires for the congregation are given in Colossians 1:10, "that you may have a walk worthy of the Lord, fully pleasing Him, being fruitful in every good work and increasing in the knowledge of God."

Verses 12-13, "giving thanks to the Father who has qualified us to be partakers of the inheritance of the saints in the light. He has delivered us from the power of darkness and translated us into the kingdom of the Son of His love." God the Father has already done this. It's not a matter that you have to work yourself up by degrees, as the Gnostics taught, from darkness to light. God has already translated us into the Kingdom of His dear Son. He has already delivered us from the power of darkness. You don't work your way up degree, by degree, by degree.

It's an interesting aside. If you were to read in the writings of the Masonic Order, they have their thirty-three degrees, thirty-two of which are earned degrees. They will tell you in the official writings of the Masonic Order that they trace their system of degrees back to the Gnostics philosophers. The whole basis of working your way up by degrees goes back to that concept. They readily acknowledge that.

I have a book that is the official standard. It's not some book written against or about them. It is the standard work, morals and dogma of the Masonic Order. Most Masons don't have any idea that's the case and would probably deny it. If you have ever seen the book, you would realize that most Masons have never read it. It's a great big thick book. For most, the Masonic Order is a social or fraternal matter. They go through the degree work just as so much "mumbo-jumbo," never realizing where some of it went back to. There are a lot of things that go back to these concepts. Most involved in that today really don't take it seriously as the way of salvation. However, if you look at what it says, that's what it purports to be.

Paul makes plain that we have already been delivered out of the power of darkness. You don't have to work your way out degree by degree.

Verses 14-16, "in whom we have redemption through His blood, the forgiveness of sins. He is the image of the invisible God, the firstborn over all creation. For by Him all things were created that are in heaven and that are on earth, visible and invisible, whether thrones or dominions or principalities or powers. All things were created through Him and for Him." All of that didn't emanate one out from another. Everything that exists was created by Jesus Christ as the instrument of creation.

Verse 17-19, "And He is before all things, and in Him all things consist. He is the head of the body, the church, who is the beginning, the firstborn from the dead, that in all things He may have the preeminence. For it pleased the Father that in Him all the fullness should dwell." This really blows the minds of some of these philosophers because the idea that all the fullness of deity would dwell in flesh was kind of beyond them. That flew right in the face of what the Gnostics would have taught.

Verse 20, "and by Him to reconcile all things to Himself, by Him, whether things on earth or things in heaven, having made peace through the blood of His cross." In other words, He brought everything into harmony with Him.

It's important to understand the direction that reconciliation works. We are to be reconciled to God. God does not bring Himself to be in harmony with us. We have to come to be in harmony with Him because He is right and we are wrong. Why should God change to be like us? Why would God say, 'I'll meet you halfway'? Then He'd be half wrong, and half wrong is as good as being entirely wrong. It's kind of like drinking half poison. Generally, it doesn't even take that much to "finish you off." He made peace through the blood of His cross. He paid the penalty for sin. The reason we need to be reconciled is because we have sinned.

Let's go through the context.

Verse 20, "...to reconcile all things to Himself..."

Verses 21-23, "And you, who once were alienated and enemies in your mind by wicked works, yet now He has reconciled in the body of His flesh through death, to present you holy, and blameless, and irreproachable in His sight—if indeed you continue in the faith, grounded and steadfast, and are not moved away from the hope of the gospel..."

Verse 24, "I now rejoice in my sufferings for you..."

Notice what Paul is saying. We were at one time alienated from God, enemies in our mind because friendship with the world is enmity with God. You can't be the friend of the world and the friend of God.

James 4:4, "...Whoever therefore wants to be a friend of the world makes himself an enemy of God." The world is not on God's wavelength. We were at one time friends of the world. We were comfortable with the world and the world was comfortable with us. The only problem was that when that was the case, we were alienated from God. The reason we got along well with the world was because we lived like the world and acted like the world. We were motivated by the world's set of values. We blended in as a part of the world. We fit in. We don't fit in anymore.

You can't fit in with God and with the world. That's why we're here and not down on Bourbon Street in New Orleans this evening. You don't fit in down there. If you do, then you don't fit in here. If you would feel right at home and in place down there tonight, in the midst of all that Mardi Gras revelry, well, you wouldn't entirely feel in place here. And if you took some of that Mardi Gras crew from down there and stuck them here, they wouldn't feel comfortable. Their mindset is different.

God is going to solve the problem by sending Jesus Christ to condemn sin in the flesh and to pay the penalty for sin to make possible the reconciliation of humanity to God. Paul stresses this to the Colossians. He stresses that we have been reconciled in the body of His flesh. When you understand the overtones of the concepts they had, as far as the distinction between flesh and spirit, this really went against the grain for them.

Verse 23, "if indeed you continue in the faith, grounded and steadfast, and are not moved away from the hope of the gospel which you heard, which was preached to every creature under heaven, of which I, Paul, became a minister." Paul mentions that you have to continue in the faith, grounded and settled, not being stirred up and going off on some tangent. You have to keep anchored on the hope of the gospel.

Verses 25-26, "of which I became a minister according to the stewardship [KJV, "dispensation"] from God which was given to me for you, to fulfill the word of God, the mystery which has been hidden from ages and from generations, but now has been revealed to His saints." The Gnostics talked about mysteries. He is going to explain the mystery.

Verses 27-28, "To them God willed to make known what are the riches of the glory of this mystery among the Gentiles: which is Christ in you, the hope of glory. Him we preach, warning every man and teaching every man in all wisdom, that we may present every man perfect in Christ Jesus." The mystery has to do with Christ in us, the hope of glory. Jesus dwells in us through the indwelling of the Holy Spirit. He lives His life in us.

That is what Paul said in Galatians 2:20, "I am crucified with Christ, nevertheless I live, yet not

I, but Christ lives in me, and the life I now live in the flesh I live by the faith of the Son of God, who loved me and gave Himself for me." Paul explained that to the Galatians. The mystery that has been hidden for generations, the mystery that had never been understood before, was the mystery of conversion and of Christ dwelling in us through the power of the Holy Spirit to enable us to be transformed from the inside—renewed and transformed from within.

Colossians 2:1, "For I want you to know what a great conflict [KJV, margin, "care"] I have for you and those in Laodicea, and for as many as have not seen my face in the flesh." This is an indication that he had not actually been to those cities. He knew a number of the individuals personally. He had a special concern for some of these areas that did not have the same personal relationship with him.

Verses 2-3, "[desiring] that their hearts may be encouraged, being knit together in love, and attaining to all riches of the full assurance of understanding, to the knowledge of the mystery of God, both of the Father and of Christ, in whom are hidden all the treasures of wisdom and knowledge." Where are the treasures of wisdom and knowledge? Are you going to find that in some of these various philosophies? No. It is hidden here in God the Father and Christ.

God consists of the Father and of Christ. Just in terms of the trinity, can you imagine a Catholic epistle leaving out the so-called third person of the trinity?

Colossians 1:2, "To the saints and faithful brethren in Christ who are in Colosse: Grace to you and peace from God our Father and the Lord Jesus Christ." Over and over you go through Paul's epistles, and it's always from God our Father and the Lord Jesus Christ. The pope would never write anything that way. It would be from Father, Son and the Holy Spirit (or Ghost). There would always be the trinity.

If it had been left out of one or two verses, it wouldn't be so bad. But if the Holy Spirit is a person, it should be getting its feelings hurt by now because it got left out here. Why didn't Paul mention it? Maybe Paul didn't know that. Maybe he hadn't read the Nicene Creed. He was about three hundred years too early. He only knew what Christ had said. He hadn't found out what Constantine and the Bishop of Rome had come up with.

Colossians 2:6, "As you have therefore received Christ Jesus the Lord, so walk in Him." Stick to the trunk of the tree.

Verses 7-8, “rooted and built up in Him and established in the faith, as you have been taught, abounding in it with thanksgiving. Beware lest anyone cheat you through philosophy and empty deceit, according to the tradition of men, according to the basic principles of the world, and not according to Christ.”

Verse 10, “and you are complete in Him, who is the head of all principality and power.” What he is saying “flies in the face” of what some of these people were saying, introducing various philosophical ideas. They weren’t coming in trying to teach against Christ. The Gnostics that came in were not trying to say, ‘Don’t be a Christian anymore.’ They were saying, ‘That’s fine. We are Christians, too. Simon Magus claimed to be a Christian, didn’t he?’ They said, ‘We have some deeper understanding; there are some things that you haven’t heard. There’s a way. We have the “inside track” to spiritual growth and to enlightenment.’

Paul says that you need to be rooted and built up in Him and established in the faith, as you have been taught. You need to be anchored and steadfast. Beware of this philosophy, vain deceits, from the society around that didn’t originate with Christ.

Verse 9, “For in Him dwells all the fullness of the Godhead bodily.” Which is the idea that the fullness of the Godhead could dwell in flesh—something that flew in the face of the Gnostic teaching.

Verse 10, “and you are complete in Him....”

Verse 11, “In Him you were also circumcised with the circumcision made without hands [the circumcision of divine origin]....” The expression “made without hands” signifies divine origin.

In Daniel 2:31-35, Daniel saw the great image, and then at the end, a stone cut without hands smashed the image on its toes and the whole thing turned to dust. “A stone cut out without hands” means that it was “not of human origin.” It was of divine origin.

The circumcision “made without hands” is a circumcision of divine origin.

Verse 11, “In Him you were also circumcised with the circumcision made without hands, by putting off the body of the sins of the flesh, by the circumcision of Christ.”

Evidently circumcision was a factor here. There was a misinterpretation of the significance of circumcision. The Samaritans practiced circumcision. That was one thing they acknowledged because that was mentioned in the first five books of the Bible. They did acknowledge that was right. Many of the Jewish philosophical groups did that. But we find that those in Colosse who were discussing circumcision completely misunderstood or taught what it was all about.

Verses 12-14, “buried with Him in baptism, in which you also were raised with Him through faith in the working of God, who raised Him from the dead. And you, being dead in your trespasses [KJV, “sins”] and the uncircumcision of your flesh, He has made alive together with Him, having forgiven you all trespasses, having wiped out the handwriting of requirements that was against us, which was contrary to us. And He has taken it out of the way, having nailed it to the cross.” If you look up this term “writing of requirements” (KJV, “handwriting of ordinances”), most of the commentaries will bring out that the Greek expression, the sense of it, is a technical term that has reference to a bond of indebtedness.

It is a reference to a handwritten bond of indebtedness, a bill of debt, which is what Christ blotted out. He blotted out our bond of indebtedness, our handwritten “IOU,” as it were, as a result of our sins. This is what was against us—our sins. It was contrary to us. He nailed our sins to the cross. He didn’t do away with the law. Why would He do away with the law? The law was not against us or contrary to us. What He blotted out was our sins. He blotted out the bond of indebtedness, the catalog of our sins, the things that are against us.

Verse 15 (KJV), “And having spoiled principalities and powers, he made a show of them openly, triumphing over them in it.” He triumphed over Satan and his entire realm.

Verse 16, “Let no man therefore judge you in meat or in drink or in respect of a holy day or of the new moon, or of the Sabbath days.”

As a result of what Christ has done, of blotting out our sins and taking them out of the way, having triumphed over everything, don’t let anybody call you into question in respect of matters of eating and drinking.

“Eating and drinking” is the sense of the word “meat”; it is translated meat and drink. My margin says, “for eating and drinking.” It’s not so much “food or drink” as it is the act of eating and drinking. Our sins have been taken out of the way and blotted out. Christ has triumphed over everything. Don’t let somebody call you into question in matters of eating and drinking or in respect of Holy Days or a new moon or Sabbath.

Verse 17, “which are a shadow of things to come; but the body of Christ.” Don’t let somebody call you into question in these regards. He specifically mentions eating and drinking, as well as other aspects of these festive occasions. The one thing Holy Days, Sabbath and new moons all had in common (new moons were never commanded as holy time) was they were festive occasions. They were occasions that were normally accompanied by eating and drinking, a time of festivity. The festive nature of all these things looked forward to a time when Christ is going to make a feast of fat things for all people (Isaiah 25:6).

Verses 18-19, "Let no man beguile you of your reward in a voluntary humility and worshipping of angels, intruding into those things which he has not seen, vainly puffed up by his fleshly mind."

This gets into some of these mystic ideas of the Gnostics. There were various sectarian groups and the influence of many of the Samaritans. Many of them were influenced by the pagan thought that filtered through the Samaritans and influenced other little groups of Jews with all this sort of mystic ideas. Don't let anybody beguile you in this, intruding into things with all these human ideas and these dogmas. He summarizes what they are.

Verse 21, "Do not touch, do not taste, do not handle." That's pretty much the equivalent of the ascetic vows of touch not (being a reference to celibacy), taste not (this ascetic forswearing of meat or wine and milk—some of these ascetic groups gave up all sorts of things, living on very rigorous diets, which were all human ideas) and do not handle (giving up or forswearing physical wealth).

Verse 22, "which all perish with the using...."

Verse 23, "These things indeed have an appearance of wisdom in self-imposed religion, false humility and neglect of the body, but are of no value against the indulgence of the flesh." These things all look impressive to the world. People are impressed with that. They look at somebody who sits cross-legged wearing nothing but a loincloth and lives on grapes. They think this is a holy man. The term referring to these men in India is "fakers." I think they are closer to the truth than they realize. They are "fakers." It's a distorted concept of holiness and of sainthood.

If you want to get some laughs about the misunderstanding of what is a saint, go to a library and get a Catholic book on all the saints. You will come up with the craziest things you can imagine. One guy stayed perched on top of some tall obelisk for so many years that this really made him a holy man. People made pilgrimages to come and hear his "wisdom." Just crazy! But the pagan world has gone in for that, whether it's the Catholic world or you can go over to Asia and the Buddhists.

Paul said not to let someone call you into question about these festive occasions. These things foreshadow; they are a shadow of Christ. The whole festive nature of God's celebration and the things that God's people did, all look forward—they foreshadow a reality. Don't let them trick you out of your reward by getting you to go and do all these things, getting involved in worshipping angels and all this silly mysticism that they have and not focusing on Christ, the Head (v. 19).

Verse 20, "Therefore, if you died with Christ from the basic principles of the world, why, as though living in the world, do you subject yourselves to regulations—" If you are no longer a part of this world, then why get tangled up in some of these concepts. These things that look impressive to the world certainly require a lot of willpower and tremendous exercise in self-discipline, but that's not the way to salvation. They miss the whole point. It's a distorted concept.

Colossians 3:1, "If then you were raised with Christ, seek those things which are above...." That's the point.

We realize that if our lives are wrapped up in Christ, then, v. 4, when He appears, we are going to be like Him in glory, just like He is.

Therefore, vv. 5-9, what you need to mortify, get rid of, are the old ways of living. We are to put to death the sexual uncleanness and the covetousness, the things for which the wrath of God comes on the children of disobedience. We may have formerly done those things, but we are not to do them any more. We have to get rid of the anger, malice, wrath, blasphemy and the filthy communication. Don't lie to one another. You're getting rid of the old man.

Verse 10, "and have put on the new, who is renewed in knowledge [the real knowledge], according to the image of Him that created him." From a spiritual standpoint, the physical divisions are not relevant. From a physical standpoint, our ethnic origin or our social status does not impact our relationship with God. Paul is not talking about a physical revolution in the sense that some have tried to distort it. There are crazy ideas like communal living, having everything in common. Certain communes share everything, wives, property, etc. People want to read things into what the Bible says.

Verses 18-25—4:1 speak of wives, husbands, children, fathers, servants and masters. Physical relationships still exist in the physical realm, but they, themselves, are transformed. Our relationship with God and our opportunity to be a part of God's Kingdom is not based on our physical standing, either from an ethnic standpoint, gender, economic status or social status.

Colossians 3:11, "where there is neither Greek nor Jew, circumcised nor uncircumcised, barbarian, Scythian, slave nor free, but Christ is all and in all."

Verses 10-12, we are to put on the attitude of God.

Verse 13, "bearing [KJV, "forbearing"] with one another, and forgiving one another..." This is one thing we all owe one another. This is the attitude we are to have: if a misunderstanding or a dispute arises, "Forbearing and forgiving one another." "Forbear" means "to put up with." Sometimes that's all you can do with some people. But then, God puts up with us. That should tell us something. God forgives us. We should forgive one another.

Verse 14, "But above all these things put on love, which is the bond of perfection." That's what binds us together.

Verse 15, "And let the peace of God rule in your hearts, to which also you were called in one body; and be thankful."

He talks about the transformation of physical relationships that should take place. Our lives as a Christian should be different.

Colossians 4:6, "Let your speech always be with grace, seasoned with salt, that you may know how you ought to answer each one." What does that mean "seasoned with salt"? Sometimes we have heard the reference of somebody being a "salty" character. This is not what you think of. What does it mean? When we think of salt, most of us think of a flavor enhancer. Salt enhances the flavor.

Life and Letters of Paul Series—Ephesians and Philippians

We are continuing our survey of the Life and Letters of the Apostle Paul, covering the books of Ephesians and Philippians. They are both very short little books, and yet there is a lot that is in these books. They were written during the time of Paul's Roman imprisonment. Some of the modern commentators choose to disagree with that. Some of them just like to come up with anything that is different from what everybody else has always said. They figure their "claim to fame" is to have something different to hear—some new thing.

We are going to notice as we go through, that there's certainly reference to the fact that Paul was in prison in Rome. He mentions Caesar's household (Philippians 4:22), and the fact of those before whom he was coming (Philippians 1:12-13) as certain evidence it was written at the time when he was in prison in Rome.

Ephesians 6:20 mentions, "for which I am an ambassador in chains; that in it I may speak boldly, as I ought to speak." He specifically mentioned that he was chained.

He mentions in v. 21 that Tychicus was the bearer of this letter and would make known the details when he came there to the Church in Ephesus. This Tychicus is also mentioned in Colossians 4:7 as the individual who bore the letter to the Colossians. Ephesus and Colosse were near one another. It is certainly very likely, based on this, that Ephesians was written at about the same time as Colossians. It was clearly sent by the same individual, Tychicus. Reference is made there.

Ephesus was a major city. It was the capital of what was called Roman Proconsular Asia. When we say "Asia" today, we think of a whole vast continent. "Asia," as the term was normally used in classical Greek and Roman history, had to do with a portion of what is today modern-day Turkey. There was the peninsula that is called Asia Minor and there was a Roman Province of Asia, which was where the Churches were located that the Apostle John addressed in Revelation 2 and 3—the letters to the seven Churches. Those Churches were all located in that general area of Asia or Asia Minor. The Roman Province was the western portion; the western edge of Asia Minor.

Ephesus was a major trading city. It had sea connections with Greece. It had connections with both Achaia, which is southern Greece down where Athens was, as well as Macedonia, which was up in the northern part where Philippi was. There were overland connections from Ephesus, coming down overland through what is now modern-day Turkey to Syria. It was a major trade route because it was located close to the sea. It was just a matter of a few miles away from the coast. It was involved in a lot of trade. It was kind of a connecting point, a jumping-off point, for Greece and Europe to the west, as well as a route overland to cut through to the Euphrates River or down through to Syria.

The worship of Diana, one of the goddesses of the Romans and Greeks, was the state religion. A huge statue of Diana dominated the Ephesus harbor. The city had an ancient origin as a Greek colony. That's the way it had originally been established. There was a sizable Jewish population as well as an established synagogue there.

Philippi was in Macedonia. Macedonia is northern Greece and actually extends up into a portion of what is today southern Yugoslavia. Philippi was built and named by Philip of Macedon, who named it after himself. It's amazing how many people build things and name them after themselves. The world is filled with "humility."

It's kind of like the nation of Saudi Arabia, which takes its name from the father of the present king. His name was King Saud. He thought that was a nice name and just named the whole nation after himself. Philippi was named by Alexander the Great's father; he named it after himself.

There had originally been an ancient Phoenician city there. It was a very strategic trading location. The Phoenician city had been wiped out, but Philip of Macedon built a Greek city there. It was later rebuilt by the emperor Augustus. It's a very fertile area. There was a gold mining industry in that area, about twelve miles from the coast. It was a major Macedonian mercantile center because it was on one of the major Roman roads.

There were, however, very few Jews in Philippi. There wasn't a synagogue. The evidence from the book of Acts was that there were only a few women who met on the Sabbath out by a riverbank out of town (Acts 16:12-13). It was sort of a secluded park-like setting. The indication is there was just a handful.

Lydia, who was a seller of purple, we are told, was the first convert (Acts 16:13-15). This was the first area where the gospel was preached in Europe.

Paul had spent quite a bit of time in Ephesus on his third evangelistic journey. He spent two years in Ephesus (Acts 19:10). Since the Apostle Paul was there that length of time, the Church was very solidly established and very well organized.

Paul left Ephesus and went on to Greece. Remember he spent several months there, went through Macedonia, spent three months wintering in Corinth and came back up to Macedonia (Acts 20:1-3). Then he left to go back to Jerusalem in order to be there for Pentecost of 56 A.D. (v. 16).

He made arrangements to meet with the Ephesian elders (Acts 20:17-18). It was obviously a well-organized church. There were elders and deacons, and Paul had utilized the time there. It seems to have been, in many ways, sort of the leading or headquarters Church of the area of Asia Minor. In fact, in later years after the destruction of Jerusalem, it was the area where the Apostle John (the last of the apostles living) lived in the latter years of his life. In that sense, the true Church was centered in Ephesus.

The Ephesian Church was the heart and core of the Church of God in the last portion of the first century because the Jerusalem Church had been destroyed by that time. There were remnants of the Church in Pella, but it was scattered. We find the Apostle John living there until almost the end of the first century. In the second century, we find Christians who were keeping the Passover and Days of Unleavened Bread—observing the Holy Days. There are specific references to that.

When we pick up the story (those events were many years after what we read here in the Bible in the book of Ephesians), it would tell us that if the Ephesian Church was that strong at a later time in history (fifty, seventy-five, almost one hundred years down the road from when Paul was writing this), then it would certainly tell us that it would have been a strong, well-established Church that stood the test of time for another generation or so.

The Philippian Church was also one in which Paul had spent a pretty fair amount of time. It was a well-organized Church. It seems to have been very generous and spiritually mature.

We will notice there is not a lot of correction in Ephesians and Philippians. They did not have the sort of problems that Corinth or Thessalonica had. Paul, in some of his epistles, was very highly corrective. He did not have to be so here because these were areas that were not encountering major problems.

Some Churches encountered problems in terms of lifestyle. In Corinth, there was a tendency toward immorality. Not just immorality but also a tolerance of immorality. There was a tolerant attitude toward immorality in the congregation. In other areas, such as Galatia and Colosse, there was a tendency toward heretical movements and towards ideas and concepts that “smacked” very strongly of the Gnostic influence and things that ultimately gave rise to the Catholic Church. Some Churches had their problems with lifestyle; others, with doctrine. Ephesus and Philippi seemed to not have had those major problems.

Paul dealt with some deep spiritual and philosophical concepts. He wrote both of these Epistles pretty close together. He dealt with a lot of things.

Notice in Ephesians. Before we get into it, just to set the stage, one thing I might mention is what was known in history as the “two-church theory.” Maybe you have never heard of the two-church theory, but there is a progression that people use to reason themselves astray.

One of the early Catholic historians makes reference to the Millennium. He said that what was at first routinely and commonly believed everywhere, became by degrees simply one opinion on the subject, and then ultimately became viewed as heresy—as a superstition. In other words, there was a progression on the doctrine on the Millennium.

At one time everybody was in agreement. That’s the way it was. When you moved fifty to seventy-five years down the road, it was merely an opinion that some held. It was a tolerated opinion. There were those who literally believed in the one thousand-year reign of Christ, and there were others who didn’t believe it was to be taken literally. By the time you progress another fifty to seventy-five years down the road, it had come to be viewed as an error and superstition, and something of which the proponents were to be persecuted for and driven out of the Church. There was a progression in terms of how some of these things came about in the first century.

We recognize there was a fundamental problem concerning the law. How do we know there was a fundamental problem concerning the law? We read what Jesus said and did in the gospel accounts. When we read the book of Acts, we find a Church that kept the law. James referred to the headquarters Church and those who constituted the Church in Jerusalem as zealous for the law (Acts 21:20). When we are introduced to the Church of God in the New Testament, we are introduced to a Church that kept the law. When we meet up with the earlier incipient Catholic Church (as the curtain begins to rise in the third century), we find a church that wasn't keeping the law. How did they make a transition? How do you make a transition from keeping the Sabbath and holy days to not keeping the Sabbath and holy days? One of the major ways that this progression was made was by a doctrine that began to be promulgated.

We will notice from the book of Ephesians that it was already getting started at that time. Some of the Gnostics that we met up with in Colosse were already getting some groups that were propounding this. It did not really become a popular doctrine until right around the end of the first century. Really, it began after the destruction of Jerusalem and in the last years of the Apostle John's life. Once he was dead, it became the ascendant doctrine and the official teaching of the church at Rome, and then it became absorbed elsewhere.

The so-called two-church teaching was that there was one set of rules for the Jews and another set for the Gentiles. The original transition was the Sabbath and the holy days. They said it was fine that the Jews continued to do that, but the Gentiles didn't have to. They said the Gentiles were not obligated to observe the law, although the Jews were. In areas of Judea or areas where the Jewish population was the majority, this was fine. But Gentiles didn't observe the law; it wasn't necessary because those things only applied to the Jews.

Their original doctrine was one of tolerance. That's fine; they didn't try to interfere with the Jews keeping the law. It's just that it didn't apply to the Gentiles. They sought to make a distinction between what God expected of Jews and what He expected of Gentiles. There was a great emphasis on different sets of standards that they had that was clearly beginning at the time Paul wrote Ephesians. By the end of the first century, the idea that there was a different set of standards that God expected of Jews and Gentiles was a major controversy in many areas. As they ultimately got the ascendancy and the power, then it was the fact that not only should the Gentiles not keep the law, but also the Jews shouldn't be doing it either.

Then there began to be an open hostility toward the law and toward any who kept the law. There was an attempt to stir up persecution against it as the Roman church moved closer to becoming the official religion of the Roman Empire. There was a gradual shift between a tolerance of the law and yet teaching that it was not necessary for Gentiles to keep it. In many areas where there were Jews, it was fine to go ahead and do that. But in areas where it is just Gentile congregations, it was not really necessary.

This was the original excuse of the group at Rome—some of the followers of Simon Magus and others. This was their explanation of why they didn't keep the law. It wasn't necessary because they were centered in the Gentile areas. They sought to spiritualize away the law saying it was not to be taken literally. They said a lot of it was allegory and there was also a difference in what was expected of Jews and Gentiles. They confused the fact.

The Jews continued to circumcise their children, and there wasn't anything in the New Testament that expected them to do otherwise. The emphasis of the controversy of circumcision was the fact that it was not a matter of spiritual salvation. Gentiles who were being converted and coming into the Church were not required to be circumcised in order to be received into the Church. The controversy over circumcision had to do with access to God. But it was a physical sign of the covenant of the people of the descendants of Abraham, and there wasn't any expectation that Jewish Christians would cease doing so—nor did they.

All the way on up to 135 A.D., the statement is made that the Church in Pella, which was the remnants of the Jerusalem Church, was presided over by circumcised Jews. All of the leadership and ministry there were circumcised Jews. This was all the way up to a hundred years after the time of Jesus' crucifixion and resurrection. It was never an issue among the Jewish population.

Some of these Gnostic teachers and other early heretics sought to make a distinction. They said, 'Some of those things, the Jews do it, but it doesn't apply to us. Really, none of the law, the Sabbath, all of these matters of the law, these things really don't apply to Gentiles. If we are living in a Jewish area, it's fine to go to church on the Sabbath, but there isn't any point for us to. We are not expected to.'

Paul stresses in the book of Ephesians that this was just getting started. It didn't really become full blown until several decades later, but Paul could see it already beginning. These heresies of the “two-church theory” were already beginning to be promulgated. Paul lays great emphasis in the book of Ephesians on the fact that it was one body. There was not a distinction. There was not a basis of spiritual distinction between Jews and Gentiles. That is not valid. There isn’t a spiritual distinction to be made whatsoever.

Notice:

Ephesians 1:1, “Paul an apostle by the will of God....”

He greets them.

Verses 1-5, “...To the saints who are in Ephesus, and faithful in Christ Jesus: Grace to you and peace from God our Father and the Lord Jesus Christ. Blessed be the God and Father of our Lord Jesus Christ, who has blessed us with every spiritual blessing in the heavenly places in Christ, just as He chose us [the Church] in Him [Christ] before the foundation of the world, that we should be holy and without blame before Him in love, having predestined us to adoption as sons by Jesus Christ to Himself, according to the good pleasure of His will.”

God has preordained. Here, we come to predestination or election or choosing. The world does not understand predestination.

The followers of John Calvin emphasized predestination and their belief in election. Because others emphasized their beliefs in free will, they had great controversy. None of them understood either subject; that is what it amounts to. You can’t understand predestination if you think that today is the only day of salvation.

The universal lie that is believed by all of them is the doctrine of the immortality of the soul. If the soul is immortal, you have to do something with it when it dies. You have to send it somewhere—heaven, hell or the Catholics who are stuck in purgatory. The Protestants had to get rid of purgatory because they couldn’t find it in the Bible. If they had looked a little harder, they couldn’t have found going to heaven or hell either. But if you hold on to the immortality of the soul, you have to send the soul somewhere. And if you have to send the soul somewhere when you die, then that means it is all over with; that is when judgment is made.

You can’t understand predestination or elected or chosen if you think that the issue is whether or not you will be saved. God has not predestined some to be saved and others to be lost. What He has predestined is that there will be a Church—firstfruits. He predestined that before the foundation of the world; God knew where He was going before He started.

Can you imagine somebody setting out to build a house and he doesn’t have any house plans? He doesn’t know the dimensions of the house, doesn’t know the details of how it is going to be built, what the pitch of the roof is going to be and what materials he is going to use, etc. I have seen a house or two that I suspect was built that way, but that’s not really the best way to do things. There’s a lot of work and effort that goes into planning out what you are going to have before you ever get started. God didn’t just start kind of creating a few things, throwing it out and saying, ‘That looks pretty good; maybe I’ll stick something else over here.’ Before He ever started, God knew where He was going. He had a great master plan.

It’s just like the seven-day week. God didn’t work as hard as He could for six days and, finally, at the end of it, He was tired and had to rest. Then afterwards He thought, ‘That’s a pretty good idea; I think I’ll just have everybody do that from now on.’ That’s not the way it happened at all. It took six days because God determined that it would take six days. He had determined to sanctify the Sabbath because He was illustrating a great master plan. A day with the Lord is as a thousand years (II Peter 3:8). He had a plan in mind.

The festivals, which were not introduced to the Church until the time of Moses, were nevertheless in mind.

In Revelation 13:8, we are told, “the Lamb of God slain from the foundation of the world.” In other words, before God ever started, He had a plan in mind and that included the Passover and Days of Unleavened Bread, Pentecost, Trumpets, and the whole works. God had a plan. He knew where He was going. The first law of success is to have a goal.

There was a little book written for young people back a number of years ago. The title of it was a little catchy title, If You Don’t Know Where You are Going, You Will Probably End Up Somewhere Else. That’s the way a lot of people are. They don’t know where they are going, and sure enough, they end up somewhere else. Well, God hasn’t ended up somewhere else. He is going to end up exactly where He intended to end up because He had a plan to begin with.

He chose us in Christ before the foundation of the world. Before He ever got started, He had in mind that He was going to call out firstfruits. That doesn’t mean that God had plotted out the genealogy of every human being that would ever be born and every combination of parents that has occurred since Adam and had that planned out ahead of time. No, that's ridiculous. Start thinking through what would have to be done to do that.

God planned out an overall scope and scheme of things. That doesn't mean that predestination means that everything you do is already preprogrammed.

The statement was made of Judas that this betrayal was done to fulfill the scriptures (Matthew 26:54-56), but woe be to him by whom it is done (Matthew 26:24). It was determined that somebody was going to betray Him. That's not hard to predict. You put the right people in the right place and somebody's going to do something like that. God knew that some of these things were going to happen, but He didn't pick out and make somebody fulfill that prophecy against his will.

The Beast and the false prophet are going to arise on the world scene, but God's not going to make somebody fulfill that role against his will. It is a matter that those roles are going to be fulfilled. God has pre-determined and will move things around, but there can be various individuals who, if they got the opportunity, would jump for the chance. God doesn't have to really look too far for volunteers on most of that. It is just a matter of letting the right person get into the position.

I'll use the illustration with the prophecy where it talks about the king of the South. God wouldn't have to look very far for volunteers. Saddam would like to volunteer. If God is taking volunteers, he has his hand up. He'd like to be the one, whether he will be or not. But you know, if he's taken out of the way, somebody else will be there—'Let me be next. I would like to do it.' It isn't a problem. God doesn't have to force somebody into fulfilling a role against his will. It's just that circumstances that are conducive come along, and God allows these circumstances.

God talks about a final stage in the history of the Church that is characterized by a lukewarm, watered-down attitude. That's a part of prophecy, just as much as the coming together of the Beast power. God hasn't picked out you or me and said, 'I am going to make you become lukewarm.' We just live in a society that is conducive to that. God knows that is going to be the tendency. That doesn't mean He has picked somebody out, and it doesn't matter how much you pray and study and fast, you are going to have to be lukewarm because God is going to make you lukewarm. No, that's not what predestination means. It doesn't mean that God is going to make you fit into a role that you don't choose.

But God has predetermined ahead of time that there's going to be a Church. He's outlined a basic history and development of that Church. He made decisions before He ever got started. Predestination involves firstfruits who would be holy, who would be without blame, who would become His children.

Ephesians 1:7, "In Him we have redemption through His blood, the forgiveness of sins...." We have redemption through Christ's blood.

It continues, vv. 11-12, "in whom also we have obtained an inheritance, that we should be predestinated according to the purpose of Him who works all things out to the counsel of His own will, that we who first trusted in Christ should be to the praise of His glory."

It talks about being sealed with the Holy Spirit of promise and the guarantee (KJV, "earnest") of our inheritance (vv. 13-14).

God gives us His Spirit, and He likens that to being the earnest of our inheritance. That's the guarantee that He is going to ultimately change out mortal bodies from flesh to spirit. Jesus Christ is described in the book of Colossians as the firstborn from the dead (Colossians 1:18). None of us has been born from the dead yet. Christ is the firstborn from the dead. Now, if He's the firstborn, that means there are others who will be born later.

Flesh and blood can't inherit the Kingdom of God. Corruption doesn't inherit incorruption (I Corinthians 15:50). We are sealed with the Holy Spirit of promise. God gave us His Spirit, and we are ultimately going to be born into His very Family. Not a physical birth, but a spiritual birth. We are sealed, set apart and authenticated as genuine, and that is the guarantee (KJV, "earnest") of our inheritance. It is the proof that we are going to be born into His very Family.

Just like if you are going to buy a house, you put down earnest money, which tells the owner that you are going to come back and pay for it. God gives us a little bit of His Spirit; that's the earnest of our inheritance. We haven't received that inheritance yet, but we have the guarantee because God is going to fulfill what He says.

There are many scriptures in the book of Ephesians that relate to the Day of Pentecost. I am going to come back and tie in with that.

The book of Ephesians probably relates to, expounds and explains the spiritual significance of Pentecost more than any other single book in the New Testament. In many ways, you could correlate it with the book of Ruth in the Old Testament. We will notice the correlation of a tie-in with the book of Ruth.

Ephesians 2:1-3, “And you He made alive, who were dead in trespasses and sins, in which you once walked according to the course of this world, according to the prince of the power of the air, the spirit who [which] now works in the sons of disobedience, among whom also we all once conducted ourselves in the lusts of our flesh, fulfilling the desires of the flesh and of the mind, and were by nature children of wrath, just as the others.”

We were a part of the world. We lived like the world. We fit in with the world and were comfortable with the world. We shared the world’s values and priorities and we fit in with that. We were as good as dead because of sin. God has had mercy and has given us the opportunity for life. When we walk according to the course of this world and not in the paths of righteousness, the course of this world is motivated and determined by the prince of the power of the air, Satan the devil. He’s the same spirit that works in the children of disobedience.

Verses 4-5, “But God, who is rich in mercy, because of His great love with which He loved us, even when we were dead in trespasses, made us alive together with Christ (by grace you have been saved).”

Verses 8-10, “For by grace you have been saved through faith, and that not of yourselves; it is the gift of God, not of works, lest anyone should boast. For we are His workmanship, created in Christ Jesus for good works, which God prepared beforehand that we should walk in them.” It’s not a matter of you earning your salvation. “By grace are you saved...we are His workmanship.” God is making something out of us. He is transforming and changing us.

Verse 11, “Therefore remember that you, once Gentiles in the flesh—who are called Uncircumcision by what is called the Circumcision made in the flesh by hands—” The Church that Paul is addressing here is a Church that was primarily Gentile.

Verse 12, “that at that time you were without Christ, being aliens from the commonwealth of Israel and strangers from the covenants of promise, having no hope and without God in the world.” He reminds them of their state. You were cut off; you had no connection. You were without Christ and were outside of the physical commonwealth of Israel. You were not a descendant of Abraham; you were not an heir of the promise. You were outside the scope of what God had promised. You didn’t have any hope; you didn’t know God.

And yet, vv. 13-14, “But now in Christ Jesus you who once were far off have been made near by the blood of Christ. For He Himself is our peace, who has made both one, and has broken down the middle wall of division between us.”

In the temple, there was a wall of partition, a wall that separated the court of the Israelites from the court of the Gentiles. Unless the Gentiles were circumcised and had undergone the conversion rite of Judaism, they could not enter into the area where sacrifices were made. They didn’t have access to God. Jesus Christ has made peace. He’s made both Israelites and Gentiles one. He broke down the middle wall of partition between us, the things that made for separation in the spiritual sphere. Other statements in Colossians and Galatians make similar statements.

Colossians 3:11, “where there is neither Greek nor Jew, circumcised nor uncircumcised, barbarian, Scythian, slave nor free, but Christ is all and in all.”

Galatians 3:28, “There is neither Jew nor Greek, there is neither slave nor free, there is neither male nor female, for you are all one in Christ Jesus.” Obviously, we still are male and female in the physical sense. We still are whatever our ethnic origin or economic status in the physical sense, but those things, in terms of our relationship to God, don’t have relevance. Whether you are a man or a woman, whether you are Gentile or Israelite, rich or poor, these things only have meaning and significance in the physical realm—in the physical society and community. But in terms of the Family of God and in terms of being a part of God’s Kingdom, those distinctions don’t have any relevance to our relationship to God. Whether you are a male or female—regardless of any other physical factor—we can all have the same access to God. There was a court of the women in the temple. The court of the Israelites, if you wanted to be technical, was the court of the Israelite men. You can go back and you had the varying distinctions that were made. The point Paul is making here is that access to God no longer has physical distinctions. Physical distinctions don’t have any bearing in terms of access to God.

Ephesians 2:15-18, “having abolished in His flesh the enmity, that is, the law of commandments contained in ordinances, so as to create in Himself one new man, from the two, thus making peace, and that He might reconcile them both to God in one body through the cross, thereby putting to death the enmity. And He came and preached peace to you who were afar off and to those who were near. For through Him we both have access by one Spirit to the Father.”

We all have access to God through Christ. It doesn't matter how much money you have or who your ancestors were; that's totally irrelevant to our access to God. We all have to enter (our access to God) through the same One, which is Jesus Christ. Paul is stressing this.

Verses 19-22, “Now, therefore, you are no longer strangers and foreigners, but fellow citizens with the saints and members of the household of God, having been built on the foundation of the apostles and prophets, Jesus Christ Himself being the chief cornerstone, in whom the whole building, being joined together, grows into a holy temple in the Lord, in whom you also are being built together for a habitation of God in the Spirit.”

What we have is a spiritual unity, which is in direct contrast to this so-called two-church doctrine that was being promulgated—the idea that there was the one set of rules for the Jews and another set for the Gentiles. Paul is making plain that we all have access to God through one Spirit, through Jesus Christ. Our access is not based on these physical distinctions. Our access is based on the sacrifice of Jesus Christ. Nobody had a “leg up” or “down.” We are all on the same “leg” when it comes to that.

Ephesians 3:1-2, “For this reason I, Paul, the prisoner of Jesus Christ for you Gentiles—if indeed you have heard of the dispensation of the grace of God which was given to me for you.” It was because of some of this that there had been so much enmity stirred up by some of the Jews in Jerusalem. Not the converted ones, but others who really resented the teachings that Paul had. Remember the original charge they had against him was that he had brought a couple of Greeks into the court of the Israelites at the temple, which he had not done (Acts 21). It was ultimately because of Paul's teachings in these areas that “trumped-up” charges had been brought against him.

Verses 4-6, “by which, when you read, you may understand my knowledge in the mystery of Christ), which in other ages was not made known to the sons of men, as it has now been revealed by the Spirit to His holy apostles and prophets: that the Gentiles should be fellow heirs, of the same body, and partakers of His promise in Christ through the gospel.”

Verses 9-12, “and to make all people see what is the fellowship of the mystery, which from the beginning of the ages has been hidden in God who created all things through Jesus Christ; to the intent that now the manifold wisdom of God might be made known by the church to the principalities and powers in the heavenly places, according to the eternal purpose which He accomplished in Christ Jesus our Lord, in whom we have boldness and access with confidence through faith in Him.”

Verses 14-21, “For this reason I bow my knees to the Father of our Lord Jesus Christ, from whom the whole family in heaven and earth is named, that He would grant you, according to the riches of His glory, to be strengthened with might through His Spirit in the inner man, that Christ may dwell in your hearts through faith; that you, being rooted and grounded in love, may be able to comprehend with all the saints what is the width and length and depth and height—to know the love of Christ which passes knowledge; that you may be filled with all the fullness of God. Now to Him who is able to do exceedingly abundantly above all that we ask or think, according to the power that works in us, to Him be glory in the church by Christ Jesus throughout all ages, world without end. Amen.”

He talks about a mystery, which has to do with the fact that all human beings (Jew and Gentile) may, through the indwelling of the Holy Spirit, become children of God to ultimately be born into the Family of God. That is something the world does not understand.

Verse 6, “...fellow heirs and partakers of His promise....”

He mentions “the mystery” in vv. 3-4.

Verse 9, “...the fellowship of the mystery....” – Things that haven't been understood.

Verse 17, “that Christ may dwell in your hearts....”

Verse 19, “to know the love of Christ....” We have a covenant relationship that is brought out here.

The Church is being built up as a spiritual temple.

Ephesians 2:20-21, “having been built on the foundation of the apostles and prophets, Jesus Christ Himself being the chief cornerstone, in whom the whole building, being joined together, grows into a holy temple in the Lord.” The prophets were the writers of the Old Testament; the apostles were the writers of the New Testament.

Verse 22, “in whom you also are being built together for a habitation of God in the Spirit.” God is carrying out a vast construction project. The physical temple was to be built according to a certain specified way. The reason why it was so important to follow the instructions is because all of those physical specifications were representative (illustrative) of the spiritual plan that God is working out. We have this description that is brought out here.

We commented earlier on how Christ had abolished in His flesh the enmity, the law of commandments contained in ordinances (Ephesians 2:15). In other words, He abolished the things that made for artificial separation between Jew and Gentile, the artificial separation in spiritual matters. In terms of access to God, He abolished the things that made for artificial separation and distinction. In terms of access to God, it was illustrated by this partition in the temple that separated those who were circumcised and those who weren't. Christ abolished that.

He abolished the curtain that separated the Holy Place from the Holy of Holies. It came down at the time He was crucified—at the time He died (Matthew 27:51). It was symbolic of our direct access to the Father. It is through Jesus Christ and His sacrifice that all of us share access to God.

This was one of the great issues of the early New Testament period and why circumcision kept “cropping up.” The whole issue had to do with how you gain access to the presence of God. It is ultimately the presence of God that is the source of holiness. What makes us a holy people is the indwelling of the presence of God. This matter of the basis for access to God was a difficult concept for some to grasp.

I mentioned Ruth. We have explained in sermons and Bible studies that the book of Ruth is the book the Jews traditionally read at Pentecost. Ruth is the story of a marriage between a Gentile and an Israelite. Ruth was a Gentile; she was a Moabite, which meant the same basic family of Abraham. The Moabites were descendants of Lot who was Abraham's nephew. But they were not circumcised. They were not heirs of the promise to Abraham.

They were Gentiles, therefore, outside of the covenant even though it was a similar family and came from the same basic stock. Lot followed Abraham when he left Ur of the Chaldeans, but God didn't make the covenant with Lot. Lot's family—even though they were related, a kindred people—were still outside the scope of God's promises and outside the scope of the covenant. The covenant did not apply to them. The same thing with Ishmael; Ishmael is a descendant of Abraham. He was a son of Abraham, but the covenant didn't apply to him. It only applied to Isaac. Isaac was the son of promise. Isaac had two sons, Jacob and Esau. But the covenant didn't apply to Esau. He was outside the scope of it. It only applied to Jacob and his twelve sons. That's part of God's election, God's choosing.

Why are you in the Church and your neighbor isn't? Because God decided to call you and decided that He wouldn't call your neighbor right now. Why did God make His covenant with one group of people and not with another? Because He chose to! It's part of the sovereignty of God. God is the Sovereign of the Universe and has the right to make choices, and He does. He chose to call you and me now and not our neighbor, friends or relatives who may be just as good, maybe a better person, than we are. It's not a matter of what you deserved. God made the choice because He decided to. He has His reasons and He doesn't have to explain them to us.

Do you know why, exactly, He chose to call you right now? I don't know why He chose to call me right now. I would like to ask that someday. I'm glad He did. I can look around and think of a lot of people He could have chosen. But He didn't choose to. God has the right to make choices, and that's what “election” is all about. “Election” is what we think of as one man, one vote. This is one man, one vote in the literal sense. God has the only vote. That's the way the election is—God electing or choosing. The term “election” simply means “choosing.” The “elect” are those who are “chosen.” God has chosen us as His people.

The story of Ruth is the story of a marriage between a Gentile (one who was without the promises of God and outside the covenant and election) and a prince of Israel. She was married to Boaz who was a prince of Israel. Because of the marriage, Ruth became an inheritor of the promises to Abraham. The Jews have traditionally read Ruth at Pentecost. Pentecost is representative of the covenant, of the marriage relationship, between Old Testament Israel and Christ, and later on, between the Church (New Testament Israel) and Christ.

Ephesians 2:22 explains Gentiles become part of spiritual Israel through the power of the Holy Spirit.

If you read Ephesians 2 with the story of Ruth in mind, you find that was Ruth's category and situation.

Verses 11-12, "Therefore remember that you, once Gentiles in the flesh—who are called Uncircumcision made in the flesh by hands—that at that time you were without Christ, being aliens from the commonwealth of Israel and strangers from the covenants of promise, having no hope and without God in the world."

She made the choice.

Ruth 1:16, "...Your people shall be my people, and your God, my God."

She embraced the covenant of God. She married Boaz and actually became an heir of the throne of David and of Jesus Christ. In that way, that story was read at Pentecost to symbolize the fact of God calling His people out of the world, joining them into a marriage covenant with Him through which they could become heir of the promises. There was a symbolism that the book of Ruth illustrated.

The book of Ephesians explains the spiritual significance of the story of Ruth. The Jews could read it and understand it was a nice story, and they could see a few parallels to God calling Israel and the marriage covenant at Sinai, the Old Covenant. But Ephesians 2 explains the spiritual significance. It was really a type of the relationship of Christ and the Church because all of us were, at one time, in this category.

As we come on back through the book, Ephesians 4:1, "I, therefore, the prisoner of the Lord, beseech you to walk worthy of the calling [KJV, "vocation"] with which you were called." Being a Christian is a full-time job.

Verses 3-6, "endeavoring to keep the unity of the Spirit in the bond of peace. There is one body and one Spirit, just as you were called in one hope of your calling; one Lord; one faith; one baptism; one God and Father of all, who is above all, and through all, and in you all."

There are not two churches. There's not a Jewish and a Gentile church with different sets of rules. There is one body and one Spirit, and we are to keep the unity of the Spirit in the bond of peace.

Verse 8, "...When He [referring to Christ] ascended on high, He led captivity captive, and gave gifts to men."

When did Christ ascend on high? The Catholics work up quite a deal on this. I know a number of you were Catholic prior to coming into the Church. According to the official Catholic teaching, Abraham and David and all the patriarchs of the Old Testament—none of them went to heaven. Did you know that? The Catholic Church doesn't teach that any of them went to heaven. They went to a compartment of hell. But it wasn't the bad part of hell. They claim there are a lot of parts of hell, and they went to a part called "limbus potrim," which is limbo—this vague existence—the limbo of the fathers.

Their teaching is that when Christ was in the grave (or his soul in hell), they believe that He went down there; then when he ascended up to heaven, he took Abraham and all the others with Him. He led them out and limbus potrim is empty now because He emptied it out. They had been held captive, and he took them up to heaven. This is their explanation of that. That's incorrect. That's not what happened. The simple proof text is in the book of Acts.

Days after Christ had finally ascended to heaven and taken anybody He was going to take, Peter said, Acts 2:29, 34, "Men and brethren, let me speak freely to you of the patriarch David, that he is both dead and buried, and his tomb is with us to this day...For David did not ascend into the heavens..." That didn't mean Christ had forgotten him. What is the ultimate captivity? Death!

I Corinthians 15:54-55, "So when this corruptible has put on incorruption, and this mortal has put on immortality, then shall be brought to pass the saying that is written: 'Death is swallowed up in victory. O Death, where is your sting? O Hades, where is your victory?'"

The point of Ephesians 4:8 is it refers to Christ's activity on the day of the wave sheaf, the day during the Days of Unleavened Bread. He was resurrected at basically sunset at the end of the Sabbath, three days and three nights after He was buried. Early the next morning, prior to the time the wave sheaf was offered in the temple, He was seen by Mary Magdalene, but He didn't allow her to touch Him.

He said, John 20:17, "...I have not yet ascended to the Father..." Later on that day He allowed the disciples to embrace Him because He had ascended to the Father (John 20:17; Matthew 28:9). He was the wave sheaf, the first of the firstfruits of them that slept (I Corinthians 15:20), the firstborn from those who have fallen asleep (died) (Colossians 1:18). He ascended to the Father to be accepted as the first of the firstfruits. When He ascended on high, He led captivity captive and gave gifts unto men.

I Corinthians 15:54 tells us about a time when death is swallowed up in victory.

I Corinthians 15:55-57, “O Death, where is your sting? O Hades [Grave], where is your victory?” The sting of death is sin, and the strength of sin is the law. But thanks be to God, who gives us the victory through our Lord Jesus Christ.” We are given the victory through Jesus Christ. We read here about death being swallowed up in victory.

Romans 6:16, “Do you not know that to whom you present yourselves slaves to obey, you are that one’s slaves whom you obey, whether of sin to death, or of obedience to righteousness.”

Verse 23, “For the wages of sin is death, but the gift of God is eternal life.”

John 8:32, “And you shall know the truth, and the truth shall make you free.”

Verses 34-36, “...‘whoever commits sin is a slave to sin. And a slave does not abide in the house forever, but a son abides forever. Therefore if the Son makes you free, you shall be free indeed.’”

Ephesians 4:8, “...‘When He [Christ] ascended on high, He led captivity captive...’” He triumphed over death.

I Corinthians 15:54, “...‘Death is swallowed up in victory.’” Death is the ultimate captivity from which no one can escape.

In the early decades of this century was a very famous magician, Harry Houdini. He was the Amazing Houdini, the great escape artist. He could escape from anything. This was his “thing.” He had debunked a lot of fortunetellers, mystics and all this sort of thing. He was always intrigued by that and wondered if somebody could come back from the dead. Shortly prior to his death, he had a private conversation with his wife. He gave her a secret code or signal, and he told her he had never met anything he couldn’t escape from. If it were possible to escape from death (the grave) he would do that, too. He was sure a lot of these fortune tellers were going to try to claim he had come back, and this code was going to be a way that she would know that it was really him. And, of course, Houdini never escaped. That was the captivity that he couldn’t get out of. He had escaped a lot of captivities, but he couldn’t escape that one. That is the captivity that nobody, not even the great escape artists, could escape from.

But Jesus Christ “led captivity captive [He triumphed over death], and he gave gifts to men.” Why did he tell the disciples it was expedient for Him to return to the Father? –So that He could send the Comforter, the Holy Spirit (John 16:7).

What are the gifts?

Ephesians 4:11-12, “And He Himself gave some to be apostles, some prophets, some evangelists, and some pastors and teachers, for the equipping [KJV, “perfecting”] of the saints for the work of ministry, for the edifying of the body of Christ.” This is why there is a ministry. “Perfecting” is the fully furnishing of the saints. “The work of the ministry” is serving God’s people. “Edifying” is the building up of the body of Christ.

Verse 13, “till we all come to the unity of the faith and the knowledge of the Son of God, to a perfect man, to the measure of the stature of the fullness of Christ.” We are not going to totally come into the unity of the faith until Christ returns. We are not going to totally come to understand everything the same way and be totally unified with Christ and with God the Father until Christ returns. But the purpose of having a ministry in the Church is to work towards that end.

Verse 14, “that we should no longer be children, tossed to and fro and carried about with every wind of doctrine, by the trickery of men, in the cunning craftiness by which they lie in wait to deceive.” –To produce a certain level of stability.

Verses 22-24, “that you put off, concerning your former conduct, the old man which grows corrupt according to the deceitful lusts, and be renewed in the spirit of your mind, and that you put on the new man which was created according to God, in righteousness and true holiness.”

Ephesians 5:1, “Therefore be followers of God as dear children.”

In vv. 3-5, he enumerates putting away the various works of the flesh. Then he goes into a description of husbands and wives and the marriage relationship.

Verse 22, wives submitting and adapting themselves to their husbands.

Verse 25, husbands loving their wife.

But, v. 32, he compares that to the relationship of Christ and the Church. Ephesians 5:32 makes plain that Christ and the Church is the model for the relationship of husbands and wives. He goes on to instruct in other physical relationships. Physical relationships are transformed when we come into the Church. They don’t impact our access to God, but we are still physical creatures. There may not be male or female (Galatians 3:26-28, we are all one in Christ), but that’s only in the spiritual sphere. I think we understand that.

Certain homosexuals in San Francisco have tried to take that verse out of context to say that it is okay for men to marry men. People can twist and distort scripture. That's not what it is talking about. I trust we all understand that.

Physical relationships remain on the physical realm, but it is not a determining factor in terms of spiritual relationships. Physical relationships are transformed when you come into the Church in the sense that our relationship as a husband, wife, parent, child, employer or employee—all of those physical relationships are transformed in that the fulfillment of them takes on a deeper spiritual implication than we ever contemplated before. We should, as a Christian husband, parent or child, etc., be different than we were. It should make a difference in our lives in the way we fulfill our appointed role in society.

Ephesians 6:11, "Put on the whole armor of God, that you may be able to stand against the wiles of the devil."

He describes the armor in vv. 13-18.

Verse 15, "...having shod your feet with the preparation of the gospel of peace."

Isaiah 52:7, "How beautiful upon the mountains are the feet of him who brings good news, who proclaims peace, who bring glad tidings of good things, who proclaims salvation, who says to Zion, 'Your God reigns!'" Maybe you never thought of yourself as having pretty feet.

This analogy is used in Ephesians 6:15, "...having your feet shod with the preparation of the gospel of peace." We need to be doing something. We need to be doing the work. This is what is being addressed right here.

Verse 20, "for which I am an ambassador in chains..." The implication is that Paul is in prison at the time he wrote this. The Ephesian Church was very active in their prayers for the Apostle Paul and known for their generosity.

The book of Philippians is a shorter book and a book that has several themes. To a great extent, it is a thank you and an encouragement. It was an exhortation to humility and the avoiding of striving. It was a warning about the circumcision. In the same way as Colosse, there were individuals who were seeking to undermine the truth of how we gain access to God and how we maintain that access. It was also a general exhortation on Christian living. Philippians 1:1 starts out addressing the saints in Philippi with the bishops (elders) and deacons. This shows a very organized, fully-developed and organized Church.

Philippians 1:6, "being confident of this very thing, that He who has begun a good work in you will complete it until the day of Jesus Christ." God started a work in you and He intends to finish that work. That's important to realize. He goes on here through the book of Philippians, desiring to see them "filled with the fruit of righteousness" (v. 11).

Verses 12-13, "But I want you to know, brethren, that the things which happened to me have actually turned out for the furtherance of the gospel, so that it has become evident to the whole palace guard [Praetorium], and all the rest, that my chains are in Christ." This is a reference to the court of the Praetorian Guard or Caesar's Court. The Praetorium was the court of Caesar's elite guard. Paul, in his imprisonment in Rome, was well known in "high circles."

Verses 23-24, he talks about the fact that he was in a strait between two things: having a desire to depart and be with Christ or to abide in the flesh, which was more needful for them. Paul didn't mean he thought he was going to go to heaven when he died. He knew that if he died, his next split-second of consciousness would be in the Kingdom of God. He was kind of torn "betwixt and between."

He was in jail. He had gone through a lot of trouble and difficulty. He thought, on the one hand, it would be nice just to lie down, go to sleep and wake up in the Kingdom. He was undergoing a lot of stress and difficulty. From a human standpoint, he looked at it and thought it would be good. He had certain desires for God to just let him go to sleep. And yet on the other hand, he looked at the Church and the needs of the Church and knew he still had a work to be done.

He admonishes them in vv. 27-30.

Philippians 2:3-6, in terms of humility he says, "Let nothing be done through selfish ambition or conceit, but in lowliness of mind let each esteem others better than himself. Let each of you look out not only for his own interests, but also for the interests of others. Let this mind be in you which was also in Christ Jesus who, being in the form of God, did not consider it robbery [thought it not something to be grasped or seized] to be equal with God."

He did not cling to His equality with God and the Godhead.

Rather, vv. 7-8, "but made Himself of no reputation, taking the form of a servant, and coming in the likeness of men. And being found in appearance as a man, He humbled Himself and became obedient to the point of death, even the death of the cross." He divested Himself of that relationship He had shared with the Father from eternity. He did not have this attitude of ego. Some people would never give up something that was prestigious for something that was less prestigious. Jesus Christ exemplified an attitude of service, willing even to divest Himself of the glory of God and come down and take upon Himself and live a human life.

In Hebrew 2:16 (KJV), we are told that He took not upon Himself the nature of angels but the nature of the seed of Abraham. He took upon Himself our nature. He didn't go down one notch—just kind of move down from God to angel. He took upon Himself the nature of the seed of Abraham.

Philippians 2:9-11, “Therefore God also has highly exalted Him and given Him the name which is above every name, that at the name of Jesus every knee should bow, of those in heaven, and of those on earth, and of those under the earth, and that every tongue should confess that Jesus Christ is Lord, to the glory of God the Father.”

Paul admonishes them in vv. 12-13, “Therefore, my beloved, as you have always obeyed, not as in my presence only, but now much more in my absence, work out your own salvation with fear and trembling; for it is God who works in you both to will and to do for His good pleasure.” God is working in you. You need to go forward and to finish up. Allow God to finish in you what He has started.

Verses 14-15, “Do all things without murmuring and disputing, that you may become blameless and harmless, children of God without fault in the midst of a crooked and perverse generation, among whom you shine as lights in the world.”

Verse 17, Paul went on and talked about what he was going through and the fact of various difficulties that he was facing.

Verses 23-24, “Therefore I hope to send him [Timothy] at once, as soon as I see how it goes with me. But I trust in the Lord that I myself shall also come shortly.” He still did not know exactly what was going to be the outcome of his imprisonment, but he still had faith that God was going to release him and let him come.

Philippians 3:1, “Finally, my brethren, rejoice in the Lord. For me to write the same things to you is not tedious, but for you it is safe.”

‘Be aware of some of these who were stirring up trouble.’

Verse 2, “Beware of dogs...” This is not talking about cocker spaniels and collies. “Dog” was a slang term that was used to refer to “false ministers.” It was a term that had its origin in Hebrew, in the Old Testament. The priests of the pagan temples who practiced the immorality and the things that were generally associated with Baal worship were called “dogs.” There are obvious implications if you give it a little bit of thought. It was a term that the Jews used to refer to an idolatrous priesthood—the leaders of false religion. This was the term Paul used. Continuing, “...beware of evil workers, beware of the mutilation! [KJV, “concision”—“cutting”].” —Those who were seeking to invest in circumcision. That was something God had never intended.

Verse 4, he talks about having confidence in the flesh. Their emphasis was on what you could do to guarantee your relationship with God.

The point is that if you could do something to guarantee your relationship with God, why did Christ have to come and die? If you can guarantee your relationship with God through circumcision or by some physical thing—if that's going to gain you access to God—why did Christ come and die? That would have been much simpler. It undermines the full significance and impact of the sacrifice of Christ. That's why Paul emphasized it so much.

Verses 8-10, he talks about knowing Christ and having Christ in us.

Verses 12-13, “Not that I have already attained, or am already perfected; but I press on, that I may lay hold of that for which Christ Jesus has also laid hold of me. Brethren, I do not count myself to have apprehended; but one thing I do. Forgetting those things which are behind...”

He's talking about the things that had been his sources of pride in the past, the things that had given him status and were sources of pride in the past. He had forgotten those things. He was not concerned about those things. That had nothing to do with his standing with God. The things in times past he had trusted to give him standing with God—he has forgotten those things, which are behind. The things he mentioned earlier in vv. 4-6, the things he had that would have given him status or access, as far as they were concerned. He had forgotten about those things, the things he used to place his trust in.

Continuing v. 13, “...and reaching forward to those things which are ahead.”

Verse 14, “I press toward the goal for the prize of the upward call of God in Christ Jesus.” He was reaching forth for the promises of God and pressing toward the mark.

Verse 17, “Brethren, join in following my example, and note those who so walk, as you have us for a pattern.”

Notice vv. 20-21, “...we also eagerly wait for the Savior, the Lord Jesus Christ, who will transform our lowly body that it may be conformed to His glorious body....” At the resurrection, we are going to put on immortality.

Philippians 4:1, “Therefore, my beloved and longed-for brethren, my joy and crown, so stand fast in the Lord, beloved.”

Verse 4, “Rejoice in the Lord always. Again I will say, rejoice.”

Verses 6-7, “Be anxious for nothing, but in everything by prayer and supplication, with thanksgiving, let your requests be made known to God; and the peace of God, which surpasses all understanding, will guard your hearts and minds through Christ Jesus.”

Get our minds on the things that are excellent and good and positive and uplifting (v. 8).

Verses 11-12, “Not that I speak in regard to need, for I have learned in whatever state I am, to be content. I know how to be abased, and I know how to abound....”

Verse 13, “I can do all things through Christ who strengthens me.” ‘I can do all these things.’

Verse 19, “And my God shall supply all your need according to His riches in glory by Christ Jesus.”

It is very apparent, as you go through, that Philippians is a very powerful little book. It is short, but it has a lot of strong encouragement. It is a very encouraging book, focusing in on the power of God. We have to realize that Christianity and conversion are not so much what we can do for God as it is what God can do in and through us as we yield ourselves into willing instruments. We yield ourselves to Him, desiring Him to change, shape and mold us, to fashion and form us, to make us conformable to His image. That’s really what conversion is all about. It has to do with a transformation in our values, our priorities and every facet of our lives.

I mentioned earlier the allusion to Pentecost. These books very directly relate to Pentecost because Pentecost has to do with conversion and with God giving His covenant. There are many, many sections, particularly in Ephesians, where you can go through and find it talking about the elect, about being chosen as firstfruits, those who first trusted in Christ. In Ephesians 2, it talks about being called out and made a part of the commonwealth of Israel. It talks about Christ dwelling in us. He talks about the relationship of Christ to the Church as a husband-wife relationship, all these things. The working of God’s Spirit has to do with the spiritual meaning of Pentecost—one of God’s festivals.

There’s an awful lot that’s packed in Ephesians and Philippians. It was clearly written in Paul’s imprisonment. They contain things that are helpful for us. We only got an overview of it this evening.

As you have gone through and had a chance to study them on your own, hopefully, you have gotten a taste of some of the depth of content that God, through His Spirit, packed into these books. We have tried to hit some of the high points on them this evening. Many of the significant things that Paul wrote he wrote during the time that he was in Roman imprisonment.

Next Bible study, we will go through the book of Hebrews, which was also written during the time of Paul’s Roman imprisonment. An awful lot is packed into the book of Hebrews. I think these things can give us a little bit of depth and insight into, not simply the historic teachings of the Apostle Paul to the early New Testament Church, but principles that each of us need to be aware of and relate to in our lives today because God’s Word is a living Word. It applies to not only the people to whom it was written at that time, but it is preserved for us. It has a message that directly applies in our lives today.

Life and Letters of Paul Series—Hebrews

We are getting into the book of Hebrews. This is a very important book. There is an awful lot packed in here, and we are going to try and cover it. We will focus on an overview of God's great plan and purpose: the primary emphasis of the role of Jesus Christ, His role as our High Priest, our Mediator, the role of the priesthood and a transition to take place. We will also notice the theme of perseverance. It plays a major role in Scripture.

Hebrews was written to Israelite Christians in general, but particularly to those of Jewish background. It was evidently written at the end of Paul's first imprisonment. We will note some places that give us indication of that. You will find that many of the commentators want to dispute the fact that Paul wrote the book of Hebrews. This is something that is commonly done today. There's a reason for that and there's a reason why we would accept Paul's authorship. In fact, I can give you seven reasons for accepting his authorship, and I will explain why many of the critics don't want to accept Paul's authorship.

(1) Who was better qualified than Paul to write a book like this? One-third of the book of Hebrews is a direct quotation out of the Old Testament. Whoever wrote it was thoroughly grounded in the Old Testament, in the intricacies ("ins" and "outs") of the Jewish religion, the symbolism and all the things connected with the temple, priesthood, the tabernacle, all the various ceremonial aspects, sacrifices, etc. Who was better qualified than Paul? He was more highly educated than any of the other apostles. He was more qualified to explain the intricacies of Judaism. He was a student of Gamaliel, the foremost Jewish teacher of the day. Most likely, just in terms of qualifications, there wasn't anyone who was better grounded in the Old Testament than Paul to write a book like this.

(2) We find that the author of the book was writing from Italy.

Hebrews 13:24, "Greet all those who rule over you, and all the saints. Those from Italy greet you."

Verse 19, "But I especially urge you to do this, that I may be restored to you sooner." Here is a reference of someone writing from Italy and who was in prison. The author was not at liberty; he was in prison in Rome, which of course, Paul was.

(3) Whoever wrote this, Timothy was his companion.

Verse 23, "Know that our brother Timothy has been set free, with whom I shall see you if he comes shortly." Here was someone writing at Rome. He and Timothy had been there. Timothy was now at liberty and was hoping to be shortly restored to them.

(4) Peter testifies of a book that Paul wrote like this.

II Peter 3:15, "...as also our beloved brother Paul, according to the wisdom given to him, has written to you."

I & II Peter address basically the same audience. I Peter 1:1, "Peter, an apostle of Jesus Christ, to the pilgrims of the Dispersion in Pontus, Galatia, Cappadocia, Asia, and Bithynia." Israelites dispersed in Gentile areas. This is the same audience that Hebrews is written to—people of the Dispersion.

II Peter 3:15-16, "...as also our beloved brother Paul, according to the wisdom given to him, has written to you, as also in all his epistles, speaking in them of these things, in which those who are untaught and unstable twist to their own destruction, as they do also the rest of the Scriptures." Peter acknowledges to the audience he addressed (the Israelites of the Dispersion) that Paul had also written a letter to that group. Now if Paul didn't write Hebrews, then he had to have written a letter addressed to that group that has been lost because Peter testifies to it.

(5) The letter has Paul's style. I won't go into all the reasons for that, but there are many aspects of it to show that. The critics write that off as someone trying to copy Paul's style.

(6) The unanimous tradition of the early Church recognizes Paul's authorship. The earliest writers (up through the second century) and any tradition in the Greek world are pretty unanimous in acknowledging that Paul wrote this book. It was only in the aftermath that these questions began to come in. The reasons for the questions was to undermine the authority of the book because there isn't any book in the New Testament that more clearly speaks of tithing, Sabbath keeping and various things like this. It is a book that has a "Jewish flavor."

Frankly, the real objection to Paul's authorship by some of the early so-called "church fathers" was simply an effort to undermine its authority in the canon. Some of the later critics, and even some of the early Protestants, reject Paul's authorship. It kind of "fed on itself." They quoted Augustine and various ones. Augustine didn't think Paul wrote it. Of course, he didn't! Augustine really didn't want the book in the Bible because it contradicted what he taught and was a little harder to wrest and twist than some of the other things. So, they objected to it on that basis.

The reality is that while the Catholic Church likes to claim the credit for "giving the world the Bible," they had nothing to do with it. The only thing they tried to do was take it away. They didn't put it together. It was already in existence when they came on the scene. The church council didn't put the Bible together. They simply recognized the canon that was already in existence. The only thing they argued about was how they could get the books out of it. Primarily, they desired to somehow discard James, I & II John, Hebrews, the book of Revelation and various ones like that. They looked for ways to try to get rid of anything that had a few pointed hints at them.

However, the books were simply too widely known and recognized to be effectively discarded. The reality is that the Apostles Peter and John were responsible for creating and providing the canon of the New Testament. The earliest Church sources and records recognized Paul's authorship. It didn't begin to be questioned until later.

(7) If the book of Hebrews was not written by Paul, it would totally break the pattern of "seven" in the New Testament and in Paul's writings. Counting the book of Hebrews, Paul wrote fourteen books. In the sequence, the order that was preserved by the Greek Church, it comes "sandwiched" in with Paul's epistles. The order that the Greek Church preserved (the order that we have commonly called the inspired order) consisted of four parts or divisions: the Gospels and Acts (the historical books that told the story), the General Epistles (James, Peter, John and Jude), Paul's Epistles, and fourth came the book of Revelation.

Paul's epistles were arranged. First are his nine letters to the seven Churches beginning with Rome and ending with II Thessalonians. Then came the book of Hebrews and the Pastoral Epistles (Timothy, Titus and Philemon). In that order, Hebrews is "sandwiched" in with his epistles. If you take it out, you don't have fourteen. If you take it out, you mess up the sequence because you have four divisions: the Gospels and Acts, General Epistles, Epistles of Paul and Revelation.

When you take the four divisions of the New Testament and add it to the three of the Old Testament (the Law, Prophets and Writings) that Christ discussed (Luke 24:44), you have seven divisions. There's completion in the New Testament. The Jews counted twenty-two books of the Old Testament and the twenty-seven in the New Testament. That's forty-nine—seven times seven. When you take out the book of Hebrews and try to rearrange it or assign it to somebody else, you mess up a consistent pattern that runs all the way through the Bible, a pattern that "smacks" of God's design and purpose and the fact that there was an order and harmony to it.

Let's understand a little bit about the audience to whom he is writing. If Paul is writing toward the end of his Roman captivity, we're looking at about 62 A.D., which means the destruction of Jerusalem was only a few years away. The deaths of the Apostle Paul, the Apostle Peter and the other apostles were coming very quickly. In fact, if James was not dead when the book of Hebrews was written, he was probably executed right around that time or very shortly thereafter because he died in the early 60s. He was thrown from the precipice of the temple. He was thrown over and dashed on the rocks below.

You have to put yourself in the situation a little bit. At the time Paul was writing, probably around 62 A.D. during his Roman imprisonment, there was a situation where you had many of the people to whom he was writing who had been in the Church twenty-five or thirty years. There were a number of those who were receiving this letter who were there on the Day of Pentecost in 31 A.D. and when the thousands were converted during those early weeks. Primarily, the book of Hebrews is written to old-time Christians, long-time Church members, people who were in the Church for twenty-five to thirty years. Here were individuals who came into the Church in those earliest days of exuberance, excitement and miracles; individuals who came in with that eagerness, anticipation and sense of urgency; individuals who sacrificed for the work.

Remember in the book of Acts, in 31 A.D., many of those who were in Jerusalem for the Day of Pentecost came only for the holy day season. They came into the Church and all the excitement was going on, the gospel was being proclaimed, great miracles were being worked. There was a sense of imminence and urgency and they didn't want to leave. Many of the people who were based there in Jerusalem liquidated property; they converted their property into money and gave it to the apostles. They gave everything they had. This was the situation. There was a sense of imminence and urgency of Christ's return. That was the last question the disciples asked Jesus when He ascended to heaven.

Acts 1:6, "...'Lord will you at this time restore the Kingdom to Israel?'"

Verse 7, "And He said to them, 'It is not for you to know times or seasons which the Father has put in His own authority.'" He didn't tell them the time setting.

What happened? A couple of years later, in 33 A.D., Stephen was stoned. Stephen was the first in the New Testament Church to suffer martyrdom. Many there in Jerusalem began to be scattered as time went on.

When Peter was arrested and put in jail, God sent an angel and brought him out (Acts 12). Great miracles occurred even to the point that when Peter's shadow passed over someone, they would be healed (Acts 5:15). But thirty years had gone by and Paul had now been languishing in jail for years. James, the brother of John (one of the twelve) had been executed years ago (Acts 12). Some of the other apostles were scattered and some were dead. James, the brother of Jesus was at the point of being executed.

What had happened? Well, there was an erosion of that first love, of that zeal and intensity. There were some tired old Christians—people who had sort of lost that sense of zeal and urgency. Individuals who, when they first came in the Church, never anticipated that they were running a marathon and would still be around for twenty-five or thirty years.

I think we have to understand that Hebrews has some special significance for all of us if we stop and put it in that perspective. I saw a man who was in college with me back in the late 60s. Did he expect to be here in 1991? I didn't. Various ones of you started hearing Mr. Herbert Armstrong way back in the 50s and 60s. We didn't expect to be sitting here in the 90s. The 90s seemed forever away. But they are here.

So Paul is writing to people who were in that circumstance. He is writing to people who were maybe in their twenties and thirties when they came into the Church, and who were now getting on up into their sixties. People were going through and experiencing things that they hadn't expected.

There were heretical movements that were beginning to make inroads. There were various ideas floating around. We are told that the Ephesians era of the Church ultimately lost its first love (Revelations 2:4). We find Paul dealing with some of those things.

Notice the way he starts out.

Hebrews 1:1-2, "God who at various times and in different ways ["many different times and many different ways" would be the more literal rendering from the Greek] spoke in time past to the fathers by the prophets, has in these last days spoken to us by His Son, whom He has appointed heir of all things, through whom also He made the worlds."

Paul is writing with a couple of major things in mind. First, he wants to clearly explain and establish the rank and function of Jesus Christ and the Melchizedek priesthood in relationship to the Levitical priesthood. Second, he wants to exhort old-timer members to persevere to the end.

Think about it. Most of the Jewish element and those in Jerusalem had been accustomed to continuing to go up to the temple and participate in temple service. They would go up to Jerusalem for the Feast or many of the Festivals. It was common that they would travel to Jerusalem and took part in the temple service. The temple had continued to function. It seemed a part of the eternal order of things. It would have been very difficult to imagine that something would happen to it. It was certainly hard to imagine that something would happen to it and that Christ wouldn't instantly return. But that was going to be the case.

There was going to come a transition. The temple was going to be destroyed and the Levitical priesthood was going to cease to function. Yet when we go through the book of Acts, we find that many in the Church (particularly there in Jerusalem and Judea) continued to take part in certain of those things. There needed to be an explanation of the transition; a transition had already been made on a spiritual level and a transition that needed to be understood on the level of those in the Church there.

Paul starts out by showing different ways and different times God had spoken in the past through the prophets.

Verses 2-3, "has in these last days spoken to us by His Son, whom He has appointed heir of all things through whom also He made the worlds; who being the brightness of His glory and the express image of His person...." The word translated "express image" is "character" in the Greek language. In fact, it is spelled the way we spell it. What it really means, the sense of the word in the Greek language, is something that is engraved or etched very deeply into your character—the traits that are fundamental to you and are etched deeply into you. Jesus Christ reflected exactly the character of the Father. He was the engraved image. He reflected exactly the same attributes.

Verse 3, “who being the brightness of His glory and the express image of His person and upholding all things by the word of His power when He had by Himself purged our sins, sat down at the right hand of the Majesty on high.”

Verses 4-8, “having become so much better than the angels, as He has by inheritance obtained a more excellent name than they. For to which of the angels did He ever say: ‘You are My Son, Today I have begotten You?’ And again, ‘I will be to Him a Father, and He shall be to Me a Son?’ But when He again brings the firstborn into the world, He says: ‘Let all the angels of God worship Him.’ And of the angels He says: ‘Who makes His angels spirits and His ministers a flame of fire?’ But to the Son He says: ‘Your throne, O God, is forever and ever; a scepter of righteousness is the scepter of Your Kingdom.’”

He shows that Jesus Christ possesses a rank far above any angel. He is not an angel. He is the express image of the Father. He is the Son of God and holds the rank of God.

We are told that angels are ministering spirits. Verse 14, “Are they not all ministering spirits sent forth to minister for those who will inherit salvation?” The world has a distorted idea that if you are good when you die, you will go to heaven and become an angel—you sprout wings and have a halo, etc. It’s a pretty vague idea, and you don’t find anyone anxious to go do this. They don’t seem really excited about trying to hurry up and get there.

That’s not where angels come from. Human beings were not created to become angels. Human beings were created to become God. Angels are ministering spirits. They are servant spirits; spirit beings created for service. They are sent forth to serve those who will be the heirs of salvation. We are not going to rise to the level of spirit servants. We are inheritors. We are heirs of God, joint heirs with Christ (Romans 8:17). We become heirs of salvation. We will inherit because we literally become a part of God’s Family and will literally be born into God’s Family.

Hebrews 2:1, “Therefore we must give the more earnest heed to the things we have heard, lest we drift away [KJV, “let them slip”].”

Now he begins to exhort a little bit.

Verses 2-3, “For if the word spoken through angels proved steadfast [referring to the Old Covenant], and every transgression and disobedience received a just reward, how shall we escape if we neglect so great a salvation...”

Verses 4-5, “God also bearing witness both with signs and wonders, with various miracles, and gifts of the Holy Spirit, according to His own will? For He has not put the world to come, of which we speak, in subjection to angels.” The world that then was, the world that has been and is, has been under the subjection of angels. Satan the devil is the god of this world (II Corinthians 4:4). But the world to come will not be put in subjection to angels.

Verses 6-8, “But one testified in a certain place [a quote from Psalm 8], saying: ‘What is man that You are mindful of him, or the son of man that You take care of him? You made him a little lower than the angels [You made him temporarily lower], You crowned him with glory and honor, and set him over the works of Your hands. You have put all things in subjection under his feet.’ For in that He put all in subjection under him, He left nothing that is not put under him. But now we do not yet see all things put under him.”

He is quoting from the Old Testament from Psalm 8. —All things being put under man. But he makes the point, “...but now we do not yet see all things put under him.” When God created man, He gave him dominion over all things (Genesis 1:26; Psalm 8:6).

Man, right now, is a little lower than the angels because man can die and the angels can’t. He kind of leaves us hanging.

Then in v. 9, “But we see Jesus, who was made a little lower than the angels, for the suffering of death...” He was also temporarily made lower for the suffering of death. When Jesus came to this earth, He was made lower than the angels where it was possible for Him to die. We see Him now “...crowned with glory and honor, that He, by grace of God, might taste death for everyone.”

Verses 10-11, “For it was fitting for Him, for whom are all things and by whom are all things, in bringing many sons to glory, to make the author of their salvation perfect through sufferings. For both He who sanctifies and those who are being sanctified are all of one, for which reason He is not ashamed to call them brethren.”

We are all of one. We share one Father. We literally become partakers of the divine nature. Peter tells us that in II Peter 1:4. Our sonship is in God’s Family. “Huiiothesia” is a term used in Hebrew that was a common term for adoption in the Roman world. If you take the word literally, it means “sonship”; “huio” is the normal Greek word for “son” and “thesia” means “position of” or “rank of.” So the word literally could be rendered “position of a son” or “rank of a son” or “sonship.” It was the term commonly used for adoption in the Greek and Roman world. Our relationship with God is “adoptive” only in the sense that we are “chosen” sons. It goes beyond the relationship of an adoptive child with his adoptive parents. The adoptive parent can bequeath property to the son; he can bequeath his name, all things, but the one thing he can’t bequeath is his own genetic inheritance. You do not become a partaker genetically of the nature of the adoptive parents.

That’s where the adoption analogy breaks down because Peter tells us we become partakers of the divine nature (II Peter 1:4). That’s what God’s Holy Spirit is. It’s the mind of Christ in us. There is actually a transformation that takes place at the resurrection because flesh and blood can’t inherit the Kingdom of God (I Corinthians 15:50). This mortal puts on immortality (v. 53). We make a transition from physical to spiritual. We step into eternity. That’s why Jesus Christ is called the firstborn from the dead.

Colossians 1:18, “And He is the head of the body, the church, who is the beginning, the firstborn from the dead...” If He is the firstborn from the dead, then that means there are others born from the dead. We will be born from the dead. Not an obvious human physical birth but into the realm of immortality. Jesus Christ became flesh, as we are flesh. He did not become an angel or an angel in disguise.

Hebrews 2:16-18, “For indeed He does not give aid to angels, but He does give aid to the seed of Abraham. Therefore, in all things He had to be made like His brethren, that He might be a merciful and faithful High Priest in things pertaining to God, to make propitiation for the sins of the people. For in that He Himself has suffered, being tempted, He is able to aid those who are tempted [tested].”

Verse 14, “Inasmuch then as the children have partaken of flesh and blood, He Himself likewise shared in the same, that through death He might destroy him who had the power of death, that is, the devil.” Jesus Christ became flesh. He took upon Himself the nature of the seed of Abraham. He became born as a human being. He lived life. He knows what it is to be a human being because He went through the things that we go through as a human being.

Verse 10, “...to make the author [KJV, “captain”] of their salvation perfect through sufferings.” The sense of the word “perfect” is completely mature, fully developed or matured.

Christ learned through the things that He suffered. He learned what it felt like to suffer pain. He learned firsthand what it’s like to be a human being. He went through that experience and therefore is able to lead us to salvation. Christ’s role is described and the fact that He has gone before. He is the firstborn from the dead. He is the captain of our salvation, but we can ultimately share life with Him on the God level, the God plane. We can literally be born into the very Family of God, having and becoming in this life a partaker of the divine nature, and ultimately transformed completely from physical to spirit. Right now the process begins—the transformation, the conversion process.

We speak of being converted or when we were converted, but I think we realize that in the true and full sense of the word, we are not completely converted until we are born of the Spirit into the Family of God at the resurrection. That will be when all the change takes place. Conversion simply means change. There is a level of conversion that takes place at the point we make the commitment. We are baptized and God places His Spirit within us. That begins the conversion process, and He begins to write His law in our hearts and in our minds through the power of His Spirit. That’s the beginning of conversion. But it’s only the beginning.

You’re not completely converted are you? Is God’s law completely written in your heart and mind to where the only way you ever react to anything is spiritual? I wish it were completely written in mine, but I’m sorry to admit to you it’s not. It’s in the process. In that sense, the new covenant will not have been completely made until the resurrection. At that point, we will have been completely converted from flesh to spirit.

God begins the conversion process with our minds to change the way we think. He ultimately changes us from mortal to immortal, from flesh to spirit. He can accomplish that in a moment, in the twinkling of an eye at the last trumpet (I Corinthians 15:51-52). But what can’t be accomplished like that is the mind because if God changed your mind that way, you would lose free moral agency. Your mind has to change because you choose for it to change. You voluntarily surrender your will to God and want Him to take control. You want His Spirit. You want Him to write His laws in your heart and mind. You want Him to change and transform you and make you something that you're not. You can't make yourself that way. You can't convert and transform yourself. It's not a matter of human willpower. You have your part to do; you have to follow. But it's the power of God to transform, and that transformation process will not be completed until the resurrection.

Christ has a function now as our High Priest.

Hebrew 3:1-2, "Therefore, holy brethren, partakers of the heavenly calling, consider the Apostle and High Priest of our confession, Christ Jesus, who was faithful to Him who appointed Him, as Moses also was faithful in all His house."

Then, vv. 3-5, he goes through and talks about how Moses was faithful.

Verses 7-8, "Therefore, as the Holy Spirit says: 'Today, if you will hear His voice, Do not harden your hearts as in the rebellion, in the day of trial in the wilderness.'" He is quoting from Psalm 95, which in turn is quoting back in Exodus 16 and 17. Paul begins to go into an exposition of Psalm 95. It is a Psalm of David that takes the lesson of Exodus 16 and 17 and develops it from a spiritual standpoint. Paul quotes it in Hebrews 3 and 4 and develops it even further. He is quoting the Psalm, which in turn is alluding back to what Moses said. Paul is expounding the spiritual significance of it.

Verse 11, "'So I swore in My wrath, 'They shall not enter My rest.''" We find in Deuteronomy 12 and other places (Joshua 1, 21, 22, 23) a reference to the fact that through Joshua the children of Israel ultimately entered into rest. They spent forty years walking through the Sinai. When they got to one place and they didn't have to pick up and move the next day, this was rest. If you have been on the move for forty years and somebody finally lets you sit down, you're going to think you've entered rest. All you have been doing is camping.

I have gone to Big Sandy many times and camped there, and I enjoyed it. But I tell you what, by the time eight or nine days were over with, I was kind of glad to have something a little more permanent than a tent.

For forty years! We're not talking about eight or nine days. We're talking about forty years. It took them six years to subdue the land; the seventh year, which was the Sabbatical Year, they moved into the dwellings where the Canaanites had lived. They now lived in fixed homes and dwellings and ate the crops that had been harvested the previous year. They weren't on the move. They weren't fighting. They were settled. They finally had rest. They could finally stop; so, in that sense, Joshua gave them rest.

They were denied rest because they didn't believe Joshua and Caleb. They could have had it almost thirty-nine years earlier than what they had, but they wouldn't cross the Jordan. They wouldn't go into the Promised Land because they didn't believe Joshua and Caleb (Numbers 13-14). They believed the ten spies and as a result, they wandered in the wilderness forty years.

Hebrews 3:10-11, God said, "'Therefore I was angry with that generation, and said, 'They always go astray in their heart, and they have not known My ways.' So I swore in My wrath, 'They shall not enter My rest.''"

God said, 'This generation that doesn't believe will not enter into rest. They'll never know what it is to just dwell in one place and be able to settle down. They are going to die on the move in the desert. And the next generation will enter into rest.' This is just a matter of history. It is alluded to in Deuteronomy 12:9 and Joshua 1, 21, 22 and 23. David quotes that and uses some of that terminology in Psalm 95. It talks about entering into God's rest.

Paul then begins to quote it here in Hebrews 3 and 4.

Hebrew 4:8, he says, "For if Joshua [KJV, 'Jesus']..." "Jesus" is derived from the Greek spelling of "Joshua." In the New Testament, instead of "Elijah," it will say "Elias." It's just a matter of a different spelling. Jesus is simply our English spelling of the Greek form. In the Old Testament, we translate it Joshua because that's the English rendering of the Hebrew form. But it's the same word and the reference is to the Joshua of the Old Testament. A lot of modern translations for the sake of clarity render it Joshua because when we see Jesus, we think of Jesus Christ.

We have to realize that was a very common Jewish name. There are many Jews who were named after Joshua. The name had significance. "Joshua" means "the Eternal is Savior." All the names had significance and had meaning. It had special significance for Him because He was literally, in the flesh, the Eternal who was the Savior. But there were many Jews who were named after Joshua, the hero of the Old Testament.

What Paul is saying in v. 8, "...if Joshua had given them rest, then He would not afterward have spoken of another day."

Verse 7, "...saying in David [quoting from Psalm 95, a Psalm of David]..." The point he is making is that it's true that Joshua gave them rest. The Israelites entered into rest under Joshua, but was that all God was talking about when He talked about the promises and entering into rest? If he did, Paul says, 'then why (writing over four hundred years later) did David talk about listening to God? If you listen to God, you can enter into God's rest?'

David wouldn't have been talking about it in the future tense four hundred years later. The account we have in Deuteronomy and Joshua was a literal account, but it was a figure, a type of something that had significance for us. So, he quotes Psalm 95 and shows the ultimate rest into which God's people may enter; the Kingdom of God is the rest.

Right now we are pilgrims, sojourners. We are travelers through this world. When we enter into the Kingdom of God, we will finally enter into rest. The rest into which ancient Israel entered through Joshua of old was merely a type of the permanent and eternal rest that the people of God can enter into.

It's interesting. All the way through Hebrews 3 and 4, Paul keeps using this word "rest" over and over and over again. It is the word "katapausis," which means "rest" or "repose." But what's not obvious in most English translations (some have marginal notes) is in Hebrews 4.

Hebrews 4:9, "There remains therefore a rest for the people of God." The word "rest" in v. 9 is totally different than any other place in Hebrews 3 and 4. It's the word "sabbatismos." You don't have to be a Greek scholar to figure out that "sabbatismos" kind of sounds like Sabbath and that's what it means. It means "Sabbath keeping," "a Sabbath rest." "There remains therefore a Sabbath keeping to the people of God." Paul uses play on words because in the Hebrew, the word "shabat" came from a word that meant "rest." "There remains therefore a Sabbath to the people of God."

The example and what he is using here is a reference to Hebrews 4:4, "For He has spoken in a certain place [in relationship to rest] of the seventh day in this way: 'And God rested on the seventh day from all His works.'" The rest Joshua gave the Israelites, which, interestingly enough, if you go through the chronology of Joshua, was entered into in the seventh year. The Sabbath which God rested on (the seventh day) was a type of the Millennium, the Kingdom of God, the thousand years. The first six thousand years are a time for man's work, effort and endeavor; but finally in the seventh one-thousand-year period, it's a time of rest.

That's why we are told in Isaiah 14:7, "'The whole earth is at rest and quiet....'" That is ultimately God's rest—His Sabbath rest. The seventh one-thousand-year day is the millennial Sabbath, the Millennium. There remains therefore a Sabbath keeping to the people of God.

Hebrews 4:10, "For he who has entered His rest has himself also ceased from his works as God did from His." If you're entering into the eternal rest that God promises His people, then you quit doing your work on the Sabbath just like God quit doing His work on the Sabbath. There remains a Sabbath keeping for the people of God because when you keep the Sabbath, you are being reminded of the rest that God's people will ultimately enter into.

When you really go through Hebrews 4, it is one of the strongest places in the New Testament to clearly prove that there remains a Sabbath keeping for the people of God. It's about as plain as you can get. The Protestants and commentators claim they're not sure what Paul meant by this. What do they mean they're not sure what he meant? If he had said, 'There remains a Sunday keeping to the people of God,' I'll bet they would be able to figure that one out.

That's kind of on the par with I Corinthians 5:8, when he said, "...let us therefore keep the Feast..." and they say they don't understand exactly what Paul meant by this. What if he had said, 'Let us therefore keep Christmas.?' They would understand that one. They wouldn't have any trouble figuring that one out. But when Paul says, 'Let us keep the Feast,' they say, 'Paul must have meant something by this, but we're not quite sure what he meant.' Why don't we just figure he meant what he said? That's a good assumption. You just kind of start from the premise "people mean what they say and they say what they mean." This is one of the reasons why some desire to dispute Paul's authorship of Hebrews. They would have liked to conveniently dispose of Hebrews altogether because it's a little bit inconvenient.

In fact, we are told (it's kind of a play on words), Hebrews 4:11, "Let us therefore be diligent to enter that rest..." KJV, "Let us labor, therefore, to enter into that rest..." Let's work to enter into rest. You appreciate rest when you have been working. The Sabbath means the most to somebody who's been working hard for six days. Then you really appreciate the Sabbath.

Christianity involves work, but it's not our effort that does it. Let me give you an example. It's like a power tool. You plug in your power saw to do something. What if we plugged in the saw and sat back under the shade tree and watched. How many two-by-fours would that saw cut? It wouldn't do a whole lot. What if you didn't plug it in at all? You could work hard all day and not cut very much.

What's the point? If you're not plugged into the power source, it doesn't matter how hard you work, you are not going to accomplish anything. If you are plugged into the power source, you can't just sit back under a shade tree and wait for everything to happen. You have to work hard, but no matter how hard you work, if you're not plugged into the power source, it is of absolutely no avail.

When we receive God's Holy Spirit, we are plugged into the power source. We are tapping into all the power we need, but we have our part. If we don't exercise the Spirit and do what we need to do, the Spirit is not going to do it all. But on the other hand, it doesn't matter how hard you work, if you're not plugged into the power source, you might as well be trying to vacuum your floor without plugging in the vacuum cleaner or trying to use a power saw without plugging it in. It's only usable if it's plugged in and if the individual picks it up and does something with it. It takes the two together. You can't have one without the other and get anything accomplished. We have to labor to enter into that rest, but our labor is not what does it. It's Christ in us. But we can't sit back under a shade tree and wait for Him to do it all.

The world wants to go to one extreme or the other. Some have the concept of work and penance that you do it yourself. Others have the concept that it's all done for you and all you have to do is sit under the shade tree and wait for it. Neither is true.

Verse 12, "For the word of God is living and powerful, and sharper than any two-edged sword...."

Verses 14-16, "Seeing then that we have a great High Priest...For we do not have a High Priest who cannot sympathize with our weaknesses, but was in all points tempted as we are, yet without sin. Let us come boldly to the throne of grace, that we may obtain mercy and find grace to help in time of need."

Hebrews 5:1-2, "For every high priest taken from among men is appointed for men in things pertaining to God, that he may offer both gifts and sacrifices for sins. He can have compassion on those who are ignorant and going astray, since he himself is also beset by weaknesses."

Verse 4, "And no man takes this honor to himself, but he who is called by God, just as Aaron was." The point he makes is that the priesthood is not something you take to yourself. A priest was taken and ordained as an intercessor between God and man. His role has to do with making access to God possible through the offering of sacrifices and gifts. He deals with people and is able to mediate between God and man. He is able to have compassion on people because He was a human being and He knows what it is like. In fact, the priesthood of Aaron had to offer sacrifices for their own sins.

What he is explaining here in Hebrews 5, 6 and 7 is the transition of the priesthood. He starts out by explaining the priesthood of Aaron and then showing that there is something on beyond the priesthood of Aaron.

Verses 5-6, "So also Christ did not glorify Himself to become High Priest, but it was He who said to Him: 'You are My Son, today I have begotten You.' As He also says in another place: 'You are a priest forever according to the order of Melchizedek.'" It refers to Christ being a priest forever after the order of Melchizedek. Who is Melchizedek? The only place you run into Melchizedek is back in Genesis 14 where Melchizedek, the king of Salem, met Abraham returning from the slaughter of the kings. He just kind of "pops up" there, and we are not introduced to anything else about him. None of the commentators understand who he is.

Mr. Herbert Armstrong wrote an article on that many years ago. If we just take what it says in Hebrews 5, 6 and 7, it is very clear who Melchizedek is.

Hebrews 7:1-2, "For this Melchizedek, king of Salem, priest of the Most High God, who met Abraham returning from the slaughter of the kings and blessed him, to whom also Abraham gave a tenth part of all, first being translated 'king of righteousness,' and then also king of Salem, meaning 'king of peace.'"

"Melchizedek" means "king of righteousness." "Melech" is the Hebrew word for "king" and "zedek" is the word for "righteousness." He's also the king of Salem. "Salem" is derived from the Hebrew word "shalom," which means "peace." So, He is the king of righteousness and the king of peace.

Paul interprets his name here to the Greek speakers because he wants them to understand that the meaning of the name was significant. If the meaning of the name is significant, if that title legitimately belongs to this individual and He is King of Righteousness and King of Peace, that doesn't sound like any human being I know. It refers to the Messiah as being Prince of Peace. Are you going to call some human being the king of peace or the king of righteousness?

This is the clincher; v. 3, "without father, without mother, without genealogy, having neither beginning of days nor end of life, but made like the Son of God, remains a priest continually." If Melchizedek abides a priest forever, didn't have a father or mother, is without beginning of days or end of life and is the king of righteousness and the king of peace, that doesn't sound like any human being I ever met.

Hebrews 5:6, "...you are a priest forever according to the order of Melchizedek."

Melchizedek abides a priest forever, and Christ is a priest forever after the order of Melchizedek.

Hebrews 7:4, "Now consider how great this man was, to whom even the patriarch Abraham gave a tenth of the spoils." "Spoils" are what Abraham took from the kings in Genesis 14.

Verses 5-7, "And indeed those who are of the sons of Levi, who received the priesthood, have a commandment to receive tithes from the people according to the law...but He whose genealogy is not derived from them [He preceded them] received tithes from Abraham and blessed him who had the promises. Now beyond all contradiction the lesser is blessed by the better."

This was a lot greater than Abraham. Which human being was greater than Abraham? None. This was clearly the One who became Jesus Christ, manifesting Himself in the role of Melchizedek, the priest of the Most High God.

Verse 8, "Here mortal men received tithes, but there he receives them, of whom it is witnessed that He lives."

Paul is explaining the transition because we are told in Acts 6:7, there were a great company of the priests that believed. The law in the Old Testament was very clear. Who did you pay your tithes to? -To the Levites, the priesthood in the temple. There was a specific place to take it. There were specific individuals to give it to.

The Jews in the Church had grown up understanding and doing that all their lives. They came in the Church and continued doing that because they were doing what the law said right now. There were a number of the priests who believed. There needed a clear understanding that God's people should no longer be giving their tithes to the priesthood of Levi, but rather to the priesthood of Melchizedek, which had prior claim.

What you have to do is explain a transition to people who would go back to verses in Numbers and places like that, to where God said very explicitly that the tithes were to be given to Levi for ministering in the sanctuary. Paul is explaining, 'yes, God did say that, but there was a prior claim that the priesthood of Melchizedek had. That's the priesthood of Jesus Christ and that priesthood is functioning today.'

Within a short time, the priesthood of the Levites was going to cease to function entirely. The temple was going to be destroyed. The scriptural basis for the transition from the Old Covenant to the New Covenant needed to be explained and clarified in detail. There is nothing comparable today because we are under the New Covenant. This was a unique generation because it was the generation of transition from the Old Covenant to the New Covenant. The changes that are described are the changes that were being made from the administration of death to the administration of the Spirit—the administration of the old and the new. The only other comparable period will be when Jesus Christ returns and there is a transition made from the way things are now.

The Church is called out of the world to function as God's people in a world that is Satan's world. There will be a transition when Jesus Christ returns and He takes over the rulership of the world and Satan will be put away. There will be a transition in the way that God's people will function. We are given insight into the government being set up and things being administered, judgment being rendered, things that we don't do today. There will come a transition as we move to that point.

This was the transition period between the Old and the New Covenant. There were many things that had to be explained, particularly to those who had been observant Jews who were doing what the Bible said, or what they had understood it to say. There were explanations that needed to be given to make the transition to what we, in a sense, take for granted but what was new to them.

He spends this time focusing on the role, rank and position of Jesus Christ and how He came as God in the flesh. He became a partaker of the nature of the seed of Abraham. He lived as a human being, died for our sins, was resurrected and is at the right hand of the Father. He is our High Priest, the One through whom we go and through whom we have access. He is the Mediator of the New Covenant.

Paul talks to the people to whom he is writing. One of the things he gets after them for is in Hebrews 5.

Hebrews 5:12-14, “For though by this time you ought to be teachers, you need someone to teach you again the first principles of the oracles of God; and you have come to need milk and not solid food. For everyone who partakes only of milk is unskilled in the word of righteousness, for he is a babe. But solid food belongs to those who are of full age [those who are mature], that is, those who by reason of use have their senses exercised to discern both good and evil.”

Hebrews 6:1, “Therefore, leaving the discussion of the elementary principles of Christ [the beginning of the doctrine of Christ], let us go on to perfection [completion, maturity], not laying again the foundation....”

There are actually seven basic doctrines of the Church. The seventh one is listed first—going on to perfection, to spiritual maturity and completion. We need to go on to become like God. There are six things that are necessary before Christian growth. Going on to spiritual completion and maturity is the final point.

Hebrews 6:1-2, the first six are: “...the foundation of repentance from dead works and of faith toward God, of the doctrine of baptisms, of laying on of hands, of resurrection of the dead, and of eternal judgment.” You need to be coming to a point where you are concentrating on going on to become like God, to become like Christ. You need to be going on to spiritual maturity. But instead, you have to go back and figure out the first foundational things (the first six).

He says, ‘You should be able to teach; yet I have to go back and explain simple things to you.’ Here were people who had been a little shaken and affected by things and were not as solid as they needed to have been.

In vv. 4-6, he encourages and reminds them of the danger of falling away once they have really known the truth.

Verses 10-12, “For God is not unjust to forget your work and labor of love which you have shown toward His name, in that you have ministered to the saints, and do minister. And we desire that each one of you show the same diligence to the full assurance of hope until the end, that you do not become sluggish [lazy, slothful], but imitate those who through faith and patience inherit the promises.”

God made a promise to Abraham (v. 13). Abraham patiently endured and obtained the promise (v. 15). The point he is stressing is endurance because there were people who had been around a long time that had gotten tired and were letting down. Various ideas were creeping in. There were various heretical movements around the periphery of the Church. Some of these people were being a little bit affected by certain things. Paul is saying, “As much as you have done and as far as you have gone, you can’t afford to let it slip now. Don’t be lazy. Hold fast. Remember God makes a promise. It doesn’t come instantly. Remember how long Abraham had to wait. God promised him a son. In fact, God promised to make his descendants like sand of the seashore, and Abraham had to wait twenty-five years for one son. He had to patiently endure. So, if you have to wait for a while, what’s the big deal? Haven’t all of God’s people had to wait?”

Hebrews 7:21, he then goes on into more depth on Melchizedek and shows how Christ is a priest after the order of Melchizedek.

Hebrews 7:24-28, “But He, because He continues forever, has an unchangeable priesthood. Therefore He is also able to save to the uttermost those who come to God through Him, since He ever lives to make intercession for them. For such a High Priest was fitting for us, who is holy, harmless, undefiled, separate from sinners, and has become higher than the heavens; who does not need daily, as those high priests, to offer up sacrifices, first for His own sins and then for the people’s, for this He did once for all when He offered up Himself. For the law appoints as high priests men who have weakness, but the word of the oath, which came after the law, appoints the Son who has been perfected forever.”

Hebrew 8:1, “Now this is the main point of the things we are saying: We have such a High Priest, who is seated at the right hand of the throne of the Majesty in the heavens.” Then he goes through and explains the spiritual significance of the sanctuary, how it was patterned after heavenly things, that Christ has a more excellent ministry, He is the Mediator of a better covenant, established on better promises (vv. 2-6).

There was a fault with the first covenant; the fault was with the people.

Verses 8-10, “Because finding fault with them, He says: ‘Behold, the days are coming, says the Lord, when I will make a new covenant with the house of Israel and with the house of Judah—not according to the covenant that I made with their fathers in the day when I took them by the hand to lead them out of the land of Egypt; because they did not continue in My covenant, and I disregarded them, says the Lord. For this is the covenant that I will make with the house of Israel after those days, says the Lord: I will put My laws in their mind and write them on their hearts; and I will be their God, and they shall be My people.”

God is in the process of doing that right now. When God began giving His Spirit on the Day of Pentecost, He began the process of making the New Covenant. That process won't be completed until we are born into the Kingdom of God at the resurrection. But it is in the process of being done. God, through His Spirit, is changing and transforming us in the way we think. This is the New Covenant.

Hebrews 9 explains a great deal about the spiritual significance of the covenant and the fact of sacrifices.

Hebrews 9:28, “so Christ was offered once to bear the sins of many...”

Hebrews 10:1, “For the law, having a shadow of the good things to come, and not the very image of the things, can never with these same sacrifices, which they offer continually year by year, make those who approach perfect.” The ceremonies and rituals of the law simply foreshadowed the reality, the substance of Christ. It was a reminder. That's why it was called a “schoolmaster to bring us to Christ” (KJV, Galatians 3:24).

This is ultimately the covenant that God says He is going to make.

Hebrews 10:16-19, “‘This is the covenant that I will make with them after those days,’ says the Lord: ‘I will put My laws into their hearts, and in their minds I will write them,’ then He adds, ‘Their sins and their lawless deeds I will remember no more.’ Now where there is remission of these, there is no longer an offering for sin. Therefore, brethren, having boldness to enter the Holiest by the blood of Jesus.” We have access through Christ to come right in to the Father.

Verses 22-27, “let us draw near with a true heart in full assurance of faith, having our hearts sprinkled from an evil conscience and our bodies washed with pure water. Let us hold fast the confession of our hope without wavering, for He who promised is faithful. And let us consider one another in order to stir up love and good works, not forsaking the assembling of ourselves together, as is the manner of some, but exhorting one another, and so much the more as you see the Day approaching. For if we sin willfully after we have received the knowledge of the truth, there no longer remains a sacrifice for sins, but a certain fearful expectation of judgment, and fiery indignation which will devour the adversaries.”

He is warning to be faithful and zealous, of the danger of drifting into willful sin and the consequences of turning our back on God's calling once we have known and understood.

Verses 31-32, “It is a fearful thing to fall into the hands of the living God. But recall the former days in which, after you were illuminated, you endured a great struggle with sufferings.” He tells you to remember back when you first learned the truth. Remember the things that happened, the things you went through and the problems you faced. Remember the things that happened and all the things you went through.

Verses 34-38, “for you had compassion on me in my chains, and joyfully accepted the plundering of your goods, knowing that you have a better and an enduring possession for yourselves in heaven. Therefore do not cast away your confidence, which has great reward. For you have need of endurance, so that after you have done the will of God, you may receive the promise: For yet a little while, and He who is coming will come and will not tarry. Now the just shall live by faith; but if anyone draws back, My soul has no pleasure in him.”

He goes on and explains what faith is.

Hebrews 11:1, “Now faith is the substance of things hoped for, the evidence of things not seen.” Then he shows how all the men and women of God have gone through and endured, faced all the things they had and “hung in there” through faith.

Hebrews 12:1-3, “Therefore we also, since we are surrounded by so great a cloud of witnesses [all the men and women of faith in Hebrews 11], let us lay aside every weight [things that weigh us down, discourage and beset us], and the sin which so easily ensnares us, and let us run with endurance the race that is set before us, looking unto Jesus, the author and finisher of our faith, who for the joy that was set before Him endured the cross, despising the shame, and has sat down at the right hand of the throne of God. For consider Him who endured such hostility from sinners against Himself, lest you become weary and discouraged in your souls.” Consider what He went through.

Verse 4, “You have not yet resisted to bloodshed, striving against sin.” Christ, that final night, prayed so intently that He sweat great drops of blood (Luke 22:44). None of us have done that.

Verses 5-6, “And you have forgotten the exhortation which speaks to you as to sons: ‘My son, do not despise the chastening of the Lord, nor be discouraged when you are rebuked by Him; for whom the Lord loves He chastens, and scourges every son whom He receives.”

Verses 7-11, God deals with us for our benefit. We are warned and exhorted in Chapter 12. We see that Paul places great emphasis to stir up and exhort the people.

He concludes in Hebrews 13 with a reminder to the people as to what to do. They are to look to God. They are not to be covetous, recognizing that God will never leave us nor forsake us (v. 5).

Hebrews 13:6-7, “So we may boldly say: ‘The Lord is my helper, I will not fear. What can man do to me?’ Remember those who rule over you, who have spoken the word of God to you, whose faith follow, considering the outcome of their conduct.” He refers to the leadership of the Church.

He brings out in v. 17, “Obey those who rule over you, and be submissive, for they watch out for your souls, as those who must give account. Let them do so with joy and not with grief, for that would be unprofitable for you.”

There is ultimately an accountability that the ministry has. That’s why there is a certain government in the Church. There is a responsibility that the ministry has of teaching God’s people and teaching God’s truth. God is going to hold us accountable for what we do and for being faithful. He emphasizes these things.

There’s a tremendous amount that is packed into the book of Hebrews, a tremendous overview of God’s great plan and purpose. There is a primary emphasis on the role of Jesus Christ, His role as our High Priest, our Mediator, and the role of the priesthood. The transition is explained to people who are going to be going through and experiencing that transition.

He even makes the point in Hebrews 13:14, “For here we have no continuing city, but we seek the one to come.” Jerusalem was going to cease to be the center point of the Church within a few years after he wrote this. You have to realize to what extent this was going to come as a shock to a lot of people. Things had been a certain way all their life. They had been in the Church for years. These things in terms of Jerusalem—the temple, the priesthood—all these things had been functioning for centuries before they ever came on the scene. Yet prophetically there were things that were going to be swept away. They needed to understand the transition.

There was going to be great change as the outward manifestation and functioning of the Old Covenant was swept away. It ceased. God’s people needed to understand how that fit in with Scripture and the fact that it was not permanent. It was a shadow of things to come. It was simply something that foreshadowed the reality and the substance of what Jesus Christ did. There remains a priesthood and that is Jesus Christ. He is our priesthood. There is one Mediator between God and man and that is Jesus Christ. That’s the role of the priesthood.

In the Catholic Church, the priest is the mediator between God and man. That’s where the doctrine of transubstantiation comes in. According to Catholic doctrine, the priest literally transforms the host (round wafer bread) into the reality of the body of Christ; you are literally partaking of the body of Christ. They claim there is a literal transformation that takes place. There is a “miracle” that takes place and that is the basis of your being able to commune with God in communion. They claim the basis of your fellowship with God is that you have to partake of this host that has been magically transformed into the body of Christ by the priest exercising his power. So, the priest becomes the mediator between God and man. You have to go to him and confess your sins. He has to remit those sins and has to give you of the consecrated host for you to have communion with God. You don’t have access to God unless you go through him because that’s the function of a priest.

We have a priest in the Church, but it’s not me or any leader at headquarters, etc. It’s Christ. He’s alive. We go to God through Him. God’s ministry is just that. It’s a ministry. They are servants. That’s what “minister” means—servants of God, of Jesus Christ and of God’s people. They may function in the role of elders, counselors, advisors, pastors, shepherds, bishops or overseers. They ultimately function in the role of ministers as servants, but they are not priests. They are not mediators between God and man. They are not intercessors through whom you have to go when we are to have access to God.

We have a Priest, a Mediator, Jesus Christ. Paul expounded and explained that. You see the balance here. On the one hand, he expounds the role of Jesus Christ, the role of the priesthood, the things of transition, as well as an exhortation to people who were tired and for whom the tendency was to let down and to feel like they lost that “spark.” We have to be on guard against that. The longer we have been around, the easier it can happen to us. If we are not careful, we can take it for granted and sort of lose the “sparkle” and the newness. This is what was on the verge of happening to this first era of God's Church.

Paul wrote this letter as an exhortation to those people. This letter is very important and is preserved for us.

We will conclude our Bible study in Hebrews. Next Bible study we will be going through the books of I Timothy and Titus.

Life and Letters of Paul Series—I Timothy and Titus

We are getting into the books of I Timothy and Titus this evening. We are going through the Life and Letters of the Apostle Paul. We have been focusing in on the period when he was in prison and the letters that he wrote from prison.

The book of Acts ends abruptly. At the end of Acts we will note, Acts 28:30-31, “Then Paul dwelt two whole years in his own rented house, and received all who came to him, preaching the kingdom of God and teaching the things which concern the Lord Jesus Christ with all confidence, no one forbidding him.”

Paul was under arrest. He was confined. Indications are he was actually chained to a Roman soldier. But he was allowed to dwell in a residence, a rented house, and be under house arrest. He was not allowed to go out and travel, but he could receive visitors.

We will focus in on the abrupt ending of Acts. Virtually all the books of the New Testament end with “Amen.” This is not the end of Paul’s life. This is a period that everything sort of drops out of sight. There are reasons for that. Evidently, Paul was released from prison at the end of this time. He was released from prison in Rome in the spring of 61 A.D. He had spent two full years there.

While there, his influence had extended even to the Praetorian Guard and its commander Burrus. The Praetorian Guard was the palace guard of the emperor Nero. It was a very powerful force. It was so powerful that, in many cases, it raised up and deposed emperors. The Praetorian Prefect, the man who was the commander of the guard, was a man by the name of Burrus. He was very, very powerful in terms of influence in Rome and held not only the supreme military and judicial authority but also even legislative power and control of the finances for the province. He was a very powerful man. The Praetorian Guard had a great deal of influence.

Burrus, together with the Roman philosopher Seneca, held great influence over Nero. Burrus died in 62 A.D. Once Burrus died (there are indications that he may have been the victim of a poison plot by Nero’s wife) and was out of the way, Seneca, by himself, was no longer able to be a restraining influence on Nero. Things really went from bad to worse as far as persecution for the Christians.

It is significant to understand what happened because in the aftermath of some of this, we have the account of Rome burning. Nero was implicated as perhaps being responsible for having originally set the fire. He’s famous for “having fiddled while Rome burned.” He considered himself a great artist. He was putting on a concert and didn’t want to be interrupted. He got quite a bit of bad publicity out of it, particularly when rumors got around that Nero may have even been responsible for starting the fire. He wanted the opportunity to rebuild great sections of Rome and to sort of glorify himself as the great builder and artist that he considered himself to be.

So what does a politician do when he gets in trouble? He immediately tries to shift the blame to somebody else. And the best thing to do is to figure out some unpopular group and blame them. You want to pick a group that is well enough known, that everybody knows who they are, but few enough in numbers that it’s not going to impact most people. Previously, Nero and other Roman emperors had “picked on” the Jews. They were good ones to “pick on.” Most people didn’t like the Jews.

We read earlier in the book of Acts of a time when his predecessor had expelled all the Jews from Rome. Generally, if the Roman emperors got “hard up” for money, they would come up with some pretext, cast out the Jews and confiscate their property. That would sort of alleviate the “cash crunch.” The “rub” on that—this time around with the fire—was that Nero’s mistress was a Jew. So, she exercised a little influence on him in terms of not blaming the Jews this time. Well, Burrus (who was the Praetorian Prefect) and Seneca had a great deal of influence on Nero and they had been favorable toward the Apostle Paul. Paul had influence that had gone all the way up that high.

Philippians 1:13, “so that it has become evident to the whole palace guard, and to all the rest, that my chains are in Christ.” This is one of the prison epistles. He is writing from Rome. The term “Palace” in the Greek is “Praetorium,” “the court of the Praetorium Guard.” He was well known in the Praetorium, in the area where all this was going on.

Philippians 4:22, “All the saints greet you, but especially those who are of Caesar’s household.” At the time Paul was writing the letters that we’ve been reading, he was in his Roman imprisonment. Paul had influence that went all the way to the top of the Roman government. There were converts right there in the palace.

Paul dwelt two whole years in his own hired house. Nobody appeared and accused him. Roman law was that if two years went by and there wasn't a formal accusation brought and you hadn't been brought to trial, charges were dismissed. So, at the end of two years, charges would have been dismissed against Paul because there wasn't any real basis in Roman law to hold him. We have the book of Acts ending abruptly at the time of Paul's release.

What happened following his release in 61 A.D.? We are told in the book of Romans where Paul had intended to go when he wrote to the Church at Rome. He had written this prior to coming to Rome as a prisoner. That wasn't originally the way he had intended to come, but that was the way it had worked out.

Romans 15:28, "Therefore, when I have performed this and have sealed to them this fruit, I shall go by way of you to Spain." Paul told the Church in Rome that his plans were to come through Rome and to go from there on to Spain. Now, when the book of Acts ends, he is in Rome. He had spent two years there.

Every indication is that he traveled on to Spain from Rome. There are plenty of secular historical accounts that show that he went on to the island of Britain, which was a part of the Roman Empire at that time. He returned to the area of the Middle East, perhaps around 63 A.D. or 64 A.D. He came back to the area around Ephesus in Asia Minor and then went on into the area of Macedonia, which is northern Greece. When he left Ephesus, we have a gap of about three years.

Paul left Rome. His imprisonment was over. No accusers showed up, charges were dismissed and he left Rome. Within a matter of a few months, his protector at Rome, Burrus, the Praetorian Prefect, was dead. Seneca, the Roman philosopher, was out of business. He had lost his "hold" when he didn't have someone there to sort of support and back him up.

At that point, intense governmental persecution from the Roman government against the Christians began. You have to realize, prior to that time, persecution against the Christians had primarily been on a local level and had generally been stirred up by the Jews. At this point, after the death of Burrus, the official government persecution of Christians began in Rome. They became the new scapegoats. If Paul had not left when he did, he would have never left. He would have been executed. That was the tenor of things within six months after his departure.

But the situation was that he did leave. He went to Spain, left Spain and went up to Britain, left there and came back into the Middle Eastern area. It's possible that he went to Antioch, but we don't have any direct reference of that. We know that he went to Ephesus and stayed there for a period of months. He left Ephesus, sailed across that little narrow stretch of water over into Macedonia in northern Greece.

When he left Ephesus, he left Timothy in charge. Timothy was a young evangelist by this time, perhaps in his thirties. Paul went on to Macedonia.

Paul then writes this letter of I Timothy to Timothy from Macedonia. It was written before Paul's second Roman imprisonment. Paul was arrested again in Macedonia and transported to Rome. He was probably arrested in about 64 A.D. I Timothy was written a short time prior to that while he was in Macedonia.

The main purpose of this book is to give Timothy instructions in his ministerial duties regarding ordinations, the administration of Church funds (such as the third tithe fund), dealing with heresy and related Church problems. Timothy was a young evangelist that was now in a situation where he was on his own. Paul probably realized that the circumstances were such that it was very likely that he might find himself under arrest. He knew that if he ever went back to Rome again, unless God just supernaturally intervened, he would never come out alive. Undoubtedly, at this point, Paul felt the need to put some things in writing that would give instruction to Timothy that Paul, on his own, may have done under other circumstances, but now he writes it. He gives us a written record. We are going to focus on some of that.

Titus was written at about the same time. It was written to Titus who was in charge of the work in Crete. Crete was a little island down in the Mediterranean, a little ways down from where Paul and Timothy were. We will notice that the subject matter to Titus is similar to I Timothy, but there were some different statements. These letters were, basically, instructions to the ministry. Paul wrote them at a time prior to his final imprisonment.

I Timothy 1:1-4, "Paul, an apostle of Jesus Christ, by the commandment of God our Savior and the Lord Jesus Christ, our hope, to Timothy, my own son in the faith: Grace, mercy, and peace from God our Father and Jesus Christ our Lord. As I urged you when I went into Macedonia—remain in Ephesus that you may charge some that they teach no other doctrine, nor give heed to fables and endless genealogies, which cause disputes rather than godly edification which is in faith.”

We are told right here where Timothy was; he was in Ephesus. That’s where Paul told him to stay. When he left and went on into Macedonia, Paul told him to stay in Ephesus. Very likely the scenario was that Paul returned from Britain, sailed across the Mediterranean and landed in Antioch, which had been his headquarters, his “jumping-off” point for previous journeys. Then he left to come back to Ephesus. It’s possible that the situation in Antioch was such that he went directly to Ephesus.

There is one thing to realize about Ephesus. In the latter period of the New Testament time, Ephesus became more and more the focal point, and was really the headquarters of the New Testament Church. Right around this time (64 A.D.), after James was executed in Jerusalem, it really stirred things up. By 69 A.D., the Christians had fled Jerusalem, and by 70 A.D. Jerusalem was destroyed. This really marked a major cutoff.

Ephesus was a Church Paul had raised up. It was a Church that he left Timothy in charge of.

In the last period of the first century, we find that the Apostle John lived in Ephesus. He died and was buried in Ephesus. He wrote letters to the Church, which was addressed in the book of Revelation and other places.

The interesting thing is that in the second and third century, where do we find the Passover and Days of Unleavened Bread being kept? We find them being kept in Ephesus, which was primarily a Gentile Church. The remarkable thing is—the people who think that Christ and the apostles did away with the Sabbath and holy days—why do we find the Ephesus Church keeping the Sabbath and holy days?

The Ephesus Church was a Church that Paul raised up and personally taught and pastored, a Church that Timothy was left in charge of, a Church where the Apostle John spent his last years all the way to the very end of the 90s. Why do we find that Church and the area around there as the ones who were keeping the Passover, observing God’s festivals and Sabbath? —Because they were doing what John, Timothy and Paul had done. There is a very clear record of history in the area. Ephesus had major import. It is used in the book of Revelation, figuratively, to symbolize the first stage or era of God’s Church. And interestingly enough, in the period of that era or first phase, the Church was headquartered in Ephesus. We see that it was the residence of the last apostle, John.

Timothy is there and is being instructed.

Verse 5, “Now the purpose [KJV, “end”] of the commandment is love from a pure heart, from a good conscience, and from sincere faith.” Some completely misunderstand that and say the commandments are done away—that they are ended and all you have to do is have love. That’s not what this verse says at all. The sense of “the end of the commandment” is “the end result.” You can look it up in any of the commentaries or books that bring it out. One of the commentaries renders it “the goal, the true end to be reached.” The goal of the commandment is love out of a pure heart. What is the end result? What is the purpose? What is the end focus? Where does the commandment lead? Where does God’s law lead? God’s law leads to “love from a pure heart, from a good conscience and from sincere faith.” In other words, you are doing what you should do. You are not a put-on or pretending. You really mean it. God’s law reflects itself because what is the love of God?

I John 5:3, “This is the love of God that we keep His commandments. And His commandments are not burdensome [KJV, “grievous”].” God’s law and God’s love go hand-in-hand together. When lawlessness and a disregard and disrespect for law grow, love grows cold.

I Timothy 1:6-7, Paul talks about certain individuals who desire to be teachers of the law who didn’t understand what they said or what they were teaching.

I Timothy 1:8, “But we know that the law is good if one uses it lawfully.” What was the law made for? It was made to define right from wrong. It was made for those who are breaking the law.

Verses 9-10, “knowing this: that the law is not made for a righteous person, but for the lawless and insubordinate, for the ungodly and for sinners, for the unholy and profane, for murderers of fathers and murderers of mothers, for manslayers, for fornicators, for sodomites, for kidnappers, for liars, for perjurers, and if there is any other thing that is contrary to sound doctrine.”

The whole point of the law is to define what is right from wrong. These are the things that the law is focused on.

Verses 15-17, “This is a faithful saying and worthy of all acceptance, that Christ came into the world to save sinners, of whom I am chief. However, for this reason I obtained mercy, that in me first Jesus Christ might show all longsuffering, as a pattern to those who are going to believe on Him for everlasting life. Now to the King eternal, immortal, invisible, to God who alone is wise, be honor and glory forever and ever. Amen.”

Notice the word “immortal” is used referring to God. You can look through the Bible from Genesis to Revelation and you will never find the phrase “immortal soul.” The words “immortal soul” are not anywhere in the Bible. You find “immortal” and “immortality” only mentioned a few times. We are told that God is immortal. We are told in terms of immortality that God only has immortality (I Timothy 6:16). We are told that we will put on immortality at the resurrection (I Corinthians 15:53-54). God is the source of immortality. God is immortal. We’re not; we are mortal. We are doomed to death. It is only through Jesus Christ and God’s promises that we can receive immortality.

I Timothy 1:18, “This charge I commit to you, son Timothy, according to the prophecies previously made concerning you, that by them you may wage the good warfare.” Paul uses the metaphor of the Christian life being like warfare. He told Timothy to fight a good fight.

Verse 19, “having faith and a good conscience, which some having rejected, concerning the faith have suffered shipwreck.”

I Timothy 2:1-2, “Therefore I exhort first of all that supplications, prayers, intercessions, and giving of thanks be made for all men, for kings and all who are in authority, that we may lead a quiet and peaceable life in all godliness and reverence.” Paul said to pray for the leadership, the rulers, for those in authority. What was it they were praying? Well, the primary thing Paul told Timothy was to pray for the leadership, the leaders. Pray that they will leave us alone. Pray that we can live a quiet and peaceable life and pray that God will deliver us from persecution.

Verses 3-4, “For this is good and acceptable in the sight of God our Savior, who desires all men to be saved and to come to the knowledge of the truth.”

This certainly proves that God has not ordained or predestined some to be lost. There are some who totally misunderstand what predestination is all about. They claim God has predestined some to be saved and some to be lost. They read about predestination. They assume that since you have an immortal soul, when you die you have to go to either heaven or hell and if God predestined anything, then He predestined some to be saved and others are to be lost. That’s not true.

Predestination only has to do with when God chooses to call. Some are called as the firstfruits; some are called later. But God’s will and purpose is to have all men to be saved. That’s God’s desire, but each in his own time. God’s purpose and God’s desire is to have all come to a knowledge of the truth.

Verses 5-6, “For there is one God and one Mediator between God and men, the Man Christ Jesus, who gave Himself a ransom for all, to be testified in due time.” There is one Mediator, one go-between. That’s what a Mediator is.

In some cases, when you have a labor strike, they bring in a federal mediator. He sits down and talks with management for a little while and then goes and talks with labor. He mediates the strike and tries to work it out. A mediator is a go-between.

There’s one Mediator between God and man. There’s one go-between the Father and us. That’s Jesus Christ. It didn’t say there are two, Christ and Mary. It didn’t say one mediatrix. It didn’t say there are many saints that also do a little mediating on the side. Let’s face it, if you pray to somebody else—if you pray to Mary or one of the saints—you are in effect looking to some other mediator. You are asking somebody to go to God on your behalf. We are told right here there is only one mediator.

There are two problems with praying to Mary or the saints. First is the fact that they are dead and in their graves and are not hearing your prayers because Ecclesiastes 9:5 tells us the dead know nothing. It’s not doing any good from that standpoint. Second, we are told right here that there is only one Mediator, Jesus Christ.

Verse 8, “Therefore I desire that the men everywhere, lifting up holy hands...” What does it mean to “lift up holy hands”? What do you do the things you do with? Good or bad, you do it with your hands. You work with your hands; you play with your hands. All the things you do, you use your hands. That is the symbol of action. The things we do, we do with our hands.

If we’re going to pray to God and, in effect, lift up our hands to God, they need to be holy hands. They shouldn’t be hands that are dirtied by practicing sin. I can’t be out doing a lot of things I shouldn’t do and think that I can go to God and that’s okay. I can’t be living a lie. Paul says, ‘I want men everywhere to pray, lifting up holy hands—hands that are not dirtied and sullied by the practice of living in sin.’

Continuing in v. 8, “...without wrath and doubting.” In other words, we are supposed to be what we say we are. We go to God as His children. We are trying to practice His way of life. We are not trying to practice all the things the world does.

Verse 9, “in like manner also [referring to what he had mentioned earlier], that the women adorn themselves in modest apparel, with propriety and moderation [KJV, “shamefacedness” and “sobriety”]....” The word “shamefacedness” is sort of a funny word. It’s not a term that we use in modern English and gives sort of an unfortunate connotation because when people read that, they think in terms of being ashamed. That’s not what the word means.

It is a term that’s very difficult to translate into English with one word. It has to do with a sense of modesty, an inner attitude that is displayed outwardly and, in many ways, even by the way we look. We reflect our attitudes and our feelings by the look on our face. We can display many different things. It is not talking about being ashamed of yourself, hiding your face behind a veil like some of the Moslems do and only their eyes peeping out. That’s not what it is talking about. It is an inner attitude of modesty and respect for God. It is an attitude of humility, a demeanor and a way of carrying ourselves that shows out in the expression in our face.

If you look at someone, you look him in the face. Basically, where do you look? You look at the eyes and the mouth. Those are basically the areas that display the inner person, and you can tell a lot about somebody. If you notice, sometimes a person may put a smile on their face. They say something, and you look at their eyes. They may be smiling with their mouth but not with their eyes. You know something is wrong. The inner person, the inside of us shows out. Our face is the expressive part of our body. You don’t look at somebody’s elbows. You don’t show expression with your elbows. You can be in a good or bad attitude and your elbows look the same, but your face doesn’t. The sense of it is a word that just means an outward manifestation of an inner attitude, an inner attitude of modesty. What it details here is the concept that God values—women adorning themselves in modest apparel and show from their faces a spirit of modesty.

Verse 9, “...not with braided hair or gold or pearls or costly clothing.” If you read some of the Bible helps, they describe some of these big elaborate gaudy sorts of styles, faddish-type styles that were done. Basically, what it is talking about is a Christian woman is not trying to call undue attention to herself. She’s not trying to copy the haughty demeanor of a model off the cover of Vogue or Glamour or something. You wouldn’t read v. 9 and really apply it to some of those. There’s an attitude that just sort of shows forth in everything, even from the way they carry themselves. It says here that there is a set of values that, in God’s sight, is of great price—a set of values that God thinks is valuable, but the world does not consider valuable.

Various churches are getting into the subject of ordaining women. There is even a controversy in the Catholic Church of why can’t women be priests? The Episcopal and Methodist Churches have ordained some women priests. Various ones have and various ones haven’t. I attended a funeral a few months ago (because of some Church members) which was conducted by a woman Episcopal priest. They didn’t get this out of the Bible. They think Paul is old fashioned. What they didn’t know is that Paul really didn’t originate all of this. God did.

Verses 11-12, “Let a woman learn in silence with all submission. And I do not permit a woman to teach or to have authority over a man, but to be in silence.”

Verse 14, “And Adam was not deceived, but the woman being deceived, fell into transgression.” Eve was conned by Satan. Adam really wasn’t deceived on it. He was just weak-willed and went along with what she wanted to do.

Verse 15, “Nevertheless she will be saved in childbearing if they continue in faith, love, and holiness, with self-control [KJV, “sobriety”].” The point is that a woman does not have to occupy man’s responsibilities in the Church in order to have just as high a salvation and just as high a reward in the Kingdom as a man. It’s not that men get to do all these things and women don’t, so how can they have any reward in the Kingdom?

If we carry out the responsibilities that we have, in whatever sphere of life we are, God is pleased with that. God is pleased to see us do what we can do and the best we can do to put His principles into action, to live His way of life in whatever our sphere or whatever area of life represents our calling. It does not have to be a matter of everybody doing the same thing or occupying the same office or position in order to achieve anything of value or worth. That’s not true.

I Timothy 3:1-7, Paul discusses the issue of ordinations. He talks about ordaining a bishop or elder—an overseer.

Verse 15, “but if I am delayed, I write so that you may know how you ought to conduct yourself in the house of God, which is the church of the living God, the pillar and ground of the truth.” Paul didn’t know how long he was going to be tied up. Timothy was being left to take responsibility, and he said, ‘I am leaving you these instructions so that you will know how to carry it out and how to go about doing it.’ He enumerates qualifications for an elder.

Verse 2, “A bishop then must be blameless, the husband of one wife, temperate, sober-minded, of good behavior, hospitable, able to teach.” Many of these qualifications are also quoted to apply to a deacon, except this term “able to teach.” The primary responsibilities of an elder are in the area of teaching God’s people. This may be in counseling, in one-on-one situations, in teaching situations or it may be preaching. All elders don’t necessarily have to be able to preach, but they do have to be able to teach—and there is a difference. Some elders are able to do both. Some are very effective in terms of teaching and counseling in one-on-one situations and small group circumstances; yet they would not be nearly as effective, perhaps, in preaching to a large group. But there is that ability to teach, to convey and explain God’s principles.

Verse 3, he describes personal characteristics.

Verses 4-5 talk about being able to properly administer our own household, realizing that’s a pretty good indication of what we are going to do with the Church. The way we rule our home is a pretty good indication of how we are going to rule in the Church.

In v. 8, we focus on the deacons. They also must have high spiritual qualifications. It is a physical office that requires spiritual qualifications.

Verse 10, “But let these also first be proved; then let them serve as deacons, being found blameless.” They are to be proved. They have to have been serving and practicing these things.

Verse 11, “Likewise their wives....” The word literally is “the women.” It’s not a reference to deacon’s wives because there isn’t any reference to the wives of elders. You wouldn’t have separate qualifications for the wives of deacons and not any qualifications for the wives of elders. Rather, it is talking about the qualifications of special service for the women. This, as even the commentaries bring out, must be a deaconess, not wives of deacons. It is from this basis that the Church has understood for many, many years that there is an ordained office that can be and is utilized and set apart that women can have. It is not an office of public instruction and teaching in the Church in terms of men and women, but it is an office of service.

Then, v. 12, we are instructed once again about the deacons and their example in their own family.

I Timothy 4:1-3, “Now the Spirit expressly says that in latter times some will depart from the faith, giving heed to deceiving spirits and doctrines of demons, speaking lies in hypocrisy, having their own conscience seared with a hot iron, forbidding to marry, and commanding to abstain from foods which God created to be received with thanksgiving by those who believe and know the truth.”

There are a couple of applications of this. This prophesied of what became of the Catholic Church. What two things did the Catholic Church introduce early on? The doctrine of priestly celibacy (forbidding to marry) and the abstinence from meats on Fridays and the Lenten season. In many of the Monastic orders, there were vows that abstained from meat entirely—that sort of enforced vegetarianism. They are labeled as doctrines of demons.

God created certain meats to be eaten. Now what does it say? Some want to say this means you can eat pigs, oysters, shrimp and everything. They will quote part of a verse.

Verse 4, “For every creature of God is good, and nothing is to be refused....” Or, “Every creature of God is good and nothing to be refused if it be received with thanksgiving.” All you have to do is say the blessing and “dig in” to all the shrimp and catfish you can eat. That’s not what it says. You have to read the whole sentence. It says, “Every creature is good and nothing to be refused if it be received with thanksgiving, for...” the sentence continues, “...it is sanctified [set apart] by the word of God and prayer.” What meat is set apart by the word of God? –Read Leviticus 11 and Deuteronomy 13.

I Timothy 4:3, “...nothing to be refused if it is received with thanksgiving of those that believe and know the truth.” What is truth?

John 17:17, “...Thy word is truth.” If you know the truth—which means God’s word, the Bible—and you realize that everything God made is good (buzzards are good, pigs are good), everything is good. It is good for the reason it was made. Horses are good, cows are good, dogs and cats are good. But this still doesn’t mean I want to barbecue my cat when I go home this evening. He’s good. He serves a useful purpose. The horse is good, but that doesn’t mean I want to mount up my cow and go chase down my horse to slaughter it and stick it in the freezer.

God made horses to ride and cows to eat and to milk. He didn't do vice versa. It's not an accident that we don't ride the cows in order to herd up the horses. We ride the horses to herd up the cows.

God made certain things for certain purposes. Certain creatures were created as the garbage collectors. The buzzards serve a useful function, but that doesn't mean I want to eat one for Sunday dinner. Fried buzzard! Every creature is good for the purpose for which it was created. It's all good, but it's not all good for the same thing.

I Timothy 4:5, the key is if it is sanctified by the Word of God, set apart and made holy by the Word of God and prayer. It takes both. When you put the whole thing together it becomes clear.

Verses 6-8, "If you instruct the brethren in these things, you will be a good minister of Jesus Christ, nourished in the words of faith and of the good doctrine which you have carefully followed. But reject profane and old wives' fables, and exercise yourself rather to godliness. For bodily exercise profits a little, but godliness is profitable for all things, having promise of the life that now is and of that which is to come."

He uses an example. Bodily exercise is good for you temporarily. It's good for a short time and for the short term, but godliness is profitable forever.

Verse 12, "Let no one despise your youth, but be an example to the believers in word, in conduct, in love, in spirit, in faith, in purity." Set an example. You are young, but don't conduct yourself in a way that causes others to look down on you.

Verse 14, "Do not neglect the gift that is in you, which was given to you by prophecy with the laying on of the hands of the presbytery." This is speaking of that extra measure of God's Spirit given in ordinations.

He instructs Timothy in terms of dealing with members in the Church.

I Timothy 5:1, "Do not rebuke an older man, but exhort him as a father, the younger men as brothers." He explains the way you deal with people. He told Timothy, 'For those who are older, deal with them with respect. Show them the kind of respect you would to your own father. Deal with the younger men in a little different way, more on a peer level as brothers.'

Verse 2, "the older women as mothers, the younger as sisters, with all purity." He explains the way we deal with one another. Timothy was instructed in terms of appropriate conduct, ways of handling things and showing proper respect.

Verses 3-4, "Honor widows who are really widows. But if any widow has children or grandchildren, let them first learn to show piety at home and to repay their parents; for this is good and acceptable before God." He is talking about the fact that widows who are really needy are to be helped by the Church. But if a widow has children and grandchildren, it would be a good idea for them to give a little help. That's the starting point. Widows who are widows indeed, who are desolate, who don't have any other means of support are to be helped by the Church.

We are told in v. 8, "But if anyone does not provide for his own, and especially for those of his household, he has denied the faith and is worse than an unbeliever." He is speaking of the responsibility we have. We are not to be negligent and careless in providing for our own. We have a responsibility. This, obviously, is not meant to make reference to those who are injured or incapacitated in some way or physically unable to go out and do what they normally would. It has to do with people who are irresponsible, people who don't take their responsibility seriously to take care of their family. And, certainly, that carries on over into elderly parents and things of that sort.

Verses 9-12, "Do not let a widow under sixty years old be taken into the number, and not unless she has been the wife of one man, well reported for good works: if she has brought up children, if she has lodged strangers, if she has washed the saints' feet, if she has relieved the afflicted, if she has diligently followed every good work. But refuse the younger widows; for when they have begun to grow wanton against Christ, they desire to marry, having condemnation because they have cast off their first faith."

There's a special enrollment of widows in some sort of service in the Church and, perhaps in this particular case, for Timothy and some of the other ministers. There's an indication that Timothy was not married at this time. Paul made reference that the widows involved in this specific enrollment should be age sixty and above, primarily so that there would be no taint of scandal involved.

This probably had to do with some matters of personal service. Maybe some who were receiving livelihood from the Church were helping out with cooking, housekeeping and things and matters of this sort. They were able to render service to Timothy and to some of the other ministers who perhaps did not have their own wives or some ministers who were traveling. This would be the case. They were traveling on a circuit. You couldn't just pop into a restaurant and buy something. There was a lot of preparation involved in food. There were some widows who had a chance to serve because of specific opportunities and needs.

Paul gave Timothy instruction. He said, 'Be careful with it. You don't want to get some of the younger ones involved. It can look bad. It can give a wrong connotation.'

Verse 14, his desire was that the younger women think in terms of marrying, having children and learning to guide their own household. Learning to be responsible in that way was something they should do, rather than thinking that this special service in the Church was something they should do.

Verse 16, "If any believing man or woman has widows, let them relieve them, and do not let the church be burdened, that it may relieve those who are really widows." He said there are those that are dependent on the Church, and Church funds should be used to relieve them. Those who have family members who can take care of them—charity begins at home—let the family do some things so that the Church's funds aren't used up for those who have other means of support. The Church can concentrate its efforts on those who are totally dependent upon it. This is clearly a reference to the third tithe fund providing for the widows.

Verse 17, "Let the elders who rule well be counted worthy of double honor, especially those who labor in the word and doctrine." The word "honor" that is used here is a word that really has to do with pay. In fact, some of the translations render it that way. The New English Bible renders it "stipend." It is a term that has to do with "the laborer is worthy of his hire."

Timothy was responsible for administering to a large area. There would have been many ministers under his jurisdiction. He would be responsible for setting salaries, for making decisions and determining the way in which some of these things were set. Paul gave him instructions. It was appropriate that Timothy not consider everybody under the employ would just automatically receive the same amount. Those who were doing an outstanding job, those who worked harder and did a lot more, it was not inappropriate that they receive more. Paul is instructing Timothy. He is a young man now on his own. Paul may not have much dealing with him in the future. Paul didn't know exactly what was going to happen, so he is giving him instructions as to how to administer the Church.

Verse 22, Paul admonished him, "Do not lay hands on anyone hastily, nor share in other people's sins; keep yourself pure." Don't jump in. Don't ordain someone too suddenly. Know what you are getting into.

Verse 24, "Some men's sins are clearly evident, preceding them to judgment, but those of some men follow later." He cautioned him not to be hasty in dealing with people.

In I Timothy 6, he continues and admonishes servants to show proper respect to those that they are under (vv. 1-2).

In vv. 6-12, he deals with the matter of materialism and what our priorities should be.

I Timothy 6:10, "For the love of money is a root of all kinds of evil..." He didn't say it was the only root.

You know what a root on a plant does. The root is the source of nourishment for the plant. Materialism, a preoccupation with money, has been a root that has fed just about every evil that you can think of. What is it that people have never done for money? People have murdered for money, stolen, lied, committed immorality, sold out on everything they believed and sold out friends, family and country. People have done just about anything you can think of for money. That's what he means when he says the love of money is a root of all evil. If somebody is preoccupied with money and their great goal in life is to get rich, this can be trouble. If you love money too much, it can lead you into just about anything that a person can ever do. So, he warned to have a balanced perspective.

We are told of God.

Verses 15-16, "...He who is the blessed and only Potentate, the King of kings and Lord of lords, who alone has immortality, dwelling in unapproachable light, whom no man has seen or can see, to whom be honor and everlasting power. Amen." Only God has immortality. You don't have immortality. How can people say we have an immortal soul? Here it says, speaking of God, only He has immortality. If you have an immortal soul, you have immortality, too. How did you get it? God is the only One who possesses immortality inherent within Himself. We will put on immortality at the resurrection.

Isn't that what we're told in I Corinthians 15:53, "This mortal must put on immortality." We don't have it on yet.

I Timothy 6:20, "O Timothy! Guard what was committed to your trust, avoiding the profane and vain babblings and contradictions of what is falsely called knowledge [KJV, “science falsely so called”]—” It sounds like they had evolution already stirred up back then. Is that “science falsely so called”? Actually the word “science” is a word that just means “knowledge.” Certainly it could apply to false knowledge in the sense of evolution, but it just has to do with knowledge. He told Timothy to hang on to the “trunk of the tree.” Avoid getting off on some of these tangents and some of what purports to be knowledge and really isn’t.

Now we are going to notice the book of Titus. It’s a little shorter than I Timothy. It deals with similar things and was written right around the same time.

Titus 1:1, “Paul, a servant of God...”

Verses 4-5, “To Titus, my true son in our common faith: Grace, mercy and peace from God the Father and the Lord Jesus Christ our Savior. For this reason I left you in Crete, that you should set in order the things that are lacking, and appoint elders in every city as I commanded you—”

Paul had left Titus in Crete. Crete is a little island down in the Mediterranean.

He left Timothy in Ephesus and he went over to Macedonia. Now Paul never came back to them. Paul was arrested in Macedonia and transported to Rome. He didn’t know, but perhaps God had given him a premonition that he was going to be arrested at this time. He wanted to give detailed instructions for these ministers he had left behind and left in charge. He gave these younger men, who had been under his direct supervision, a written letter to give them instructions as to how to carry out their job. And these instructions have been preserved as a part of the Bible. These are instructions to God’s ministry, all the way down through the centuries, as to how to carry out responsibilities.

He describes the elders who were to be ordained. Verse 6, “if a man is blameless, the husband of one wife, having faithful children not accused of dissipation or insubordination.” The terms “elder” and “bishop” are used interchangeably. Verse 5 says “elder”; v. 7 says “bishop.” The word “bishop” simply means an “overseer,” a spiritual overseer.

Verse 7, “For a bishop must be blameless, as a steward of God, not self-willed, not quick-tempered, not given to wine, not violent, not greedy for money.” A steward is someone who manages something in behalf of someone else. He is there as God’s manager.

Verses 8-11, “but hospitable, a lover of what is good, sober-minded, just, holy, self-controlled, holding fast the faithful word as he has been taught, that he may be able, by sound doctrine, both to exhort and convict those who contradict. For there are many insubordinate, both idle talkers and deceivers, especially those of the circumcision, whose mouths must be stopped, who subvert whole households, teaching things which they ought not, for the sake of dishonest gain.”

Verses 14-16, “not giving heed to Jewish fables and commandments of men who turn from the truth. To the pure all things are pure, but to those who are defiled and unbelieving nothing is pure; but even their mind and conscience are defiled. They profess to know God, but in works they deny Him, being abominable, disobedient, and disqualified for every good work.”

Titus 2:1, “But as for you, speak the things which are proper for sound doctrine.” How is sound doctrine described? Sound doctrine is described in the next few verses as the way we live. It relates to a way of life, not just to a list of abstract beliefs. Sound doctrine should be the way we live.

Verses 2-3, “that the older men be sober, reverent, temperate, sound in faith, in love, in patience; the older women likewise, that they be reverent in behavior, not slanderers, not given to much wine, teachers of good things—” We find a variety of things given here.

Verse 4, “that they admonish [KJV, “teach”] the young women to love their husbands, to love their children.” –To have a set of priorities. It’s not that women can never teach. Specifically here, older women were to teach younger women. Teaching does not have to be done merely in a formal classroom setting. Some of the most effective teaching is done by example and one-on-one situations.

Verse 5, “[teach them] to be discreet [which simply means to be decent, modest, to be using good judgment, to be chaste, to be pure and innocent], chaste, homemakers, good, obedient to their own husbands, that the word of God may not be blasphemed.”

Verses 6-7, “Likewise exhort the young men to be sober-minded [self-restrained], in all things showing yourself to be a pattern of good works; in doctrine showing integrity, reverence, incorruptibility.” It has to do with a way of life, a way of conducting ourselves, a way for men and women, young and old to conduct themselves and to set an example. These are things that lead to sound doctrine. This is what sound doctrine is all about—a way of living the Christian life, a set of priorities, and a set of values that is quite a bit in contrast to the values of the world.

Verses 9-10, “Exhort servants to be obedient to their own masters, to be well pleasing in all things, not answering back, not pilfering [stealing], but showing all good fidelity [honesty], that they may adorn the doctrine of God our Savior in all things.” In other words, it’s a matter that we should be faithful in carrying out the responsibilities that we have.

Verses 12-15, “teaching us that, denying ungodliness and worldly lusts, we should live soberly, righteously, and godly in the present age, looking for the blessed hope and glorious appearing of our great God and Savior Jesus Christ, who gave Himself for us, that He might redeem us from every lawless deed and purify for Himself His own special people, zealous for good works. Speak these things, exhort, and rebuke with all authority. Let no one despise you.”

We need to keep our eyes set on the reality of the Kingdom of God, but we need to be living our lives here and now in a responsible way. We need to live a life that denies ungodliness, denies worldly lusts and is a right example. We’re living our lives as Christ would live in us, with our focus, our attention, our hope set on the return of Jesus Christ and the establishment of God’s Kingdom. Jesus Christ gave Himself for us, to buy us back, to release us from all iniquity (lawlessness). That’s why Christ gave Himself for us, to bring us out of that. We are to be purified as a peculiar people, a special people. We are to be different from the world. We are to be zealous of good works. If there is nothing different between the world and us, then we are in trouble.

Titus 3:1, “Remind them to be subject to rulers and authorities, to obey, to be ready for every good work.” Show respect to the government.

Verse 2, “to speak evil of no one [don’t be out stirring things up], be peaceable, gentle, showing all humility to all men.” There was a time when we were involved in all kinds of thing, but our lives should be different after we have been called (vv. 3-4).

We’ve been called and set apart.

Verse 5-6, “not by works of righteousness which we have done, but according to His mercy He saved us, through the washing of regeneration and renewing of the Holy Spirit, whom He poured out on us abundantly through Jesus Christ our Savior.”

We’ve been baptized, and the Holy Spirit is the source of renewing and regenerating. There is a cleansing effect that is brought out and described here. It is a reference to the beginning of a new life. When it talks about “generate,” it has to do with starting. If something is generated, that means it’s begun or started. Generate used in the sense of life has to do with beginning a new life. “Regeneration” has to do with a beginning of a new life, but a second time. The physical life, that we now live, had a beginning. Life began in us when we were conceived. It had a generation. It was originally begun and it continues on to this day.

Paul is talking about another life that begins at the time of baptism—a new beginning spiritually. We have a new beginning when God places His Spirit within us. We are in the beginning of that now. We will completely put on the spiritual at the resurrection when this mortal will put on immortality. We will, at that point, be completely a part of the Kingdom of God and the Family of God forever. This began at baptism. It began with a washing, a renewing. It began what represented a spiritual new beginning.

Verse 7, “that having been justified by His grace we should become heirs according to the hope of eternal life.” We are not yet inheritors. We are heirs.

Verse 8, “This is a faithful saying, and these things I want you to affirm constantly, that those who have believed in God should be careful to maintain good works. These things are good and profitable to men.” What is the real sense of this? The expression is best rendered in the New English Bible, which is simply, “those who’ve come to believe in God should see that they engage in honorable occupations, which are not only honorable in themselves, but also useful to their fellow man.”

Again, it gets back to the way we live our life. Paul says, ‘This is something that is faithful and I want you to constantly affirm it.’ If we believe in God, we need to conduct ourselves properly. Those who come to believe in God should see that they engage in honorable occupations, which are not only honorable to themselves, but also useful to the community. A Christian needs to maintain good works by the way he conducts himself, even in his daily life and daily business. There are jobs a Christian simply shouldn’t have. For instance, I would have trouble reconciling this verse with getting a job as a blackjack dealer in Las Vegas. I would have trouble reconciling that with being in an occupation that was not honorable in itself and also not useful to my fellow man. In other words, what he is saying is a Christian needs to be a productive member of the community. He needs to do something that is of value. A lot of things can be of value. There's a place for many things, but I think it's something that we need to examine.

On this basis, for instance, we have counseled people who come into the Church from certain areas of the country (let's say Kentucky, Virginia, North Carolina) who are involved in tobacco farming. This is a verse that they need to consider. There are things on this basis that our members who have done that go into other kinds of farming; they farm something else, a different cash crop. As a Christian we need to be careful to maintain an honorable occupation, which is not honorable in itself, but is useful to our fellowman. There's some value to it. We want to examine the things that we do in this way. There's value to a wide variety of things, but there are some things that are very questionable and some things that are more than questionable.

Verse 10, "Reject a divisive man after the first and second admonition."

It continues and describes some detailed instructions.

Verse 14, "And let our people also learn to maintain good works, to meet urgent needs, that they may not be unfruitful." There is an emphasis here on being a productive person. God wants his people to be productive, to be useful, and to set an example in the community. This is important. The thing we come down to is—from a Christian standpoint—Christianity is a way of life and has to do with all of the things we do and the way that we live. One of the things stressed in I Timothy and Titus is that Christianity is a way of life. It should impact us in our regular life. In whatever area of our life and whatever our circumstances, there are many principles and things that apply.

Paul wrote these things in the latter portion of his life. He had not yet been arrested for his final imprisonment.

We are going to be going through II Timothy next time. II Timothy was written during Paul's final imprisonment in Rome, just prior to his execution. So, in the aftermath of I Timothy and Titus, within a matter of months, perhaps six or eight months after Paul had written these, he was arrested and transported to Rome. Next Bible study we will go through II Timothy and we'll see the final admonitions that Paul stressed. There's a great deal packed in here. We are almost at the end of our study of the Life and Letters of Paul. I hope that the study has been helpful to you in focusing in on various bits of instruction that were given in God's word.

Life and Letters of Paul Series—II Timothy

This evening we are continuing our series on the Life and Letters of the Apostle Paul. In fact, we are virtually to the conclusion of it. We are focusing in on the book of II Timothy this evening, which was the last book the Apostle Paul wrote. We will have one other Bible study, which will serve as sort of a wrap up to the material of Paul's life. We are in this final period of Paul's life in this book of II Timothy.

Last Bible study we went through the books of I Timothy and Titus. We found that the Apostle Paul had been released from his Roman imprisonment. We found that the end of the book of Acts ends abruptly with Paul's release. We found the fact that he dwelt two whole years in his own rented house at Rome and that came to an end. At that point, the Biblical record of Paul's life ceased. The book of Acts did not continue.

The obvious reason is that there were details and things that God simply did not choose to have recorded for us. That could be the subject of an entirely different Bible study—a study about where the rest of the apostles went and why certain things dropped from the scenes after a certain period in New Testament history. There are some very interesting stories and background that tie into that.

Evidently, from what Paul had said in the book of Romans (put together with secular tradition that have continued down), he went to Spain. Paul said that he planned to go from Italy to Spain, and there is every reason to think that he did so. He specifically said that in the book of Romans (Romans 15:22-28) and secular history and tradition maintains he did that. From Spain he went on up to Britain, which was the furthestmost outpost of the Roman Empire. He spent some time there, and then by the mid 60s, returned to the Mediterranean area. He returned to the area of Ephesus for a short period of time. Then he left Ephesus and went over to Macedonia. From there he wrote I Timothy and Titus. Then at some point after his writing of I Timothy and Titus, he was arrested and taken back to Rome.

The situation in Rome had drastically changed. The emperor Nero had made Christians the new scapegoats. They were being blamed for all the problems. Politicians have long made use of scapegoats. Unpopular minorities come in very handy for that. You blame all the problems on them. The Christians served as the newest unpopular minority there in Rome. Nero had previously blamed it on the Jews. But since he had taken a young Jewish woman as his mistress, he was looking for a different scapegoat. The Christians were good ones on which to blame things.

The situation had really turned nasty since Paul had been there during his previous imprisonment. Some of the ones who had befriended Paul and had been impressed with him and the message he had brought had subsequently died, been demoted or had fallen out of favor. It was a different group of people, even though only a few years had transpired.

II Timothy was written fairly soon after the start of his second Roman imprisonment, perhaps during the summer of 67 A.D. In writing this final letter to Timothy, it was clear Paul realized this to be the final letter of his life. From a Church standpoint, it served as a summing up. He knew the situation had changed and that he would not leave Rome alive.

One of the major things that Paul did in the final period of his life, undoubtedly, involved the collecting together and the final editing of his own letters. We will see a reference to that in II Timothy. It is only logical that Paul would have been involved in doing that. Who is the logical person to edit and put into final form the letters that he had written.

Peter was, at this point, in the process of compiling the first New Testament canon, which ultimately consisted of twenty-two books. The only others to be added were the five that John himself wrote. John and Peter were entrusted with the responsibility of sealing up the New Testament and giving it to us in the form that we have it—in the form that the Greek Church preserved it. Undoubtedly, the Greek Churches of Asia Minor (particularly Ephesus) were the repositories of the form of the canon that was put together. We will get into some of that at a later time.

One of the things that becomes obvious, as we read II Timothy, is the extent to which the New Testament Church was in a crisis condition. We read the story and are aware of how things worked out. But when you are in the process of living the story, you don't know what is going to work out, except through faith. When you are in the midst of it, it is hard to see it in perspective.

There are many things in our own lives that we can look back on and see in perspective. There are things in the history of God's work that we have lived through in our lifetime that we can look back and see in perspective. Certainly, we can look at and see, in perspective, the events that transpired and are recorded in the Bible. Yet in each of those cases in the process of going through it, that perspective is not so easily obtained.

Take, for example, the crisis the Church went through back in January, 1979. Most of you in the Church at the time remember the state of California's lawsuit against the Church—the receivership that was announced and all sorts of accusations and rumors flying every which way. There were those who panicked and decided, 'This thing is all over with. They are taking over. They are going to shut it down. It's over with.' There were some who immediately started trying to sort of protect themselves and ensure their future as they thought.

What we find when we go through II Timothy is a similar situation. You have to realize what's happening. By the time Paul wrote this, most of the original apostles were dead or in prison. Paul himself was now in prison. Peter probably knew that his days were numbered. Those who weren't in prison were already up in age, into their late sixties or early seventies. They were at a point in life, even if imprisonment didn't take place, that they knew the productive years they had left were very limited. Most of them were already dead.

The destruction of Jerusalem and the scattering of the New Testament Church was a short time away. Within three years, Jerusalem would be totally destroyed. Within two years, the New Testament Church would be gone from Jerusalem because it left at Pentecost before the destruction. The Church fled Pentecost of '69, prior to the destruction in the summer of '70.

We have a crisis situation. You couple that with the fact that various ones who, in some cases, had actually left the body of the Church and were teaching their own doctrine. Others were clinging to fellowship in the body of the Church but were introducing other various ideas. There were things that the apostles had been combating. Things were in a crisis situation.

There was a real crisis atmosphere and Paul perceived, through God's inspiration, that things were going to get a lot worse. He writes the book of II Timothy, encouraging and instructing Timothy on how he was to function and carry himself during this time of impending and approaching crisis. He realized that things were going to get considerably worse before they would get any better, and many of the others were going to live through things that he would not be around for. He had sought to combat certain ideas and keep the Church on track during his lifetime. Now his departure was at hand.

There were final admonitions that he had for Timothy. We will find in II Timothy that heresy was rampant, especially the idea concerning grace into license. This was something that was already being twisted out of context and misapplied. Church authority was being ignored. Many ministers, as well as many members, were just simply "checking out." They were "dropping by the wayside."

Paul exhorts Timothy, individually, in the midst of these troublesome times. There were difficulties and things that were being faced. He gave him instruction and advice as to how he was to function as a minister in the midst of a worsening crisis in the Church. Paul also gave him specific instruction on what he needed him, personally, to do in terms of specific service that needed to be rendered, particularly involving the manuscripts that, undoubtedly, had to do with the final canonization. Timothy had been left behind in the area of Asia Minor. We saw that in I Timothy.

Paul admonishes him in terms of holding on, of keeping the deposit of truth and handing it to others. So this sort of exhortation is there. Already people were twisting and distorting the things that Paul himself had said.

II Timothy 1:1-3, "Paul, an apostle of Jesus Christ by the will of God according to the promise of life which is in Christ Jesus. To Timothy, my beloved son: Grace, mercy, and peace from God the Father and Christ Jesus our Lord. I thank God, whom I serve with a pure conscience, as my forefathers did, as without ceasing I remember you in my prayers night and day."

Verse 5, "when I call to remembrance the genuine faith that is in you, which dwelt first in your grandmother Lois and your mother Eunice, and I am persuaded is in you also."

It's interesting to note that Timothy grew up in a circumstance where one of his parents was in the Church and the other was not. Timothy's father was not at all favorable toward either the Jewish religion or Christianity. That is apparent by the fact that Timothy was not circumcised and could not participate in the life of the Jewish community until the time the family had already come into the Church and Paul was going to take him with him. Everyone knew that his mother was Jewish, but his father was Greek.

Understand what that did. That meant that Timothy had never been able to partake of the Passover service, which was a center point of Jewish life. Timothy had never been able to partake of that because in Exodus, the instruction was given that only those who were circumcised could partake of the Passover (Exodus 12:43-49).

It's clear that Timothy's father wished Timothy to be imbued with a Greek and Roman pagan approach to life. He wanted him to have a pagan outlook, the outlook of the Greek and Roman world, as opposed to the outlook of his mother. We don't have any particular record of Timothy's father other than that clear implication. He is not mentioned, and we are not told whether he had died or had simply divorced Timothy's mother.

But at the time we pick up the story in Acts, Timothy is an older teenager of perhaps age seventeen or so. His mother and grandmother had come into the Church. I think it should be an encouraging example for those in similar circumstances to realize that, even in the midst of difficult circumstances, Timothy's mother and grandmother had a tremendous impact and influence on his life. Paul mentions them specifically.

Verse 5, "when I call to remembrance the genuine faith that is in you, which dwelt first in your grandmother Lois and your mother Eunice, and I am persuaded is in you also." Their example had greatly influenced Timothy.

Then he reminds Timothy to stir up the gift of God.

Verse 6, "Therefore I remind you to stir up the gift of God which is in you through the laying on of my hands." What gift is he referring to? Clearly it was the gift of the Holy Spirit—in context, that added measure of the Holy Spirit that came through ordination. But certainly, the principle would apply in any context of the Holy Spirit.

The analogy he draws is to stirring fire. Most of us don't think in those terms. We turn on the butane, turn up the thermostat on central heat or we turn up the knob on our electric heater. But the reference Paul is making is an analogy drawn from a wood fire. The fire and flame dies down and you have embers and coals. With a wood fire, every so often you have to stir it up. That's what Paul is describing.

The gift of God's Holy Spirit hasn't gone out, but the tendency is for it to become lukewarm. When the flames die down and gradually dies away, it has to be stirred up. What happens when you stir it up? Air and the oxygen gets to it. Maybe you add some more fuel and it blazes up. That's what happens to the gift of God within us. It has to be stirred up. More of God's Spirit has to get in there. It has to be stirred up. So Paul admonished Timothy not to become lukewarm and lethargic but to stir up the gift of God's Spirit.

Verse 7, "For God has not given us a spirit of fear, but of power and of love and of a sound mind."

He continues to discuss the state of things in v. 9, "[speaking of God] who has saved us and called us with a holy calling, not according to our works, but according to His own purpose and grace which was given to us in Christ Jesus before time began." God didn't call us because of what we are. He called us because of what He is.

Verse 10, "but has now been revealed by the appearing of our Savior Jesus Christ, who has abolished death and brought life and immortality to light through the gospel." Here's another proof that you don't have an immortal soul. Jesus Christ brought life and immortality to life through the gospel. Only God has immortality (I Timothy 6:16). Immortality is brought to light through the gospel. It is clearly preached that we can also have immortality as a gift from God brought to light through the gospel.

Verse 11, "to which I was appointed a preacher, an apostle, and a teacher of the Gentiles."

Verses 13-14, "Hold fast the pattern of sound words which you have heard from me, in faith and love which are in Christ Jesus. That good thing which was committed to you, keep by the Holy Spirit who [which] dwells in us." It's an interesting play on words here when he talks about "that good thing which was committed to you." The term that is used for "commit" or "committed" is a term in the Greek language that had a technical meaning. It always implies the situation of one who has to take a long journey. He deposits his money and other valuables with a friend and trusts him to restore it on his return.

Back in those days, they didn't have banks and safety deposit boxes, credit cards, traveler's checks and all the things that we do. Many times they would deposit valuables with a trusted friend. Now, it better be a trusted friend because if you deposit very much with him, you can come back and he is long gone. This was a common thing that was done. If you went very far, it was a long journey because you walked or rode on a donkey or sailed in a boat. You didn't have to go very far for it to be a long journey. It was not uncommon for it to last several weeks or even months.

Paul knew he was going to die. He used this term, this expression, referring to the truth of God having, in effect, been committed. 'The most valuable treasure I have, I am leaving on deposit with you Timothy. I am committing it to you. It is your responsibility to [as he brings it out a little later] pass it on to other faithful men.'

That is the circumstance, the situation that was being dealt with. Timothy was going to have to contend and preserve the faith once delivered because there were already various ones who were trying to water down and distort. There were the beginnings of what was, in a couple of centuries, clearly recognizable as the Catholic Church. In fact, within a century, what was clearly recognizable as the Catholic Church was already on the stage. Paul had already mentioned it years earlier.

II Thessalonians 2:7, he said, "the mystery of iniquity does already work." It was clearly at work and then gained quite a bit of ground by the time Paul wrote II Timothy.

Jude was writing at the same time Paul was writing II Timothy. In Jude's writing, he admonishes the brethren.

Jude 3, "...contend earnestly for the faith once delivered..." The faith once delivered was in danger of slipping away at the time. This was in the period of the New Testament.

II Timothy 1:15, "This you know, that all those in Asia have turned away from me, among whom are Phygellus and Hermogenes."

In vv. 16-18, he beseeches God for mercy on the house of Onesiphorus who had shown Paul much kindness in times past.

We are going to see a little later that quite a number had forsaken him. They had left, headed out, saying, 'This thing is over with. It's about to fold up, and I'm getting out while the getting is good.'

We will notice in chapter 4 that Paul mentions several ministers who had left and gone back where they came from. In times of crisis, there are those who panic and throw in the towel. There are those who say, 'I didn't realize there were going to be trials and troubles. I didn't realize that I wouldn't always be able to walk by sight.' There are others who walk by faith. In times of crisis, it is only with God's help that we can maintain a proper perspective.

We read the story and think, 'I'd sure hate to have my name mentioned in the Bible.' How would you like to be Phygellus or Hermogenes? The only time you get mentioned is when you "flaked out." The only thing anybody knows about you or remembers you for is the fact you turned away from Paul. That'd be kind of embarrassing. The only thing that any of us know about those two individuals is that they didn't do what they should have done. They didn't respond in a period of crisis the way they should have. It's an important thing to keep in mind.

How would we like to be summed up that way when periods of crisis come? —And they will come. You can't read the things Christ said in Matthew 24 and think that we will never have any crisis in the Church. We can't think we will always have smooth sailing in the Church and that things will always be really simple and easy. If you think that, you simply have not read the New Testament. What will the summation say about us? Will our names be mentioned like theirs or will we be mentioned in the way that Timothy is or some of the others.

II Timothy 2:1-2, "You therefore, my son, be strong in the grace that is in Christ Jesus. And the things that you have heard from me among many witnesses, commit these to faithful men who will be able to teach others also." Paul had mentioned earlier to hold on to that which has been committed to you. 'You have to hold on, diligently look out for and commit the same truth I taught you—not changed, not watered down, not turn aside from the right hand or the left—but the same thing I taught you in the presence of many witnesses. Pass it on to faithful men.'

It needed to be faithfully transmitted, not changed, turned around and all sorts of things. When you read early Church history, you realize how quickly so many things were taken out of context, misapplied and completely turned upside down.

Verses 3-5, "You therefore must endure hardship as a good soldier of Jesus Christ. No one engaged in warfare entangles himself with the affairs of this life, that he may please him who enlisted him as a soldier. And also if anyone competes in athletics, he is not crowned unless he competes according to the rules."

Verse 7, "Consider what I say, and may the Lord give you understanding in all things." Paul did not want to amplify his explanation of these points, for whatever reason, but he alludes to several things. Basically he stresses the conditions of true service. It involves wholehearted devotion to the job. It involves loyalty to the rules and hard work. You have to endure hardness as a good soldier of Jesus Christ. How do you do that? He warns him that if you go to war, you don't entangle yourself with the affairs of this life. The word used here is the term for business (literally, negotiations, transactions) by which men earn their livelihood. It involved simply that the fulltime ministry was something that involved abstinence from secular trade.

You can't serve two masters (Luke 16:13). If Timothy was going to faithfully carry out his responsibility that Paul had given him in terms of the ministry, he couldn't be getting preoccupied with various secular trades. God made provision for the Levitical priesthood and later for the New Testament ministry and their livelihood.

II Timothy 2:5, "And also if anyone competes in athletics, he is not crowned unless he competes according to the rules." Paul said, 'Don't try to take shortcuts.'

Verse 6, "The hard-working farmer [KJV, "husbandman"] must be first to partake of the crops." It's the one who works hard that would be first partaker of the fruits. You have to work hard.

Verses 10-13, "Therefore I endure all things for the sake of the elect, that they also may obtain the salvation which is in Christ Jesus with eternal glory. This is a faithful saying: For if we died with Him, we shall also live with Him. If we endure, we shall also reign with Him. If we deny Him, He also will deny us. If we are faithless, He remains faithful; He cannot deny Himself." It doesn't matter whether we believe it or not; God's word endures and will prove sure.

Verse 14, "Remind them of these things, charging them before the Lord not to strive about words to no profit, to the ruin of the hearers." There were those who were striving about words to no profit. People wanted to wrangle about all sorts of things and get out on all sorts of "twiggy" points. Paul admonished Timothy about that. The Jews, particularly, and many of the Gnostics would go into great complicated things that they would read into certain words.

One of the things about it, in the Greek and Hebrew language, every word has a numerical value. When we were kids in school, most of us learned Roman numerals. We learned that certain letters had numerical value to the Romans—"V" is five, "X" is ten, "I" is one, "L" is fifty—this sort of thing. The number system that we use (the so-called Arabic numerals) didn't become common in the western world until the time of the Middle Ages.

In the ancient Greek and Roman world, the letters of the alphabet doubled for numbers. There was numeric value to those letters. That meant you could go through any word and figure a numeric value to it. For example, take the word "life": "L" is fifty, "I" is one, "F" and "E" don't have numeric value—that equals fifty-one. Some of these Gnostic sects would go through and make a great deal of figuring out the numeric value of certain words and attaching significance. If a word added up to twenty-one, that made three times seven, etc. They would go off on all sorts of farfetched tangents and really completely miss the point. They would get so "buggy" trying to figure some hidden significance.

Paul is telling Timothy, 'You need to put people in remembrance; you need to remind them to stick to the "trunk of the tree" and not go charging off and getting all bogged down in a bunch of silly stuff.'

Verse 15, "Be diligent [KJV, "study"] to present yourself approved to God, a worker who does not need to be ashamed, rightly dividing the word of truth." Really stick to it and properly apply the Bible.

Verses 16-17, "But shun profane and vain babblings, for they will increase to more ungodliness. And their message will spread like cancer. Hymenaeus and Philetus are of this sort." It's just going to eat away and that's no good.

Verse 18, there were those who had erred concerning the truth and had come up with some crazy idea that the resurrection was past. Where did they get that? I don't know, but people have come up with crazy ideas down through the years. The thing is that other people are crazy enough to believe them. So, I guess that makes the people who believe them even crazier than the guy that came up with the ideas.

Verse 19, Paul gives the bottom line, "Nevertheless the solid foundation of God stands, having this seal: 'The Lord knows those who are His,' and 'Let everyone who names the name of Christ depart from iniquity.'" The bottom line is you don't fool God. The foundation stands sure. The Lord knows those who are His. God knows who's who and what's what. Sometimes people have gotten all worried because they thought "so-and-so" was getting by with something. God knows those who are His and those who name the name of Christ had better depart from iniquity, had better leave behind lawlessness. We can't live in sin. We can't make sin our habitual practice. We have to depart from, turn away from disregard for the law of God. Turn away from lawlessness.

Verse 20, "But in a great house there are not only vessels of gold and silver, but also of wood and clay, some for honor and some for dishonor." In a great big house, you have fancy china and gold and silver vessels; you also have some old scrub pots, cracked bowls that you put the dog scraps in or whatever. He is using the analogy of the Church being a great house. Take note of the fact that there are vessels to honor and vessels to dishonor. Everybody and everything is not always what they claim to be. This is what Paul is saying.

Verse 21, "Therefore if anyone cleanses himself from the latter, he will be a vessel for honor, sanctified and useful for the Master, prepared for every good work." We will be something that Christ will use. But we have to be purged from lawlessness. We have to be cleaned up.

Verses 22-24, "Flee also youthful lusts; but pursue righteousness, faith, love, peace with those who call on the Lord out of a pure heart. But avoid foolish and ignorant disputes, knowing that they generate strife. And a servant of the Lord must not quarrel but be gentle to all, able to teach, patient." There is a way to deal with people. He admonishes Timothy in that regard: be gentle, be apt to teach, be patient.

Verse 25, "in humility correcting those who are in opposition, if God perhaps will grant them repentance, so that they may know the truth." The people who were becoming entangled in these things were, in reality, opposing themselves. They were hurting themselves. There were those who claimed to be part of the Church and were not living godly lives. They simply were not God's. God knows His own. We see that.

II Timothy 3:1-2, "But know this, that in the last days perilous times will come: For men will be lovers of themselves...." Dangerous times will come. They are times that involve a preoccupation with self.

It's interesting. One of the commentaries brings out the main thought is that love of self will lead to neglect of the duty to others and God and eventually to active wrongdoing, too. The true center of life has changed. Self has taken the place of God. So, all sense of the duty to others, whether to man or God, disappears. That's a very apt description, a very apt statement. I think that is very characteristic of our society, of the latter twentieth-century western world. The true center of life has changed. The self has taken the place of God; therefore, a sense of duty to other people and to God disappears. People become wrapped up and absorbed in what is convenient to them. We are, perhaps, in the most convenience-oriented society in the history of mankind. He describes this sort of thing.

Verses 2-3, "For men will be lovers of themselves, lovers of money, boasters, proud, blasphemers, disobedient to parents, unthankful, unholy, unloving [KJV, "without natural affection"]...." I can't help but believe that, in some ways, this is a clear reference to the abortion controversies that exist today and the emphasis on that because clearly the most natural affection that there is, is the love of a mother for her young. That exists even in the animal world. That is natural. That is nature. That is, certainly, an example of natural affection. Certainly, it can apply to other things as well, but I think it is certainly descriptive of that.

Verses 3-5, "unloving, unforgiving, slanderers, without self-control, brutal, despisers of good, traitors, headstrong, haughty, lovers of pleasure rather than lovers of God, having a form of godliness but denying its power. And from such people turn away!"

In this nation, we like to pride ourselves for being a godly nation. We like to think of ourselves (the United States) as a religious people. We have churches all over, and over eighty-five percent of the people will tell you that they believe in God. In fact, in a recent Gallup poll carried in U.S. News & World Report, the majority of the people even admit to believing in the devil. The majority of people claimed to believe in hell, but none of them thought they were going there. They must figure that is reserved for somebody else.

They have "a form of godliness," but the real key is that they are lovers of pleasure more than lovers of God. If people had a choice between going to some sporting activity or church on a particular weekend, which would they go to? They are lovers of pleasure more than lovers of God. "Having a form of godliness, but denying the power thereof." They don't want God ruling in their lives. They claim to believe in God.

James 2:19, "you believe in God you do well, the demons also believe—and tremble." If all you do is believe in God, you're not even "one step up" on the devil. At that point, you are where Satan is. If all that someone has going for him is that he believes in God, he is not even "one up" on the devil. It is a form of godliness, but it denies the power and authority of it. This is the sort of thing that entangles people and gets them messed up. It describes various ones (v. 6).

II Timothy 3:7, “always learning and never able to come to the knowledge of the truth.” It likens them to Pharaoh’s court magicians who withstood Moses. It says their folly is ultimately going to be manifest (vv. 8-9).

Verses 10-11, “But you have carefully followed my doctrine, manner of life, purpose, faith, longsuffering, love, perseverance, persecutions, afflictions, which happened to me at Antioch, at Iconium, at Lystra—what persecutions I endure. And out of them all the Lord delivered me.” He said, ‘You know the things I went through, and God delivered me.’

Verses 12-14, “Yes, and all who desire to live godly in Christ Jesus will suffer persecution. But evil men and impostors will grow worse and worse, deceiving and being deceived. But as for you, continue in the things which you have learned and been assured of, knowing from whom you have learned them.”

‘Remember what you learned and where you learned it.’ This was Paul’s admonishment to Timothy and certainly would be God’s admonishment to us. What did you learn and where did you learn it? Very important! You hold on, continue in the things which you have learned and been assured of. You have proven it. You know it. Don’t be fickle in your faith and your understanding. Hold on to the “trunk of the tree” and remember where you learned that precious knowledge.

Verses 15-17, “and that from childhood you have known the Holy Scriptures, which are able to make you wise for salvation through faith which is in Christ Jesus. All Scripture is given by inspiration of God, and is profitable for doctrine, for reproof, for correction, for instruction in righteousness, that the man of God may be complete, thoroughly equipped for every good work.”

From childhood, Timothy had known the Holy Scriptures. What Scriptures had he known? Was he conversant with the New Testament when he was a child? Did he grow up memorizing John 3:16? No, it wasn’t written until thirty years after II Timothy was written. He hadn’t even read it at the time Paul was writing this, much less having known it as a child. The only Scripture that existed in Timothy’s childhood was the Old Testament. This doesn’t in any way take authority from the New Testament, but the point that I am making is that various ones want to disparage the authority of the Old Testament. They say, ‘That’s back in the Old Testament; that doesn’t really count.’ Paul thought it did. Paul is the one that they all thought did away with the Old Testament.

There is an interesting article in the last issue of the U.S. News & World Report. There’s a little section on the Apostle Paul. One of the things they claim is that Paul did away with all the requirements of the law. They say he changed the church. Christ started it out, but it never would have grown very much if Paul hadn’t come along and did away with the law. Once he did that, things started growing, and it was one of the great moments in history. Well, Paul didn’t know that. He told Timothy, “the Holy Scriptures which you have known from childhood.” In other words, the Old Testament, the law, “this is able to make you wise unto salvation.” That would shock a lot of people. A lot of Protestants don’t think you can learn anything about salvation from the Old Testament.

What did Philip preach out of to the Ethiopian eunuch? –The book of Isaiah, the Old Testament. He was able to teach him enough about salvation out of the book of Isaiah that he baptized him (Acts 8:26-38). The Holy Scriptures certainly includes the New Testament, but in context here, it is specifically referring to the Old Testament that “are able to make you wise unto salvation.” They are able to reveal God’s plan.

“All Scripture...” includes the Scripture Timothy had known from childhood and clearly focuses on the Old Testament and certainly includes the New Testament as well. “All Scripture is given by inspiration of God.” It is God-breathed. “Inspiration” clearly means “God-breathed.” And it is profitable for doctrine. It says so right here.

II Timothy 3:16-17, “...it is profitable for doctrine, for reproof, for correction, for instruction in righteousness, that the man of God may be complete, thoroughly finished unto all good works.” God’s word is God-breathed. It is inspired by God and for our benefit.

II Timothy 4:1, “I charge you therefore before God and the Lord Jesus Christ, who will judge the living and the dead at His appearing and His Kingdom.” When is the time of judgment? It is at the return of Christ. He didn’t say we would go off to heaven when we die. The time of judgment will be when Jesus Christ returns.

Verses 2-3, he charged Timothy, “Preach the word [stick to the Book]! Be ready in season and out of season. Convince, rebuke, exhort with all longsuffering and teaching [doctrine]. For the time will come when they will not endure sound doctrine....” Paul could already see the “handwriting on the wall.” He told Timothy, ‘Look, don’t be surprised. The time is going to come when you are going to find people who do not want to endure sound doctrine.’

Continuing v. 3, “...but according to their own desires [lust], because they have itching ears, they will heap up for themselves teachers.” They are going to have itching ears. They are going to want somebody who is going to “tickle their fancy” and say what they want to hear.

Verses 4-7, “and they will turn their ears away from the truth, and be turned aside to fables. But you be watchful in all things, endure afflictions, do the work of an evangelist, fulfill your ministry. For I am already being poured out as a drink offering, and the time of my departure is at hand. I have fought the good fight, I have finished the race, I have kept the faith.” He said, ‘It is over with for me.’

Verse 8, “Finally, there is laid up for me the crown of righteousness, which the Lord, the righteous Judge, will give to me on that Day, and not to me only but also to all who have loved His appearing.” When did Paul think he was going to receive his reward? Was he expecting to die and go to heaven? No. He said, ‘I have fought a good fight. I know there is laid up for me a crown of righteousness, which the Lord is going to give me at that Day.’ Which day? Well, ‘not to me only, but to all of them that love His appearing.’

—To those whose hope is anchored on the return of Jesus Christ and on the establishment of the Kingdom of God. He told Timothy, ‘Look, it’s over with for me. I have finished mine; you have to hang in there and finish yours.’

That is an echo of what God’s servants have said down through the centuries. That’s the admonition as one generation passes and the other carries on. That’s what Paul admonished Timothy. That certainly was the equivalent of the admonition that Mr. Herbert Armstrong gave to us at the end of his life. ‘I have finished my fight. I’ve endured. Now it’s for the rest of you to continue.’ That’s always been the continuing story of God’s people. As God’s servants of one generation pass from the scene, then it is the responsibility of others to carry on. Timothy had to carry on.

Verses 9-11, he told Timothy, “Be diligent to come to me quickly; for Demas has forsaken me, having loved this present world, and has departed for Thessalonica—Crescens for Galatia, Titus for Dalmatia. Only Luke is with me. Get Mark and bring him with you, for he is useful to me for ministry.”

Various ones had left. Even Titus is mentioned here as having left. Evidently, they thought it looked like the “ship was sinking.” ‘We had better get out of here quickly. Maybe they will throw me in jail next.’ What’s going to be our response when trials and persecutions come? How are we going to respond? He said, ‘Luke is the only one here with me.’

He said in v. 11 (KJV), “...Get Mark and bring him with you: for he is profitable to me for the ministry.” A commentary brings out that this literally could be for a personal service. He needed Mark to do something or to perform a service. There is not a definite article in the Greek. He is profitable to me for a ministry or literally for a service.

Verses 12-13, “And Tychicus I have sent to Ephesus. Bring the cloak that I left with Carpus at Troas when you come—and the books, especially the parchments.” What is he referring to? Two different words are used here. The commentary brings out that the “books” would refer to papyrus letters, possibly copies of his correspondence. What is called the “parchment” is a term that probably refers to the scrolls of the Scripture. The term that is used for “parchment” is a term in the Greek language referring to a writing material made from the skins of animals. Vellum comes from the membrane (the skin) of the animals.

Membranous was a parchment type of thing. It was much more expensive writing material and was only used for things of permanent value, things that would endure for centuries. They were harder to work with. It was harder to make a good copy on, but they had an enduring quality. They were expensive and were only used for things of great permanent value. It was what the Scriptures were kept on. Papyrus was used for normal letters, correspondence and everyday business.

Paul wants two sets of things brought. What it amounts to is that Mark was Peter’s assistant. We find in I Peter 5:13 that Mark was normally with Peter. Timothy was told to bring Mark. Paul needed him to do something. He gave him instructions to go to Troas. He was sending someone else to Ephesus. He told Timothy to bring the parchments and the scrolls. He needed Mark to do something for a service. This is, undoubtedly, a reference to the fact that Paul, at the end of his life, was going to put his manuscripts in final form. He was going to send the final and official copy of his manuscripts by Mark to Peter. Peter had, undoubtedly, been in correspondence with Paul. They had communicated the fact that as their departure was at hand (the passing from the scene of the original apostles), there was need to provide the Church with an official canon of Scripture.

There were many false gospels, false letters and things that were written. There were things that were taken out of context. Already, these sorts of things were beginning to surface and would get more so. As the first generation was passing, it became apparent that an official canon needed to be provided for the Church—an official canon as to what represented authoritative teaching and what did not.

Peter and Paul had, undoubtedly, communicated on the subject. Peter had communicated with Paul the need to get copies from him, an official copy that would be included in this. This was Paul's part in sending it via Mark to Peter to put in final form.

That's why in II Peter 1:12-15 (which was written perhaps within the year after Paul had written II Timothy), Peter says that he was ensuring that after his death, the Church would be able to call to remembrance the things that he had said and the truth of God.

He makes reference in II Peter 1:19 to preserving for the Church a complete and accurate record, a sure word of prophecy. He said that he and John were the ones who had that sure word of prophecy. Peter was responsible for that first canonization. About thirty years later, John added the final finishing touches, primarily by adding his own five books.

Paul concludes and admonished Timothy.

Verse 21, "Do your utmost to come before winter...." He was admonishing him to hurry up and get there. There were things that needed to be done. According to tradition, Paul was executed the following spring; he was executed in the spring of 68 A.D. Peter was perhaps executed in the summer or fall of 68 A.D. Peter and Paul finished the job that God had given them to do.

Next Bible study we will go into information on the battles against heresies in the New Testament period. It will be sort of a wrap-up and a tying together of several of the things that surfaced in our study of Paul's epistles—things that we do not have time to go into in great depth. We will go back and tie it together and bring in several of these things.

It is important as we go through and study to realize that God's Word is a living Book. The stories, the examples and the illustrations are there for our benefit. As we read it, we need to put ourselves in the place of the individuals who were living it and to realize that as we also encounter trials and tests. We will come up against adversities. We will come up and find ourselves in the midst of things. How are we going to make it? The same way they did—by walking with God, by walking in faith, by committing our lives into the hands of Him who judges righteously, by turning it over to God, by focusing in on the truth of God and on what God has given us to do, by focusing on what God has revealed to us, by holding on, persevering, enduring to the end, being faithful, putting one foot in front of another and following where God leads in the paths of righteousness. As we focus in and get a perspective, as we look and see the things that other men and women of God contended with, we realize our part in learning from their examples and dealing in a faithful way the tests and trials that will come upon us.

The Battle Against First-Century Heresies

This evening we are going to be wrapping up some of the things from Paul's letters. What we are covering is not directly a letter that Paul wrote. It is sort of a wrap up of the background with which he dealt and many things that were issues that arose. We are going to deal with some of the battles against first-century heresies that the Apostle Paul had to carry out and that he certainly was a leading part in, and then going on from there.

I wanted to start out by reading an excerpt from a book entitled The Story of the Christian Church. It is a book that gives a little bit of background and history. It makes a very interesting statement. Chapter 5 is entitled "The Age of Shadows, From the Martyrdom of St. Paul, 68 A.D., to the Death of St. John, 100 A.D."

He makes the statement in this book, "We name the last generation of the first century from 68 to 100 A.D. "The Age of Shadows," partly because the gloom of persecution was over the church, but more especially because of all periods in the history, it is the one about which we know the least. We have no longer the clear light of the Book of Acts to guide us, and no author of that age has filled in the blank in the history. We would like to read of the later work by such helpers of St. Paul as Timothy, Apollos and Titus, but all these and St. Paul's other friends drop out of the record at his death. For fifty years after St. Paul's life, a curtain hangs over the church through which we strive vainly to look, and when at last it rises about 120 A.D. with the writings of the earliest church fathers, we find a church, in many aspects, very different from that in the days of St. Peter and St. Paul."

Now, that is quite an amazing and remarkable admission. When the curtain rises with the writings of the earliest church fathers in 120 A.D., the author says, '...we find a church, in many aspects, very different from the church of Peter and Paul.' The reason that the curtain rises on a church that is far different is because when the curtain rises, what is seen on stage is a different church. It not only appears to be different and it not only looks different—it is a different church. It is sort of an old conjurer trick. You see one thing and the curtain rings down; when the curtain rises, you see something else. You are given the impression that one was changed into the other, when in reality, that was not the case.

The Church of God did not become a different church. A different church—this other group that had its beginnings at the time when Peter, Paul and other apostles passed from the scene—took over and became the visible professing "Christian" Church.

Let's get a little background on it. We will start out in Thessalonians because the earliest books Paul wrote were I and II Thessalonians. II Thessalonians was written in the fall of 58 A.D.

II Thessalonians 2:7-8, "For the mystery of lawlessness is already at work; only He who now restrains will do so until He is taken out of the way. And then the lawless one will be revealed, whom the Lord will consume with the breath of His mouth and destroy with the brightness of His coming."

The mystery of iniquity, Paul said, was already at work. Things would be held back in such a way that things would not fully emerge. The final wicked one (that man of sin), the final false prophet, is not going to come up out of the midst; he is not going to be revealed until the appropriate time. But Paul was explaining to the Thessalonians in 50 A.D. that the mystery of iniquity was already at work. The mystery of iniquity has to do with the mystery religion, the Babylonian Mystery Religion that works lawlessness. It works iniquity, and this was already at work.

In fact, let's go back a little further to the book of Acts. In Acts 8, we pick up the story of a man that we are introduced to later on in secular history. But we are first introduced to him in the book of Acts.

Acts 8:5, "Then Philip went down to the city of Samaria and preached Christ to them."

Verses 8-11, "And there was great joy in that city. But there was a certain man called Simon, who previously practiced sorcery in the city and astonished the people of Samaria, claiming that he was someone great, to whom they all gave heed from the least to the greatest, saying, 'This man is the great power of God.' And they heeded him because he had astonished them with his sorceries for a long time."

Here, we are told that there was in Samaria a certain individual who was a great religious leader. According to v. 10, he was one who was acknowledged by the Samaritans as being the great power of God. He was a great religious leader of the Samaritans. He was one to whom they all gave heed. Everyone was impressed with him; yet the source of his power and influence was not of God. It was of Satan. He was a sorcerer. He is known in history as Simon Magus.

“Magus” is the Greek word for “sorcerer.” It is the word from which our word “magician” derives. He is called Simon Magus or Simon the Sorcerer. Simon the Magician was the great religious leader of the Samaritans. We are told that when Philip came to Samaria and preached, Simon heard him and was deeply impressed. He was impressed by the message that Philip brought and by the miracles that he saw. Simon knew this was something more impressive than any of the tricks he had worked. Then the apostles came down. Peter and John laid hands on the brethren and they received the Holy Spirit (vv. 14-17).

Verses 18-23, “Now when Simon saw that through the laying on of the apostles’ hands the Holy Spirit was given, he offered them money, saying, ‘Give me this power also, that anyone on whom I lay hands may receive the Holy Spirit.’ But Peter said to him, ‘Your money perish with you, because you thought that the gift of God could be purchased with money! You have neither part nor portion [KJV, “lot”] in this matter, for your heart is not right in the sight of God. Repent therefore of this your wickedness, and pray God if perhaps the thought of your heart may be forgiven you. For I see that you are poisoned by bitterness and bound by iniquity.’”

Peter had some very stern words for this individual. Peter could perceive his heart and his attitude.

What did Simon seek to purchase here? Simon sought to purchase an apostleship. That’s what Simon is asking for. He is seeking to purchase the office of apostle.

Peter said in v. 21, “you have neither part nor lot in this matter.” What does that mean? That expression is used one other time in Scripture.

Acts 1:15-20 is the story of how Judas had committed suicide and there were only eleven out of the twelve apostles left. There was a need to round out the number to twelve because twelve was the foundational number, the number of organized beginnings. They were going to choose a twelfth member. This is prior to the giving of the Holy Spirit. It needed to be someone from among the group that had followed and heard Jesus from the beginning of His ministry (vv. 21-22).

Verses 23-24, they narrowed it down to Justus and Matthias and prayed and asked God’s guidance.

Acts 1:25-26, “to take part in this ministry and apostleship from which Judas by transgression fell, that he might go to his own place. And they cast their lots, and the lot fell on Matthias. And he was numbered with the eleven apostles.”

They gave forth their lots, and the lot fell upon Matthias that he might take part of the ministry and apostleship. The term “part” has to do with “a part of the ministry,” and “lot” has to do with “an apostleship chosen by lot.”

When Simon was offering money, Peter understood what he wanted. He wanted the office that Peter held. Peter said, ‘You have neither part nor lot in this matter. You don’t have any part in our ministry and apostleship. You haven’t been chosen by lot to share a part in our ministry or apostleship because your heart is not right in the sight of God. You had better repent because I know what you are thinking in your heart. You had better repent of the thought of your heart that you may be forgiven. I see in you, Simon, I perceive that you are in the gall of bitterness. You are poisoned with bitterness and you are in the bond of iniquity.’

Simon was the slave of lawlessness. Simon was the great religious leader of the Samaritans. He was the one to whom all of the Samaritans paid heed, from the greatest to the least. He was someone who was acknowledged and recognized by the Samaritans. He was looked to as though he were some great one. They said he was the power of God.

In this particular book that I have here, Eusebius’ Ecclesiastical History, Eusebius was a Catholic historian in the fourth century A.D. at the time of Emperor Constantine and gave a history of the time until him. It has a chapter in the book devoted to Simon Magus. He talks about Simon on page 63.

“Simon, however, we have understood to have taken the lead in all heresy; from whom also, down to the present time, those that followed his heresy, still affected the modest philosophy of the Christians. From this, however, they appeared again to depart and again to embrace the superstitions of idols, falling down before the pictures and statutes of this selfsame Simon....”

At this time, the Catholic Church hadn’t yet fully adopted some of those things.

Did you read the article on the Pope this morning? He’s been to Portugal and he met with the last of the three little Portuguese children who saw the vision of Fatima back in 1917. There’s one of them left—an elderly lady who is a nun there near Fatima in Portugal. The Pope met with her privately. There is a statue of Mary there at Fatima and this statue is crowned. The bullet that the Pope was struck with at the assassination attempt years ago has been placed there in the crown of this statue at Fatima as an offering of devotion, giving thanks to this idol for having delivered him and spared his life. That's the whole sense of it. They had a big deal. The bullet is up there in the crown because she is being given the credit for having saved his life. He came to consult this elderly nun who had seen this apparition in 1917. That's been almost seventy-five years ago. These sorts of things are interesting.

Eusebius mentions how Simon was the one who brought in and encouraged his followers (calling themselves Christians) to embrace the superstitions of idols, falling down before pictures and statues.

A lot of you have come out of a background where you are not unfamiliar with people falling down before pictures and statues. We see a lot of that. You can drive down the road and people have these little shrines in their yards. They have a little covering for the idols to sit under so they won't get wet.

He also says of Simon Magus on page 62, "The faith of our Lord and Savior Jesus Christ, having now been diffused abroad among all men, the enemy of salvation devising some scheme of seizing upon the imperial city for himself, brought thither Simon, whom we mentioned before. Coming to the aid of his insidious artifices, he attached many of the inhabitants of Rome to himself in order to deceive them. This is attested by Justin who was one of our distinguished writers, not long after the times of the apostles..." He continues talking about Simon.

There is an article on Simon the Sorcerer in the old 11th edition of the Encyclopedia Briticana. It labels that he was the father of the Gnostics. Gnosticism sprung out from him.

Let's understand a little bit about the Samaritans themselves, of whom Simon was the religious leader even prior to his adoption of Christianity. In II Kings 17, we read of what we term the "Samaritans." Originally, Samaria was the capital city of Northern Israel. It was where the northern ten tribes were. Northern Israel sinned against God, and God let the Assyrians come in and take them into captivity.

II Kings 17:6, "In the ninth year of Hoshea, the king of Assyria took Samaria and carried Israel away to Assyria, and placed them in Halah and by the Habor, the River of Gozan, and in the cities of the Medes." If you look at a map, it's up in the area between the Black and the Caspian Sea. It's up in the area above Turkey and Iraq and the southern part of the Soviet Union that is between the Black and Caspian Sea. They were a little further south than that. They were down in the area where Iraq, Turkey, Iran and the Soviet Union come together, all this area in here. They settled them in that northern area, from whence they subsequently migrated across the Black Sea, then up the Danube and the Rhine and into the heartland of Europe at the appropriate time. This is where he settled Israel. The children of Israel sinned. It goes through and recounts all the things that they did (vv. 7-15).

Verse 16, "So they left all the commandments of the Lord their God, made for themselves a molded image and two calves, made a wooden image and worshiped all the host of heaven, and served Baal."

Verses 23-24, "until the Lord removed Israel out of His sight, as He had said by all His servants the prophets. So Israel was carried away from their own land to Assyria, as it is to this day. Then the king of Assyria brought people from Babylon, Cuthah, Ava Hamath, and from Sepharvaim, and placed them in the cities of Samaria instead of the children of Israel; and they took possession of Samaria and dwelt in its cities."

In the process of this, there was a lag of time. What happens when you depopulate an area? Very quickly it becomes overgrown; wild animals begin to reproduce, multiply and invade areas that formerly were villages and fields. You have an area laying for a matter of a few years time, pretty well depopulated because they didn't just load them up on train cars, take them all out and show up next week with a new batch. We are looking at a period of several years of depopulation—of moving them out. There was some lag time, and then colonists began to move in.

Verses 25-26, the lion population had increased and there were wild animals that came in. The people were superstitious and they decided the problem was that they did not know the manner of the god of the land. They needed instruction.

Verse 27, "Then the king of Assyria commanded, saying, 'Send there one of the priests whom you brought from there; let him go and dwell there, and let him teach them the rituals of the God of the land.'" Now, what kind of job is he going to do? He is one who helped to get them into trouble to begin with. The whole reason they went into captivity to begin with was because they weren't serving the true God. They had been worshipping the golden calves.

They brought in all these Babylonians and then a renegade priest to teach them how to serve the god of the land.

We are told in v. 28, "Then one of the priests whom they had carried away from Samaria came and dwelt in Bethel, and taught them how they should fear the Lord." You know he was going to do a good job of it.

Notice in v. 29, "However every nation continued to make gods of its own, and put them in the houses of the high places which the Samaritans had made, every nation in the cities where they dwelt."

Verses 32-34, "So they feared the Lord, and from every class they appointed for themselves priests of the high places, who sacrificed for them in the shrines of the high places. They feared the Lord, yet served their own gods—according to the rituals of the nations from among whom they were carried away. To this day they continue practicing the former rituals; they do not fear the Lord, nor do they follow their statutes or their ordinances, or the law and commandment which the Lord had commanded the children of Jacob, whom He named Israel."

He says they feared the Eternal and served their own gods.

Verse 41, "So these nations feared the Lord, yet served their carved images; also their children and their children's have continued doing as their fathers did, even to this day." What did they do? They continued the same old Babylonian Mystery Religion, but they changed it by introducing the name of God into it. Now they were calling it by the name of the God of Israel. Now they were utilizing the name of YHWH—the name of the God of Israel, the Eternal God, but they kept the same old pagan customs. They just sort of "baptized" them. It's kind of like "there's nothing new under the sun."

The same old idolatry is being practiced in a lot of places. You find that the only thing that was changed was the name—the virgin of Fatima (Our Lady of Fatima) in Portugal and down in Mexico, they have the virgin of Guadalupe (Our Lady of Guadalupe). If you go back to the ancient Indians, the Aztec, the area of Guadalupe was a great religious center, and they had a goddess they worshipped there. When the Spaniards came in, the Indians had this big religious shrine in Guadalupe and they were worshipping the goddess. So the Spaniards just let them keep doing the same thing; they just changed the name. Now, they were not paying homage to the goddess of Guadalupe but to the virgin of Guadalupe. They just kept the same thing, identified it with Mary, and went right on along. They let them keep doing the same old pagan superstition; they just called it by God's name.

In Rome, they continued to observe Saturnalia, the pagan festival that was observed there at the winter solstice. But instead of calling it Saturnalia, they thought "Christmas" had a little better sound to it—the mass of Christ. They said, 'We will do the same things; we will have it at the same time. We will have many of the same customs and things associated with it. We will just change the name. Also, we won't call it Lupercalia anymore; we will call it St. Valentine's day.' What does a saint have to do with little cupids shooting arrows at people?—And all this sort of things.

To set the stage, you have the Samaritans (who were Babylonians) who continued to practice their pagan religion, but now they introduced the name of God—the true God—the God of Israel. They used the right name for the wrong things.

Now we move about seven hundred years down in history and we come to the Samaritans in Acts 8. We find their religious leader, a man who was acknowledged by all of them as the great power of God, who used the name of God and paraded as God's representative—a man by the name of Simon the Sorcerer. He believed when Philip preached. He was really impressed by what Philip had to say. And, he wanted to buy an office of apostle. Peter recognized what was going on, rebuked him for it, and said he was in the bond of iniquity. He was a slave to lawlessness.

II Thessalonians 2:7, "For the mystery of lawlessness is already at work...." We find that the mystery of iniquity was already at work. The mystery religion, the Babylonian Mystery Religion that promoted lawlessness was already at work. This was at the time Paul wrote II Thessalonians. We are looking at perhaps seventeen years after Simon's encounter in Acts 8.

Let's notice a little bit of the other things Paul has to say.

Galatians 1:6-7, "I marvel that you are turning away so soon from Him who called you in the grace of Christ, to a different gospel, which is not another; but there are some who trouble you and want to pervert the gospel of Christ." Here, Paul is writing two or three years after he wrote II Thessalonians and he is talking about churches having another gospel being preached, which he says is not another gospel (in the sense of an alternative that is just as good), but it is a perversion of the true gospel.

There are other places. Let's go back to II Corinthians 11.

II Corinthians 11:13-15, "For such are false apostles, deceitful workers, transforming themselves into apostles of Christ. And no wonder! For Satan himself transforms himself into an angel of light. Therefore it is no great thing if his ministers also transform themselves into ministers of righteousness...." Here, we are told there are false apostles, deceitful workers who are transforming themselves into the apostles of Christ.

That's what Simon was doing. Simon was a false apostle. He transformed himself into an apostle of Christ. He didn't go around saying, 'I am a false apostle and I am here to preach a false gospel to you. You guys loosen up because I want to deceive you.' He appeared as an angel of light. Satan appears as an angel of light. Paul was discussing a problem now extant in the mid-50s A.D., when there were false apostles who were preaching a false gospel.

Verse 4, "For if he who comes preaches another Jesus whom we have not preached, or if you receive a different spirit which you have not received, or a different gospel which you have not accepted, you may well put up with it." The false gospel is going to be tied in with the mystery of iniquity. It's going to be tied in with the mystery religion, with iniquity and lawlessness. We see the stage that Paul was dealing with.

It had reached that point by the time Peter was dealing with the subject in the late 60s A.D.

II Peter 2:1, "But there were also false prophets among the people, even as there will be false teachers among you, who will secretly bring in destructive heresies, even denying the Lord who bought them, and bring on themselves swift destruction." Peter was talking about the fact that there were false apostles and false prophets who were going to come in among God's people. He describes these individuals.

Verse 15, "They have forsaken the right way and gone astray, following the way of Balaam the son of Beor, who loved the wages of unrighteousness."

Notice back in the book of Jude, which was written approximately the same time that Peter was writing II Peter.

Jude 3-4, "Beloved, while I was very diligent to write to you concerning our common salvation, I found it necessary to write to you exhorting you to contend earnestly for the faith which was once for all delivered to the saints. For certain men have crept in unnoticed, who long ago were marked out for this condemnation, ungodly men, who turn the grace of our God into licentiousness [lawlessness] and deny the only Lord God and our Lord Jesus Christ."

Jude admonished Christians of his day to earnestly contend for the faith once delivered.

By the late 60s A.D., we are seeing an escalation. It started out that Paul said the mystery of iniquity was already at work. A couple of years later, he said, 'There is a false gospel, and I am amazed that you are being turned aside to another gospel so quickly.' A couple of years later, he tells the Corinthians there are false apostles out there claiming to be the apostles of Christ when they are not. He said that shouldn't shock them because Satan claims to be what he is not. By the time we pick it up a dozen years later, Peter is talking about false prophets. Jude told the Church to earnestly contend for the faith once delivered. Certain men had crept in unnoticed who were seeking to turn the grace of God into lawlessness.

The whole issue ultimately involved the law of God. You can have matters of peripheral questions on various things that are not fully clarified. But when you start talking about the law of God, then you are talking about something fundamental. You are not talking about a minor technical point somewhere that someone is attempting to understand. You are talking about the Ten Commandments, the Sabbath and the holy days. You are talking about the fundamental law of God. They were attempting to turn the grace of God into lawlessness, to equate grace with doing away with the law and to claim that the law is not in force and effect any longer.

John had to deal with the issue. By the time he was writing thirty years later, he was discussing the matter of what had to be dealt with throughout I, II and III John.

I John 4:1, "Beloved, do not believe every spirit, but test the spirits, whether they are of God; because many false prophets have gone out into the world." Many false prophets had gone forth.

John added a little later in I John 5:2-3, "By this we know that we love the children of God, when we love God and keep His commandments. For this is the love of God that we keep His commandments. And His commandments are not burdensome." We find that the issue involved the law of God.

II John 7, “For many deceivers, have gone out into the world who do not confess Jesus Christ as coming in the flesh. This is a deceiver and an antichrist.” I will make a little comment about the issue they were disputing.

Verses 10-11, “If anyone comes to you and does not bring this doctrine, do not receive him into your house nor greet him; for he who greets him shares in his evil deeds.”

Verse 12, “Having many things to write to you, I did not wish to do so with paper and ink; but I hope to come to you and speak face to face, that our joy may be full.” He had other things to say, but he didn’t want to put it in writing.

III John 9-10, “I wrote to the church, but Diotrephes, who loves to have the preeminence among them does not receive us. Therefore, if I come, I will call to mind his deeds which he does, prating against us with malicious words. And not content with that, he himself does not receive the brethren, and forbids those who wish to, putting them out of the church.”

Now, by the end of John’s life, the situation had deteriorated to the point that the visible church that was emerging was actually being controlled by false prophets—individuals who didn’t want to accept the authority of John and the original apostles.

You know how they did that? How can you get by doing something like that? How do you excuse it? There are a couple of techniques they used. One technique was an ingenious doctrine they came up with known in history as the “two-church theory.” The two-church theory was the idea that there are two sets of rules—one for Jews and one for Gentiles. The theory was that Paul was the apostle to the Gentiles, and Peter and John and the others were the apostles to the Jews. And, yes, the Jews continued to keep the law and continued to observe the Sabbath; that was alright for them to do at that time. But those things never pertained to anybody except the Jews. The Gentiles said they were not under the law and that Paul said they didn’t have to obey any of those things.

This was the line of reasoning that began to be used. They said, ‘The law doesn’t apply to us. We are Gentiles; they are Jews. Sure the Jerusalem Church keeps the Sabbath. That’s fine. Let them do it. But they are Jews and we are not. We don’t need to do that. So, if John writes something, we don’t have to receive that. John is not the apostle to the Gentiles. Sure, he was one of the twelve, but what he says really doesn’t apply to us because we are Gentiles. He’s kind of old and everything.’

The theory gained great vogue among the followers of Simon in the latter first century and second century. Then, once they got control, they did away with the two-church theory and said everybody had to conform to what they were doing. They said, ‘I don’t care, even if you are a Jew, you have to quit keeping the law.’

I want to read to you some interesting quotes from The Decline and Fall of the Roman Empire by Edward Gibbon who was a famous historian of the Roman Empire. He has some interesting things to say about the early church. He deals with some of that. I will read a little bit of Gibbons. Notice the progression.

Chapter 13, “The ancient and popular doctrine of the Millennium was intimately connected with the second coming of Christ. As the works of the creation had been finished in six days, their duration in their present state, according to a tradition, which was attributed to the prophet Elijah, was fixed to six thousand years. By the same analogy, it was inferred that this long period of labor and contention, which was now almost elapsed, would be succeeded by a joyful Sabbath of a thousand years, and that Christ with the triumphant band of the saints and the elect who had escaped upon earth till the time appointed for the last and general resurrection.”

Now, that sounds like a summary from some of our literature. We have had articles that said something similar. He was writing back in the 1700s. He was writing a history of the decline and fall of the Roman Empire. This particular chapter was called “The Triumph of Christendom in the Roman Empire.” He is writing about the early church. He says this is what the early church taught. It is a matter of history.

The idea of the doctrine of the Millennium, or six thousand years, is not something Mr. Herbert Armstrong invented. That was something the early church was teaching. That was a matter of secular history. Here was a secular historian who was not a part of the true Church. He was a part of the Church of England, writing over two hundred years ago. He was writing that this is what they taught. Notice what he says.

“The assurance of such a Millennium was carefully inculcated by a succession of fathers from Justin Martyr and Irenaeus, who conversed with the immediate disciples of the apostles, down to Lactantius, who was a preceptor to the son of Constantine. Though it might not be universally received, it appears to have been the reigning sentiment of the orthodox believers; and it seems so well adapted to the desires and apprehensions of mankind, that it must have contributed in a very considerable degree to the progress of the Christian faith. But when the edifice on the church was almost completed, the temporary support was laid aside. The doctrine of Christ's reign upon earth was at first treated as a profound allegory, was considered by degrees as a doubtful and useless opinion, and was at length rejected as the absurd invention of heresy and fanaticism."

So, there was a progression of changing it and getting away from it. It changed from acceptance to toleration, to branding it as anathema and ready to persecute them.

Gibbon has a number of interesting things. He says, "When we discover that the doctrine of the immortality of the soul is omitted in the Law of Moses...From these specious and noble principles, the philosophers who trod in the footsteps of Plato deduced a very unjustifiable conclusion, since they asserted not only the future immortality, but the past eternity of the human soul..."

He talks about the Gnostics. We will discuss the Gnostics a little bit. The term "Gnostic" is the Greek word for "knowledge" or "we know." The concept of the Gnostics really stemmed from Simon Magus. The Gnostics had a very great impact in the first century. In fact, a lot of the issues we read of in the New Testament in terms of Paul and John's epistles have to do with refuting the Gnostics.

Now, Gibbon has some comments to make about the Gnostics. "The Gnostics blended with the faith of Christ many sublime but obscure tenets, which they derived from oriental philosophy and even from the religion of Zoroaster concerning the eternity of matter, the existence of two principles and the mysterious hierarchy of the invisible world."

We find that the Gnostics sort of blended in, as he says, the faith of Christ with many sublime but obscure tenets. In effect, the Gnostics utilized a technique of interpretation called "allegory." Now allegory is important to understand because this was the way that the truth of God or the law of God was explained away. The word "allegory" comes from a word in the Greek language which means "to speak in riddles." The concept of allegory was that something doesn't really mean what it says—it is an allegory, simply a riddle to teach a spiritual truth. The reason allegories came in and came to be used so prevalently was because the religion of the ancient Greeks was contained in the mythology written by Homer.

If you have ever read any of the old Greek mythology, you realize that it is sort of like one big soap opera in the sky. It was some pretty raunchy stuff. As the Greeks progressed and various philosophers rose, they were a little bit embarrassed that their religious works were nothing more than just tales of rape, pillage, adultery and fornication, and this goddess and that god, and all of these crazy things going back and forth. It was a little embarrassing that this was all they had by way of religious works. So, the philosophers figured out that when Homer wrote these things, he didn't really mean that this happened and that happened; it was an allegory. It was simply to teach us about spiritual truths. It was to teach about truth, fear, anger, evil desire and knowledge. So they came up with the idea that these stories were allegories. They were to teach us about certain things about spiritual truths, and this became the popular way of the Greek philosophers explaining their own books. They sort of explain away everything that was embarrassing as an allegory. This spread and became a very popular method of interpretation.

It had its effect even on certain Jews. Philo, who was a Jew in Alexandria, Egypt, became a famous author. He really went in for allegories and applied a lot of it to the Old Testament. This was tailor-made for Simon and the Samaritans. The Samaritans paid lip service to accepting the first five books of the Bible and the Law of Moses, but they didn't really keep the Law. This was tailor-made.

The Gnostics adopted allegory. This is why it became the mystery religion. They said they had the key and you couldn't understand without their key. When you read it, all you're reading is a story about Abraham; you don't realize that it's not what it is talking about. It is teaching various "spiritual" things. The Gnostics really went in for this sort of thing. They blended these things together.

(This may not be word-for-word from the book)
"One example: The Gnostics had objections against the authority of Moses and the prophets. The objections were eagerly embraced and urged by the vain science of the Gnostics. As those heretics were, for the most part, adverse to the pleasures of senses, they morosely arraigned the polygamy of the patriarchs, the gallantries of David, these things, the conquest of the land of Canaan and the extermination of the unsuspecting natives. They were lost as to how to do this, so what they did was the Mosaic account of the creation. The fall of man was treated with profane derision by the Gnostics. They would not listen with patience to the response of the deity after six days of labor, to the rib of Adam, the Garden of Eden and the tree of life and knowledge. So, they treated these things as an allegory. And they said that the literal sense is repugnant to every principle of faith as well as reason, and they deem themselves secure and vulnerable behind the ample veil of allegory, which they carefully spread over every tender part of the Mosaic dispensation.”

What it amounts to is that if you treat the law as an allegory, then when it says, “Remember the Sabbath day and keep it holy,” that doesn’t really mean you can’t work on the Sabbath. That’s just sort of allegory. They began to undermine the authority of Scripture by simply treating things as allegorical. You combine this with the so-called two-church theory and they had the basis of undermining the authority of the Bible.

The term “Gnostic” is a general term that is applied to heresy. It’s used primarily to designate the dualism between God and matter. Gnosticism tore away at the authority of the Scriptures by saying that the real meaning was allegorical. They taught that their initiates were no longer subject to the moral commandments. This was simply a continuation of the old mystery religion.

The primary goal of the Gnostic movement was to introduce a no-law doctrine and to attempt to wrest their own meaning from the Scripture, primarily from Paul’s writings. This laid the groundwork for much of what later became the Catholic Church. They laid groundwork. They would not literally accept any of the statements of Scripture. They would not accept the fact that Jesus Christ literally was God and that He was born as a human being to live as a human being. They denied many of these things.

There arose a number of heresies. It wasn’t just simply one heresy. There were a lot of heresies. There were all kinds of false doctrines and false ideas going on. What ultimately became the Catholic Church did not accept and absorb every one of them. It is simply an outgrowth of one set of heresies that was influenced in certain areas by other heresies. Certain elements of truth were clung to and certain elements of heresy were accepted. As the years went by, there were more changes and modifications. There were more acceptances of all sorts of paganism that came to be a part of it. Even many of the early Catholic fathers would be amazed and flabbergasted at some of the things that are done today because they hadn’t gone that far.

Take Christmas for example. Even the church at Rome didn’t popularly accept that until up into the fourth century. It was up into the fourth century before that even began to get acceptance in the church at Rome. Even some of the heretics of the second and third century would have been surprised at that one.

The widespread use of idols was something that only gradually gained prominence. It didn’t really begin to come in until the second century. In the third century it became more and more utilized.

The Gnostics took a blend of oriental mysticism. In other words, the Babylonian Mystery Religion took a blend of Judaism and the Old Testament, which they treated in an allegorical fashion. They blended those things together with the doctrine of Christ and came up with a hodge-podge. There were a variety of different things. But there was one thing that set the stage for a lot of problems. Just as the Jews had been dispersed to cities throughout the known world, so also, after the time of Alexander the Great, the Samaritans had been dispersed. There were large settlements of Samaritans in Rome and in Alexandria, Egypt.

Simon the sorcerer was the great religious leader of the Samaritans to whom they all gave heed from the greatest to the least. He was acknowledged as the power of God (Acts 8:9-10). When Simon and his followers (claiming to be Christians) came into these areas, they quickly gained influence—particularly in Rome and Alexandria where there was a sizable Samaritan population. Simon was acknowledged as the religious leader to the Samaritans.

These concepts of Gnosticism influenced many different ones, particularly certain Jews and certain ones even as a part of the Church. There were those who had accepted more truth and some who had accepted less truth. But there was a fatal flaw because there wasn’t an acceptance or a spirit of yielding to the authority of God’s Word in the literal sense. There was an absence of commitment to the integrity of the law of God. The real issue ultimately got back to the authority of the law of God.

There were various ones and various other things that came in to add to all of this “stir and mix.” There were Greek philosophies and the stoics who had their ideas. They had a great deal of public influence in the first century. They taught that man alone in his present state of existence could achieve perfection. It was a concept of penance. The stoics really went in for that. They taught that there were things you could do. By some system of rigorous penance, you could bring yourself to perfection. When you take in that this is a general and popular concept of much of the Greek world and you add in the increasing influence of the Gnostics, you have a real mix. That sets the stage to completely misunderstand the role of the law of God in the plan of salvation because if you can save yourself, if you can do enough good things to outweigh the bad things, then why did Christ have to die? It strikes at the very root and core of Christianity. If you can atone for your own sins, why did Christ have to die? Why did He go through that? Paul admonished and warned Timothy of these concepts of knowledge falsely so-called.

I Timothy 6:20-21, "O Timothy! Guard what was committed to your trust, avoiding the profane and vain babblings and contradictions of what is falsely called knowledge—by professing it, some have strayed concerning the faith..." There were all these ideas floating around that were becoming more and more prevalent. It ultimately gave rise to the visible professing Christian Church. Yet there was also a different group.

In his history, Gibbons talks about some interesting things concerning the early Church. "The Jewish converts, who acknowledged Jesus in the character of the Messiah foretold by their ancient oracles, respected Him as a prophetic teacher of virtue and religion; but they obstinately adhered to the ceremonies of their ancestors...They affirmed that if the Being who is the same through all eternity had designed to abolish those sacred rites, which had served to distinguish his chosen people, the repeal of them would have been no less clear and solemn than their first promulgation...that the Messiah Himself, and His disciples who conversed with Him on earth, instead of authorizing by their example the most minute observances of the Mosaic law, would have published to the world the abolition of those useless and obsolete ceremonies without suffering Christianity to remain during so many years obscurely confounded among the sects of the Jewish church. Arguments like these appear to have been used in the defense of the expiring cause of the Mosaic law...The history of the church of Jerusalem affords a lively proof of the necessity of those precautions and of the deep impression which the Jewish religion had made on the minds of its sectaries. The first fifteen bishops of Jerusalem were afterwards called the Nazarenes, who had laid the foundation which they presided, united the Law of Moses with the doctrine of Christ..."

Now here's an admission of secular history. The first fifteen bishops of Jerusalem were all circumcised Jews, and they united the Law of Moses with the doctrine of Christ. Here is a clear admission by a secular historian that the early New Testament Church, the Church that Jesus founded, the Church at Jerusalem, kept the law.

"But when numerous and opulent societies were established in the great cities of the empire, in Antioch, Alexandria, Ephesus, Corinth and Rome, the reverence which Jerusalem had inspired to all the Christian colonies insensibly diminished. The Jewish converts, or as they were afterwards called the Nazarenes, who had laid the foundations of the church, soon found themselves overwhelmed by the increasing multitudes that from all the various religions of polytheism enlisted under the banner of Christ and the Gentiles who, with the approbation of their peculiar apostle, had rejected the intolerable weight of Mosaic ceremonies, at length refused to their more scrupulous brethren the same toleration which at first they had humbly solicited for their own practice. The ruin of the temple, of the city and of the public religion of the Jews was severely felt by the Nazarenes...The Nazarenes retired from the ruins of Jerusalem to the little town of Pella beyond the Jordan where that ancient church languished above sixty years in solitude and obscurity..."

"But at length, under the reign of Hadrian, the desperate fanaticism of the Jews filled up the measure of their calamities and the Romans, exasperated by their repeated rebellions, exercised the right of victory with unusual rigor. The emperor founded under the name of Aelia Capitolina a new city on Mount Zion to which he gave the privileges of a colony, and denouncing the severest penalties against any of the Jewish people who should dare to approach its precincts, he fixed a vigilant garrison of a Roman cohort to enforce the execution of his orders. The Nazarenes had only one way left to escape the common proscription, and the force of truth was on this occasion assisted by the influence of temporal advantages. They elected Marcus for their bishop, a prelate of the race of the Gentiles and most probably a native either of Italy or of some of the Latin provinces. At his persuasion, the most considerable part of the congregation renounced the Mosaic Law in the practice of which they had persevered above a century. By this sacrifice of their habits and prejudices, they purchased a free admission into the colony of Hadrian and more firmly cemented their union with the Catholic Church. When the name and honors of the Church of Jerusalem had been restored to Mount Zion, the crimes of heresy and schism were imputed to the obscure remnant of the Nazarenes, which refused to accompany their Latin bishop. They still preserved their former habitation of Pella, spread themselves into the villages adjacent to Damascus, and formed an inconsiderable church in the city of Berea... They soon received from the supposed poverty of their understanding as well as of their condition, the contemptuous epithet of Ebionites... He ventured to determine in favor of such an imperfect Christian, if he were content to practice the Mosaic ceremonies....”

He continues and talks a little bit about them. It’s interesting that even secular historians can see that the early Church was not at all the church that emerges from the shadows. The church that emerged from the shadows, the church that was identified as the Christian Church or as the Catholic Church, is a far different group than the people among whom Peter and Paul labored.

Groundwork was laid and the true Church was established. In Revelation 2 and 3, we have the outline of the history of the true Church of God. It is a great contrast with the outline that we find in Revelation 17 and 13 of a false church, a great powerful church. A great fallen woman is described in Revelation 17, called a great whore that sits upon many waters (v. 15), the one who rides the beast (v. 7). A great false church is descriptive of something totally different than that which Paul describes as the Bride of Christ.

What we have in the first century was a battle, a battle for the Bible or the truth of God. It was a battle for the law of God because the issues involved were ultimately not peripheral issues. They were not little things here or there. They involved a fundamental acceptance and adherence to the law of God, to observing the Sabbath, the holy days, to the basic law of God and the plan of God. As these things began to give way to all of the pagan ideas around, it was subtle. It didn’t occur at the “snap of a finger.” Within a period of time, the things that Paul warned about, the mystery of iniquity that he said was already at work (II Thessalonians 2:7), continued to work.

We find ourselves today as the successors of the Jerusalem Church, not the church at Rome, not the church at Alexandria. We find ourselves as the spiritual descendants of the Jerusalem Church. It is important that we understand some of these things and how it set the stage. Even by the admissions of secular history, the church that emerged was far different than the Church that Jesus built. Various ideas and philosophies came in and served to subvert and undermine the authority of the Scriptures. When you undermine the authority of the Scriptures to determine our life, the way we should live, the things we should do and not do, then you subvert the very basis of God’s authority in our lives.

With these things, we focused a little bit on some wrap ups of Church history and some major influences in the first-century Church history.

Next Bible study we are going to start a brand new series. We are going to start into the Minor Prophets. We are going to go into some things about prophecy and the Minor Prophets in particular. The twelve Minor Prophets are short books, but an awful lot is packed in there. So the next Bible study will be the first Bible study of the new series on the Minor Prophets.

Minor Prophets Series—Introduction

This evening we are getting into a new Bible study series, a series on the Minor Prophets. The Minor Prophets play a very important role in the understanding of the Bible and the understanding of God's plan. There are many, many things that come out.

The Minor Prophets are minor, but not in the sense of importance. They are referred to as Minor Prophets to distinguish them from what are called the Major Prophets. The difference in them has nothing to do with importance. It is reflective of the length or size of the books.

The Jews traditionally recognized three divisions of Scripture: the Law, the Prophets and the Writings. These divisions would refer to what we term the Old Testament.

The Law was the most basic revelation of God. It consisted of the five books of Moses called in Hebrew, the Torah. The word "Torah" simply means "Law." The books of Genesis, Exodus, Leviticus, Numbers and Deuteronomy form the most basic revelation of God. This is the starting point. God introduces Himself to us in Genesis as the Creator and He begins the process of teaching and instructing with His basic law.

Some of this sets a stage. What we are going into this evening is introduction and background as far as the Minor Prophets are concerned. But the term "Law" or "Torah" is a lot more inclusive than what we sometimes think. We tend to think of law where everything is spelled out. Our concept of law is more akin to rules. We think of "do this, that or something else," or "don't do this, that, etc." We think that's what law is. Those kinds of statements are law, but law consists of much more than simply "thou shall" and "thou shall not."

The entire first five books of the Bible are called "the Law," "the Book of the Law," "the Law of Moses" or "the Torah." We find that the law consists of testimonies as well as commandments, statutes, ordinances and judgments. It consists of all these things. Much of God's law is given by way of example or illustration—by what the Bible terms testimonies. Testimonies are simply a witness or a testified account of God's working that has transpired. So, one of the main ways we gain insight into the will of God is through the examples and illustrations that God records.

God introduced Himself to us at the creation. He gives us the basis for understanding who He is and the right that He has to establish commandments. God introduces us to Himself and to His most fundamental revelation in the first five books of the Bible. Everything else in the Bible is based upon and built upon the five books of the Law. That is the starting point.

After the Law came the Prophets and then the Writings. The Prophets consist of what are termed the Former and Latter Prophets. The Former Prophets were the books that we term historical: Joshua, Judges, Samuel and Kings. The Latter Prophets are the books we think of as prophetic: the Major and the Minor Prophets. The Major Prophets are Isaiah, Jeremiah and Ezekiel and the Minor Prophets are The Twelve, beginning with Hosea on through Malachi.

Prophecy and history are the same thing seen from different directions. We look back on history and we look forward on prophecy. It is simply where you are in the continuum of time that makes the distinction between history and prophecy. Much of what we study today is prophecy. In the Millennium, we will study it as history. It is already there. Some of the things prophesied in the Old Testament were fulfilled with the first coming of the Messiah. Those things we study as a matter of history. They were given as prophecy; now, they are history. There are events that relate prophetically, but as these things come to pass, they then fall in the category of what we call history. It is a continuum of time and depending on our perspective (the point where we are), we look backward on certain things and forward on certain things.

Since God inhabits eternity (Isaiah 57:15), there is not the same distinction we would make. That is sort of mind boggling when you consider it because God exists outside the realm of time. Time exists for human beings. Time was created and established for human beings. Time is regulated by the workings of the interaction of the heavenly bodies and the cycles that God established. Before God created the physical universe, there wasn't any such thing as time.

The Prophets build upon the law. The Prophets show you the results and the consequences when the law is obeyed and when it is disobeyed. The law is the basis for all the prophets. Everything in the prophets is simply an expansion of the blessings and curses that are contained in the law.

Remember when Moses gave the law in Deuteronomy? We have the account before Israel went into the Promised Land. He gathered them together, put them on Mount Ebal and Mount Gerizim and gave them the blessings and curses (Deuteronomy 11:26-29). You are blessed for obedience and cursed for disobedience. That ultimately sums up the prophets. The message of the prophets is the consequences of either obedience or disobedience to the law. That's what gives predictability because when you obey the law, there are results; when you disobey the law, there are results. God's law carries consequences, both good and bad.

From what we term the Former Prophets (Joshua, Judges, Samuel and Kings), we see the way God responded and dealt with Israel. We see the historical account of what happened when Israel obeyed and disobeyed. We see the distinction that comes in.

In the Latter Prophets, both the Major ones (Isaiah, Jeremiah and Ezekiel) as well as the Minor Prophets (The Twelve), we look forward and anticipate the consequences and results. We see the curses of Israel's disobedience that ultimately resulted in their captivity. We see the blessings that are going to occur when Jesus Christ returns and the government of God is set up on this earth. The Millennium is going to be a wonderful time. The earth will be a wonderful place during the thousand-year reign of the Messiah. The reason is because a King will reign in righteousness and princes will rule in judgment (Isaiah 32:1). God's law is righteousness.

Psalm 119:172, "...For all Your commandments are righteousness." The Millennium will be a wonderful time and place because the law of God will be the basis by which society will conduct itself, and there will be results and consequences.

The Writings are the poetic books: Psalms, Proverbs, Job, the five festival scrolls (Song of Solomon, Ruth, Lamentations, Ecclesiastes and Esther), and then conclude with the books that were written after the exile: Daniel, Ezra, Nehemiah and Chronicles. For the most part, most of the Writings serve as a poetic amplification of the law as well as including the wrap up, the concluding accounts that were written after the exile to sort of finish off the Old Testament—God's revelation in the Hebrew language. Again, it represents an amplification of the law. It all gets back to the law.

The Minor Prophets that we are focusing on over the next number of Bible studies are the twelve books. In fact, sometimes in Hebrew, they are simply referred to as "The Twelve." They were normally in one long scroll because they were short, and if you put them all together, they would be no longer than many of the longer books of the Bible.

They consist of several things. There are several different periods during which these books are grouped. There is dispute as to why they are arranged as they are. There are various theories developed on it. However, if we look at the pattern of the Major Prophets and at the pattern of the Minor Prophets that are dated, there is a pattern that establishes itself. If we look at Isaiah, Jeremiah and Ezekiel as something to establish a pattern, why are they arranged as they are?

Isaiah 1:1, we are told, "The vision of Isaiah the son of Amoz, which he saw concerning Judah and Jerusalem in the days of Uzziah, Jotham, Ahaz, and Hezekiah, kings of Judah." The period of Isaiah was a period that had its beginnings considerably before the captivity of Northern Israel.

Isaiah 6:1, "In the year that King Uzziah died, I saw the Lord sitting on a throne, high and lifted up, and the train of His robe filled the temple." He began his writings in the last year of King Uzziah, which was about 732 B.C. We would reference that in Isaiah 6:1 when Isaiah dates his vision to the year that King Uzziah died. So, we would date Isaiah beginning his ministry about 732 B.C. and continuing on down to the end of the lifetime of King Hezekiah in 686 B.C.

When we come down to Jeremiah, it says in Jeremiah 1:1-2, "The words of Jeremiah the son of Hilkiah, of the priests who were in Anathoth in the land of Benjamin, to whom the word of the Lord came in the days of Josiah the son of Amon, king of Judah, in the thirteenth year of his reign."

Jeremiah, according to v. 2, had his beginning in 625 B.C., which was the thirteenth year of Josiah. It continued on down until after the fall of Jerusalem in 587 B.C.

We notice that Isaiah began his ministry considerably before Jeremiah did. In fact, Isaiah's ministry had ended almost sixty years before Jeremiah's began.

We come down to Ezekiel a little later.

Ezekiel 1:1-2, "Now it came to pass in the thirtieth year, in the fourth month, on the fifth day of the month, as I was among the captives by the River Chebar, that the heavens were opened and I saw visions of God. On the fifth day of the month, which was in the fifth year of King Jehoiachin's captivity." We would date this to 591 B.C. because the year of King Jehoiachin's captivity was the second invasion of Nebuchadnezzar in 596 B.C. Therefore, we would date this to 591 B.C. when Ezekiel began his prophesy and it continued until 569 B.C.

We notice that Isaiah, Jeremiah and Ezekiel are clearly arranged in chronological order. We know the Major Prophets were arranged in chronological order because they are clearly dated. This gives us a little bit of a pattern. The pattern is not quite as easily established in the Minor Prophets as they are in the Major Prophets, but it gives us some insight and ideas.

You can read commentaries and find that different ones say different things. They will argue about the dates of the Minor Prophets. Most of them don't have any idea why they are arranged as they are. Clearly, at least in a general sense, they are arranged in chronological order.

We know that the first seven of the Minor Prophets (Hosea, Joel, Amos, Obadiah, Jonah, Micah and Nahum) are all books that date to what we would term the Assyrian period. It is called that because Assyria came to an end as a world power in 612 B.C. with the fall of Nineveh. The Medes teamed up with some other nations and sacked Nineveh, and it was destroyed in 612 B.C. This set the stage for the rise of Babylon. The first seven Minor Prophets clearly fall within that range. Most of those can be dated.

The books of Habakkuk and Zephaniah fall in what we would term the Chaldean period. They date to a time of Babylonian ascendancy and their warnings have to do with Babylon. Babylon is the emerging power.

The last three books, Haggai, Zechariah and Malachi, are what are termed post-exilic. That is, after the exile, after the Jews returned with Zerubbabel from Babylonian captivity. Clearly, we find at least a general chronological order. I can demonstrate that.

Hosea 1:1, "The word of the Lord that came to Hosea the son of Beeri, in the days of Uzziah, Jotham, Ahaz, and Hezekiah, kings of Judah, and in the days of Jeroboam the son of Joash, king of Israel." We find that Hosea would have been approximately contemporary with at least the early part of Isaiah's prophecies. His period ends with Hezekiah, King of Judah (Isaiah 1:1). The prophetic career of Hosea lists kings of Israel and Judah, and if you overlap them together, you will find that his prophetic career began about 770 B.C. during the reign of Jeroboam II, King of Israel and came on down to around 710 B.C., which was after the captivity of the ten tribes. Hosea is clearly an early prophet during the Assyrian domination. We would date Hosea to that early period.

When we come to Joel, Joel does not start off by giving us a date. There is not a clear internal date in the book of Joel.

It just starts off, Joel 1:1, "The word of the Lord that came to Joel the son of Pethuel." It goes through and gives the prophetic message. It goes through the things that are going to occur, but it is not clearly dated.

Amos is the third of the Minor Prophets.

Amos 1:1, "The words of Amos, who was among the herdsmen of Tekoa, which he saw concerning Israel in the days of Uzziah king of Judah, and in the days of Jeroboam the son of Joash, king of Israel, two years before the earthquake." Amos would clearly date as contemporary with the very early part of Hosea's prophecies. We can clearly date Hosea and Amos. Joel doesn't say.

Jonah is not clearly dated except in a couple ways. One, Jonah went to warn Nineveh of impending destruction and Nineveh was spared. We know from this that we are talking about a period earlier than 612 B.C. because Nineveh was destroyed in 612 B.C.

If we go back to II Kings 14, we will notice something. Sometimes people are unaware of this.

II Kings 14:23-25, "In the fifteenth year of Amaziah the son of Joash, king of Judah, Jeroboam the son of Joash, king of Israel, became king in Samaria, and reigned forty-one years. And he did evil in the sight of the Lord, he did not depart from all the sins of Jeroboam the son of Nebat, who had made Israel sin. He restored the territory of Israel from the entrance of Hamath to the Sea of the Arabah, according to the word of the Lord God of Israel, which He had spoken through His servant Jonah the son of Amitai, the prophet who was from Gath Hepher."

Jonah 1:1, "Now the word of the Lord came to Jonah the son of Amittai..." Clearly we are talking about the same Jonah. We can date the book of Jonah to the latter part of the reign of King Jeroboam II. We can date Hosea, Amos and Jonah. All three of those are clearly dated as beginning at the same general time.

We can put a question mark by Joel and Obadiah. Micah clearly dates a little later (around 740-690 B.C.) based on the kings whose reigns he overlapped and based on the other dates. Hosea we would date about 770-710 B.C.; Amos, 760 B.C.; Jonah, 750 B.C.; and Micah, about 740-690 B.C. This is based on internal dating. Joel and Obadiah we would put a question mark by them because you can't date them internally in the same way you can the others.

Nahum does not date itself in the same way. Nahum is a prophecy against Nineveh. We can date it prior to 612 B.C. because Nineveh was destroyed in 612 B.C. and there wasn't any point in prophesying against Nineveh after 612 B.C. Nahum doesn't date internally except that we could say that Nahum was prior to 612 B.C., a time when Assyria was the enemy. His prophecy is against Assyria.

Habakkuk prophesied against the Chaldeans. We can date Habakkuk generally but not specifically. It doesn't date itself exactly. There's not an internal date, but he is dealing with the Chaldeans. They began to arise about 620 B.C. They came into dominance and achieved world status after the fall of Nineveh.

We can date Zephaniah to about 620 B.C., to the time of Josiah's reign.

Zephaniah 1:1, "The word of the Lord which came to Zephaniah the son of Cushi, the son of Gedaliah, the son of Amariah, the son of Hezekiah, in the days of Josiah the son of Amon, king of Judah." Josiah began to be king about 620 B.C. Zephaniah would clearly be contemporary with the early part of Jeremiah's ministry. It might be helpful to have a list of the Minor Prophets because I am going to keep jumping back and forth, giving you some overview. So, you may want to write some of these dates down and line them up so you can visually see it.

Haggai 1:1, "In the second year of King Darius, in the sixth month, on the first day of the month, the word of the Lord came by Haggai the prophet to Zerubbabel the son of Shealtiel, governor of Judah, and to Joshua the son of Jehozakak, the high priest..." The second year of Darius would be 520 B.C. Haggai is dated to the sixth month of 520 B.C., which would be the month before the Feast of Tabernacles. So, he started prophesying in 520 B.C., the month before the Feast.

If you turn to Zechariah, he starts prophesying in the eighth month of the second year of Darius. Zechariah 1:1, "In the eighth month of the second year of Darius, the word of the Lord came to Zechariah the son of Berechiah, the son of Iddo the prophet..." He prophesied the same year. Notice there is a two-month difference. Haggai prophesied in the sixth month; Zechariah prophesied in the month after the Feast. The arrangement of Haggai and Zechariah is interesting because clearly it is chronological, even if it was only a distinction of two months. The one that was dated first came first.

Malachi is not clearly internally dated, though by all tradition, it is considered the very last book to have been written. Malachi is, at least from a traditional standpoint, considered to tie in with the time of Ezra and Nehemiah.

What do we find? We find that Joel, Obadiah, Nahum and Habakkuk cannot be clearly dated in terms of internal evidence. From all the ones that are clearly dated, we see that they all run in a chronological order. Based on the fact that the Major Prophets are clearly chronological and based on the fact that every one of the Minor Prophets that we can date are in chronological order, we see that God does things in a logical way. He doesn't just throw them in hodgepodge and just kind of stick them in any old way. God does things in a purposeful way. He is not the author of confusion, so undoubtedly, there was a reason as to why the books were arranged the way they are.

The most logical reason, that I am aware of, is that the Minor Prophets were probably arranged and preserved for us in the Canon in chronological order. That way we would date Hosea 770-710 B.C. Hosea is clearly dated internally by the scriptures. Joel we would date to about 770 B.C. We would date him about the same time of Hosea. Amos is internally dated. The date that it gives for itself, internally, is about 760 B.C. Obadiah is not clearly dated. Jonah is dated to about 750 B.C. We would date Obadiah about the same, 750 B.C. This would run 770, 770, 760, 750 and 750. Micah is dated from 740-690 B.C., so he would come next. Nahum we would date about 650 B.C. Nahum clearly comes after Jonah when Assyria's repentance hadn't lasted. So God is really going to "put it to them" this time. We would date these seven prophets to a period of Assyrian ascendancy.

Most of the commentators will agree on that part of it, but then they want to come up with some other dating method for the books that aren't dated. They seem to have a problem concluding that the books are chronological. But when you look at the way they are laid out, I think that's the most logical way. Habakkuk and Zephaniah, clearly date to the Chaldean period. Zephaniah we date to about 620 B.C., Habakkuk about the same, coming a little before Zephaniah. Haggai was written a couple of months earlier than Zechariah. Last of all, Malachi, we would probably date in the vicinity of 400-420 B.C.—something like that.

We would date the Minor Prophets or figure their arrangement primarily on a chronological basis. We see that slightly over half of them (seven out of the twelve) can be internally dated very clearly. Malachi is a very probable date attested to by tradition. That leaves us only four, and they fall in this sequence that would lend itself logically to what we are saying here.

Let's understand a little bit about prophecy. When we think of prophecy we tend to limit it to strictly a prediction of the future. But prophecy is really an oral or written disclosure in words through a human mouthpiece, transmitting the revelation of God and setting forth God's will to man. Prophecy, used in the term that is used in the Bible, does not necessarily have to be predictive, though we normally think of it that way. The Hebrew word for prophet is "nabi." It comes from a word that means "to summon" or "announce" or "to call." It means one who has been called or appointed to proclaim, as a herald, the message of God. It is someone that God has appointed to announce or proclaim His message. In that sense, a prophet of God was not necessarily predicting the future.

Elijah is considered the greatest of the prophets, and yet we don't find that his main mission seems to have concerned itself with a whole lot of prediction as we think of it. There were certainly predictive aspects. In fact, Elijah's life and ministry was predictive because Malachi tells us that prior to the coming of the Messiah, God would first send Elijah the prophet to turn the hearts of the fathers to the children and the hearts of the children to the fathers (Malachi 4: 5-6).

Jesus Christ clearly identifies the fact that prior to His first coming, John the Baptist was raised up in the spirit and power of Elijah to prepare the way and to make ready a people prepared for the Lord (Luke 1:16-17). John the Baptist fulfilled the prophecy of coming in the spirit and power of Elijah in terms of Christ's first coming. But when you read the context of the prophecy in Malachi, it is clear that what we would term the second coming of the Messiah is even more directly referred to.

I think it has been our understanding over the years in the Church that Mr. Herbert Armstrong was raised up by God to fulfill a similar mission—a mission to prepare a people made ready for the Lord, to carry out the work of Elijah and to do an Elijah work. Certainly, he referred to that many times himself and, certainly, he felt and understood that God was using him in that way. I think that, certainly, the vast overwhelming majority of us in the Church felt the same way—that he was established in that way.

So, you can say that Elijah's work and ministry was itself predictive and prophetic because it set the stage. Elijah came when the nation of Israel had lost sight of the true God and had gotten off into other things. Elijah was called to restore the knowledge of the true religion in Israel. John the Baptist came and did something similar to that.

God raised up Mr. Herbert Armstrong back in the 1920s at a time during the fifth era of God's Church, the Sardis era. The Sardis era is described as a dying remnant that had a name and that it was alive, but for all practical purposes, it was spiritually dead (Revelation 3: 1-6). It was certainly not in a position to proclaim any message to the nation or to the world. Mr. Armstrong was raised up in the context of restoring the knowledge of the true religion in Israel. That was a part of the way that God used him.

I think we have to understand that God has used His different servants in different ways. Every messenger and servant of God has not had exactly the same mission. God has used different ones to warn different groups. He has used His servants in the overall scheme of performing His work, but He has used them differently.

We have to understand and recognize that God worked through each of the Minor Prophets in different ways. If you go through each of the Minor Prophets, you find that God worked through these individuals in different ways. They were all God's servants, but He worked through them over a period of time in different ways. Some were utilized and did a work in a certain context. Others, God used to focus on a different aspect of His work or message. The point is that prophecy is not simply prediction. It is the announcement or proclamation of God's will. There is often a predictive element to prophecy.

One of the things to recognize is the distinction between the prophets and the Levites. The Levites were professionals. They didn't receive their office directly by divine call. They received their office by a hereditary succession in the Levitical priesthood. If you were a Levite, then obviously your father was a Levite. It was a tribal distinction, and the priesthood was a subdivision of the Levites through the descendants of the family of Aaron.

The prophets differed from the Levites. They were not automatic successors to an office. They did not inherit their prophetic office. The emphasis of a prophet was that he was one who was called to go out and announce or proclaim God's message. He was not someone who appointed himself to the job. He was not someone who inherited the job. You weren't a prophet simply because your father or your grandfather had been a prophet. The prophets were raised up by God.

God used individuals from a variety of walks of life. Some, evidently, were and could have been of Levitical background. Elijah, evidently, was a Levite. But that seems to have been the exception rather than the rule. Most of them who are recorded were not of Levitical ancestry at all.

Amos was a herdsman (farmer). He describes himself as a gatherer of sycamore fruit. He said he wasn't a prophet nor was he a prophet's son (Amos 7:14). He said he was not a professional; he was not in the prophet business. That was not his profession or his business, but rather, God called him and gave him a job to do. God thrust him into that. Over and over when we find God's servants used in that way, and particularly for a special mission or job, we see that God thrusts them into that job. It was not something they sought or sort of orchestrated or brought about and ensconced themselves into.

There are two kinds of prophets: oral and written prophets or oral and written prophecy. There are prophecies to which reference is made in the Scriptures that we don't have any record of. There isn't a book of Elijah or Elisha. We are told about Nathan the prophet, but there is no book of Nathan. There are many prophets to whom reference is made in the Scriptures of whom we don't have any record in terms of what they said. Or, we have what they said summarized in two or three verses and that is the entirety of what we know about their message.

Oral prophecies were announcements or proclamations from God that had significance for their day and time. The primary significance of the prophecies that were simply delivered orally was that they were not messages that were particularly relevant for all time. They were messages that zeroed in on a specific time and place. They were things that had significance at that time, but they really don't have a whole lot of implication for us today. God used many of the prophets primarily in their own day as His representative, and their mission was pretty well limited to that point in time.

However, there are a number of prophets whom God used (fifteen specifically) whose works are recorded in the Scriptures (in books that carry their names), whose works were not primarily for their day. They were written down for our admonition. One of the important things to understand about these Scriptures is that the prophets were writing messages that had implications far beyond their day. They were not simply social reformers as some of the modern commentaries like to think. They were not out leading marches and crusades, trying to campaign for this or that fellow to get elected in order to bring about some social reform for their day.

As Jeremiah put it in Jeremiah 10:23, they understood, "O Lord, I know the way of man is not in himself; it is not in man who walks to direct his own steps." We are not going to reform the world or nation or bring about social justice simply by the hand of man. If man could establish government the way it should be, then why does Jesus Christ have to come back and set it up? The whole point of Biblical prophecy is the fact that it is not in man who walks to direct his steps. The only solution to the problems that exist in this world is the establishment of the Kingdom of God. Jesus Christ came with the announcement, the proclamation of the good news of the Kingdom of God.

Daniel expressed it when he had gone through the succession of the world ruling empires in Daniel 2 and 7.

Daniel 2:44, he said, speaking of the final ten kings, "And in the days of these kings the God of heaven will set up a kingdom which shall never be destroyed; and the kingdom shall not be left to other people; it shall break in pieces and consume all these kingdoms, and it shall stand forever."

The Minor Prophets have a message that relates to the establishment of that Kingdom. It also relates to other nations and other powers.

One of the most important keys to understanding Bible prophecy, and perhaps the single most important key, is to understand the truth of the identity of Israel. That is crucial in importance because if you don't understand the identity of where Israel is, then you don't understand to whom reference is being made in the Minor and Major Prophets or any of the prophecies of the Old Testament.

If you don't know who Israel is, then you are in the same category as Jimmy Swaggart, Billy Graham and all the rest of the worldly ministers. They like to throw in a little bit about prophecy now and then, but they don't understand it. Why don't they understand it? Primarily because every time they read the word “Israel” in a scripture (and you read it an awful lot when you read the Bible because it is mentioned quite a bit), they assume that it is talking about a nation in the Middle East today by the name Israel. They assume it is talking about the nation of the Jews. If that’s what you think, then all of the prophecies of Isaiah, Jeremiah, Ezekiel, Hosea, and all the way down through Malachi only relate to the Jews and that nation that calls itself Israel.

Mr. Herbert Armstrong used to raise this point years ago: ‘Isn’t it amazing that the Bible, in prophecies about the end time, would go into great detail about little nations such as Egypt (which you read of prophetically) and various other nations that exist in the world, and yet no mention is made of the United States, Great Britain and the western European powers—the great world powers that have dominated the last two centuries.’

When the Napoleonic wars ended in 1814, Britain stood absolutely supreme on the world scene from 1814 to 1914. The British Navy was larger than the navies of the next two powerful nations combined. Britain stood unchallenged throughout the nineteenth century. In the aftermath of World War I, the United States emerged, having been gradually moving up. Between the world wars, the United States and Britain together were clearly the dominant and most powerful nations on earth. In the aftermath of World War II, Britain’s decline became very rapid. The United States had a period of dominance though it was, in terms of actual time, a much shorter period.

The point is: Where are our nations mentioned? Where does it talk about the United States? All the various ones—Hal Lindsey, The Late Great Planet Earth—none of them know where we are identified. They can’t tell you what’s going to happen to the United States (to our nation) because they don’t know where we are talked about in the Scriptures. And as a result, they don’t have the key.

In The United States and British Commonwealth in Prophecy booklet, Mr. Herbert Armstrong called that knowledge the key that unlocks Bible prophecy. It’s sort of interesting. In Revelation 3 (the prophecy of the Philadelphia era), it talks about this era as having the key of David (v. 7) because the key that unlocks Bible prophecy is the knowledge of where the throne of David is. It is the key to understand where Israel is. The understanding of Israel unlocks the Minor Prophets. That’s why we have an insight into what these twelve prophets are talking about.

An understanding of Bible prophecy is not necessary for salvation. The vast majority (even the prophets who wrote it) didn’t understand it. So, is it necessary to understand where Israel is in prophecy in order to get into the Kingdom of God? No. Probably, all through the centuries, the vast majority of God’s people lived and died, never understanding some of these things. Daniel didn’t understand the book of Daniel. He wrote it and didn’t understand it.

Daniel 12:8, he said, “...‘My Lord, what shall be the end of these things?’” ‘What’s all this “stuff” talking about?’

He was told, v. 9, “And he said, ‘Go your way, Daniel, for the words are closed up and sealed till the time of the end.’”

Verse 13, “‘But you, go your way till the end; for you shall rest, and will arise to your inheritance at the end of the days.’” ‘You are going to die and sleep in the ground. You will arise to your inheritance at the end of the days, but these things are closed up until the time of the end.’ It didn’t say they were closed up forever. It said they were closed up until the time of the end.

Knowledge would be increased (v. 4), knowledge of the Bible would be increased. There is knowledge of things that have relevance for us today that simply did not have relevance in the same way for generations and centuries past. So, those things were understood only in a very generalized way. Now, we don’t understand everything. The closer we get to the end, the more details will be understood.

Peter compared that to the dawning of a new day.

II Peter 1:19, “We also have the prophetic word made more sure, which you do well to heed as a light that shines in a dark place, until the day dawns and the morning star [which is the sun] rises in your hearts.” The point is: How does daylight come? When it is still pitch black, you can’t see anything. Then as the day star begins to dawn (the sun begins to come up), a little light appears in the eastern horizon and you begin to see shadowy outlines. Maybe you see clouds in the sky or trees, houses or barns. You can’t make out any details like color of a horse or deer, etc., but as the dawn gets a little lighter, you begin to pick out a few details and recognize things for what they are. Finally, when the sun actually comes up, there is quite a bit of light coming through the sky from east to west, and as the light gets brighter, you can pick out and discern more and more detail. You see distinctions that you couldn't determine earlier.

That's the way prophecy is understood. The further we are from the return of Christ, the more pitch-black things occurred. This was the state of things at the time most of the prophets wrote. It was pretty pitch-black. The closer we come from a prophetic standpoint, the more a dim outline begins to appear. You see the dim outline; that must be a house or barn. You think you know what it is. Maybe you're right and maybe you're not. As it gets a little closer and the light gets a little brighter, you say, 'No, that's not what I thought it was. That's something else.' You can see it more clearly. The closer we get, the more details unfold. Finally, when Christ returns, everything is totally clear and light. This is an important aspect to understand.

The understanding of the identity of Israel is very important to understand the implications of Bible prophecy. Without that knowledge we don't have any basis of understanding what applies to us and where our nations are going to fit in. God, obviously, takes up quite a bit of space dealing with these matters.

There are four basic elements of Hebrew prophecy. There are four principle elements that are involved as to why prophecies were given and the purpose that prophecy serves.

First, the prophets had the responsibility of encouraging God's people to trust only in God's power and not in allies. The prophets made plain that it was futile to trust in other nations as deliverer. One message that runs through the prophetic writing of all the prophets is Jeremiah 17.

Jeremiah 17:5, "Thus says the Lord: 'Cursed is the man who trusts in man and makes flesh his strength, whose heart departs from the Lord.'"

Verse 7, "'Blessed is the man who trusts in the Lord, and whose hope is the Lord.'" If you trust in man and make flesh your strength, then what you trust will fail you. If our only confidence (and the thing we have to support us) is other nations or other human governments, then we are heading for problems and trouble. The prophets all encouraged God's people to look to God for deliverance and for protection, not to put their trust in other nations.

That is a message that applies to our people today. It's a message that our people have not taken seriously. We think that we can ensure our protection. We're looking to all these nations that are our "friends," and we think that they will be there to back us up. We are very vulnerable in some areas. The great sophisticated technology that we were able to show off during the Gulf War—do you realize the little most necessary electronic components that make those things work are made in Japan? The Pentagon buys them from Japan. Some of them are not even any longer made in the United States. We are dependant upon Japan for about one-third of those things. It hasn't been all that long ago that the last American company that made some of those things went bankrupt. We said, 'Why the Japanese are our friends; we can depend on them. Surely, they would never refuse to sell us those things. The Germans and Russians are our friends. Right? They would never take advantage of us.' We have a false confidence.

The prophecy focused in on the importance of God's people looking to God, trusting God and not trusting in allies.

Second, prophecy serves to remind people that safety was conditioned upon faithful adherence to the covenant. The prophets stressed a sincere, heartfelt, moral religion. Safety, blessings and prosperity were conditioned upon Israel's faithful adherence to the covenant. You couldn't go out and do whatever you wanted to do. They couldn't feel like they had some sort of special dispensation—that they could live any way they wanted to live and it would never come back to haunt them.

The prophets certainly illustrated the fact that the blessings and benefits that God's people enjoyed were conditional upon obedience. God was not after a religion that simply involved going through the motions and outward show and conformity. It was a matter of putting God's way into practice. The prophecies served, therefore, to warn nations of the consequences of disobedience.

Third, they also served to encourage Israel with respect to the future. One of the great rolls of prophecy is encouragement. Remember back in one of the dark times (in '79) when we were having a lot of difficulty? Mr. Herbert Armstrong, in one of his sermons that he sent out, made the point in encouraging us. He said to the effect, 'Brethren, I've read the book. I've read the end of the story and the end of the story is we win. We win. That's the way the book ends.'

One of the purposes of prophecy is to encourage the people of God in the midst of adversity and difficulty. When it looks like everything is going the wrong way, prophecy is there to remind us that the God of heaven is working out a great plan and purpose, and we have something we can look forward to. We have a reality that we can look forward to, that goes beyond the things that can be seen, touched, felt and measured—the things that can be physically discerned. If the only source you have for knowledge of the future is looking at the television news or weekly new magazines, you don't have a whole lot of encouragement. Things can look like they are going one way when they are not.

It was only a couple of years ago that the idea that the Soviet Union would lose its domination of Eastern Europe and slide from being the major world power offsetting the United States was viewed as something so remote and so far off that it really didn't have any particular application for us. There wasn't any indication of the idea that the nations of Eastern Europe would be free to choose their own government. Nobody had any reason to think that would ever come about. In fact, all the experts had all kinds of reasons why it would certainly never be within the lifetime of any of us. It didn't work out that way.

The point is that in the midst of circumstances, God declares, as He says in Isaiah, the end from the beginning (Isaiah 46:10). There is encouragement. As we see our nation headed down, we read in the prophets about a future re-gathering after Christ returns and a restoration of benefits and blessings that will result from national repentance. So, there is encouragement with respect to the future that the prophets provided.

Fourth, prophesy also served to seal the authoritativeness of God's message by the verification of fulfilled prophecy. One of the roles is that certain prophecies preserved in the Bible have already been fulfilled. Those prophecies serve to seal the authoritativeness of God's message. They make plain that one of the proofs of the Bible is fulfilled prophecy. Certainly, many prophecies that relate to the Messiah have been fulfilled.

And there are places you can go in Ezekiel, for instance, that prophesied that Egypt would be conquered by Babylon and never again be ruled by a native prince (Ezekiel 30:10,13). People can quibble about when the book of Ezekiel was written if they want to, but any amount of quibbling doesn't do away with the fact that it's certainly been around for about twenty-five hundred years. The point is that prophecy is still being fulfilled. Regardless of quibbling about the exact date it was written, Ezekiel said, "a native prince would never again rule Egypt."

You have to understand that Egypt had been one of the primary nations that had existed. Egypt, at the time Ezekiel wrote, had existed as a major world power ruled by native princes for twenty-five hundred years. It passed into obscurity in a matter of years and it never again, from then until now, emerged as a major power and has never again been ruled by a native prince. Outsiders and foreigners have ruled it for decades and centuries, all the way to our time.

We see that there are many prophecies that certainly testify to the authoritativeness of the Word of God. There are prophecies of cities that would be destroyed and never rebuilt and prophecies of other cities that would endure and continue to endure. Prophecy serves as a sign and a proof of the authority of God. It serves to verify the authoritativeness of God's message. It serves to encourage His people with respect to the future. It serves to remind His people that safety and blessings are dependent upon faithful adherence and obedience to God. It encourages God's people to look to and trust God and not to depend on the physical allies and other things of the around. We have in the Minor Prophets things that very directly focus in on these things.

Some of the Minor Prophets are very short. Hosea is a little longer. There are fourteen chapters in Hosea. Joel is pretty short. We are going to lump some of the prophets together and cover them in the same Bible study because we are looking for a sort of overview, and I think we will have time to adequately go into it.

The next Bible study we will cover the books of Hosea and Joel. The book of Hosea is a very important prophecy. It has very detailed prophecy about Israel, things that are going to occur with God's people, Israel, and the way that God views them. Joel focuses in on the Day of the Lord and on the events surrounding the return of Jesus Christ. Clearly, the setting of it is not ancient.

Joel 2:1-2, "Blow the trumpet in Zion, and sound an alarm in My holy mountain! Let all the inhabitants of the land tremble; for the Day of the Lord is coming, for it is at hand: A day of clouds and thick darkness, like the morning clouds spread over the mountains. A people come, great and strong, the like of whom has never been; nor will there ever be any such after them, even for many successive generations."

Verse 11, "The Lord gives voice before His army, for His camp is very great; for strong is the One who executes His word. For the Day of the Lord is great and very terrible; who can endure it?"

And ultimately, Joel 3:17, “So you shall know that I am the Lord your God, dwelling in Zion My holy mountain. Then Jerusalem shall be holy, and no aliens shall ever pass through her again.”

Verse 20 describes a time when Judah will dwell forever in Jerusalem from generation to generation. It is clearly a time on into the future. The primary implication of these prophecies has to do for the future. Some of them, and some of the messages, will focus in as more contemporary. We will see that as we go through it.

There’s a lot in the book of Hosea. There’s a lot of detailed prophecy about the fall and captivity of Israel. There’s a lot of insight into some of the specific things that are going to happen and take place.

Notice Hosea 1:11, “Then the children of Judah and the children of Israel shall be gathered together, and appoint for themselves one head; and they shall come up out of the land, for great will be the day of Jezreel!” Here is a time when Israel and Judah are going to be gathered together. That is a time yet future. There are many things that we will see as we go through Hosea that clearly focus in on what God is going to do, and we will see the obvious proof that Israel and Judah are not synonymous. Hosea is a detailed prophecy of many of the things relating to Israel and Ephraim. If you don’t know who Israel and Ephraim are, then you can’t understand Hosea.

Joel focuses on the Day of the Lord. It is in some ways, a more general prophecy in terms of identifying specific nations. We will go into that next Bible study.

Minor Prophets Series—Hosea and Joel

We are going to get into the books of Hosea and Joel this evening. Hosea was a native of the Northern Kingdom. The nation of Israel had split into two sections: the Northern Kingdom (the northern ten tribes called Israel) and the Southern Kingdom called Judah. The nation had split soon after the death of King Solomon. At the time we pick up the story, the split was approximately one hundred thirty years downstream. So, quite a bit of time had transpired. A lot of time had passed as far as the history of the nation when Hosea came on the scene.

One of the things interesting to note is that a whole cluster of prophets (Hosea, Joel, Amos, Obadiah, Jonah and Micah) all flourish right in the same general time period. The prophet Isaiah was in that same general time period. It's the greatest cluster of prophets of which we have any record or evidence. The interesting thing is that their work began at a time when Northern Israel was at its height. It was approximately fifty to sixty years before the collapse and the Assyrian captivity. There are several things we learn from that. One thing we learn is expressed in the book of Amos.

Amos 3:7, "Surely the Lord God does nothing, unless He reveals His secret to His servants the prophets."

God will warn Israel prior to intervention, prior to punishment and captivity. God's greatest work in ancient Israel was done in a time of warning and witness. The nation was warned about where they were headed and the consequences of those actions. The warning came at a time when the nation was riding a crest of power. Now, that's an interesting thing, too. The warning didn't begin when the nation was on the way down and out and everybody could look around and say, 'Things are sure headed down; things are sure in trouble.' God began to warn when there was not any physical evidence that things weren't just going to get bigger and better.

When God raised up this work, Mr. Herbert Armstrong was used to raise up the radio program. The magazine began to go out, back in the 40s in the aftermath of World War II, through the 50s and through this time. America really was at a pinnacle of its power in the world. There are some of you sitting right here whose contact with the work goes way, way back to the early 50s or late 40s at a time when it seemed like America was on the way up and was at the pinnacle. Mr. Armstrong was giving warning that the nation was going down. And, at the time when Germany was down and at the bottom, he said Germany was going to come back. Germany was going to rebuild. He wrote the article "Will Russia Attack America" way back around 1951. That article was printed many times since because it was always a popular article. Up until the last few years, everybody thought that was the most likely thing. He had written an article on it way back at the beginning of the cold war. He understood from Biblical prophecy that would not occur. The point that I am making is that there is a parallel. God raises up His work at a time when the nation needs to be warned based on what God says, not on all of the physical evidence.

There's something interesting I am going to read to you. I'll read a little bit out of the Soncino Commentary, which talks about the circumstance in Israel and Judah at the time of this cluster of prophets—Hosea, Joel, Amos, Obadiah, Jonah, Micah, plus Isaiah (seven prophets) clustered in about that fifty to sixty-year time span. There certainly were individuals who saw all of those men and heard their message. There was this great concentration of prophets because of what was taking place.

The Soncino Commentary, "The Introduction to Micah" says, "The eighth century witnessed the emergence in Israel and Judah of a commercial civilization of great material prosperity. [Now you could substitute the words "twentieth century" and you would have a very good parallel to today.] Its foundations were laid in the peace and security, which Jeroboam II, who reigned from about 783-743 B.C., won for Israel, and Uzziah, who reigned from 778 to 740 B.C., for Judah." They overlapped considerably. The foundations of this commercial civilization were laid in the peace and security of Jeroboam II of Israel and Uzziah of Judah.

"And in the extensions of the borders of their kingdom from Damascus to the Red Sea, from the desert to the Mediterranean, giving the Hebrew states command of all of the main trade routes of ancient days. But it was a civilization which displayed all the evils of a society making haste to be rich. Greed and covetousness, reckless and unscrupulous competition, a pitiless disregard of the claims of sympathy, charity and brotherly consideration, extremes of wealth and poverty which had been impossible in an agricultural society based on the Biblical system of land tenure were dividing the nation into classes of possessors and dispossessed. The rich built up large estates with the help of corrupt judges; they added house-to-house and field-to-field, while the oppressed and dispossessed peasantry sought in vain for legal redress. The pursuit of commerce encouraged the development of cities and city life. And it was to the city that the landless farmers migrated in search of a livelihood where wealth, luxury and vice dwelt side by side with poverty, misery and squalor. With the exchange of goods went the exchange of ideals. New religious cults, standards of luxury and splendor and materialistic aims of living, which had hitherto been foreign to Israel, were introduced from Assyria and Egypt.”

Now, does that sound familiar? With just the change of a few words, you could be describing twentieth-century America. Interestingly enough, from the 1790 census, the nation was ninety percent rural and ten percent urban. Amazing changes have taken place and most of that has taken place in the twentieth century. I believe it was the 1900 census that saw the shift from majority rural to majority urban—the rapid urbanization of this country.

Interestingly enough, what is described in the “Introduction to Micah” from the Soncino Commentary, which is a Jewish Commentary, actually includes all twelve of the Minor Prophets. In the Jewish order, they regard The Twelve as one book and this is the way they publish it. They have Hosea through Malachi.

Micah was a latter contemporary of Hosea. The introduction applies just as much to Hosea as it does to Micah because after all, Hosea starts out, Hosea 1:1, “The word of the Lord that came to Hosea the son of Beeri, in the days of Uzziah, Jotham, Ahaz, and Hezekiah, kings of Judah, and in the days of Jeroboam [II] the son of Joash, king of Israel.”

The time that Hosea wrote (the eighth century) witnessed the emergence of a great commercial civilization and an urban civilization. The foundations were laid in the peace and security that Jeroboam II of Israel and Uzziah of Judah won. You can compare their control of the great trading routes to the early part of this century—the period that culminated at the time of Franklin Roosevelt, World War II and the emergence of our nation from there as a great superpower. What he describes is the exact problems. We find individuals writing against the background of their time and their circumstances. One of the reasons why God inspired this—you’ve heard it explained and Mr. Herbert Armstrong stressed over the years—was that prophecy was dual. Do you know why there is a duality? Because you put the same people in the same circumstances and they do the same thing. You have Israel in the same circumstances, a circumstance of power and prosperity. What did it do? Well, the last time it happened to them was the period that ultimately set the stage for the Assyrian invasion and captivity. As we look at the book of Hosea, there is much in the background that is a parallel to our time today. What we’ve found is the same circumstances, which sets the stage for the same sins. And those sins set the stage for the same punishment.

As he describes the problems that came in—the extremes of wealth and poverty, the corruption, the rapid urbanization and landless farmers migrating to the city in search of a livelihood— isn’t that descriptive of what we have today? We have a lot of the urban ghettos and things built up that are very descriptive of that. The major cities have wealth, luxury and vice dwelling side by side with poverty, misery and squalor. Also, the exchange of ideas, the new religious cults, standards of luxury and splendor—haven’t we been inundated with all of these things coming in? It set the stage.

These are the circumstances that we find as we get into the Minor Prophets and as we get into the book of Hosea in particular. At a time when Israel was at the height of her economic and military power, Hosea was beginning to warn of impending collapse and captivity.

Hosea’s wife, Gomer, is used as a type of Israel. We will see some of that in just a few moments. God used much in Hosea’s life, as He did with many of the prophets, as things that took on a symbolic significance. Hosea married a wife who went into harlotry. The land was filled with immorality.

It was, in that way, not much different than in our land today—a land that is absolutely filled with immorality, where just recently they are having controversies in some of the so-called mainline churches about whether or not they should bless homosexual marriages. What do you mean marriage? There also is the controversy of whether they should ordain clergymen who are practicing homosexuals. Now that shows how far they have gone from the Bible. Go back and read what God says in Deuteronomy. He didn’t say anything about ordaining them. Now He did say something about “laying hands” on them, if I remember correctly, but they didn't lay hands on them to ordain them. We have come so far in terms of standards that here are places that call themselves churches that are arguing over trying to redefine morality. And you wonder why they call themselves a church. Why do they even claim to be associated with the Bible and Christianity? They are free to start their own religion, but why drag God into it? Why claim that they have some sort of connection with Christianity or the Bible? It is totally their own invention. We live in a society that is not at all unlike the society that the prophet we read of here addressed.

Hosea married Gomer who proved to be and was utilized by God as a type of Israel. She lapsed into immorality and harlotry. Hosea ultimately put her away. There is a period of years that goes by in the first three chapters of Hosea. She is continually degraded. Hosea ultimately buys her back. He purchases her at a slave auction.

There is an analogy to God's dealing with Israel. God's relationship with Israel is a marriage relationship. God ultimately put Israel away because of spiritual harlotry. That involved the wife's responsibility of fidelity to her husband. Israel of old entered into all sorts of illicit relationships, looking to the kings around. Israel looked to the kings of other nations as her protectors and providers, rather than being loyal and faithful to God. Gomer ultimately hit bottom. Hosea extended mercy. He bought her back. He took her back and gave her another chance. There is an analogy through that period of years in his life. Those first three chapters of the book of Hosea go into that. It is used as an analogy to God's relationship with Israel.

Chapter 4 goes into the catalog of Israel's sins and why the nation was destroyed.

Chapter 5 deals with the fall of Judah and Israel. Both of them were seeking to Assyria instead of God.

Chapter 6, Israel finally learns a lesson.

Chapters 7, 8, 9 and 10 deal with Israel seeking the help of other nations. It shows her glory departing. It's a warning to Israel of future captivity.

Chapter 11 deals with the future deliverance of Israel.

Chapter 12 deals with God's warning and His ultimate deliverance.

Chapter 13 makes the point that Israel's punishment is her own fault. Israel's deliverance is the consequence of God's mercy.

Chapter 14 focuses in on that ultimate promise of mercy from God.

As we get into the book of Hosea, who is the book addressed to? One very crucial factor in understanding Biblical prophecy is to know the identity of the nations being addressed. If you don't know, then you really can't claim to understand the prophecy at all. It's a mystery.

Now the most fundamental error of most of the Protestant fundamentalists who discuss prophecy today is the lack of knowledge of the identity of Israel. When you read the books of Isaiah, Jeremiah, Ezekiel, Hosea, Joel and Amos and for that matter, Obadiah, Jonah, Micah, Nahum on through Malachi—when you read all of the Major and Minor Prophets—over and over again the prophecies are directed toward Israel. Now, if you don't know who Israel is, if you think Israel is simply that little nation in the Middle East that calls itself Israel, if that's what comes to your mind and if that's what you understand when you read the book of Hosea or the book of Ezekiel, then you've come to one set of conclusions that's totally different than if you understood the fact that Israel and Judah refer to two totally separate nations.

When we go through the book of Hosea, it's very clear to whom Hosea is writing.

Hosea 1:10-11, “Yet the number of the children of Israel shall be as the sand of the sea, which cannot be measured or numbered. And it shall come to pass in the place where it was said to them, “You are not My people,” there it shall be said to them, “You are the sons of the living God.” Then the children of Judah and the children of Israel shall be gathered together, and appoint for themselves one head; and they shall come up out of the land, for great will be the day of Jezreel!”

He is speaking of the end time. Hosea makes a distinction between the children of Judah and the children of Israel. Hosea didn't think they were all Jews. And for that matter, anybody who has carefully studied the Bible knows Northern Israel went into captivity over one hundred twenty years before the Southern Kingdom of Judah went into captivity. Israel went into Assyrian captivity. Judah went into Babylonian captivity one hundred twenty years later. That's a long time.

It talks about the children of Israel abiding many days without a king.

Hosea 3:4, “For the children of Israel shall abide many days without king or prince, without sacrifice or sacred pillar, without ephod or teraphim.”

Hosea 4:16-17, “For Israel is stubborn like a stubborn calf; now the Lord will let them forage like a lamb in open country. Ephraim [Great Britain] is joined to idols, let him alone.”

Hosea 5:5, “The pride of Israel testifies to his face; therefore Israel and Ephraim stumble in their iniquity; Judah also stumbles with them.” He is making a distinction between Israel and Judah. You can continue down.

Verse 13, “When Ephraim saw his sickness, and Judah saw his wound, then Ephraim went to Assyria and sent to King Jareb; yet he cannot cure you, nor heal you of your wound.”

Hosea 6:10-11, “I have seen a horrible thing in the house of Israel: there is the harlotry of Ephraim; Israel is defiled. Also, O Judah, a harvest is appointed for you, when I return the captives of My people.” He talks throughout about Israel and Ephraim. Ephraim is the leading tribe of Israel.

It’s, very specifically, a message for the modern-day nation of Britain and, secondarily, for the United States. In the book of Hosea, over and over, Ephraim is singled out. It is fundamental to understand the book of Hosea. You can’t understand the end time if you don’t understand the identity of the people being described.

That’s why, when most of the Protestant fundamentalists try to talk about Bible prophecy, they don’t have any more idea than the “man in the moon” where the United States is discussed in Bible prophecy. They find reference to little obscure nations like Syria and Egypt. They recognize those, but they don’t have any concept of where the United States, Canada and Great Britain are. They don’t understand that because they don’t understand the identity of our people. If you are going to understand Biblical prophecy, if you are going to understand the Minor Prophets and their application for our time today, then you have to understand the identity of the people being discussed. That shouldn’t be really hard to figure out.

We find Hosea’s family life (as already mentioned) had prophetic significance. His wife Gomer went into harlotry, was put away, ultimately came to repentance and was brought back—literally bought back and redeemed in the literal sense. She was forgiven by Hosea. It is a picture of God’s relationship with Israel.

As we get into the book of Hosea, God talks about a time when mercy will be extended. There will be a time of forgiveness.

Hosea 2:18-20, “In that day I will make a covenant for them with the beasts of the field, with the birds of the air, and with the creeping things of the ground. Bow and sword of battle I will shatter from the earth, to make them lie down safely. I will betroth you to Me forever; Yes, I will betroth you to Me in righteousness and justice, in loving kindness and mercy; I will betroth you to Me in faithfulness, and you shall know the Lord.”

Verses 21-23, “It shall come to pass in that day that I will answer,” says the Lord; ‘I will answer the heavens, and they shall answer the earth. The earth shall answer with grain, with new wine, and with oil; they shall answer Jezreel. Then I will sow her for Myself in the earth, and I will have mercy on her who had not obtained mercy; then I will say to those who were not My people, “You are My people!” And they shall say, “You are my God!””

What is the setting of that? Clearly, that’s the Millennium. That’s when Christ returns. That hasn’t happened yet. That’s talking about conversion. It’s talking about God’s blessing. It’s talking about breaking the sword, the bow and putting an end to warfare—all of these things. Hosea’s message went on far beyond his day. There are implications for our time.

Hosea 4:1-3, “Hear the word of the Lord, you children of Israel, for the Lord brings a charge against the inhabitants of the land: ‘There is no truth or mercy or knowledge of God in the land. By swearing and lying, killing and stealing and committing adultery, they break all restraint, with bloodshed after bloodshed. Therefore the land will mourn; and everyone who dwells there will waste away with the beasts of the field and the birds of the air; even the fish of the sea will be taken away.’”

Verses 6-7, “My people are destroyed for lack of knowledge. Because you have rejected knowledge, I also will reject you from being priest for Me; because you have forgotten the law of your God, I also will forget your children. The more they increased, the more they sinned against Me; I will change their glory into shame.” The more we have prospered, the more we have been blessed; the more that we have increased materially, the more we have sinned against God.

Most of us sitting here are living on a standard far beyond anything we grew up in—things we never dreamed of years ago. Our conveniences have been taken for granted. We are sitting here enjoying the air conditioning. It hasn’t been that long since air conditioning has been readily available. This school wasn’t built with air conditioning. It was built with windows to take advantage of the breeze. A lot of us sitting here didn’t grow up with air conditioning. I remember the first time I ever saw a car that had air conditioning in it. A neighbor of ours had it, and I was really impressed with it. I was really fascinated with that. We now take it for granted.

Also, contemporary to that, it hasn't been that long ago when, particularly in rural areas, about the only lock most of us had on our doors were the latches on the screen door—and that was more to keep the cats and dogs from coming in or out.

The more we have multiplied and prospered materially in this nation, the more we have sinned against God and the further away we have gotten from God. We see evidence of that. God says, "My people are destroyed for lack of knowledge." Now we have a knowledge explosion. We have all sorts of technological knowledge. But the knowledge that we are destroyed for lack of is knowledge we have rejected. It's the knowledge of God's truth.

Now, the Supreme Court of the state of California has, "in its great wisdom," ruled that when you have high school graduation, they can't open the service with a prayer because they don't want to, in any way, acknowledge there may be God involved in it. They don't want them standing for something like "God Bless America" and having an opening prayer at the high school graduation. We have rejected knowledge that has any sort of connection with God's law or with the Bible. It's absolutely incredible.

Several months ago, the Gideons got in trouble for trying to pass out Bibles in Bossier City in north Louisiana. They were coming around and had been passing out Bibles for years. But this was horrible. The ACLU jumped in on it. You couldn't do that; passing out Bibles was unconstitutional. Now, at exactly the same time, New York City started passing out condoms in their schools. Nobody challenged that. Nobody saw anything illegal about that. You could give out stuff like that to kids in school without their parents even knowing anything about it and paying for it with the taxpayers' dollars. The taxpayers weren't buying the Bibles the Gideons were passing out. The taxpayers were buying these other things they were passing out in New York City.

Let me ask you something. Doesn't it say something about a society and its values when it takes for granted and sees nothing wrong with taxpayer dollars buying condoms and passing them out to school kids all the way down to seventh and eighth grade? Yet is it horrified at the idea that somebody might give them a Bible?

Well, I would suggest that if they want to stop the spread of AIDS, it would be a whole lot better to pass out Bibles than the rest of the stuff they are passing out because that's where the key is. If they really want to prevent the spread of some of these things, then they should hand them a Bible and say, 'Read it and follow the advice.' It's incredible.

Hosea 4:6, "My people are destroyed for lack of knowledge. Because you have rejected knowledge, I also will reject you from being priest for Me; because you have forgotten the law of your God, I also will forget your children."

Verse 11, "Harlotry [KJV, "Whoredom"], wine and new wine enslave the heart." You know what has sapped the heart of the nation? – Immorality and drug and alcohol abuse; whoredom (immorality), wine and new wine (talking about drunkenness), which would certainly, by implication, cover the whole realm of substance abuse. It would cover not only alcohol but the whole realm of various drugs that people try to get their "highs" and "kicks" out of. God says whoredom and wine and new wine has enslaved the heart. They have sapped the very fiber of the nation. Immorality and substance abuse have greatly impacted our nation. God focuses on that here.

Verse 12, "...For the spirit of harlotry has caused them to stray. And they have played the harlot against their God."

Verses 16-18, "For Israel is stubborn like a stubborn calf; now the Lord will let them forage like a lamb in open country. Ephraim is joined to idols. Let him alone. Their drink is rebellion. They commit harlotry continually. Her rulers dearly love dishonor."

Hosea 5:5, "The pride of Israel testifies to his face; therefore Israel and Ephraim stumble in their iniquity; Judah also stumbles with them." Now, that didn't happen the first time. It is going to happen this time.

Verse 7, "They have dealt treacherously with the Lord, for they have begotten pagan children. Now a New Moon shall devour them and their heritage." KJV, "...Now shall a month devour them with their portions." We have gone into earlier studies on prophecy and the fact of where this month fits in.

If you go back to Daniel 12:11, "And from the time that the daily sacrifice is taken away, and the abomination of desolation is set up, there shall be one thousand two hundred and ninety days."

He also describes the great tribulation as lasting a time, times and half a time or three and one-half years or one thousand two hundred sixty days (v. 7). Now, between the abomination that makes desolate and the onset of the tribulation is thirty days—one month. We find our missing month right here in Hosea.

Hosea 5:7, “...a month devour them...” In other words, this thirty-day period is the period of time that it takes for the “mop-up” operation. It takes a month for the nation to actually be completely devastated. Things begin and there is a month that sees this calamity to fruition.

It talks about Ephraim being desolate in the day of rebuke (v. 9).

Verse 13, “When Ephraim saw his sickness, and Judah saw his wound, then Ephraim went to Assyria and sent to King Jareb; yet he cannot cure you, nor heal you of your wound.” The difference between a wound and a sickness is that a wound is external and a sickness is internal. Ephraim saw his sickness—internal problems, economic difficulties; Judah saw his wound—external problems, things that were inflicted from an outside force.

Based on this verse (Hosea 5:13), Mr. Herbert Armstrong said back in the 1960s that Britain would try to join the Common Market and very likely would even be part of the Common Market for a while but would never be a part of the Beast Power. Britain would try and get involved in that because when they saw their sickness, they went to the Assyrians to bail them out. They looked to the Germans to help them out. They looked to join up with this thing. Whether that is the final fulfillment of this verse or whether there is more yet to come, time will tell.

The latter part of the verse, Judah seeing his wound and going to the Assyrians, has not yet happened. But that is ultimately very likely the pretext on which European troops are going to enter the Middle East. There is an enigmatic statement that Christ makes in Matthew 24:15-16 and Luke 21:20-21 that helps to understand this.

Luke 21:20-21, Christ said, talking to His disciples, “But when you see Jerusalem surrounded by armies, then know that its desolation is near. Then let those in Judea flee to the mountains, let those who are in the midst of her depart, and let not those who are in the country enter her.”

Let me ask you something. If the armies are hostile armies and are coming at you with guns blazing and bombs falling, do you need somebody to tell you that the desolation thereof is near? Even a “dummy” could figure that out by that time. Even Dan Rather and company or Peter Arnette and all those by that time will be able to figure that out. When the bombs start dropping, it begins to dawn on some of them that the desolation thereof is near. Anybody can figure that out once it is here.

The other thing is, isn't it going to be a little bit late to flee to the mountains if the armies are coming in and the guns are blazing and the bombs are falling? You say, ‘I think it's about time for me to flee to the mountains; see you guys later. It says right here I am supposed to flee, so I have to leave.’ That's a little late. If one bunch doesn't shoot you trying to get out, the other bunch will shoot you when you do. You are in trouble. Once the bullets are flying it's too late to flee to the mountains.

Christ's statement in Luke 21 and Matthew 24 only makes sense if the armies surrounding Jerusalem do not give the immediate appearance of being hostile armies. Christ told His disciples, ‘When you see the armies surrounding Jerusalem, then you will understand it's all over with. The desolation of Jerusalem is near and the abomination will be set up. That will lead to the desolation. You had better get out of there right now because if you wait, it is going to be too late. You won't have a chance to make a getaway.’

Tie in Hosea 5:13, “...when Judah saw his wound he went to the Assyrians...” Evidently there's going to be something that's going to occur in the future that Judah is going to come out of feeling wounded and enter into some sort of pact with the Germans. The Germans are going to use it as a pretext to bring troops into the Middle East. The only thing is, when they get there, they are going to do something far different than what people suppose.

It's kind of interesting. I don't know how many of you saw it. There was an article in U.S. News & World Report a week or so ago about the change of NATO—that the Americans right now are agreeing to withdraw a large portion of their troops and what's left are going to be put under European command. We've never had that before. The only United States troops that have ever been under anybody else's command were some American troops under British command in World War II. But we're looking at putting some under German command, which is a totally different matter. We are looking at a totally different circumstance with our brother Ephraim.

And another thing, there was a little article in the Morning Advocate in Baton Rouge, Louisiana, buried way back on the back pages. I don't know if any of you saw it. It was just a little short article. It said that negotiations are taking place between the United States and Germany for German troops to now be stationed in the United States. The article pointed out that's the first time since 1812 that foreign troops will be stationed on American soil. They will be stationed here as part of an agreement. Up until 1812, there were British troops that were stationed up at what was then called the Northwest, some of the area like Michigan and Ohio. There were some British troop soldiers there. But for the first time since 1812, German troops will be stationed over here in this country. Some of the bases they are closing out, they are going to give them to the Germans. Just a small number of troops, you understand, here to help us and protect us. Anyway, Hosea discusses some of these matters. Hosea is a very up-to-date book.

Notice God talks about how they are going to be brought down.

Hosea 5:15 (KJV), "I will go and return to My place, till they acknowledge their offense, and seek My face: in their affliction they will seek Me early."

Let's follow on in the context.

Hosea 6:1-3, "Come, and let us return to the Lord; for He has torn, but He will heal us; He has stricken, but He will bind us up. After two days He will revive us; on the third day He will raise us up, that we may live in His sight. Let us know; let us pursue the knowledge of the Lord. His going forth is established as the morning; He will come to us like the rain, like the latter and former rain to the earth."

What's being discussed here? If we go through the context of chapter 5, we see Israel going into the tribulation, and now we see the fact of repentance. It makes this sort of enigmatic statement, "after two days will He revive us and the third day He will raise us up." The tribulation—the three and one-half years or one thousand two hundred sixty days—is the prelude to Christ's return. The last year of that is really God's wrath on the Beast power. The first two and one-half years of that three and one-half-year period represents Satan's wrath against physical Israel and against the Laodicean Church, the remnant that is left behind as Revelation 12:17 defines it. The circumstance described here—as the Israelites in the concentration camps of the future in areas of South America, North Africa,

Germany—as time progresses on into this period of tribulation, as they languish in some of these work camps and some of these places, they are going to think about and remember the message that they heard. It talks about people remembering the message they heard (Ezekiel 33:32-33).

Brethren, we have a great work yet ahead of us. We have a great work. The work is not finished; there is a work that remains to be done. Exactly when it is going to "blast out" to really shake the nation and world, this is God's time. We don't know exactly. But it's discussed and talked about in the Bible.

Ezekiel 2:5; 33:33, "They shall know there has been a prophet among them."

I don't think you can say that is really the case if the nation were to go into captivity today. The people would not really know to that great extent that there had been a prophet among them. A foundation has been laid. But there is coming a time when the message of Ezekiel, etc., is literally going to shake this nation. In Ezekiel 33:30, it talks about how everywhere they are going to be talking about the message that is being broadcast.

Our responsibility, individually, is to be ready. We need to be close to God and ready to be used by God when it comes His time to really revive His work in the midst of evil. When the time comes to really go forward, a foundation has been laid. Our responsibility is to be close to God, so that we are receptive to God's leading and can be used by God to accomplish what He wishes us to do. The timing is in God's hands, and we have to recognize and accept that. We need to not just go charging off "half-cocked," trying to do our own thing.

Hosea 6:2, "...after two days..." As people languish in these camps, they are going to say, v. 1, "Come, let us return to the Lord, He has torn and He will heal us." How are they going to know that? They will know it because they have been told by this work!

After two days—after the first two years or so have gone by—God will begin to give them some relief. If they follow, then they are going to know—to really know—God. They are going to begin to understand the message that they heard, talking about His going forth and being prepared. They are going to understand how He is going to come (talking about the return of Jesus Christ) and various prophecies.

Hosea focuses primarily on Israel. A little bit of it focuses on Judah. Let's notice; we will pick out some places.

Hosea 7:1-2, “When I would have healed Israel, then the iniquity of Ephraim was uncovered, and the wickedness of Samaria. For they have committed fraud; the thief comes in; a band of robbers takes spoil outside. They do not consider in their hearts that I remember all their wickedness; now their own deeds have surrounded them; they are before My face.”

Verses 8-11, “Ephraim has mixed himself among the peoples; Ephraim is a cake unturned. Aliens have devoured his strength, but he does not know it; Yes, gray hairs are here and there on him, yet he does not know it. And the pride of Israel testifies to his face, but they do not return to the Lord their God, nor seek Him for all this. Ephraim also is like a silly dove, without sense—they call to Egypt, they go to Assyria.”

It talks about the involvement with various things that have sapped the strength of Britain and certainly America, as well. And the pride that is there, stood in the way of real repentance.

Hosea 8:1, “Set the trumpet to your mouth! He shall come like an eagle against the house of the Lord, because they have transgressed My covenant and rebelled against My law.”

Verse 3, “Israel has cast off the good; the enemy will pursue him.”

Verses 7-9, “They sow the wind, and reap the whirlwind. The stalk has no bud; it shall never produce meal. If it should produce, aliens would swallow it up. Israel is swallowed up; now they are among the Gentiles like a vessel in which there is no pleasure. For they have gone up to Assyria, like a wild donkey alone by itself; Ephraim has hired lovers.” Ephraim has entered into various alliances.

Verse 14, “For Israel has forgotten his Maker, and has built temples; Judah also has multiplied fortified cities; but I will send fire upon his cities, and it shall devour his palaces.” “Israel has forgotten his Maker and has built temples.” That is sort of an interesting statement. It is sort of a paradoxical statement. On the one hand, we have forgotten our Maker and yet on the other hand, we really go in for the outward show and display of religion. Oh, we have temples all over and churches on every street corner. We like to pride ourselves on being such a religious people and yet we don’t follow what God says.

There was an interesting article; I believe it was U.S. News & World Report that had the article on American attitudes regarding sex and immorality. The statistics they give is just incredible. It shows that the Bible is almost irrelevant in the eyes of the vast majority of people in terms of what they do and practice.

We have forgotten our Maker and build temples. Judah has not made nearly the outward show of religion. They have just multiplied fortified cities. They have built up missiles and all this kind of thing. God says, ‘I am going to send fire upon them.’

They had a little bit of a taste of that in the Persian Gulf War. It was just a little bit of a taste of that; there is going to be more. Our false religion can’t deliver us, and all their fortified cities can’t deliver them. There is going to be captivity.

Hosea 9:3, “They shall not dwell in the Lord’s land, but Ephraim shall return to Egypt, and shall eat unclean things in Assyria.” They are going to eat unclean things in Assyria. They are going to be transported.

Verse 11, “As for Ephraim, their glory shall fly away like a bird....” It describes these things over and over.

Hosea 10:1, “Israel empties his vine; he brings forth fruit for himself. According to the bounty of his land they have embellished his sacred pillars [images].”

Verse 5, “...because its glory has departed from it.”

Verse 13, “You have plowed wickedness; you have reaped iniquity. You have eaten the fruit of lies, because you trusted in your own way, in the multitude of your mighty men.” It describes all these things that are going to come. Israel, over and over, is described as having sought after all kinds of allies as her protector, rather than God. The very ones that she put her trust in as deliverers are ultimately going to destroy her.

From a spiritual standpoint, as far as Israel is concerned, God labels that as adultery because God entered into a husband-wife relationship with Israel. Israel was to look to God to protect her and provide for her, rather than to put her trust in others. In that sense, God views Israel as a wayward wife. She is going to have to learn a bitter lesson and repent. Then God will take her back.

Hosea 12:1, “Ephraim feeds on the wind, and pursues the east wind; He daily increases lies and desolation. Also they make a covenant [treaty] with the Assyrians, and oil is carried to [or, through] Egypt.” It is very possibly some sort of reference to the Suez Canal—something that is going to transpire in the future.

Verse 2, “The Lord also brings a charge against Judah....” KJV, “The Lord also has a controversy with Judah....” Judah is separate from Israel, but they are going to be dealt with, as well.

Hosea 13:9, “O Israel, you are destroyed, but your help is from Me.” KJV, “O Israel, thou has destroyed thyself; but in Me is thine help.” That’s the key! We have destroyed ourselves; our destruction is the consequence of our own actions.

We need to understand these things are real. It is talking about being carried into captivity into North Africa, Germany and various places. That is literally going to happen. That’s going to happen to those who don’t take this warning and this message seriously. It’s going to happen to some who have warmed seats in God’s Church. It’s going to happen to some who have grown up in God’s Church who sort of tuned it out and haven’t paid any attention to it. It’s going to happen to people who have heard the broadcast and read the magazine. It’s going to happen! It’s going to happen! It is something that we had better take seriously and realize that God puts these warnings in here for our good and for our benefit. We ignore them to our peril.

Hosea 14:1-3, God says, “O Israel, return to the Lord your God, for you have stumbled because of your iniquity; take words with you, and return to the Lord. Say to Him, ‘Take away all iniquity; receive us graciously, for we will offer the sacrifices of our lips. Assyria shall not save us, we will not ride on horses, nor will we say anymore to the work of our hands, “You are our gods.” For in You the fatherless finds mercy.”

Hosea 14 ends with the focus on repentance and return and God’s mercy and forgiveness.

The book of Joel is a little short book. We find a focus on economic and agricultural devastation.

The whole theme of Joel is the day of the Lord.

Joel 1:4-7, “What the chewing locust left, the swarming locust has eaten; what the swarming locust left, the crawling locust has eaten; and what the crawling locust left, the consuming locust has eaten. Awake, you drunkards, and weep; and wail, all you drinkers of wine, because of the new wine, for it has been cut off from your mouth. For a nation has come up against My land, strong, and without number; His teeth are the teeth of a lion, and he has the fangs of a fierce lion. He has laid waste My vine, and ruined My fig tree; He has stripped it bare and thrown it away; its branches are made white.”

Verse 10, “The field is wasted, the land mourns....”

Verse 12, “The vine has dried up, and the fig tree has withered....”

Verses 14-15, “Consecrate a fast, call a sacred assembly; gather the elders and all the inhabitants of the land into the house of the Lord your God, and cry out to the Lord. Alas for the day! For the day of the Lord is at hand; it shall come as destruction from the Almighty.”

The first chapter of the book of Joel focuses in on the agriculture sector. We have to realize that agriculture underlies the whole strength of the economy. I once saw a bumper sticker when we were traveling through the Midwest. A pickup truck had a bumper sticker on the back, and it said, “If you eat, you are involved in agriculture.” That’s how basic agriculture is. If you eat, then you are involved in agriculture—and everybody eats. The basis and starting point of economic strength and economic stability goes back to the agricultural sector.

According to what Joel says, we are going to experience some real devastation.

Joel 2:1-2, “Blow the trumpet in Zion, and sound an alarm in My holy mountain! Let all the inhabitants of the land tremble; for the day of the Lord is coming, for it is at hand: A day of darkness and gloominess, a day of clouds and thick darkness, like the morning clouds spread over the mountains. A people come, great and strong, the like of whom has never been; nor will there ever be any such after them, even for many successive generations.” It describes this army.

Verse 3, “A fire devours before them, and behind them a flame burns; the land is like the Garden of Eden before them, and behind them a desolate wilderness; surely nothing shall escape them.”

Verses 10-11, “The earth quakes before them, the heavens tremble; the sun and moon grow dark, and the stars diminish their brightness. The Lord gives voice before His army, for His camp is very great; for strong is the One who executes His word. For the day of the Lord is great and very terrible; who can endure it?” Christ is going to come back and He is going to have a great army with Him.

Verses 12-16, “‘Now, therefore’, says the Lord, ‘Turn to Me with all your heart, with fasting, with weeping, and with mourning. So rend your heart and not your garments; return to the Lord your God, for He is gracious and merciful, slow to anger, and of great kindness; and He relents from doing harm. Who knows if He will turn and relent, and leave a blessing behind Him—a grain offering and a drink offering for the Lord your God? Blow the trumpet in Zion, consecrate a fast; call a sacred assembly. Gather the people, sanctify the congregation, assemble the elders, gather the children and nursing babes; let the bridegroom go out from his chamber, and the bride from her dressing room.”

This talks about a warning message that God is going to take to His people Israel, a warning of the events that are going to come and a call to repentance.

Verses 28-32, “And it shall come to pass afterward that I will pour out My Spirit on all flesh; your sons and your daughters shall prophesy, your old men shall dream dreams, your young men shall see visions; and also on My menservants and on My maidservants I will pour out My Spirit in those days. And I will show wonders in the heavens and in the earth: Blood and fire and pillars of smoke. The sun shall be turned into darkness, and the moon into blood, before the coming of the great and terrible day of the Lord. And it shall come to pass that whoever calls on the name of the Lord shall be saved. For in Mount Zion and in Jerusalem there shall be deliverance, as the Lord has said, among the remnant whom the Lord calls.”

We find part of vv. 28 and 29 quoted back in Acts 2:15-21—the outpouring of the Holy Spirit. So at least part of this has been partially fulfilled in Acts 2. But the great fulfillment is yet future. Revelation 6:12-17 focuses in on the time when the sun will be turned into darkness and the moon into blood—the time of the great day of the Lord.

Revelation 6:12-14, “I looked when He opened the sixth seal, and behold, there was a great earthquake; and the sun became black as sackcloth of hair, and the moon became like blood. And the stars of heaven fell to the earth, as a fig tree drops its late figs when it is shaken by a mighty wind. Then the sky receded as a scroll when it is rolled up, and every mountain and island was moved out of its place.”

Verse 17, “For the great day of His wrath has come, and who is able to stand?”

Joel 2:30-31, “And I will show wonders in the heavens and in the earth: Blood and fire and pillars of smoke. The sun shall be turned into darkness, and the moon into blood, before the coming of the great and terrible day of the Lord.” You have to tie that in with Revelation 6.

Joel 3:1-4, “For behold, in those days and at that time, when I bring back the captives of Judah and Jerusalem, I will also gather all nations, and bring them down to the Valley of Jehoshaphat; and I will enter into judgment with them there on account of My people, My heritage Israel, whom they have scattered among the nations; they have also divided up My land. They have cast lots for My people, have given a boy in exchange for a harlot, and sold a girl for wine, that they may drink. Indeed, what have you to do with Me, O Tyre and Sidon, and all the coasts of Philistia? Will you retaliate against Me. Swiftly and speedily I will return your retaliation upon your own head.” It describes the things that have occurred.

Verses 9-10, “Proclaim this among the nations: ‘Prepare for war! Wake up the mighty men, let all the men of war draw near; let them come up. Beat your plowshares into swords and our pruning hooks into spears; let the weak say, ‘I am strong.’” That is pretty descriptive of what we have going on right now with the arms race. “Let the weak say, ‘I am strong.’” That sounds like old Saddam Hussein going around bragging about the “mother of all battles” and all that he was going to do—this type of thing.

Verse 9, “Proclaim you this among the Gentiles. ‘Prepare for war. Wake up the mighty men....’ Get ready! We have this gigantic, obscene expenditure for arms in all these third-world nations that can’t feed their own people. They are beating their plowshares into swords. They are spending the money on weapons that they should spend on an agricultural infrastructure. They are going to have a chance to use all those weapons because all nations are going to be gathered together in the Valley of Jehoshaphat (Joel 3:2). God is going to finally put a stop to this foolishness. He is going to gather all nations and bring them into battle there in the Valley of Jehoshaphat. That is outside the area of Jerusalem. Armageddon is the place where the armies gather. They converge on Jerusalem, and when Christ returns, the destruction takes place in the Valley of Jehoshaphat.

Joel 3:12-17, “Let the nations be wakened, and come up to the Valley of Jehoshaphat; for there I will sit to judge all the surrounding nations. Put in the sickle, for the harvest is ripe. Come, go down; for the winepress is full, the vats overflow—for their wickedness is great. Multitudes, multitudes in the valley of decision! For the day of the Lord is near in the valley of decision. The sun and moon will grow dark, and the stars will diminish their brightness, the Lord also will roar from Zion, and utter His voice from Jerusalem; the heavens and earth will shake; but the Lord will be a shelter for His people, and the strength of the children of Israel. So you shall know that I am the Lord your God, dwelling in Zion My holy mountain. Then Jerusalem shall be holy, and no aliens shall ever pass through her again.”

It will no longer be the place that is trodden down by every rampaging army going back and forth as has been the case all the way down through time.

Verses 19-20, “Egypt shall be a desolation, and Edom a desolate wilderness, because of violence against the people of Judah, for they have shed innocent blood in their land. But Judah shall abide forever. And Jerusalem from generation to generation.” God describes these events that are going to culminate in the return of Jesus Christ. The focus is the day of the Lord. Clearly, when you go through prophecies in Hosea and Joel, it is not primarily talking about what happened twenty-five hundred years ago. Did these things happen exactly that way then? Go back to Revelation 6 where it describes the sun becoming black, the moon becoming blood red—the events of the day of the Lord, the events that are going to culminate in the return of Jesus Christ to this earth and the establishment of the government of God.

The phrase “Blow the trumpet” is used over and over. The blast of the shophar was a signal of warning and alarm. The implication is that God’s work is going to sound that alarm, the admonition, “blow the trumpet in Zion.” Who is going to blow that trumpet?

Isaiah 58:1, “Cry aloud spare not, lift up your voice like a trumpet and show My people their transgressions and the house of Jacob their sins.” That’s going to be fulfilled.

What we’ve done up until now has only been a partial fulfillment of that. It has only laid the groundwork for the great fulfillment yet to come. What we need to be doing is staying close to God, really walking with God and drawing close to Him, so that God will allow us to be used to finish the job that He has called us to do. We, individually and personally, can be a part of the great work with which God is going to shake this earth and this nation. We are living in what the Bible describes as perilous times (II Timothy 3:1). If you are navigating a perilous stream, it’s important that you depend on a very experienced navigator.

I remember one time where we were going through an area on a canoe trip. We were going to shoot some rapids. I had not been on this stretch before, but there was an individual who had. He knew the river. When we got up to the spot, some just went bounding right on through, and it didn’t take long before they crashed. I kind of stopped and paddled so as to just stay still because I wanted to watch the guy who knew his way through. I saw what he did and I waited until he got through. I saw what he did and the way he went through. After he was out of the way, then I tried to follow through and do exactly what he did. We got through, too. We were a couple of the only ones who made it through without capsizing because he knew what he was doing and I followed him. I didn’t know what I was doing, but I knew that he did.

There’s a lesson there because we are in the process of navigating a pretty perilous stream, a pretty perilous set of rapids known as “the end time.” Jesus Christ knows how to navigate the rapids. He knows exactly how to do it. If we think we know how to do it and go charging ahead, we are going to crash somewhere in the process. But if we follow through exactly as He leads, we will be fine. That’s one of the key things to keep in mind at the point in which we find ourselves. We need God’s help, guidance and direction. We need to stay close to God to fulfill that for which God has called us.

Joel refers to the valley where the last battle is going to be fought. Joel 3, vv. 2 and 12 refer to the Valley of Jehoshaphat. The world talks about the Battle of Armageddon. In reality, there is not a battle of Armageddon. The armies gather there, but the battle is outside Jerusalem in the Valley of Jehoshaphat. That’s where the armies are destroyed. The armies are gathered to Armageddon to converge on Jerusalem. It’s the Valley of Jehoshaphat where they are actually going to be destroyed.

God is going to win. He is going to set the stage at this time to begin the events of the Millennium. We converge on Jerusalem, here in the book of Joel, and see a focus on the end time—on the Day of the Lord.

The book of Hosea focuses in on Israel and it’s primarily for the end time. If it was primarily for back then, why is it in the prophets? If all Hosea is, is a historical book that’s talking about something that occurred twenty-five hundred years ago, then it’s pretty much irrelevant to us except as a part of the history. We have the history back in II Kings. Hosea is here to tell us the events that are going to come to pass. Joel is here to tell us the events that are going to come to pass.

These books of the Minor Prophets have a tremendous amount packed in. There are things that apply very directly and very emphatically to us in our time and day and in the time ahead of us. We are going to sort of skim through them rapidly. We will come back at later times and pick up other portions. But the way to get the maximum benefit out of it is to read the books and study them in conjunction with other literature that we have published over the years. Go through, read and study the books. Use the study guide and then we will try to hit the high points next Bible study. We will sort of pick up speed. The books that we are going to cover next time, Amos, Obadiah and Jonah, are fairly short books. We will get a little bit of an overview on some of those.

Minor Prophets Series—Amos, Obadiah and Jonah

We are getting into the books of Amos, Obadiah and Jonah this evening. We're taking three books in the Minor Prophets. Primarily, we are going to focus on Amos. It is the longest of the books; there are nine chapters. Obadiah is one short little chapter; Jonah is fairly short with four chapters. We are going to focus in on these books this evening, but primarily on Amos.

Amos was a prophet who prophesied about the same time as Obadiah and Jonah. In fact, Hosea, Joel, Amos, Obadiah, Jonah and Micah all prophesied in the same general time period. Roughly speaking, they were all contemporaries. There is a little bit of variation, but they all overlapped some. In fact, not only were there those six Minor Prophets, but also the prophet Isaiah. So there were actually seven prophets of God who flourished at that same time period. As I mentioned last Bible study, their period of prophecy was at a time when the nation of Northern Israel had reached sort of a height or peak of its prosperity.

Northern Israel had its beginnings at the time of King Solomon's death when the kingdom of twelve-tribed Israel split. Solomon's son, Rehoboam, took the southern tribe Judah in Jerusalem and portions of Benjamin and Levi. The northern ten tribes originally went with Jeroboam, the son of Nebat who put himself forward as king and founded a dynasty that continued for a short time and then was replaced by other dynasties.

There was a lot of turnover in Northern Israel. But finally in the early part of the eighth century, there arose a period of prosperity in Northern Israel and in Judah. There were two very lengthy reigns: King Jeroboam II, the king of Israel reigned for about forty years and King Uzziah of Judah reigned for a comparable period of time. They both reigned in the neighborhood of forty years. They were roughly contemporary—not exactly, but for a considerable period of time. Their periods of reign overlapped thirty to thirty-five years. Since there were monarchs who were in that position for a period of time, it was a time of stability for Israel and Judah.

The Hebrew states gained control of the major trade routes at that particular point in time, and as a result, there was commercial prosperity that began to build up both in Israel and in Judah. This produced not only material benefits, but also various problems. As a commercial civilization grew and thrived, there were also difficulties that came in. A greater and greater percentage of people moved off the land and into the cities in search of jobs.

In effect, it was not dissimilar to what we have experienced in the course of the twentieth century in terms of the number of families who have moved off the farms and into the cities. In fact, next Bible study when we study the book of Micah, we will go into a little more detail and depth on the background and you will see an amazing parallel between eighth-century Judah and Israel and twentieth-century America and Britain. It's interesting because you see that when you put the same people in the same circumstances, they tend to do the same thing over and over and over. There is predictability to human nature.

Prophecy and history are simply the same thing seen from different directions. There is a time setting of the background of these prophets. As Israel, and to a lesser extent Judah, went through some of these things, there were problems that were engendered. There were various things that happened and there was a consequence that came about. God raised up these prophets. There were seven who flourished at this time—from the beginning of the eighth century down to the captivity and shortly beyond. God raised up these prophets to give a warning at a time when Israel seemed to be reaching a pinnacle of power. God raised up His prophets to sound an alarm, to sound a warning to the nation. The nation of ancient Israel did not heed that warning.

We are going to see that what Amos had to say was not popularly received. As we study through the Scriptures, we find that God's prophets have never been very favorably received. A little later we are going to notice one exception that stands out because it is such an exception. But, as a rule, God's prophets have not been popularly received. Their message has not been popular because God's prophets have never taken a poll to find out what was popular so they could go and preach it. They preached what God said, and that's enough to get you into trouble. After all, Jesus Christ was crucified for it, wasn't He?

We find that Amos was not very popular as a result of what he had to say. One of the things they told him was, 'Why don't you leave? Just head back to where you came from. You came from Judah. Go! We don't need you here in Israel. We don't need you here in Samaria; this is the king's city, the king's palace and temple. We don't need you here, and we don't like what you have to say (Amos 7:12-13).' They didn't like it because it was not a popular and pleasant message.

There is a great deal of parallel between what we find in our nation and what we find at this time in the eighth century. The events that served as a background of Amos' writings served as a prelude and background to the things that set the stage for the Assyrian captivity and deportation of Northern Israel. The same things that set the prelude for the captivity and deportation of ancient Israel set the same prelude for the captivity and deportation of modern Israel. As we go through the book of Amos, we are going to find that the message Amos had went far beyond his time and his day. Amos had a message for his day, but the impact of his message went beyond eighth-century Israel.

As we get into the study, we might notice briefly the time setting in Amos to sort of set the stage.

Amos 4:12, "Therefore thus will I do to you, O Israel; and because I will do this to you, prepare to meet your God, O Israel."

Amos 5:15, "Hate evil, love good; establish justice in the gate. It may be that the Lord God of hosts will be gracious to the remnant of Joseph."

Verse 18, "Woe to you who desire the day of the Lord..."

Verse 20, "Is not the day of the Lord darkness, and not light? Is it not very dark, and with no brightness in it?"

He talks about the calamities and the upset conditions in the heavens.

Amos 8:9, "'And it shall come to pass in that day,' says the Lord God, 'that I will make the sun go down at noon, and I will darken the earth in broad daylight.'"

Amos 9:8-9, "'Behold, the eyes of the Lord God are on the sinful kingdom, and I will destroy it from the face of the earth; yet I will not utterly destroy the house of Jacob,' says the Lord. 'For surely I will command, and will sift the house of Israel among all nations, as grain is sifted in a sieve; yet not the smallest grain shall fall to the ground.'"

Verses 11-15, "'On that day I will raise up the tabernacle of David, which has fallen down, and repair its damages; I will raise up its ruins, and rebuild it as in the days of old; that they may possess the remnant of Edom, and all the Gentiles who are called by My name,' says the Lord who does this thing. 'Behold, the days are coming,' says the Lord, 'when the plowman shall overtake the reaper, and the treader of grapes him who sows seed; the mountains shall drip with sweet wine, and all the hills shall flow with it. I will bring back the captives of My people Israel; they shall build the waste cities and inhabit them; they shall plant vineyards and drink wine from them; they shall also make gardens and eat fruit from them. I will plant them in their land, and no longer shall they be pulled up from the land I have given them,' says the Lord your God."

Obviously, the time setting of the end of the book of Amos goes down to the time when Christ is going to return. There are certain ones who read Amos and disregard the fact that much of the Bible is prophecy. They want to read the prophets and say this is all about long-dead nations and long-dead peoples, and it certainly doesn't have any connection with us today. Well, has God raised up the tabernacle of David? Have you seen David walking around anywhere here lately? Has David been raised up? Has Israel been re-gathered? Have they built up the old waste places? Have they been planted in their own land, never again to be pulled up?

There are those who don't understand the identity of Israel. They think this is just talking about the Jews and that they have gone back to Israel after World War II. Do you think they are planted in their land and are never going to go forth again? Well, go back and read the book of Zechariah.

Zechariah 14:1-2, "Behold, the day of the Lord is coming, and your spoil will be divided in your midst. For I will gather all the nations to battle against Jerusalem; the city shall be taken, the houses rifled, and the women ravished. Half of the city shall go into captivity, but the remnant of the people shall not be cut off from the city." It talks about the inhabitants of the modern-day state of Israel in the Middle East (the Jewish state) going into captivity.

It is going to take Jesus Christ coming back as King of kings and Lord of lords to redeem them and to bring them back.

Verses 3-4, "Then the Lord will go forth and fight against those nations, as He fights in the day of battle. And in that day His feet will stand on the Mount of Olives...." We are going to see that the nation that has been re-gathered in the Middle East is not all of Israel. They are the nation of Judah, the remnant of Judah. There are two nations.

Amos was from Judah, but he went up to Israel to prophesy. Israel was taken into captivity over one hundred years before Judah went into captivity. Israel was taken into captivity by a different nation (the Assyrians) and to a different place.

II Kings 17:6, we are told, “In the ninth year of Hoshea, the king of Assyria took Samaria and carried Israel away to Assyria, and placed them in Halah and by the Habor, the River of Gozan, and in the cities of the Medes.” This is in the area up between the Black and Caspian Sea.

Judah was taken into captivity by the Babylonians and settled in the southern Mesopotamian Valley in the area of Babylon and the environs of greater Babylon. They were in a different location. It was a totally different group of people and a different place.

Amos clearly focuses in on events that will culminate with the return of Jesus Christ and the re-gathering of Israel. The message that Amos had, though it is set against the background of his day and the circumstances in which Israel found itself in his day, contains a message that has implications down to our time today.

The first chapter or so of Amos are prophecies against the Gentile nations.

Amos 2:4-5 would be prophecies against Judah. Then the rest of chapter 2 would be a prophecy against Israel.

Chapters 3 and 4 prophesy punishment on Israel. Chapter 5 is Israel’s captivity.

Chapter 6 is Israel’s complacent attitude. You’d almost think Amos was talking a lot about Israel! Chapter 7 makes for a little bit of a historical inset.

Chapter 8 then goes back again to Israel being condemned for its greed.

Chapter 9 is the final punishment and millennial restoration.

Israel reached a high point militarily and economically during the time of Jeroboam II. After his death, the stability and prosperity of Israel ceased. Within a matter of about forty to forty-five years from the death of Jeroboam II, Israel went from being on top to being on the bottom. Then the Assyrians ultimately invaded and took them captive.

Amos 1:1, we are introduced to Amos, “The words of Amos, who was among the herdsmen of Tekoa, which he saw concerning Israel in the days of Uzziah king of Judah, and in the days of Jeroboam [II] the son of Joash, king of Israel, two years before the earthquake.” Tekoa was a little village in Judah. It was about six miles south of Bethlehem. Yet Amos’ ministry was primarily in Northern Israel. He was a herdsman and a gatherer of sycamore fruit (Amos 7:14).

He was given a message that he was to go to Israel. We find in chapter 1:3 he starts out by talking about Damascus, Gaza (v. 6), Ashdod, Ekron, Philistine (v. 8), Tyre (v. 9), Teman (v. 12), the children of Ammon (v. 13) and the Moabites (Amos 2:1).

You find they are all Middle Eastern nations. Even today, Damascus is the modern-day capital of Syria. He starts out with a focus on the Middle East, on the modern nation of Syria and on the area down in the Gaza strip.

There’s an area called the Gaza Strip. You know what they are having over there? They are having riots and trouble. They are having what the Palestinians have called the “Entefada.” The areas of Ashdod, Ashkelon and Ekron are in the same area down there. The word “Palestinian” is derived from “Philistine.” So you have problems in Syria (Damascus). You have problems with the Palestinians. You have problems in Lebanon; Tyre is located in the modern area of Lebanon. Edom is addressed in vv. 11-12. Teman is a subdivision of Edom; Edom basically is a reference to Turkey. Ammon (v. 13) would certainly refer to Jordan. Moab (Amos 2:1-2) would be portions of Jordan and Iraq.

So, what do you have addressed? –The whole Middle East! Turkey, Syria, Lebanon, Jordan, Iraq, the Palestinians—that sort of sounds like today’s newspaper, doesn’t it? –The same bunch. God named them off, every one of them. And what are they doing? They are having problems and there are going to be more problems. God is going to deal with it. He talks about some of the problems and some of the warfare that is going to break out over there.

Amos 1:4, ““But I will send a fire into the house of Hazael, which shall devour the palaces of Ben-Hadad.”” That refers to Damascus, the capital of Syria. It talks about sending a fire there. That’s a pretty good description of launching some missiles. When war breaks out over there, you had better believe there is going to be fire sent over Damascus. When the Jews unleash some of what they have, there’s going to be a regular firestorm in Damascus.

It talks about the various problems that are going to come, the warfare and strife that are going to occur. These events were pre-staged in ancient times, and we are going to find parallels in the modern times. There are events that are going to bring about a European presence in the Middle East. There’s going to be a warfare that is going to break out in the Middle East that is going to set the stage for European intervention. Some of these things are addressed in the first chapter of Amos.

Then he addresses Judah in chapter 2.

Amos 2:4-5, “Thus says the Lord: ‘For three transgressions of Judah, and for four, I will not turn away its punishment, because they have despised the law of the Lord, and have not kept His commandments. Their lies lead them astray, lies after which their fathers walked. But I will send a fire upon Judah, and it shall devour the palaces of Jerusalem.’” You are going to see full-scale warfare breaking out in the Middle East. It talks about fire coming on the palaces of each of these areas. That’s talking about missile attacks. They are going to be launching missile attacks and there’s going to be fire coming on all those places. That’s going to set the stage for European intervention in the Middle East.

Verse 6, “Thus says the Lord: ‘For three transgressions of Israel, and for four, I will not turn away its punishment, because they sell the righteous for silver, and the poor for a pair of sandals.’” Now if Judah and Israel are the same ones (the same people), why is Israel addressed separately here?

This is why the Protestants don’t understand. Even though Jimmy Swaggart and some of these others may talk about prophecy from time to time, they don’t understand prophecy. They can’t begin to understand prophecy. They can’t understand any of the Old Testament prophets because they don’t understand the identity of Israel. You can waste your time listening to some of these characters or reading what they write. They may know in a general, vague way that Christ is going to return, but they don’t really understand what He is going to do when He gets here. They certainly don’t understand the events that are going to lead up to that. They don’t understand events that set the stage for it because they don’t understand the identity of the people addressed. They don’t know how the United States and Britain and the Commonwealth nations fit into prophecy. They don’t understand that because they don’t know where we are identified.

Why is God going to deal with Israel? What is reflected here? It talks about greed and materialism.

Verse 6, he says, “...I’ll not turn away the punishment thereof because they sold the righteous for silver and the poor for a pair of shoes.”

Verse 7, “They pant after the dust of the earth which is on the head of the poor, and pervert the way of the humble. A man and his father go in to the same girl, to defile My holy name.” It talks about greed, materialism, sexual looseness and immorality. These are problems for which He indicts modern Israel. Where he says, “...they sold the righteous for silver and the poor for a pair of shoes,” there is sort of a play on words. In ancient times, there was a custom of sealing a legal agreement where one pulled off his shoe and handed it to the other.

Go back to the book of Ruth and read the account of Boaz when he made the agreement with old “What’s his name” about Ruth (Ruth 4:7-9). I refer to him as “What’s his name” because he was an individual who was unwilling to do what God said. So, his name was blotted out of the genealogy. It doesn’t give you his name in the book of Ruth. The name of the fellow who was actually the closer kin than Boaz was blotted out. So, he goes down through history as old “What’s his name.”

You read how, when Boaz made the agreement with him, he pulled off his shoe. That was a custom showing that a legal transaction was rendered. The Jewish commentary brings out that the expression, “selling the poor for a pair of shoes,” had to do with taking advantage of people under the “color” of the law. It’s pretty descriptive of some of the modern lawyers and “shysters” who use the law to their own advantage. It may be justice, but it’s not justice with equality. It is a matter of people using the law in a manipulative way to dispossess and take advantage of others who are maybe not in a position to defend themselves. So, God indicts the nation for its greed, its obsession with materialism and immorality.

Amos 3:3, “Can two walk together unless they are agreed?” This is a fundamental principle. If we are going to walk with God, we have to agree with God. As a nation, if we want God’s blessings and benefits, we have to agree with God. As a nation, any agreement that we ever had with God has been very quickly left behind. It’s incredible the things that people want to do. They want to rewrite the rules. There was a great “hue and cry” in the media over the proposal that was in the Presbyterian Church to redefine morality. Basically, it was to put the stamp of approval on immorality, whether it was fornication, adultery, homosexuality or anything. People don’t like the idea of God telling them what to do.

Verse 7, “Surely the Lord God does nothing, unless He reveals His secret to His servants the prophets.” Before God intervenes in world events, God sends His servants to proclaim and announce that intervention. God doesn't just do something in a corner. Inevitably, when you look through the Scriptures, God sends His servants to announce and proclaim that intervention and to announce and proclaim the need to repent. When God gets ready to do something, He is going to make it plain.

Verse 9, "Proclaim in the palaces at Ashdod, and in the palaces in the land of Egypt, and say: 'Assemble on the mountains of Samaria; see great tumults in her midst, and the oppressed within her.'" Samaria was the capital of Northern Israel. Samaria is used as symbolic of the ten tribes of Israel. They are defined as being rind with great tumults, as well as a lot of oppression. A great tumult means a lot of internal civil strife.

One of the things that is going to rend this nation is civil strife and discord. We are going to come unraveled in our major cities with civil strife. When things start getting really serious economically, you are going to find some major civil strife and unrest in our cities. God talks about dealing with these things.

Amos 4:1, "Hear this word, you cows of Bashan, who are on the mountain of Samaria, who oppress the poor, who crush the needy, who say to your husbands, 'Bring wine, let us drink!'" He is not talking about cows in the field. God is not indicting cows for their sins. This is a reference to people; specifically, the reference is to a "fat-cow" society. The Jewish commentary brings it out as the women who encourage and nag their husbands causing them to be cruel in getting ahead.

Verses 1-3, "Hear this word, you cows of Bashan, who are on the mountain of Samaria, who oppress the poor, who crush the needy, who say to your husbands, 'Bring wine, let us drink!'" The Lord God has sworn by His holiness: 'Behold, the days shall come upon you when He will take you away with fishhooks, and your posterity with fishhooks. You will go out through broken walls, each one straight ahead of her, and you will be cast into Harmon,' says the Lord."

The term "Harmon" in the Hebrew would better be rendered as a place name. It is a reference to Armenia, which is where much of Northern Israel went into captivity.

Verse 6, "'Also I gave you cleanness of teeth in all your cities... [He is not talking about good dental hygiene. He is saying there won't be anything to eat.]...And lack of bread in all your places; yet you have not returned to Me,' says the Lord."

Verses 7-9, "'I also withheld rain from you, when there were still three months to the harvest. I made it rain on one city, I withheld rain from another city. One part was rained upon, and where it did not rain the part withered. So two or three cities wandered to another city to drink water, but they were not satisfied; yet you have not returned to Me,' says the Lord. 'I blasted you with blight and mildew...'"

He talks about upset weather conditions. Some places are not getting any rain and other places are getting too much rain. It sounds familiar, doesn't it? Have you seen any mildew around lately? He is talking about the upset conditions and the things that are going to endanger the food production because you can be wiped out with too much rain or too little. That's going to happen. We are obviously not in the throes of some massive famine right now, but that doesn't mean it won't happen. It simply means that it is not yet that time. It is not here yet.

We are in the midst of upset weather conditions, but it has not yet taken that serious a toll. Some farmers in this area have taken a toll because it has been so wet and they haven't been able to get into their fields and do the things that they need to do. It depends on how long it goes on as to how bad the toll is. One of the things we have to realize is how vulnerable we are. We are dependent on what God gives—rain, sun and wind. Man likes to think that he is so much in charge of his own life and yet everything around us depends on what God provides and gives.

Verse 10, "'I sent among you a plague after the manner of Egypt...'" We find described in Amos 4 the drought, famine and disease that are going to be national punishment.

Then he talks about the captivity that is going to come on the house of Israel.

Amos 5:1, "Hear this word which I take up against you, this lamentation, O house of Israel." Here's a lamentation for the house of Israel.

Verse 3, "...'The city that goes out by a thousand shall have a hundred left, and that which goes out by a hundred shall have ten left to the house of Israel.'" Ten percent of those who go into captivity are going to survive and be alive at the end of the tribulation.

Verse 4, "...'Seek Me and live...'"

Verse 5, "'But do not seek Bethel, nor enter Gilgal, nor pass over to Beersheba; for Gilgal shall surely go into captivity, and Bethel shall come to nothing.'" Don't look to the places that you have been looking to.

Verse 6, "'Seek the Lord and live...'"

Verses 11-13, “Therefore, because you tread down the poor and take grain taxes from him, though you have built houses of hewn stone, yet you shall not dwell in them; You have planted pleasant vineyards, but you shall not drink wine from them. For I know your manifold transgressions and your mighty sins. You afflict the just and take bribes; you divert the poor from justice at the gate. Therefore the prudent keep silent at that time, for it is an evil time.” God talks about His judgment that is going to come.

Verse 21, “I hate, I despise your feast days, and I do not savor your sacred assemblies.” Some want to take that out of context and say, ‘God hated all those old feast days; you shouldn’t keep them.’ Did God say, ‘I despise My Feast Days’? He says nothing about despising His Feast Days. He said, “I despise your feast days.”

Which feast days did Northern Israel keep? Go back to I Kings 12:25-33. What was the very first thing Jeroboam, the son of Nebat, did when he established an independent kingdom in Northern Israel? He changed the festivals. He substituted man-made feasts for God’s Feasts. Israel never again kept the right days.

God hates our feasts—Christmas, Easter and all that junk. He hates the things that Israel does using His name. People want to invent their own religion and then attach God’s name to it. Why don’t they call it by their own name and quit calling it Christianity? It doesn’t have anything to do with Christ. Some of these churches want to perform homosexual marriages. Well, call it by their name. Why drag God into it? Why try to bring Jesus Christ and the Bible into it. Why not call it the Sodomite religion or the Church of Gomorrah? Why bring God into it?

Amos 6:1, “Woe to you who are at ease in Zion... [They say, ‘Oh, nothing is going to happen to us.']. . .and trust in Mount Samaria [modern Israel]... [Samaria was the capital of the house of Israel. People trust in our great power and strength.]...notable persons in the chief nation [first rank among the nations], to whom the house of Israel comes!” Here are a people who put great trust and confidence in our great national power. This is the area to which the house of Israel came.

Verse 3, “Woe to you who put far off the day of doom, who cause the seat of violence to come near....” Oh, they think bad times are way far off. They say, ‘We will just elect the right guy and everything is going to be great.’

Verse 4, “Who lie on beds of ivory, stretch out on your couches, eat lambs from the flock and calves from the midst of the stall.” They are really enjoying the good things of life. This is talking about a very materialistic self-indulgent society.

Verses 5-6, “Who chant to the sound of stringed instruments, and invent for yourselves musical instruments like David; who drink wine from bowls, and anoint yourselves with the best ointments, but are not grieved for the affliction of Joseph.” They are really boozing it up, drinking wine by the bowlful. They are caught up in sort of an “eat, drink and be merry; wine, women and song.” There is nothing wrong with eating a good meal or with enjoying a glass of wine or good music. It is not talking about these things in moderation and in a proper way. It is talking about a society that is obsessed with revelry and partying. It’s very descriptive, “[they] are not grieved for the affliction of Joseph.” They are not bothered by the things that are going on. They are not bothered by sin. They are all caught up in materialism, in listening to the newest group and getting high or stoned, getting what they can get. They are not concerned about the problems of the nation. They are not grieved for the afflictions of Joseph.

Verse 7, “Therefore they shall now go captive as the first of the captives, and those who recline at banquets shall be removed.” God says those who have that attitude will be in the front of the line when the Germans march them off.

Verse 14, “But behold, I will raise up a nation against you. O house of Israel,’ says the Lord of hosts; ‘And they will afflict you from the entrance of Hamath to the Valley of the Arabah.”

Amos 7 is a little bit of an inset. The people accused Amos of being a traitor. They said the nation couldn’t put up with him. They wanted him to leave.

Amos 7:10-13, “Then Amaziah the priest of Bethel sent to Jeroboam king of Israel, saying, ‘Amos has conspired against you in the midst of the house of Israel. The land is not able to bear all his words. For this Amos has said: “Jeroboam shall die by the sword, and Israel shall surely be led away captive from their own land.”’ Then Amaziah said to Amos: ‘Go, you seer! Flee to the land of Judah. There eat bread, and there prophesy. But never again prophesy at Bethel, for it is the king’s sanctuary, and it is the royal residence.”’

They said, ‘We don’t need your kind around here. We were getting along just fine. We like our religion, and all our preachers say nice things and tell us how good we are. We like that and we're comfortable with it. Here you come along saying that we are going to go into captivity. You are saying God indicts this nation and He's going to punish this nation. You have conspired against us. You are a traitor. You shouldn't say things like that. Why don't you get out of here! Go someplace else. Get you another place to preach. We don't need you around here.'

I'll tell you what brethren, before the end of this age we are going to find ourselves in the same position because when the time comes for God's message of warning to really be "let loose" and to really shake this nation, we are going to find about the same reception that Amos and all of God's other prophets have ever gotten. Amos didn't back off from the situation. He said he didn't ask for the job. God put him there and told him to go prophesy unto the house of Israel.

Verses 15-17, "'Then the Lord took me as I followed the flock, and the Lord said to me, 'Go, prophesy to My people Israel.'" Now therefore, hear the word of the Lord: You say, "Do not prophesy against Israel, and do not spout against the house of Isaac." Therefore thus says the Lord: "Your wife shall be a harlot in the city; your sons and daughters shall fall by the sword; your land shall be divided by survey line; you shall die in a defiled land; and Israel shall surely be led away captive from his own land.'"

How do you think they liked that? When they got through reading Amos, they said, 'We think you had better get out of here, buddy. We don't like your kind around here telling us those things.'

Amos didn't "tuck-tail" and run. He looked them in the eye, pointed his finger in their face and he said, 'Let me tell you something. I didn't ask for this job. I am here because God told me to be here, and I have a message for you. Your wife is going to be a harlot in the city and your sons and daughters are going to die by the sword. You are going into captivity.' Amos was not very popular when he said that.

Amos 8:5, "...'Making the ephah small and the shekel large, falsifying the balances by deceit.'" That means selling less and less for more and more. The ephah is what they are selling; the shekel is what they are getting in return. So they are selling less and less for more and more. What they are describing kind of sounds like inflation.

Verse 6, "'That we may buy the poor for silver, and the needy for a pair of sandals....'" Who gets hurt the worst by inflation? The elderly and people on fixed incomes. They are the ones who really suffer the most. The widow and fatherless are those who are least able to defend themselves. So, God indicts a nation whose priorities are greed and materialism.

He talks about the events and things that are going to come.

Verse 11, "'Behold, the days are coming,' says the Lord God. 'That I will send a famine on the land, not a famine of bread, nor a thirst for water, but of hearing the words of the Lord.'" They didn't want Amos to tell them those things. Amos told them, 'The time is going to come when you won't be hearing them because I will be gone and there is going to be a famine in the land. When things really start getting bad, you are going to wish somebody were around to tell you what's happening.'

Amos 9 focuses on God's intervention.

Amos 9:8-9, "'Behold, the eyes of the Lord God are on the sinful kingdom, and I will destroy it from the face of the earth; yet I will not utterly destroy the house of Jacob,' says the Lord. 'For surely I will command, and will sift the house of Israel among all nations, as grain is sifted in a sieve; yet not the smallest grain shall fall to the ground.'"

In other words, when ancient Israel went into captivity they are known in history as the lost tribes of Israel. Were there going to be any lost tribes of Israel? Were they going to be the lost ten tribes? To whom were they lost? Did God lose them? Did God forget where they were? Did they get lost in the shuffle and God hasn't been able to find them? So, He's not going to fulfill all the prophecies of the Bible because the tribes of Israel got lost? They went into captivity, were sifted among all the nations and they got lost? No! He said, 'I will sift you among the nations, but I am not going to lose you.' "...as grain is sifted in a sieve; yet not the smallest grain shall fall to the ground." He said, 'I am going to collect all of you.' Israel went into captivity anciently and was sifted through the nations. Yet at the end time (the right time and place), they are collected. God prophesied that.

Verse 11, it talks about David being resurrected. It talks about the time of the Millennium, the time of plenty.

Verse 13, "'Behold, the days are coming,' says the Lord, 'when the plowman will overtake the reaper and the treader of grapes him who sows seed; the mountains shall drip with sweet wine, and all the hills shall flow with it.'" It discusses a time when the bounty is going to be so much that those who are ready to plow the field have to wait on the ones who are harvesting. The harvest is so great they are overwhelmed trying to get all the harvest in.

Verses 14-15, “I will bring back the captives of My people Israel; they shall build the waste cities and inhabit them; they shall plant vineyards and drink wine from them; they shall also make gardens and eat fruit from them. I will plant them in their land, and no longer shall they be pulled up from the land I have given them,” says the Lord your God.”

It describes a time of great abundance and great plenty. It describes a time when Israel is going to be re-gathered and the old waste places rebuilt—a time when they will be planted in their own land, never to be taken out forcefully again. That’s a prophecy that has not been fulfilled yet. It’s a prophecy for the end time. If that’s been fulfilled, when was it fulfilled? When was Israel planted in their own land never again to be removed? That’s yet future.

Obadiah is a little short book. It has one chapter. There isn’t any clear proof in the book of Obadiah exactly when it was written. It is primarily a prophecy against the Edomites who anciently dwelled nearby. The Edomites were descended from Esau. There are various groups of people who are descended from the Edomites. One particular branch, Teman, is addressed here in Obadiah.

Verse 9, “Then your mighty men, O Teman, shall be dismayed...” Teman was one of the major tribes of Edom. We would trace back the modern-day nation of Turkey primarily to the Teman branch of Esau. Turkey, up until after World War I, was known as the Ottoman Empire. It was spelled very similar to this. This was an ancient name. They were the Ottoman Turks. There are many different kinds of Turks, some of which don’t have any connection with Esau. There was an area in Soviet central Asia that was ancient Turkistan, and there were various peoples in Soviet central Asia that was ancient Turkistan. There were various peoples who lived there. The generic name “Turks” was applied to anyone in that general area. Many of these peoples were unrelated to one another. They lived in a general geographic area.

The Ottoman Turks or Temanite Turks descended from Esau. Back a little less than a thousand years ago (back about eight or nine hundred years ago), Turkistan came out and invaded the Middle Eastern area. Over a period beginning about 1200 A.D. on up to about 1450 A.D., they moved across and conquered what is now the modern-day nation of Turkey. They forced out the Greeks and other peoples who were previously there. They conquered a great deal of the Middle East and on up even into Europe and the Balkan areas. Then in the aftermath of World War I, they were sort of pushed back and forced into the Asia Minor peninsula, which took the name Turkey. They were a people that had the reputation in the Middle East as the most brutal warrior peoples that the Middle East had ever seen. They were known for their brutality and for their oppressive regime. And they are noted for that in the Middle East today. There aren’t any people in the Middle East that are more feared and hated by the Arabs and all the Middle Eastern peoples, even the Armenians. In fact, the Armenians to this day nurse a great grudge against the Turks because of the massive slaughter of Armenians right around the time of World War I. They were noted for wanton brutal violence and that sort of thing. They ruled the Middle East in that way.

The Edomites are addressed here in Obadiah. It is a prophesy against them.

Verses 9 and 18 basically describe an annihilation (a destruction) of the nation.

Verse 9, “Then your mighty men, O Teman, shall be dismayed, to the end that everyone from the mountains of Esau may be cut off by slaughter.”

Verse 18, “The house of Jacob shall be a fire, and the house of Joseph a flame; but the house of Esau shall be stubble; they shall kindle them and devour them, and no survivor shall remain of the house of Esau,” for the Lord had spoken.”

We find that Jeremiah bears in a little bit more on this.

Jeremiah 49:10-11, “But I have made Esau bare; I have uncovered his secret places, and he shall not be able to hide himself. His descendants are plundered. His brethren and his neighbors and he is no more. Leave your fatherless children, I will preserve them alive, and let your widows trust in Me.”

When you tie in Obadiah with Jeremiah, you find that basically the women and children will be preserved, but for all practical purposes, the adult male population is going to be pretty well exterminated. There’s evidence of that here.

Obadiah 10-14, “For your violence against your brother Jacob, shame shall cover you, and you shall be cut off forever. In the day that you stood on the other side—in the day that strangers carried captive his forces, when foreigners entered his gates and cast lots for Jerusalem—even you were as one of them. But you should not have gazed on the day of your brother in the day of his captivity; nor should you have rejoiced over the children of Judah in the day of their destruction; nor should you have spoken proudly in the day of distress. You should not have entered the gate of My people in the day of their calamity. Indeed, you should not have gazed on their affliction in the day of their calamity, nor laid hands on their substance in the day of their calamity. You should not have stood at the crossroads to cut off those among them who escaped....”

The crossroads is very likely Turkey that sits astride one of the major crossways—the Dardanelles—that controls their entrance from Asia to Europe.

It describes treachery, deceit and betrayal that are going to take place, and severe punishment that is going to come as a result.

Verse 21, “Then saviors [plural] shall come to Mount Zion to judge the mountains of Esau, and the kingdom shall be the Lord’s.” Christ and the saints with Him are ultimately going to return to Mount Zion. At that time, there will be saviors that will come to judge the Mount of Esau. Saviors (plural)—that’s Christ and those with Him who will finally bring the way of salvation and set things straight. It will be the time when the Kingdom is the Lord’s.

Obadiah is a short little book; but nevertheless, it is an insight into some of the events that are transpiring and will transpire in that area.

Jonah is also a very short little book. The story of Jonah is a little different than the other prophets. There is a lot that can be learned from Jonah. There’s a lot that we can learn in terms of the attitude that we need to have as God’s people and doing God’s work. Jonah was given a job.

Jonah 1:1-3, “Now the word of the Lord came to Jonah the son of Amittai, saying, ‘Arise, go to Nineveh, that great city, and cry out against it; for their wickedness has come up before Me.’ But Jonah arose to flee to Tarshish from the presence of the Lord. He went down to Joppa, and found a ship going to Tarshish; so he paid the fare, and went down into it, to go with them to Tarshish from the presence of the Lord.”

If you look at a map, you will find that from where Jonah was Nineveh was one direction and Tarshish was the other. Nineveh was to the northeast and Tarshish was to the west. Tarshish was a city on the coast of Spain. So, instead of heading east, Jonah headed west. God told Jonah He wanted him to go to Nineveh; Jonah hopped on the first boat going the other direction. He did not want to go to Nineveh. That is almost an understatement.

He did not want to go and give Nineveh God’s message. That’s fine. God has ways of getting your attention. If God wants you to do something and you don’t want to do it, God can get your attention. God says, ‘Go here,’ so you take off and go the other direction. God can get your attention. So, Jonah hopped a boat, and here they are sailing along the Mediterranean when a storm comes up. Jonah goes to sleep down in the bottom of the boat. The storm was going, and they thought the ship was about to break up. All the soldiers were hollering out in these various languages to their gods. Finally, the shipmaster came down there, saw Jonah asleep, and said, ‘We need everything going for us that we can get. You had better wake up and pray to your God, too. We’re about to drown here.’

Because they decided that they needed to find out who brought this evil upon them, they cast lots. They were a superstitious lot, but God used that. When they cast the lot, it fell on Jonah. God sort of guided that. He doesn’t generally involve Himself in that sort of thing, but He wanted old Jonah pointed out. They asked, ‘What have you done to get us into all this trouble?’ Jonah told them. So they threw him overboard. As soon as they did, the waters became as calm as it could be.

Verses 15-16, “So they picked up Jonah and threw him into the sea, and the sea ceased from its raging. Then the men feared the Lord exceedingly, and offered a sacrifice to the Lord and made vows.” Boy, you had better believe they got religious in a hurry. They came up with a real “foxhole religion.”

Verse 17, “Now the Lord had prepared a great fish to swallow Jonah. And Jonah was in the belly of the fish three days and three nights.” People sometimes wonder what kind of fish it was, and how Jonah could have survived in the fish. Was it a whale? Well, it says right here what kind of fish it was. It was a special Jonah-fish. It says the Lord prepared a great fish to swallow up Jonah. How could Jonah have survived in the belly of the fish? –Because the fish was prepared for Jonah to survive. This was a special fish that had been prepared to swallow up Jonah—a special Jonah-eating fish. It was what it was designed to do, so it did it very well. The fish swallowed up Jonah, and Jonah was down there three days and three nights.

Jonah 2:1, “Then Jonah prayed to the Lord his God from the fish’s belly.” You better believe he prayed. Here he was trying to get away from God and now he was awfully glad that God could find him. He was surely hoping that God could find him because he was down there in the belly of this fish and he had to do some serious praying. Sometimes people wonder what position we should get into and what's the best position for prayer. Well, I don't know. Jonah might have been in a variety of positions as this old fish was sailing through the water, just bouncing around. But I suspect that whatever position he was in was a good position to really be fervent because he was really crying out to God.

Verse 2, "And he said: 'I cried out to the Lord because of my affliction, and He answered me. Out of the belly of sheol I cried, and You heard my voice.'"

Verse 5, "'The waters encompassed me, even to my soul; the deep closed around me; weeds were wrapped around my head.'" Here's old Jonah down there. Fish smell bad enough from the outside; can you imagine what it smelled like from the inside? And old Jonah was down there covered with slimy seaweed. This fish was moving right along. He was zooming up through the Mediterranean and Black Sea. It came down and spit out old Jonah right there near Nineveh.

Verse 10, "So the Lord spoke to the fish, and it vomited Jonah onto dry land." Jonah had been praying for three days and three nights. The fish comes skidding to a stop right up there on the shore. The fish got indigestion really bad about this time, and out comes Jonah. I don't know what else came up with Jonah, but he must not have been a pleasant-smelling individual. He was certainly not an attractive-looking sight when he sort of picked himself up off the beach.

Jonah 3:1-2, "Now the word of the Lord came to Jonah the second time, saying, 'Arise, go to Nineveh, that great city, and preach to it the message that I tell you.'" This time Jonah arose and went unto Nineveh (v. 3).

A few things had happened to change Jonah's perspective. He wasn't looking for the next boat out. When he considered what the alternatives were, going to Nineveh didn't seem like such a bad deal. And to top it off, the Ninevehites (the Assyrians) worshipped Dagon, the fish god. If Jonah had just gone like God had told him to, he probably wouldn't have been paid any attention to more than anything else. But by being delivered on the spot by this great fish that just kind of shows up and spews him out, this is their god that they worship. Here comes this great fish and a man pops out of it. They were pretty impressed. So, all of a sudden, Jonah had an audience that he wouldn't have had before.

So, he comes through Nineveh, looking like something a fish spit out, and smelling like something that a fish spit out.

Verses 4-5, "And Jonah began to enter the city on the first day's walk. Then he cried out and said, 'Yet forty days, and Nineveh shall be overthrown!' So the people of Nineveh believed God... [It scared them to death when they saw this and heard the message.]...proclaimed a fast, and put on sackcloth, from the greatest to the least of them."

Verses 6-7, "Then word came to the king of Nineveh; and he arose from his throne and laid aside his robe, covered himself with sackcloth and sat in ashes. And he caused it to be proclaimed and published throughout Nineveh by the decree of the king and his nobles, saying, 'Let neither man nor beast, herd nor flock, taste anything; do not let them eat, or drink water.'" Everything and everyone was going to fast with typical German efficiency.

Verse 8, "'But let man and beast be covered with sackcloth, and cry mightily to God; yes, let every one turn from his evil way and from the violence that is in his hands.'"

Even let the cows join in. I tell you what—if you didn't feed a cow for three days and three nights, it will be crying out for all it could cry out, too. Can you imagine the commotion that must have been going on there by about the third day? All these people were wailing and lamenting and crying out to God. Since they didn't even feed the livestock, you can imagine by the third day every cow was lowing and every sheep and goat and dog was howling. That must have been pandemonium around there. They even put sackcloth on the cows. It was real German efficiency. When they were going to repent, they were all going to repent, right down to the last cow. So, they were all lined up there. And God looked down and He just kind of shook His head.

Verse 10, "Then God saw their works, that they turned from their evil way; and God relented from the disaster that He had said He would bring upon them, and He did not do it." God saw what they were doing, and God thought, 'You know, you have to appreciate the effort.' So, He changed from what He was going to do and said, 'I think I'm going to give you a little more time.'

Jonah 4:1, "But it displeased Jonah exceedingly, and he became angry." You would think Jonah was happy because the people listened. No, Jonah wasn't happy. Jonah wanted to see them "fry." Jonah wanted to see them really "get it"— which is probably part of the reason he didn't want to go down there to warn them to begin with. He was afraid something would happen and they might change.

The Ninevehites were great enemies of Israel. They were a threat. They were a great nation that was sort of rising up on the horizon. Jonah would really have liked to see them "get it." 'God is mad at them? Good! Let God just wipe them out.' He didn't like the Assyrians anyway. God told him to go down and preach to them. He didn't want to go preach to them. God got his attention and sort of persuaded him. God gave him a little incentive. Jonah went down and he preached, but he didn't really want them to act on what he said. But sure enough, wouldn't you know it, he preaches to them and they repent. Jonah was displeased.

Verse 2, "So he prayed to the Lord, and said, 'Ah, Lord, was not this what I said when I was still in my country? Therefore I fled previously to Tarshish; for I know that You are a gracious and merciful God, slow to anger and abundant in loving kindness, One who relents from doing harm.'"

He said to God, 'Isn't this what I told You? This is why I left and went to Tarshish. I knew You were a gracious God and merciful. I just knew as soon as I came down here and told them, You were going to feel sorry for them and let them "off the hook."'

Verse 3, "Therefore now, O Lord, please take my life from me, for it is better for me to die than to live!" Jonah said, 'I wish you would just go ahead and let me die. I would rather die than live if this is the way it's going to be.' Jonah was really feeling sorry for himself. He didn't like it. Things hadn't turned out the way he had expected.

Verse 4, "Then the Lord said, 'Is it right for you to be angry?'" God said, 'Do you think you have a good reason for being mad?'

Verse 5, "So Jonah went out of the city and sat on the east side of the city. There he made himself a shelter and sat under it in the shade, till he might see what would become of the city." He was just going to sit there on the mountaintop and watch. Countdown until the forty days was over, but he was hoping that maybe God would change His mind and "fry" them. Jonah was just sitting out there.

Verse 6, "And the Lord God prepared a plant [KJV, "gourd"] and made it come up over Jonah, that it might be shade for his head to deliver him from his misery. So Jonah was very grateful for the plant."

We have a lot of special things in the book of Jonah. We have a special Jonah-eating fish, and here we have a special Jonah-shading gourd. It's not your ordinary run-of-the-mill gourd. It's a gourd that came up in a day's time. You talk about "Jack and the Beanstalk!" This is Jonah and the gourd stalk! And it grew just about as fast.

Old Jonah was sitting out here. The sun is beaming down. He's hot and mad. He's sitting there in a bad attitude. He's sweating, and he's watching to see what's going to happen. So, this gourd begins to grow up. It springs up very quickly and all the dense foliage comes out. He was exceedingly glad because of the gourd. Now isn't this nice and pleasant. But God played a dirty, rotten trick on him.

Verses 7-8, "But as morning dawned the next day God prepared a worm, and it so damaged the plant that it withered. And it happened, when the sun arose, that God prepared a vehement east wind; and the sun beat on Jonah's head, so that he grew faint. Then he wished death for himself, and said, 'It is better for me to die than to live.'"

So, God prepared a gourd and a worm. This was a special gourd-eating worm, and this worm had a very healthy appetite for a worm because the worm basically devoured the gourd. The gourd wasn't anymore. Then God sent in this extra hot desert wind and the sun was blistering. Jonah was miserable and passing out. He was really feeling sorry for himself. He wanted God to just go ahead and take his life.

Verse 9, "Then God said to Jonah, 'Is it right for you to be angry about the plant?' And he said, 'It is right for me to be angry, even to death!'"

Jonah said, 'I am so mad; I wish You would just let me die.' God said, 'You really liked that gourd didn't you?' And Jonah said, 'You bet I did. That was my gourd and I liked it. It was nice. You took it away from me, and I am mad.'

Verse 10, "But the Lord said, 'You have had pity on the plant for which you have not labored, nor made it grow, which came up in a night and perished in a night.'"

God said, 'You really felt sorry for that gourd. You're feeling all terrible because your poor gourd died. You just feel terrible about that. You had pity on the gourd. You didn't labor for the gourd. What did you do to make the gourd? You didn't plant it. You didn't make it grow, but you feel sorry for it. Here you are being sorry for the gourd, which you have not labored, neither made it to grow. It came up in a night and perished in a night. It was a special quick-growing gourd. Zoom, it was here. You didn't do anything to make it grow and now you are all depressed and feeling sorry for yourself. You are all miserable and sad because the gourd is gone. If you can feel bad because of the gourd, can I not pity Ninevah?"

Verse 11, "And should I not pity Nineveh, that great city, in which are more than one hundred and twenty thousand persons who cannot discern between their right hand and their left, and also much livestock?" God said, "You feel sorry for the gourd. You wish the gourd were still here. You miss the gourd. You didn't have anything to do with making the gourd. You didn't create it or have anything to do with making it come up. You feel bad because of the gourd. You miss the gourd. Well, what about Me? Here's one hundred twenty thousand people down here in Nineveh, plus all the livestock. Don't you think I should have a little pity on them? After all, I made them. They are the work of My hands. I brought them into being. If you can have pity on the gourd, then I can have pity on the Assyrians." Jonah had never really looked at it that way before.

There are various things we see in the book of Jonah. The book of Jonah shows God's great mercy. It shows that God will accept anyone's repentance, as long as it is genuine and heartfelt. God is merciful and God desires to be merciful. God desires to give us a chance to change. Certainly, there are other lessons we can derive from it. If God wants you to do something or if God wants you to go somewhere, you had better go. If God wants you to do it, you had better do it. If you try to duck out and hide to get out of it, God has ways of getting your attention. You will wind up really wanting to go and to do what God wants you to do. God has ways of dealing with us and ways of getting our attention.

One other thing about Jonah is that Jonah's three days and three nights in the fish's belly was symbolic of Jesus Christ being three days and three nights in the heart of the earth.

Matthew 12:38-41, "Then some of the scribes and Pharisees answered, saying, 'Teacher, we want to see a sign from You.' But He answered and said to them, 'An evil and adulterous generation seeks after a sign, and no sign will be given to it except the sign of the prophet Jonah. For as Jonah was three days and three nights in the belly of the great fish, so will the Son of Man be three days and three nights in the heart of the earth. The men of Nineveh will rise in the judgment with this generation and condemn it, because they repented at the preaching of Jonah; and indeed of greater than Jonah is here.'"

Jesus Christ prophesied that what Jonah went through was in effect a type of a death and a resurrection. If God hadn't intervened and if this fish hadn't spit him out, Jonah would have died. That would have been Jonah's grave. He would have been buried in the fish's belly. But God brought him forth after three days and three nights. God worked that miracle and actually used it as symbolic of the length of time the Messiah would be in the grave before He would be brought forth—in His case, to a literal resurrection, a resurrection to power and glory.

There's a lot that can be learned from the little short book of Jonah and the things that are packed in there. There's an awful lot packed into the Minor Prophets. The book of Amos is more of what we think of as a prophetic book in the sense that the focus of it is prophecy. The focus of it is the end time. The book of Obadiah is a very short book that focuses on one aspect of end-time prophecy. The book of Jonah gives us a little insight into prophecies altogether.

Those who are doing God's work, those who are representing God, need to be filled with a desire and a yearning to carry God's message. There needs to be willingness and a desire to carry God's message, to proclaim God's message and to appreciate and to value God's mercy. He should never take those things for granted. There's a lot packed in there.

Next Bible study we are going to go through the books of Micah, Nahum, Habakkuk and Zephaniah. Again, they are fairly short little books. There's some overlap that we will see. Micah is the primary one of these books and the lengthiest of the group. We will go into those next Bible study as we progress through this series on the Minor Prophets. We will have a chance to wrap up those books next time.

Minor Prophets Series—Micah, Nahum,
Habakkuk and Zephaniah

We are getting into several of the Minor Prophets this evening. These are all short books and yet they are books that have a lot of meaning packed into them. We are going to cover four books this evening—Micah, Nahum, Habakkuk and Zephaniah. Most of them are short. Micah is the longest of the four and it is the one that we will spend the most amount of time on. Micah was written at a time roughly contemporary with that of the previous prophets we covered. We have gone through Hosea, Joel, Amos, Obadiah and Jonah. Micah was roughly contemporary with those individuals. Those six prophets, together with Isaiah, were all roughly at the same period of time. They prophesied in the latter years of the dominance of Northern (ten tribes) Israel.

Remember, the ten tribes went into captivity at an earlier time than did the southern tribes. Northern Israel was transported into captivity well over a hundred years prior to the tribe of Judah. Certainly there were a few remnants of the northern tribes that escaped the earlier deportation and there were some individuals who came south at the time of King Hezekiah's Passover. The deportation by the Assyrians took place over a period of years, but the bulk of them were transported in bulk over a hundred years earlier. And gradually others were transported. There were some small remnants that migrated at a later period of time, but that gets off into another subject.

I would like to read a few comments on Micah from the "Introduction to Micah" in the Soncino Jewish Commentary because Micah's time greatly paralleled our own twentieth century. One of the ways God used Micah and the other prophets was to write of events that mirrored our time, day and age because there was a very strong parallel between the events that went on in the eighth century B.C. and the events that went on in the twentieth century. These events set the stage for the same sort of problems. Human nature is such that if you put the same people in the same circumstance, they tend to do the same thing. The reason why there is a repetitive basis to history is because we see over and over the same people getting into the same circumstances and they tend to respond the same way. When we read the book of Micah, we find the events dealt with our ancestors, the tribes of Israel.

The comments in the Soncino Jewish Commentary say: "The eighth century witnessed the emergence in Israel and Judah of a commercial civilization of great material prosperity. Its foundations were laid in the peace and security which Jeroboam II (783-743 B.C.) won for Israel and Uzziah (778-740 B.C.) won for Judah during their long reign."

They each reigned for periods of about forty years in the early eighth century B.C. Both of their reigns ended about twenty to twenty-five years prior to the Assyrian invasion. So, we are looking at a period of prosperity where Israel reached its height. One thing to understand, and it is sort of an interesting parallel, Israel reached the height of its prosperity only about twenty-five years before they went into the depths of captivity. It's sort of an interesting point because when people are riding high, it seems very difficult for them to imagine that life won't always go on that way. They think it's all taken care of and life is always going to go on that way. And that is not reality; that's not the way it is.

It goes on to mention that these kings "extended the borders of their kingdom from Damascus to the Red Sea, from the desert to the Mediterranean, giving the Hebrew states command of all the main trade routes of ancient days. But it was a civilization that displayed all the evils of a society making haste to be rich—greed and covetousness, reckless and unscrupulous competition and a pitiless disregard of the claims of sympathy, charity and brotherly consideration. Extremes of wealth and poverty, which had been impossible in an agricultural society based on the Biblical system of land tenure, were dividing the nation into classes of possessors and dispossessed." It talks about how "the pursuit of commerce encouraged the development of cities and city life. And it was to the city that the landless farmers migrated in search of a livelihood, where wealth, luxury and vice dwelt side by side with poverty, misery and squalor."

That's pretty descriptive of some of our major cities. Wouldn't that be pretty descriptive of a place like New Orleans, New York or for that matter Houston, Dallas or Washington D.C. where wealth, luxury and vice dwell side by side with poverty, misery and squalor.

You have extremes. It talks about how this period of time saw the influx of a great rural migration to cities. Now, that is what has happened in the twentieth century. It happened at the beginning of the century for the nation as a whole. For most of the South, it did not happen until after World War II. Most of our cities didn't really begin to "take off" until the aftermath of World War II. Since World War II, the South has undergone the urbanization that the rest of the country had undergone half a century or more earlier.

So, there are problems. Micah is describing a civilization, a society that in many ways mirror social patterns that we have undergone centuries later. Social problems beget social problems. There are various problems that are dealt with in the book of Micah. We are going to focus on Micah perhaps a little more than the others. It is a much longer book. Most of the others are short little books, but we are going to focus on them as well.

Micah 1:1, "The word of the Lord that came to Micah of Moresheth in the days of Jotham, Ahaz, and Hezekiah, kings of Judah, which he saw concerning Samaria and Jerusalem." This is concerning all of the tribes of Israel. Samaria and Jerusalem represent the capitals of the northern ten tribes as well as Judah to the south.

Verse 2, "Hear, all you peoples! Listen, O earth, and all that is in it! Let the Lord God be a witness against you, the Lord from His holy temple." Who do we have addressed here? To whom is the book of Micah addressed? It is addressed to the entire earth. So here is a message that has worldwide implication. What is the time setting of the book of Micah? Was he primarily writing for his day and time—the eighth century B.C.?

Verses 3–5, "For behold, the Lord is coming out of His place; He will come down and tread on the high places of the earth. The mountains will melt under Him, and the valleys will split like wax before the fire, like waters poured down a steep place. All this is for the transgression of Jacob and for the sins of the house of Israel. What is the transgression of Jacob? Is it not Samaria? And what are the high places of Judah? Are they not Jerusalem?"

We notice here that we are focusing on a time when God is going to come forth—a time when the Messiah is going to come and exercise His government and His rule.

The historical setting is clear because we are told the kings who were ruling during the time that Micah prophesied. Jotham, Ahaz and Hezekiah were the kings of Judah during the time that Micah prophesied. We are given some insight.

Micah prophesied in the very latter part of the time of Northern Israel before they went into captivity. It talks about the transgression of the house of Jacob and the sins of the house of Israel. This is clearly a reference to the time period prior to Northern Israel's captivity.

Verse 5, "...What is the transgression of Jacob? Is it not Samaria? And what are the high places of Judah? Are they not Jerusalem?" This focuses on the fact that the capital cities epitomized the sins of the nation in the things that were going on there.

Verse 9, "For her wounds are incurable. For it has come to Judah; it has come to the gate of My people, even to Jerusalem."

Micah 2:1-2, "Woe to those who devise iniquity, and work out evil on their beds! At morning light they practice it, because it is in the power of their hand. They covet fields and take them by violence, also houses, and seize them. So they oppress a man and his house, a man and his inheritance."

I want to read a comment from the Jewish translation that brings out a little bit extra.

"Woe to them that devise iniquity and work evil upon their beds for the morning is light, they execute it because it's in the power of their hands. They covet fields and seize them and houses and take them away. They oppress a man in his house, even a man in his heritage. [The comment brought out here is on coveting fields and seizing them.] This reference to seizing them is seizing them by corrupt legal processes, rather than by force. This legalized robbery was more galling and immoral than violent ex-appropriation. Against it there was not defense."

It's talking about individuals who were in power (control) and manipulate that power to get their own way. It is talking about individuals who control the wealth, power and legal resources to sort of manipulate, maneuver and gain their own way. That is a descriptive aspect. You can manipulate things through taxation, through raising and lowering of the discount rates and interest rates. It's a matter of inflation. There are many, many processes.

God indicts many of those who are at the very helm of society for the greed and corruption that have motivated them and the pitiless disregard for fairness and for justice with equity.

In this century, we have seen the destruction of rural communities and rural life in this country. There have been many factors in that. But, certainly, some factors have included the greed and manipulation by those who are in a position to do such things. And it has brought about extensive consequences for our nation.

Micah 2:1, “Woe to those who devise iniquity, and work out evil on their beds! At morning light they practice it, because it is in the power of their hand.” They go to sleep thinking about how they can take advantage of somebody, how they can manipulate, maneuver and take advantage of somebody. As soon as it gets daylight, they go out and act upon a new scheme.

Verse 6, “‘Do not prattle,’ you say to those who prophesy. So they shall not prophesy to you; they shall not return insult for insult.” KJV, “Prophesy you not, say they to them that prophesy: ‘they shall not prophesy to them, that they shall not take shame.’” They don’t want to hear the truth.

Micah 3:1, “And I said: ‘Hear now, O heads of Jacob, and you rulers of the house of Israel: Is it not for you to know justice?’” Here, again, is an indictment to the house of Israel, not to Judah. It’s not to the Jews of today, but to the house of Israel.

These books, such as the book of Micah, only make sense and are only understandable if you understand who is being addressed. That’s one of the reasons why some of the evangelicals and fundamentalists among the Protestants who comment on prophecy do not understand it. They do not understand it because they do not understand the key that unlocks Bible prophecy—which is the identity of Israel. They read Micah and think it is talking about the Jews—that little nation in the Middle East today called Israel. And because that is what they think, they misunderstand and misapply the entire message.

Now, there are prophecies that focus on the state of Israel, and we are going to get into some of those next time. There are interesting things that are coming up in the Middle East right now. There are some very remarkable events. By the way, don’t hold your breath until Secretary of State Baker brings peace in the Middle East. Though I don’t question his good intentions, I think that’s going to prove slightly beyond him.

He indicts them in v. 2, “‘You who hate good and love evil; who strip the skin from My people, and the flesh from their bones.’” Boy, they’d pick it clean. Here are the leaders who should know right from wrong and should be teaching the people and setting an example. Instead, they are out to pick the carcass clean. They are out to get what they can get. We have had scandal after scandal of people in high places who have been up to something. We had the latest thing (sort of a midnight raid) that the United States Senate made. They waited until late at night when the reporters and cameras were gone, and then they very quickly came up and voted themselves about a $25,000 raise. That’s quite a deal! If you want a raise, all you have to do is vote in favor of it. How many companies do you know that all you have to do is get together and vote yourself a raise?

It gets off into another subject.

Verse 8, “But truly I am full of power by the Spirit of the Lord, and of justice and might, to declare to Jacob his transgression and to Israel his sin.” The job of God’s work and His true servants filled with the power of the Spirit of God is to declare to Jacob his transgression and to Israel his sin. So, here is a message of repentance for the nation.

Verses 9-11, “Now hear this, you heads of the house of Jacob and rulers of the house of Israel, who abhor justice and pervert all equity. They build up Zion with bloodshed and Jerusalem with iniquity: Her heads judge for a bribe, her priests teach for pay, and her prophets divine for money. Yet they lean on the Lord, and say, ‘Is not the Lord among us? No harm can come upon us.’”

What do you think is going to happen when this message is delivered by God’s work to the nation? They are going to be glad to see us leave. They will probably help us pack and encourage us to go. That time is going to come. It is going to come in God’s time. God is the one who orchestrates the time. God has reserved the times and the seasons unto His own power (Acts 1:7).

Here is a message that is going to shake this nation because it is addressed to the heads of the house of Jacob, to the rulers of the house of Israel who are to be indicted by God’s work, as those who abhor judgment and pervert all equity.

Verse 10, “Who build up Zion with bloodshed and Jerusalem with iniquity.” They are in it for what they can get. They are in it for the money (v. 11). You talk about an expose! There are some things that are going to be laid bare.

Micah 4 addresses something that is important. It again sets the stage for the time period Micah is describing. Is Micah primarily talking about his own day and his own time?

Micah 4:1, “Now it shall come to pass in the last days that the mountain of the Lord’s house shall be established on the top of the mountains and shall be exalted above the hills; and peoples shall flow to it.” In the last days, the mountain of the house of the Lord is going to be exalted. God’s government is going to be established in the last days. Now, if you want to read another description of it, you can go back to Daniel 2 and Daniel 7.

Daniel 2:44, “And in the days of these [ten] kings the God of heaven will set up a kingdom which shall never be destroyed....” The God of heaven is going to step in and set up a kingdom and a government.

Micah 4:1-2, “Now it shall come to pass in the latter days that the mountain of the Lord’s house shall be established on the top of the mountains, and shall be exalted above the hills; and peoples shall flow to it. Many nations shall come and say, ‘Come, and let us go to the mountain of the Lord, to the house of the God of Jacob; He will teach us His ways, and we shall walk in His paths.’ For out of Zion the law shall go forth, and the word of the Lord from Jerusalem.”

Jerusalem is going to be the world capital. It’s not going to be in Washington, New York, Moscow, Rome, Berlin or some other such place. It’s going to be in Jerusalem. After God’s government is established, there are going to be many nations that are going to come and look. They are going to want, and they are going to be seeking what they see. Israel is going to be re-gathered and begin to blossom and bud as a rose (Isaiah 35:1-2). They will blossom and bud and fill the earth. As Israel begins to prosper, (blossom and bud) the surrounding nations are going to want that. The government of God, within a matter of years, is going to expand out into the entire world. Within a matter of a few years, the entire earth will be brought under the government of God.

Verse 3, “He shall judge between many peoples, and rebuke strong nations afar off....” There are going to be those who come voluntarily and seek to learn of God’s way. They want to know what works. They want the blessings they see. And there are going to be others that sort of have a belligerent, recalcitrant attitude and are going to have to be rebuked, to be dealt with. They are not going to be allowed to abuse their neighbor. They are not going to be allowed to go in and take their neighbor’s property. They are not going to be allowed to learn war any more. Rather, continuing v. 3, “...They shall beat their swords into plowshares, and their spears into pruning hooks; nations shall not lift up sword against nation, neither shall they learn war any more.”

Verse 4, “But everyone shall sit under his vine and under his fig tree, and no one shall make them afraid; for the mouth of the Lord of hosts has spoken.”

There are two or three things that come out here. Many times over the years and centuries, there has been the concept that a utopian society would involve some form of communism or socialism. There have been various utopian schemes that have attempted to be carried out in that way—none of which has ever built an enduring society because you remove the incentive. Some of them have lasted longer than others. Those that have been voluntary, where people have been committed to a cause and pitched in for the common good, lasted for a while. But that’s not the way God will do it.

God is not going to build a communistic or socialistic society in Tomorrow’s World. Every man will sit under his vine and his fig tree, not under the community vine or fig tree. There is that principle. One of the Ten Commandments protects private property—thou shall not steal. That recognizes there are things that could be stolen. Since there is property and there is a right to property, there are many ramifications to that commandment.

We see here a couple of things. “Every man will sit under his own vine and fig tree.” We see that there will be individual possessions; individuals will own property. And we also see that it says, “and none shall make them afraid.” There’s not going to be fear and the things that intimidate people.

It’s interesting. There are so many different ways a society is structured. Just one small way—look at the taxation structure. In ancient Israel, there was no such thing as a property tax. That may seem like a small thing, but over the years there have been farmers who have lost their property, particularly years ago in the aftermath of the War Between the States. There were many of those who lost their farms because they couldn’t pay the taxes. This sort of thing happened.

My grandfather came from Arkansas to Louisiana as a young boy. That’s what had happened to his family. Back in certain times, it has not been an uncommon thing. The whole concept of property tax really means that even though you have a deed to your property, you don’t own your property. It goes back to a feudal concept that the title to all the land ultimately resides with the king and, in effect, you have to pay him rent on it every year. You may not think he does, but just don’t pay it for a few years and you will find out who owns it. It’s a concept of ownership that ownership ultimately resides in the crown. In this country, since we don’t have a monarch, it resides in the state. And in order to use this property, you have to pay the state a fee every year—a fee that the state assesses. And if you fail to pay it over a period of time, they can come in and take it away from you.

In ancient Israel, that was not the case. Title of the land ultimately belonged to God. God gave it to individual families, and under God's law, the family could not lose it forever. They could mortgage it. In effect, the most they could do was lease it for forty-nine years because at the Jubilee it always reverted back to the family. If somebody was a "ne'er-do-well," a spendthrift and not a good manager, he could bankrupt himself, but it wouldn't have implications for generations to come because, in effect, every generation got a fresh start. You had a chance to learn lessons from the past and get a fresh start.

"...everyone shall sit under his own vine and fig tree and none shall make him afraid..." There won't be terrorists or a lot of crime in the streets. Today, sometimes, you would be afraid to sit under your own vine and fig tree unless you had security lights around and maybe put up a big fence. Some people are almost living in a jail. There are bars on their doors and windows because they are afraid of people breaking in, robbing or murdering them. Can you imagine living in a society where "...none shall make you afraid?" You can sit out in the yard and you don't have to fear anyone. The government's not going to come take it away, nobody is going to come and steal it, and no one will do violence to you. This is the sort of society that is being talked about.

Verse 5 (an interesting verse), "For all people walk each in the name of his god, but we will walk in the name of the Lord our God forever and ever." All the commentators scratch their heads about this verse. They can't understand it. What does this mean? Does it mean that in Tomorrow's World, everybody will worship every god they want to? No, all people will walk in the name of his god. Who is going to be the god of those various people? Well, various members of the God Family—you and me and others. We are going to be assigned as the God-Being who is ruler over this or that community or this or that state. All these people are going to walk in the name of their god.

Continuing in v. 5, '... but we [those of us in God's Family] will walk in the name of the Eternal our God.' They will orient toward us and through us, to Christ and the Father because we will also be part of the Family of God. When we put on immortality at the resurrection, we become a part of the very Family of God. We will be worthy of worship. It says so in Revelation to the Philadelphians.

Revelation 3:9, "Indeed I will make those of the synagogue of Satan, who say they are Jews and are not, but lie—indeed I will make them come and worship before your feet, and to know that I have loved you." That can only be done to a God-Being.

You remember when the Apostle John fell down before the angel.

Revelation 22:8-9, "...I fell down to worship before the feet of the angel who showed me these things. Then he said to me, 'See that you do not do that, for I am your fellow servant, and of your brethren the prophets, and of those who keep the words of this book. Worship God.'"

He said, 'Don't worship me. I am only an angel; you can't worship me.'

Remember in Acts 14:11-15, some of these people were worshipping Paul and Silas (or Barnabas) and they said, "'Why are you doing these things? We also are men...'"

In fact, there is an account of Peter concerning that (Acts 10:25-26). It is a good account to remember. It is good proof that Peter wasn't the first pope because if he had been, he would have said, "Kiss my toe." He didn't tell them to kiss his toe. He told them to stand up.

There is a statue in the Vatican where the big toe is literally worn away because so many people have kissed the toe over the centuries—probably millions of people when you consider how many centuries it's been. They've come in there and have done obeisance to that big black, ebony statue that's supposedly Peter. It's called St. Peter today. When it was originally built, it was called Jupiter Olympus, but they just changed the name. They cut the scepter away and replaced it with a set of keys. They sprinkled a little water on it and said, 'You were Jupiter Olympus, now you are St. Peter,' and everything goes right along.

By the way, if it's not the identical statue that Antiochus Epiphanies set up in the temple that was the abomination that made desolate in ancient times, it's an exact copy. It is very likely that statue is going to be the physical object that will be moved to Jerusalem in the future as the abomination because it was exactly the same thing that Antiochus Epiphanies set up (Daniel 11:31). It's interesting that there is an exact counterpart that is set up there.

Another thing set up in St. Peter's Square is the great obelisk. I am sure many of you have seen pictures of it. That's not just any obelisk. That one was transported from Egypt. That was the ancient obelisk of the sun. It's made direct reference to by way of a prophecy against it. It's an interesting story in history because they did it centuries ago. It was a mammoth feat to transport that thing across the Mediterranean from Egypt to Italy to bring it up there and set it up. They didn't have any mechanized equipment to do it, but they did it. They went to a lot of trouble to get the exact thing that God singled out that He hated. They went to a lot of trouble to get it, bring it up there, set it up in the middle of St. Peter's Square and say, 'This is great, we have the real thing!' I'll tell you, there're some people that are going to be in for a surprise.

Micah 4:5, "For all people walk each in the name of his god, but we will walk in the name of the Lord our God forever and ever." This is an important verse.

Verses 6-7, "'In that day,' says the Lord, 'I will assemble the lame, I will gather the outcast and those whom I have afflicted; I will make the lame a remnant, and the outcast a strong nation; so the Lord will reign over them in Mount Zion from now on, even forever.'" It describes the time when the government of God is going to be set up.

Micah 5:2, "'But you, Bethlehem Ephrathah, though you are little among the thousands of Judah, yet out of you shall come forth to Me the One to be ruler in Israel, whose goings forth have been from of old, from everlasting.'" Here is a direct prophecy of where the Messiah would be born.

This is the verse that the priests and scribes quoted to Herod in the New Testament when the wise men had come to Jerusalem to inquire, "'Where is He who has been born King of the Jews?'" (Matthew 2:2)

Matthew 2:3-6, Herod was a little bothered by that because he thought he was king of the Jews. This disturbed him somewhat, and he decided he ought to look into this matter. He called the chief priests and scribes in and demanded of them where the Messiah was to be born. And when he put them on the spot, they told him that it was written in the prophets and quoted Micah 5:2.

Micah 5:2, "...from everlasting." In the Hebrew, literally, it is "from the days of eternity." The Messiah was not simply to be a human being. He was to be God in the flesh.

Verse 2, "...His goings forth has been from of old, from eternity."

Verse 3, "Therefore He shall give them up, until the time that she who is in labor has given birth;

[In other words, until the Church is established and prepared.] Then the remnant of His brethren shall return to the children of Israel."

Verse 4, "And He shall stand and feed His flock in the strength of the Lord, in the majesty of the name of the Lord His God; and they shall abide, for now He shall be great to the ends of the earth."

In vv. 7-8, he describes events that will take place, "Then the remnant of Jacob shall be in the midst of many peoples, like dew from the Lord, like showers on the grass, that tarry [wait] for no man nor wait [delay] for the sons of men. And the remnant of Jacob shall be among the Gentiles, in the midst of many peoples, like a lion among the beasts of the forest, like a young lion among flocks of sheep, who, if he passes through, both treads down and tears in pieces, and none can deliver."

He is speaking here, prophetically, of the might and the power that the Israelite nations would have.

Verse 9, "Your hand shall be lifted against your adversaries, and all your enemies shall be cut off."

Then God talks about how He would deal with Israel and would ultimately punish them.

Micah 6:1-4, "Hear now what the Lord says: 'Arise, plead your case before the mountains, and let the hills hear your voice. Hear, O you mountains, the Lord's complaint, and the strong foundations of the earth, for the Lord has a complaint against His people, and He will contend with Israel. O My people, what have I done to you? And how have I wearied you? Testify against Me. For I brought you up from the land of Egypt, I redeemed you from the house of bondage; and I sent before you Moses, Aaron, and Miriam.'"

Verses 6-8, "With what shall I come before the Lord, and bow myself before the High God? Shall I come before Him with burnt offerings, with calves a year old? Will the Lord be pleased with thousands of rams or ten thousand rivers of oil? Shall I give my firstborn for my transgression, the fruit of my body for the sin of my soul? He has shown you, O man, what is good; and what does the Lord require of you but to do justly, to love mercy, and to walk humbly with your God?"

What is God after? Is He just after great sacrifices and great ritualistic observances? Can we just go through the motions of religion and God is satisfied and pleased with that? What God wants is religion from the heart. God doesn't simply want the outward show and outward manifestation. He doesn't want us to simply go through the motions.

He says, "...what does God require..." Three things! Very simple! –To do justly, to love mercy, to walk humbly with your God. It is interesting if you look at the three. The first—to do justly—has to do with our own personal conduct. It has to do with what we do. It has to do with our relationship in terms of what we expect of ourselves. That we do justly. The word "justly" could just as easily be rendered "righteousness." It comes from the Hebrew word "tsidqah," which means "righteous" or "righteousness." What does God require? He requires us to do righteousness. What is righteousness?

Psalm 119:172, "...All Your commandments are righteousness." We are to do righteousness. We are to keep the commandments. In terms of our relationship with ourselves, in terms of what we expect of ourselves, we are to obey God.

What about our relationship with our neighbor? We are to love mercy. This has to do with the way we treat others. In our own lives, we are to concentrate on obeying God and doing what God says. We are to do what's right and just. We are to have an attitude of mercy towards others. We are not to have an attitude of condemnation, gossip, judgment, put-down and all these other things. We are to love mercy.

In our relationship with God, we are to walk humbly with God. We are to see ourselves in proper relationship with God. We are to see ourselves in perspective with God, how we stack up. We are to walk humbly with God because when we see how great God is and how weak and puny we are as human beings, how can we walk any other way than humbly?

You know, Nebuchadnezzar walked before God in pride.

Daniel 4:37, Daniel told him, "...all that walk in pride He is able to abase." The moral of that story is to not walk before God in pride. Walk humbly with your God. You are to love mercy in terms of your dealings with neighbors. In terms of your expectations of self, you do justly. It is sort of interesting. These three categories focus on ourselves, our neighbor and God—a one-word summation of relationships in each of these categories.

It talks about the greed and corruption of the nation.

Micah 6:10-13, "Are there yet the treasures of wickedness in the house of the wicked, and the short measure that is an abomination? Shall I count pure those with the wicked balances, and with the bag of deceitful weights? For her rich men are full of violence, her inhabitants have spoken lies, and their tongue is deceitful in their mouth. Therefore I will also make you sick by striking you, by making you desolate because of your sins."

Verse 16, "For the statutes of Omri are kept; all the works of Ahab's house are done; and you walk in their counsels..." Omri was the father of Ahab. Omri is not one whom we tend to focus on very much from a Biblical standpoint. We generally have given more attention to Ahab and Jezebel. Ahab was the son of Omri. Omri was the founder of that dynasty. It was one of the most significant dynasties of the northern ten tribes of ancient Israel. He was the founder of the dynasty and gave his name to it.

In fact, in ancient history, the entire nation of Israel was known by the name of Omri by some people. The Assyrians and the Assyrian monuments of the nation of Israel are called "Bit Khumri" which literally translated means "the house of Omri." Omri was evidently an individual of renown. He founded a dynasty that came on down for several generations—the most notable of which was Ahab, who married Jezebel.

That term, by the way, on the Assyrian monuments referring to Bit Khumri or Omri is the name that Israel was known by when they went into captivity. That's where the name "Cimmerians" originates. It is the name that the Celtic peoples were known by. In fact, Langer's Encyclopedia of World History brings out some of that. This was the same name that was used in the Assyrian monuments. That's why Israel was known by those names when they began to migrate up into Europe.

Micah characterizes society with greed and corruption being rampant.

Micah 7:2-4, "The faithful man has perished from the earth, and there is no one upright among men. They all lie in wait for blood; every man hunts his brother with a net. That they may successfully do evil with both hands—the prince asks for gifts, the judge seeks a bribe, and the great man utters his evil desire; so they scheme together. The best of them is like a brier; the most upright is sharper than a thorn hedge; the day of your watchman and your punishment comes; now shall be their perplexity."

It describes the corruption, and I think "the judge asks for a reward and the great man utters his evil desire..." is sort of an interesting description. We've had some of those things on tape. We've had several indictments of recent date—the guys asking for money. That’s exactly what happened. (KJV), “The great man utters his mischievous desire.” I like that description. It is a rather poetic phrase, but it is so apt and descriptive. That is the state of things. God is going to intervene, and God is going to have to punish the nation. We see that the book of Micah focuses on God’s punishment of Israel and the things that He will do. It is a major prophetic book. It is one of the longest of the Minor Prophets.

Nahum, on the other hand, has three chapters. Habakkuk has about two and one-half pages; Zephaniah is about the same—two and one-half or three pages. We find three much shorter books.

Nahum was written at a later time. It was written basically after Israel had gone into captivity but before Assyria had been punished. God used the Assyrians to punish Northern Israel, but then He was going to deal with the Assyrians and punish them. The book of Nahum is a prophecy against Assyria. Nahum sort of took up the story where Jonah left off. Jonah didn’t follow God’s instructions and tried to run away. He went the other way, but he got delivered to Nineveh to give his prophecies in such a remarkable way. What he feared came upon him. They repented. Things went on for another hundred years or so. But it doesn’t take people long—they gradually forget and drift back into their old ways. So, now, God sends another prophet, Nahum, with a prophecy against Assyria—against Nineveh. The book of Habakkuk and Zephaniah both deal with the events prior to the Chaldean captivity of Judah.

Let’s notice briefly the book of Nahum.

Nahum opens with a psalm of God’s majesty and then prophesies the fall of Nineveh.

Nahum 1:1, “The burden against Nineveh. [This is where the prophecy is addressed.] The book of the vision of Nahum the Elkoshite.”

Verses 2-3, “God is jealous, and the Lord avenges; the Lord avenges and is furious. The Lord will take vengeance on His adversaries, and He reserves wrath for His enemies; The Lord is slow to anger and great in power, and will not at all acquit the wicked. The Lord has His way in the whirlwind and in the storm, and the clouds are the dust of His feet.”

It goes on to show in vv. 6-7, “Who can stand before His indignation? And who can endure the fierceness of His anger? His fury is poured out like fire, and the rocks are thrown down by Him. The Lord is good, a stronghold in the day of trouble; and He knows those who trust in Him.”

God knows who’s who, and He knows what’s what. You don’t have to worry about that. God knows those who trust in Him. When God steps into history—when He intervenes—He knows who His people are and who are not.

We go down and it describes the events that are going to occur.

Nahum 2 talks about the Assyrians.

Nahum 2:3, “The shields of his mighty men are made red, the valiant men are in scarlet. The chariots come with flaming torches in the day of his preparation....”

I am going to read this out of the Jewish translation.

Verses 3-5, “The shield of his mighty men is made red, the valiant men are in scarlet. The chariots are fire of steel in the day of his preparation. The cypress spears are made to quiver. The chariots rush madly in the street, they jostle one another in the broad places. The appearance of them is like torches. They run to and fro like the lightening. He bethinks himself of his worthies. They stumble in their march. They make haste to the wall thereof.”

It talks about the events.

Nahum 3:1-4, “Woe to the bloody city! It is all full of lies and robbery. Its victim never departs. The noise of a whip and the noise of rattling wheels, of galloping horses, of clattering chariots! Horsemen charge with bright sword and glittering spear. There is a multitude of slain, a great number of bodies, countless corpses—they stumble over the corpses—because of the multitude of harlotries of the seductive harlot, the mistress of sorceries, who sell nations through her harlotries, and families through her sorceries.”

It describes the pomp, grandeur and all of the great panoply of might—the display of greatness and grandeur. You can almost hear the clanking of metal down the street, the marching of the troops, the glistening, shining reflection off the weapons, the great evidence of war power—the power of great military might that is so impressive. It describes this great Assyrian (modern-day Germany) power, the very head of what will ultimately come to be the beast power. It describes that greatness that is there.

There is an interesting statement that I would call to your attention.

Verse 4, “Because of the multitude of the harlotries of the seductive harlot the mistress of sorceries [KJV, “witchcraft”]....”

The word “witchcraft” (both in the beginning and latter part of the verse) is a word that is derived from the Hebrew word “kesheph.”

This is the word that is used in Malachi 3:5 to translate “sorceries.” It is a word that is rendered “pharmakaia” or “pharmakon” in the Septuagint translation, which is a Greek translation of the Old Testament. In the Hebrew, “mechashevetz” refers to one specific aspect of sorcery or witchcraft, which had to do with concocting mind-altering potions. “Pharmakon” or “Pharmakaia” in the Greek language, which is also rendered “sorcery” in Revelation 18:23, is the word that our modern word “pharmacy” comes from. It has to do with drugs. And specifically in ancient times, there were various poisons and potions, many of which were hallucinogenic or what we would term “mind-altering” narcotics and things of this sort.

Anciently, these things even played a role in various religions. You can read about it. You have to look long and hard, but there are references to it. There are references to the role that hallucinogenic and psychedelic drugs played and the mystical, spiritual visions that were seen as a result of that, particularly, in the oriental religions.

In fact, the Encyclopedia Britannica claims that Buddha actually died of an overdose from psychedelic mushrooms. When you look at the size of him, you figure he must have eaten a powerful “passel” of mushrooms. He evidently overdosed on that. He took one last “trip.” Some of the hallucinogens, like LSD, that were made derived from or synthesized from things of this sort.

What I want to call to your attention is this word “mechashevetz.” There are different words for sorcery and witchcraft. This word had to do with the aspect of sorcery or witchcraft that had to do with concocting potions, poisonous solutions, hallucinogens and this sort of thing.

When you have that in mind, read Nahum 3:4, “Because of the multitude of harlotries of the seductive harlots....” You can go back and compare that with Revelation 17:2 where it talks about the great false church, how all nations have been made drunk with the wine of the wrath of her whoredom.

Nahum 3:4 (latter part), “...the mistress of sorceries [or the mistress of drug dealing], who sells nations through her harlotries, and families through her sorceries.” It’s sort of an interesting focus when you compare it with Revelation 17 and 18. I’ll tell you, when all is said and done, we may be shocked and amazed by some of the things we find at the bottom of some of the problems that are going on today.

God says in v. 5, “Behold, I am against you,” says the Lord of hosts; ‘I will lift your skirts over your face, I will show the nations your nakedness, and the kingdoms your shame.’” In other words, God says the time is going to come when He is going to show to the whole world exactly what’s inside of this whole system. It describes the destruction that is going to come. It describes what God is going to do.

Verse 7, “...Nineveh is laid waste....”

Verses 18-19, “Your shepherds slumber, O king of Assyria; your nobles rest in the dust. Your people are scattered on the mountains, and no one gathers them. Your injury has no healing, your wound is severe. All who hear news of you will clap their hands over you, for upon whom has not your wickedness passed continually?”

Habakkuk sort of goes on from there. It was written at a little later time. It was written perhaps twenty to thirty years after Nahum. We know that Nahum was written prior to the destruction of Nineveh. Some of the commentaries try to date it afterward. That’s because they prophesy the destruction of Nineveh and it’s hard for them to imagine that somebody could have known ahead of time that it was going to be destroyed. And that’s because they don’t really believe that there is a God who knows the end from the beginning and declares it (Isaiah 46:10-11).

Habakkuk is written a little later. He would be contemporary with Jeremiah and Zephaniah. Habakkuk is a very important book; it deals with the struggle of faith.

Habakkuk 1:1, “The burden which the prophet Habakkuk saw.” First of all, he looks at things and sees all the sins of the nation of Judah. He sees what’s going on and he says, ‘O God, how can you let this happen? How can it go on? Why don’t you do something? These people deserve judgment.’ Then God says, ‘I’m planning on doing that. I am going to send in the Chaldeans and they are going to really wreak havoc.’

Then Habakkuk looks a little further and says, ‘The Chaldeans are worse than the Jews. How can You let them get by with it?’ In effect—‘How can You let the Jews get by with it?’ God says He is going to send the Chaldeans to punish them. ‘Yeah, but how can You let the Chaldeans get by with it? They are even worse.’ But God says He is going to “get” them, too.

It doesn’t take faith when you see everything going the way it ought to go. Think about that! When you see things the way they ought to be, it doesn’t take faith. You’re not walking by faith; you are walking by sight—you see it. It takes faith when physical evidence contradicts what God says. Then you have to make a choice. Do you believe what God says or do you believe what you see?

That's why Abraham was the father of the faithful. God said, 'I am going to make of you a great nation' (Genesis 17:4). Abraham looked at his ninety-year old wife who was barren and, let's face it, there wasn't a whole lot of physical evidence to give Abraham a lot of reason to think, 'Boy, God I can sure understand that. I certainly see how You are going to make me a great nation.' He just kind of scratched his head and said, 'Well, alright Lord, if You say so.' He believed God. He believed God!

Habakkuk 1:2-4, "O Lord, how long shall I cry, and You will not hear? Even cry out to You, 'Violence!' And You will not save. Why do You show me iniquity, and cause me to see trouble? For plundering and violence are before me; there is strife, and contention arises. Therefore the law is powerless, and justice never goes forth. For the wicked surround the righteous; therefore perverse judgment proceeds."

I remember back in 1975, '76 and '77 when some of us in the ministry were reading these verses and wondering if they weren't descriptive of the state of things we saw around us at that time. There were a number of us that discussed some of those things privately. We took great comfort from the book of Habakkuk because it was a message of faith.

Verse 5, "Look among the nations and watch—be utterly astounded! For I will work a work in your days which you would not believe, though it were told you." 'I am going to work a work in your days.' This verse is actually quoted back in Acts 13:41 referring to the work of God.

In the context of Habakkuk 1:5, it is talking about raising up the Chaldeans to punish Judah, but it's really saying that God will do something. God will step in and intervene in ways that you and I cannot imagine. God will do what He does in ways that you and I would never have imagined.

When God got ready to solve the problems in His work and in His Church back in 1978 and '79, He did so in ways that we would have never imagined. Some of you in the Church, did you imagine that God was going to do things the way He did? Would you have ever second-guessed the way that God stepped in and solved some of those problems back in '78 and '79? It would have been the most far-fetched scenario. I don't think there was a single one of us in the work that could have imagined that God would have stepped in and done it. I can think of various ones (including evangelists) that I remember discussing some of those things with just, literally, weeks before some of those actions came about—and none of us could imagine. We knew that it was going to happen, but we couldn't imagine how.

There's a lesson of faith. God wants us to learn a lesson of faith. God wants us to trust Him and to look to Him. That's a lesson that we can look back on. Habakkuk looked around and saw the iniquity in Judah, and said, 'Lord, how can this be? How can all this go on and nothing happens?' God said, 'Look, Habakkuk, I am going to work a work in your day, and you are not going to be able to imagine it.'

Verse 6, "For indeed I am raising up the Chaldeans, a bitter and hasty nation which marches through the breadth of the earth, and possesses dwelling places that are not theirs." They are going to come in and deal with these things.

Habakkuk 2:2-4, "Then the Lord answered me and said: 'Write the vision and make it plain on tablets, that he may run who reads it. For the vision is yet for an appointed time; but at the end it will speak, and it will not lie. Though it tarries, wait for it; because it will surely come, it will not tarry. Behold the proud, his soul is not upright in him; but the just shall live by his faith.'"

The point of Habakkuk is not just simply for ancient times. It is for our time.

Verse 3, "For the vision is yet for an appointed time; but at the time of the end it shall speak, and it will not lie. Though it tarries, wait for it; because it will surely come, it will not tarry."

That's the message of faith. Just because you don't see God doing what you think He ought to do, it doesn't mean He's not going to do it. Has God retired and gone way off somewhere? We want to put a time limit on God. We pray and ask God for help or deliverance and we want to set a time limit for it. God reserves time into His own power (Acts 1:7). The point is that even though it tarries, wait for it. It will surely come. The point is the just shall live by faith. Whose faith? It's the faith of Christ in us.

Galatians 2:20 brings that out, "I have been crucified with Christ; it is no longer I who live, but Christ lives in me; and the life which I now live in the flesh I live by faith in the Son of God, who loved me and gave Himself for me." The just shall live by faith. It is not just any faith. It is not just faith that we work up but the faith of Christ in us.

It goes on in Habakkuk 2:9, “Woe to him who covets evil gain for his house, that he may set his nest on high, that he may be delivered from the power of disaster!” It’s an important principle; you don’t really get ahead by seeking to entrench yourself by wrong methods.

Verse 9, “...him that covets evil gain for his house...set his nest on high...” There are various ones that sought to ensconce themselves. This has been the history of God’s people, both in the physical sense (in Old Testament Israel), as well in the spiritual sense. We experienced some of those things back in the ‘70s with certain individuals—one man who thought he had ensconced himself. In fact, more than one man had ensconced themselves pretty well, and when God got ready, He intervened. He dealt with it.

It talks about a time—the time that we look forward to.

Verse 14, “For the earth will be filled with the knowledge of the glory of the Lord, as the waters cover the sea.” That’s the time to look forward to. That’s the time of God’s government holding sway on this earth.

Verse 20, “But the Lord is in His holy temple. Let all the earth keep silence before Him.”

Habakkuk 3:2, “O Lord, I have heard your speech and was afraid; O Lord, revive Your work in the midst of the years! In the midst of the years make it known: in wrath remember mercy.”

In Romans, God talks about the time when He will make a short work.

Romans 9:28, “For He will finish the work and cut it short in righteousness, because the Lord will make a short work upon the earth.” The point is that God is going to accomplish what He chooses. He will revive His work in the midst of the years.

God has a plan that He is going to carry out. The book of Habakkuk is very much a book of faith. It was written in the context of the prophet looking around and seeing everything the way it ought not be. His faith was tried. What do you do? He cried out to God and he said, ‘O Lord, how can this be? Here are your people, the nation of Judah, filled with iniquity.’ God says He is going to deal with that. God has a plan. He has a schedule.

The book of Zephaniah, which was written about the same time as Habakkuk, is also an interesting book. It focuses in on the period of the Day of the Lord in prophecy and who is going to be protected. Habakkuk is in many ways a lesson of faith. It is certainly appropriate for the end time—a time when we will see iniquity, a time when our faith will be tried, a time when there will be all sorts of chaos and confusion around us and we find ourselves in circumstances and many things that we will only be able to go through walking by faith and trusting God. If God’s not in charge, then we are in trouble anyway. We are in a heap of trouble. If God is in charge, then what is there to worry about? We certainly should have an appropriate concern of going to God, but primarily, to stay close to God so that we might come into the category that it talks about in Zephaniah.

The word “Zephaniah” means “the hidden of the Eternal.” The book of Zephaniah focuses in on the Day of the Lord, and who is going to be protected in the Day of the Lord’s wrath. “The hidden of the Eternal.” –In other words, God’s people who are protected and are in a place of protection or place of safety.

Zephaniah 2:3, it talks about that, “Seek the Lord, all you meek of the earth, who have upheld His justice. Seek righteousness; seek humility. It may be that you will be hidden in the day of the Lord’s anger.”

Zephaniah talks about the great Day of the Lord. Zephaniah 1:14, “The great day of the Lord is near; it is near and hastens quickly. The noise of the day of the Lord is bitter; there the mighty men shall cry out.” Much of Zephaniah talks about the Day of the Lord.

Zephaniah 2:3, the message is, “Seek the Lord, all you meek of the earth, who have upheld His justice. Seek righteousness, seek humility...” Who’s doing that? Well, God’s people, God’s Church. Who is seeking righteousness and meekness? God’s people are enjoined to seek God, to seek righteousness, to seek meekness. Continuing in v. 3, “...It may be that you will be hidden in the day of the Lord’s anger.”

Zephaniah 1:14-18, “The great day of the Lord is near; it is near and hastens quickly. The noise of the day of the Lord is bitter; there the mighty men shall cry out. That day is a day of wrath, a day of trouble and distress, a day of devastation and desolation, a day of darkness and gloominess, a day of clouds and thick darkness, a day of trumpet and alarm against the fortified cities and against the high towers. I will bring distress upon men, and they shall walk like blind men, because they have sinned against the Lord; their blood shall be poured out like dust, and their flesh like refuse. Neither their silver nor their gold shall be able to deliver them in the day of the Lord’s wrath....”

It talks about the great Day of the Lord's wrath. Who's going to be hidden? Who's going to be protected?

Tie that in with Revelation 12:14, "But the woman [the Church] was given two wings of a great eagle, that she might fly into the wilderness to her place, where she is nourished for a time and times and half time, from the presence of the serpent."

Revelation 3:10, it says to the Philadelphia Church, "Because you have kept My command to persevere, I also will keep you from the hour of trial [tribulation] which shall come upon the whole world, to test those who dwell on the earth."

It talks here about God's people being hidden in the day of God's wrath. Zephaniah deals with the time of God's wrath. There's sort of an interesting expression used in Zephaniah. I would call your attention to it.

Zephaniah 1:4, "I will stretch out My hand against Judah, and against all the inhabitants of Jerusalem. I will cut off every trace of Baal from this place, the names of the idolatrous priests [KJV, "chemarims"] with the pagan priests—"

The KJV simply renders it "chemarim," which is not a translation of the word. It is the Hebrew word. It is just transliterated into English. The Jewish translation renders it, "I will cut off the remnant of Baal from this place and name of the idolatrous priests with the priests." "Chemarim" was a term that certainly referred to idolatrous priests. But it has sort of an interesting meaning because the word "chemarim" in Hebrew means "black-robed ones." It was descriptive of the idolatrous priests.

It is interesting. God's priests (the Levites) who ministered in the sanctuary always wore white robes. Sometimes there were certain colored threads and extra ornaments that went with it, but the basic robe was white. It's sort of interesting that there are priests of a particular religion that have normally been identified with black garments. Usually, it's right on down to where there's just one little tiny strip of white right there at the neck. In ancient times, the priests of Baal and some of the various ones wore black robes. It is the term used here. It means idolatrous priests. But the term that God chose to use for them was "the black-robed ones," and I think that's sort of an interesting analogy and an interesting point.

Zephaniah 1:7-8, "Be silent in the presence of the Lord God; for the day of the Lord is at hand, for the Lord has prepared a sacrifice; He has invited His guests. And it shall be, in the day of the Lord's sacrifice, that I will punish the princes and the king's children, and all such as are clothed with foreign apparel."

He's going to punish people.

Verse 9, "In the same day I will punish all those who leap over the threshold...." "Leaping over the threshold" is a pagan superstitious expression.

The expression goes back to an event mentioned in I Samuel 5:4-5. Remember when the Philistines had the Ark of the Covenant they had captured and brought into the temple of Dagon. The next day they came in and the idol of Dagon had fallen down before the Ark of the Covenant. The head of Dagon had broken off on the threshold in the temple of the Philistines. Well, there developed a pagan superstition of jumping over the threshold because stepping on the threshold was bad luck. It's sort of a superstition that goes back to old Dagon's head being broken on the threshold. It's an expression that has to do with pagan superstition and those who practiced various pagan superstitions.

Verse 9, "...who fill their masters' houses with violence and deceit."

Verse 12, "And it shall come to pass at that time that I will search Jerusalem with lamps, and punish the men who are settled in complacency, who say in their heart, 'the Lord will not do good, nor will He do evil.'" —Those that have sort of a comfortable, laid-back, lukewarm, lackadaisical approach and say, 'God's not going to intervene; God's not going to do anything.' God says, 'I am going to search out and find the people who think this and I'm going to deal with them.'

It talks about the events of the Day of the Lord that are going to come.

Zephaniah 1:18, "Neither their silver nor their gold shall be able to deliver them in the day of the Lord's wrath...."

Zephaniah 2:3 (we have already focused on), "Seek the Lord, all you meek of the earth...."

Isaiah 55:6, "Seek the Lord while He may be found, call upon Him while He is near." It goes on to talk about that sort of thing and the destruction that is going to come on various ones of the people around in the Day of the Lord.

Zephaniah 3:1-5, "Woe to her who is rebellious and polluted, to the oppressing city! She has not obeyed His voice, she has not received correction; she has not trusted in the Lord, she has not drawn near to her God. Her princes in her midst are roaring lions; her judges are evening wolves that leave not a bone till morning. Her prophets are insolent, treacherous people; her priests have polluted the sanctuary, they have done violence to the law. The Lord is righteous, He is in her midst, He will do no unrighteousness. Every morning He brings His justice to light; He never fails, but the unjust knows no shame.”

The indication here is that Jerusalem is being used as a type of not only Judah but, certainly, also all of Israel.

Verse 4, “...They have done violence to the law.” Certainly, in many ways, you could say the Talmud crucified the law. When the scribes and the Pharisees got through with it, they had done violence to God’s law. Christ indicted them pretty severely for that in the time of the New Testament.

Verses 8-10, “‘Therefore wait for Me,’ says the Lord, ‘until the day I rise up for plunder; My determination is to gather the nations to My assembly of kingdoms, to pour on them My indignation, all My fierce anger, all the earth shall be devoured with the fire of My jealousy. For then I will restore to the peoples a pure language that they all may call on the name of the Lord, to serve Him with one accord. From beyond the rivers of Ethiopia My worshipers, the daughter of My dispersed ones, shall bring My offering.’”

God talks about the time when all nations will finally be turned to Him with one pure language. It talks about a time of re-gathering.

Verse 13, “‘The remnant of Israel shall do no unrighteousness and speak no lies, nor shall a deceitful tongue be found in their mouth; for they shall feed their flocks and lie down, and no one shall make them afraid.’” That’s not talking about the state of Israel in the Middle East now. That’s talking about Israel brought back after Christ’s return. That’s talking about conversion.

Verses 17-18, “‘The Lord your God in your midst, the Mighty One, will save; He will rejoice over you with gladness, He will quiet you in His love, He will rejoice over you with singing. I will gather those who sorrow over the appointed assembly....’”

God will bring back the captives. There are many prophecies of God’s intervention and the things that God will do as He steps in.

We find that both Habakkuk and Zephaniah are set in the setting of Judah at the time of Jeremiah—a time when God was getting ready to deal with His people Judah. It’s sort of a background to the account of Josiah in the book of Lamentations.

Habakkuk and Zephaniah were contemporary. They were with that particular time period. Micah was much earlier. Nahum was sort of in-between. What we see here are four short books. Three are fairly short. Micah is a little longer. There is a great deal of messages packed in there. There are messages of faith, messages of confidence, the story of God’s intervention and the ultimate establishment of the Government of God to hold sway over all the earth.

Next Bible study we will be covering the books of Haggai, Zechariah and Malachi—three books that are all related to after the exile of Judah. Next Bible study will conclude our brief survey with the Minor Prophets. We will come back at a little later time and pick up quite a bit more prophecy in much more detail when we go through the book of Revelation.

Minor Prophets Series—Haggai, Zechariah and Malachi

We are finishing up our Minor Prophets series this evening—particularly the books of Haggai, Zechariah and Malachi—the final portion of the Minor Prophets.

The first grouping of prophets who wrote the Minor Prophets all wrote in the same general time period. They wrote at a time prior to Israel's original captivity. Hosea, Joel, Amos, Obadiah, Jonah and Micah—all of those—wrote within the same scope of years. They wrote at a time prior to the captivity of Northern Israel. Those, together with the prophet Isaiah, all prophesied at the same general time period. There was a focus there at the time prior to the captivity of Northern Israel.

Nahum prophesied a little bit later. He prophesied following the captivity of Northern Israel but prior to the rise of Babylon. Nahum prophesied the destruction and judgment that was going to come upon Assyria and the rise of Babylon.

Habakkuk and Zephaniah came down a little closer to the time of the Babylonian captivity and the circumstance prior to Nebuchadnezzar's taking the Jews to Babylon. They both prophesied in that general time period. They prophesied a little bit later than Nahum and prior to the time of the exile.

We have, beginning in 604 B.C., Nebuchadnezzar's invasion of Jerusalem and subsequent re-invasion in 596 B.C. Finally, in 587 B.C., he came in, burned the temple, destroyed the city and took the Jews into captivity to Babylon. They were there for decades.

Then we come to a situation as recorded in the book of Daniel. The city of Babylon in 539 B.C. fell to the Medes and the Persians, almost seventy years after Nebuchadnezzar's first invasion of Jerusalem (Daniel 5:30-31). This was a period of fifty years after the final destruction of Jerusalem.

Now fifty years is a long time. Fifty years ago would take us back prior to the beginning of the American involvement in World War II. A lot of things have happened since then. Some of you remember that event. But probably most sitting here would not remember that event at all. This is what we are looking at because as we come down about fifty years after the final destruction of Jerusalem, Babylon fell.

The Medes and Persians came in. A short time after, a decree was issued that allowed the return of the Jews from Babylon. They returned under Zerubbabel who was appointed governor by the Persians. Joshua was the high priest. He was the grandson of the previous high priest in Jerusalem prior to the exile. Zerubbabel and Joshua led a remnant out of Babylon back to Jerusalem, and they came back for the purpose of rebuilding the city of Jerusalem and rebuilding the temple. They had permission from the Persian governor to do that. They came back and problems arose.

You can read the account in Ezra. You will see what happened. Sanballat, the leader of the Samaritans, first came in and proposed that the Samaritans work with the Jews to rebuild the temple. Zerubbabel said, 'They don't have anything to do with this. This doesn't pertain to them; these people are idolaters. We are not going to have them involved in doing the work of God' (Ezra 4:1-3).

When Sanballat and the Samaritans could not get control of the situation by sort of "worming" their way on the inside, they then hired counselors and went before Artaxerxes (vv. 5-7). "Counselors" is equivalent of our word "lawyers." They hired individuals proficient in the law of the Medes and the Persians who were capable of representing them at the court of the king. They came before the Persian king with all sorts of accusations. It details those accusations in Ezra 4.

You might want to read it because it shows how you can make something that is harmless sound bad. 'You know, those Jews are building up the walls of that rebellious city and they are building up the foundations of it' (v. 12). Boy, this sounds bad. That was what they came back for—that shouldn't have been any mystery. They were given permission to come back and rebuild the city. How are you going to rebuild the city if you don't rebuild the foundation? They said, 'They are rebuilding the walls and building up the foundations of that rebellious city.'—A little bit of innuendo and accusation to make that sound bad.

They went on to say, 'The only reason we are writing this to you, king, is we really are concerned that you won't get your full payment of taxes (v. 13). We figure these people are going to rebuild the city and quit paying their taxes. You won't be getting all the money that's due you. And since we are such loyal, patriotic citizens, we do not want to see a terrible thing like that happen.' Now, don't you know that was really their motive! Isn't it something how people can have all these accusations and impute motives? How did they know that the Jews were going to quit paying taxes when they rebuilt the wall? They didn't know that. It was an accusation.

So, they got an order by the court of the Persian king that ordered work on the city and the temple to cease and desist. He sent down a squad of soldiers and posted the notice that until further notice from the Persians, there wasn't to be any further work (vv. 23-24). They wanted things stopped. This set the stage for the book of Haggai and Zechariah.

Haggai, Zechariah and Malachi are called post-exilic prophets. That is a fancy way of saying that they wrote their books after the Jews returned from exile to Babylon. They are the last three books of prophecy written for the Old Testament.

I want to read something that I think is a rather remarkable admission. I am reading this from the Sonseno Commentary—their introduction to the book of Haggai. It is a Jewish commentary. It represents the traditional Jewish understanding of the books of the Old Testament.

“Both Haggai and Zechariah are mentioned in Ezra 5 and 6 as the prime movers in the restoration of the temple. According to Talmudic tradition [the Talmud is a record of Jewish thought], Haggai, Zechariah and Malachi were the founders of the great synagogue. Haggai is quoted in the Talmud in various places. These three [Haggai, Zechariah and Malachi] were the last of the prophets. The Talmud declares that with the death of Haggai, Zechariah and Malachi, the Holy Spirit departed from Israel.”

I think that is a rather remarkable admission. And the truth is it did not reappear again in terms of any written record of God's work until the time of John the Baptist. There was not a direct succession of prophets after that. The Jews themselves recognized in their tradition, after these men died, that was the end of it. That's why there weren't any other books accepted into the canon because they recognized that God simply didn't any longer worked through them the way He had. There wasn't any longer a succession of prophets. Even though there were many other books written, there weren't any books after Malachi that was accepted into the canon because even the rabbis understood that the Holy Spirit had departed from Israel and the canon was sealed up.

God raised up John the Baptist in the spirit and power of Elijah after an interim of about four hundred years—the time between the testaments. I think it is an interesting statement. It's a remarkable admission that they would acknowledge. But, nevertheless, they do.

This evening we are taking note of Haggai, Zechariah and Malachi. They wrote in the context of the work on the temple having been shut down for over fifty years. When the Persian soldiers came in and served the injunction from the Persian king, that enjoined work on the temple and the city work stopped. People got sidetracked on various other things. They began to get absorbed in building up their own homes and rebuilding their own businesses. Here were people who had left Babylon and had come back to Judea because their heart was in doing the work of God. They got there and trials, obstacles and problems arose. They became discouraged and got sidetracked. They lost the original commitment that they had.

We pick up the story in Haggai.

Haggai 1:1, “In the second year of King Darius, in the sixth month, on the first day of the month, the word of the Lord came by Haggai the prophet to Zerubbabel the son of Shealtiel, governor of Judah, and to Joshua the son of Jehozadak, the high priest...” God raised up Haggai, which we would date approximately 520 B.C. God's word came by Haggai to Zerubbabel and Joshua, the civil and religious leaders of the Jews.

Verse 2, “Thus speaks the Lord of hosts, saying: “This people says, ‘The time has not come, the time that the Lord's house should be built.’”” People had excuses as to why it wasn't time to rebuild the temple. They had gotten sidetracked and had just never gotten around to really getting back to it.

Verses 3-6, “Then the word of the Lord came by Haggai the prophet, saying, ‘Is it time for you yourselves to dwell in your paneled houses, and this temple to lie in ruins?’ Now therefore, thus says the Lord of hosts: ‘Consider your ways! You have sown much, and bring in little; you eat, but do not have enough; you drink, but you are not filled with drink; you clothe yourselves, but no one is warm; and he who earns wages, earns wages to put into a bag with holes.’”

Verses 8-10, “Go up to the mountain and bring wood and build the temple, that I may take pleasure in it and be glorified,’ says the Lord. ‘You looked for much, but indeed it came to little; and when you brought it home, I blew it away. Why?’ says the Lord of hosts. ‘Because of My house that is in ruins, while every one of you runs to his own house. Therefore the heavens above you withhold the dew, and the earth withholds its fruit.”

The point was the people had their priorities wrong. They were planning on getting around and returning to the work of God, but they were going to do it when it was convenient. They said, ‘Well, you know, we are going to get back to doing it again, but things are “tight” right now and we can’t really afford to do God’s work. But once we get a “handle” and get on top of things, we will get back to it.’ Haggai said ‘You have it backwards. You know, the harder you struggle to get ahead, the further behind you’ve gotten.’

It gives a pretty good description of inflation. It described them as earning money to be put in bags with holes in it (v. 6). Have you ever felt like you were putting your money in a bag and it was going through holes in the bottom? It’s like pouring water through a sieve—it’s just rolls out. They kept thinking, ‘When I get enough collected in here, I’ll get back to doing what I need to do.’ Well, here is what Haggai told them. He said, ‘You are never going to get ahead this way.’

From Genesis to Revelation, one of the most important principles that always comes out of the Bible is nobody ever really gets ahead by putting God last. It’s a very basic principle; you simply don’t get ahead by putting God last. The Jews, here, needed to understand that principle.

There’s much in the book of Haggai that relates to the work of God. The work of God in the days of Haggai and Zechariah had to do with rebuilding a literal temple—the second temple. It was called Zerubbabel’s temple. It was the temple to which Jesus Christ came when He came to earth. There are many principles that apply very directly to the work of God. There are principles that can be derived as a message for us. Haggai’s message is not only for us at this point in time right now, but a message for God’s people through the centuries in terms of what should be our priorities and in terms of finishing the job God has set before us.

This was a book that many of us (Mr. Herbert Armstrong included) gave very special note to back during the period of 1979, ’80, ’81 and even back during the 70s prior to that. It seemed that there were very many parallels that we encountered in terms of some of the things that are mentioned.

Haggai 2:1, he continues, “In the seventh month, on the twenty-first day of the month, the word of the Lord came by Haggai the prophet....” —On the last day of the Feast of Tabernacles.

Verses 2-3, “Speak now to Zerubbabel the son of Shealtiel, governor of Judah, and to Joshua the son of Jehozakak, the high priest, and to the remnant of the people, saying: “Who is left among you who saw this temple in its former glory? And how do you see it now? In comparison with it, is this not in your eyes as nothing?”” The second temple was not nearly as magnificent and impressive as the temple that Solomon built.

God goes on to say in vv. 6-9, “For thus says the Lord of hosts: “Once more (it is a little while) I will shake heaven and earth, the sea and dry land; and I will shake all nations, and they shall come to the Desire of All Nations [a reference to Jesus Christ], and I will fill this temple with glory,” says the Lord of hosts. “The silver is Mine, and the gold is Mine,” says the Lord of hosts. “The glory of this latter temple shall be greater than the former,” says the Lord of Hosts. “And in this place I will give peace,” says the Lord of hosts.”

People were making a comparison that the temple of Zerubbabel was not nearly as impressive as the temple of Solomon. Haggai said, ‘God’s message is the thing that is really significant—not the silver and the gold. It all belongs to God anyway. But the Desire of All Nations was going to come and the glory of the latter house was going to be greater than the former.’ In other words, Jesus Christ the Messiah was going to come during the period when the second temple was standing. He would come into the second temple, and as God in the flesh, He certainly brought with Him greater glory than all of the things with which Solomon filled the first temple.

Haggai 1:14, we find as a result of Haggai’s message, “So the Lord stirred up the spirit of Zerubbabel the son of Shealtiel, governor of Judah, and the spirit of Joshua the son of Jehozadak, the high priest, and the spirit of all the remnant of the people; and they came and worked on the house of the Lord of hosts, their God.”

God stirred up the Jews and stirred up their leadership to get back to doing the work. He stirred them up to get their priorities straight and not to wait until it was comfortable to do the work. If you wait until you get ahead, it’s convenient and you have time, you will never get around to it. It’s sort of like waiting until you have time to pray. You notice how you somehow don’t get around to it? You get up and you don’t concentrate on it at the beginning. You think, ‘Well, I’m going to wait until I really have a convenient time.’ Somehow, things get filled up and it gets hard to find that time. Or you get your check and you think, ‘Well, when I get everything else caught up and finally situated, I am going to start tithing and being diligent with God.’ If you leave God for last, you never find a way to fit Him in. The only place God will fit in is the first place. When God comes in first, He makes every thing else fit. When we leave God out, somehow, there is never enough left for God. So that’s an important principle.

The people were stirred up to return and to finish the work of God. A lesson was to be learned.

Haggai 2:11-12, “‘Thus says the Lord of hosts: ‘Now, ask the priests concerning the law, saying, ‘If one carries holy meat in the fold of his garment, and with the edge he touches bread or stew, wine or oil, or any food, will it become holy?’” Then the priests answered and said, ‘No.’”

If somebody brought in a sacrifice offering, the priests were carrying it in a garment and if somehow the edge of the garment touched something else, was holiness transmitted to what they touched?

Verses 13-14, “And Haggai said, ‘If one who is unclean because of a dead body touches any of these, will it be unclean?’ So the priests answered and said, ‘It shall be unclean.’ Then Haggai answered and said [here’s the point], ‘So is this people, and so is this nation before Me,’ says the Lord, ‘and so is every work of their hands; and what they offer there is unclean.’”

It was a matter of priorities. Could the people live their life in any old sinful way, and did the fact that they were coming into contact with the work of God (building the temple and doing God’s work) transmit holiness to them and make it okay regardless of what they were doing?

It’s sort of the premise that you can go out and live like the devil the rest of the week, warm a seat in church on Saturday and somehow be better off for it. Some people have the idea that it doesn’t matter what you do as long as you show up at church. Somehow, it’s like some of God sort of rubs off on you and it’s okay. Well, he lies, steals, fornicates, gets drunk and does this “stuff” all week, but he goes to confession every Sunday morning. He’s a good fellow. It does not work that way.

The point God was making through Haggai was that the people were not to operate under the illusion that they could live any way they wanted to live. Just because they were involved in doing God’s work of building the temple and doing something holy, that did not make up for the other “stuff” they weren’t doing. It didn’t work that way. Holiness didn’t transmit itself to everything in which it came into contact, but uncleanness did. If they came in and they were unclean, then everything they touched was unclean. So, the point is if we are going to do the work of God, we are to be clean.

It ties in with the admonition of one of the other prophets.

Isaiah 52:11, “...Be clean, you who bear the vessels of the Eternal.”

We can’t think that our involvement in doing the work makes us holy. There have been people who have operated that way in the local Church. They have sort of equated their spirituality with the fact of doing certain works of service. They were spending all the time serving and helping in this or that way and used that as though it made up for a lack of personal prayer, Bible study and personal Christianity in their own lives. Well, it doesn’t work that way. It’s not that the good of what we are doing sort of rubs off and rubs out everything else.

If we are not right and our heart’s not right, it has a contaminating effect. If we are unclean spiritually, then that has a contaminating effect on our service. When there is corruption that exists, just because it exists within the scope of God’s people, God’s Church or God’s work, it doesn’t excuse it nor can you make up for it. In fact, it has a contaminating effect. That’s the point that Haggai brought out here. If the people were really going to do God’s work and have God’s blessing, then they needed to straighten up.

Verse 14, “Then Haggai answered and said, ‘So is this people, and so is this nation before Me,’ says the Lord, ‘and so is every work of their hands; and what they offer there is unclean.’”

Our sacrifice, our service, is unclean if our attitude and our conduct is not what it ought to be. So, first, God wants us more than He wants just simply our money, our time or something we can do. God doesn’t need the things that we can do. We need God. God can take us and use us if we yield to Him first and foremost. We have that emphasis here in the book of Haggai.

As we come to the book of Zechariah, we find that he was contemporary with Haggai. In fact, according to Zechariah 1:1, his prophecy begins two months after Haggai begins his prophecy. Zechariah covers a little broader scope of things. Haggai dealt primarily with the work of God and there are, certainly, prophetic implications for the end time work of God. You can go through Haggai and notice there are a number of references that tie in clearly to a time beyond simply the rebuilding of the second temple. There are references that deal with the time of the Messiah's coming and events that are connected in that way. Haggai 2:21-22 talks about a time when God shakes the heavens and the earth and overthrows the thrones of kingdoms. So, there are, certainly, very direct prophetic implications of the message of Haggai applying to the work of God.

But while Zechariah has implications of that, it is a more general prophecy. It deals with more prophetic subjects. It is a longer book. Zechariah opens up with ten visions that are described in the first six chapters. We want to briefly note these ten visions. We will see a little bit of what they mean and will see some things that very directly tie in the book of Zechariah to the time where we are today. Zechariah was contemporary with Haggai.

The first vision that Zechariah sees is Zechariah 1:8, "I saw by night, and behold, a man riding on a red horse, and it stood among the myrtle trees in the hollow; and behind him were [three other] horses: red, sorrel, and white."

Zechariah asked the same question you and I would have asked.

Verses 9-12, "Then I said, 'My Lord, what are these?' So the angel who talked with me said to me, 'I will show you what they are.' And the man who stood among the myrtle trees answered and said, 'These are the ones whom the Lord has sent to walk to and fro throughout the earth.' So they answered the Angel of the Lord, who stood among the myrtle trees, and said, 'We have walked to and fro throughout the earth, and behold, all the earth is resting quietly.' Then the Angel of the Lord answered and said, 'O Lord of hosts, how long will You not have mercy on Jerusalem and on the cities of Judah, against which You were angry these seventy years?'"

By that time, it had been a period of almost seventy years since destruction had come there. We have this vision of these four individuals.

Hold your place and go back to Revelation 7. You will find four horsemen are mentioned back there.

Revelation 7:1-2, "After these things I saw four angels standing at the four corners of the earth, holding the four winds of the earth, that the winds should not blow on the earth, on the sea, or on any tree. Then I saw another angel ascending from the east having the seal of the living God. And he cried with a loud voice to the four angels to whom it was granted to harm the earth and the sea." These four angelic beings that are described here tie in with Zechariah.

We find the first vision Zechariah had, in chapter 1. When we go to Zechariah 6, he ends up with pretty much the same thing.

Zechariah 6:1-3, "Then I turned and raised my eyes and looked, and behold, four chariots were coming from between two mountains, and the mountains were mountains of bronze. With the first chariot were red horses, with the second chariot black horses, with the third chariot white horses, and with the fourth chariot dappled [grizzle or speckled] horses—strong steeds."

Verse 5, "And the angel answered and said to me, 'These are four spirits of heaven, who go out from their station before the Lord of all the earth.'"

It talks about the various directions.

Verse 6, "The one with the black horses is going to the north country, the white are going after them, and the dappled are going toward the south country." We have described here four angelic creatures, four angelic beings, which are sent out into the four quarters of the earth, so to speak. They go forth from God's throne and go back and report to Him.

Zechariah's set of ten visions opens with something that is related to that, and closes with something that is related to that. We see a reference back in Revelation 7:1 to these four angels standing on the four quarters of the earth. Zechariah opens up with a vision. There is quite a bit of correlation between some of Zechariah and some of Revelation. We will go into greater detail in some of that in a later Bible study when we cover the book of Revelation.

The question comes up as to how much longer God's punishment upon Judah will last.

Zechariah 1:17, the answer is given, "...The Lord will again comfort Zion, and will again choose Jerusalem."

The second vision begins in v. 18, "Then I raised my eyes and looked, and there were four horns." Horns generally symbolize kings or kingdoms. Zechariah wondered what these were.

Verse 19, "And I said to the angel who talked with me, 'What are these?' So he answered me, 'These are the horns that have scattered Judah, Israel and Jerusalem.'" These specific four are not cataloged as to what they were, but the Jews have traditionally reckoned them as the four kingdoms that destroyed and scattered Israel and Judah: Assyrians, Babylonians, Egyptians and Syrians. Those were the empires or kingdoms that warred against and scattered either Israel or Judah.

The third vision is in vv. 20-21, "Then the Lord showed me four craftsmen [KJV, "carpenters"]. And I said, 'What are these coming to do?' So he said, 'These are the horns that scattered Judah, so that no one could lift up his head; but the craftsmen are coming to terrify them, to cast out the horns of the nations that lifted up their horn against the land of Judah to scatter it.'"

These represent those whom God used to restore Judah. There are implications of end-time fulfillment, some of which may not be entirely clear to us because we are not at that particular point. The Jews have traditionally applied the four horns to the four kingdoms that made war against Israel and Judah. And they have often tied in the four carpenters with the Maccabees who led the Macadaean revolt and restored independence by driving out the Syrians who were the successors of the other kingdoms that had warred against Judah. That may have historical application, but I am not persuaded that's the only application. There is perhaps some end-time fulfillment on it. But there is a certain amount of historical correlation of kingdoms that scattered their power and individuals that God used to bring about a restoration.

The fourth vision begins in Zechariah 2:1-2, "Then I raised my eyes and looked, and behold a man with a measuring line in his hand. So I said, 'Where are you going?' And he said to me, 'To measure Jerusalem, to see what is its width and what is its length.'"

You can compare that with Revelation 11 and you will see that there is a distinct connection.

Revelation 11:1, "Then I was given a reed like a measuring rod. And the angel stood, saying, 'Rise and measure the temple of God, the altar, and those who worship there.'"

Then it discusses the two witnesses.

Verses 3-4, "And I will give power to my two witnesses, and they will prophesy one thousand two hundred and sixty days, clothed in sackcloth. These are the two olive trees and the two lamp stands standing before the God of the earth."

Zechariah 2:2, "So I said, 'Where are you going?' And he said to me, 'To measure Jerusalem, to see what is its width and what is its length.'"

You can also compare that with Ezekiel 9 where God describes setting a mark as he passed through the city.

Ezekiel 9:4, "...Go through the midst of the city, through the midst of Jerusalem, and put a mark on the foreheads of the men who sigh and cry over all the abominations that are done within it."

Zechariah 2:4-5, "...Run, speak to this young man, saying: 'Jerusalem shall be inhabited as towns without walls, because of the multitude of men and livestock in it. For I,' says the Lord, 'will be a wall of fire all around her, and I will be the glory in her midst.'"

Part of the message here is descriptive of the Millennium.

Verse 8, "For thus says the Lord of hosts: 'He sent Me after glory, to the nations which plunder you; for he who touches you touches the apple of His eye.'" God says, 'I will deal with that.'

Verse 9, "For surely I will shake My hand against them, and they shall become spoil for their servants. Then you will know that the Lord of hosts has sent Me."

The fifth vision, a vision of Joshua the high priest, is in Zechariah 3:1, "Then he showed me Joshua the high priest standing before the Angel of the Lord, and Satan standing at his right hand to oppose him. Now Joshua was clothed with filthy garments, and was standing before the Angel."

He is described as being cleaned up.

Verses 4-5, "Then He answered and spoke to those who stood before Him, saying, 'Take away the filthy garments from him.' And to him he said, 'See, I have removed your iniquity from you, and I will clothe you with rich robes.' And I said, 'Let them put a clean turban on his head.' So they put a clean turban on his head, and they put the clothes on him. And the Angel of the Lord stood by."

He was representative of the priesthood. He was the religious leader and high priest of the Jews that had been re-gathered. There is a vision concerning his being cleaned up, forgiven and made clean.

The sixth vision is given in Zechariah 4:2-3, "And he said to me, 'What do you see?' So I said, 'I am looking, and there is a lamp stand of solid gold with a bowl on top of it, and on the stand seven lamps with seven pipes to the seven lamps. Two olive trees are by it, one at the right of the bowl and the other at its left.'"

Verse 11, "Then I answered and said to him, 'What are these two olive trees, one at the right of the lamp stand and the other at its left?'"

Verse 14, "So he said, 'These are the two anointed ones, who stand beside the Lord of the whole earth.'"

If you tie that in with Revelation 11, you find a picture, a prophetic description which ties in with the two witnesses. Zerubbabel, the governor of Judah, together with Joshua, the high priest, represented the leadership of God's people at that time. They are used as types of the two witnesses that God will use at the end time. When you go through Zechariah 3 and 4, this is made plain. The point is God works through human instruments.

There are certainly parallels to the way in which God has worked through His servants at one time in history and the way He works through servants at other times. Many of God's servants that He has used in His work in times past, in the things that He has done and the way that God has used them, have served as a type or as a representative of something that God is going to do yet future, particularly at the time of the end.

The reference here was a message to Zerubbabel, the governor, who God had used to begin His work of rebuilding the temple. God would use him to finish the job that God had used him to start. Certainly, others came along and continued the work of God, but Zerubbabel was used to finish what he had been used to start.

That principle was a parallel that many of us focused on (and Mr. Herbert Armstrong himself focused on) back at a period in the aftermath of Mr. Herbert Armstrong's heart attack in 1977 and his subsequent restored involvement in the work in the spring of '78. Much of the 70s were in many ways very lean years. Certainly, God used him to finish up the phase of His work that He had used him to begin. That doesn't mean that one particular servant of God lasts forever, but certainly there are parallels. At that particular point in time, Mr. Armstrong said, 'I know how long I will live. I will live as long as God wants me to live and as long as the job that God wants me to do is still there.' That's the case with all of God's servants down through time. God has a particular phase of His work that various individuals may have been used by Him to do.

Here was an encouragement to Zerubbabel to go ahead and finish up the temple and to do the things that God was inspiring Haggai and Zechariah to tell him. God would use him to finish what he had been used to start—that particular phase of God's work. These two leaders of God's work at this particular point in time (the two anointed ones in Zechariah 4:14) are parallels with the two witnesses that are mentioned in Revelation 11.

The seventh vision is given in Zechariah 5:1-2, "Then I turned and raised my eyes, and saw there a flying scroll. And he said to me, 'What do you see?' So I answered, 'I see a flying scroll. Its length is twenty cubits and its width ten cubits.'"

Here is a scroll floating in the air. Its length is about thirty feet and width about fifteen feet.

Verse 3, "Then he said to me, 'This is the curse that goes out over the face of the whole earth: "Every thief shall be expelled," according to what is on this side of the scroll; and "every perjurer shall be expelled," according to what is on that side of it.'"

So, it is a curse that goes out. The scroll is symbolic of containing this curse that God sends on those who have dealt treacherously with lying and stealing. It has to do with an end-time curse that is going to come about. Actually, it is the end-time curse that is going to come upon Babylon the Great.

Verses 4-5, "'I will send out the curse,' says the Lord of hosts; 'It shall enter the house of the thief and the house of the one who swears falsely by My name. It shall remain in the midst of his house and consume it, with its timber and stones.' Then the angel who talked with me came out and said to me, 'Lift your eyes now, and see what this is that goes forth.'"

The eighth vision is in v. 6, "So I asked, 'What is it?' And he said, 'It is a basket that is going forth.' He also said, 'This is their resemblance throughout the earth.'" This was the symbol of the sinners mentioned above (v. 3) who had been involved in lying and stealing. It was something that had economic implications because the symbol is a vessel, an ephah-like vessel, which is a large vessel that would hold about eight gallons. This big vessel that was used to hold or collect grain was a symbol of international commerce. It was a vessel by which grain was traded back and forth. We are told here that there's a curse that goes forth for those involved in lying and stealing.

We are told in the next vision this great eight-gallon measure of grain that was symbolic of international commerce and trade was symbolic of the sinners mentioned above (v. 3). In other words, those who were involved in lying and stealing and, "... 'This is their resemblance throughout the earth'" (v. 6).

In Amos 8:5, we read of those who make the ephah small and the shekel great—in other words, economic manipulation, selling less and less for more and more.

We are dealing, right now, with some of the implications of that. We are on the brink of seeing some major financial scandals (that are worldwide in their implications) of banks and trading companies and all sorts of things. I don't think it is going to unravel in terms of people really realizing where the “buck stops” until it gets to the end.

You read in Revelation 18 of Babylon the Great, the great end-time economic combination. Babylon is an economic combine as well as a religious, military and political combine. The economic implications are emphasized in Revelation 18. All the merchants weep and lament (Revelation 18:11) because of this tremendous commercial endeavor. Even the mark of the beast (Revelation 13:16-17; 14:11) has economic implications and is tied in with participating in economic activity.

So, here is an indictment of those who have manipulated through lying, stealing and manipulating the world’s economy. That ties in with Babylon the Great from the economic standpoint, and there is a curse that is going to come forth. The curse is the destruction of Babylon the Great. If you read this and then read Revelation 18, it sort of ties in.

Revelation 18:16-18, “and saying, “Alas, alas, that great city that was clothed in fine linen, purple, and scarlet, and adorned with gold and precious stones and pearls! For in one hour such great riches came to nothing.” And every shipmaster, all who travel by ship, sailors, and as many as trade on the sea, stood at a distance and cried out when they saw the smoke of her burning, saying, “What is like this great city?”” Everything has gone up in smoke.

So, here is the curse that goes forth, and it ties in with this symbol of economic activity, which we are told in Zechariah 5:6-7, “...‘This is the resemblance [of their iniquity] throughout all the earth: here is a lead disc lifted up, and this is a woman sitting inside the basket.’” They had this vessel that was the symbol of economic activity (this eighth vision), but when he lifted up the weight, instead of it being filled with grain, what’s inside? –A woman. And the woman is the personification of lawlessness (wickedness).

Verse 8, “then he said, ‘This is Wickedness!’ And he thrust her down into the basket, and threw the lead cover over its mouth.”

The ninth vision in v. 9 is the woman being transported back—removed from Palestine to Shinar—to the bottomless pit. The woman was lifted up in this vessel and transported.

Verses 10-11, “...‘Where are they carrying the basket?’ And he said to me, ‘To build a house for it in the land of Shinar [Babylon]; when it is ready, the basket [ephah, the symbol of such sinners and their guilt] will be set there on its base.’” The woman who’s actually inside (at the heart and core) you read about in Revelation 17.

Revelation 17:5, “...MYSTERY BABYLON THE GREAT, THE MOTHER OF HARLOTS AND OF THE ABOMINATIONS OF THE EARTH.”

In Revelation 18, you read about some of the same things, but you read it from a different slant. The emphasis in Revelation 18 is on the economic aspect. Revelation 17 deals more with the religious and, to an extent, military and political aspects. But you see it is one big new world order (to coin a phrase). The phrase is not original on my part, but one that is being handed about. I think some are going to find that this new world order is not exactly what they had in mind. Zechariah described it a long time ago.

Finally, the tenth vision is in Zechariah 6:1, “Then I turned and raised my eyes and looked, and behold, four chariots were coming from between two mountains, and the mountains were mountains of bronze.” This is a tie-in with the first vision. It sort of ends up where we started.

Verses 2-5, “With the first chariot were red horses, with the second chariot black horses, with the third chariot white horses, and with the fourth chariot dappled horses—strong steeds. Then I answered and said to the angel who talked with me, ‘What are these, my lord?’ And the angel answered and said to me, ‘These are four spirits of heaven, who go out from their station before the Lord of all the earth.’” It describes that.

Verse 12-13, “Then speak to him, saying, “Thus says the Lord of hosts, saying: ‘Behold, the Man [Christ] whose name is the BRANCH! [In my Bible that’s all capitalized and probably is in yours, too.] From His place He shall branch out, and He shall build the temple of the Lord. Yes, He shall build the temple of the Lord. He shall bear the glory, and shall sit and rule on His throne; so He shall be a priest on His throne, and the counsel of peace shall be between them both.’”” He’s talking about the Messiah, Jesus Christ.

Coming down a little further, Zechariah 8 describes a little bit of insight into Jerusalem during the Millennium.

Zechariah 8:3-6, “Thus says the Lord: “I will return to Zion, and dwell in the midst of Jerusalem. Jerusalem shall be called the City of Truth, The Mountain of the Lord of hosts, the Holy Mountain.” Thus says the Lord of hosts, “Old men and old women shall again sit in the streets of Jerusalem, each one with his staff in his hand because of great age. The streets of the city shall be full of boys and girls playing in its streets.” Thus says the Lord of hosts: “If it is marvelous in the eyes of the remnant of this people in these days, will it also be marvelous in My eyes?” says the Lord of hosts.”

God says that time is going to come, the time of restoration (Acts 3:21).

Jerusalem is not yet a place that’s safe for little children to be out playing and for old men and women to be able to walk down the street. You have terrorism going on. Certainly, this isn’t descriptive of any city I know. Now, you’d better be off the streets or you would get run over, knocked in the head, mugged or something.

It’s descriptive of what it’s going to be like. Streets are going to be a safe place. Children are going to be able to play; elderly people will be able to walk not having to fear being molested, attacked, robbed or in any way dealt with in that way.

In vv. 7-8, God talks about re-gathering His people.

Verse 13, “And it shall come to pass that just as you were a curse among the nations, O house of Judah and house of Israel [there is a distinction], so I will save you, and you shall be a blessing. Do not fear, let your hands be strong.”

Verse 23, “Thus says the Lord of hosts: “In those days ten men from every language of the nations shall grasp the sleeve of a Jewish man, saying, ‘Let us go with you, for we have heard that God is with you.’”” People are going to want to learn God’s truth. They are not going to be prejudiced against the Jews or anybody else at that time. In fact, they are going to want to learn God’s ways and will be seeking out God’s people.

Zechariah 9:9, “Rejoice greatly, O daughter of Zion! Shout, O daughter of Jerusalem! Behold, your King is coming to you: He is just and having salvation, lowly and riding on a donkey, a colt, the foal of a donkey.” We find the fulfillment of this prophecy back in the New Testament. Matthew 21:4-11 is Christ’s triumphal entry into Jerusalem.

It talks about God saving His people.

Zechariah 10:3, “My anger is kindled against the shepherds, and I will punish the goatherds. For the Lord of hosts will visit His flock, the house of Judah, and will make them as His royal horse in the battle.”

Verse 6, “I will strengthen the house of Judah, and I will save the house of Joseph. I will bring them back, because I have mercy on them. They shall be as though I had not cast them aside; for I am the Lord their God, and I will hear them.”

Again, there is the distinction between Israel and Judah.

Verses 9-10, “I will sow them among the peoples, and they shall remember Me in far countries; they shall live, together with their children, and they shall return. I will also bring them back from the land of Egypt, and gather them from Assyria. I will bring them into the land of Gilead and Lebanon, until no more room is found for them.”

Zechariah 11:7 (a description of two staves that are called Beauty and Bands), “So I fed the flock for slaughter, in particular the poor of the flock. I took for myself two staves: the one I called Beauty, and the other I called Bonds [KJV, “Bands”]; and I fed the flock.”

These are symbolic references with what God is going to do. The reference has to do with the covenant that God has made. The staff that is called “Bands” (or Union) had to do with covenants that God had made and God’s working with His people. We find the reference having to do with shepherds. “...I fed my flock for slaughter, in particular the poor of the flock. I took for myself two staves: the one called Beauty, and the other called Bonds [or Bands], and I fed the flock.”

Verses 10-13, “And I took my staff, Beauty, and cut it in two, that I might break the covenant which I had made with all the peoples. So it was broken on that day. Thus the poor of the flock, who were watching me, knew that it was the word of the Lord. Then I said to them, ‘If it is agreeable to you, give me my wages; and if not, refrain.’ So they weighed out for my wages thirty pieces of silver. And the Lord said to me, ‘Throw it to the potter’—that princely price they set on me. So I took the thirty pieces of silver and threw them into the house of the Lord for the potter.”

This first staff has to do with Jesus Christ and His betrayal by Judas Iscariot. The second one has to do with the national covenant that God made with Israel and Judah and breaking the band of brotherhood between Judah and Israel (v. 14). One has to do with the spiritual aspect and the other with the physical aspect of God’s covenant with His people. It has to do with the sacrifice of the Messiah, His betrayal and then also the captivity of Israel and Judah.

As we come down into chapter 12, we get into some things that really tie in with the headlines in today’s newspapers.

Zechariah 12:2-3, “Behold, I will make Jerusalem a cup of drunkenness [KJV, “trembling”], to all the surrounding peoples,” when they lay siege against Judah and Jerusalem. And it shall happen in that day that I will make Jerusalem a very heavy [KJV, “burdensome”] stone for all peoples; all who would heave will surely be cut in pieces, though all nations of the earth are gathered against it.”

He talks about Jerusalem becoming a cup of trembling (or a cup of poison) and a burdensome stone for all people. Everybody who gets tangled up with it is going to get cut. This has been the case since God has been re-gathering Judah to Jerusalem.

In v. 5, he talks about the governors of Judah. That’s the ones who have been gathered to Jerusalem.

What are we having right now? The focus of things in the Middle East has to do with Jerusalem. They are talking about getting together and negotiating in the Middle East. Well, the real issue and the issue that is not going to be resolved is the issue of Jerusalem. The Jews told the Arabs, ‘We will sit down and talk with you. We will meet, but nobody in your delegation can have been born in Jerusalem.’ You know why they said that? They didn’t want anybody there that could even begin to remotely say, ‘We have a claim; I’m from there. I was born there.’ The Jews say, ‘We are not even going to talk to any Arabs that were born in Jerusalem. Jerusalem is ours and there is nothing to even negotiate about. We will discuss with you some of these other things.’

That is not going to be satisfactory. But anybody who has followed the situation knows that is one issue that is simply not negotiable.

Verse 6, “‘In that day I will make the governors of Judah like a fire-pan in the woodpile, and like a fiery torch in the sheaves; they shall devour all the surrounding peoples on the right hand and on the left, but Jerusalem shall be inhabited again in her own place—Jerusalem.’” That’s pretty descriptive of what’s been going on over there since 1948.

KJV, “...the governors of Judah have been like a hearth of fire among the wood, like a torch of fire among sheaves of stubble.” Have you ever seen a stubble field burn? It goes pretty fast. That’s the way most of those wars have been over there. The governors of Judah have been like somebody set fire to the stubble. Poof, it’s gone.

That’s very descriptive of the six-day war back in 1967 that saw the recapture of Jerusalem—after almost nineteen hundred years of Jewish exile from Jerusalem, their recapture of the old city. Anybody who saw on television the filmed reports of the first Jewish soldiers to pour into the old city and to reach the wailing wall knows there isn’t any way in the world they will ever, ever, ever voluntarily turn loose of it. For nineteen hundred years, they would close every Passover service with the prayer, “next year in Jerusalem.” They didn’t do that for all those centuries simply to turn around and give it away. God talked about the fact that Judah was going to be re-gathered there in Jerusalem.

Zechariah 12 is descriptive of the end time. The events that have occurred over there had to occur because there was a time period when there weren’t Jews in Jerusalem. The Jews didn’t control Jerusalem. Zechariah 12 describes the time when they do.

He talks about when Christ returns, how he will save the tents of Judah first (v. 7) and how He will deal with the nations that come against Jerusalem (v. 9).

Zechariah 12:10, “‘And I will pour on the house of David and on the inhabitants of Jerusalem the Spirit of grace and supplication; then they will look on Me whom they have pierced; they will mourn for Him as one mourns for his only son, and grieve for Him as one grieves for a firstborn.’” There will be a great mourning in Jerusalem when Jesus Christ returns to intervene and save.

Of course, at that time, all nations will have been gathered to Jerusalem. He will destroy the armies there in the Valley of Jehoshaphat and save the people. At that point, the scales are going to fall from their eyes.

He says, ‘I am going to pour upon them the Spirit of grace and supplication.’ Then He is going to begin to deal with them spiritually, and they are going to come to repentance. They are going to look upon Him whom they have pierced—the One for whom centuries earlier they yelled, ‘Crucify Him, crucify Him, His blood be upon us and upon our children forever’ (Mark 15:13-14; Matthew 27:25). They are then going to mourn and grieve and deeply repent. They are going to realize that their Messiah had come centuries earlier only to be rejected and crucified. But this time they are going to understand! Then God is going to begin to deal with them.

Zechariah 13:1 talks about cleaning away the sin and the uncleanness.

Zechariah 13:4, “‘And it shall be in that day that every prophet will be ashamed of his vision when he prophesies; they will not wear a robe of coarse hair to deceive.’”

Verse 5 is a little bit funny. It talks about the false prophets and how they are going to be ashamed. ““But he will say, ‘I am no prophet, I am a farmer; for a man taught me to keep cattle from my youth.’”” In that time, nobody is going to want to claim or admit they used to be a priest or a preacher—to be on television. No, you are not going to get them to admit it. ‘No, I’m a farmer. That’s all I am. I am not a prophet. I’m nothing but a farmer.’ They are not going to want to admit to the fact that they deceived people for years. They will be doing something constructive for a change.

Zechariah 14:1-2, “Behold, the day of the Lord is coming, and your spoil will be divided in your midst. For I will gather all the nations to battle against Jerusalem; the city shall be taken, the houses rifled, and the women ravished. Half of the city shall go into captivity, but the remnant of the people shall not be cut off from the city.” The issue involves half the city, the old city. That’s what they are fighting about. There is going to be a multinational force that will ultimately come against Jerusalem.

But when that occurs, vv. 3-5, “Then the Lord will go forth and fight against those nations, as He fights in the day of battle. And in that day His feet will stand on the Mount of Olives, which faces Jerusalem on the east. And the Mount of Olives shall be split in two, from east to west, making a very large valley; half of the mountain shall move toward the north and half of it toward the south. Then you shall flee through My mountain valley, for the mountain valley shall reach to Azal. Yes, you shall flee as you fled from the earthquake in the days of Uzziah king of Judah. Thus the Lord my God will come, and all the saints with You.”

Verses 8-9, “And in that day it shall be that living waters shall flow from Jerusalem, half of them toward the eastern sea and half of them toward the western sea; in both summer and winter it shall occur. And the Lord shall be King over all the earth. In that day it shall be—‘The Lord is one,’ and His name one.”

Verse 11, “The people shall dwell in it; and no longer shall there be utter destruction, but Jerusalem shall be safely inhabited.” That’s certainly not true now, but it will be true in the Millennium.

Verse 16, “And it shall come to pass that everyone who is left of all the nations which came against Jerusalem shall go up from year to year to worship the King, the Lord of hosts, and to keep the Feast of Tabernacles.” If anybody doesn’t want to keep the Feast, God’s going to convince them, and they are going to want to do it. So, there is description that certainly shows the Feast will be kept in the Millennium. God’s festivals are going to be observed. The Feast of Tabernacles is clearly a time that looks forward to the time when Christ is going to rule over all the earth.

Malachi was written a little later than Haggai and Zechariah. He was a much younger contemporary of Haggai and Zechariah. He would have been contemporary with Ezra and Nehemiah. Haggai and Zechariah were evidently young men as prophets. Malachi came along perhaps forty to fifty years after Haggai and Zechariah had begun their prophecy. Tradition retains record that they were contemporary, so we would conclude from that they must have been fairly young at the time.

It’s just the same as we have those who were around and in various positions in World War II. Now we are at a later point and some of those people are still in prominent positions—President Bush was in the military service during World War II. So, it is not impossible to have an overlap of forty to fifty years.

Malachi comes along contemporary with Ezra and Nehemiah. There was sort of a lull after the completion of the temple. We really don’t read anything else of what transpired. We pick up the story later in the days of Nehemiah and Ezra. You will find that if you read through the books of Ezra and Nehemiah and notice the chronology carefully.

When we pick up the story again, we find that attraction to the world around had sort of sapped the spiritual strength and fervor of the people of God.

Ezra and Nehemiah were together with Malachi. Nehemiah was the governor; Ezra was the priest. Malachi was the prophet. God raised them up to restore His work. Malachi represents sort of a concluding or a summing up in terms of the prophets. The work that God did, you can tie in a great deal of it to sort of the aftermath of some of the reforms of Ezra and Nehemiah. There are, certainly, things that we can glean from it.

“Malachi” means “my messenger.” It has to do with the return of Jesus Christ and preparing the way for that.

The book of Malachi opens up in chapter 1 by focusing in on the sovereignty of God. God chooses. He elects and makes choices. He indicts the priesthood for showing disrespect for God by treating God’s service casually and carelessly, by not being strict in their obedience to God and by having a casual, careless attitude that shows a lack of respect for God—an attitude of people who are not zealous for God and for not doing things exactly the way God says.

Malachi 2:1-2, “And now, O priests, this commandment is for you. If you will not hear, and if you will not take it to heart, to give glory to My name,’ says the Lord of hosts, ‘I will send a curse upon you, and I will curse your blessings. Yes, I have cursed them already, because you do not take it to heart.’”

He describes the responsibility of the priesthood. Verses 6-7, “The law of truth was in his mouth, and injustice was not found on his lips. He walked with Me in peace and equity, and turned many away from iniquity. For the lips of a priest should keep knowledge, and people should seek the law from his mouth; for he is the messenger of the Lord of hosts.” That’s the job of God’s ministry, and it was the job of the priesthood anciently. They should be a source of the knowledge of God’s way. They should teach the people God’s law and should be God’s messenger.

The priesthood of Judah was indicted.

Verses 8-9, “But you have departed out of the way and caused many to stumble at the law. You have corrupted the covenant of Levi,’ says the Lord of hosts. ‘Therefore I also have made you contemptible and base before all the people, because you have not kept My ways but have shown partiality in the law.’” They have dealt treacherously, have compromised and have not been as they ought.

Verse 11, “Judah has dealt treacherously, and an abomination has been committed in Israel and in Jerusalem, for Judah has profaned the Lord’s holy institution which He loves: He has married the daughter of a foreign god.” God is going to deal with that.

Verse 14, “Yet you say, ‘For what reason?’ Because the Lord has been witness between you and the wife of your youth, with whom you have dealt treacherously; yet she is your companion and your wife by covenant.”

Verse 16, “For the Lord God of Israel says that He hates divorce....” There had developed sort of a compromising, carnal attitude of trying to elevate self-will far above God’s will.

Verse 17, “You have wearied the Lord with your words; yet you say, ‘In what way have we wearied Him?’ In that you say, ‘Everyone who does evil is good in the sight of the Lord, and He delights in them,’ or, ‘Where is the God of justice?’” ‘You have made excuses for those who do evil. You feel like God is way off somewhere and you don’t have to worry about Him.’

Malachi 3:1, “Behold, I send My messenger [John the Baptist], and he will prepare the way before Me. And the Lord, whom you seek, will suddenly come to His temple, even the Messenger of the covenant, in whom you delight. Behold, He is coming,’ says the Lord of hosts.” John the Baptist came as a messenger.

You can go to Mark 1:1-14 and Luke 1:13-17. Mark 1:3, “...‘Prepare the way of the Lord, make His path straight.’”

Christ came as the messenger of the covenant. He came as the messenger of the covenant and He is going to come back to complete the New Covenant and to refine, purge (Malachi 3:2-3) and to come to judgment.

Malachi 3:5, “And I will come near you for judgment; I will be a swift witness against sorcerers, against adulterers, against perjurers, against those who exploit wage earners and widows and the fatherless, and against those who turn away an alien—because they do not fear Me,’ says the Lord of hosts.”

The term “sorcerers” is used two or three other places. There are several different words that are used in the Hebrew language referring to sorcerers and magicians. This particular word is not really a word that means “magician” in that sense. It comes from a root word in the Hebrew that means, literally, “to shred,” as in one who shreds drugs into a potion. The quote from the Hebrew Lexicon on this is sort of interesting. If you are looking in terms of “Christ coming back to judgment and to be a swift witness,” and to deal with the problems of society, who’s He coming back to deal with? Is the worse thing going on some little tiny obscure thing where somebody is practicing and muttering incantations somewhere?

One of the most pervasive problems that exist on the face of the earth right now is the problem with drugs—the international drug trade and all of the tragedy that occurs. Well, He says (in modern parlance), ‘I am going near you to judgment and I am going to be a swift witness against the drug dealers.’ That’s what this term means. And He’ll be swift against the adulterers. God says, ‘I am going to deal with those who have been involved with the drug trade. I am going to deal with immorality and its consequences. I will deal against false swearers and against those who have, through various means, taken advantage of and oppressed through manipulation and all sorts of legal subterfuge, those who are least able to defend themselves—the wage earners, the widows and the fatherless.’

Who does some of the economic manipulation (the major bank failures, etc.) hurt the most? The wage earner, people on fixed incomes and the elderly are the ones hurting.

The point that God is making is that Christ comes back to judgment, and there are going to be some people who are going to have to give some answers. They are going to be called into account. Do you think that with all of the drug trade, pornography, the economic manipulation and mistreatment and taking advantage of people, there's not going to be any calling into account for that? You better believe it! There's going to be a reordering of society and there are going to be some things that are going to have to be dealt with. When you go through and understand what's being indicted here, it has to do with the way God views the major areas of problems in the end time and the major segments of society that are going to have to be confronted—everything from all of these various things.

Verse 6, “For I am the Lord, I do not change; therefore you are not consumed, O sons of Jacob.” God says, ‘I am consistent. That’s why you’re still here.’

Verse 8, “Will a man rob God? Yet you have robbed Me! But you say, “In what way have we robbed You?” In tithes and offerings.” It discusses the subject of tithing. The place to start is to put God first and God will take care of things.

He indicts an attitude about those who may go through the motions of serving God, but they do it in a bad attitude and are envious of what the world gets by with.

Verses 14-15, “You have said, “It is vain to serve God; what profit is it that we have kept His ordinance, and that we have walked as mourners before the Lord of hosts? So now we call the proud blessed, for those who do wickedness are raised up; Yes, those who tempt God go free.””

People may go through the motions of serving God, but their attitude stinks. They sort of look enviously at what the world gets by with and say, ‘Boy, I wish I weren’t in the Church. Boy, I could really make some money. I could really do “this” or “that.”’ God says, ‘Fine, you are going to have to give an account because God takes that sort of an attitude personally.’

He says in v. 13, “Your words have been harsh against Me,’ says the Lord, ‘yet you say, “What have we spoken against You?”” Frankly, this is an attitude of people who are going to go through the tribulation.

On the other hand, v. 16 talks about a book of remembrance being written for those who feared the Eternal and meditated upon His name.

Verse 17, “‘They shall be Mine,’ says the Lord of hosts, ‘On the day that I make them My jewels. And I will spare them as a man spares his own son who serves him.’” It is clearly a distinction between those who serve God half-heartedly and in a bad attitude and those whose heart is really in it. God is going to return and discern between the righteous and the wicked (v. 18).

In Malachi 4 is proof that the hellfire of the Bible is not the hellfire of Protestantism and Catholicism. It is not an ever-burning hellfire that people are going to be tortured in forever. It is a hellfire that is going to burn up the wicked and leave them neither root nor branch (v. 1).

Malachi 4:3, “‘You shall trample the wicked, for they shall be ashes under the soles of your feet on the day that I do this,’ says the Lord of hosts.” It talks about destruction, about burning up.

Then it ends up, v. 4, “Remember the Law of Moses, My servant, which I commanded him in Horeb for all Israel, with the statutes and judgments.” The last thing the prophets tell us is to remember the law. People read their Bible straight through and the last thing they read in the Old Testament is “remember the law of Moses.” They turn the page and promptly think they are supposed to forget the Law of Moses. Makes a lot of sense, doesn’t it?

Why is it that the last thing God says is to remember the Law of Moses and all the statutes and judgments, and people then turn the page and say, ‘I’m sure glad we can forget all of that?’ Isn’t it interesting! The Old Testament ends up with the admonition “remember the Law of Moses My servant.” The New Testament opens up with, in Matthew 5, the Sermon on the Mount.

Matthew 5:17, “Do not think that I came to destroy the Law or the Prophets. I did not come to destroy, but to fulfill.” So, people immediately forget the Law of Moses and think that Christ came to destroy it. He ends up by saying “remember” and starts off by saying He didn’t come to destroy any of what went before. So people get all “balled up.” How plain does God have to get?

You and I read that and it is very simple. How many hundreds and thousands of scholars have gone through and debated the Hebrew of Malachi and the Greek of Matthew and never got the point. They didn’t keep the Sabbath. They didn’t keep the Holy Days. They didn’t do any of these things. They never got the point. So, remember the Law of Moses.

He ends up by saying in vv. 5-6, “Behold, I will send you Elijah the prophet before the coming of the great and dreadful day of the Lord. And he will turn the hearts of the fathers to the children, and the hearts of the children to their fathers, lest I come and strike the earth with a curse [with utter destruction].”

Now, clearly, John the Baptist came, as Luke 1:17 shows, in the spirit and power of Elijah to prepare the way for the first coming of Christ (Matthew 3:2). Christ is coming again, and if it was necessary that there be a forerunner to prepare the way for the first coming, certainly there is to be a forerunner to prepare the way for the second coming.

That, of course, is why God raised up Mr. Herbert Armstrong. This work of which we are a part represents a continuation of the work that God raised up through Mr. Herbert Armstrong, going back to the 1930s. He raised up this end-time work through him and used him as one who was to restore the knowledge of the true religion in Israel—just as Elijah and John the Baptist did.

So, we end up here in Haggai, Zechariah and Malachi. We end up with books that were written after the exile; books that focused in on the importance of doing the work and reviving the work that God was doing through His people.

There are many lessons and parallels that are applicable for God’s people throughout all ages, and particularly here in the end time, as we look toward the culmination and completion of the great plan that God is working out.

Next Bible study we will begin a new series on the Writings, the third division of the Old Testament.

The Writings Series—Introduction

This evening we want to get into a new series. I want to give you an introduction to a series on the Writings. The Writings is the third division of the Old Testament (the Hebrew Scriptures) as the Jews have traditionally divided them.

Jesus talked about it in the book of Luke. Notice in the very last chapter of the book of Luke. Luke 24:44-45, “Then He said to them, ‘These are the words which I spoke to you while I was still with you, that all things must be fulfilled which were written in the Law of Moses and the Prophets and the Psalms [Writings] concerning Me.’ And He opened their understanding, that they might comprehend the Scriptures.” Jesus Christ defined the Scriptures as consisting of the Law, the Prophets and the Psalms or the Law, the Prophets and the Writings.

This third division, the Writings, was sometimes termed “the Psalms” because Psalms was the first book of the section and it was the longest book of the section. From the time of Ezra and Nehemiah down till today, the Jews have always preserved what they have termed the “Tripartite Division of the Old Testament” (the Hebrew Scriptures). That simply means three sections of it—the Law, the Prophets and the Writings.

Now the Law is the most basic revelation of God. It introduces God as the Creator and reveals to us God’s instruction. The word “law” (“Torah” in the Hebrew) is broader and more inclusive than what we simply think of as “law” in English. When we say “law,” we tend to think of a list of rules that are written out: You shall do this; you shall not do that. That is the law, but that’s not all there is to law. Law can consist of more than that. Law can consist of illustrations and examples. Torah is instruction.

God sometimes instructs us by examples. You read the story of certain people—we have examples that we should not follow and we have examples that we should follow. Part of the way that God instructs us in His Word is the testimonies. They are a part of the law and so are the commandments and the statutes. The law is God’s most basic revelation.

The Prophets, in that sense, are commentary of the law. The Prophets are based on the blessings and the curses of the law. The law says you will be blessed if you obey and cursed if you disobey. These are the blessings and curses found in the law in Leviticus 26. The Prophets simply tell us what happens when you obey and what happens when you disobey.

The Law is the five books of Moses: Genesis, Exodus, Leviticus, Numbers and Deuteronomy. They are the most basic revelation of God.

The Prophets were termed the Former and the Latter Prophets. The Former Prophets were books we would normally consider historical: Joshua, Judges, Samuel and Kings. The Latter Prophets were the ones we normally think of as prophetic: the Major Prophets of Isaiah, Jeremiah and Ezekiel and then the twelve Minor Prophets that we have just finished going through in the most recent set of Bible studies. The Major and Minor Prophets were called the Latter Prophets.

Actually, the distinction between history and prophecy is an arbitrary distinction. It simply depends on where you’re standing in the course of time. God inhabits eternity (Isaiah 57:15). He doesn’t make the distinction between history and prophecy as we do. He calls those things that do not exist as though they did (Romans 4:17). He declares the end from the beginning (Isaiah 46:10). That’s a little different perspective than you and I have because we inhabit finite time (here and now). To us there is a very real distinction between history and prophecy. God does not make the same sort of distinction.

Much of what was written as prophecy that related to the first coming of Christ is not prophecy anymore; it is history. The prophecies of Christ’s first coming have been fulfilled, so in that sense, that’s history. Much of what we consider prophecy now, in a few years will be taught as history in Tomorrow’s World. The events that we are seeing shape up in Europe (that we are calling prophecy) is going to be in the history books in a few years. That will be a part of what we are teaching people as a part of history during the time period of the Millennium.

So, all of those books ultimately have a connection. They all tell the story of what happens when you obey and what happens when you disobey the law. In that sense, they form a commentary on the law. They focus in on consequences, good or bad.

The Writings, the final third division, are a little different. One thing that nearly all of the books of the Writings have in common is that they are poetic. There is a lot of poetry and poetic writing in this section. The book of Psalms dominates the section. The Writings are sort of anchored on either end by a lengthy book.

You could divide the Writings into three sections. The first section would be books of poetry and wisdom: Psalms, Proverbs and Job. The second would be the five Festival Scrolls: Song of Solomon, Ruth, Lamentations, Ecclesiastes and Esther. Each is read at a festival season. Then the third section of the Writings is what would be termed the “post-exilic” books. In other words, the ones that were written after the exile—the ones that were written after Nebuchadnezzar had taken the Jews captive. Daniel, at the end of the Old Testament, sets the stage for Revelation, which concludes the New Testament and the Bible. Then Ezra, Nehemiah and Chronicles come at the end, telling the story of the re-gathering. They sort of give the wrap-up of the Old Testament from the standpoint of the priesthood and of Jerusalem. They tell the story in a different way than what has been done earlier. It is important to understand the distinction because they focus in on the story in a totally different way than Samuel and Kings. This final section, particularly the poetic portion of the Writings, in many ways serves to amplify the law. Poetry is easier to memorize than prose because there is a rhyme, a meter. It’s easier to learn a song than it is a page of typed text. A page of typed text would be far harder to memorize than, let’s say, a song that is written out because there is a rhyme, a meter and there’s a poetic quality that makes it more easily committed to memory.

The Psalms, in that sense, were written to be committed to memory. When you commit something to memory, it is easier to meditate upon. The Psalms are written in a poetic and repetitive fashion. It’s totally different than the way that certain other sections of the Bible are written. It is written in an entirely different way. We have to understand that different portions of the Bible are written as they are for a purpose. Some things are written simply in story flow. When you read it through, you are able to get the story flow and derive information from examples and illustrations that are used.

The Psalms are written in a way that they are “food for thought.” They are things to think about. They are written in a poetic fashion, so you can more easily commit them to memory and think about them. You can meditate upon them and turn them over in your mind.

They were utilized both for the expression of the nation or the group in terms of singing praises to God or singing songs to God. The Psalms represented the national hymnbook for Israel. It was the basis of the liturgy there in the temple as far as the Levitical choir was concerned. They certainly show the importance of music in a society and in a culture because of the fact that God inspired this entire section that can be sung. It is there both to be sung in terms of public praise and songs to God, as well as being there to be read, meditated upon and thought about by the individual.

Proverbs and Job both sort of fit into that category as well. Proverbs has much teaching that is there. The poetry of Job does not come out in most of the English translations in the way that it did in the original. But it is written in a poetic way.

Many of the Festival Scrolls—Song of Solomon, Lamentations, and Ecclesiastes—were all written in a poetic fashion. Ruth and Esther were written more in narrative fashion.

And then, the final post-exilic books were written in narrative fashion. There is a focus that is there. One thing is that virtually every book in the Writings has a connection with royalty. Psalms primarily was written by King David; Proverbs primarily was written by Solomon, also a king. Job, we are told, was a ruler on some level in the land of Uz (Job 1:1).

Many of the Festival Scrolls had that connection. Certainly, the Song of Solomon did, of course, because Solomon was a king. Ruth sets the stage for the birth of King David. It provides a background for the family of David. It ties in that way. Lamentations is specifically written as a lament for the death of King Josiah; Ecclesiastes was written by King Solomon. Esther was a Queen over the Persian Empire.

Daniel was a prince of Judah and was the number two man in the Babylonian Empire right under Nebuchadnezzar. Ezra came back as the priest; Nehemiah came back as the royal governor governing Judah. Chronicles was written from the standpoint of the Levitical priesthood and the kings of the house of David in Jerusalem. If you go through and compare the story that Chronicles tells—by comparison to Samuel and Kings—you will find that even though the same period is covered, it’s a different story. Chronicles doesn’t focus on the things that Samuel and Kings do. Chronicles focuses primarily on King David. It begins with genealogies. I Chronicles deals with genealogies that set the stage; the rest of the book deals with the life of King David. When you get to the end of I Chronicles, you’re just getting to the end of David’s life and you have an awful lot yet to go.

II Chronicles focuses primarily on Solomon. It focuses briefly, basically, on the good kings of Judah. It focuses a little bit on Asa and Jehoshaphat. It particularly focuses in on Hezekiah and Josiah. That pretty well sums up II Chronicles.

It focuses in on the times of great revival and the great Passovers that Hezekiah and Josiah had—the great revivals. It is a focus on God’s working through the house and throne of David and the Levitical priesthood. It focuses on Jerusalem—on where God was working. It was written to finish up the Hebrew Scriptures and to answer the questions as to where God was authoritatively working because in the aftermath of that, you have three different sets of manuscripts that all claim to represent the Old Testament.

You have what the Samaritans had which is the Samaritan version of the Old Testament. You have what is called the Septuagint, which was a Greek translation found down in Egypt. You had the Masoretic text, or the Hebrew text, that the Jews had preserved. Well, if you read Chronicles, you don’t have any question as to where you need to look. Do you look to the Greeks in Egypt? Do you look to the Samaritans? Or do you look to the Jewish community centered in Jerusalem?

Well, if you read Ezra, Nehemiah and Chronicles and you have any question about that, I would certainly like to know what it is. Because there isn’t any way that you can read those books, understand their authority and have any question as to where you want to look for the authoritative text of the Hebrew Scriptures. It makes it plain. It was important that it be made plain because it has been a source of confusion. But those books made plain where God was working. It made plain that He wasn’t working in Samaria; He was working in Jerusalem. And Jesus bore witness of that. You remember what He told the woman at the well in Samaria?

John 4:22, “‘You [Samaritans] worship you do not know; we [Jews] know what we worship, for salvation is of the Jews.’”

It’s unbelievable that we have had some come along over the years (even in the Church) that have questioned that. I think of one in particular who came into a fairly high position and got all “buggy” about the fact that the Septuagint was really where you needed to look. Well, it isn’t any wonder he got off into some of the other things he got off into when he started off there.

This section of the Bible is often overlooked. Most of the books contained here are books that maybe we don’t focus on quite as much. Many who focus on the Psalms or Proverbs in the sense of sort of reading it don’t fully understand some of the messages.

The book of Psalms is the longest book. It has many authors. King David composed the majority of it. There are a couple of things that I would like to show you on the Psalms. We are going to go through Psalms in a fair amount of detail.

Psalms was traditionally regarded by the Jews to be divided into five books—five books of the Psalms. It was considered one book for the sake of the Biblical canon, but it was comprised of five sections or five books of the Psalms.

The first section of the Psalms or Book One consists of Psalms 1—41. Go to the end of Psalm 41. Notice the ending.

Psalm 41:13, “Blessed be the Lord God of Israel. From everlasting to everlasting! Amen and Amen.”—A double “Amen.” That’s the way you tell the section ended.

The second section of the Psalms or Book Two of Psalms is Psalms 42—72. It ends the same way.

Psalm 72:19-20, “Blessed be His glorious name forever! And let the whole earth be filled with His glory. Amen and Amen. The prayers of David the son of Jesse are ended.”

The third section of the Psalms or the Book Three of Psalms is Psalms 73—89.

Notice Psalm 89:52, “Blessed be the Lord forevermore! Amen and Amen.”

Psalms 1—41 is Book One. Psalms 42—72 is Book Two. Psalms 73—89 is Book Three. Psalms 90—106 is Book Four. Now notice the way Book Four and Book Five end.

Psalm 106:48, “Blessed be the Lord God of Israel from everlasting to everlasting! And let all the people say, ‘Amen!’” And then you notice, “Praise the Lord!” “Praise the Lord” is translated from a Hebrew word that’s pretty commonly known. All of you know at least a couple of Hebrew words. You may not have known that you knew how to speak Hebrew, but every time you say “Amen,” you are speaking Hebrew because “Amen” is a Hebrew word. And there’s another Hebrew word I suspect all of you know. “Hallelujah” is a Hebrew word, too, and literally translated it simply means “Praise you the Lord.” So, v. 48 ends with “Amen, Hallelujah”—A little variation on the double “Amen.” The end of the Psalm ends the same way.

The last five Psalms, Psalms 146—150, all start with the word “Hallelujah.” They start and end with the Hallelujah. That’s why the last five songs of the book of Psalms are called the “Hallelujah Psalms.” The first word and the last word (in Hebrew) is Hallelujah—at least in the King James translation. In the King James translation, it is translated “Praise you the Lord.” Hallelujah is sometimes just printed out that way—Hallelujah. And in other cases, it is translated into English. It was there as a praise. These last five Psalms open and close with Hallelujah. There is a sense of completion when you get to the end of Psalm 150.

Psalm 150:6, “Let everything that has breath praise the Lord. Praise the Lord.” In fact, in Psalm 150, every verse contains the expression of praise, so there is that focus.

We find that the theme of “five” runs through the book of Psalms. There are five divisions of the Psalms. The five divisions in the book of Psalms were considered by the Jews to parallel the five books of Moses (the five books of the Torah) as well as the five books of the Festival Scrolls—the five books of the Megillot. The “Megillot” is another name for the Festival Scrolls. So there is a parallel between the five books of the Psalms, the five books of the Torah and the five Festival Scrolls. Then, when we get down to the end of the book of Psalms, we find the last five Psalms are all Hallelujah Psalms. Even the number of Psalms is a multiple of five—five times thirty—one hundred fifty Psalms. So, you find that theme of the number five running through the book of Psalms in an interesting way.

I want to look, briefly, at the themes of the five books of the Psalms. Normally, the first Psalm in each book sets the stage for that particular book. We are going to come back and spend a Bible study on each one of the five books of the Psalms. We are going to break down the book of Psalms down into five sections and spend some time going through each section of Psalms so that we can get a little better understanding.

Let’s notice briefly a little bit of an overview. Psalms 1 and 2 have traditionally been understood by the Jews to sort of set the stage for the whole book of Psalms. Psalms 1 and 2 contain the theme for the whole book. The material that is discussed in the book of Psalms is sort of summarized in the first two Psalms. We start out with these two little short Psalms. We find that it talks about the source of blessings.

Psalm 1:1-2, “Blessed is the man who walks not in the counsel of the ungodly, nor stands in the path of sinners, nor sits in the seat of the scornful; but his delight is in the law of the Lord, and in His law he meditates day and night.” Psalm 1 tells you that one of the major themes of the Psalms had to do with how to reap God’s blessings.

What does it mean to be blessed? How do you derive that blessing? It has to do with focusing in on God’s law and meditating on that law. The individual who meditates on and puts into practice the law of God in his life is going to be blessed. It makes a contrast between the individual who is blessed (because his focus is on God’s law), and the individual who is not.

Verse 4, “The ungodly are not so...” One of the great contrasts drawn throughout the book of Psalms is the contrast between the godly and the ungodly. In a poetic fashion, over and over and over, we find the distinction drawn in the book of Psalms of the godly and the ungodly—what’s going to be the consequence, the end result of the godly and what’s going to be the end result of the ungodly. Psalm 1 sets the stage by explaining that.

Psalm 2 focuses in on another aspect of the Psalms; many of the Psalms have to do with God stepping into history. Many of the Psalms have prophetic implications, and this is the theme that is expressed in the second Psalm.

Psalm 2:1, “Why do the nations rage...?” It talks about God sending the Messiah, His anointed (v. 2). The word “Messiah” is another Hebrew word that all of you know. It simply means “the Anointed One.” “Christ” is the term we usually use. It is simply the Greek translation of Messiah. “Christ” and “Messiah”—one is the Greek and the other is the Hebrew. We use them as titles, but they are a reference to the Anointed One—the One chosen by God as the Savior, the Messiah, the Christ.

Verse 2 talks about taking council against the Eternal and against His Anointed, against the Messiah, against the Christ. It shows God’s stepping into history and how God looks at puny man maneuvering and manipulating—and God laughs (v. 4). He looks down, and it’s so silly to see puny little man so pompously strutting around and thinking how great and how powerful he is.

So, the first two Psalms sort of set the stage for all of the other material that is covered in the Psalms. The theme that runs through the book of Psalms is a poetic comparison between the godly and the ungodly and the consequences of each. We have a development and a focus on God’s involvement in history. And, in particular, His ultimate involvement, the culmination of God’s involvement in history is His sending of the Messiah—both the first time and the second time. That’s not the only times God has intervened in history, but that is the culmination (the climax) of God stepping into history. Many of God's mighty deeds and actions of His involvement in the course of human events are celebrated in the Psalms. These two Psalms sort of set the stage for the whole book.

Then we come to the third Psalm, which sets the stage for the first section of the Psalms or Book One of Psalms. Running through this first section of Psalms is a focus on the role of Christ, particularly the role of Christ in His first coming as the Passover lamb. There is a focus on the individual person, the need of the individual for a Savior. There is a focus on the individual.

Many of the experiences of David's life are utilized and are the background from which many of these Psalms are written. And in that way, David was a type of the Messiah. He went through many things that mirrored events that Jesus Himself would later experience. Of course, Christ ultimately came to inherit the throne of His father, David.

Now, I might just comment a little bit about the Psalms in general and about King David's role. David was a remarkable man in a number of ways. One way in which David was a particularly remarkable individual was that David was an exceptionally expressive person. He had the ability to express the wide gamut of feelings and emotions in us in an unusual and remarkable way. Very few do so or have the capacity of doing so in the way that David did. He was an individual who felt everything—the highs and the lows. He felt everything deeply. He was very poetic and a very expressive individual, and as a result, he put into written form the whole gamut of feelings and emotions we don't even know how to quite put into words.

There are times we can't even express what we are feeling. It may be a particular trial. It may be a number of things we are going through, and many times we find it very difficult to even try to put into words what it is we are feeling. We have trouble sorting those feelings out. I'll tell you, if you find yourself in that situation and you open up the book of Psalms, you generally won't have to go very far before you will find a Psalm where David is putting into words the things that you are feeling but can't quite put into words. That's an important role the Psalms play in our own personal life because David expresses feelings and emotions that many of us have difficulty verbalizing. We have difficulty even recognizing what it is we are feeling.

But you usually don't have to get very far into the book of Psalms before you find that David has put into words—he says and expresses—what you are struggling with inside. It can be the “ups”; it can be the “downs.” It can be the joys and the ecstasy of thanksgiving, of praise, the positive and the “up” emotions. It can be fear, despair or frustration. It can be anguish at looking around and seeing life being so unfair. There is nothing you can go through and experience—everything from the joy and ecstasy of victory and deliverance, to the despair of defeat and the hurts of betrayal—David expresses all of those. He went through a number of things. A lot of people have gone through many things, but very few people have the ability to really verbalize it.

David was a remarkable man in that he was perhaps the most expressive man. He was not only an emotional individual but very expressive. He was able to express and verbalize that expression and was able to write it down in a poetic way. He is called in one place “the sweet psalmist of Israel” (II Samuel 23:1). So, the whole gamut of feelings is mirrored in the book of Psalms.

The first section of Psalms is Psalms 1—41. Much of what Jesus said while He was being crucified is quoted from Psalm 22. If you read Psalm 22, you will find that much of it reminds you of statements that Jesus either quoted directly or paraphrased. Psalm 22 is descriptive of the experience of the crucifixion. It was obviously the Psalm that was running through His mind as He hung there because it expressed what He was feeling.

In like manner, I think Psalm 23 makes such a contrast with it and must have expressed the feelings that He had at the time of the resurrection. When you read Psalm 23 with that in mind, you can sort of read it with the shout of exultation and of victory. Psalm 22 ends up with “that He hath done this.” In the Hebrew, it can read “it is finished”; Psalm 23 ends up with “I will dwell in the house of the Lord forever.”

Let me just briefly comment on Psalm 3 since that is the one that sort of sets the theme for this section.

Notice Psalm 3:1-4, “Lord, how they have increased who trouble me! Many are they who rise up against me. Many are they who say of me, ‘there is no help for him in God.’ But You, O Lord, are a shield for me, My glory and the One who lifts up my head. I cried to the Lord with my voice, and He heard me from His holy hill.” Psalm 3 focuses on our need for a Savior, and that really sets the stage for this first section of the Psalms.

I might also call your attention to Psalm 37 in this section. If you ever find yourself really frustrated at the unfairness of life and the unfairness of things, go to Psalm 37. You will find that David went through some experiences that focused in on the unfairness of life. One of the things you see is that David expressed a range of the negative emotions—frustration, anger, disappointment and fear—but he didn’t stop with that. He worked through them.

We all feel those things at one time or another. To deny our feelings doesn’t change them. There are times that we do feel angry. There are times we do feel frustrated or scared. There are times that we feel despairing and hopeless. There are times that we feel grief and sorrow. We face and we feel, at one time or another, all the gamut of negative emotions.

While those are places where we all find ourselves at one time or another, they are not the stopping points. They are not the way station along life’s journey where we want to stop and stay for a while. They are places we have to go through. But what is important is that we learn how to work through those feelings, not just stuffing them and denying them. We are to work through them and move on beyond them. We are to bring those things to resolution. We are to work through and get it into proper perspective. That’s what David does in the Psalms.

Many of the Psalms start off with an expression of frustration, anger, disappointment, hurt or any number of these feelings. But by the time you get to the end of the Psalms, he has worked through it and the matter has been resolved. As we meditate on the Psalms that are perhaps expressive of how we feel at a given point, they enable us to sort of work through it and come to a resolution.

Now the parallel from the Torah—the first book of Psalms would parallel with the first book of the Torah. The first book of the Torah is Genesis. Genesis focuses on the creation and introduces man’s need for a Savior and the means by which God will provide that Savior. That is a theme that runs through the book of Genesis. God introduces the creation for the purpose of introducing man, for the purpose of showing how man sinned, became cut off from God and came to need a Savior. Then, as He picks up the story with the family of Abraham, He begins to work through showing how He is going to provide that Savior. So, there is a clearer theme of the individual and the need of the individual for salvation.

The first parallel of the Festival Scrolls was the Song of Solomon. The Song of Solomon was traditionally read at the Passover/Unleavened Bread season, which is the season of the year that focuses on our need for a Savior.

The second section or Book Two of Psalms is Psalms 42—72. The theme shifts from personal experience of one man, to the collective experience of a nation. We have, in that sense, the beginning of the Old Testament Church. Psalm 42 begins this section. Notice the way it opens.

Psalm 42:1-2, “As the deer pants for the water brooks, so pants my soul for You, O God. My soul thirsts for God, for the living God. When shall I come and appear before God?” It is talking about the deep thirst that we have and how that deep thirst can be quenched.

You remember, Jesus explained it. He explained it to the woman at the well in Samaria (John 4:6-14). There is only one thing that will quench the deep thirst that is addressed in Psalm 42 and that is God’s Holy Spirit, rivers of living water (John 7:38-39). That is the only thing that can quench that deep thirst.

This second book of the Psalms would parallel the second book of the Torah, Exodus, as well as the second Festival Scroll, Ruth. The second Festival Scroll was read at Pentecost. Pentecost is the story of the outpouring of God’s Holy Spirit. It is the story of God’s covenant relationship, both in the Old Testament and the New Testament. It is the story of God calling out a church, a congregation, a spiritual nation and the ultimate pouring out of His Spirit to provide the quenching of the thirst that is expressed in Psalm 42.

As you go through this section, there are many portions we will come back to at a later time, but I would call your attention to Psalm 68 in this section, which the Jews have traditionally termed the “Pentecost anthem.” The second book of the Psalms would parallel the book of Exodus, which of course tells the story of the first Pentecost there at Mount Sinai, the giving of the law, the establishment of the covenant that ultimately culminates in the beginning of the New Covenant, the outpouring of the Spirit (Acts 2). It also parallels the book of Ruth, which was read at Pentecost. The story in the book of Ruth is of an individual called out of the world that forsakes her allegiance and loyalties of her old way and embraces the God of Israel and God’s truth. She becomes an heir of the covenant of promise. We have this theme that runs through the second section of the Psalms—the second book of the Psalms.

Book Three of Psalms is Psalms 73—89. Psalm 73 has the theme of obedience and avoidance of unclean conduct. The third book of the Torah is the book of Leviticus. The book of Leviticus was written for the Levites. It was instruction to the Levites—to the priesthood. What was the responsibility of the priesthood? It was to teach the nation how to be holy. It was to instruct the nation in holiness and cleanness. What was the consequence of the Levites and the priesthood's failure to do so? If they had done the job they should have done, the problems that came about wouldn't have come as they did because they did fail to do so. Leviticus contains in it Leviticus 26, the chapter of the blessings and the curses. Leviticus 26 is the story of what would happen if the priesthood failed to convey to the nation how to be holy. Leviticus is the third book of the Torah.

The third book of the Festival Scrolls is Lamentations. It is a lament for what happened to the nation as a consequence of the failure of the people to practice Leviticus. The theme of Leviticus is to be holy for God is holy (Leviticus 11:44-45). The job of the priesthood was to teach the people to discern between the holy and the profane, the clean and the unclean (Ezekiel 44:15, 23-24). It was to teach the people to make distinctions between what is appropriate and what is inappropriate, what is holy and what is profane, what is clean and what is unclean. That was their responsibility. The priesthood failed in their duty and the temple was ultimately destroyed, the priesthood was taken into captivity and Jerusalem was destroyed. The book of Lamentations is a lament about that, and in that sense, the events that it describes are prophetic of the Great Tribulation. They were a type of the Tribulation.

Interestingly, nearly the entire third book of Psalms is written by priests. Psalm 73 starts out, "A Psalm of Asaph." Now, if you go back and do a little checking on Asaph, you will find that Asaph was in charge of the Levitical singers. He was one of the priests in charge of music in the temple. Psalms 74, 75, 76, 77, 78, 79, 80, 81, 82, 83—all of those are songs of Asaph.

Psalms 84, 85, 87, 88 are for the sons of Korah who were part of the Levitical choir. Nearly all of the Psalms in this section were written either for or by priests. There is a priestly theme that runs through this section that, in many ways, parallels the book of Leviticus and, certainly, there are parallels with Lamentations, the third Festival Scroll.

Psalm 73, which sets the theme for the third section, says in vv. 1-2, "Truly God is good to Israel, to such as are pure in heart. But as for me, my feet had almost stumbled: my steps had nearly slipped." He said he was getting on a slippery slope; he was slipping up. Have you ever felt like that? Have you ever felt like your connection, in terms of God and the Church, were getting on sort of a slippery ground? Have you ever felt like you weren't as firm-footed as you wish you were?

He expresses why he felt that way.

Verse 3, "For I was envious of the boastful [KJV, "foolish"], when I saw the prosperity of the wicked." He said he really got into an attitude problem because he looked at people who were not putting forth any effort to obey God, and he was envious. It seemed to him those people were getting by with all kinds of things, and he saw the wicked who were prospering. Have you ever seen anybody wicked prosper? The world is filled with wicked who prosper. And it's easy, sometimes, if we are not careful, that our attitude can get askew. He described finding himself on a slippery slope. He was not as well positioned, as steady and stable, as he wished he were. But rather, he was beginning to develop an envy at what was seemingly the "easy time" that some of these people were having.

Verse 5, "They are not in trouble as other men, nor are they plagued like other men." It seems like some of the ones that are getting by the easiest are the worst. That's the way it is. Just because somebody is a crook and a shyster, doesn't mean they come down plagued with cancer, heart disease and everything else all at the same time. Sometimes they live to be ninety-five. That's of and by itself. There are times when it may seem like they are making a lot of money.

He continues and he describes what he saw. Verse 16, "When I thought how to understand this, it was too painful for me—" 'It was really bothering me. It hurt to look at all of this.'

Verse 17, "Until I went into the sanctuary of God; then I understood their end." Now he begins to get it into perspective. He says he went into the sanctuary (the temple) and then he began to get it into perspective. He began to consider the end and to realize that even though they may seemingly be getting by with it now for a while, they are ultimately the ones that are going to be in the slippery places and are going to be cast down to destruction.

Then, vv. 21-22, he begins to feel foolish for the attitude that he was having. You can go through Psalm 73. He sets the stage. This is the point that the priesthood should have gotten across to the people. This was important and, in many ways, sums up a great deal of the perspective from which the book of Leviticus and Lamentations should be read.

We are obviously going to come back and go through each of these sections closely, so I am just skimming now for the sake of time.

Book Four of Psalms is Psalms 90—106. Much of this particular section of Psalms—the fourth book of Psalms—parallels the fourth book of the Torah which is Numbers and the fourth book of the Festival Scrolls which is Ecclesiastes. Ecclesiastes was read at the Feast of Tabernacles, which is a type of the millennial reign of Jesus Christ. We find in this section many of the Psalms that describe the millennial conditions that will come to Israel and to all nations when God reigns on the earth.

Psalm 90 sets the stage for that. The first Psalm in this section sets the theme.

Psalm 90:1-4, “Lord, You have been our dwelling place in all generations. Before the mountains were brought forth, or ever You had formed the earth and the world, even from everlasting to everlasting, You are God. You turn man to destruction, and say, ‘Return, O children of men.’ For a thousand years in Your sight are like yesterday when it is past, and like a watch in the night.”

This is the first place the expression “a thousand years” is referred to. It is a very vague sort of reference. Peter quotes and paraphrases Psalm 90:4.

II Peter 3:8, “...with the Lord one day is as a thousand years, and a thousand years as one day.” Peter makes it a little plainer. He says that a day is equivalent to a thousand years in God’s plan. It remains yet for the Apostle John in the book of Revelation to clearly state that the reign of the Messiah is for one thousand years (Revelation 20:4-6).

We have talked about the Millennium and used the term so often that I think many are not really aware of the fact that, apart from the book of Revelation, you can’t find any clear statement that says the reign of the Messiah is going to last for a thousand years. If you had the entire Bible, except for the book of Revelation, you wouldn’t find any clear statement.

Now, the Jews had traditions that pointed in that direction. Peter alluded to it in II Peter 3. He paraphrased Psalm 90. But Psalm 90 is pretty vague. If you didn’t have what Peter said in II Peter 3 and if you didn’t have what John wrote in Revelation 20, you would be hard-pressed to have it really clear in your mind that the time of the Messiah’s reign is a thousand years. It’s a little vague if Psalm 90:4 was all you had to go on. Peter paraphrased it and made it a little plainer. John stated it clearly. When you read what John said and then look at what Peter said, you realize the comparison of a thousand years and a day and a seven-day week. Then you look here at Psalm 90 and you see sort of a reference that sets the stage.

Psalm 90:12, “So teach us to number our days, that we may gain a heart of wisdom.” The point is that time is limited for human beings. Even the Millennium is limited. A thousand years is a limited, finite time. When God deals with human beings, He deals in terms of a finite period of time. We all have to learn to number our days. We are to make best use of the time we have. We are not to assume our days are going to go on interminably because our days do have a termination. We need to learn to number our days and to apply our hearts to wisdom. We are to use each day to the full, to focus in and to utilize each day.

Look at the parallel. The book of Numbers dealt with Israel’s wandering in the wilderness, the time when Israel dwelt in booths (temporary dwellings) and God provided all their needs. In Leviticus 23, when the Holy Days were outlined, one of the things that Israel was told about the Feast of Tabernacles was that they were to dwell in booths during the Feast of Tabernacles. It was a reminder of the time they dwelt in booths during the wandering in the wilderness (Leviticus 23:42-43). The book of Numbers is the story of that time period.

Ecclesiastes is the book of the Festival Scrolls that focuses in on a lesson that has to be learned—the lesson that there is a need for something beyond the physical. It ends up with a focus on teaching us to number our days.

Ecclesiastes 12:1, “Remember now your Creator in the days of your youth....” It ends up with the fact that we need to be responsible.

Much of the theme of this section of the Psalms deals with the time when God reigns on the earth.

Psalm 93:1, “The Lord reigns....”

Psalm 99:1, “The Lord reigns....”

Actually, Psalms 92, 95, 96, 97, 98 and 99 are all Psalms that the Jews call the Sabbath Songs that made up a part of the liturgy every Sabbath in the temple. And it was felt that those Psalms focused in on the millennial fulfillment of the Sabbath because they understood that the weekly Sabbath was a weekly reminder of the time of the Messiah's reign.

Psalm 107 begins Book Five of Psalms (107—150) and, in that sense, sums up the material from the preceding four books. Deuteronomy, the fifth book of the Torah, sums up what had been said before and brings it up to a people who could literally stand on the river bank and see their salvation. They see the Promised Land. Deuteronomy is given to people who were within sight of the fulfillment and the realization of the promises.

The book of Esther was normally read in the twelfth month of the Hebrew year, the month Adar (February/March). It was read at the celebration of Purim, which was a celebration of God's deliverance—the story of which is told in the book of Esther. The parallel book of Esther ends up when God had saved His people and there was great rejoicing. We find that everybody, even a lot of the Persians, desired to be a Jew, too, because they could see the way that God was working. There is a focus on celebration of salvation in the physical sense in the book of Esther. The fifth book of the Psalms ends up with that. It is sort of a recap of material that has been covered and ends up with the Hallelujah Psalms, which is clearly a focus on a celebration of God's salvation.

Psalm 107 sets the theme.

Psalm 107:1-2, "O give thanks to the Lord, for He is good! For His mercy endures forever. Let the redeemed of the Lord say so, whom He has redeemed from the hand of the enemy." It is focused on a celebration of God's redemption and, also, there is a recap in this final fifth section of much of the previous material. So, in that way, there is a parallel to Deuteronomy and Esther.

There are various categories in the Psalms. Many of the Psalms are Psalms of praise. This is a major theme that runs throughout the entire book—praise to God for His great work, the deliverance of His people, His mercy, His benefits and blessings. Praise is a major theme that runs through the book of Psalms.

A second theme that runs through the book of Psalms is contrition. The theme of suffering (both for individuals and for the nation) and the understanding that personal and national calamity is a consequence of sin. Confession, pleas of mercy and forgiveness run throughout this section. This theme of contrition (of repentance), a desire for mercy, forgiveness, our need for deliverance and restoration runs through the book. Praise is perhaps the major theme of the Psalms. Contrition is a minor theme.

Another theme is the ethics that are taught.

Several of the Psalms are of an instructive nature. They give instruction concerning the things that God's people are to do and not to do.

We have seen that this entire section has a lot of material packed in it. We are going to spend the next five Bible studies going through the Psalms. We are going to go through it, spending one Bible study on each one of the five books of the Psalms. The next Bible study we will cover the first forty-one Psalms. We will spend a number of Bible studies on the Psalms. We will spend several on Proverbs (probably about three Bible studies on Proverbs), and then we will begin to pick up some speed. We will give a Bible study on each one of the five Festival Scrolls. We will give an entire Bible study for each of those books so we can spend some time and perhaps deepen our understanding of some of this section of the Bible that maybe does not get quite as much focus. There's an awful lot that's packed in here. It is a beautiful section of Scripture. There is a beauty, a rhythm of poetry and a depth of expression that is there. There are many, many important lessons and important principles that are illustrated. I think, as we read this section, we will find so much that can tie in and can be helpful to us in our everyday Christian life.

So, with that, we will conclude our Bible study this evening.

Bible Study # 76
September 10, 1991
Mr. John Ogwyn

The Writings Series—Book One—Psalms 1—41

This evening, we want to get into the book of Psalms. As I commented last time, the Psalms are divided into five books, or five sections. We are going to cover Book One of Psalms this evening—Psalms 1—41. We will also note the correspondence with the first book of the Law, Genesis, and the first book of the Festival Scrolls, the Song of Solomon. One of the things we will see is that each of the sections of the Psalms has its own individuality and its own character. The first two Psalms sort of set the stage for the entire book. The third Psalm serves as an introduction to the first book of Psalms.

Psalm 1 and 2 sort of introduce the entire book. The stress of the first couple of Psalms has to do with a contrast.

Psalm 1 starts out with a contrast between what is permanent and what is temporary, what is going to endure and last and what is going to be swept away.

Psalm 1:1-2, “Blessed is the man who walks not in the counsel of the ungodly, nor stands in the path of sinners, nor sits in the seat of the scornful; but his delight is in the law of the Lord, and in His law he meditates day and night.”

What is he going to be like?

Verse 3, “He shall be like a tree planted by the rivers of water, that brings forth its fruit in its season, whose leaf also shall not wither; and whatever he does shall prosper.” We have a contrast. On the one hand, we have individuals who are described as delighting in God’s law. Do we delight in God’s law? Are we enjoying Christianity or merely enduring? Here is an individual who delights in God’s law and meditates on it. That individual is compared to a tree planted by the rivers of water. What is the significance of that sort of symbolism? Here is a tree that is planted by the rivers, so it is always going to be close to water. If a tree is planted in an area where the roots go down and is going to be well watered, that means it is going to be a productive, enduring, growing tree. It symbolizes permanence.

The ungodly are described like chaff, which the wind drives away (v. 4). When wheat is harvested and winnowed, the chaff is separated from the grain and the chaff is simply blown away by the wind. So, there is a contrast between those who are going to endure and those who are going to be simply swept away. One of the themes that run through the book of Psalms is the fact that there is a way of life that leads to permanence. There is a way of life that leads to life eternal—to that which will endure forever. And, there is a way of life that those who follow it are simply going to be swept away. There is going to be a tide that simply sweeps them away, and they will no longer be around. So, here’s an important theme that runs throughout the book.

Psalm 2 goes into another theme that runs throughout the book and it has to do with God intervening into history—God stepping into the affairs of man.

Verse 1, “Why do the nations rage, and the people plot a vain thing?” It describes the nations raging and the people plotting (KJV, “imagining”) a vain thing.

Verses 2-4, “The kings of the earth set themselves, and the rulers take counsel together, against the Lord and against His Anointed, saying, ‘Let us break Their bonds in pieces and cast away Their cords from us.’ He who sits in the heavens shall laugh; the Lord shall hold them in derision.” They are going to stand up and fight against the Lord and against His Anointed (the Messiah), the returning Jesus Christ. God sits in the heavens and laughs. God says, ‘That’s funny! Look at these puny little human beings running around down there. They think they are really going to do something.’

God is going to step into the affairs of man. The sureness of that, which we celebrate at the Feast of Trumpets, is testified throughout the Psalms.

We will get into this first section of the Psalms, which is termed Book One of Psalms—the first forty-one Psalms.

In the introduction last Bible study, I pointed out that this first book of the Psalms parallels with the first book in the Festival Scrolls. This would parallel the Passover season. We are going to see that much of the message content is a parallel because this first book of the Psalms focuses in on the need for personal salvation. In Psalm 3, there is a focus throughout this section on personal salvation, the need for it and where it comes from. It comes from God.

Psalm 3:1-5, “Lord, how they have increased who trouble me! Many are they who rise up against me, many are they who say of me, ‘There is no help for him in God.’ But You, O Lord, are a shield for me, my glory and the One who lifts up my head. I cried to the Lord with my voice, and He heard me from His holy hill. I lay down and slept; I awoke, for the Lord sustained me.”

One of the things we are going to find, as we go through the Psalms, is that David went through a variety of circumstances and mirrored every sort of feeling and every wave of emotion. There is nothing that you can go through—no heights or depths that you can struggle with—that David did not experience. David experienced emotions from the exultation of victory, to the depths of despair and discouragement. But we see in the Psalms that David worked through and processed these feelings. He put into words things that we sometimes have a hard time expressing. Sometimes we have trouble expressing in words things we are going through. That is part of the value of the Psalms. They are written in a poetic fashion and in a way that lends them to meditation. The Psalms were written to be thought about, to be meditated upon and to be committed to memory. There are areas of the Psalms that mirror all sorts of emotions and feelings.

David wrote this third Psalm when he was fleeing from Absalom. It was a low point in his life. A lot of people were ready to desert him. You find out who your friends are, not when you are up and on top, but when you are down on the bottom. If you are on top, everybody is your friend. You can walk into a bar and say, 'The drinks are on me,' and everybody in there is your buddy. You have a room full of friends. But walk in someplace when you're "down and out." You say, 'Can anybody loan me a dollar?' You find out how quickly they can all "disappear into the woodwork."

David was king. Don't you think that everybody wanted to curry David's favor? Everybody wanted to be nice to him. Boy, David was a popular fellow. He was king. Everybody wanted to "butter him up."

When Absalom staged a coup, a lot of people thought Absalom was going to be in charge. So, everybody who had ever had anything against David, as well as those who just simply wanted to play politics, were immediately on the other side. David did not want to have to fight against his own son and he did not want Jerusalem to be destroyed—so he left. He fled. That must have been a low point for David in so many ways—all of the feelings and emotions that he was going through.

It's sort of interesting. During the last attempted coup in the Soviet Union, since some obviously took the wrong side and some wanted to straddle the fence, they were conveniently sick. In fact, some of those got fired, too. All of a sudden they had—what do you call it?—the "diplomatic flu."

They wanted to see which side was going to win. They didn't want to come down on the wrong side. So, all of a sudden they didn't feel so good and thought they ought to go to bed. Just as soon as the coup was over, they started feeling better and they knew which side they were on. They were on the winning side. 'Which one won? Okay, that's the one I am for.' Do you realize how often this is the case in life? That sort of illustrated it, but it can happen on a smaller scale in our lives. It happened to David.

He said in Psalm 3:1, "Lord, how they have increased who trouble me! Many are they who rise up against me." All of a sudden here were people "popping up out of the woodwork," people who never would have voiced displeasure with David before. But since they thought he was down and out, they were going to kick him, too. People were saying, 'Yeah, he's done for.' Verse 2, "...there is no help for him in God." 'He's history. Even God can't save him now.' That was not a very smart thing to say. But David at that depth, in terms of what he was going through and struggling with, recognized that God was a shield (v. 3).

So, he pleaded with God.

Verses 7-8, "Arise, O Lord; Save me, O my God! For You have struck all my enemies on the cheekbone; you have broken the teeth of the ungodly. Salvation belongs to the Lord. Your blessing is upon Your people. Selah" David recognized, in his depths, that salvation came from God.

Psalm 4:1, "Hear me when I call, O God of my righteousness! You have relieved me when I was in distress; have mercy on me, and hear my prayer." David understood that God is the source of help. When you are in trouble, you can go to God.

Verse 4 (KJV), "Stand in awe [be impressed with God], and do not sin. Commune with your own heart upon your bed and be still." In other words, lie there and meditate. Don't follow and practice sin; spend some time in quiet contemplation.

Verse 5, "Offer the sacrifices of righteousness, and put your trust in the Lord." See! That's the source.

And the result of that is v. 8, "I will both lie down in peace, and sleep; for You alone, O Lord, make me dwell in safety." David said he could lie down and get a good night's sleep because he put it in God's hands. He turned it over to Him.

Psalm 5:1, "Give ear to my words, O Lord, consider my meditation."

Verse 3, “My voice You shall hear in the morning, O Lord; in the morning I will direct it to You, and I will look up.” David began his day by praying to God. Here is a good indication that starting our day in prayer is something important for us to do.

Verse 4, “For You are not a God who takes pleasure in wickedness, neither shall evil dwell with You.” God knows who’s who and He knows what’s what. We can’t fool God. We can’t play games with God. We find that God does not take sin lightly.

Verses 5-6, “The boastful [KJV, “foolish”] shall not stand in Your sight; You hate all workers of iniquity. You shall destroy those who speak falsehood [deceit]; The Lord abhors the bloodthirsty and deceitful man.” God takes deceit and hypocrisy very seriously. That’s a serious matter.

In v. 9, He talks about these individuals who are not faithful and truthful.

Psalm 6:1-2, “O Lord, do not rebuke me in Your anger, nor chasten me in Your hot displeasure. Have mercy on me, O Lord, for I am weak; O Lord, heal me, for my bones are troubled.” David goes to God and asks God to deal with him gently and mercifully. He knew that he needed God’s chastening and correction, but he asked God to please do so gently and kindly and in mercy.

Verses 4-5, “Return, O Lord, deliver me! Oh, save me for Your mercies’ sake! For in death there is no remembrance of You; in the grave who will give You thanks?”

Here’s a verse that shows the state of the dead, “...in death there is no remembrance of God; in the grave who is going to give thanks?” When you are dead, you are dead. David again focused in on this sort of thinking.

Before we get too far along, let me make a couple of comments on Psalm 2 because there is one thing I neglected to mention. It mentions God laughing at puny man’s silly attempt to throw off God’s rule (vv. 3-4).

Verses 7-9, “I will declare the decree: The Lord has said to Me, “You are My Son, today I have begotten You. Ask of Me, and I will give You the nations for Your inheritance, and the ends of the earth for Your possession. You shall break them with a rod of iron; You shall dash them in pieces like a potter’s vessel.””

God gave Christ instructions as to how to rule the nations. He said, ‘I am going to give You the nations for Your inheritance. I am going to give them to You for You to rule over.’ Then God the Father proceeded to instruct Christ as to how the nations should be ruled.

In Revelation 2, we find this quoted as Jesus is speaking to the Churches.

Revelation 2:26, ““And he who overcomes, and keeps My works until the end, to him I will give power over the nations.”” The Father gave Christ power over the nations, and Christ is going to give to those who are faithful and keep His works to the end power over the nations.

Verse 27, ““He shall rule them with a rod of iron; as the potter’s vessels shall be broken to pieces”—as I also have received from My Father.””

We are seeing that Christ is going to govern as the Father would govern. And converted Christians who are in God’s Kingdom and have been given power over the nations will govern as Christ would govern. We will govern as Christ will govern, and Christ will govern as the Father would govern. God’s rule is going to be exercised with mercy and with power.

Psalm 7:1-2, again this theme of salvation, “O Lord my God, in You I put my trust; save me from all those who persecute me; and deliver me, lest they tear me like a lion...” Again, there is this focus on a need for personal deliverance and salvation.

Verse 17, “I will praise the Lord according to His righteousness, and will sing praise to the name of the Lord Most High.”

Psalm 8:1, “O Lord, our Lord, how excellent is Your name in all the earth. You who set Your glory above the heavens!”

Verses 3-5, “When I consider Your heavens, the work of Your fingers, the moon and the stars, which You have ordained, what is man that You are mindful of him, and the son of man that You visit him? For You have made him a little lower than the angels, and You have crowned him with glory and honor.”

Reading out of the Jewish translation, “What is man that You are mindful of him? The son of man that You think of him? Yet You made him but little lower than the angels and have crowned him with glory and honor. You have made him to have dominion over the works of Your hands. You have put all things under his feet, sheep, oxen, yes, the beasts of the field, the fowls of the air, the fish of the sea, whatever passes through the paths of the sea.”

This section is actually quoted back in Hebrew 2: 6-8, “...‘What is man that You are mindful of him, or the son of man that You take care of him? You made him a little lower than the angels; you crowned him with glory and honor, and set him over the works of Your hands. You have put all things in subjection under his feet. For in that He put all in subjection under him, He left nothing that is not put under him. But now we do not yet see all things put under him.”

We find in Hebrew an emphasis that man is ultimately to be given rulership over all things.

“You made him a little lower than the angels...” in that we are mortal, physical and subject to death. But God has in mind a destiny for us that far transcends any of the angels. What is man’s place in the universe? Well, God has given man a very special place because He has made him to have dominion over all God has, over all the things God has created. Man has been made to have dominion.

Romans 8:17, “And if children, then heirs—heirs of God and joint heirs with Christ...” If we are heirs of God, then that means we are going to inherit and are going to have rulership over the things that God has made. So, man’s place in the universe is a very special place because God has made man to share life with Him as part of His Family throughout eternity and to have a relationship with God that no other sort of being can have. David understood and expressed that.

Psalm 9:1, “I will praise You, O Lord, with my whole heart; I will tell of all Your marvelous works.” He talks about the greatness of God.

Verse 7, “But the Lord shall endure forever...”

Verse 8, “He shall judge the world in righteousness...”

Verse 10, “And those who know Your name will put their trust in You; for You, Lord, have not forsaken those who seek You.”

Let me comment a little bit on the expression, “Those who know Your name will put their trust in You.” There have been various groups that have laid great emphasis on what they term the “sacred name.” There have been those who have even gone out from the Church, and there are other groups that have built virtually their whole religion around Psalm 9:10.

Psalm 9:10, “...those who know Your name put their trust in You.” They make a big deal about what they call the “sacred name,” which is the Hebrew pronunciation of God’s name. These groups have split into about three or four different groups because they can’t agree on the pronunciation of God’s name. There is The Assemblies of YHVH and The Assemblies of YHWH, and they have about three or four groups because they can’t agree whether it is YHVH or YHWH, etc. They wrangle about how it should be said.

The point that we should understand is: What does it mean to know God’s name? It doesn’t mean just to be able to phonetically pronounce the Hebrew. God’s name is not some sort of magic word like “Aladdin” and his lamp or “Ali Baba and the Forty Thieves” who had the magic words, “open sesame,” and it all opened up. God’s name is not some sort of magic incantation or magic word that you say the name just right and this sort of opens things up. Names have meanings. A name describes and it identifies.

In the Scriptures, the names that people were given had meaning in the language that people understood what the meanings were. God’s names define and describe God. The language we use depends on our native language.

Some of these “sacred-name” groups make a big issue over the fact that the letter “J” (as it is pronounced in English) didn’t exist in the Greek or Hebrew alphabet. That’s certainly true. There are several other letters that didn’t exist. And there are letters they have that we don’t have. So? You make the letter “J” and an Englishman will look at it and pronounce it as “Ja.” An Englishman will pronounce Jesus, “Jesus.” But you show it to a Spaniard, and that’s not what he gets out of it. He will say, “Hasoos.” A Frenchman will say, “Jasus.”

The point is not the phonetic pronunciation that varies from language to language. The same letter has different sounds depending on the language. The phonetic sound is just the characteristic of language. It’s not that God can’t understand you unless you have somehow learned the language. Even in the same language, some of the pronunciation changes over a period of time. You don’t have to go back and learn Hebrew as it was spoken three thousand years ago for God to understand.

The thing about God’s names is that God’s names describe Him. God’s names tell you that He is Eternal and Almighty. God’s names tell you He is the Creator and that He is our Father. There are all sorts of descriptive terms that are characteristic of God’s name. “They who know Your name” means those who understand who God is, those who understand His character and His nature because God’s names describe Him. God’s names tell us what He’s like and that’s what it means to know His name. We are to put our trust in Him, to understand His nature, His character, His rank and His position.

Psalm 10:1-3, “Why do You stand afar off, O Lord? Why do You hide Yourself in times of trouble? The wicked in his pride persecutes the poor; let them be caught in the plots which they have devised. For the wicked boasts of his heart's desire; he blesses the greedy and renounces the Lord." Have you ever felt like that? Have you ever wondered why doesn't God do something? Why does it seem like God is standing way off? Why is God seemingly gone way off in a time of trouble? People are doing things they should not do and they seem to be getting by with it. They are not even trying.

Verse 4, "The wicked in his proud countenance does not seek God; God is in none of his thoughts."

He goes through and describes this way of thinking and the problems and the things that result from it. He describes the attitude of the wicked.

Verses 16-18, "The Lord is King forever and ever; the nations have perished out of His land. Lord, You have heard the desire of the humble; You will prepare their heart; You will cause Your ear to hear, to do justice to the fatherless and the oppressed, that the man of the earth may oppress no more." David understood, even in the midst of seeing things that contradicted it, that God was going to intervene. In the midst of seeing things that shouldn't be going on, David understood that God was going to judge.

Psalm 11:1, "In the Lord I put my trust...." "I am going to trust in God."

Verses 3-5, "If the foundations are destroyed, what can the righteous do? The Lord is in His holy temple, the Lord's throne is in heaven; His eyes behold, His eyelids test the sons of men. The Lord tests the righteous, but the wicked and the one who loves violence His soul hates." God may try and test the righteous. He may test His people. He may allow us to go through trials and tests, but He will ultimately save us. God is in charge. He is in His holy temple. What can you do? Recognize that God is in charge. He knows what's going on, and while He may allow His people to be tried and tested, God is going to take note of His people.

Here is another point in David's life.

Psalm 12:1-2, "Help, Lord, for the godly man ceases! For the faithful disappear from among the sons of men. They speak idly everyone with his neighbor; with flattering lips and a double heart they speak." David looked around. It seemed like people who weren't trying to do what was right were multiplying and good people were in trouble and perishing. Good people were harder and harder to find and further and further between. David is crying out for salvation. As you go through, you find that

David puts into words these feelings and things that he encountered—the trials and the tests of faith.

He worked through to realize that, vv. 6-7, "The words of the Lord are pure words, like silver tried in a furnace of earth, purified seven times. You shall keep them, O Lord, You shall preserve them from this generation forever." God's words are pure and true.

Have you ever felt forgotten? David did.

Psalm 13:1, "How long, O Lord? Will You forget me forever? How long will You hide Your face from me?" Do you ever feel like that? Do you ever feel like God isn't listening, like God was off, hiding from you, somewhere? David felt like that, too.

So he beseeches God and he says in v. 3, "Consider and hear me, O Lord my God; Enlighten my eyes, lest I sleep the sleep of death."

Verses 5-6, "But I have trusted in Your mercy; My heart shall rejoice in Your salvation. I will sing to the Lord, because He has dealt bountifully with me." David, again, worked through. When he started out, his focus was on how he felt forgotten and abandoned. But as he focused in on it, he realized that God was really the source of blessings and that God really had blessed him. So, by the end of the Psalm, he started to count his blessings rather than count his troubles. That's an important part of dealing with trials. If we sit down and make a ten-page list of our troubles and about a three-line list of our blessings, our perspective is all messed up. It is important that we focus, even in the midst of our trials, on the fact that God really provides help and blessings in so many ways.

Psalm 14:1, "The fool has said in his heart, 'There is no God.' They are corrupt, they have done abominable works; there is none who does good." God labels a fool anyone who can look around and see all the things God has made (the witness of creation) and can simply say that there is no God. God defines as a fool somebody who simply refuses to acknowledge the existence of God in the midst of all the witness to the contrary.

Psalm 15:1, "Lord, who may abide in Your tabernacle? Who may dwell in Your holy hill?" "Who's going to be there in Your Kingdom? Who's going to dwell there?"

Verses 2-4, "He who walks uprightly, and works righteousness, and speaks the truth in his heart; he who does not backbite with his tongue, nor does evil to his neighbor, nor does he take up a reproach against his friend; in whose eyes a vile person is despised, but he honors those who fear the Lord; he who swears to his own hurt and does not change.” –Somebody who is a man of his word or a woman of her word, an individual who means what he says.

One of the major factors of the multiplication of lawsuits and all sorts of civil suits that we have is simply because people don’t want to do what they agreed to do. They are not willing to swear to their own hurt and then not change. They make an agreement to do something, it gets inconvenient and they don’t want to do it anymore.

God says you make an agreement, you give your word and you stick to what you say.

Verse 5, “He who does not put out his money at usury....” This is not a reference to a business arrangement but to personal loans. This is a matter of making a profit off of somebody else’s troubles. It’s sort of a “loan-shark” type of an approach—if somebody’s in trouble and in dire straits, you make money off of their distress. One of the things that God does indict through the Scriptures, in terms of dealing with people, has to do with those who take advantage of somebody in trouble. Society has always had those who hover around the edges waiting to catch somebody in trouble and take advantage of that.

Continuing in v. 5, “...Nor does he take a bribe against the innocent. He who does these things shall never be moved.”

The way to endure (to last) is to latch on to the values that will endure.

Psalm 16:1, again a plea for salvation, “Preserve me, O God, for in You I put my trust.”

Verses 9-10, “Therefore my heart is glad, and my glory rejoices; my flesh also will rest in hope. For You will not leave my soul in sheol [hell, the grave], nor will You allow your Holy One to see corruption.” Here is a prophecy of the resurrection of Christ. “You will not allow Your Holy One to see corruption.”

This is quoted in Acts 13:35 and is applied to Christ’s resurrection. The prophecy was made that the Messiah would not remain in the grave. He would not corrupt, decay and return to the earth, but would obviously be restored to life and would come forth as He did.

Psalm 17:8, “Keep me as the apple of Your eye; hide me under the shadow of Your wings.” The expression “apple of your eye” is an expression that we use in English. It is actually derived from the Bible. It is an expression in Hebrew, translated in English, so it is quoted as an English proverb.

Notice a reference to the resurrection.

Verse 15, “As for me, I will see Your face in righteousness; I shall be satisfied when I awake in Your likeness.” Here’s a reference to the fact that David knew he was going to wake up and he would see God’s face in righteousness.

Psalm 18:1-3, “I will love You, O Lord, my strength. The Lord is my rock and my fortress and my deliverer; My God, my strength, in whom I will trust; my shield and the horn of my salvation, my stronghold. I will call upon the Lord, who is worthy to be praised....”

It describes God’s greatness. David describes God’s greatness and power. He describes God as the deliverer. God is my Rock, my fortress, my deliverer and my strength. He is the One that we can depend on. God is the God of our salvation. He is the One we can count on. There is nothing too hard for Him. He describes these things in a very poetic way.

Verses 9-10, “He bowed the heavens also, and came down with darkness under His feet. And He rode upon a cherub, and flew; He flew upon the wings of the wind.”

Psalm 18 is a very beautiful psalm.

Psalm 18:25-26, “With the merciful You will show Yourself merciful; with a blameless man You will show Yourself blameless; with the pure You will show Yourself pure; and with the devious [KJV, “froward”] You will show Yourself shrewd [KJV, “froward”].”

This term “froward” is actually translated from two different Hebrew words. When it says “with the froward,” the Hebrew word here means “crooked” or “perverse.” A totally different word is used to refer to God when it says, “You will show Yourself froward” or “You will show Yourself a hard adversary.” With those who are crooked and perverse, God will show Himself a hard adversary. With merciful people, God will be merciful. For those who are upright, just and fair, He will deal justly and fairly. With those who are pure, He will deal purely. With those who are crooked and perverse, He is going to show Himself as a hard adversary. God is described as our source, the One to whom we can look.

Verse 31, “For who is God, except the Lord? And who is a rock, except our God?” God is the One who can be counted on.

Verse 46, “The Lord lives! Blessed be my Rock! Let the God of my salvation be exalted.”

Psalm 19:1, “The heavens declare the glory of God; and the firmament shows His handiwork.” The glory, the power and the greatness of God are declared when you look up at what God has made. You can imagine David as he stood out there, particularly as a shepherd boy keeping watch over his father's sheep in the field at night. There is something about being out of the city, out in an area that is clear or maybe up on a hill or an area where there is not a lot of light or anything around. It seems like the sky is just filled with stars.

I know it has impressed me several different times when I would drive to visit my mother who lives out in the country. We would get there late at night, we would step out of the car, and I would look up. It was like I had forgotten how many stars there were because you never see stars like that in Baton Rouge or Houston where we used to live. You could look up and see an odd star here and there, but there is so much diffused light that you simply don't see many stars. Even out in the country if you have a lot of lights around, you don't see as much. But if you get out into an area that is out away from town where there is not a lot of light around, it is just incredible. The sky is alive with stars.

Verse 1, "The heavens declare the glory of God...." It is so impressive.

It continues and describes God's greatness in vv. 7-9, "The law of the Lord is perfect, converting the soul; the testimony of the Lord is sure, making wise the simple; the statutes of the Lord are right, rejoicing the heart; the commandment of the Lord is pure, enlightening the eyes; the fear of the Lord is clean, enduring forever; the judgments of the Lord are true and righteous altogether."

God's Law (the Torah) is perfect, converting and restoring our lives. God's law is perfect and it points, leads and instructs us in the direction that leads to life. God's testimonies are sure; they make wise the simple. Testimonies are the examples and illustrations that are a source of wisdom. We may not have a lot of experience, but we can read the account of God working in the lives of people—men, women, young and old. You see the things they went through, the things they experienced and the way that God viewed it and dealt with it. It is a source of experience and makes wise the simple. God's statutes are right. His commandments are pure. God's law, when you give thought to it, directs you. That's what it is there for.

Psalm 20:1-2, again, a plea for salvation, "May the Lord answer you in the day of trouble; may the name of the God of Jacob defend you; may He send you help from the sanctuary, and strengthen you out of Zion."

Psalm 21:1, "The king shall have joy in Your strength, O Lord; and in Your salvation how greatly shall he rejoice!" –Again, a focus on salvation.

Psalm 22 is a Psalm that ties in very directly with the crucifixion of Christ. We find that the first words of Psalm 22 are the words that are recorded back in Matthew 27:46 and Mark 15:34. They are the words that Jesus spoke as He hung there.

Psalm 22:1-2, "My God, My God, why have You forsaken Me? Why are You so far from helping Me, and from the words of My groaning? O My God, I cry in the daytime, but You do not hear; and in the night season, and am not silent." If you read Psalm 22, you will realize that most of this is what Christ would have been meditating on. It was expressive of what He was going through.

Verses 28-29, "For the kingdom is the Lord's, and He rules over the nations. All the prosperous of the earth shall eat and worship; all those who go down to the dust shall bow before Him, even he who cannot keep himself alive." Nobody can hang on to life. When it starts ebbing away, you can't hold on to it. You don't have the power to keep yourself alive.

The prophecy of Christ is, vv. 30-31, "A posterity [KJV, "seed"] shall serve Him. It will be recounted of the Lord to the next generation. They will come and declare His righteousness to a people who will be born, that He has done this." "He has done this." A preferable translation would be, "It is finished." Or it would be better rendered, "It has been done."

It ties in with the statement that Christ quoted in John 19:30, "It is finished!" It is quoted in the Aramaic form of the Greek. If you were to translate it back into the language that Christ spoke, it would be almost identical to the ending of Psalm 22:31. This is undoubtedly the tie-in.

Just as Psalm 22 reflects the thoughts and feelings of what Jesus went through as His life was ebbing away (paying for your sins and mine), Psalm 23 must certainly reflect the day of the wave sheaf (the day in the aftermath of His resurrection).

Psalm 23:1, "The Lord is my shepherd, I shall not want."

Verse 3, "He restores my soul...." He restores my life.

Verse 6, "Surely goodness and mercy shall follow me all the days of my life; and I will dwell in the house of the Lord forever."

Psalm 22 and Psalm 23 go together in that sense. Psalm 22 reflects the sense of aloneness, of being forsaken; then the recognition that God is the source of salvation and the exultation is in Psalm 23.

Psalm 24:1, “The earth is the Lord’s and all its fullness, the world and those who dwell therein.”

The focus is that God owns everything.

Psalm 25:1-2, “To You, O Lord, I lift up my soul. O my God, I trust in You; let me not be ashamed; let not my enemies triumph over me.”

Verses 4-6, “Show me Your ways, O Lord; teach me Your paths. Lead me in Your truth and teach me, for You are the God of my salvation; on You I wait all the day. Remember, O Lord, Your tender mercies and your loving kindnesses, for they have been from of old.”

Verses 8-9, “Good and upright is the Lord; therefore He teaches sinners in the way. The humble [KJV, “meek”] He guides in justice, and the humble [meek] He teaches His way.” We can trust God. Again, God is the source of our salvation.

Psalm 26:1-3, “Vindicate [KJV, “Judge”] me, O Lord, for I have walked in my integrity. I have also trusted in the Lord; I shall not slip. Examine me, O Lord, and prove me; try my mind and my heart. For Your loving kindness is before my eyes, and I have walked in Your truth.” He asks God to examine him. That’s what he is saying here in the first couple of verses. He wants God to really examine and look at him. God knows us from the inside out. God is the One who can show us our secret sins. God is the One who can help us to see what we don’t see. David was seeking to walk before God in sincerity and truth. He trusted God and he asked God to examine him, to try him and to help him to see himself.

Psalm 27:1, “The Lord is my light and my salvation; whom shall I fear? The Lord is the strength of my life; of whom shall I be afraid?” Again, this is a matter of personal salvation; “The Lord is my light and my salvation, whom shall I fear?”

Verse 9, “Do not hide Your face from me; do not turn Your servant away in anger; You have been my help; do not leave me nor forsake me, O God of my salvation.”

Verse 11, “Teach me Your way, O Lord, and lead me in a smooth path, because of my enemies.” Again, God is the source of our deliverance, our salvation.

Psalm 28:1, “To You I will cry, O Lord my Rock: Do not be silent to me, lest, if You are silent to me, I become like those who go down to the pit.”

Psalm 29:1-2, “Give [ascribe] unto the Lord, O you mighty ones, give unto the Lord glory and strength. Give unto the Lord the glory due to His name; worship the Lord in the beauty [majesty] of holiness.”

It describes God’s power.

Verses 3-4, “The voice of the Lord is over the waters; the God of glory thunders; the Lord is over many waters. The voice of the Lord is powerful; the voice of the Lord is full of majesty.” It describes the greatness and the power of God. Much of the symbolism of Psalm 29 is like a storm, the thunder, etc.

In v. 3, it describes the wind and the shaking of everything.

Verses 5-8, “The voice of the Lord breaks the cedars, yes, the Lord splinters the cedars of Lebanon. He makes them also skip like a calf, Lebanon and Sirion like a young wild ox. The voice of the Lord divides the flames of fire. The voice of the Lord shakes the wilderness; the Lord shakes the Wilderness of Kadesh.” Here is a description of all these things.

Then it ends up in v. 11, “The Lord will give strength to His people; the Lord will bless His people with peace.”

I would like to read a comment from the Jewish commentary in reference to Psalm 29. “A thrilling description of a storm, a verbal symphony in which the shadowing peels of thunder reverberating around the hills is reproduced in words with realistic effect. The Hebrew poet, however, cannot rest satisfied with a word picture. His religious genius induced him to interpret the thunderclaps as the majestic voice of God. The Psalm is included in the Sabbath liturgy. It is one of the seven Sabbath songs. [Psalm 29 is the only Sabbath Psalm in this section of Psalms; the others are all in book four of Psalms.] Furthermore, the closing note ‘peace’ coming at the end of the poem of the storm is particularly apt for the day of rest which introduces a period of calm after the storm of everyday life and conflicts.”

Psalm 29 is one of the seven Psalms that were read in the temple every Sabbath. For the others, go back to about Psalm 92 (the second of those), followed by 95, 96, 97, 98 and 99. Those are the seven Psalms that were traditionally recited in the temple at the beginning of the Sabbath. Other portions were gone through, but these seven were read every Sabbath. They came to be known as the “seven Sabbath Psalms.”

Psalm 30:1, “I will extol You, O Lord, for You have lifted me up, and have not let my foes rejoice over me.”

Psalm 31:1-2, “In You, O Lord, I put my trust; let me never be ashamed; deliver me in Your righteousness. Bow down Your ear to me; deliver me speedily; be my rock of refuge, a fortress of defense to save me.”

Verse 5, “Into Your hand I commit my spirit; You have redeemed me, O Lord God of truth.”

Verse 15, “My times are in Your hand; deliver me from the hand of my enemies, and from those who persecute me.” –Again, a reference to salvation and a reference to trust in God for deliverance.

Psalm 32:1-2, “Blessed is he whose transgression is forgiven, whose sin is covered. Blessed is the man to whom the Lord does not impute iniquity, and in whose spirit is no guile.” The most blessed state to be in is the state of being forgiven.

Verse 5, “I acknowledged my sin to You, and my iniquity I have not hidden. I said, ‘I will confess my transgressions to the Lord.’ And You forgave the iniquity of my sin.” When we do that, we can be forgiven. We don’t have to live under a cloud and a shadow.

Psalm 33:1-3, “Rejoice in the Lord, O you righteous! For praise from the upright is beautiful. Praise the Lord with the harp; make melody to Him with an instrument of ten strings. Sing to Him a new song; play skillfully with a shout of joy.”

It describes the greatness of God.

Verses 16-19, “No king is saved by the multitude of an army; a mighty man is not delivered by great strength. A horse is a vain hope for safety; neither shall it deliver any by its great strength. Behold, the eye of the Lord is on those who fear Him, on those who hope in His mercy, to deliver their soul from death, and to keep them alive in famine.”

The real outcome of wars and battles is determined by God—not by the size of the army, not by the implements and the technology and all of these things. Those are not the real determining factors. The real determining factor is the fact that, “the eye of the Lord is upon them that fear Him.”

Psalm 34:1, “I will bless the Lord at all times; His praise shall continually be in my mouth.” David spends a lot of time praising God. It is an important thing to understand. A very important key is brought out in Romans 1. Do you know the progression that took people away from God in the world after the flood? It is exactly the same progression that takes young people out of the Church. Any young person who grows up in the Church and leaves the Church follows that same progression.

It says in Romans 1:21, “...although they knew God...” That’s the state of somebody who grows up in the Church. That was the state of all humanity when they got off the ark. Everybody—Noah, Mrs. Noah and the three little Noah’s and their wives—they all knew God. Nobody had the question, “Does God exist?” They had just gone through pretty dramatic evidence of that.

But it says in Romans 1:21, “...when they knew God [that was the starting point], they glorified Him not as God, neither were thankful [What happened as a result of not glorifying God and being thankful?], they became futile in their thoughts, and their foolish hearts were darkened.” There is a progression from light to darkness, a progression from knowing God to living in spiritual darkness. The progression starts when we cease to glorify God and to be thankful and appreciative to Him for His calling. David spent a lot of time praising and glorifying God. That’s one of the things you find that comes out in the Psalms over and over. David stood in awe of God. He was impressed with God. He thought a lot about God. He counted his blessings. Some people only count their troubles. David had troubles, too. He mentioned those troubles and talked about those troubles. There were times when things bothered him, but he did not let that become the “end-all” and all of his focus. He glorified God and he was thankful.

I think that’s one of the most important and valuable things. If a young person growing up does not learn to appreciate and value God’s calling and truth, if he doesn’t learn to love God and to appreciate and value God’s calling and truth, then he will ultimately treat it cheaply and become vain in his imagination. That will lead to actually losing the understanding that at one time he had.

Psalm 34:2, “My soul shall make its boast in the Lord; the humble shall hear of it and be glad.”

Verse 6, “This poor man cried out, and the Lord heard him, and saved him out of all his troubles.”

Verses 12-15, “Who is the man who desires life, and loves many days, that he may see good? Keep your tongue from evil, and your lips from speaking guile. Depart from evil, and do good; seek peace, and pursue it. The eyes of the Lord are on the righteous, and His ears are open to their cry.” God hears those who serve Him.

Verses 17-19, “The righteous cry out, and the Lord hears, and delivers them out of all their troubles. The Lord is near to those who have a broken heart, and saves such as have a contrite spirit [those who practice repentance]. Many are the afflictions of the righteous, but the Lord delivers him out of them all.” God’s people may have many afflictions, but God will deliver.

Verse 22, “The Lord redeems the soul of His servants, and none of those who trust in Him shall be condemned.” God is the source of salvation. He is the source of redemption.

Psalm 35:1, “Plead my cause, O Lord, with those who strive with me....”

Notice what David did.

Verse 13, “But as for me, when they were sick, my clothing was sackcloth; I humbled myself with fasting; and my prayer would return to my own heart.” How did David humble himself? He humbled himself with fasting. That’s one of the purposes of fasting. It is a means by which we humble ourselves before God and draw near to God.

Psalm 36:1, “An oracle within my heart concerning the transgression of the wicked: There is no fear of God before his eyes.” If God was real to people and if they were really impressed with Him, they wouldn’t do some of the things they do. It describes that.

Psalm 37 is a very important Psalm. I think it is a good one to go to and meditate on when you are having trouble.

Psalm 37:1, “Do not fret because of evildoers, nor be envious of the workers of iniquity.” Don’t get all worked up and bothered because of people who are doing what’s wrong. Why?

Verses 2-5, “For they shall soon be cut down like the grass, and wither as the green herb. Trust in the Lord, and do good; dwell in the land, and feed on His faithfulness. Delight yourself also in the Lord, and He shall give you the desires of your heart. Commit your way to the Lord, trust also in Him, and He shall bring it to pass.”

Verse 7, “Rest in the Lord, and wait patiently for Him; do not fret because of him who prospers in his way, because of the man who brings wicked schemes to pass.” The point is that no matter what somebody seems to be getting by with, that’s not the permanent state of things.

It is so easy sometimes to fret because of evildoers. We get all worked up because we feel somebody is getting by with something, and that’s not right. That’s not fair because maybe they are getting by with it at our expense. That always seems so unfair. If they are getting by with it at somebody else’s expense, we feel like “that’s too bad,” but if it’s at our expense, then that becomes a matter that’s very important. What’s the joke? What’s the difference between a recession and a depression? A recession is when your neighbor has lost his job. A depression is when you have lost yours. It is a matter of perspective. We feel “that’s too bad” when it happens to our neighbor, but when it happens to us, it’s really serious. God says don’t worry about it. What’s the alternative to worrying about it?

Verses 4-5, “Delight yourself also in the Lord, and He shall give you the desires of your heart. Commit your way to the Lord, trust also in Him, and He shall bring it to pass.”

What am I going to do?

Verses 7-8, “Rest in the Lord, and wait patiently for Him; do not fret because of him who prospers in his way, because of the man who brings wicked schemes to pass. Cease from anger, and forsake wrath; do not fret—it only causes harm.” Why?

Verses 9-11, “For evildoers shall be cut off; but those who wait on the Lord, they shall inherit the earth. For yet a little while and the wicked shall be no more; indeed, you will look diligently for his place, but it shall be no more. But the meek shall inherit the earth, and shall delight themselves in the abundance of peace.”

Verse 18, “The Lord knows the days of the upright, and their inheritance shall be forever.”

The point is that we must put it in God’s hands. We trust Him and it is ultimately going to sort out. God knows who’s who and what’s what. It is a matter of perspective. David had to work through and come to this point of realizing that the key is getting it in perspective and realizing there is a way of life that is going to last. There is a way of life that is going to endure forever because God is going to intervene and God’s salvation is coming. But just as God is going to deliver His people, there is going to come a time of reckoning to those who aren’t.

Psalm 38:1, “O Lord, do not rebuke me in Your wrath, nor chasten me in Your hot displeasure!”

We ask God to correct us, but we look for mercy and ask God to do so gently. That’s always an important thing to include. When we ask God for correction, ask Him to please do it very gently.

Psalm 39:1, “I said, ‘I will guard my ways, lest I sin with my tongue; I will restrain my mouth with a muzzle, while the wicked are before me.’”

David did not want to sin with his tongue. He wanted to control what he said.

An interesting statement is made in v. 6, “‘Surely every man walks about like a shadow [or, “every man walks in an image”] [KJV, “in a vain show”]; surely they busy themselves in vain; he heaps up riches and does not know who will gather them.”

Human nature is such that we seek to project this image, rather than to get down to the reality. In the midst of our fears and insecurities, in a matter of trying to impress one another, we walk in an image. We project this image that we try to measure up to and live up to. The point is that we need to get down to the reality and ask God to really help us to deal with things as they are and with ourselves as we really are.

Psalm 40:1, again, the theme is salvation, “I waited patiently for the Lord; and He inclined to me, and heard my cry.” ‘I will wait for God.’

Verses 16-17, “Let all those who seek You rejoice and be glad in You: let such as love Your salvation say continually, ‘The Lord be magnified!’ But I am poor and needy; yet the Lord thinks upon me. You are my help and my deliverer; do not delay, O my God.”

Psalm 41 ends this section of the Psalms.

Psalm 41:1-2, “Blessed is he who considers the poor; the Lord will deliver him in time of trouble. The Lord will preserve him and keep him alive.”

When we put into practice God’s way of life, it is not enough to simply darken the door of church or to sort of walk in and warm a seat. That’s not what impresses God. Religion is not something you put on and put off like your Sabbath suit. It is not something to be taken off, put in the closet and kept there all week, then to be taken out, dusted off and worn again on the next Sabbath. Religion is to be a way of life. It is to be the way we function.

Verse 1, “Blessed is he who considers the poor; [This is someone who practices, in his everyday life, God’s attitude of mercy and concern.] the Lord will deliver him in the time of trouble.” The person who can look to God for help in the time of trouble is the one who is trying to live and practice God’s way day in and day out. If the only time you ever make God’s acquaintance is when you’re in trouble and you go along ignoring God all the rest of the time, then all of a sudden you get in a jam—it’s like, ‘Where’s God?’ We need to be looking for God and trying to practice God’s way in our day-to-day life because God takes note of that.

Verse 9 is a prophecy that is quoted in the New Testament (John 13:18) as a reference to Judas Iscariot.

This section ends up in v. 13, “Blessed be the Lord God of Israel from everlasting to everlasting! Amen and Amen.”

There is a reference that runs throughout the first section of the Psalms—Book One of Psalms—that is a reference to salvation, a reference to our need for God’s deliverance. This section, in focusing in on a need for salvation, focuses in on why we need salvation. We need God’s deliverance. We can’t deliver ourselves. We find ourselves in any number of problems and difficulties. We need God’s deliverance and God can be counted upon. God is there. God is the One who we can look to and count on to deliver us in time of adversity.

This theme of salvation that runs through the first section of Psalms corresponds with the first section of the Festival Scrolls that were read at the Passover season. It certainly focuses in on the theme of personal salvation.

In the book of the Law, the book of Genesis is the first book of the Law. The book of Genesis introduces what? It introduces the need for individual salvation. It introduces Adam and Eve and their sin, that God promised deliverance and salvation through the Seed of woman (that’s how God was going to accomplish salvation) and the working and development of God’s promises of the Messiah through the family of Abraham. All this is developed in the book of Genesis. So, there is this correspondence that we would note and a theme of salvation and of deliverance.

There is a tremendous amount. We have just sort of skimmed the high spots of these first forty-one Psalms. These Psalms will give you something you can go through and focus in and meditate on. We realize there is a tremendous amount that God has packed into the Psalms that are there for us to meditate on, to think about, that can help us sort of get things into perspective when we’re going through difficulties and things in our lives. Next Bible study we will cover Book Two of Psalms—Psalms 42—72.

The Writings Series—Book Two—Psalms 42—72

This evening we are continuing our focus on a survey of the Writings. We are going through the section of the Old Testament Scriptures known as the Writings, and in particular, the book of Psalms. This evening we are focusing on Book Two of Psalms—Psalms 42—72.

As we move through this section, we start our focus on Israel's ruin and their problems. At the end of the section, we will then focus in on the Redeemer and the redemption that God will finally give Israel.

We will note that this section of the book of Psalms corresponds with the second book of the Law, Exodus, as well as the second book of the Festival Scrolls, Ruth, which was read at Pentecost. This section of Scripture opens with a lament, much as the book of Exodus opens. The book of Exodus opens with the children of Israel crying out to God in their affliction and their need for deliverance. There is a focus on the helpless condition and the need for God to act as Redeemer and Deliverer. There is a need for God's role. Our need for God is the issue that is addressed in the beginning of the book of Exodus and here in this second section of Psalms because that sets the stage for the recognition of salvation, of redemption. You have to first recognize your need in order to recognize the importance of God's plan, God's promises and the things that God proposes to us. Psalm 45, which is a part of this section, celebrates a royal marriage and this, in many ways, parallels the story of Ruth. Ruth has parallels because part of the symbolism of Pentecost is tied in with the institution of the Old Covenant and then of the New Covenant. Both covenants were marriage covenants. Pentecost represented the Old Covenant in Mount Sinai—a marriage covenant between God and Israel. The Jews have focused in on that and of the connection between that and the marriage of Israel to the God of the Old Testament. That analogy was given because human marriage is, in reality, a type of the relationship between Christ and the Church.

Psalm 68, which is also found in this section, is traditionally known in orthodox Jewish synagogues as the Pentecost anthem. The Jews have connected much of the symbolism of this particular Psalm with the revelation at Mount Sinai. The revelation at Sinai and the giving of the Ten Commandments is understood by Jewish tradition to have been on the first Pentecost that was celebrated.

That fits right in because that was the institution of the Old Covenant, just as the New Covenant was instituted on Pentecost in 31 A.D. with the outpouring of God's Holy Spirit. Under the Old Covenant, the law of God was written by the finger of God on tables of stone; under the New Covenant, the law of God is written by the Spirit of God in the tables of our hearts and minds. That's really the fundamental and basic difference between the Old and the New Covenant. It is not that one is based on law and the other is based on grace.

To begin with, God's election (God's calling) of Israel is based on grace. Anytime God delivers benefits to human beings, God's grace is involved because none of us have ever earned or deserved the blessings and benefits that God bestows. That's an important aspect in understanding that the fundamental difference between the covenants has to do with the giving of God's Holy Spirit, and God's Holy Spirit is what makes possible putting the law of God into our hearts and minds.

Other Psalms that we will note in this particular section are Psalm 51 and Psalm 47. Psalm 51 is David's Psalm of repentance. Psalm 47, according to the Sanseno (which is a Jewish commentary), is a focus on God's universal rulership. Psalm 47 is recited in the synagogue before the sounding of the shofar (the ram's horn) on the Feast of Trumpets—a day when the liturgy dwells on the thought of God's universal sovereignty.

We will start out here in Psalm 42. It certainly ties in very directly in terms of the time of Pentecost because it opens up with a deep thirst.

Psalm 42:1-2, "As the deer pants for the water brooks, so pants my soul for You, O God. My soul thirsts for God, for the living God...." The focus at the beginning is on a deep thirst.

You can tie this in with what Jesus told the woman at the well in Samaria.

John 4:10, "Jesus answered and said to her, 'If you knew the gift of God, and who it is who says to you, "Give Me a drink," you would have asked Him, and He would have given you living water.'" She wanted to know from where this living water came (v. 11).

Verses 13-14, "Jesus answered and said to her, 'Whoever drinks of this water will thirst again, but whoever drinks of the water that I shall give him will never thirst. But the water that I shall give him will become in him a fountain of water springing up into everlasting life.” He told her that whoever drank of the water that came from Jacob’s well would get thirsty again, but the water that He had to offer was water that would permanently quench thirst. Now, the water that Jesus made reference to was not just a physical drink of water that would quench a physical thirst. He was talking about the Spirit of God and the deep spiritual thirst.

Psalm 42 opens with this recognition of a deep spiritual thirst, a thirst that can only be fulfilled by God, “My soul thirsts for God, the living God...”

One of the things we note here in Psalm 42 is the extent to which David had to deal with many of the feelings that all of us have to contend with at one time or another. David had to deal with depression and discouragement.

Psalm 42:3, “My tears have been my food day and night, while they continually say to me, ‘Where is your God?’”

Verses 5-6, “Why are you cast down, O my soul? And why are you disquieted within me? [David is verbalizing his feelings.] Hope in God, for I shall yet praise Him for the help of His countenance. O my God, my soul is cast down within me; therefore I will remember You...”

Verse 9, “I will say to God my Rock, ‘Why do I go mourning because of the oppression of the enemy?’” David was discouraged. He was really down. He recognized his need for what only God was the source of or what only God could give. He recognized that what he ultimately needed was God’s Holy Spirit. He needed the quenching of that deep spiritual thirst.

One of the purposes and part of the value of the Psalms is the fact that every gamut of human emotions—from every high to every low, up and down and all the in-betweens—all of these emotions are expressed and verbalized in the Psalms. It’s a good place to go to put into words things that we are feeling and wrestling with and the ways that God’s people are to deal with those feelings. Generally, King David worked through those feelings. He addressed them. He faced and dealt with them. David likened his need for God to a deep intense thirst.

Psalm 43:1, “Vindicate [KJV, “Judge”] me, O God, and plead my cause against an ungodly nation; oh, deliver me from the deceitful and unjust man!” You could certainly parallel this to the cry right at the beginning of the book of Exodus.

Psalm 44:1-3, “We have heard with our ears, O God, our fathers have told us, what deeds You did in their days, in days of old: How You drove out the nations with Your hand, but them You planted; how You afflicted the peoples and cast them out. For they did not gain possession of the land by their own sword, nor did their own arm save them; but it was your right hand, Your arm, and the light of Your countenance, because You favored them.”

Israel didn’t win the Promised Land for themselves. God intervened and gave it to them. This is brought out right here in v. 3.

It’s interesting if you study a little bit of American history. When the early settlers first came to this country, the Pilgrims came to New England. There was a remarkable thing that took place over a period of time. There are two events that took place. First, there were plagues of diseases that swept the American continent, particularly the East Coast, in the fifty years prior to the arrival of the colonial settlement. The Indian population was greatly decimated as a result of this. This occurred even before any of the settlers arrived. There were some major disease epidemics that swept across and greatly lessened the population.

Second, there was a strain of bees that were introduced by the English settlers in New England that mated with the bees here. The Indians called them English hornets. The interesting thing is a really remarkable parallel. These bees migrated about fifty miles west of the colonial settlement. In other words, they were always a little bit ahead in their migration across the continent. It was one of the things that cleared out a great deal of the Indian population in New England. It is a remarkable parallel (Exodus 23:28).

There was a U. S. News & World Report article on the subject two or three months ago. I think I may cover some of those things in a sermon at a later time because there are some very remarkable parallels in terms of how God gave the land.

When you study American History, I think one of the things you find is that our forefathers had far more in common with unconverted Jacob than they did with converted Israel. Remember when Jacob was converted, God changed his name to Israel. God made a promise to Jacob that he was going to give him the birthright blessing. But, you remember, Jacob couldn’t wait for God to do it His way. He didn’t see the answer coming. All he saw was Esau. How was God going to get rid of Esau? Since Jacob didn’t see the answer, he assumed the solution was that he needed to do it. And, of course, he did it. And he brought a lot of penalties, problems and complications down on his life as a result. He did it by trickery, fraud and deceit. God let him keep it because it was God's purpose to give it to him. But there were problems that he had in his later life because he didn't wait for God to give it to him. He "jumped the gun" and decided what he needed to do was sort of maneuver and manipulate and get it on his own.

There are some remarkable parallels with American history. God let us keep it because He promised it to Abraham and it was His purpose to give it to us. When you study American history and some of the dealing that we had, you recognize there's a lot of similarity with unconverted Jacob. Our ancestors had a lot more in common with unconverted Jacob than they did with converted Israel. They thought in some of the same ways and that engendered some of the resultant problems in American history.

There are many parallels in the Scriptures. God's purpose stands even when He's working through human beings who go charging off in their own direction. God is able to work it around and bring His purpose to pass, but there are lessons there for us to learn. When God makes us a promise, it's a lot better to wait and let Him do it His way, rather than decide that maybe God has forgotten or maybe He got preoccupied. So, we had better jump in, maneuver, manipulate and work it out our own way.

All of us certainly want to have more in common with converted Israel than we do with carnal, unconverted Jacob when it comes to the way we live our lives. If we don't, God may let us fall into the hands of "Uncle Laban," like He did Jacob, to get the point across that this is the way it feels to be dealt with—the way you've dealt with other people. God has ways of getting our attention and letting us realize that lesson.

Psalm 44:3 makes a point for Israel to understand that God gave them the land. It was not a matter that they get full credit. It was not because of their greatness but because God intervened.

Coming down, it talks about God's intervention and the fact that God is our source of help.

Psalm 45 is the Psalm that I mentioned earlier that is a celebration of a royal marriage.

Psalm 45:6-7, you might notice, "Your throne, O God, is forever and ever; a scepter of righteousness is the scepter of Your kingdom. You love righteousness and hate wickedness; therefore God, Your God, has anointed You with the oil of gladness more than Your companions." Here is one of the clearest proofs in the Old Testament of the fact that there were two members of the God Family—the Messiah and the One that we know as God the Father. This verse is quoted in Hebrews 1:8-9.

Hebrews 1:4-5, speaking of Jesus Christ, "having become so much better than the angels, as He has by inheritance obtained a more excellent name than they. For to which of the angels did he ever say: 'You are My Son, today I have begotten You?'"

Verses 8-9, "But to the Son He says: 'Your throne, O God, is forever and ever; a scepter of righteousness is the scepter of Your Kingdom.' You have loved righteousness and hated lawlessness; therefore God, Your God, has anointed You with the oil of gladness more than Your companions."

Paul quotes Psalm 45:6-7 in Hebrews 1:8-9 and says very clearly that this is a reference to Jesus Christ. "Your throne O God is forever" and "God, Your God has anointed You with the oil of gladness." The word "Messiah" in the Hebrew is a word that means "the Anointed One"—the One that has been chosen or anointed by God. The word "Christ" is simply our English form of a Greek word that means exactly the same thing—"the Anointed One." This is the term that is used right here. In fact, the term for "Messiah" is exactly what is used here when it says, "God has anointed You." That is actually the term that is used.

In Psalm 46, we focus in on the fact that through difficulty and through calamities God is our Protector.

Psalm 46:1-5, "God is our refuge and strength, a very present help in trouble. Therefore we will not fear, though the earth be removed, and though the mountains be carried into the midst of the sea; though its waters roar and be troubled, though the mountains shake with its swelling, there is a river whose streams shall make glad the city of God, the holy place of the tabernacle of the Most High. God is in the midst of her, she shall not be moved; God shall help her, just at the break of dawn."

This is talking about the fact that God is our refuge and our strength regardless of the problems that are going to come about, regardless of the calamities, difficulties, adversities, tribulation or tremendous cataclysmic events that are prophesied in the end time. It says God is our refuge and our strength. We don't need to fear though the earth be removed and the mountains be carried in the midst of the sea. Regardless of the turmoil—all the chaos and all the things that transpire—we don't have to worry and be filled with anxiety because God is the source of our refuge and our protection.

Psalm 47 is a celebration.

Psalm 47:1-2, "Oh, clap your hands, all you peoples! Shout to God with the voice of triumph! For the Lord Most High is awesome; He is a great King over all the earth."

In v. 3, it talks about him subduing the people.

Verses 7-8, "For God is the King of all the earth...God reigns over the nations; God sits on His holy throne."

Psalm 48:1, "Great is the Lord, and greatly to be praised in the city of our God, in His holy mountain."

As we go through Psalms 46, 47 and 48, it is very clear that God is going to set up a literal government. It is not just some vague feeling in your heart. It is not flitting off to heaven somewhere.

Psalm 46:7-10, "The Lord of hosts is with us; the God of Jacob is our refuge. Come, behold the works of the Lord, who has made desolations in the earth. He makes wars cease to the end of the earth; He breaks the bow and cuts the spear in two; He burns the chariot in the fire. Be still, and know that I am God; I will be exalted among the nations, I will be exalted in the earth!"

Psalm 47:2, "For the Lord Most High is awesome; He is a great King over all the earth."

Verses 7-8, "For God is the King of all the earth...God reigns over the nations [heathens]; God sits on His holy throne."

Psalm 48:1-2, "Great is the Lord, and greatly to be praised in the city of our God, in His holy mountain. Beautiful in elevation, the joy of the whole earth, is Mount Zion on the sides of the north, the city of the great King." Very, very specific statements that all point to the fact of a literal reign by God on the earth from Jerusalem.

A key verse to focus on and be aware of is Psalm 48:14, "For this is God, our God forever and ever, He will be our guide even to death." Or it would be best rendered, "even through death." He is our guide through death. He is our God forever and ever (for eternity) and He will guide us through death.

There are not a lot of references in the Old Testament to the promise of eternal life. There are not a lot of clear direct references. The Sadducees did not accept the doctrine of the resurrection because they didn't think it was clearly taught in the five books of the law. Jesus told them it certainly was because God calls Himself the God of Abraham, Isaac and Jacob (Matthew 22:31-32; Mark 12:26-27), and He made promises to them that are yet to be fulfilled.

Here is a statement in the Psalms that shows that God is going to be our God forever and ever. Then we would have to live forever and ever. He will guide us through death. He will be the One who brings us through.

Psalm 49:1-2, "Hear this, all you peoples; give ear, all you inhabitants of the world, both low and high, rich and poor together."

Verses 6-10, "Those who trust in their wealth and boast in the multitude of their riches, none of them can by any means redeem his brother, nor give to God a ransom for him—for the redemption of their souls is costly, and it shall cease forever—that he should continue to live eternally, and not see the Pit. For he sees that wise men die; likewise the fool and the senseless person perish, and leave their wealth to others."

The point is that it doesn't matter how much money you have, there's one thing that you will never be able to buy your way out of and that is death. People who have enough money can buy their way out of a lot of things. People have bought their way out of trouble and out of the army. People have bought their way out of a lot of different things and bought their way into some things such as a public office. But none of us possess the power or the wherewithal to redeem our souls from death. There isn't anything we can do to buy ourselves back from the grave or to redeem those that are close to us. People have a desire for self-perpetuation. We desire that.

Verse 11, "Their inner thought is that their houses will continue forever, and their dwelling places to all generations; they call their lands after their own names."

People stick their name on things and sort of hope that somehow that's going to perpetuate a memory of them. It doesn't really do the trick. Sooner or later somebody else buys it out, changes the name, and then where are they? But there is that sense and that desire for self-perpetuation. We don't like the idea that somehow we are just "snuffed out." We cease to exist and there isn't any memory or consciousness of us that remains. Our minds rebel at the fact that we just disappear like a blip on the screen and are never around again.

God has set within us a desire for something beyond the life here right now.

Ecclesiastes 3:11, "...He has put eternity in their hearts...." He has given us a sense of time, that sense of the future. He is ultimately the One that is the source of life beyond right now.

Psalm 49:12-15, "Nevertheless man, though in honor, does not remain; he is like the beasts that perish. This is the way of those who are foolish, and of their posterity who approve their sayings. Like sheep they are laid in the grave; death shall feed on them; the upright shall have dominion over them in the morning; and their beauty shall be consumed in the grave, far from their dwelling. But God will redeem my soul from the power of the grave, for He shall receive me." We can't redeem ourselves, but David understood that God would redeem us.

Verses 16-19, "Do not be afraid when one becomes rich, when the glory of his house is increased; for when he dies he shall carry nothing away; his glory shall not descend after him. Though while he lives he blesses himself (For men will praise you when you do well for yourself), he shall go to the generation of his fathers; they shall never see light."

It is a matter that we don't have the power to perpetuate ourselves, but there is a redemption that God offers.

Psalm 50:1, "The Mighty One, God the Lord, has spoken and called the earth from the rising of the sun to its going down."

Verse 14, "Offer to God thanksgiving, and pay your vows to the Most High." This is an answer to the question God says up a little earlier.

Verses 11-15, "I know all the birds of the mountains, and the wild beasts of the field are Mine. If I were hungry, I would not tell you; for the world is Mine, and all its fullness. Will I eat the flesh of bulls, or drink the blood of goats? Offer to God thanksgiving, and pay your vows to the Most High. Call upon Me in the day of trouble; I will deliver you, and you shall glorify Me."

God doesn't need what we have. You don't bribe God. It's not a matter of how many sacrifices you offer. God doesn't need what you have. He doesn't need what I have. God doesn't need anything and if He did, He wouldn't have to borrow it from us.

You see some of these television preachers and you think God is on the verge of a giant liquidation sale. He's going to have to hang a going-out-of-business sign on the Pearly Gates if you don't hurry up and send in a little cash. That's not the case.

What does God want? Does God want or simply need what we have? No. You know what God says He wants? "Offer unto God thanksgiving and pay your vows unto the Most High." In other words, keep your word, do what you're supposed to do. Be thankful and appreciative, and then you can call on God when you are in trouble. It's not a matter of "cutting a deal" with God or trying to bribe God by what you give. God says that it's simply a matter of being thankful to Him, being appreciative, recognizing that He's the source of everything and be thankful. Pay your vows unto the Most High. Do what you said you would do. For those of us who have been baptized, what did you say you would do? You said you would surrender your life and your will to God, that you would unconditionally surrender to God and that you wanted Jesus Christ to live His life in you.

In that sense, we made a vow to God. What God wants is for us to simply follow through on what we've said—not to have this sort of pagan idea of sort of appeasing God by giving Him something. God doesn't want what you have. God wants you. He wants me. He wants us, our lives, our hearts, our minds—not just a little bit of what we may happen to have. Because everything we have, He gave it to us to begin with. It's all His.

Psalm 51 is David's Psalm of repentance, a very key Psalm.

One point that I think is important to understand and that is basic to repentance is that the natural human response, when confronted with sin, is either denial or blame it on somebody else—sort of "pass the buck." Go back to Genesis and in the first couple of accounts we have tells us that. God asked Cain, 'Where is your brother?' Cain said, 'How should I know? Am I my brother's keeper?' Did Cain know where his brother was? Well, of course, he did. His brother was where he left him. He had just knocked him in the head with a club. Cain sought to deny it. His first response was to deny it. He tried to make out like he didn't know anything about it. That's human nature. That's generally what happens.

When a politician gets accused of something, the first thing he does is deny it. If the denial doesn't "wash," then he finds somebody to blame it on. That's not just unique to politicians. You and I probably have done that a time or two.

What did Adam and Eve do? God asked Adam, 'Did you eat of the fruit of the tree I told you not to?' That's just a "yes" or "no" question. All you have to do is say "yes" or "no, I didn't." Adam didn't say "yes" and he didn't say "no." He said, 'Well, now, the woman that You gave me, she took of the fruit of the tree and did eat. She gave me some and I kind of took a little bite, also.' He kind of tagged that onto the end. You know, “pass the buck.” Eve did the same thing. He asked Eve, ‘Is that so?’ She said, ‘Well, the serpent, he beguiled me. I was tricked. It’s not my fault.’

Those are the normal carnal reactions when we are confronted with sin. We try to deny it. We try to make excuses or try to find somebody to blame it on.

If you read Psalm 51, David didn’t do any of those things, and that is the reason he was a man after God’s own heart (Acts 13:22). When you go through what David had to say, there isn’t any mention where David said, ‘Well, God, don’t You think You’re being a little bit hard on me? After all, haven’t other people done something just as bad, and I don’t see where they got into as much trouble as I did. Why am I the one that’s getting all the “chewing out”?’ You haven’t said anything to Bathsheba, and, after all, if she hadn’t been out there on that roof taking a bath, well, this never would have happened.’

Where’s the excuse? David didn’t blame anybody else. He didn’t blame Bathsheba. He didn’t say, ‘It was her husband’s fault. He was a lousy husband. If he hadn’t been the way he was, well, this never would have happened.’ He offered no excuses. He took responsibility, and this is a key because it goes against the grain of human nature.

When we are confronted with sin, our normal response is the response that Adam and Eve had. After all, they are our first parents and they set the pattern. That’s human nature. God doesn’t tell you how everybody responded every time they were confronted with sin, but He tells you how the first people responded because they set a pattern typical of humanity. God wants us to see. He gives us the illustration because He wants us to see that this is the way it looks and this is the way it sounds.

Psalm 51:1-5, but David said, “Have mercy upon me, O God, according to Your loving kindness; according to the multitude of Your tender mercies, blot out my transgressions. Wash me thoroughly from my iniquity, and cleanse me from my sin. For I acknowledge my transgressions, and my sin is ever before me. Against You, You only, have I sinned, and done this evil in Your sight—that You may be found just when You speak, and blameless when You judge. Behold, I was brought forth in iniquity, and in sin my mother conceived me.”

He is not talking about the Catholic doctrine of original sin. This is a poetic expression saying, ‘I am a sinner inside out. I’m a sinner from the beginning—that’s just a part of me.’

Verse 7, he said, “Purge me with hyssop, and I shall be clean; wash me, and I shall be whiter than snow.”

Verses 9-10, “Hide Your face from my sins, and blot out all my iniquities. Create in me a clean heart, O God, and renew a steadfast spirit within me.” David acknowledged his sin. He recognized that sin is ultimately against God. When we sin, there may have been another person who has been wronged by our sin but all sin is ultimately against God.

Another thing that we notice about David is that he acknowledged his sin. He faced it and he didn’t offer excuses. But neither did David have the Catholic concept of penance. David threw himself on God’s mercy, but he stood ready to accept God’s forgiveness. Some people go around under this cloud of guilt and kind of beat themselves up. They never go beyond it.

David asked God, vv. 10-13, “Create in me a clean heart, O God, and renew a steadfast spirit within me. Do not cast me away from Your presence, and do not take Your Holy Spirit from me. Restore to me the joy of Your salvation, and uphold me with Your generous Spirit. Then I will teach transgressors Your ways, and sinners shall be converted to You.”

David said, “Restore to me the joy of Your salvation.” David didn’t want to just wallow around in some sort of pseudo-guilt for the rest of his life. He acknowledged his sin. He faced it. He went to God to deal with it. He went to God for forgiveness and for deliverance. He asked God to renew within him the joy of His salvation—to go forward.

God does not want penance. He wants repentance. You have to understand that the Catholic doctrine of penance goes back to a pagan concept where you can atone for your own sin through your own suffering. If that’s so, then why did Christ have to come and die? You could be your own savior if that were the case. It’s an important concept to understand. God isn’t interested in your penance. He is interested in your repentance. He is interested in your turning around and going the other direction.

Psalm 52:8-9, “But I am like a green olive tree in the house of God; I trust in the mercy of God forever and ever. I will praise You forever, because You have done it; and in the presence of Your saints I will wait on Your name, for it is good.”

Psalm 53:1, “The fool has said in his heart, ‘There is no God.’....” Anybody who’s come to that conclusion, God says that's just foolish. Only a fool says in his heart, 'There is no God.' It describes this particular process and way of thinking.

Psalm 54:1-2, "Save me, O God, by Your name, and vindicate me by Your strength. Hear my prayer, O God; give ear to the words of my mouth."

Verse 4, "Behold, God is my helper; the Lord is with those who uphold my life."

In Psalm 55, David recognized that God is our Deliverer. Notice the context.

Psalm 55:1-6, "Give ear to my prayer, O God, and do not hide Yourself from my supplication. Attend to me, and hear me; I am restless in my complaint, and moan noisily, because of the voice of the enemy, because of the oppression of the wicked; for they bring down trouble upon me, and in wrath they hate me. My heart is severely pained within me, and the terrors of death have fallen upon me. Fearfulness and trembling have come upon me, and horror has overwhelmed me (KJV, margin, "covered me"). And I said, 'Oh, that I had wings like a dove! For then I would fly away and be at rest.'"

Have you ever gotten to the point that you wish you could sprout wings and fly away because you were at the end of your rope? David felt like that. "Fearfulness and trembling have come upon me, and horror has overwhelmed me." David said, 'It just covered me up. I'm just overwhelmed as a result of fear and turmoil, and I just wish I could sprout wings and fly away from it all.'

Verse 7, "'Indeed, I would wander far off, and remain in the wilderness.'" He said, 'I would get far away from here. If I could sprout wings and fly away like a dove, I would go as far out into the wilderness as I could get.'

Verse 8, "'I would hasten my escape from the windy storm and tempest.'" David said, 'I would get away from here.' Since he couldn't do that, what was he going to do?

Verses 16-17, "As for me, I will call upon God, and the Lord shall save me. Evening and morning and at noon I will pray, and cry aloud, and He shall hear my voice." Since sprouting wings wasn't an alternative, what was he going to do? He said he was going to go to God. He was going to call on God and he knew that the Lord will save him. He was going to draw close to God. He would pray to God in the evening, in the morning and at noon. He was going to pray and cry aloud. He was going to really beseech God.

Here's the key and here is a part of how David worked through some of those things.

Verses 22-23, "Cast your burden on the Lord, and He shall sustain you; He shall never permit the righteous to be moved. But You, O God, shall bring them down to the pit of destruction; bloodthirsty and deceitful men shall not live out half their days; But I will trust in You." God is ultimately going to deal with everybody. He says, "Cast your burden on the Lord and He shall sustain you."

When you are in the kind of condition David is talking about, the key is to turn it over to God. Go to God, draw near to God in prayer and cast your burden on Him. Turn loose of it and give it to Him.

Psalm 121:4 says, "He that keeps Israel shall neither slumber nor sleep." You know, there's no point for you to stay up all night worrying about something. Since God's already staying up, you might as well go to sleep. He is going to be up anyway. "He that keeps Israel shall neither slumber nor sleep." God is going to be up all night anyway. You might as well go to bed and get some rest. Give it to Him. Cast your burden upon Him. Sometimes we feel the need because we are afraid He is going to go to sleep. So, we had better stay up and worry about it because who's going to be tending to it. As though, somehow, staying up worrying, fretting and wringing our hands is going to solve it.

I understand it is hard to work through and actually put that into practice. But when you go through some of these Psalms and realize the things that David experienced and had to work through, it can be very helpful to focus in on certain ones like this when you are really bogged down with things.

Psalm 56:1-3, "Be merciful to me, O God, for man would swallow me up; fighting all day he oppresses me. My enemies would hound me all day, for there are many who fight against me, O Most High. Whenever I am afraid, I will trust in You." Have you ever felt like you were surrounded? You are surrounded like Davy Crockett at the Alamo, or something, and you think you are just going to be swallowed up. David didn't say he wasn't afraid. He said, "Whenever I am afraid, I will trust in You."

Verses 4-6, "In God (I will praise His word), in God I have put my trust; I will not fear. What can flesh do to me? All day they twist my words; all their thoughts are against me for evil. They gather together, they hide, they mark my steps, when they lie in wait for my life."

They are creeping around and trying to trip us up. They are trying to twist what you say. David understood that. He knew what it was like to have people trying to gang up on him and get him in trouble. Maybe you are going through something like that on the job or have gone through this at one time or another.

David goes through and talks about that.

Verse 9, "When I cry out to You, then my enemies will turn back; this I know, because God is for me."

Verse 11, "In God I have put my trust; I will not be afraid. What can man do to me?"

Verse 13, "For You have delivered my soul from death. Have You not delivered my feet from falling, that I may walk before God in the light of the living?" "I know that God will be our Deliverer."

Psalm 57:1, "Be merciful to me, O God, be merciful to me! For my soul trusts in You; and in the shadow of Your wings I will make my refuge, until these calamities have passed by." God describes Himself as a place of refuge. He is our source of refuge. It is an allusion to God's protection for His people in times of trouble, particularly in the time of the Great Tribulation when Christ said we are going to look to God and pray that we will be delivered out of that. If we are close to God, we can be.

In Psalm 58, He talks about how the wicked and various ones are out to get him.

Psalm 59:1-2, "Deliver me from my enemies, O my God; defend me from those who rise up against me. Deliver me from the workers of iniquity, and save me from bloodthirsty men."

Psalm 60:1, "O God, You have cast us off; You have broken us down; You have been displeased; Oh, restore us again!" He is talking about the correction that God has to give.

Verses 2-4, "You have made the earth tremble; You have broken it; heal its breaches, for it is shaking. You have shown Your people hard things; You have made us drink the wine of confusion. You have given a banner to those who fear You, that it may be displayed because of the truth."

Verses 6-7, "God has spoken in His holiness: 'I will rejoice; I will divide Shechem and measure out the Valley of Succoth. Gilead is Mine, and Manasseh is Mine; Ephraim also is the helmet for My head; Judah is My lawgiver.'" Here is a specific reference to certain tribes of Israel and certainly to the tribes that are going to stand out as leading nations in the Millennium.

Let's notice. Manasseh, Ephraim and Judah are specifically singled out. Gilead is a poetic term for Reuben because Reuben dwelt on the east side of the Jordan River in the land of Gilead. So, basically, He focuses in on the French, the Americans, the British and the Jewish people as being the nations that He is going to work through in a very special way. He is certainly going to work through Israel. He will be using Israel as a tool to deal with all of the Gentile nations. Those four of the great tribes of Israel are going to be the ones that sort of stand out in that way. It's an allusion to that. The time setting is clearly referring to the time when God is setting up His Kingdom on earth.

Psalm 61:1, "Hear my cry, O God; attend to my prayer."

Psalm 62:1-2, "Truly my soul silently waits for God; from Him comes my salvation. He only is my rock and my salvation; He is my defense; I shall not be greatly moved."

Verses 5-6, "My soul, wait silently for God alone, for my expectation is from Him. He only is my rock and my salvation; He is my defense; I shall not be moved." God is the source of our stability.

Psalm 63:1, "O God, You are my God; early will I seek You; my soul thirsts for You; my flesh longs for You in a dry and thirsty land where there is no water." Here is a clear reference to our need for God. It, again, likens our need for God's Holy Spirit to a thirsty person out in a desert who really craves that water. "You are my God; early will I seek You" alludes to the fact that early in the morning is a good time to focus in on our prayer. So, start off in the morning by going to God and really drawing close to God.

Verse 6, "When I remember You on my bed I meditate on You in the night watches."

The evening is also a time for prayer. But the difference is that in the evening, at the end of the day, it's a time to think back reflectively on the day. It is time for meditation. It's a time for contemplation and meditation on the events of the day and going to God for help, for forgiveness and for thanksgiving. It makes a distinction in, let's say, even the types of prayer. There is one type that is mentioned in the evening and another type mentioned in the morning. Evenings are a good time to meditate and reflect.

We miss out so much in our urban society. Most of us have occasion to be out in the country from time to time; a lot of us grew up in it. One thing always impresses me anew every time I go up to visit my mother. She lives way out in the country and there aren't any city lights or anything around there. There's not much light and the lights are all turned off by very late at night. The thing that is so impressive is that when I look up at the sky, I find that I have forgotten how many stars there are. If you look up in the sky in Baton Rouge, you see a few stars and think, 'This is a beautiful night with beautiful stars.'

Some of you have been on our father-son/daughter campout out there on the levee of the Atchafalaya River where there aren't any lights around. When the campfire goes down, that's it. If it's a clear night, you look up and it's just incredible. It's like the sky has just exploded with stars. We live in sort of an urban environment or at least semi-urban, and there's so much diffused light around. Even in the perimeters of a semi-urban area, you really don't see the night sky as clearly as you can in a few remote areas. When you do see it, particularly in all of its glory, it just simply puts you in a frame of mind to meditate.

It's the difference between David sitting out in the field watching over the sheep by night, looking up at the sky and being just overwhelmed with the greatness and the magnitude of God, and somebody in our society who, instead of doing that, are propped up in the chair watching television impressed with the greatness and magnitude of man. It's sort of the contrast. I am not saying you shouldn't ever watch a show on television. That's not the point. I am just saying we live in a society where we tend to be removed from that.

God designed the evenings as a time to meditate and contemplate. It's just the natural order of things with all the stars and the way that God designed the evening. He designed it as a time that would be a contemplative time—a time at the close of the day when focusing in on the magnitude of God's greatness and power puts you in a meditative and contemplative frame of mind. I suspect that most of us feel that way when we have opportunity to find ourselves out like that. Most of us don't have that opportunity all that often. It's a wonderful thing to take a walk out at night and look up at the night sky. There's just a special feeling there.

David describes that a little bit here. It's something that we should take advantage of because I think that's one of the reasons why we live in such a faithless age. I really think we do, and I think most of us have to acknowledge that if we think about it.

Christ made reference to it in Luke 18:8, "...when the Son of Man comes, will He really find faith on the earth?" I think one of the reasons is because we live in a society that revolves so much around what man can do. We find ourselves so impressed with man that we lose sight of God. God, somehow, seems far off and unreal, and what man can do seems awfully close and awfully impressive. It's hard for us to have the outlook and the perspective that many of the men and women of an earlier time had. We need to strive to get a perspective that helps us focus in on what's real, what's permanent and what's really important.

Psalm 64:1-3, "Hear my voice, O God, in my meditation; preserve my life from fear of the enemy. Hide me from the secret counsel of the wicked, from the insurrection of the workers of iniquity, who sharpen their tongue like a sword, and bend their bows to shoot their arrows—bitter words." Have you ever felt like people were sort of whetting their tongue like a sword? I mean they might as well have gotten out the whetstone. They were sharpening up to go after you. Well, David felt like that and he describes it in a very poetic way. It's like they got out the bow and arrow and were shooting bitter words at you.

Verse 10, David went to God realizing, "The righteous shall be glad in the Lord, and trust in Him. And all the upright in heart shall glory."

Psalm 65:1, "Praise is awaiting You, O God, in Zion; and to You the vow shall be performed."

Verse 4, "Blessed is the man whom You choose, and cause to approach You, that he may dwell in Your courts..." Here is a reference to the fact that God has to call. "Blessed is the man whom You choose and cause to approach You." God is the One who chooses and enables us to approach Him. "...that he may dwell in Your courts." Again, it's a reference to God's power and His blessing.

Psalm 66:1-2, "Make a joyful shout to God, all the earth! Sing out the honor of His name; make His praise glorious."

Verse 4, "All the earth shall worship You and sing praises to You; they shall sing praises to Your name."

Verse 7, "He rules by His power forever; His eyes observes the nations..."

Psalm 67:1-2, "God be merciful to us and bless us, and cause His face to shine upon us. That Your way may be known on earth, Your salvation among all nations."

Psalm 68 is sometimes called the Pentecost anthem. It is traditionally read in the synagogues on Pentecost. Many of the events here are considered as descriptive of the events of Mount Sinai.

Psalm 68:8, “The earth shook; the heavens also dropped rain at the presence of God; Sinai itself was moved at the presence of God, the God of Israel.” Of course, God thundered the Ten Commandments on Mount Sinai that first Pentecost day, and the mountain quaked and shook and the smoke arose (Exodus 19:16-20).

One point to notice in vv. 5-6, “A father of the fatherless, a defender of widows, is God in His holy habitation. God sets the solitary in families; He brings out those who are bound into prosperity; but the rebellious dwell in a dry land.”

God views Himself as the special Protector of those who are unable to protect themselves, particularly the fatherless and the widow. There are people who like to make a prey of those who are helpless and defenseless. There are con men that make a special prey of the elderly and things of that sort. There is a special reckoning waiting. I don't know exactly what, but God says that He considers Himself, in a very special way, as a Father to the fatherless and a judge of the widows.

I don't want to advise you to take advantage of anybody, but your worst bet is to take advantage of the fatherless and the widow. You shouldn't pick on anybody, but if you are going to pick on somebody, you had better pick on somebody else because you're picking on God in a special way. One of the things that God absolutely hates is this cowardly attitude of people who would take advantage of those who are the most helpless and defenseless. That is the most cowardly and contemptible thing; God really hates that sort of attitude and mindset.

He makes a reference that, in one sense, I think is fulfilled, at least in type, in the Church. It's going to be fulfilled in Tomorrow's World when Christ returns and you have the survivors of the concentration camps. It says, “God sets the solitary in families....” God places those who remain in families (one here and one there). That's the way it will be dealt with. God will set in families little children who have survived some of these terrible traumas.

And even today, sometimes people are alone when they come into the Church or they're the only one in their family that comes into the Church. There is a family relationship in the Church. God, in many ways, sets the solitary in families in the Church today. A lot of you came into the Church and in some of your cases, you came in and were by yourself. It wasn't long before other people were taking an interest in you. God put you in a family context.

Verse 18, “You have ascended on high, You have led captivity captive; You have received gifts among men, even among the rebellious, that the Lord God might dwell there.”

Hold your place there. Let's go to Ephesians and you will see that this is quoted and explained.

Ephesians 4:8, “Therefore He says: ‘When He ascended on high, He led captivity captive, and gave gifts to men.’” What is that talking about? It is talking about Jesus Christ. He ascended upon high. He led captivity captive. Well, He ascended to heaven. What is the greatest captivity of all? The greatest captivity of all is death and the grave. That's the captivity that nobody has ever been able to escape.

People have escaped from jail or escaped from exile. Napoleon escaped from the British exile. He got away. He came back and that didn't last too long. They exiled him again. All kinds of people have escaped from various things, but there is one captivity that nobody has ever escaped from and that's death. That is the ultimate captivity.

That's the captivity that Christ triumphed over because He conquered death. He led captivity captive. He triumphed over death when He was resurrected by the power of God. He ascended upon high. He led captivity captive and gave gifts unto men, which is a reference to the Holy Spirit and to the various manifestations of it—many of which are enumerated in Ephesians 4. “And gave gifts to men” is a reference to the outpouring of the gifts of the Spirit that came on the Day of Pentecost and was the result of Christ ascending upon high.

John 16:7, he told the disciples, “Nevertheless I tell you the truth. It is to your advantage that I go away; for if I do not go away, the Helper will not come to you; but if I depart, I will send [It] to you.” There was going to be a special thing that would come. This is in the context of Psalm 68, the so-called Pentecost anthem.

Psalm 68:19, “Blessed be the Lord, who daily loads us with benefits, the God of our salvation!” This is a description of God's greatness and His power.

Several references in Psalm 69 are prophetic of Jesus Christ.

Psalm 69:4, “Those who hate me without a cause are more than the hairs of my head; they are mighty who would destroy me....” This is quoted in John 15:25.

Verse 8, “I have become a stranger to my brothers, and an alien to my mother's children.” This is quoted in John 7:5.

Verse 9, "Because zeal for Your house has eaten me up, and the reproaches of those who reproach You have fallen on me." This is quoted in John 2:17.

Verse 19, "You know my reproach, my shame and my dishonor; my adversaries are all before You." This is quoted in Matthew 27:29. All these references are references of Christ.

Verse 20, "Reproach has broken my heart, and I am full of heaviness; I looked for someone to take pity, but there was none; and for comforters, but I found none." This is referred to in Matthew 26:37-38.

Verse 21, "They also gave me gall for my food, and for my thirst they gave me vinegar to drink." This is a reference to the crucifixion in Matthew 27:34, 48.

Verse 25, "Let their habitation be desolate; let no one dwell in their tents." This is quoted in Acts 1:20. There is a great deal of the content of Psalm 69 that is quoted in the New Testament as prophetic of Jesus Christ and the thoughts and experiences that He had. A lot of things, if you just read it in the context, call your attention to that.

Psalm 70:1-3, "Make haste, O God, to deliver me! Make haste to help me, O Lord! Let them be ashamed and confounded who seek my life; let them be turned back and confused who desire my hurt. Let them be turned back...." This is a reference to the fact that God is our Deliverer.

Psalm 71:1-2, "In You, O Lord, I put my trust; let me never be put to shame. Deliver me in Your righteousness, and cause me to escape; Incline Your ear to me, and save me." The whole theme of Psalm 71 is trusting God for deliverance.

The psalmist is pictured in his old age as still looking to God for help in the midst of trials.

Verses 17-18, "O God, You have taught me from my youth; and to this day I declare Your wondrous works. Now also when I am old and gray-headed, O God, do not forsake me, until I declare Your strength to this generation, Your power to everyone who is to come."

Verses 20-21, "You, who have shown me great and severe troubles, shall revive me again, and bring me up again from the depths of the earth. You shall increase my greatness, and comfort me on every side." It is a reference to God's deliverance and trusting for deliverance.

Psalm 72 is the last Psalm in this section.

Psalm 72:1-4, "Give the king Your judgments, O God, and Your righteousness to the king's Son. He will judge Your people with righteousness, and Your poor with justice. The mountains will bring peace to the people, and the little hills, by righteousness. He will bring justice to the poor of the people; He will save the children of the needy, and will break in pieces the oppressor."

As you go through, this is clearly a reference to the Millennium and to Jesus Christ's reign.

Verses 7-8, "In His days the righteous shall flourish, and abundance of peace, until the moon is no more. He shall have dominion also from sea to sea, and from the River to the ends of the earth."

Verse 11, "Yes, all kings shall fall down before Him; all nations shall serve Him." This is clearly a reference to Christ.

But notice in v. 4, "He will bring justice to the poor of the people; He will save the children of the needy, and will break in pieces the oppressor."

Verses 12-14, "For He will deliver the needy when he cries, the poor also, and him who has no helper. He will spare the poor and needy, and will save the souls of the needy. He will redeem their life from oppression and violence; and precious shall be their blood in His sight." Do you think there isn't going to be any problems in Tomorrow's World, in the Millennium? Do you think there won't ever be anybody who's poor or needy or anybody that needs to be redeemed from deceit and violence—particularly in the early part of the Millennium?

The point is that when Christ comes back, He's not just going to snap His fingers and all of a sudden the sun is shining, the birds are singing and everybody's happy and everybody loves everybody. There are things that are going to have to be dealt with, and there are real problems and real people. Progress will be made, but as long as we are dealing with physical human beings, we are going to be dealing with physical human beings and the mistakes, problems and difficulties that come up. Now, certainly, when Satan isn't there to stir up trouble, things will be a whole lot better. As generations go by, there should be significant improvement.

Psalm 72, when taken in context, is clearly a reference to the Millennium. It is a reference to the fact that, yes, there is going to be real problems. There are things that need to be dealt with and problems that need to be addressed.

Psalm 72 ends with vv. 18-20, "Blessed be the Lord God, the God of Israel, who only does wondrous things! And blessed be His glorious name forever! And let the whole earth be filled with His glory. Amen and Amen. The prayers of David the son of Jesse are ended."

Psalm 72 is not the last Psalm written by David in the numerical order of the Psalms. You could look at Psalm 103, for instance, and others that are said to be Psalms of David, but the first seventy-two Psalms constituted the original canon of the book of Psalms.

King David divided the Levites into twenty-four courses that were to rotate their service in the temple for two weeks a year, plus the Festivals. With 72 Psalms, each course would sing three Psalms—3 x 24 is 72. This would enable the whole book to be rotated through in a year in terms of the liturgy.

I'll call your attention to v. 20, "The prayers of David the son of Jesse are ended."

Notice in Psalm 73 what it says in little letters under "A Psalm of Asaph."

Psalm 74, "A Contemplation [Maschil] of Asaph."

Psalm 75, "A Psalm of Asaph."

Psalm 76 and Psalm 77, "A Psalm of Asaph."

Notice that, and then let's go back to II Chronicles and the time of great revival under King Hezekiah when the temple was refurbished and everything was reordered.

II Chronicles 29:25, "Then he [Hezekiah] stationed the Levites in the house of the Lord with cymbals, with stringed instruments, and with harps, according to the commandment of David, of Gad the king's seer, and of Nathan the prophet; for thus was the commandment of the Lord by his prophets." He organized them into the twenty-four courses that David had established. David organized them into twenty-four courses because the Levite population increased and there were too many serving in the tabernacle precinct.

When Moses organized the Levites (the priests, the sons of Aaron) in the wilderness, there weren't very many. Population increased and it finally got to where you couldn't get them all into the tabernacle precincts. There were so many of them that you could hardly "stir them with a stick," if you tried to get them all in there and functioning. They were all getting in each other's way.

So, David organized it. They would all perform the functions of the temple, but they would rotate them through. They organized them into twenty-four courses based on family groupings. Everybody served two weeks at a time, and then they were all there for the Festival periods. Twenty-four courses serving two weeks out of the year makes forty-eight weeks; then you add in the Festival periods and you finish out the rest of the year.

Hezekiah re-organized that.

Verse 30, "Moreover King Hezekiah and the leaders commanded the Levites to sing praise to the Lord with the words of David and of Asaph the seer. So they sang praises with gladness, and they bowed their heads and worshiped."

It was at the time of King Hezekiah that the Psalms of Asaph were added to the canon. There were other Psalms that existed, but David prepared the first seventy-two Psalms organized as the book of Psalms that was originally given to the Levites.

Later on, when Hezekiah reorganized things, there were additional Psalms that were added and the book of Psalms was expanded.

Several years ago, we went through a Bible study on the canonization of Scripture and how we came to have the Bible. I call your attention to that since we are here at the end of Psalm 72.

There's an awful lot packed into the Psalms, and we are just touching on the high points. We can only hit the high points in a Bible study series like this, but I hope that it will be an incentive for you to go back and study it. Look into it and study some of these sections of Scripture more deeply because God has packed so much into this Book, the Bible. God has packed so much in there that is profitable and beneficial for all of us. So, let's take advantage of this. Hopefully this series of Bible studies won't be a stopping point for your study of God's Word, but it will simply be a starting point, a jumping off point to explore God's Word even more deeply.

We will pass out the questions on the next section of the Psalms—Book Three of Psalms—Psalms 73—89. We will cover that next Bible study.

The Writings Series—Book Three—Psalms
73—89

This evening we are going through Psalms 73—89, known as Book Three of Psalms. We have noted, in our progression through the Psalms, the extent to which there is a correlation between the five books of the Psalms with the five books of the Torah (the Law), as well as with the five Festival Scrolls and the festival occasions on which those scrolls were read.

The section of the Torah that correlates with this third book of the Psalms is the book of Leviticus. The third of the Festival Scrolls is the book of Lamentations, read at the national holiday of the fast of Ob, which commemorated the destruction of the temple and the destruction of Jerusalem. It is interesting because there is a great deal of correlation in Leviticus and Lamentations with this book of Psalms—some of which we want to note.

Let's just note the very beginning of Psalm 73. Psalm 73 sort of sets the theme for this section of the Psalms. We have the theme that is emphasized in each of the sections, and the first Psalm of this section tends to indicate the theme of obedience and avoidance of unclean conduct.

Psalm 73:1, "Truly God is good to Israel, to such as are pure in heart."

Before we go any further, let's think in terms of the book of Leviticus. The book of Leviticus was written to the Levites as instruction to the Levitical priesthood. What does it deal with? It is filled with instruction on holiness and cleanness. There is a very distinct correlation between cleanness and holiness. It is one that we need to understand because there are spiritual lessons and spiritual ramifications. We are told in several places in the Old Testament that the responsibility of the priesthood was to teach the people to make a distinction between the clean and the unclean, the holy and the profane.

This is what we are told in Ezekiel 44:15, 23-24, when we're told of the job of the priesthood. There are other places that mention it as well, but that's what the job of the priesthood "boils down" to. They were responsible to teach the people to distinguish between the clean and the unclean, between the holy and the profane. There was to be a distinction made.

In the book of Leviticus, we have many instructions that deal with cleanness. We have the laws of clean and unclean meat. We have numerous laws that deal with sanitation and hygiene. There are laws that deal with the contaminating effect of contagious disease and with various things of that sort. We look at it and recognize it as legislation relating to sanitation and hygiene—and, yes, it does.

If those principles were applied, particularly in many of the third world areas that are wracked by such horrible disease problems, they would be far better off just from a purely physical, sanitary, hygienic standpoint. They would learn that you don't dump raw sewage in the streets. We sort of take that for granted, but if you were to look at certain areas of Central and South America and certain areas of Africa and Asia, you would find that what we sort of take for granted is not universally taken for granted.

There are laws relating to washing. If people touched something that died of itself, they had to go outside the camp and were unclean until evening. What it amounted to is that they had to wash their clothes and take a bath before they came back. If you had to wash your clothes and take a bath the way they did, it would take you until evening to get it tended to. It was not the simple matter that some of these things are today.

There is certainly a sanitary and hygienic point. I am not taking away from that in relating to clean and unclean meats. But when you read the way it is emphasized in the book of Leviticus, one thing that becomes apparent is that there is more than simply what is necessary for sanitation and hygienic purposes. There is an emphasis on cleanness in the physical realm that carries over to cleanness in the spiritual realm. There are spiritual lessons to be derived from physical things.

There is a specific example in Deuteronomy, but it parallels much of the legislation in Leviticus. There is the statement in Deuteronomy regarding the disposal of body wastes. People in the camp of Israel were to go outside of the camp; they were to dig a hole and bury the waste matter. It was not simply dumped some place there in the camp. Obviously, from a sanitary standpoint, this is going to solve an awful lot of disease problems. But it goes beyond that because in Deuteronomy, it gave a reason why they were to do that. It didn't say that no diseases would come among them, but it is a physical benefit.

It gives the reason in Deuteronomy as to why they were to do it.

Deuteronomy 23:14, “For the Lord your God walks in the midst of your camp, to deliver you and give your enemies over to you; therefore your camp shall be holy [You are to do this.] that He may see no unclean thing among you, and turn away from you.”

The emphasis was that God is there. God is walking up and down in the midst of the camp and God does not dwell in the midst of uncleanness. This was the emphasis. Over and over it was emphasized in the book of Leviticus that they were to be clean because they were a holy people. Now, let’s understand the relationship between cleanliness and holiness.

Holiness is something that can only be imparted by God. God is holy. Where God puts and places His presence is holy. That’s why the area around the burning bush was holy ground (Exodus 3:1-5). What made it holy? God was there. The Holy Place in the temple and the Holy of Holies were holy because of the proximity to God and the presence of God. The point is that God is holy and God does not dwell in the midst of uncleanness.

We see instruction on cleanness in the book of Leviticus because God was going to dwell among them and be their God. The point we have to understand is that the Levites were to teach that lesson to the people. They were to teach them to distinguish between the clean and the unclean, the holy and the profane.

Now, if God would not dwell in the midst of physical uncleanness in ancient Israel, how much less would He dwell in the midst of spiritual uncleanness in His people and His Church today? God does not dwell in the midst of uncleanness. God does not dwell in the midst of what is unclean.

There is symbolism in terms of baptism. It’s not just a matter of happenstance that the ceremony of baptism is carried out the way it is. We don’t ever reverse the order. We don’t lay hands on people and then baptize them. We always do it the other way, following the Biblical example. There is a spiritual lesson that is taught. When you go into the waters of baptism, this is symbolic of washing away sin. First, you have to be clean. Then God will dwell within you and make you holy. You can’t make yourself holy. God’s presence makes you holy.

We are told to remember the Sabbath day and to keep it holy. You can’t keep Sunday holy because God hasn’t made it holy. You can’t keep Sunday holy any more than you can keep cold water hot. If you are going to keep something, you keep it in the state that it is. You can keep and maintain it in a particular state, but unless you have the ability to impart that state to it, then you can only keep it the way it is. You and I cannot make something holy.

God tells us that He will dwell in us. Our bodies become the temple of His Holy Spirit (I Corinthians 6:19). We become holy.

The word “saint” in both the Hebrew in the Old Testament and the Greek in the New Testament means the same thing. “Saint” simply means “a holy one.” Maybe you’ve never thought of yourself as a holy one. Why are you holy? What makes you holy? God’s presence in us is the only thing that makes any of us holy. God’s Holy Spirit imparts holiness to us. When God dwells in us through the power of His Spirit, we become set apart as holy, set apart as a saint of the Most High.

Ultimately, Daniel 7:18, “...the saints of the Most High shall receive the Kingdom and possess the kingdom forever, even forever and ever.””

The saints of the Most High are those made holy by God’s indwelling presence. God dwells in us, and imparts His presence to us. We become a new creation at the time of baptism and the receiving of His Spirit. But God continues to renew the inward man. We are renewed and transformed by the renewing of our mind in an ongoing basis of the Christian life.

At the resurrection, there is a culmination of that process when this mortal shall put on immortality. We are a part of God’s Family now, but not in the full sense that we will be because, right now, we are still human beings. We are still flesh and blood. We are still subject to death and decay. We have human nature that we have to fight. But there is a culmination to the conversion process that will occur at the resurrection.

That’s when the saints of the Most High (those made holy by God) will take and possess the Kingdom. We won’t have all the political chicanery. Christ is not going to run for election. It’s not going to work that way. Who’s going to be in charge? It is going to be Jesus Christ. He is going to take charge and give responsibility—to share with Him—to those who are the saints of the Most High. They had to ultimately learn to make a distinction between the clean and the unclean, the holy and the profane.

Psalms 73:1, “Truly God is good to Israel, to such as are pure in heart.”

David prayed in Psalms 51:10, “Create in me a clean heart, O God, and renew a steadfast spirit within me.”

Verse 7, he asked God to purge him and clean him up.

The book of Leviticus places an emphasis on cleanness as a prerequisite to holiness. Holiness and cleanness go hand-in-hand together. That carries over into conduct, then to obedience and then to avoidance of unclean conduct.

There's a great correlation of what happened when the Levites failed in their responsibility to transmit and to really impart to the people a clear sense of distinction between the holy and the profane, the clean and the unclean. What was the result? The result was the curses that were mentioned in Leviticus and the destruction of the temple.

It's interesting how God builds things in. If the Levites had faithfully taught and instructed the people in God's way, they certainly would have been blessed for that. After all, the people were supposed to tithe to the Levites, so the Levites would have been rewarded. God believes in being rewarded according to your work (Revelation 22:12). That is a Biblical principle. A laborer is worthy of his hire (Luke 10:7). The Levites would certainly have been rewarded with the tithe of the people.

What do you think happened when the Levites fell down on the job, became greedy and not attuned to teaching the people? The people got further and further away from God. And what is always the first thing that happens when people begin to drift away from God? They pretty quickly begin to get careless in their tithing. So, God sort of built that in. If the Levites weren't doing their job, they were going to feel the "pinch." They ultimately felt more than the "pinch" because the temple was destroyed and they were totally out of a job. In that sense, their failure to carry out their responsibility resulted in a direct punishment on them.

God built it in and designed the system to where those who were responsible would reap rewards or curses depending upon their faithfulness in carrying out their responsibility that He gave them. God has ways of designing things in and building it to where it works a certain way.

The book of Lamentations is a lament connected with the destruction of the temple. It has to do with why the temple was destroyed. Why was Jerusalem destroyed? Because the people became unclean, God no longer dwelt in their midst and provided His blessing and protection. God removed His presence because of uncleanness.

When we bring it down to the spiritual level, Paul talks about that in the New Testament.

I Corinthians 6:19-20, "...do you not know that your body is the temple of the Holy Spirit who [that] is in you, whom [which] you have from God, and you are not your own? For you were bought at a price; therefore glorify God in your body and in your spirit, which are God's." That's what He is talking about.

Hebrew 12:15, it says, "...lest any root of bitterness springing up cause trouble, and by this many become defiled." Do you know what "defile" means? "Defile" means "to make unclean." "Lest any root of bitterness trouble you, and by this many become defiled" or "made unclean." That's why he mentions this.

What is it that defiles? The Pharisees didn't understand. They never got beyond the physical things. They said, 'Your disciples didn't wash their hands. They are defiled; they are unclean' (Mark 7:1-5). Christ said, 'That's not really the primary problem; that's not the main point.' Christ was not saying you should go around seeing how dirty you can get your hands before you eat a meal. Obviously, I think we understand that there are principles of cleanliness and hygiene.

Verses 17-23, he was saying, 'What really defiles somebody is not a speck of dirt on your hands. It is the fact of what is on the inside. It is attitudes that come out of the mouth.'

Why does that defile?

Matthew 12:34, "...For out of the abundance of the heart the mouth speaks."

What we have to do is right here in Psalm 73.

Psalm 73:1, "Truly God is good to Israel, to such as are pure in heart."

This section of the Psalms deals, a great deal, with a parallel to the material in the book of Leviticus—to cleanness and holiness.

One key Psalm in this section is Psalm 89 because of it's a description of the Davidic covenant. It's a Psalm of faith that was written in a time of national calamity, when it appeared that all the promises of God were suddenly being made of non-effect. The outward signs of God's faithfulness to His people, the temple, Jerusalem, the throne of David—all these things were apparently being cast aside and destroyed. It required faith to believe that God would fulfill His promises, even though all the physical evidence pointed to a contrary conclusion. It is not hard to believe God when you see, right before your eyes, God bringing these things out.

For instance, it takes, in that sense, a lot less faith to believe that Germany is going to emerge as the leader of the United States of Europe. I think that requires a lot less faith in 1991 than it did in 1951. It is a lot easier to see. There are a lot of people who have never read the Bible, but just from looking at world events, it looks like Germany is sort of moving to the top. There seems to be a United States of Europe emerging. You can see that. You don't have to have read the book of Daniel or the book of Revelation to figure that out. But in 1951 when Germany was divided, lay prostrate and just helpless, there was an idea afoot that we would never, ever let them emerge as a major power. The iron boot of the Soviet Union (Stalin's troops) imposed their will on Eastern Europe and then the iron curtain. Then, West Germany was not our enemy; West Germany was our friend. Russia was our enemy. If we fought a war, we would fight with Russia. Some of you remember that Mr. Herbert Armstrong wrote an article back at that time entitled, "Will Russia Attack America?" The answer he gave was, "No." He said that. Those whose contact with this work goes back to that period and before—back in the early '50s, '60s, the time of the Cuban missile crisis—remember? When everybody answered, 'Oh, Russia and America,' this work was teaching something different.

Now, it requires less faith. When you don't see it, then it is based on faith. As things begin to emerge, it doesn't take quite the same level of faith because you can see it with your eyes and on the basis of physical analysis.

Psalm 89 reflects that. It deals with God's faithfulness to His people. God made a promise to David. We are going to see that in Psalm 89. But at the time of the destruction of the temple (at the time of King Zedekiah), the clear impression was, 'How is God going to fulfill what He said?' God made a promise and yet physical evidence seemed to indicate that things weren't going the way we expected them to go. They were going the way God expected them to go. You think God's sitting all shocked and surprised—kind of wringing His hands and not knowing what to do next? It's going the way God expected it to go. It may not be going the way we expected it to go. What we have to do is stay close to God, and that way we will be where He is.

Psalm 73:1-3, "Truly God is good to Israel, to such as are pure in heart. But as for me, my feet had almost stumbled; my steps had nearly slipped. For I was envious of the boastful, when I saw the prosperity of the wicked."

The psalmist deals with something we often have to deal with. Have you ever noticed that sometimes people seem to be getting by with things? We almost slip because we become envious. We see all these people who were wicked. They weren't even trying to do what was right, and they were prospering and getting rich. And here we are struggling along trying to do what's right, and this guy is cheating on his income tax, cheating on his wife, beating the dog and everything. It seems like he is getting by with all kinds of things, and he is getting rich.

It's not a matter that the wicked never prosper. Sometimes they do quite well. The attitude was an attitude of envy and sort of feeling like, 'Boy, they have it better than we do.' I have even heard people make the statement, 'Boy, if I weren't in the Church, I could be doing some of this stuff.' Yeah, if you weren't in the Church, you could go through the Great Tribulation. You might even end up in the lake of fire. Yeah, there are a lot of things that could happen if you weren't in the Church. If you don't come into the Church, there's ultimately going to be a lot of things that are going to happen.

The point is, and the psalmist went through this, vv. 5-9, "They are not in trouble as other men, nor are they plagued like other men. Therefore pride serves as their necklace; violence covers them like a garment. Their eyes bulge with abundance; they have more than heart could wish. They scoff and speak wickedly concerning oppression; they speak loftily. They set their mouth against the heavens, and their tongue walks through the earth."

Verse 12, "Behold, these are the ungodly, who are always at ease; they increase in riches."

Verses 13-14, he begins to say, "Surely I have cleansed my heart in vain, and washed my hands in innocence. For all day long I have been plagued, and chastened every morning." He said, 'I have all kinds of problems. What's the point in trying to do what's right? It seems like they're getting all the breaks.'

The psalmist expresses feelings that sometimes we have. Sometimes we look around and life is unfair. Yes, it is. It is never going to be completely fair, just and equitable in Satan's world. If we could have it fair, just and equitable, what do we need the Kingdom of God for?

But he continues in vv. 16-17, "When I thought how to understand this, it was too painful for me—until I went into the sanctuary of God; then I understood their end." Oh! First, he was standing around and sort of feeling sorry for himself, looking with a little bit of envy at what others were getting by with and thinking, 'It's not fair.' But then, how did he work through it?

How did he resolve it? How did he deal with that? Did he just go off, get in a bad attitude and say he would join the Philistines and work for Dagon? No! He went into the sanctuary and into the presence of God. It has to do with coming before God in prayer. When he came before God and really began to pray about it, contemplated and considered it, then he understood their end.

Verses 18-19, “Surely You set them in slippery places; You cast them down to destruction. Oh, how they are brought to desolation, as in a moment! They are utterly consumed with terrors.” He began to think about the final results and realized that they were the ones set in slippery places. They are going to be brought down to destruction as in a moment.

He talks about how he repented.

Psalm 73:21-22, “Thus my heart was grieved, and I was vexed in my mind. I was so foolish and ignorant; I was like a beast before You.”

Here, we have the progression. First, a matter of sort of casting envious glances at what the world was getting by with. That’s human nature. We can find ourselves in that situation. We begin to feel a little bit of self-pity and think how we have it so much harder than other people. Things seem to be going so well for all these people not in the Church. It doesn’t seem fair.

If that’s where we stop, then we bog down in resentment toward God, self-pity and depression. But that’s not where the psalmist stopped. He noticed those things. He had some of those feelings to wrestle with, but how did he resolve them? He went to God. He spent time on his knees. He spent time in the presence of God to get it in perspective. Then he began to look and see how it all works out. He began to focus on the end result and then he repented before God for his ungrateful attitude.

A thankful, appreciative attitude is one of the greatest keys to spiritual growth. An ungrateful, unappreciative attitude is fertile ground for Satan to work with because after all, didn’t Satan have an ungrateful, unappreciative attitude? Stop and think about it. Lucifer had everything. He was one of the anointed cherubs that covered God’s throne. He was right there and had access to the very presence of God. He summed up beauty and wisdom and all sorts of power. He had everything, but he didn’t have gratitude. He wasn’t appreciative or thankful, and that is one of the greatest keys to our spiritual state.

Psalm 73 is a very important Psalm. There is a lot of food for meditation. As I mentioned before, one of the purposes of the Psalms, when we find ourselves with certain thoughts and feelings, is to express feelings and resolution of those feelings. Therefore, it is an important place to go for meditation.

Psalm 74:1-2, “O God, why have You cast us off forever? Why does Your anger smoke against the sheep of Your pasture? Remember Your congregation, which You have purchased of old....”

Verse 7, “They have set fire to Your sanctuary; they have defiled the dwelling place of Your name to the ground.” Seemingly, the historical setting here would be the destruction of the temple.

This section of Psalms began to be added at the time of Hezekiah. The Psalms of Asaph began to be added. There were others added later at the time of King Josiah and, undoubtedly, others that had been written were added into the canon at the time of Ezra and Nehemiah because we find different historical context relating to it. There were poetic songs written by the sons of Asaph for performance in the temple choir. The family of Asaph was the Levitical musicians.

We find different historical contexts that are here. We see the destruction that comes. We see the national lament, which certainly ties in with correlation to the book of Lamentations.

Psalm 75:1-3, “We give thanks to You, O God, we give thanks! For Your wondrous works declare that Your name is near. When I choose the proper time, I will judge uprightly. The earth and all its inhabitants are dissolved; I set up its pillars firmly.”

Verse 7, he continues, “But God is the Judge: He puts down one, and exalts another.”

Verse 10, “All the horns of the wicked I will also cut off, but the horns of the righteous shall be exalted.”

We find important areas focusing in on giving thanks to God and that He is the deliverer.

Notice vv. 6-7, “For exaltation [KJV, “promotion”] comes neither from the east nor from the west nor from the south. But God is the Judge: He puts down one, and exalts another.” Promotion ultimately does not come from advancing ourselves. There have been those who have promoted and advanced themselves, but that’s not really the way that is going to solve the problems. The only lasting promotion is the promotion that Jesus Christ gives. That’s where we have to look. We are to look for the promotion that comes from God.

In Psalm 76, we have the theme of the time of Jesus Christ’s return—the time when He is going to judge the world.

Psalm 76:9, it mentions, “When God arose to judgment, to deliver all the oppressed [KJV, “meek”] of the earth.”

Verses 1-2, “In Judah God is known; His name is great in Israel. In Salem also is His tabernacle, and His dwelling place in Zion.” This is talking of the time when God will be dwelling and ruling from Jerusalem. His government will be firmly established at the time when He is going to arise to judgment and save the meek of the earth.

God is our hope; He is our Savior. He is the One who will solve the problems—not the Republicans, Democrats, not this guy or that guy. The only salvation and the only real solution to the problem lie in the government that God is going to set up. It is very important that we have our focus there and recognize that it is the government of God that will bring about the results the world needs. Jesus Christ came preaching and proclaiming that.

Psalm 77 emphasizes that God is the only sure safety.

Psalm 77:1-3, “I cried out to God with my voice—to God with my voice; and He gave ear to me. In the day of my trouble I sought the Lord; my hand was stretched out in the night without ceasing; my soul refused to be comforted. I remembered God, and was troubled; I complained, and my spirit was overwhelmed.” It is a cry to God for help—recognizing and working through the fact that God is the Deliverer.

Psalm 78 addresses a very important theme of the history of Israel from the time of the Exodus to the time of King David.

It is emphasized over and over in Psalm 78 that Israel continually fell short of her covenant obligations. We also see God’s continual mercy and His forgiveness.

Psalm 78:1, “Give ear, O my people, to my law; incline your ears to the words of my mouth.”

Verses 4-7, “We will not hide them from their children, telling to the generation to come the praises of the Lord, and His strength and His wonderful works that He has done. For He established a testimony in Jacob, and appointed a law in Israel, which He commanded our fathers, that they should make them known to their children; that the generation to come might know them, the children who would be born, that they may arise and declare them to their children, that they may set their hope in God, and not forget the works of God, but keep His commandments.”

He established this as a testimony in Jacob; He established the account of things that are evidence, things that should be recorded, practiced and talked about, generation to generation. We learn by example and also by direct commandment and instruction. He established the testimony and appointed a law. God teaches us both by example and by illustration of what His people did and didn’t do, as well as His direct instruction and commandment. He talks about this sort of thing.

Verses 10-12, “They did not keep the covenant of God; they refused to walk in His law, and forgot His works and His wonders that He had shown them. Marvelous things He did in the sight of their fathers, in the land of Egypt, in the field of Zoan.”
