Verses 17-22, “But they sinned even more against Him by rebelling against the Most High in the wilderness. And they tested God in their heart by asking for the food of their fancy [KJV, “lust”]. Yes, they spoke against God: They said, ‘Can God prepare a table in the wilderness? Behold, He struck the rock, so that the waters gushed out, and the streams overflowed. Can He give bread also? Can He provide meat for his people?’ Therefore the Lord heard this and was furious; so a fire was kindled against Jacob, and anger also came up against Israel, because they did not believe in God, and did not trust in His salvation.”

Verses 40-41, “How often they provoked Him in the wilderness, and grieved Him in the desert! Yes, again and again they tempted God, and limited the Holy One of Israel.”

Have you ever thought about the fact that you can limit God? The Bible talks about that. It talks about certain ones and about an attitude that was reflected. How do you limit God? What does that mean?

Let’s notice an example:

Mark 6:1-6, “Then He went out from there and came to His own country, and His disciples followed Him. And when the Sabbath had come, He began to teach in the synagogue. And many hearing Him were astonished, saying, ‘Where did this Man get these things? And what wisdom is this, which is given to Him, that such mighty works are performed by His hands! Is this not the carpenter, the Son of Mary, and brother of James, Joses, Judas, and Simon? And are not His sisters here with us?’ And they were offended at Him. But Jesus said to them. ‘A prophet is not without honor except in his own country, among his own relatives, and in his own house.’ Now He could do no mighty work there, except that He laid His hands on a few sick people and healed them. And He marveled because of their unbelief. Then He went about the villages in a circuit, teaching.”

What are we told here? Is that an example?

We are told right here in Psalm 78:22, “Because they did not believe in God, and did not trust in His salvation.”

Verse 41, “Yes, again and again they tempted God, and limited the Holy One of Israel.” They tempted God by doubting. ‘We don’t know if God’s up to it.’ –An attitude of doubt and disbelief in God’s promises. That is certainly a way that we can limit God. We limit God’s working in us to the extent that we do not trust Him and do not believe and follow Him. We place a limit on the extent to which God can and will work in our lives and in our heart and mind. Doubt and disbelief are the opposite of faith. Faith opens up doors. It expands the extent to which God will work through us. Disbelief (a lack of faith) imposes a limit on what God can and will do in our lives. This is an important thing.

I would call your attention to one other matter here in Psalm 78. It’s sort of interesting. Everyone has heard of angel’s food. You’ve heard of angel’s food cake. Is there such a thing as angel’s food?

It says in vv. 24-25, “Had rained down manna on them to eat, and given them of the bread of heaven. Men ate angels’ food; He sent them food to the full.” Manna is referred to as angel’s food. What do angels eat? Well, maybe sometimes they eat manna. They don’t eat in order to sustain their life. But that is not to say there is not an enjoyment of food. We see this whole setup in Psalm 78, and it culminates in v. 70 with choosing David as the king. So, there is a development through this Psalm from the time of Moses down to the time of King David.

Psalm 79:1, “O God, the nations [KJV, “heathens”] have come into Your inheritance; Your holy temple they have defiled; they have laid Jerusalem in heaps.” Here we would clearly see an indication or reference to the destruction of Jerusalem and the temple by Nebuchadnezzar. It’s an appeal to God for deliverance. Yet God is punishing because of disobedience. But there are always those who are seeking to serve God, and they were crying out to God for mercy and for forgiveness.

Psalm 80:1-2, “Give ear, O Shepherd of Israel, You who lead Joseph like a flock; You who dwell between the cherubim, shine forth! Before Ephraim, Benjamin, and Manasseh, stir up Your strength, and come and save us!”

Here is a clear reference to God, and His role as the Shepherd of Israel. In His role as Shepherd, God is Protector of His people. He’s the One who sees that their needs are tended to and the One who will lead and rescue them. God likens His people, both nationally in terms of Israel and spiritually in terms of the Church, to being the sheep of His pasture. God compares His people to sheep and the fact that He is the Shepherd.

One of the indictments that He has in the book of Ezekiel is that the shepherds of Israel (the physical leaders) have not properly protected and watched out for His people nationally (Ezekiel 34:1-19).

Psalm 81:1-3, “Sing aloud to God our strength; make a joyful shout to the God of Jacob. Raise a song and strike the timbrel, the pleasant harp with the lute. Blow the trumpet at the time of the New Moon, at the full moon, on our solemn feast day.” The word “trumpet” in Hebrew is “shofar.” Normally, there was a silver trumpet that was blown every new moon, but a different trumpet was blown for the new moon on the first day of the seventh moon (the Feast of Trumpets). It was not the silver trumpet but the ram’s horn, the blast of the shofar. The reference in Psalm 81:3 to blow the trumpet in the new moon is a reference to sounding the shofar.

KJV, “Blow the trumpet in the new moon [the Feast of Trumpets], in the time appointed, on our solemn feast day.” The term “time appointed” is a reference to the full moon. The reference is to the fall festival season—to the blast of the shofar on the new moon (the Feast of Trumpets) and the time appointed (the full moon, which follows, which is the Feast of Tabernacles), our solemn feast day.

Verses 4-5, “For this is a statue for Israel, and a law of the God of Jacob. This He established in Joseph for a testimony, when He went throughout the land of Egypt...”

God prefigured His great end-time work. He ordained it in Joseph for a testimony. Joseph went through the land of Egypt with a message of warning of God’s impending judgment—the seven years of famine (Genesis 41:25-43). He proclaimed a message; the trumpet was blown. Joseph proclaimed a message through the land of Egypt—a warning of God’s impending judgment and the only way of salvation in the physical sense. The work that God did through Joseph was a testimony, example, illustration. God’s end-time work based in the nations of Joseph (Ephraim and Manasseh) was what? –To blow the trumpet! Isn't that what it says in Isaiah?

Isaiah 58:1, “Cry aloud, spare not; lift up your voice like a trumpet; tell My people their transgression, and the house of Jacob their sins.” The work that God did anciently, through the patriarch Joseph, was a type of what He would do in the end-time that sets the stage for the fulfillment of God's intervention in man's history, which is pictured in the Feast of Trumpets and the Feast of Tabernacles. A part of the job of God's work today is blowing the trumpet of alarm and of warning. We have this reference and sort of a little interesting note here in Psalm 81.

Psalm 82:1-8, “God stands in the congregation of the mighty; He judges among the gods. How long will you judge unjustly, and show partiality to the wicked? Defend the poor and fatherless; do justice to the afflicted and needy. Deliver the poor and needy; free them from the hand of the wicked. They do not know, nor do they understand; they walk about in darkness; all the foundations of the earth are unstable. I said, ‘You are gods, and all of you are children of the Most High. But you shall die like men, and fall like one of the princes.’ Arise, O God, judge the earth; for You shall inherit all nations.”

There is a play-on-words here. The Hebrew word “Elohim” is a word that in some contexts is rendered “judges” in the Old Testament. It is not the common word for judges, but in certain contexts, it is a term that can refer to human judges. Certainly, God is the ultimate Judge. But there is a play-on-words here. You have to understand that the Old Testament is interpreted by the New Testament and Jesus quoted Psalm 82:6 in John 10:34. Let's see how He quoted it. How did He translate this word?

John 10:34, “Jesus answered them, ‘Is it not written in your law, “I said, ‘You are gods’?””

If you have a marginal reference in your Bible, this is a reference to Psalm 82:6.

Verses 35-36, “If He called them gods, to whom the word of God came (and the Scripture cannot be broken), do you say of Him whom the Father sanctified and sent into the world, “You are blaspheming,” because I said, “I am the Son of God”?”

Christ quoted this scripture to them, and they didn't know quite how to explain it or what to say. One thing to note, the Greek word here for “God” in the Greek language in John 10:34-35 is a Greek word that only means “God” and it is “Theos.” It is never used in the Greek language as synonymous with judge. So, the Hebrew is subject to more than one understanding. Christ quoted it here, not translating it by the Greek word that means judge. You can say Christ didn't speak in Greek. No, but John wrote it down in Greek. Christ probably spoke it in Aramaic. But John, under the inspiration of the Holy Spirit, recorded Christ's words in Greek.

The Greek New Testament gives us an insight here. This is one of the sections of the Old Testament that gives just a flash of insight into the ultimate destiny and purpose of man. It's not spelled out in great detail in the Old Testament. Even the resurrection and many of these things are not spelled out clearly in the Old Testament, but there are insights that are given. We find that it is quoted in the New Testament, and on the basis of the explanation in the New Testament, we can understand clearly what was being said in the Old Testament. The point is not what Asaph understood and meant when he wrote it down, but what God meant when He inspired it to be written down. It was certainly made clear by Jesus Christ who is the very One that inspired it—the very God of the Old Testament.

Psalm 82:1, “God stands in the congregation of the mighty; He judges among the gods.” It could be rendered, “in the congregation of the gods.” The word “mighty” is also derived from the Hebrew word “elohim.” “...He judges among the gods.” In that sense, the Hebrew word for “elohim” means “mighty judge.” It is normally used to refer to God, but is also applied in other contexts. Who are ultimately going to be the ones that are going to rule and reign as kings and priests under Jesus Christ?

Revelation 5:10, “And have made us kings and priests to our God; and we shall reign on the earth.”

Who are going to judge the world? Well, in I Corinthians 6:2 and other places, it says the saints are going to judge the world.

Daniel 7:27, “Then the Kingdom and dominion, and the greatness of the kingdoms under the whole heaven, shall be given to the people, the saints of the Most High....” Jesus Christ is going to take the Kingdom and give it to the saints of the Most High.

You can say there is a reference to the responsibility of human leaders' accountability to God and the fact that God expects human judges and human leaders to deal fairly and equitably because they will ultimately give account to Him. But in the full and complete sense of Psalm 82, you have a picture of the resurrection and the instructions that will be given to the glorified resurrected saints at the time of the resurrection—the time when God will rise and judge the earth, the time when He will inherit all nations. That’s what v. 8 says.

Psalms 82:8, “Arise, O God, judge the earth; for You shall inherit all nations.”

The context here is sort of interesting.

Psalm 83:1-3, “Do not keep silent, O God! Do not hold Your peace, and do not be still, O God! For behold, Your enemies make a tumult; and those who hate You have lifted up their head. They have taken crafty counsel against Your people, and consulted together against Your sheltered ones [KJV, “Your hidden ones”].” This could be a reference to the Church in the place of safety.

Verse 4, “They have said, ‘Come, and let us cut them off from being a nation, that the name of Israel may be remembered no more.’” There is a nation in the Middle East that bears the name Israel. Here’s a reference to a confederation that is going to cut them off, and they won’t even be remembered. They won’t be a nation any more.

Verse 5, “For they have consulted together with one consent; they form a confederacy against You.” Here’s a reference to a confederation—a combine of nations whose aim is to wipe out Israel and wipe out the name Israel.

Verses 6-8, “The tents of Edom and the Ishmaelites; Moab and the Hagarites; Gebal, Ammon, and Amalek; Philistia with the inhabitants of Tyre; Assyria [Germany] also has joined with them; they have helped the children of Lot.”

If you go through these nations, you are looking at the nations in the Middle East—nations that certainly would involve places like Saudi Arabia, Syria, Lebanon, Iraq, probably Turkey and some of the North African areas. Interestingly enough, the only Middle Eastern nation left out is Egypt, which is the only nation in the Middle East that signed a peace treaty with Israel. It’s sort of interesting.

They are involved with this and Assyria (Germany) has joined with them. They have come together and have put together a secret alliance, a confederation. They have taken crafty counsel. They have been deceitful about it. ‘They have taken crafty counsel against Your people.’ This could refer both to the people spiritually and the people physically. They are going to cut them off.

So, based on Psalm 83, I would not place great hope in the Middle East peace conference, which is not even being held in the Middle East. They can’t hold the Middle East peace conference in the Middle East because none of the Arabs will go to Israel, and they won’t invite the Jews to any of the Arab nations. They can’t even sit down at a table in the same place in the Middle East. They have to go to Spain to have a conference. They have to find a place where they all will agree to go.

Do you realize that if mapmakers in American countries are going to sell an atlas in the Arab world, they have to omit Israel from the map? When the World Almanac is sold over there, they actually glue together the pages that have Israel, and they print a special edition that leaves Israel off because in Saudi Arabia, they won’t allow something to be sold that actually shows Israel. They won’t even show the existence of it. They have to leave a blank spot there on the map. They label it Palestine, or something. If you label it Israel, you can’t sell it over there. They have a long way to go before there’s any meeting of the minds. If you won’t even admit your neighbor exists, it’s sort of hard to really work out a deal with them.

Then people say the Jews sure are uncooperative. They won’t agree to give all this back to them. Do you know why they don’t want to give back the Golan Heights? Do you know what the Golan Heights is? Do you know how many people were killed scaling the Golan Heights? Do you know what Syria did with the Golan Heights for twenty years—from 1947 to 1967?

It’s a big high spot, and they had all their guns up on top of it aimed down at Israel. They (Israel) were “sitting ducks” down there. So, when the ’67 War broke out, one of the first things they did was scale the Heights. They lost a lot of men doing it, but they scaled the Heights and conquered it. And Syria’s been howling for the last twenty years they want the Golan Heights back. Well, sure they do! It’s kind of hard to shoot at somebody if he’s on the hill and you are in the valley. It’s a lot easier to shoot at them if you are on the hill and he is in the valley. You look at some of it and ask, ‘Why won’t they give it back?’ Because they remember what happened from that area for the entire time the nation existed up until they took it. And the “great humanitarian” Asaad of Syria just does not inspire tremendous confidence in Israel.

The Bible has the news ahead of time. It already tells you that they are amassing nations. That is going on behind the scenes. They are ultimately going to put an “under-the-table, behind-the-closed-doors” agreement together, and Germany’s going to be in with it. Nobody is going to know about that. You and I can know.

Since we can read Psalm 83 and figure out some of these things that are going to be going on, we don't have to be shocked and surprised.

Psalm 84 focuses on the desire to be in God's presence.

Psalm 84:10, "For a day in Your courts is better than a thousand. I would rather be a doorkeeper in the house of my God than dwell in the tents of wickedness." There is a literal application to the temple of old, but the real application looks forward to dwelling with God in His Kingdom. That's what it is talking about.

Verses 1-2, "How lovely is Your tabernacle, O Lord of hosts! My soul longs, yes, even faints for the courts of the Lord; my heart and my flesh cry out for the living God." –A desire to be in the presence of God.

Psalm 85:1-4, "Lord, You have been favorable to Your land; You have brought back the captivity of Jacob. You have forgiven the iniquity of Your people; You have covered all their sin. You have taken away all Your wrath; You have turned from the fierceness of Your anger. Restore us, O God of our salvation, and cause Your anger toward us to cease." This was very likely written at the time the captives were returning from Babylon under Zerubbabel. The very likely time for the composition of this was a time when God was bringing His people back.

Psalm 86 is a Psalm of David inserted into this section. It's not part of the original canon of David's Psalms, but one that he had written that was added in later. It's on looking to God for mercy and preservation.

Psalm 87:1-3, "His foundation is in the holy mountain. The Lord loves the gates of Zion more than all the dwellings of Jacob. Glorious things are spoken of you, O city of God!" This is a description of Zion as the city of God. It's certainly a reference to Jerusalem, but Zion in many passages is often used figuratively to refer to the Church. The Church is the inhabitant of the New Jerusalem. So, there is a very definite tie-in.

Psalm 88:1-6, "O Lord, God of my salvation, I have cried out day and night before You. Let my prayer come before You; incline Your ear to my cry. For my soul is full of troubles, and my life draws near to the grave. I am counted with those who go down to the pit; I am like a man who has no strength, adrift among the dead, like the slain who lie in the grave, whom You remember no more, and who are cut off from Your hand. You have laid me in the lowest pit, in darkness, in the depths."

Verses 10-12, "Will You work wonders for the dead? Shall the dead arise and praise You? Shall Your loving kindness be declared in the grave? Or Your faithfulness in the place of destruction? Shall Your wonders be known in the dark? And Your righteousness in the land of forgetfulness?"

Here is a reference to the state of the dead. It's described as the land of forgetfulness. It's described as a time when there is an absence of consciousness and, certainly, a reference to the fact that the psalmist didn't think he was going up to heaven when he died. It is very clear that he didn't think he was going to go flitting off to heaven, but rather the dead are dead.

He asks the question in v. 10, "Shall the dead arise and praise You?" "Is the time going to come when the dead will rise and praise You?" Other parts of the Bible certainly answer that in the affirmative. The reference is to seeking God. Psalm 89 is a Psalm that refers to and centers on the covenant with David.

Psalm 89:1-7, "I will sing of the mercies of the Lord forever; with my mouth will I make known Your faithfulness to all generations. For I have said, 'Mercy shall be built up forever; Your faithfulness You shall establish in the very heavens. I have made a covenant with My chosen, I have sworn to My servant David: Your seed I will establish forever, and build up your throne to all generations.' Selah. And the heavens will praise Your wonders, O Lord; Your faithfulness also in the congregation of the saints. For who in the heavens can be compared to the Lord? Who among the sons of the mighty can be likened to the Lord? God is greatly to be feared in the assembly of the saints, and to be held in reverence by all those who are around Him."

Verses 28-37, "'My mercy I will keep for him forever, and My covenant shall stand firm with him. His seed also I will make to endure forever, and his throne as the days of heaven. If his sons forsake My law and do not walk in My judgments, if they break My statutes and do not keep My commandments, then I will visit their transgression with the stripes. Nevertheless My loving kindness I will not utterly take from him, nor allow My faithfulness to fail. My covenant I will not break, nor alter the word that has gone out of My lips. Once I have sworn by My holiness; I will not lie to David: His seed shall endure forever, and his throne as the sun before Me; it shall be established forever like the moon, even like the faithful witness in the sky.' Selah."

God had made this promise. The psalmist quotes it. He reminds God of the promise that had been made concerning the throne of David. If the descendants of David who occupied his throne sinned or if they departed from God, God would deal with them and punish them, but He would not forsake them. He would chasten them if necessary, but He would not remove His loving kindness from them. He would not deal with the house of David as He dealt with the house of Saul.

He had made a promise, v. 34, “My covenant I will not break nor alter the things that have gone out of My lips.” God had promised that David’s throne would endure to all generations.

The issue of faith was when Nebuchadnezzar invaded Jerusalem, Zedekiah was taken captive, his sons were slain, Jerusalem and the temple were burned and the nation went into captivity. At that point, faith in God’s promise is tried and tested. How can we depend on and trust God when it seems like everything is falling apart? Well, that’s when we have to trust God the most. God showed them that He made a covenant with David.

Verses 3-4, “I have made a covenant with My chosen, I have sworn to My servant David: “Your seed I will establish forever, and build up your throne to all generations.”” The throne of David is going to endure in every generation.

You want to know the story? This sets the stage for the booklet, What’s Ahead for America and Britain. At the time of the destruction of the temple, there was a transfer of the throne of David from the Middle East to Ireland by the prophet Jeremiah. From the things that occurred at that time, God continued His promise. It certainly took faith to understand that because they hadn’t anticipated that it was going to work that way. There is an enigmatic reference in vv. 24-25 that we can see a little more clearly now—things that they didn’t see back at that time.

Verses 24-25, “But My faithfulness and My mercy shall be with him, and in My name his horn shall be exalted. Also I will set his hand over the sea, and his right hand over the rivers.”

“I will set his hand over the sea.” What does that mean? Well, the British Isles, where the throne was transferred, certainly is set in the sea. It’s one of those things that at the time it was written, the full sense of it wasn’t appreciated. We can look at it from a different perspective now. In retrospect, we can see that was not just a poetic statement. God literally fulfilled that. He literally did that.

We see that the setting of this writing is around the time of the destruction of Jerusalem and the death of Zedekiah. The first part of the Psalm is a rehearsal and gives the promises God made. God made these promises to David, and they are absolute. Toward the conclusion, the writer focuses in on how events seem to contradict God’s word. The throne disappeared from common view. Then, finally, at the end, he reiterates his faith in God and God’s promises.

Verses 50-52, “Remember, Lord, the reproach of Your servants—how I bear in my bosom the reproach of all the many peoples, with which Your enemies have reproached, O Lord, with which they have reproached the footsteps of Your anointed. Blessed be the Lord forevermore! Amen and Amen.” A reiteration, ‘Yes, there’s been reproach, but God is going to remember and blessed be God.’ The psalmist who wrote this at the time, very likely did not fully understand how God was going to fulfill His promise. He just believed that God would. Sometimes we find ourselves in a situation where God makes a promise and we look at it and say we don’t see how God is going to do that. How can God fulfill that? We don’t see how that can work out. It’s not necessary for me to understand how God is going to do everything. What’s necessary is for me to trust Him to do what He says.

What was the commercial? The old Greyhound Bus commercial, “Sit back and leave the driving to us.” That’s sort of what we need to do in our lives—sit back and leave the driving to God. We don’t have to know how God is going to do everything He says He will do. That’s where faith comes in. It’s a matter of believing, trusting and depending on God, recognizing our dependence on God, and recognizing that God will do what He says. God can be depended upon.

Human leaders make promises. We generally find that there is nothing as stale and empty as election promises the day after election. All of a sudden, their memory sort of jams up. They don’t quite remember that. They begin to “crawfish” (go backwards).

God’s not that way. When God tells you something, you can “take it to the bank.” That’s the way it is. God’s not like human beings who make promises to sort of ingratiate themselves or try to maneuver and manipulate and then don’t fulfill it. In some cases, they may be sincere and are just not able to fulfill it. In other cases, they never meant to fulfill it to begin with. They just said it because they thought it would be popular.

God never does that. Neither of those criteria fits God. If God tells you He will do something, He can do it. He's not like human leaders who have limits. I think sometimes there are those who do make sincere promises and yet are unable to put them into practice. Too many other things come in or they lack the power. Well, God doesn't lack the power. He can put into effect what He said. In other cases, they make promises that they never intended to keep. God doesn't do that either. If God tells you something, He means it. That really is a focus on the basis of faith, and that has much to do with our relationship with God.

Hopefully, this evening we got a little bit of an overview of this section of the Psalms and many of things that relate to Book Three of Psalms. There is a tremendous amount that God has packed in there.

Next Bible study we will be covering the fourth section of the Psalms, Book Four of Psalms—Psalms 90—106.

The Writings Series—Book Four—Psalms 90—

This evening we are getting into the section of the Psalms that is termed Book Four of Psalms. We have been going through and studying the fact that, traditionally, the book of Psalms has been divided into five sections by the Jews, and that there is a correspondence to two other sections of Scripture that also have five components—the five books of Moses or the five Books of the Law (Exodus, Genesis, Leviticus, Numbers and Deuteronomy) and also the five so-called Festival Scrolls or Megillot, which was the term the Jews used. The Festival Scrolls consist of Song of Solomon, Ruth, Lamentations, Ecclesiastes and Esther.

As we go through, we will notice there is a correspondence and, particularly, in the fourth section of Psalms, there is a lot of correspondence. The fourth book of the Law is the book of Numbers and the fourth book of the Festival Scrolls is the book of Ecclesiastes. We will note some interesting correlation in Numbers and Ecclesiastes as we go through this section of the Psalms this evening.

The book of Numbers is the book that describes Israel's forty years of wandering in the wilderness prior to the time that they entered into God's rest.

Leviticus 23:42-43, ““You shall dwell in booths for seven days. All who are native Israelites shall dwell in booths, that your generations may know that I made the children of Israel dwell in booths when I brought them out of the land of Egypt: I am the Lord your God.”” Israel was told that dwelling in booths during the Feast of Tabernacle was to remind them—it was reminiscent—of the time that they dwelt in booths (temporary dwellings) during the period in the wilderness.

The book of Ecclesiastes was traditionally read at the Feast of Tabernacles and it clearly shows that the physical, no matter how great, no matter how much, cannot permanently satisfy. There is a need for something beyond that.

This very lesson is alluded to in this section of the Psalms. We find in this section many of the Psalms that describe the millennial conditions that will come to Israel and to all nations when God reigns on the earth. We will note some of that. This section of the Psalms, beginning with Psalm 90, is a section that has many parallels with the account of Israel's wandering in the wilderness.

The time that Israel was in the wilderness, that forty-year period, was a period of temporary circumstances. They were going through the wilderness in a progression over a forty-year period. God was very directly governing. Their needs were provided and their circumstances were provided. He provided their food with manna. He provided their water with water gushing out of a rock. He overshadowed them with a cloud to protect them from the scorching desert heat. He even performed a miracle to where their clothes and shoes did not wear out. It was a time of God's very direct government. When you go through, you find that God was continually intervening. He was governing in a very direct and a very real way.

There are certain parallels to that time in the future. It was a time of temporary status and that was emphasized by the fact that they were dwelling in booths. They were looking forward to and anticipating a time of entering into God's rest.

The phrase “into God's rest” is used in the books of Deuteronomy, Joshua and Judges. It is used in Psalm 95 and Paul quotes it back in Hebrews 3 and 4. Consider that you have been on a forty-year hike where you walk for a few miles and pitch a tent. You stay there for a day or maybe two or three days or a week, and then you pick up the tent and move on and go a little further. If you spent forty years doing that, when the time comes that you are able to cross a river and enter into a land, put away your tent, settle down in a house and live there never having to move again, you would, certainly, consider that rest. It was a state of permanence and peace. It was a state of having a fixed, permanent place. Prior to that time, circumstances were changeable. So, there is that parallel.

That analogy is drawn on quite a bit in this section of the Psalms because Paul draws on that analogy and develops it in Hebrews 3 and 4. In fact, he quotes from Psalm 95, which is right in this section. Then he amplifies and expounds the spiritual implications of that. We will look at it in a few minutes. We have recognition that entering into God's rest means much more than just the historical account of Israel crossing the Jordan River and finally living in a fixed dwelling place, rather than marching through the wilderness setting up tents every few days.

Paul quotes it in Hebrews 3 and 4 showing that it was merely a type of what God has in store for His people. When we enter into the Kingdom of God, we enter into God's rest. That's the real rest that God has for His people. The Promised Land was merely a type because it was a temporary rest.

The Sabbath is used and illustrated as a weekly reminder of that rest. We are going to look at a tie-in between the weekly Sabbath and what it symbolizes. It symbolizes the time of Christ's thousand-year reign on the earth—the Millennium.

We are going to look at the Feast of Tabernacles in the book of Ecclesiastes. We are going to look at the story of Numbers. It all “dovetailed” together right in this particular section.

We start out in Psalm 90. This Psalm sets the theme for the entire section of the book—God is our ultimate source of rest.

Psalm 90:1, “Lord, You have been our dwelling place in all generations.” God is our ultimate place of rest.

Psalm 37:7, “Rest in the Lord, and wait patiently for Him...” God is the ultimate source of rest.

Ecclesiastes is a book of restlessness. It is a restless book. It shows that all the greatest physical blessing and benefits you can have still do not constitute fulfillment and satisfaction. None of us can ever “top” King Solomon. You can go through and read what he did. None of us can ever do that. The whole world is caught up in this materialistic binge. People think that if they could just have more, they would be satisfied. They want more and more and more and more and they are never satisfied. Solomon writes and he says he had it all, and it's just striving after wind. He had it and just was not satisfied. You see, only the spiritual ultimately satisfies. That's a lesson that those who are physical, even during the thousand-year reign of Christ, will have to understand.

The Millennium is not the ultimate. Physical abundance and prosperity during the thousand-year reign of Jesus Christ on this earth is not the ultimate. Physical prosperity and abundance that human beings will have is not the ultimate. Being a part of the Kingdom of God, being born into the Family of God—that is the ultimate! The ultimate is sharing life with God as a part of His Family into eternity. The ultimate is not being human with all the abundance that humans can have. That's not the ultimate. Being God is the ultimate. It is important to understand. We see that brought out. The concept develops that there is something beyond the physical and that is ultimately being a part of the very Family of God—the Kingdom of God.

Psalm 90:1-2, “Lord, You have been our dwelling place in all generations. Before the mountains were brought forth, or ever You had formed the earth and the world, even from everlasting to everlasting, You are God.” There's a focus on God and His eternity, His greatness, His power and that He is our ultimate dwelling place. He is our rest.

Verse 4, “For a thousand years in Your sight are like yesterday when it is past, and like a watch in the night.” As we read through Psalm 90, we may just sort of read over this verse. But I want to call your attention to it because if we go back to II Peter 3:8, Peter paraphrases Psalm 90:4. But he gets something out of it that's maybe a little more than what you and I would get out of it. If all we had were Psalm 90:4, you and I probably wouldn't get a whole lot out of that. But we have two other places in the New Testament that quotes this verse.

It's important to understand that the New Testament interprets the Old Testament. Sometimes we read over something and we don't necessarily see a lot of significance to it. But when we look in the New Testament, we find that God inspired a deeper significance to be brought out when the same verse is quoted in the New Testament.

Peter addresses the subject in II Peter 3.

II Peter 3:3-4, “knowing this first: that scoffers will come in the last days, walking according to their own lusts, and saying, ‘Where is the promise of His coming? For since the fathers fell asleep, all things continue as they were from the beginning of creation.’”

They are willingly ignorant of the fact that God has stepped into history and intervened as He did in the days of the flood (v. 5).

Verses 8-9, “But, beloved, do not forget this one thing, that with the Lord one day is as a thousand years, and a thousand years as one day. The Lord is not slack concerning His promise, as some count slackness....” When he says, “one day is with the Lord as a thousand years, and a thousand years as one day,” that last phrase, “a thousand years is as one day” is quoted from Psalm 90:4, “...a thousand years in Your sight are like yesterday....”

Peter quotes this phrase, “a thousand years as but one day,” but he gets a lot more out of it than just that. He says, ‘one day is as a thousand years, and a thousand years as one day.’ Therefore, Peter concluded one day is with the Lord as a thousand years and he quotes it in the context of explaining that God has a time plan. He introduces the subject that there will be scoffers saying, 'Where is the promise of His coming? We don't see any evidence. Everything's just going like it's always has. There have always been ups and downs. There are cycles, but things just go on. Why we don't believe that God is really going to step into history; that's just old "fear religion." We don't believe that. God's gone way off somewhere.'

So, Peter says, 'Don't kid yourself and don't be ignorant that one day is with the Lord as a thousand years and a thousand years as a day. God is not slack concerning His promises.' In other words, God is not indifferent. He's not careless. He's not lackadaisical. God has a time plan. He's going to do it on schedule. In His schedule, we find a day is analogous to a thousand years.

We have used the term "Millennium" so much, that many times we're not really aware that you never find in the Old Testament the period of the Messiah's rule defined as one thousand years. Did you realize that all the prophecies in Isaiah, Jeremiah, Ezekiel, Micah, Zechariah or any of the prophets never define the Messiah's rule as one thousand years? Do you realize that you can go through all of those and never find it stated that the Messiah will rule for a thousand years? Christ didn't mention that in Matthew 24 or Luke 21. That is never defined until you get to Revelation 20. Do you realize that? The first place in the Bible it says that Christ will rule for a thousand years—the very first place—is Revelation 20. If you didn't have Revelation in the Bible, you wouldn't know for sure how long the Messiah's rule is. You couldn't point to a specific chapter and verse that said how long.

The reference to a thousand years is used three times. Each time it is further clarified. Psalm 90:4 is the first place. If all we had were Psalms, we would read over 90:4 and wouldn't think a whole lot of it. It is just sort of a nice poetic expression. But Peter quotes it in II Peter and says there is a little more to it than that. He says a day represents a thousand years in God's plan. God is not careless or slack concerning His promises. He is going to do what He said, but He is on a time schedule. Then, when John comes along in the book of Revelation, he clearly defines that after the return of Christ, His reign is a thousand years.

Revelation 20:1-2, "Then I saw an angel coming down from heaven, having the key to the bottomless pit and a great chain in his hand. He lays hold of the dragon, that serpent of old, who is the devil and Satan, and bounds him a thousand years." That's the first place it clearly defines it.

Verse 4, "And I saw thrones, and they sat on them, and judgment was committed to them... they lived and reigned with Christ for a thousand years."

We are told in v. 6, "Blessed and holy is he who has part in the first resurrection. Over such the second death has no power, but they shall be priests of God and of Christ, and shall reign with Him a thousand years."

Verse 5, "But the rest of the dead did not live again until the thousand years were finished..."

John clearly defines that thousand-year period in Revelation 20. It is not defined before, but there are some insights that we get from Psalm 90 and II Peter 3 that adds to what John said. John clearly defines the time of the Messiah is a thousand years. Psalm 90 and II Peter 3 bring out the emphasis that one thousand years is analogous to a day in God's plan. Now, the final day in God's plan is a one-thousand-year day. That will be the time of the Messiah. If God has a time plan that's laid out in days, the final day is the time of the Messiah. It is a one-thousand-year day.

God established the analogy of His time plan in Genesis 1 when He created the heavens and the earth. In six days the creation was accomplished, and the seventh day He rested and was refreshed. Why did God take seven days? Did God work as hard as He could, just rushed through it putting out all the effort He could, and it took him six days? Finally, He was finished and He was so exhausted, He sat down and rested for a whole day. Is that what happened? No, it took six days because God chose for it to take six days. God could have done it in six minutes if He had wanted. It wasn't that God went as fast as He could and that was all He could do. It wasn't that it was God's best effort. God chose to accomplish it in six twenty-four-hour periods of time and then to set aside the seventh twenty-four-hour period of time to sanctify it and make it holy. God was establishing a pattern.

He established the pattern of the week, which He gave to Adam—to mankind. The first six days are to accomplish work and effort. God says, 'The seventh day is Mine.' Now, if a thousand years represents a day in God's plan, and the seventh and final one-thousand-year period is His, well, that's just like the week. The final day is God's and it is preceded by six days. So, if the final one-thousand-year day belongs to God, we are left with the very obvious implication that final one-thousand-year day, which belongs to God, will be preceded by six one-thousand-year days, which are given to man to accomplish his endeavors. We have a very clear implication of this, and it ties in with the Sabbath. It's interesting to note, and I think we should note, that Psalm 90:4 is the first place that makes reference to the thousand years.

We are going to see, as we come on down a little further, that God makes reference in Psalm 90 to the temporary nature of man. He makes reference to the fact that, basically, about seventy years is the lifespan.

Psalm 90:10, "The days of our lives are seventy years; and if by reason of strength they are eighty years..." Now, we've come a long way and we've made great progress. We spend fifteen percent of the national budget or gross national product on medical care. The average age has finally reached up into the seventies, and some live on up into the eighties. So, man has made great progress and basically landed on Psalm 90:10. Basically, people live into their seventies, and some with a little hardier constitution make it into their eighties. But it is still very temporary. Time flies away, and the older someone gets, the more conscious we are of how quickly time has passed.

It says in v. 12, "So teach us to number our days, that we may gain a heart of wisdom."

Moses was the one who wrote Psalm 90, and he lived to be one hundred twenty. Whether we live into our seventies, eighties or even nineties or beyond, the point is it still has an end. None of us come into the world with a little certificate saying that you are guaranteed sixty-nine years, eleven months, ten days, three hours and ten minutes. Nobody comes along with a guarantee of an exact length of time; none of us know.

The point is: "So teach us to number our days." Teach us to recognize our time is finite; it is limited. I don't know how many days I have ahead. I do know how many I have in my past. They are gone and I can never reclaim them. It is a very vital lesson. We are to be conscious that our time is finite, that our time is limited. Teach us to number our days—to realize they are limited. What do we do with that? Do we sit around and be depressed? No. 'We apply our hearts to wisdom.' God says, 'Your time is limited. Make the best use of it. Use it wisely.' God has a plan that stretches on beyond our limited, finite time. We have limited time here and we need to gain a heart of wisdom. We need to recognize it's limited and make good use of it—not just assume we will always have certain opportunities ahead of us.

Psalm 91:1, "He who dwells in the secret place of the Most High shall abide under the shadow of the Almighty." This seems to be an implication of God's people dwelling in a place of protection. It refers clearly to those who dwell in the secret place of the Most High, those who dwell in a place that God has for them.

You can compare it to Revelation 12:14, where it talks about the Church being taken on the wings of a great eagle into her place in the wilderness to be nourished there by God for times, time and a half time. God will intervene and protect. Here it talks about those who dwell in the secret place of the Most High, who abide under His shadow. God protects them.

Verses 2-3, "I will say of the Lord, 'He is my refuge and my fortress; my God, in Him I will trust.' Surely He shall deliver you from the snare of the fowler and from the perilous pestilence." It talks about all the calamities and the catastrophic events going on. Yet in that midst, God is delivering and protecting His people and the way He will do that is a very beautiful description.

Notice right under the heading of Psalm 92, you have a little title written under the heading in small letters, "A Psalm or A Song for the Sabbath Day." This is a part of the original text. In the Jewish translation, it is listed as the first verse. It is put in as a title in most of our English translations. Obviously, any Psalm or any part of the Bible would certainly be appropriate for the Sabbath, but here was a specific Psalm that was set apart as a Sabbath song. God says this Psalm is specifically for the Sabbath. We know from history that this was one of the seven Psalms that the Levitical choir chanted every Friday evening as the Sabbath began. This is one of the Psalms that was used in the liturgy there in the temple. Let's notice what this Psalm teaches us, since it is specifically for the Sabbath.

Psalm 92:1-3, "It is good to give thanks to the Lord, and to sing praises to Your name, O Most High. To declare Your loving kindness in the morning, and Your faithfulness every night, on an instrument of ten strings, on the lute, and on the harp, with harmonious sound." The first three verses focus on the importance of coming before God in worship. It talks about the use of music in worship. It says that it is good and appropriate to come before God for praises and thanksgiving. This focuses clearly on the Sabbath. The Sabbath is a day of public worship. It is a day to assemble before God and to give praise and thanks to Him. This is the first thing we learn about the Sabbath from this Psalm for the Sabbath.

Verses 4-5, the next thing we are told, “For You, Lord, have made me glad through Your work; I will triumph in the works of Your hands. O Lord, how great are Your works! Your thoughts are very deep.” The next thing we are given insight into, in vv. 4 and 5, has to do with God’s great works. The Sabbath is a memorial of creation. The Sabbath was established at creation. God labored and did great works for six days and rested on the Sabbath.

So, the first thing we focus on in this Psalm is the importance of public worship. The next thing is on the great works that God has done. God is the Creator and He has made us glad through His works. How great are His works. We focus on the fact that the Sabbath is a memorial of creation. It is a time to reflect on the greatness of God’s power and on the great creation that He has made.

Now, notice something else.

Verses 6-7, “A senseless man does not know, nor does a fool understand this. When the wicked spring up like grass and when all the workers of iniquity flourish, it is that they may be destroyed forever.” Where did he get this? We can identify the first part of this verse, “the wicked spring up like grass and when all the workers of iniquity flourish....”

You know how grass just seems to grow up everywhere. If you want grass to grow, don’t try to put in a lawn; plant a garden. If I am trying to get grass to grow on my lawn, I have trouble and I have bare spots. But if I plant a garden, grass just seems to spring up everywhere. I have to put forth effort to try to get that grass out. He talks about how the wicked springs as the grass. They just seem to pop up all over; they flourish. He said he saw and understood what a lot of people didn’t. He understood that they were going to be destroyed forever.

Verses 8-15, “But You, Lord, are on high forevermore, for behold, Your enemies, O Lord, for behold, Your enemies shall perish; all the workers of iniquity shall be scattered. But my horn You have exalted like a wild ox [KJV, “unicorn”]; I have been anointed with fresh oil. My eye also has seen my desire on my enemies; my ears hear my desire on the wicked who rise up against me. The righteous shall flourish like a palm tree; he shall grow like a cedar in Lebanon. Those who are planted in the house of the Lord shall flourish in the courts of our God. They shall be fresh and flourishing, to declare that the Lord is upright; He is my rock, and there is no unrighteousness in Him.”

Beginning with v. 6 to the end of the chapter, there is a focus on the time of the Millennium, of Christ’s rule. Even though the wicked are springing up like the grass right now, the Millennium is a time when they are going to be destroyed; it is a time when God’s enemies will perish.

Verse 10, it is a time when (KJV), “My horn shall You exalt like the horn of a unicorn, I shall be anointed with fresh oil.”

Here is a reference to the Messiah. A horn is used in Biblical symbolism as a symbol of a king or a government. Remember in Daniel and Revelation, the ten horns symbolized ten kings or ten kingdoms. The horn that is described here is the horn of a unicorn. Now, what is unusual about the horn of a unicorn? Well, a unicorn has only one, not two horns like a cow, a sheep or a goat, not many like the prongs of a deer’s antlers—there is one. If His government is going to be exalted like the horn of a unicorn, that means there is going to be one government and one King—not two, not many. There’s going to be one King. The term for anointed is a reference to the Messiah. The word “Messiah” in Hebrew means “the Anointed One.” So, it refers to the government of the Messiah being exalted. There will be one King.

The enemies of God will be destroyed. The righteous will flourish like a palm tree; like a cedar. The wicked are likened to the grass. Grass grows up very quickly. But have you ever noticed that if you have a few dry days go by in the summer, it doesn’t take too many days before the yard begins to turn brown and die. There isn’t any staying power. But a tree has staying power and it endures. The wicked pop up all over the place like the grass, but they will wither and die. The righteous will flourish like a tree. They’ll continue to bring forth fruit.

Psalm 92 focuses in on: 1) the importance of public worship—the Sabbath is a day for public worship, a day of assembling to praise God and give thanks to Him, 2) the creation—the Sabbath is a memorial of creation and 3) a weekly reminder of hope—it is a reminder of the time when Christ’s government will rule on the earth. The establishment of the government of God on this earth is just as sure as the setting of Friday’s sun. You can count on the fact that the sun is going to set on Friday; the sixth day of the week is going to come to an end and the seventh day is going to start. That’s how certain it is that the six one-thousand-year days God has given man are going to end. The sun is going to set on man’s world, and God’s world will begin.

There are places in the book of Isaiah that certainly likens the time of the Messiah to a Sabbath.

Isaiah 14:7, “The whole earth is at rest and quiet....”

Notice in Isaiah 14:1, “For the Lord will have mercy on Jacob, and will still choose Israel, and settle them in their own land...” When is He going to do that? That’s going to be when Christ comes back, right?

Verses 3-5, “It shall come to pass in the day the Lord gives you rest from your sorrow, and from your fear and the hard bondage in which you were made to serve, that you will take up this proverb against the king of Babylon, and say: ‘How the oppressor has ceased, the golden city ceased! The Lord has broken the staff of the wicked, the scepter of the rulers.’”

You can tie this in, prophetically, with Revelation 18—the fall of Babylon the Great. It is a time when God will give His people rest from sorrow, fear and bondage. It is the culmination after God has destroyed Babylon.

In fact, we are told in Isaiah 14:7, “‘The whole earth is at rest and quiet; they break forth into singing.’”

If you go through Isaiah 14, it is very clear that God likens the time of the Messiah’s rule to a Sabbath. He compares it to a Sabbath, a time of rest. When you understand that a thousand years is as a day and the time of the Messiah’s rule is a thousand-year day of rest, then you understand that is preceded by six thousand years of labor and effort.

Psalms 92 is a Psalm for the Sabbath that focuses on public worship, creation and the time of the Messiah’s rule. Here was a Psalm that was specifically designated for the Sabbath. There is a lot packed into Psalm 92.

Psalms 93 focuses on God’s throne being established and His reign.

Psalms 94:1, “O Lord God, to whom vengeance belongs—O God, to whom vengeance belongs, shine forth!” God is the One to whom vengeance belongs. We don’t have to avenge ourselves. God is going to intervene, and He will judge the world in righteousness. He knows how to properly combine judgment with mercy. He can do it in a perfect balance and in a way that none of us can.

Verses 11-12, “The Lord knows the thought of man, that they are futile. Blessed is the man whom You instruct [KJV, “chasten”], O Lord, and teach out of Your law.” Blessed is the man whom God chastens. Happy (or blessed) is someone God corrects and teaches out of His law.

Verse 13, “That You may give him rest from the days of adversity....” The reason God corrects, chastens and teaches us out of His law is so He may give us rest from the days of adversity. God wants to train and teach us. When God chastens and corrects, He does so in love and in mercy. It leads to being blessed and being happy because God corrects us to teach us the principles of His law. God always does what He does in proper balance and does it because He does love us.

Psalms 95:1-2, “O come, let us sing to the Lord! Let us shout joyfully to the Rock of our salvation. Let us come before His presence with thanksgiving; let us shout joyfully to Him with psalms.”

I would like to call your attention to the fact that there are seven Psalms specifically set aside for the Sabbath. These seven Psalms were a part of the Sabbath liturgy every single Sabbath in the temple. Psalms 29, 92, 95, 96, 97, 98 and 99 were a part of every Sabbath’s liturgy. They had a special significance and, certainly, they had a special significance to the Jewish community.

I emphasize that because in Psalm 95, we are going to notice that there are verses Paul quotes. He spends two whole chapters in the book of Hebrews expounding these verses. When Paul wrote the book of Hebrews, he was writing it to whom? He was writing it to Hebrews, to people who were familiar with the temple.

If we want to understand what Paul said in Hebrews 3 and 4, if we want to get out of it what the people who first read it got out of it, then we have to sort of put ourselves in their mindset. Paul was writing to people who were familiar with the temple and what the Levites did, people who were familiar with the Old Testament. Paul quotes a portion of Psalm 95, and when any observant Jew of the first century heard a few verses of that quoted, he immediately, in his mind, identified it with the Sabbath because that was recited every Sabbath as part of the Sabbath’s liturgy.

With that in mind, let’s notice what the Psalm says. Then we are going to turn back briefly to Hebrews 3 and 4 and see how Paul used it.

Psalms 95:7-11, “For He is our God, and we are the people of His pasture, and the sheep of His hand. Today, if you will hear His voice: ‘Do not harden your hearts, as in the rebellion, and as in the day of trial in the wilderness, when your fathers tested Me; they proved Me, though they saw My work. For forty years I was grieved with that generation, and said, “It is a people who go astray in their hearts, and they do not know My ways.” So I swore in My wrath, they shall not enter My rest.”

The book of the Law, which is paralleled in this fourth book of the Psalms, is Numbers. The whole story of the entire book of Numbers is summarized in these verses.

Verse 8, “Do not harden your hearts as in the rebellion, and as in the day of trial in the wilderness.”

Verses 10-11, “For forty years I was grieved with that generation, and said, ‘It is a people who go astray in their hearts, and they do not know My ways.’ So I swore in My wrath, they shall not enter My rest.”

Hold your place. Turn back to Deuteronomy 12 and notice what God said about His rest. Notice what Moses told the Israelites right at the end of his life and right before they crossed the Jordan River.

Deuteronomy 12:9-10, “for as yet you have not come to the rest and the inheritance which the Lord your God is giving you. But when you cross over the Jordan and dwell in the land which the Lord your God is giving you to inherit, and when He gives you rest from all your enemies around about, so that you dwell in safety.” They were expecting to cross the Jordan River and enter into rest. Right? Remember that. That’s the setting of the use of the word “rest.”

Psalm 95:11, “So I swore in My wrath, they shall not enter My rest.”

Hold your place on Psalm 95 and let’s go back to Hebrews 3 and 4.

Hebrews 3:7-11, “Therefore, as the Holy Spirit says: ‘Today, if you will hear His voice, do not harden your hearts as in the rebellion, in the day of trial in the wilderness, where your fathers tested Me, proved Me, and saw My works forty years.’ Therefore I was angry with that generation, and said, ‘They always go astray in their heart, and they have not known My ways.’ So I swore in My wrath, ‘They shall not enter My rest.’” Paul is quoting Psalm 95.

Now let’s see what he says. He begins to expound it.

Verses 12-13, “Beware, brethren, lest there be in any of you an evil heart of unbelief in departing from the living God; but exhort one another daily, while it is called ‘Today,’ lest any of you be hardened through the deceitfulness of sin.”

Verses 15-19, “while it is said: ‘Today, if you will hear His voice, do not harden your hearts as in the rebellion.’ For who, having heard, rebelled? Indeed, was it not all who came out of Egypt, led by Moses? Now with whom was He angry forty years? Was it not with those who sinned, whose corpses fell in the wilderness? And to whom did He swear that they would not enter His rest, but to those who did not obey? So we see that they could not enter in because of unbelief.”

Hebrews 4:1-4, “Therefore, since a promise remains of entering His rest, let us fear lest any of you seem to have come short of it. For indeed the gospel was preached to us as well as to them; but the word, which they heard did not profit them, not being mixed with faith in those who heard it. For we who have believed do enter that rest, as He has said: ‘So I swore in My wrath, they shall not enter My rest,’ although the works were finished from the foundation of the world. For He has spoken in a certain place of the seventh day in this way: ‘And God rested on the seventh day from all His works.’”

Paul now says that entering into God’s rest is a symbolism that goes all the way back to creation when God worked six days and rested on the seventh. He spoke of people entering into rest. The Sabbath is a type of God’s rest. Israel of old, those who didn’t enter into His rest crossing the Jordan, those who died in the wilderness were those who didn’t believe. Paul is applying this to Christians.

Verses 6-7, “Since therefore it remains that some must enter it, and those to whom it was first preached did not enter because of disobedience, again He designates a certain day, saying in David [This quotes from Psalm 95. Paul attributes Psalm 95 to having been written by David.], ‘Today,’ after such a long time, as it has been said: ‘Today, if you will hear His voice, do not harden your hearts.’”

Verse 8, “For if Joshua [KJV, “Jesus”]....” The term here is a reference to Joshua. Joshua is the Hebrew form and Jesus is the Greek form of the same word. We normally use Jesus (the Greek form) to apply to Jesus the Messiah. We make that distinction in English, but we should be aware that His name in the Hebrew was the same name as Joshua, of the book of Joshua. One is the Greek form and the other is the Hebrew form. The reference in Hebrews 4:8 is to Joshua, the one who led the Israelites across the Jordan River.

Verse 8, “For if Joshua had given them rest [If crossing the Jordan River and settling down was all God was talking about], then He would not afterward have spoken of another day.” Later, in Psalm 95, he wouldn’t still be talking about entering into God’s rest if all that had been done and was done and over four hundred years earlier when Joshua led the Israelites across the Jordan River. If Joshua had given them rest, he wouldn't afterward have spoken of another day.

Verse 9, "There remains therefore a rest for the people of God." Something you don't get from reading the English is that all the way through Hebrews 3 and 4 the word for "rest" has been the same word in the Greek language, "katapausis," which just means "rest." But in v. 9, the word "rest" is a totally different word in the Greek. It's not a word that you have to be a great Greek scholar to figure out. The word in v. 9 that is translated "rest" is the word "sabbatismos." You don't have to be a Greek scholar to figure out that must have something to do with the Sabbath. It does. It literally means "a Sabbath keeping."

Verses 9-10, "There remains therefore a rest [Sabbath keeping] for the people of God. For he who has entered [or is entering] His rest has himself also ceased from his works as God did from His." If you are entering into God's rest, of which the Sabbath is a type, you've ceased from your own works as God did from His. How did God cease from His works? He ceased on the Sabbath. If you are entering into God's rest, of which the Sabbath is a type, then you are resting on the Sabbath, too. And you realize that God's rest is a lot more than what Joshua led the Israelites into. God's rest was a type of entering into the Kingdom of God.

Psalm 95, which was read every Sabbath and Paul quotes in Hebrews 3 and 4, ties in with Sabbath keeping. Now, who says Paul did away with keeping the Sabbath? Boy, I tell you, when you just take it for what it says—you read Hebrews 4 and go back and read the book of Acts—it's very clear that Paul kept the Sabbath and taught the Sabbath.

There is a lot packed into Psalm 95. The analogy of ancient Israel entering into the Promised Land as a temporary physical rest was a type of our ultimately entering into the eternal rest of God's Kingdom. The Sabbath is a type of that rest. It is a weekly reminder of the hope that lies within us. It is the seventh day, after six days of labor, just as the millennial rest is a thousand years of rest that God will give to the world after six thousand years of effort and labor. We find that theme throughout the other Sabbath Psalms (Psalms 96, 97, 98, 99)—the theme of the establishment of the government of God and the reign of the Messiah runs through these chapters.

Psalm 96:1, "Oh, sing to the Lord a new song! Sing to the Lord, all the earth."

Verses 3-4, "Declare His glory among the nations, His wonders among all peoples. For the Lord is great and greatly to be praised; He is to be feared above all gods."

Verses 9-10, "Oh, worship the Lord in the beauty of holiness! Tremble before Him, all the earth. Say among the nations, 'The Lord reigns....'"

—The time when God is going to reign over all nations.

Psalm 97:1, "The Lord reigns; let the earth rejoice...."

Psalm 98:1-2, "Oh, sing to the Lord a new song! For He has done marvelous things; His right hand and His holy arm have gained Him the victory. The Lord has made known His salvation; His righteousness He has openly shown in the sight of the nations."

Verse 9, "For He is coming to judge the earth. With righteousness He shall judge the world, and the peoples with equity."

Psalm 99:1-2, "The Lord reigns; let the peoples tremble! He dwells between the cherubim; let the earth be moved! The Lord is great in Zion, and He is high above all the peoples." We have a theme of God's government running through all these Sabbath Psalms. The Sabbath looks forward to the time when God's government will hold sway over all the earth.

Psalm 100:1-2, "Make a joyful shout to the Lord, all you lands! Serve the Lord with gladness; come before His presence with singing." This is why we open the Sabbath services with songs. We are told to make a joyful noise unto the Lord and to come before His presence with singing. God appreciates music. Based on this and other verses, we open the services with singing. That portion of the service should be taken seriously. It is important to God. It is a focus.

Verses 3-4, "Know that the Lord, He is God; it is He who has made us, and not we ourselves; we are His people and the sheep of His pasture. Enter into His gates with thanksgiving, and into His courts with praise. Be thankful to Him, and bless His name."

Psalm 101:1, "I will sing of mercy and justice; to You, O Lord, I will sing praises."

Psalm 102:1-2, "Hear my prayer, O Lord, and let my cry come to You. Do not hide Your face from me in the day of my trouble; incline Your ear to me; in the day that I call, answer me speedily."

Verse 8, "My enemies reproach me all day long...."

Verses 11-14, "My days are like a shadow that lengthens, and I wither away like grass. But You, O Lord, shall endure forever, and the remembrance of your name to all generations. You will arise and have mercy on Zion; for the time to favor her, yes, the set time, has come. For Your servants take pleasure in her stones, and show favor to her dust.”

Remember years ago when the work first became involved in the archeological excavation in Jerusalem and the city of David. Mr. Herbert Armstrong used to talk quite a bit about it. For many, many years we were involved there. On several occasions, he made reference to Psalm 102:14, the reference to Jerusalem and the importance of Jerusalem in that context.

Verses 15-16, “So the nations shall fear the name of the Lord, and all the kings of the earth Your glory. For the Lord shall build up Zion; He shall appear in His glory.” He’s going to rebuild Jerusalem. He’s going to build it up. We have reference that this is written down for the generation to come (v. 18).

There is a clear reference in Psalm 102 to a contrast of the temporary state and the lack of power of the psalmist, compared with the greatness of God’s power and His eternal existence.

Verses 3-5, “For my days are consumed like smoke, and my bones are burned like a hearth. My heart is stricken and withered like grass, so that I forget to eat my bread. Because of the sound of my groaning my bones cling to my skin.” It’s very descriptive of the temporary nature of the psalmist.

Verse 12, “But You, O Lord, shall endure forever, and the remembrance of Your name to all generations.”

That’s contrasted with v. 11, “My days are like a shadow that lengthens [KJV, “a shadow that declines”], and I wither away like grass.” –“A shadow that declines.” If you’ve ever seen a sundial, which was a time measurement in that day, that’s what happens. The shadow declines. It comes down and you can tell the time. The day is drawing to a close; you can tell because of the way the shadow declines on the sundial. It comes down to the period indicating the day is almost over. What the psalmist says is, ‘My time is short. But You, O Lord, endure forever.’

Verses 25-26, “Of old You laid the foundation of the earth, and the heavens are the work of Your hands. They will perish, but You will endure....”

–A contrast between man’s finiteness and God’s infinite power and greatness.

Psalm 103:1-3, “Bless the Lord, O my soul; and all that is within me, bless His holy name! Bless the Lord, O my soul, and forget not all His benefits; who forgives all your iniquities, who heals all your diseases.” One of the greatest physical benefits God gives to His people is the benefit of healing. Certainly, the greatest benefit is a spiritual benefit—the benefit of being forgiven of our sins and therefore being reconciled with God and having the opportunity to share life with Him in His Family.

We are temporary; in that sense, healing is a temporary benefit. But it is a very, very important benefit. It’s a great blessing that God allows us to partake of, that is made possible through Christ’s sacrifice.

We are told in I Peter 2:24 (referring to Christ), “...by whose stripes you were healed.”

That is not talking about some arbitrary distinction in His sacrifice, but the fact that there is certainly a role of healing that is there. It is through Christ’s sacrifice that we have access to God. You can’t be a partaker of God’s promises if you don’t have access to Him. Christ’s sacrifice makes possible our access to God.

Psalm 103:2-3, it says, “...and forget not all His benefits: Who forgives all your iniquities; who heals all your diseases.”

It continues and shows God’s mercy, His greatness, His patience and all of the things God does for His people.

Verses 10-14, “He has not dealt with us according to our sins, nor punished us according to our iniquities. For as the heavens are high above the earth, so great is His mercy toward those who fear Him; as far as the east is from the west, so far has He removed our transgressions from us. As a father pities his children, so the Lord pities those who fear Him. For He knows our frame; He remembers that we are dust.”

God understands that we are very, very temporary. He deals with us in mercy, compassion and tenderness just like a human parent would do toward his own little child. Any of us who are parents know how tender they are and how protective we feel toward our little tiny children. God feels that way toward us. He is willing and desirous to forgive us and to be merciful to us. He desires to extend benefits to us.

Psalm 104:1-6, “Bless the Lord, O my soul! O Lord my God, You are very great: You are clothed with honor and majesty, who cover Yourself with light as with a garment, who stretch out the heavens like a curtain. He lays the beams of His upper chambers in the waters, who makes the clouds His chariot, who walks on the wings of the wind, who makes His angels spirits, His ministers a flame of fire. You who laid the foundations of the earth, so that it should not be moved forever, You covered it with the deep as with a garment; the waters stood above the mountains.”

This is a very beautiful poetic description of God as the Creator. God’s greatness is conveyed. There is a poetic imagery in the first few verses of Psalm 104. God is the Creator. He is the One who made everything. He made all of the forces of nature that are so great, so powerful and so awesome. The God that we serve stands ready to forgive us, to heal us and to help us. That God is the One who did it all. Yet for all the great things that He’s done, He’s ready to hear our prayers. He’s ready to be merciful, tender and kind to us just as a parent with his child.

There is reference to the renewal of the earth that describes creation week.

Psalm 104:30, “You send forth Your Spirit, they are created; and You renew the face of the earth.”

The creation described in Genesis 1:1-2 is a renewal of the face of the earth.

Genesis 1:1-2, “In the beginning God created the heavens and the earth. The earth was without form, and void...” We have always explained that in the beginning, God created the heavens and the earth, but the earth became without form. It became void and empty. It became chaotic and confused as a result of Satan’s rebellion (Isaiah 14; Ezekiel 28). Then God stepped in and in six days re-fashioned and reformed the face of the earth. It’s referred to in Psalm 104:30 when it refers to God renewing the face of the earth. The creation of Genesis 1—the creation of creation week—was a renewal.

There was a world prior to Adam—a world that was destroyed as a result of Satan’s rebellion, or Lucifer’s rebellion, when he became Satan. God then renewed the face of the earth. God formed the world for man and then formed man. Man, or humanity, is the family of Adam and had its beginning when God created Adam.

Psalm 105 provides us an overview of Israel’s history. We pick up the story with the call of Abraham and follow it down to the Exodus.

Psalm 105:1-5, “Oh, give thanks to the Lord! Call upon His name; make known His deeds among the peoples. Sing to Him, sing psalms to Him; talk of all His wondrous works. Glory in His holy name; let the hearts of those rejoice who seek the Lord. Seek the Lord and His strength; seek His face evermore. Remember His marvelous works which He has done....”

Verses 8-12, “He has remembered His covenant forever, the word which He commanded, for a thousand generations, the covenant which He made with Abraham, and His oath to Isaac, and confirmed it to Jacob for a statute, to Israel for an everlasting covenant, saying, ‘To you I will give the land of Canaan as the allotment of your inheritance, when they were but few in number, indeed very few, and strangers in it.’”

In vv. 14-15, He talks about how He protected and watched over them.

Verse 17, “He sent a man before them—Joseph—who was sold as a slave.”

Verses 23-24, “Israel also came into Egypt, and Jacob sojourned in the land of Ham. And He increased His people greatly, and made them stronger than their enemies.”

The Egyptians came to hate the Israelites (v. 25).

Verse 26, “He sent Moses His servant, and Aaron whom He had chosen.”

Verses 27-35, he mentions the various plagues that were sent by God.

Verse 36, “He also destroyed all the firstborn in their land....”

Verse 37, He brought His people out.

Verse 38, “Egypt was glad when they departed, for the fear of them had fallen upon them.”

Verse 40, “...And satisfied them with the bread of heaven.”—A reference to manna.

He provided them with water (v. 41).

Verses 42-45, “For He remembered His holy promise, and Abraham His servant. He brought out His people with joy, His chosen ones with gladness. He gave them the lands of the Gentiles, and they inherited the labor of the nations, that they might observe His statutes and keep His laws. Praise the Lord!”

God brought Israel out to observe His laws and to be a special people to Him. Psalm 105 gives sort of an overview of Israel’s history. We notice that Psalms 105 and 106 certainly tie in with the parallel of the book of Numbers, which tells the story of Israel in the wilderness.

Psalm 106 continues the theme. It describes the theme of Israel’s wandering in the wilderness in greater detail. It is, in many ways, a poetic summary of the events of the book of Numbers and the book of Judges.

Psalm 106:3, “Blessed are those who keep justice, and he who does righteousness at all times.”

Verses 7-11, “Our fathers in Egypt did not understand Your wonders; they did not remember the multitude of Your mercies, but rebelled by the sea—the Red Sea. Nevertheless He saved them for His name’s sake, that He might make His mighty power known. He rebuked the Red Sea also, and it dried up; so He led them through the depths, as through the wilderness. He saved them from the hand of him who hated them, and redeemed them from the hand of the enemy. The waters covered their enemies; there was not one of them left.”

Yet what did they do?

Verses 13-15, “They soon forgot His works; they did not wait for His counsel, but lusted exceedingly in the wilderness, and tested God in the desert. And He gave them their request, but sent leanness into their soul.”

Sometimes God gives people their way, but there are consequences that come when He does.

Verses 16-22, “When they envied Moses in the camp, and Aaron the saint of the Lord, the earth opened up and swallowed Dathan, and covered the faction of Abiram. A fire was kindled in their company; the flame burned up the wicked. They made a calf in Horeb, and worshiped the molded image. Thus they changed their glory into the image of an ox that eats grass. They forgot God their Savior, who had done great things in Egypt, wondrous works in the land of Ham, awesome things by the Red Sea.”

Verses 24-40, “Then they despised the pleasant land; they did not believe His word, but murmured in their tents, and did not heed the voice of the Lord. Therefore He lifted up His hand in an oath against them, to overthrow them in the wilderness, to overthrow their descendants among the nations, and to scatter them in the lands. They joined themselves also to Baal of Peor, and ate sacrifices made to the dead. Thus they provoked Him to anger with their deeds, and the plague broke out among them. Then Phinehas stood up and intervened, and so the plague was stopped. And that was accounted to him for righteousness to all generations forevermore. They angered Him also at the waters of strife, so that it went ill with Moses on account of them; because they rebelled against His Spirit, so that he spoke rashly with his lips. They did not destroy the peoples, concerning whom the Lord had commanded them, but they mingled with the Gentiles and learned their works; they served their idols, which became a snare to them. They even sacrificed their sons and their daughters to demons, and shed innocent blood, even the blood of their sons and daughters, whom they sacrificed to the idols of Canaan; and the land was polluted with blood. Thus they were defiled by their own works, and played the harlot by their own deeds. Therefore the wrath of the Lord was kindled against His people, so that He abhorred His own inheritance.”

What do we find? We find a poetic summary of the book of Numbers.

They ceased to be thankful and appreciative for what God had done. When people cease to be thankful and appreciative for what God has done, they begin to take it for granted and get in a murmuring, complaining, griping, faultfinding attitude, and they are setting themselves up for trouble. That’s what happened to Israel of old. Instead of valuing and being thankful for what God was giving them and for their deliverance, they looked around and everything wasn’t convenient. As soon as things didn’t go their way, they griped, murmured, complained and bellyached. They didn’t trust God.

The only ones who will enter into God’s rest are those who believe God. How can you enter into God’s rest if you don’t believe Him? The generation that came out didn’t enter in because they didn’t believe. That’s why, when the spies came back (you know the stories of giants in the land), the people’s hearts melted (Numbers 13:17-33). They didn’t want to go into the Promised Land because they didn’t really believe God’s promises. If you believe God’s promises, then you are ready to go where God leads. There’s an awful lot that we can learn because there is a parallel to the Christian life and to entering into God’s rest which is ultimately the Kingdom of God.

We see this summary in Psalms 105 and 106. We see that when Israel came into the land, they mingled and began to lose their identity. It’s important to maintain our identity. We certainly need to maintain our identity spiritually. That is very important. Israel of old began to lose sight of that.

In spite of all the things that they did, vv. 43-48, “Many times He delivered them; but they rebelled against Him by their counsel, and were brought low for their iniquity. Nevertheless He regarded their affliction, when He heard their cry; and for their sake He remembered His covenant, and relented according to the multitude of His mercies. He also made them to be pitied by all those who carried them away captive. Save us, O Lord our God, and gather us from among the Gentiles, to give thanks to Your holy name, and to triumph in Your praise. Blessed be the Lord God of Israel from everlasting to everlasting! And let all the people say, ‘Amen!’ Praise the Lord! [KJV, “Hallelujah”]! “Praise the Lord” is just the translation from the Hebrew phrase “Hallelujah.”

We see that there’s an awful lot in this section of the Psalms—a section that focuses in on the example of God's people ultimately sharing in God's rest and being a part of His Family.

We've seen, this evening, that this section of the Psalms has a great deal of parallel with the story of the book of Numbers. Numbers is the story of how God dealt with His people in the wilderness, how He took care of them under His government, how He dealt with them and brought them through and ultimately set the stage for their entering into the Promised Land. We see why some did not. We see the reference that during the Feast of Tabernacles we are reminded of the fact that we are still in a temporary status, on the verge of entering into the Promised Land, as Israel of old.

When we go through this section of the Psalms, we are focused on what's temporary and what's permanent. Man is temporary; God is permanent. What's physical is temporary; what God has is eternal. Entering into God's rest is the answer and the solution. This is very amply brought out. There is a focus on the establishment of God's government that God will share with His Family. We are concluded with this section of Psalms.

Next Bible study we will cover the last section—Book Five—Psalms 107—150.

The Writings Series—Book Five—Psalms 107—150

This evening we are in the final section of Psalms. We have been going through the book of Psalms and have focused on the fact that there are five divisions of the book of Psalms, as the Jews have traditionally reckoned it. This evening we are in the section that is termed Book Five of Psalms—Psalms 107—150, which is the concluding portion of the book of Psalms.

One of the things we have noted in this section of Bible studies is the fact that there is a correlation between the material in each of these books of Psalms with two other sets of five books—the five books of the Law (the Torah) or the five books of Moses, and then the five Festival Scrolls called the Megillot by the Jews, which were traditionally read during various festival commemorative seasons.

We are in the final fifth section or book of the Psalms and that would correspond with the fifth book of the Law, which would be the book of Deuteronomy. It would also correspond with the fifth book of the Festival Scroll, which is the book of Esther. Now, what possible correlation or connection is there between the book of Esther, the book of Deuteronomy and this final fifth section of the Psalms? We will note the correspondence of Deuteronomy and Ester with Book Five of Psalms.

The Jews traditionally read the book of Esther during Purim. Purim is not one of God's Holy Days; it is a national holiday that commemorates an event that is described in Esther. Remember the story? The Persian king had issued a decree that all the Jews were to be executed. He gave permission that on a certain day they were all to be killed. The book of Esther is the story of how God delivered His people through Esther. The celebration that takes place at the end of the book is a celebration of God's deliverance. It comes out very clearly in Esther that God is our Deliverer and the One who worked circumstances. Esther was read during Purim, which was a national festival of celebration of God's deliverance and God's salvation in the physical sense.

The book of Deuteronomy is a summing up—a restatement of the law—as Israel stood on the brink of crossing the Jordan River and entering into the Promised Land. They were on the verge of entering into God's promises and of entering into God's rest. Moses died at the end of the book. Joshua then prepared to lead them across the Jordan River. "Deuteronomy" means "the second law." It is a restatement of the law. It reiterates the fact that obedience is the key to blessings. As the people were being prepared to cross into the Promised Land and to receive God's blessings, they were reminded of the need to obey. Blessings and obedience go together, just as curses and disobedience go together.

The emphasis of this section of the Psalms is a section on praise for God and praise for God as our Deliverer. Yet much of this section focuses on obedience to God and on the benefits and blessings that God bestows upon His people. We'll find this theme of praise running very noticeably through this entire section.

We have commented before how the first Psalm of each section sorts of sets the theme.

Psalm 107:1-3, "Oh, give thanks to the Lord, for He is good! For His mercy endures forever. Let the redeemed of the Lord say so, whom He has redeemed from the hand of the enemy, and gathered out of the lands, from the east and from the west, from the north and from the south." This section opens with giving praise and thanks to God for what He has done. It pictures the redeemed of the Lord and praise to God.

The rest of Psalm 107 looks back. You can almost read it with the idea that you are standing at the end of the Millennium, on the brink of eternity, looking back at what God has done to deliver His people—how He has brought them to Himself, how God has done and accomplished this, how He has established His reign on the earth and how He brought His people back. It is praise to God for what He has done in setting up His government and delivering His people. In that way, there is certainly a lot of correlation to these other things that we have talked about.

In this section of the Psalms, there are several Psalms that merit special attention. One is Psalm 119, which is the longest Psalm in the entire book of Psalms and the longest chapter in the entirety of the Bible.

Psalm 119 is very interesting in several ways. In most of your Bibles, if you will look at Psalm 119, you will notice something very unusual. In my Bible, right under the title Psalm 119, there is an unusual little mark (sort of a little squiggle) and next to it says, "Aleph." Then, if you come down eight verses—between verses eight and nine—there's another little squiggle and it says, "Beth." If you continue down eight more verses, between vv. 16 and 17, there is another little squiggle and it says, “Gimel.” There’s “Daleth,” “He,” “Waw,” “Zayin,” and you can just continue down. What you will find is that every eight verses you have another one of these peculiar little marks with a strange word by the side of it. What you are looking at is the Hebrew alphabet.

Why did they print the Hebrew alphabet here in this Psalm? It is to point out something. We can’t see it in the English, but if we were reading it in Hebrew, there is something that would stand out very unusual in this Psalm. The first word in the first eight verses begins with “A” or “Aleph.” In the next eight verses, the first word in each verse begins with “B” or “Beth,” as it is called in the Hebrew. In the next eight verses, the first word begins with “G”; the next eight verses begin with “D.”

You might just notice; I will point out something to you. Notice the first two letters of the Hebrew alphabet are Aleph and Beth. What do we call it? We call it the “alphabet.” That’s where it comes from.

The Greeks adopted their alphabet from the Phoenicians, who got it from the Israelites. The indication is that they picked it up during the time of King Solomon when they were handling the shipping for King Solomon. The Greeks got it from them, and so the Greek letters had similar names. “Alpha” and “Beta” are the first two letters in the Greek alphabet, which are just various spellings of the first two letters of the Hebrew alphabet, “Aleph” and “Beth.” It comes all the way down to English today because we talk about our “A-B-C’s”—our Aleph Beths or our alphabet. Every time you talk about the alphabet, you are really going back to Hebrew. It’s just one of those little sidelights.

This is a very unusual Psalm. It is a poem. It is called an acrostic, which means that every letter of the alphabet is used. If you go through, you’ll find that there are twenty-two letters of the Hebrew alphabet. I won’t go through each one of them. You will notice that there’s eight verses attached to each one—that comes out to one hundred seventy-six verses in all.

That’s sort of a remarkable thing. How would you like to write a poem where you have twenty-two sections of eight verses each and in each one of those sections, the first word of each verse begins with the same letter? Most of us would have trouble coming up with eight words that started with some of the letters. How would you like to come up with eight words that started with “x” in English? It’s an unusual way of doing it, and it stands out because it is the only section like that in the Bible. It’s what’s called a perfect acrostic. There are several that are partial acrostics. It’s very difficult to do, where you use every single letter all the way through.

There are very simple ways—like in little children’s primers that would start out with “‘a’ is for ‘apple,’” “‘b’ is for ‘bat,’” “‘c’ is for ‘cat,’” and this sort of thing. That’s a very simple sort of an acrostic where you go through and see it done. Sometimes you see it done for advertising. They will have a word spelled down with words spelled out horizontally from each letter. Well, that’s an acrostic.

Here, you have the entire alphabet written down, and then verses written across from that—only you have eight verses with “a,” eight with “b,” eight with “c,” coming down that way. The significance of that was a sense of perfection and completion because the entire alphabet was used. The sense of it was that God’s perfect law is being praised because Psalm 119 is really a Psalm of praise to God’s law. It focuses in on how wonderful, perfect and complete God’s law is. It focuses on the greatness of the law that God has designed and put together. It’s as though the entire Hebrew language and alphabet was completely used in saying everything there was to say about it in a poetic way. We will come back and look at some things in Psalm 119. It is interesting to note that.

In the next fifteen Psalms, beginning with Psalm 120 through Psalm 134, you will notice right under each of those Psalms it says (KJV), “A Song of Degrees.” (NKJV), “A Song of Ascent.” You will notice there are fifteen of them that are called “Songs of Degrees.” What is that talking about?

One indication is that there is a Jewish tradition as to why there are fifteen Psalms called Psalms of Degrees and where that comes from.

Isaiah 38:1-2, “In those days Hezekiah was sick and near death. And Isaiah the prophet, the son of Amoz, went to him and said to him, ‘Thus says the Lord: “Set your house in order, for you shall die and not live.”’ Then Hezekiah turned his face toward the wall, and prayed to the Lord.” He really besought God (v. 3).

Verses 5-8, God told him, “Go and say to Hezekiah, “Thus says the Lord, the God of David your father, ‘I have heard your prayer, I have seen your tears; and I will add to your days fifteen years. I will deliver you and this city from the hand of the king of Assyria, and I will defend this city.’” And this is the sign to you from the Lord, that the Lord will do this thing which He has spoken: ‘Behold, I will bring the shadow on the sundial, which has gone down with the sun on the sundial of Ahaz, ten degrees backward.’ So the sun returned ten degrees on the dial by which it has gone down.”

In the aftermath of that, we are told in v. 9, “This is the writing of Hezekiah king of Judah, when he had been sick and had recovered from his sickness.”

He writes in the latter part of the chapter, v. 20, “‘The Lord was ready to save me; therefore we will sing my songs with stringed instruments all the days of our life, in the house of the Lord.’” In the aftermath of his healing and God’s deliverance, Hezekiah ordained some songs (Psalms) as a tribute to God that were sung by the Levitical choir in the house of the Lord. There were fifteen years added to Hezekiah’s life. The sun went backward the equivalent of ten degrees on the sundial. Here we have fifteen Psalms—Psalm 120 through Psalm 134—called “Songs of Ascents” (KJV, “Songs of Degrees”). Let me just call your attention to something. Notice that Psalms 120 and 121 say, “A Song of Ascents [Degrees].” Psalm 122 says, “A Song of Degrees of David.” Now keep count. We come down to Psalm 123, “A Song of Degrees” and Psalm 124, “A Song of Degrees of David.” Psalms 125 and 126 are both “Songs of Degrees.” Psalm 127 is “A Song of Degrees for Solomon.” So, here’s the third one that has an author’s name given to it. Psalms 128, 129 and 130 are just “Songs of Degrees.” Psalm 131 is “A Song of Degrees of David”—this is the fourth one that has an author’s name to it. Psalm 132 is just “A Song of Degrees.” Psalm 133 is “A Song of Degrees of David”—that’s the fifth one that has an author’s name to it. Psalm 134 is just “A Song of Degrees.”

What you find, if you count it, is that ten of those “Songs of Degrees” are anonymous and five have authors that are given—four by David and one by Solomon. You have fifteen Psalms—ten of which don’t give the author’s name; they are just called “Songs of Degrees.” Then you have five more that are added that bring it up to fifteen.

Jewish tradition holds that Hezekiah wrote those ten, and there were fifteen of them in honor of the fact that there were fifteen years that God added to his life. They are called “Songs of Degrees” because it commemorated the fact that the sundial went backward ten degrees as a miraculous sign of what God was going to do. Hezekiah wrote ten songs, one for each degree. Then there were five more Psalms that had previously been written but not added to the canon. There were five Psalms that had been written either by David or Solomon that he added in to bring the total up to fifteen. These were added at the time of King Hezekiah and the prophet Isaiah as a celebration of God’s deliverance.

It’s sort of an interesting thing. These fifteen Psalms were traditionally sung by the Jews on their way up to Jerusalem prior to the Feast. If you started with the evening that began the Feast of Trumpets and you take one a day for each song, you come up to Psalm 134 on the evening that begins the Feast of Tabernacles. We know from Jewish history that in later years the Levitical choir did that in the temple. There were fifteen steps that led down into the inner court. They did this during that fifteen-day period leading up to the Feast of Tabernacles. They moved down a step every night and culminated with Psalm 134 on the evening that began the Feast of Tabernacles, which they sang on the evening that began the Feast. It’s sort of interesting if you read Psalm 134 and think of it in those terms.

Psalm 134:1-3, “Behold, bless the Lord, all you servants of the Lord, who by night stand in the house of the Lord! Lift up your hands in the sanctuary, and bless the Lord. The Lord who made heaven and earth bless you from Zion!”

That’s sort of an interesting opening to the Feast of Tabernacles. This section of the Psalms and the entire book of Psalms end with five Psalms that are called the five “Hallelujah Psalms.” They are called that because the first word in each of these last five Psalms is “Hallelujah.” In most of our English Bibles, it is translated “Praise you the Lord!”

You will notice in Psalm 146:1, “Praise the Lord!” The word “Hallelujah” is a Hebrew word and translated into English means “Praise the Lord.” Sometimes we hear the word or we have used the word “Hallelujah” in that way. In some cases, it’s just rendered that way in the Bible. It’s rendered as a phrase, which is just the Hebrew word. Or if it is translated, it literally means “Praise the Lord.”

There are a couple of Hebrew words that most of us have used over the years and never thought anything about; we probably didn’t even realize we were speaking Hebrew. There’s one Hebrew word that you and I say probably every day—“Amen.” It is a Hebrew word that literally means “let it be so.” It is the root word of the word that’s translated “faith” in the Old Testament and is sort of an affirmation of what is said.

This section of the Psalms and the whole book of Psalms end up with the five Hallelujah Psalms. You see this number five that runs through the book of Psalms. Here it ends up with five Psalms that are the Hallelujah Psalms. The thing you notice about each of these Psalms is that “Hallelujah” is the first word and also the last word. In each of these last five Psalms, the first word is “Hallelujah” and the last word is “Hallelujah.” That’s a good reason for calling them the “Hallelujah Psalms.”

Psalms 150 begins and ends up with, “Praise the Lord!”

Psalms 150: 1, “Praise the Lord! Praise God in His sanctuary; praise Him in His mighty firmament!”

It builds up and, finally, in v. 6, “Let everything that has breath praise the Lord. Praise the Lord!” So there is that sense of climax.

The book of Psalms is a poetic book; that’s the nature of Psalms. There are several things that we might look at. I would call your attention to phrases and things that are in the book of Psalms that we may not have commented on before.

You’ll find that many of the Psalms have a title to them. Most of those say “A Psalm of David.” Some are directed to “The Chief Musician.” Many say, “A Psalm of Asaph” or “A Psalm for Asaph.”

Asaph was the chief of the Levitical musicians in the time of King David. The Levitical musicians were descendants of Asaph’s family. Asaph, evidently, played a major role under King David in originally organizing and putting together much of the book of Psalms. His descendants were the section of Levites that were the professional choir that sang in the temple. So, when you see the word “Asaph” in there, it is a reference to the chief of the Levitical musicians.

As you go through, you will notice in Psalms 4, 5 and 6, for instance, that it uses a rather unusual term. Psalm 4 says (KJV), “To the Chief Musician on Neginoth.” The spelling is a slight variation in Psalm 5, “To the Chief Musician upon Nehiloth.” Psalm 6 says, “To the Chief Musician on Neginoth.” We could go through, but you will find that phrase used in various places.

The question comes up: What do these terms mean? Some commentators connect it with some sort of musical notation that had meaning to the Levitical choir and that doesn’t necessarily have a meaning to us. The term “Neginoth” in Hebrew literally means “smiting.” Some have sort of connected that with reference for some sort of percussion instrument that was used in its performance. There is, in most of the Psalms that use this term, a theme that has to do with deliverance from personal smiting and trouble. It may simply be a play on words, referring both to some sort of musical percussion instrument and may very well make reference to some of the subject matter. If it refers to a musical instrument, it would obviously be some sort of a percussion instrument, just by the meaning of the word.

Other terms that are used, for instance in Psalm 8, “To the Chief Musician upon Gittith (KJV)....” If you check, you will find that term is used a fair amount of times later on in the book of Psalms. That term is used in various places. Psalms 81 and 84, for instance, use it. There are various places. It’s literally a reference to wine presses, and it is thought of as a poetic term that relates to the subject matter of the autumn Feast of Tabernacles. The Feast of Tabernacles, of course, was a time of the grape harvest, a time when the wine presses were running and wine was being made.

In ancient times when the grapes were harvested, you either made wine or you made raisins. The fresh grapes didn’t last very long. They come off the vine and you eat some of them fresh—but what you are going to have through the remainder of the year?

Sometimes people ask if it was wine or grape juice Christ took at the Passover. Well, I’ll tell you what. You go out and get some grapes. Press them out and make some juice. Set it up and see how long it stays grape juice. If you don’t put it in the refrigerator, freeze it or don’t give modern processing to it, you will find out how long you have grape juice. You may have wine or vinegar, but you are not going to have grape juice for too long because it simply won’t keep as grape juice.

So, that’s why it’s silly for some of the Baptists and different ones that want to claim maybe Christ took grape juice at the Passover. How did you keep it? You don’t harvest grapes in the spring; you harvest them in the fall. There wasn’t any such thing as grape juice in the spring until “Welch’s” came along. They didn’t go to the store and buy a bottle of Welch’s. They didn’t have pasteurization where they processed and pasteurized it. They didn’t get out a can of frozen concentrate and make it up. They didn’t have those things. Frankly, a lot of you remember when you didn’t have those things either. It hasn’t been that many years ago since some of those things came along. There is a symbolism that wine presses tie in with the Feast of Tabernacles.

God uses it in a symbolic sense, referring to His punishment of the wicked. He talks about, in that sense, treading out the grapes of wrath. He talks about the wicked, in that sense, being treaded out. He draws the analogy to that back in the book of Revelation. We find in the Psalms that the term “Gittith” is a poetic term. You’ll find that generally the subject matter is related to the fall festival season.

There are others. We will pick up one more that is used. I don’t want to get too bogged down on that, but I think it’s good to note because there are a lot of these strange-sounding words in the titles and a lot of times we wonder what they mean.

Psalm 32 says, “A Psalm of David, Maschill.” You’ll find that term used a number of places. Psalm 42, Psalm 52 and various other places use it. That’s a term that seems to relate to understanding or public instruction.

You find that some of the Psalms make reference in the title to “Korah.” It actually relates to the sons of Korah. Psalms 47, 48 and 49 are “Psalms of the sons of Korah.” The sons of Korah were Levitical musicians. This was one branch of the Levites who were musicians. These were notations that had reference either to the Psalm as it was used in public worship in the temple or in terms of the musicians who prepared it and used it. We won’t try to get all of these terms, but just in noting a few, it may help to figure out some of the others as well.

Let’s get on into this section a little more. We already noticed a little bit of the theme of Psalm 107—that it is a Psalm of praise to God for His mercy and His redemptive power (vv. 1-2). In a lot of ways, it’s praising God right at the beginning of the Millennium.

Psalm 107:3, “And gathered out of the lands, from the east and from the west, from the north and from the south.”

Verse 6, “Then they cried out to the Lord in their trouble, and He delivered them out of their distresses.”

It talks about the punishments that came on those that had disobeyed God.

Psalm 108 is, again, a Psalm of praise to God.

Psalm 109:1, “Do not keep silent, O God of my praise!”

In v. 8, there’s an interesting statement, “Let his days be few, and let another take his office [or take his charge].” We would tend to just read over that. But if you go back to Acts 1:20, you will find that Peter quoted it there and applied it to Judas. Psalm 109 is written in the sense of David being a type of Christ.

Verses 3-8, “They have also surrounded me with words of hatred, and fought against me without a cause. In return for my love they are my accusers, but I give myself to prayer. Thus they have rewarded me evil for good, and hatred for my love. Set a wicked man over him, and let an accuser stand at his right hand, when he is judged, let him be found guilty, and let his prayer become sin. Let his days be few, and let another take his office.” Here’s a reference to one who was a betrayer.

Peter quotes it in Acts 1:20, “For it is written in the book of Psalms: ‘Let his habitation be desolate, and let no one live in it...’”

That’s taken from Psalm 69:25, “Let their habitation be desolate; let no one dwell in their tents.”

Acts 1:20, “...and, ‘Let another take his office [bishopric].’”

This is quoted out of Psalm 109:8, “...and let another take his office.”

Peter quotes this Psalm and applies it to Judas Iscariot. He used that as a basis of saying that a replacement apostle needed to be chosen to round out the number to twelve.

Now, you and I may not have known this if all we had was the book of Psalms. We’d probably never figured that out. But the point is that we understand the Old Testament by the New Testament. The New Testament provides a proper understanding and interpretation of the Old. There are many things that we could never understand completely without what the New Testament adds.

Psalms 110:1, an interesting example, “The Lord said to my Lord, ‘Sit at My right hand, till I make Your enemies Your footstool.’” What is being talked about here?

If you just hold your place there, notice back in Matthew 22, Jesus quoted this part. The Pharisees were trying to challenge Christ and trip Him up (v. 15).

Matthew 22:41-43, “While the Pharisees were gathered together, Jesus asked them, saying, ‘What do you think about the Christ? Whose Son is He?’ They said to Him, ‘The Son of David.’ He said to them, ‘How then does David in the spirit call Him “‘Lord,” saying...’”

Christ said, ‘You fellows have a lot of questions for Me; I have one for you. Whose Son is the Messiah? Who is the Messiah a descendant of?’ And they said, ‘He’d be the Son of David, a descendant of David.’ And He said, ‘That’s interesting. How is it that David in the Spirit calls Him “Lord”? If He is David’s Son, why does David speaking under inspiration call Him “Lord”? Then He makes reference to the book of Psalms. He quotes Psalm 110:1.

Matthew 22:44-45, “The Lord said to my Lord, “Sit at My right hand, till I make Your enemies Your footstool.” If David then calls Him “Lord,” how is He his Son?” It was sort of a trick question for them. They couldn’t answer. Since they were trying to trip Him up, He just asked them a question that He knew they couldn’t answer. Jesus Christ quoted it.

Verse 46, we are told, “And no one was able to answer Him a word, nor from that day on did anyone dare question Him anymore.” They quit asking Him questions. That was His way of doing this.

You might notice that a lot of Psalm 110 is a reference to Christ.

Psalm 110:4, “The Lord has sworn and will not relent, You are a Priest forever according to the order of Melchizedek.” This is quoted in the book of Hebrews 7:21.

Psalm 111 is a very interesting Psalm.

Psalm 111:9, “...Holy and awesome [KJV, “reverend”] is His name.” That is one of the reasons we don’t use the title “reverend” in God’s Church. We don’t refer to the ministry by the title “reverend” because we are told that holy and reverend is His name. That’s God’s name. “Reverend” means “worthy of worship.” I am not worthy of worship; neither was Mr. Herbert Armstrong or any human being. God is worthy of worship. He is reverend and holy. We don’t use that title because it says ‘holy and reverend is His name.’

Verse 10, “The fear of the Lord is the beginning of wisdom; a good understanding have all those who do His commandments. His praise endures forever.” That’s an important thing. The starting point for wisdom is to stand in awe of God.

The world doesn’t have a lot of wisdom because the world’s starting point is that people are impressed with themselves. The starting point for most of the intellectuals of this world is that they are impressed with themselves and how much they know. They think they are pretty smart. And as a result, they will wind up coming up with some pretty stupid philosophies and pretty stupid answers.

The beginning of wisdom is the fear of God—really standing in awe of God and being impressed with God. If you start out impressed with God, it’s amazing how everything else falls into place. You can figure out a lot of things if you realize how great God is and how small we are by comparison. It has to do with setting our whole worldview.

It says, “A good understanding have all who do His commandments.” Do you want to understand? You have to act on what you know. It’s interesting. When God began to work with Mr. Herbert Armstrong, when God began to open his mind, the first thing was the understanding of the Sabbath. The Sabbath and the Holy Days was the test. Once Mr. Herbert Armstrong showed he was willing to start doing that, his mind was opened to other things.

It’s interesting. Right there at the beginning, the beginning was the Sabbath and the Holy days; the next had to do with the identity of Israel, which unlocked Bible prophecy and the Old Testament. Within a fairly short time—within a matter of months—he began to understand the overview of the prophetic outline and the identity of who is the beast. Those were things he began to understand early on. But he never would have understood some of those things if he hadn’t started obeying God.

Verse 10, “...a good understanding have all those who do His commandments...” Mr. Herbert Armstrong used to mention the fact that he and his wife kept the Holy Days for seven years before they understood what the days meant. If he had waited to understand what they meant before he did it, he would never have understood. See, “a good understanding have all they that do His commandments.”

If you want to grow in understanding, act on what you know. Start where you are and do what you see God says to do. You may not understand all the “whys,” but if we’re yielded to God, we don’t have to understand all the “whys.” The fact that God said it should be enough. I don’t have to evaluate whether it’s a good idea or not. If God said, ‘Do it’—that’s sufficient. And if I do it, sooner or later I’m going to come to understand.

The world wants to put themselves in the seat of being the judges. They don’t see what difference it makes. The point is not whether I see what difference it makes; the point is: Does God say it makes a difference to Him? If it makes a difference to Him, whether I see what difference it makes or not is irrelevant. The point is that God said it. I start doing it. And you know what? The longer you do it, the more you understand about it and the clearer it becomes. I think most of you can look at that in your own life and see that you have grown in understanding after you started acting on the things you saw. It’s like God will lead us as long as we follow. But if you quit following, then all of a sudden, you don't continue to understand more and more. This is a key thing here in Psalm 111.

Psalm 112:1, again, a Psalm of praise, "Praise the Lord! Blessed is the man who fears the Lord, who delights greatly in His commandments."

Verse 5, "A good man deals graciously and lends; he will guide his affairs with discretion." A good man is going to be kind and is going to be generous, but he's also going to use good judgment in guiding his affairs. He's going to trust God (v. 7).

Psalm 113 is, again, a Psalm of praise to God.

Psalm 113:4, "The Lord is high above all nations, and His glory above the heavens." He's the One that can be looked to.

Psalm 114:1-2, "When Israel went out of Egypt, the house of Jacob from a people of strange language, Judah became His sanctuary, and Israel His dominion." This is a Psalm of praise to God for the great things that He did.

Psalm 115 talks about how really insane it is for people to make idols and to trust in those idols.

Psalm 115:2-8, "Why should the Gentiles say, 'Where now is their God?' But our God is in heaven; He does whatever He pleases. Their idols are silver and gold, the work of men's hands. They have mouths, but they do not speak; eyes they have, but they do not see; they have ears, but they do not hear; noses they have, but they do not smell; they have hands, but they do not handle; feet they have, but they do not walk; nor do they mutter through their throat. Those who make them are like them; so is everyone who trusts in them."

It is absolutely futile. What's the use? What's the point? You have some statue sitting up there; it can't move, talk, see or do anything—and here's somebody bowing down and praying to it.

Verse 9, the point is, "O Israel, trust in the Lord; He is their help and their shield." We are to trust in the Eternal. We are to trust in God who dwells in heaven, and He delivers.

Verse 16, "The heavens, even the heavens, are the Lord's; but the earth He has given to the children of men."

It's interesting how people always want to get "ahead of the game." We are told that as the sons of God, we are ultimately going to inherit all things. We'll inherit the universe. It talks about that in Revelation 21:7. But you know, "the heavens are God's, the earth He has given to the children of men." But, of course, what do people want to do? We have made a mess out of the earth. We have polluted it. We have gotten it dirty and made a "wreck" out of so much. So, now man wants to conquer outer space. That surely makes a lot of sense; we can't take care of what we have.

God's principle is to start where you are. Learn to take care of what you have. Then, when you're faithful with a little, you will be given rulership over much. Man makes a mess out of what he has and then wants to quickly move on to something else. We are going to find that's something that is not for man at this time. That is something that we can ultimately have a part in on into the Millennium. But right now, the earth is what we have and what God has given us to take care of.

Psalm 116:1, "I love the Lord, because He has heard my voice and my supplications."

Psalm 117:1, "Oh, praise the Lord, all you Gentiles! Laud Him, all you peoples!"

Psalm 118:1, "Oh, give thanks to the Lord, for He is good! Because His mercy endures forever." It is, again, a Psalm of praise and rejoicing.

Verses 22-23, "The stone which the builders rejected has become the chief cornerstone. This was the Lord's doing; it is marvelous in our eyes." You will find this is quoted in Matthew 21:42, Mark 12:10, Luke 20:17, Acts 4:11 and Ephesians 2:20. This particular verse is quoted in a variety of places in the New Testament. The book of Psalms is heavily quoted in the New Testament.

Psalm 119 is the longest chapter in the Bible. We have already talked about that. It is praising God's law. You will find that there are seven different terms that are used.

Psalm 119:1, "Blessed are the undefiled in the way, who walk in the law of the Lord!" It talks about the law of the Lord.

Verse 2, "Blessed are those who keep His testimonies, who seek Him with the whole heart!" The second term is testimonies.

Verse 4, "You have commanded us to keep Your precepts diligently." Precepts—that's a little bit different.

Verse 5, "Oh, that my ways were directed to keep Your statutes!" Statutes is the fourth term.

Verse 6, "Then I would not be ashamed, when I look into all Your commandments." The fifth term is commandments.

Verse 7, "I will praise You with uprightness of heart, when I learn Your righteous judgment." Judgment is a sixth term.

Verses 9, 11, "How can a young man cleanse his way? By taking heed according to Your word...Your word I have hidden in my heart, that I might not sin against You." We read of God Law, His testimonies, His precepts, His statutes, His commandments, His judgment and the seventh term, His word. There is a lot of overlap between these terms. There are certain differences. Perhaps at a later time I may give a sermon on God's law and go through a little bit of the differences between these terms. There's a lot of overlap. Some of it is more poetic, but there are some differences.

The term "Law" or "Torah" includes the testimonies, precepts, statutes, commandments, judgments; it includes everything. The term "the Word of God" includes everything God says. His testimonies relate more to accounts or illustrations.

Some people operate on the basis that if you can't show them a verse that says, "thou shall do so-and-so," then they are not going to do it. They don't see why they can't. We should all understand that the Bible isn't written that way. God does give commandments where He says, "thou shall" and "thou shall not," but that's not the only way God speaks to us.

When you go through and read the story of Abraham, that's part of the testimonies. When you read the story of David, that's a part of the testimonies. You see the way God worked. You see the things they did; you see what they should have done and what they shouldn't have done. You get God's evaluation of it. We should learn from that. If God had wanted to simply give us a list of three hundred seventy-five things to do and not to do, He could have written the Bible that way—where it was just a few pages long and a list of three hundred seventy-five rules. That's not the way God wrote it.

Matthew 4:4, Jesus said, "...Man shall not live by bread alone, but by every word that proceeds out of the mouth of God." We need to study the Bible from the standpoint of trying to see how God views things. We are not to have the attitude of 'Unless you show me God says right here, "thou shall not do such and such."' God deals with a lot of things in principle. That's what's known as having the mind of Christ. There are illustrations and specifics. There are commandments that are given that certainly summarize. There are statutes that have more to do with civil matters. There are many different things. There are judgments that may apply to specific circumstances. There are a lot of different things that come out.

Psalms 119 deals with all of that. It talks about the various aspects of God's law and how God's law is for our good. We think of law as simply a list of rules. That's a mistake because the word for "law" in Hebrew was the word "Torah" which means "instruction." The term "God's law" includes rules, but it also includes testimonies and other things. It is an overall term that refers to God's instructions. God's instructions are what we should want and what we are looking for.

Verse 97, "Oh, how I love Your law! It is my meditation all the day." In God's law, there's an orientation toward God's instruction.

Verse 105, "Your word is a lamp to my feet and a light to my path."

It's very clear that God's law is eternal because we are told in v. 142, "Your righteousness is an everlasting righteousness, and Your law is truth."

Verse 172, "...for all Your commandments are righteousness." If God's righteousness is everlasting and all His commandments are righteousness, then that sounds like the law is going to be around forever.

Verses 151-152, "You are near, O Lord, and all Your commandments are truth. Concerning Your testimonies, I have known of old that You have founded them forever."

Verse 160, "The entirety of Your word is truth [KJV, "Your word is true from the beginning"], and every one of Your righteous judgments endures forever." We see that God's law is intended to be around for a long, long time.

The next fifteen Psalms—Psalms 120—134—are the Songs of Degrees. We have already commented about that.

Psalms 122:1-2, "I was glad when they said to me, 'Let us go into the house of the Lord.' Our feet have been standing within your gates, O Jerusalem!" This is a theme that certainly focuses in on when God's people are going to go up to Jerusalem in peace in the beginning of the Millennium.

Verses 3-4, "Jerusalem is built as a city that is compact together, where the tribes go up, the tribes of the Lord, to the Testimony of Israel, to give thanks to the name of the Lord."

Psalms 123:1, "Unto You I lift up my eyes, O You who dwell in the heavens."

Psalms 126 describes God bringing the captives back after the return of Jesus Christ.

Psalms 126:1-4, "When the Lord brought back the captivity of Zion, we were like those who dream. Then our mouth was filled with laughter, and our tongue with singing. Then they said among the nations, 'The Lord has done great things for them.' The Lord has done great things for us, whereof we are glad. Bring back our captivity, O Lord, as the streams in the South."

Psalm 127:1-2, “Unless the Lord builds the house, they labor in vain who build it; unless the Lord guards the city, the watchman stays awake in vain. It is vain for you to rise up early, to sit up late, to eat the bread of sorrows; for so He gives His beloved sleep.”

If God is not behind it, it’s futile. If God is not involved in what we are doing, then it is an exercise in futility. It’s an important point (KJV): “Unless the Lord builds the house, the weary builders toil in vain.” Whether it’s our lives or family or anything that we are doing, if God is not involved in it, then no matter how hard you work and no matter how much effort you put into it, there’s never going to be anything permanent out of it. If you are trying to do something that is going to last, you don’t leave God out. You don’t leave God out and you don’t put God in last. God has to be the starting point.

Psalm 133:1, “Behold, how good and how pleasant it is for brethren to dwell together in unity!” It shows how that is important and precious in God’s sight.

In Psalm 135, we find a Psalm of praise to God for all the great things that He has done—the things He’s done in ages past—the work of creation, His intervention for His people in times of need. Some of the great things that God has done are detailed out in Psalm 135. It is a hymn of praise to God.

Psalm 136:1, “Oh, give thanks to the Lord, for He is good! For His mercy endures forever.” Again, it’s a continuation of the same sort of thing as in Psalm 135.

Psalm 137 is a little different. It is written in the context of the Babylonian captivity. It is a reference to God’s people in the Babylonian captivity looking to God as their Deliverer and the fact that even on into the Millennium, God’s people, whom He’s redeemed and brought back, will look to God. They will look back on the captivity and the things that God has brought them out of.

Psalm 138:1-2, “I will praise You with my whole heart; before the gods I will sing praises to You. I will worship toward Your holy temple, and praise Your name for Your loving kindness and Your truth; for You have magnified Your word above all your name.”

Verse 6, “Though the Lord is on high, yet He regards the lowly; but the proud He knows from afar.” That’s an important concept to realize. In this world, if you want to gain access to somebody important, you better have a lot of money. You better have great power if you want to get in to see the governor. If you are a multi-millionaire, you can get right in. If you have enough money, your phone calls can get right through, even to the President of the United States. But if you or I were to try that, we would be doing well to get the secretary’s secretary. That’s just the way the world is structured.

But what we have to realize is that though you and I may not have direct access to all the great and mighty and powerful of this world, we do have direct access to the very headquarters of the Universe. (KJV), “Though the Eternal be high, yet has He respect unto the lowly, but the proud He knows afar off.” The way to gain access to God is to be lowly, to be humble. Come before God, have an attitude of humility and we can have direct access to Him.

There is another important point that’s brought out in v. 8, “The Lord will perfect that which concerns me; Your mercy, O Lord, endures forever; do not forsake the works of Your hands.” It’s not what you can make out of yourself or what I can make out of myself; it’s what God can make out of us as we yield to Him.

“The Lord will perfect that which concerns me.” To the extent that we will surrender our life and our will to Him, He will perfect that which concerns us. He will take it and develop it. He will make us what we could never make ourselves. In that sense, to the extent that we get out of the way, we let God work. His mercy endures forever and He won’t forsake the work of His own hands. We are the work of His hands. He is in the process of making us, not only physically in His image but spiritually.

Psalm 139:1-6, “O Lord, You have searched me and known me. You know my sitting down and my rising up; You understand my thought afar off. You comprehend my path and my lying down, and are acquainted with all my ways. For there is not a word on my tongue, but behold, O Lord, you know it altogether. You have hedged me behind and before, and laid Your hand upon me. Such knowledge is too wonderful for me; it is high, I cannot attain it.”

He is saying, ‘God knows me better than I know myself. He knows everything about me. He knows when I rise up and when I sit down. Where am I going to go away from Him? There isn’t any place I can go that He is not going to find me. Even the darkness can’t hide me from Him’ (vv. 7-12). He goes on and describes that. He shows how God can see us in the most remote of places.

Verses 23-24, “Search me, O God, and know my heart; try me, and know my anxieties; and see if there is any wicked way in me, and lead me in the way everlasting.” He’s asking God to search him, examine him, to help him to see himself. God knows everything about me. He knows me better than I know myself. ‘Search me, try me, see if there’s anything that shouldn’t be there.’ We have to go to God for spiritual insight into ourselves. One of the hardest things for any of us to do as human beings is to be completely honest with and about ourselves.

What are we told?

Jeremiah 17:9, “‘The heart is deceitful above all things...’” First and foremost, the primary ingredient of human nature is that we kid ourselves. It’s hard to be really honest with or even about myself. But God knows. He sees us in the dark, in the daylight, when we rise up and sit down.

The psalmist (David) asks God, ‘Help me to see myself. Search me and try me. Help me to understand, to see and to perceive, what You see.’

Psalms 140 is a prayer for deliverance and preservation.

Psalms 140:13, “Surely the righteous shall give thanks to Your name, the upright shall dwell in Your presence.”

Psalms 141:1-2, “Lord, I cry out to You; make haste to me! Give ear to my voice when I cry out to You. Let my prayer be set before You as incense, the lifting up of my hands as the evening sacrifice.” Incense is used to symbolize the prayers of the saints. Revelation 5:8 states that specifically. He draws the analogy of prayer being likened to incense.

Verse 3, he makes an interesting statement, “Set a guard, O Lord, over my mouth; keep watch over the door of my lips.” What does that mean? He’s asking God to post an armed guard right at his lips to not let anything get out that shouldn’t. I’ll tell you what. We would be an awful lot better off if some people had that attitude.

Verse 4, “Do not incline my heart to any evil things, to practice wicked works with men who work iniquity; and do not let me eat of their delicacies.” ‘Don’t let me have an attitude of wanting to collect gossip and standing around to eat of their dainties.’ They have this little juicy tidbit, this little morsel of gossip. ‘Hey, did you hear what “so-and-so” did?’ That’s the normal human reaction. The ears perk up, ‘Oh, really! I can’t believe it.’

David recognized that was something that really should not be. He says, ‘What I want to do is let my prayer come out. Let my prayer come before you as incense and please set a guard at the door of my mouth so that no wicked words escape. I don’t want things to come out that shouldn’t. I don’t want to take in all these little delectable morsels from people about wicked things. I don’t want my heart and mind to be that way.’

Psalms 142:1, “I cry out to the Lord with my voice; with my voice to the Lord I make my supplication.”

Verse 5, “I cried out to You, O Lord: I said, ‘You are my refuge, my portion in the land of the living.’”

Psalms 143:1, “Hear my prayer, O Lord, give ear to my supplication...”

Psalms 144:1, “Blessed be the Lord my Rock, who trains my hands for war, and my fingers for battle...”

Psalms 145:1, “I will extol You, my God, O King; and I will bless Your name forever and ever.”

Verses 7-9, “They shall utter the memory of Your great goodness, and shall sing of Your righteousness. The Lord is gracious and full of compassion, slow to anger and great in mercy. The Lord is good to all, and His tender mercies are over all His works.” God is compassionate and merciful. His tender mercies are over all His works.

It’s interesting. I will point out here that over the years, in certain countries, there have been many sports that are, let’s say, cruel sports or “blood sports,” as they are called. I’m not making reference to hunting but, let’s say, to everything from bullfighting, cock fighting, dog fighting, bull baiting and all sorts of things like that. A lot of those things have sort of fallen into disrepute.

Jews, who have been devout, have never engaged in that sort of thing. Their basis for refusing to involve themselves in things like this—things that involve sort of a slow torturous death to animals—has been this verse. The verse that they quote is Psalms 145.

Psalms 145:9, “The Lord is good to all and His tender mercies are over all His works.” That verse was their basis of why not to be involved in, let’s say, sports of cruelty. Here’s an example that they extrapolated out of this verse. Now you can’t point to a verse that says, “Thou shall not” and come up with something like that. But here’s a principle that’s stated. “The Lord is good to all.” Now, obviously, God created certain animals to be consumed. But if you go back to the law and the instructions that were given to the priests and the Levites, a slaughter was quick. It was not something that was slow and torturous. It didn't involve cruelty. Of course, there were certain animals that were created to be eaten. But there's a difference between slaughtering an animal to eat and putting two animals together and watching them "go for it" and goad until finally one of them kills the other. It's just sort of a little aside. It's maybe a minor point, but I think it is just a little bit of insight into the character and nature of God.

The point is that when we read the Bible, we want to read it from a standpoint of trying to understand how God thinks so that we can learn to think that way, too. We should not read the Bible trying to spiritualize everything away. We should not read the Bible from a modern lawyer's standpoint, sort of looking for loopholes—'Awh, He didn't say you couldn't do this at this time, so I'll do it.'

The point is that God gives us an overview. He gives us principles that relate to the way He thinks, and if we have a converted mind, then we are trying to find the principles. We are trying to understand how He thinks because we want to learn to think that way, too. And He's gracious. He's full of compassion. He's slow to anger. He's of great mercy. Those are the characteristics that should characterize us. If we're not gracious, if we lack any compassion, if we're quick to anger, if we have very little mercy, well, when we read this, we need to realize that here are some areas that we need to work on.

Psalm 145:18-20, "The Lord is near to all who call upon Him, to all who call upon Him in truth. He will fulfill the desire of those who fear Him; He also will hear their cry and save them. The Lord preserves all who love Him, but all the wicked He will destroy."

Psalm 147:11, "The Lord takes pleasure in those who fear Him, in those who hope in His mercy."

Verses 3-4, "He heals the brokenhearted and binds up their wounds. He counts the number of the stars; He calls them all by name." Now that's an incredible thing. God can count all the numbers of the stars, and the number of stars is infinite to man's reckoning. Man can't count how many there are. God knows the number. There is a specific number. I don't know how many, but God does. One of these days you and I can find out. Not only does He know how many there are, He remembers all their names. You talk about memory; now that's memory!

The encouraging point is: I John 3:2, "...it has not yet been revealed what we shall be, but we know that when He is revealed, we shall be like Him, for we shall see Him as He is."

When Christ comes back in glory, we are going to be like Him. Our glorified body is going to be just like His. We are going to be like God. We are going to be a part of His Family. Maybe you and I forget an awful lot of things that we try to learn right now, but the time is going to come, in a few years, when we are going to be like Him. That means we are going to have the kind of mind that's able, not only to count how many stars there are, but also to remember all their names. The things you read and study and try to remember—if you have trouble remembering it all—in a few years, it will come right back and you won't have any trouble. It's a little bit of insight into the greatness of God's mind and God's greatness.

We have already commented on these final "Hallelujah Psalms"—Psalms 146, 147, 148, 149 and 150.

Notice how Psalm 150 climaxes.

Psalm 150:1-6, "Praise the Lord [Hallelujah]! Praise God in His sanctuary; praise Him in His mighty firmament! Praise Him for His mighty acts; praise Him according to His excellent greatness! Praise Him with the sound of the trumpet; praise Him with the lute and harp! Praise Him with the timbrel and dance; praise Him with stringed instruments and flutes! Praise Him with loud cymbals; praise Him with high-sounding cymbals! Let everything that has breath praise the Lord. Praise the Lord [Hallelujah]!"

There is a poetic climax that focuses in on the use of music in the worship of God and the fact that it plays a very important role. We should realize that's part of the importance of music. There's nothing that has a greater impact upon the mood and the emotions of human beings than music. Certainly, an atmosphere of awe and majesty can be created through music, just as negative moods and emotions can be created.

Music was something that was used in a very special way in ancient Israel. God considered it important enough that a portion of the Levites were a professional orchestra and a professional choir. That was what they did. They were supported, of course, by the tithes of the people, but they were a professional orchestra and a professional choir. God obviously considered music and its impact on the people as an important part of His worship and an important part of what was important in society.

The whole book of Psalms is a poetic book. It is a book that was set to music and sung. It is a book that is suited for meditation and for memorization. It is poetic, yet has a tremendous amount of content and “meat” packed into it that all of us can, hopefully, get more out of as we study it, and realize the role and impact that God designed it to have.

We can just sort of feel some of this, here in Psalm 150, as we imagine the Levitical choir performing this number—the sense of awe, majesty and worship that was created in the proper use of music.

There are various proper moods to be created with music. There are, certainly, celebration and festive occasions, as well as for worship and for other things.

We have now concluded the book of Psalms. We are going to continue this series of the Writings by going right on into the book of Proverbs. The next Bible study we will cover the first portion of the book of Proverbs—the first nine chapters.

The Writings Series—Proverbs 1—9

Well, we have finally finished up the Psalms and are getting into the book of Proverbs this evening. The English title “Proverbs” is a pretty good translation of the Hebrew word that is the title of this book. The word in Hebrew is derived from the Hebrew word “mashal,” which literally means “rule.” The sense of the title in Hebrew is “words to rule or govern your life with.” It’s pretty much the sense of the English word “proverbs.” It is a short statement, or summing up, that is a good rule for life. That is the meaning of the word in Hebrew.

The book of Proverbs was written over quite a lengthy period of time. King Solomon compiled the majority of the Proverbs. But there is a record in the book of Proverbs that certain other portions were compiled by the men of King Hezekiah and by various other unnamed wise men.

The book of Proverbs can be divided into seven sections. If we look briefly, I think we will see that these seven sections are fairly clear.

The first section of Proverbs is a very short section. It is simply the first six verses, which is the introduction. It gives the title and the purpose of the book.

Proverbs 1:1-6, “The proverbs of Solomon the son of David, king of Israel: To know wisdom and instruction, to perceive the words of understanding, to receive the instruction of wisdom, justice, judgment, and equity; to give prudence to the simple, to the young man knowledge and discretion—a wise man will hear and increase learning, and a man of understanding will attain wise counsel, to understand a proverb and an enigma, the words of the wise and their riddles [KJV, “dark sayings”].” This is sort of a summary of the purpose of the book. The first section gives the introduction, the title and the purpose of the book.

The second section begins with Proverbs 1:7 and continues through Proverbs 9:18 (the last verse of chapter 9). Beginning in Proverbs 1:7, we begin to get into the Proverbs themselves.

Proverbs 1:7, “The fear of the Lord is the beginning of knowledge, but fools despise wisdom and instruction.” This section, the second section of Proverbs, is basically a discourse on understanding and wisdom. If you read through, you will notice the first nine chapters are more of a lengthy discourse and there is some story flow to it.

The third section begins in Proverbs 10:1.

Proverbs 10:1, we are told, “The proverbs of Solomon....”

When you get into chapter 10, you have, in many cases, these short one-verse statements. It starts out clearly setting out that this is a special section because the first part of Proverbs 10:1 says, “The proverbs of Solomon” and then goes through the third section, which is really the first body of Proverbs by King Solomon. We start out in Proverbs 10:1 and go all the way down through chapter 22:16. This is the first body of Proverbs written by Solomon.

The fourth section is the second body of Proverbs. This is from Proverbs 22:17 down through the end of Proverbs 24:34. This body of Proverbs is labeled as “the words of the wise.” Proverbs 22:17, “Incline your ear and hear the words of the wise, and apply your heart to my knowledge.”

Proverbs 10:1, we are told, “The proverbs of Solomon....” When we get down to this second body of Proverbs, these come from a miscellaneous number of sources that were copied out. They were not proverbs that originated with Solomon, though they may very well have been proverbs that he wrote and were included in, but he attributes them as the sayings (NKJV, “words”) of the wise.

The fifth section is the third body of Proverbs. We find this section begins in Proverbs 25:1 and comes down through the end of chapter 29—chapters 25, 26, 27, 28 and 29.

Proverbs 25:1, “These also are proverbs of Solomon which the men of Hezekiah king of Judah copied.” So, here is a section of Proverbs that Solomon had written, yet had not been included in the original book of Proverbs as Solomon had left it. They were other proverbs of Solomon that now, at a later period of history, the men of Hezekiah copied out and added in. It is a third body of Proverbs—again, proverbs in the sense of short, succinct statements.

You’ll remember that once we got through the introduction of the first six verses, then nearly the whole first nine chapters were a lengthy discourse, not the little short quick statements that are made throughout the rest of the book. We’ve come through these three bodies of Proverbs.

Now the sixth section, Proverbs 30, is what is called the words of Agur.

Proverbs 30:1, “The words of Agur, the son of Jakeh, his utterance. This man declared to Ithiel—to Ithiel and Ucal.” It doesn’t say who Agur was. There have been some who have speculated that it was maybe some sort of a title that could have even applied to Solomon, but it doesn’t say that. It is attributed to Agur in this way.

The seventh section is Proverbs 31. It’s labeled, Proverbs 31:1, “The words of King Lemuel, the utterance which his mother taught him.” Here in Proverbs 31 is the account of the virtuous woman. This is basically what a mother taught her son to look for in a wife and what is of real value.

We find that we have these seven sections. As we go through, we find that each has its own area.

Proverbs is written as a combination—on the one hand, a discourse, and on the other, what was called an “aphorism.” An “aphorism” is a concise statement, a “short, pointed sentence making a moral point.” One of the things about proverbs is that so much of it can be summed up in one or two verses. It is a very short, concise statement and then moves on to a totally different subject. Most of Proverbs are written this way. This short, concise statement that is summed up in just a sentence or so is called an aphorism. Most of these employ a parallelism.

Let me give you an example. There are different kinds of parallels. There’s what is called synonymous parallels.

Proverbs 14:19, for instance, “The evil will bow before the good, and the wicked at the gates of the righteous.” Now, that’s sort of two different ways of saying exactly the same thing. That’s what’s called a synonymous parallel.

What is parallelism and what is the purpose? It’s a poetic device used to emphasize the point that’s being made. The Proverbs are written in a poetic way. They are written in a way that sums up a moral point in just a few words. One of the main ways this is made is through parallelism. There’s a parallel that’s drawn that serve to emphasize. Sometimes it’s a synonymous parallel.

Another example of a synonymous parallel is Proverbs 18:7, “A fool’s mouth is his destruction, and his lips are the snare of his soul.” This is synonymous. It sort of restates the same thing. It is synonymous in its parallel. It states the same thing in slightly different words.

Now, there is a second example or type of parallelism called antithetic parallelism. That means that the second clause presents a contrast to the first clause.

Proverbs 13:25, an example of that is, “The righteous eats to the satisfying of his soul, but the stomach of the wicked shall be in want.” Here’s a contrast that’s made. It’s not saying the same thing. The first part of the verse talks about the righteous; the second part talks about the wicked. The first part talks about the righteous having plenty and the second is about the wicked being without. There is a contrast. The parallelism is of opposites or of contrasts.

Proverbs 17:22, “A merry heart does good, like medicine, but a broken spirit dries the bones.” There is a contrast here. It serves as a matter of emphasis but through contrast.

A third kind of parallel is what is called synthetic parallel. This means that the second clause continues the thought of the first.

Proverbs 19:11, “The discretion of a man makes him slow to anger, and it is to his glory to overlook a transgression.” Here you see that the second clause is not an exact. It’s not saying the same thing as the first. It’s not synonymous and doesn’t make a contrast. It does something else—it continues the development of that thought. “The discretion of a man defers his anger, and it is to his glory to overlook a transgression.” It further develops the thought.

Proverbs 20:13, another example of that would be, “Do not love sleep, lest you come to poverty; open your eyes, and you will be satisfied with bread.” It further develops the thought of the first.

A fourth kind of parallel is a parallel of comparison.

Proverbs 10:26, for instance, “As vinegar to the teeth and smoke to the eyes, so is the sluggard to those who send him.” That’s a comparison. It’s not saying exactly the same thing. It’s not a contrast. It’s not further developing it. It is a comparison. It is taking two things and compares them. Now, what does vinegar do? “Vinegar to the teeth and smoke to the eyes.” Well, drink a good mouthful of vinegar and see what it does. It puts your teeth on edge. If you get in an area that’s real smoky, what does it do? The smoke irritates your eyes. “Vinegar to the teeth and smoke to the eyes.” What do they have in common? Well, they put you on edge; they are irritants. “So is the sluggard to those that send him.” You send somebody lazy to do a job and he just “pokes” along. What happens? Notice how your patience just wears down. I know that’s never happened to some, but it’s happened to the rest of us. This type of Proverb makes a comparison. It uses a description and then it compares it to something. It's a poetic device, but it sort of brings it out. That's what a comparison does.

Proverbs 25:11, another example, "A word fitly spoken is like apples of gold in settings of silver." Here's a comparison. A word fitly spoken is not apples of gold, but it says it is like apples of gold. So, on the one hand, you have something really beautiful, precious and valuable. That's the way a word fitly spoken is—the right word at the right time. It's a beautiful thing. It's valuable. There is a comparison that is brought out.

There are different kinds of parallels that are drawn, but one of the things that is common to virtually all the Proverbs is that they use the device of parallelism. They make a parallel. It may be a synonymous parallel where you just restate the same thing in different words. It may be a contrast in parallel where you state one thing and then state sort of the opposite; you make a contrast between two opposite things. It may be a synthetic, a blending parallel where the second clause just continues and develops the thought of the first. Or it may be a comparison parallel where you compare one thing to something else and you parallel it that way.

This is most, or all, of what are called the three bodies of Proverbs. The first body by King Solomon (chapters 10-22) is sort of the heart and core of the book. The second body of Proverbs is Proverbs 22:17 through 24:34. They are called "the words of the wise." They were miscellaneous proverbs copied out. And then the third body of Proverbs (Proverbs 25 through 29) is proverbs of Solomon copied out by the men of Hezekiah. All of those use that type of development.

A key word in the book of Proverbs is the word wisdom. This is, really, one of the main terms used. It comes from a word in the Hebrew language that relates to sound judgment. It's a combination of knowledge, understanding and action that are all intertwined, all sort of put together.

Knowledge is a matter of knowing facts. Take, for example, somebody who's gone to college. He's just fresh out with a degree and has a lot of facts, a lot of information. He has a brand new job he's just started. He's never had to put those facts to practical application. But boy, he's taken all kinds of tests and he knew the right answers. He has knowledge.

After he's worked on the job for a while, he may begin to develop a little understanding as to how you apply that knowledge to practical everyday situations. When he comes fresh out of school, he may have a lot of knowledge but doesn't have a whole lot of understanding. In fact, you can have some people out there who never had that level of education and knowledge, but they have understanding because they have dealt in the practical area of it—of how to make some of these things work. Understanding goes beyond knowledge.

Wisdom combines knowledge and understanding. It adds in a little extra ingredient. On the one hand, you can have somebody who comes out of school with a lot of knowledge. He knows a lot of facts. After he's worked for a while, he has some practical experience. He begins to understand how to apply those facts in practical situations. Then over a period of time, he develops wisdom as to how to do it, when to do it and how to put the whole thing together. It's not only knowing what to do and understanding how to apply it, but also when to apply and how to go about putting it into practice. He has the wisdom that comes with putting the whole thing together.

Wisdom is a very important concept in the book of Proverbs. It combines knowledge and understanding and goes beyond the two.

Another key word in the book of Proverbs is the word instruction. The word "instruction" comes from the Hebrew word "nuwcar." It could mean "discipline" because instructions have to do with discipline. Instructions are the means by which our life is disciplined and guided. Proverbs emphasizes the importance of instruction and discipline in our lives. It emphasizes the importance of gaining wisdom. This is really strongly emphasized.

As we come back to the beginning of Proverbs, we notice the purpose of Proverbs to begin with. Proverbs 1:2, "To know wisdom and instruction, to perceive the words of understanding." The starting point is: Why is the book of Proverbs in the Bible? It is so that we can come to have wisdom, plus instruction and discipline in our lives.

Verses 2-4, "To know wisdom and instruction, to perceive the words of understanding, to receive the instruction of wisdom, justice, judgment, and equity; to give prudence to the simple, to the young man knowledge and discretion—"

There are some things that come out with age and experience. One of the purposes of Proverbs is that it was, specifically, written to give help to young people. It's an important book for all of us. I don't think there are any of us who are so wise that we can't gain something from Proverbs. But it has particular value for young people because they haven't yet had the amount of lessons of life's experience. Just living life will teach you some of the lessons in Proverbs.

The problem is that if you haven't come to understand some of those things until the end of your life, then you have missed out on a lot of years when you could have done them and been better off. You don't want to end up your life full of regrets saying, 'If I'd known this or that.' Some things we are going to learn by experience, but there's a lot that we can have the "edge" on.

It's written here that one of its purposes is to give prudence (KJV, "subtlety") to the simple. The Jewish version translates it "shrewdness," a safeguard against being misled. There's a certain naïve quality to someone who is young and lacks experience in life. There's a certain amount of gullibility that comes in. Proverbs has, as its purpose, to help young people to not be quite so gullible and to guide toward knowledge and discretion.

It shows that in v. 5, "A wise man will hear and increase learning..." A wise man is not a know-it-all. Somebody who thinks he knows everything is somebody who doesn't really know a whole lot because somebody who doesn't think that he has anything left to learn just shows how much he has left to learn. It's like he doesn't even know what he doesn't know. A wise person is somebody who goes through life desiring to continue learning. We can all continue to learn as long as we are alive and think, 'All this we can learn.'

It continues and we are told the starting point for true wisdom.

Verse 7, "The fear of the Lord is the beginning of knowledge, but fools despise wisdom and instruction." The beginning of wisdom—the starting point—starts with the fear of the Lord. This doesn't mean being scared of God. It's talking about a deep reverence for God. It's the only starting point. If you separate God from knowledge, knowledge becomes an instrument of destruction instead of construction. Look at so much of what we've built up. You know our problems in the world today are not because of a lack of knowledge. We have the ability to blast ourselves off the planet several times over.

"The fear of God is the beginning of knowledge, but fools despise wisdom and instruction." We see that we need to start out really reverencing God. Mr. Herbert Armstrong wanted to have it inscribed on the cornerstone of Ambassador Hall (the main classroom building), "The Word of God is the Foundation of Knowledge." Knowledge that isn't based on God's Word isn't knowledge. That doesn't say that the Bible contains all knowledge, but it is the foundation on which all other knowledge must be able to stand. The Bible is not written to tell us everything we need to know about the subject of geology, archeology, biology or whatever it may be, but it gives us basic principles. If you lay those aside, you can't understand the rest of it. The Bible deals in principles with every issue and everything.

Verse 8, "My son, hear the instruction of your father, and do not forsake the law of your mother." The key advice (sort of a starting point) in Proverbs focuses on the need of young people to heed their parents' teaching and instruction. That's an important part. Listen to the instruction and discipline of your father; don't forsake the law of your mother.

That's sort of like a sign I saw the other day, this "takeoff" to young people: "You better hurry up and do all this stuff while you still know all the answers because as you get a little older, you are going to realize how much you don't know." Sometimes it's rather hard to tell somebody who is maybe about sixteen years of age that they don't know quite as much as they think they do. Most of us who have been parents and had children about that age realize that there is a point in a young person's life where they are amazed at how much they know and how little you know. As they get a little older, their perspective sort of changes.

Mr. Herbert Armstrong and others have made statements something to that effect. Mr. Armstrong said he left home and was amazed at how much his father learned from the time he was age sixteen and the time he was age twenty-five. It was amazing how his father went from being one of the dumbest men around, to being the smartest man he ever knew. It was a matter of perspective that came in.

A starting point—a focus in something that is important—is, "Young people hear the instruction of your father, forsake not the law of your mother." Realize that there is a level of experience and a level of just life that has been lived. That's really important and something that young people can really profit from in taking advantage of the things that their parents have learned and gone through.

Proverbs 1:9, "For they [wisdom, instruction, law] will be graceful ornaments on your head, and chains about your neck."

It warns in v. 10, “My son, if sinners entice you, do not consent.”

There are two things that it focuses on beginning in Proverbs 1:9 coming down through chapter 2. It focuses on discretion and understanding. Discretion and understanding, we are told, will protect a young person from the corrupting influence of the wrong kind of people. It will protect them from men who are corrupt and have upside down values—in other words, those who are lawless or criminally inclined—and immoral, loose women.

There are two areas that young men are warned about. One is getting tangled up with the wrong kind of men—people who are dishonest. This could be involving yourself in everything from the wrong kind of business dealings to just a wild bunch of people who are headed for trouble. There are two things that young men need to be warned about. First, stay away from the wrong kind of men—the kind of men who are dishonest, corrupt or wild, men who are not honest and law abiding. Keep away from that bunch because they are going to get you into trouble. Second, young men need to be warned to stay away from immoral, loose women because they will get you into trouble, too. That is very much brought out as we come down in Proverbs 1 and 2.

Proverbs 2:1-7, “My son, if you receive my words, and treasure my commands within you, so that you incline your ear to wisdom, and apply your heart to understanding; yes, if you cry out for discernment, and lift up your voice for understanding, if you seek her as silver, and search for her as for hidden treasures; then you will understand the fear of the Lord, and find the knowledge of God. For the Lord gives wisdom; from His mouth come knowledge and understanding; He stores up sound wisdom for the upright.”

Verse 11, “Discretion will preserve you; understanding will keep [KJV, “preserve”] you.” This expression of being discreet—of knowing when to do what—has to do with a certain careful, cautious approach. Understanding or discernment is being able to distinguish between what is appropriate and what is not. These things will preserve you.

Verse 12, “To deliver you from the way of evil, from the man who speaks perverse things.” –In other words, things that are upside down, things that are contrary to what’s true.

Verses 14-15, “Who rejoice in doing evil, and delight in the perversity of the wicked: whose ways are crooked, and who are devious in their paths.” You have men who are dishonest, people whose ways are upside down. You may get entangled with the wrong crowd, but knowledge, discretion and understanding will deliver you. It will keep you away from men who are dishonest, men who are not honorable in their intent and in their behavior.

Verses 16-17, “To deliver you from the immoral woman, from the seductress who flatters with her words, who forsakes the companion of her youth, and forgets the covenant of her God.” This is someone who is not faithful to her marriage vows and who has turned aside from the teachings of morality that she received.

Verses 18-21, “For her house leads down to death, and her paths to the dead; none who go to her return, nor do they regain the paths of life—so you may walk in the way of goodness, and keep to the paths of righteousness. For the upright will dwell in the land, and the blameless will remain in it.” There’s an emphasis here on discretion, understanding, and protecting young people from corrupting influences.

Can we afford to trust in our own feelings? Proverbs 3:5-6, “Trust in the Lord with all your heart, and lean not on your own understanding; in all your ways acknowledge Him, and He shall direct your paths.” In what can you trust? For some people, their trust and confidence is in the way they feel. The guide for their life is just their feelings, their emotions—I don’t feel like “this” or “that.” I tell you what, there are times I may not feel like getting up in the morning, and many times you don’t feel like getting up in the morning. There are some people who just go through life, and if they don’t feel like it, they don’t do it. But for those people, life doesn’t seem to go too well for them. Life doesn’t always feel good; doing what we should do doesn’t always feel good, but it is what we need to do.

It says, here, in what we are to put our trust. “Trust in the Lord with all your heart.” What is going to guide you? Don’t lean to your own understanding—the way it seems to me. If what God tells me is different from what I have come up with on my own, who am I going to trust? God says, ‘No, don’t do this. It’s going to hurt you.’ And my buddy over here says, ‘Yeah, go ahead and try it. It won’t hurt.’ Now, in whom do I have the most confidence?

Proverbs 3:5-6, “Trust in the Lord with all your heart, lean not to your own understanding. In all your ways acknowledge Him and He will direct your paths.” If you really want God to lead and guide you, He will.

Verse 7, “Do not be wise in your own eyes; fear the Lord and depart from evil.” That’s a starting point.

The first key to prosperity that the book of Proverbs gives is right here.

Verses 9-10, “Honor the Lord with your possessions, and with the first fruits of all your increase; so your barns will be filled with plenty, and your vats will overflow with new wine.” A starting point for getting ahead is putting God first. There are many principles in the book of Proverbs about getting ahead and prospering. There are many principles, and we will notice some of them as we go through. But the starting point is putting God first; honor Him with the first fruits.

We are told in vv. 11-12, “My son, do not despise the chastening of the Lord, nor detest His correction; for whom the Lord loves He corrects, just as a father the son in whom he delights.” God corrects His children. Many times circumstances and various things are there to instruct and to chasten us.

Verses 13-16, “Happy is the man who finds wisdom, and the man who gains understanding; for her proceeds are better than the profits of silver, and her gain than fine gold. She is more precious than rubies, and all the things you may desire cannot compare with her. Length of days is in her right hand, in her left hand riches and honor.”

It is talking about wisdom and the importance of wisdom. Wisdom, we are told, is more precious than rubies. Wisdom has greater value than all sorts of money and material things because there are a lot of people who have money, but they lack the wisdom to properly live and enjoy life.

Verses 17-18, “Her [speaking of wisdom] ways are ways of pleasantness, and all her paths are peace. She is a tree of life to those who take hold of her, and happy are all who retain her.” Wisdom is something that leads to a happy and successful life. It is far more than just an accumulation of money. There are a lot of people who have accumulated a lot of money who have been awfully big failures. They have lived miserable, unhappy lives and have seen a lot of tragedy. Some of the people the world would see as being the most successful have been miserable and have committed suicide.

Look at someone like Elvis Presley or Marilyn Monroe. You would think they had the things that everybody thinks would make them happy. They had fame and fortune. Elvis Presley didn’t have to worry about enough money to buy what he wanted. He lived in a fabulous mansion. He was famous, popular and all kinds of things. How many people thought Marilyn Monroe was pretty and glamorous? She had all sorts of people after her attention.

You can think of different people, different entertainers—people, that on the surface, had what most people think, ‘If I had that, I’d be happy. If I was famous, popular, beautiful, rich and people liked me, oh, that would be wonderful.’ There were people that had some of those things, and yet you read about their lives in their latter years and they were miserable. They were miserable and unhappy. There’s a lot more to happiness. What they lacked, and what so many people lack, is not money and some of these things. It’s the wisdom of how to properly relate to God and to our fellowman and to be able to live a productive, serving life that involves and is based on wisdom.

We see here the value of wisdom that’s laid out. It’s more precious than any price tag you could put on it. It continues to stress the importance of wisdom through chapter 3.

Verses 21-23, “My son, let them not depart from your eyes—keep sound wisdom and discretion; so they will be life to your soul and grace to your neck. Then you will walk safely in your way, and your foot will not stumble.” It describes the way we walk through life directed by wisdom.

Proverbs 4:1-7, “Hear, my children, the instruction of a father, and give attention to know understanding; for I give you good doctrine: do not forsake my law. When I was my father’s son, tender and the only one in the sight of my mother, he also taught me, and said to me; ‘Let your heart retain my words; keep my commands, and live. Get wisdom! Get understanding! Do not forget, nor turn away from the words of my mouth. Do not forsake her, and she will preserve you; love her, and she will keep you. Wisdom is the principal thing; therefore get wisdom. And in all your getting, get understanding.’”

Again, this emphasizes wisdom and acquiring wisdom. We are told wisdom is the principal thing. In that sense, focus on getting wisdom; pursue it. Wisdom ultimately comes from God. Who is the wisest Being in the entire universe? God is! The source of wisdom is God. We can go to God for wisdom of what to do, how to do it and when to do it. Wisdom involves all of those things—the knowledge of what, the understanding of how, and the wisdom that puts the two of those together with when. What’s appropriate, how it fits in and when it fits in.

Verses 14-16, “Do not enter the path of the wicked, and do not walk in the way of evil. Avoid it, do not travel on it; turn away from it and pass on. For they do not sleep unless they have done evil; and their sleep is taken away unless they make someone fall.” Unless they get into something, they just can’t get a good night’s rest. It says don’t get tangled up in that.

Verse 19, “The way of the wicked is like darkness; they do not know what makes them stumble.”

Verse 24, “Put away from you a deceitful mouth, and put perverse lips far from you.” We are told something here about our mouth. We are told to put away the deceitful mouth and the perverse lips—in other words, lies, falsification of the truth and evil slanderous words. Get rid of the things that we say that are hurtful, harmful and false, things that are going to stir up and create trouble.

Proverbs 5:1-6, “My son, pay attention to my wisdom; lend your ear to my understanding, that you may preserve discretion, and that your lips may keep knowledge. For the lips of an immoral woman drip honey, and her mouth is smoother than oil; but in the end she is bitter as wormwood, sharp as a two-edged sword. Her feet go down to death; her steps lay hold of hell. Lest you ponder her path of life—her ways are unstable; you do not know them.”

Verses 8-11, “Remove your way far from her, and do not go near the door of her house, lest you give your honor to others, and your years to the cruel one; lest aliens be filled with your wealth, and your labors go to the house of a foreigner; and you mourn at last, when your flesh and your body are consumed.”

As you go through, it gives very practical things and describes, in a poetic way, instructions to a young man to stay away from loose, immoral women. It talks about how they may seem so sweet and pretty and “this” and “that,” but in the end, she is bitter as wormwood and sharp as a two-edged sword. The end of it is bitter, and it’s going to hurt.

Verse 8, “Remove your way far from her, and do not go near the door of her house.” Get away. Don’t even get close. Stay away from this kind of person.

What are the consequences if you don’t?

Verse 9, “Lest you give your honor to others [One of the things that will happen is that you’ll harm your reputation; it will hurt your reputation.], and your years to the cruel one.” A lot of people have become entangled in unhappy, miserable marriages. They’ve become entangled in things, and some of the years that should have been their young and happy years, they have been tangled up with some real hurt and real pain.

Verse 10, “Lest aliens be filled with your wealth, and your labors go to the house of a foreigner.” One of the consequences, when people get tangled up in immorality, is that they may have children out of wedlock which winds up being costly or they wind up marrying and divorcing. Strangers are ultimately filled with their wealth. They are working, and it’s all going out—everything from child support payments to “whatever.”

There are several problems. One is about reputation. It also talks about the years of young adulthood (the twenties and thirties). Instead of years of pleasantness and happiness, it is years that you are in a cruel, unhappy situation. And it talks about the economic problems.

Verse 11, “And you mourn at last, when your flesh and your body are consumed.” Venereal disease is not a new thing. It was around in Solomon’s day. It’s talking about diseases you can get. AIDS, of course, is quite well known at this point in time, but there have been all sorts of different ones around. When some of these things happen, then you will regret it.

Verse 15, the point is, “Drink water from your own cistern, and running water from your own well.” That’s not talking about the fact that you shouldn’t ask somebody for a drink of water if you’re at a neighbor’s house. It is a poetic description of the fact that a husband and wife should enjoy one another and be faithful to one another. That’s what it’s talking about.

Verses 15-17, “Drink water from your own cistern, and running water from your own well. Should your fountains disperse abroad, streams of water in the streets? Let them be only your own, and not for strangers with you.” This is talking about your children.

Verse 18, “Let your fountain be blessed, and rejoice with the wife of your youth.” This is a very poetic description of the importance of being faithful—one man and one woman loving one another, saving themselves for one another, and being faithful to one another. It’s a very important point.

We see that vv. 3-4 make the contrast—how an immoral woman might appear beautiful and desirable, but the end result is very bitter and very painful.

Verse 15 says a man should find contentment with his lawful wife and not get tangled up pursuing others. This is a very important section.

Have you noticed? When he starts talking about wisdom, what does he start talking about?

If you go through this section of Proverbs, you will find that most of Proverbs 3, 4, 5, 6, 7 and 8, when he is focusing on wisdom, he spends an awful lot of time talking about money and sex. Those have been the things that have been the downfall for an awful lot of people. They've become tangled up in dishonest schemes and things that were not honest and honorable.

We have some big "high rollers" who are spending their time in jail right now. I think Charles Keating just got released from jail today. He was the one that was behind some of the big savings and loan crisis. He got several congressmen and senators who had been catching a little heat, too.

On the one hand, people get tangled up in things that they shouldn't, in terms of money. And another thing has to do with morality and the distinction there. These are areas that really tie into wisdom.

In chapters 4 and 5, we saw the emphasis on sex. Now in chapter 6 we get back to money again.

Proverbs 6:1-2, "My son, if you become surety for your friend, if you have shaken hands in pledge for a stranger, you are snared by the words of your own mouth." You better go humble yourself and see if you can get out of it (v. 3). This is talking about people who are quick to obligate themselves for someone else's debt—being surety and co-signing. Boy, you can get yourself into a heap of trouble there.

Verses 6-9, "Go to the ant, you sluggard! Consider her ways and be wise, which, having no captain, overseer or ruler, provides her supplies in the summer, and gathers her food in the harvest. How long will you slumber, O sluggard? When will you rise from your sleep?"

Here, we are talking about money and management. Go to the ant. Learn something from the ant. What ways of the ant can you consider to be wise? Well, the ant does what it is supposed to do, when it is supposed to do it. There's not another little ant out there cracking a whip saying, 'Hurry up.' They don't have a guide, an overseer or ruler. There's not one little ant that's making the other little ants do it. Ants, by nature, do what they are supposed to do. They provide their food in the summer and gather their food in the harvest. They take advantage of the opportunity. When are you going to gather your food? After it is all rotted? It's pointing out the ant as an example of diligence.

There were warnings earlier about avoiding the person who is dishonest and corrupt and about entangling ourselves in things. Now, it says there are some wise things to do. One is to be diligent. Look at the ant. The ant does what it is supposed to do, when it is supposed to do it, and it takes advantage of and uses opportunity. That's an important lesson of managing our affairs. That's what the ant is doing. He is taking advantage of opportunity. When the opportunity presents itself, use it because opportunity is here and then it's gone. Opportunity doesn't just stay.

Verse 9 is talking about the person who is lazy and just kind of lies around. They never get up and do what they are supposed to do.

Verses 10-11, "A little sleep, a little slumber, a little folding of the hands to sleep—so shall your poverty come on you like a robber, and your need like an armed man." It says that if you're lazy and just lie around and you don't get up and work and do what you should do, you are going to find yourself caught by surprise with a lot of problems.

Verses 16-19, "These six things the Lord hates, yes, seven are an abomination to Him: a proud look, a lying tongue, hands that shed innocent blood, a heart that devises wicked plans, feet that are swift in running to evil, a false witness who speaks lies, and one who sows discord among brethren."

Here are things that God absolutely hates. It focuses in on an attitude of pride. We can convey outwardly the way we think and feel inwardly. It starts out by talking about a proud look. A proud look is reflective of a proud heart. God hates that. He hates a lying tongue—somebody that's dishonest, corrupt and harms and hurts innocent people. God hates a heart that devises wicked imagination—up to things they shouldn't be. He that sows discord among brethren is something God hates. God does not value and appreciate discord. He values harmony. We should desire to live in peace. We are not to go out and try to stir up trouble and get people mad at one another. We are not to spread rumors and gossip that serve to agitate and stir up people to where we turn people against one another. That's not God's way.

Psalms 133:1, he says, "...how good and how pleasant it is for brethren to dwell together in unity." One of the things God hates is sowing discord among brethren—stirring people up and spreading things that hurt and separate and cause problems.

Proverbs 6:20-23, "My son, keep your father's command, and do not forsake the law of your mother. Bind them continually upon your heart; tie them around your neck. When you roam, they will lead you; when you sleep, they will keep you; and when you awake, they will speak with you. For the commandment is a lamp, and the law is light; reproofs of instruction are the way of life." It illuminates the way we should travel through life.

Verses 24-29, "To keep you from the evil woman, from the flattering tongue of a seductress. Do not lust after her beauty in your heart, nor let her allure you with her eyelids. For by means of a harlot a man is reduced to a crust of bread; and an adulteress will prey upon his precious life. Can a man take fire to his bosom, and his clothes not be burned? Can one walk on hot coals, and his feet not be seared? So is he who goes in to his neighbor's wife; whoever touches her shall not be innocent."

Verse 32, "Whoever commits adultery with a woman lacks understanding; he who does so destroys his own soul." It's talking about the problems and consequences that result. These are some very important principles that are brought out. It says he who commits adultery with a woman lacks understanding. He's not considering the end result of his conduct, which is the destruction of everything that's really important. That's a lack of understanding because if you really think it through, you realize that it just doesn't make sense. It's just not something that is going to be good.

Proverbs 7:1-7, "My son, keep my words, and treasure my commands within you. Keep my commands and live, and my law as the apple of your eye. Bind them on your fingers; write them on the tablet of your heart. Say to wisdom, 'You are my sister,' and call understanding your nearest kin, that they may keep you from the immoral woman, from the seductress who flatters with her words. For at the window of my house I looked through my lattice, and saw among the simple, I perceived among the youths, a young man devoid of understanding."

Here's a young man who is not too bright, walking down the street. It describes this in a poetic fashion.

Verses 8-18, "Passing along the street near her corner; and he took the path to her house in the twilight, in the evening, in the black and dark night. And there a woman met him, with the attire of a harlot, and a crafty heart. She was loud and rebellious; her feet would not stay at home. At times she was outside, at times in the open square, lurking at every corner. So she caught him and kissed him; with an impudent face she said to him: 'I have peace offerings with me; today I have paid my vows. So I came out to meet you, diligently to seek your face, and I have found you. I have spread my bed with tapestry, colored coverings of Egyptian linen. I have perfumed my bed with myrrh, aloes, and cinnamon. Come, let us take our fill of love until morning; let us delight ourselves with love."

Verses 21-22, "With her enticing speech she caused him to yield, with her flattering lips she seduced him. Immediately he went after her, as an ox goes to the slaughter, or as a fool to the correction of the stocks." It's talking about the problems that come. A harlot is pictured, this immoral woman.

Notice several things about her. One, she is described with the attire of a harlot, "And there a woman met him with the attire of a harlot, and a crafty heart." She is described as dressing in a seductive way, dressing in a way that does not reflect decency and modesty.

Sometimes you drive down the street in certain areas of town and see somebody standing there. You don't have to give a whole lot of guesses as to what is their trade. It's pretty obvious just by the way they are dressed. Unfortunately, sometimes this sort of appearance gets copied and shouldn't be. We should be conscious of that and teach our young girls to be conscious of that. You don't want to look like a streetwalker. You just don't! That is nothing that is good and nothing that is to be copied.

Yet there's certain ways of looking, ways of dress and appearance that just sort of stands out that way. It describes that she does not reflect decency and modesty in the way that she dresses and grooms herself.

Then it says she is loud and stubborn. She is pictured as dressing in a seductive way and is loud, wild, rebellious and stubborn. She's a "gad-about." She's the very opposite of the picture of a godly woman. In Proverbs 7:9-11, you see this picture.

Now, compare that with I Peter 3:2-6, "when they observe your chaste conduct accompanied by fear. Do not let your beauty be that outward adorning of arranging the hair, of wearing gold, or of putting on fine apparel; but let it be the hidden person of the heart, with the incorruptible ornament of a gently and quiet spirit, which is very precious in the sight of God. For in this manner, in former times, the holy women who trusted in God also adorned themselves, being submissive to their own husbands, as Sarah obeyed Abraham...." The very opposite is described here.

Titus 2:3-5, "the older women likewise, that they be reverent in behavior, not slanderers, not given to much wine, teachers of good things—that they admonish the young women to love their husbands, to love their children, to be discreet, chaste, homemakers, good, obedient to their own husbands, that the word of God may not be blasphemed.”

That’s quite a contrast to someone who has on the attire of a harlot, is loud and stubborn, out running the streets and never staying home. It’s sort of like this fiasco—this soap opera—that was played out on television by way of a trial down in Florida several weeks ago. You remember the one involving Senator Kennedy’s nephew and this woman that he picked up at a bar. I don’t have to know all the details, but I can just tell you this—you won’t find the virtuous woman of Proverbs 31 hanging out in a bar at two or three o’clock in the morning, picking up some strange man and going home with him. That’s just not where you go to look if you are looking for the virtuous woman. Of course, she wasn’t looking for the virtuous man either. They each sort of found what they were looking for, and then somewhere along the line, a disagreement set in.

There are places that you just don’t go if you are not looking for trouble. And you don’t have to be the smartest fellow to ever “come down the pipe” to figure out the caliber of people that hang around in these places at some sort of “oddball” hour. Nobody is up to any good when they are out hanging around some joint, boozing it up in the wee hours of the morning. There’s just nothing constructive and good going on. Decent people are home in bed. The ones that are hanging around the bars are looking for trouble, and chances are they are going to find it. It may not be the trouble they wanted, but that’s just the way it is. There’s a lot of grief and trouble that comes.

If we are where we need to be, doing what we should do, we can save ourselves a lot of grief. I daresay both of them probably look back on that and have cause to regret what they got into that night. I suspect Kennedy’s nephew and the woman each paid a heavy price in some of those ways. That’s an example that’s gotten a lot of publicity because it involves someone who’s a well-known public figure. But believe me—that kind of thing happens on a regular basis involving people that aren’t famous, so it never really makes the news. That kind of thing happens. And it happens a lot. People’s lives are messed up and unhappy.

That’s one of the things Proverbs says. It’s advice to young people that it’s not a smart thing to do. That’s not going to make you happy. That’s not going to lead to real satisfaction in life. It’s going to lead to a lot of grief and a lot of pain.

Verse 22, the end result for the young man who goes that path, “Immediately he went after her, as an ox goes to the slaughter, or as a fool to the correction of the stocks.” They don’t know what they are getting into until they are there. An ox isn’t very smart. He goes right into the slaughter pen and doesn’t know what is going on until it’s too late. A cow is just not an animal that has a lot of foresight. That’s what it is comparing here. It’s comparing a lack of foresight. People get into something and don’t realize what they are into until it’s too late to get out. It says here that this kind of young man just sort of gets into something and doesn’t figure out what’s going to happen until it’s too late.

Verse 23, “Till an arrow struck his liver. As a bird hastens to the snare, he did not know it would take his life.” It’s talking about something going into a trap. It’s making the comparison that when people get into this kind of mess, they didn’t sit down and think it through.

I don’t think that William Kennedy Smith sat down and thought, ‘What I would really like is to find myself in court (dragged out for weeks and months), have all this negative publicity and go through the trauma of all this stuff.’ It was a matter that he didn’t think. And his uncle, who should have had at least a little bit of experience, should have helped him think. He didn’t think either. I’m sure they all have had a chance to do a little more thinking. Now, whether they have learned anything from it or not, I don’t know. But again, they are not unique. We know about them because they are famous. They have a famous name, so their picture is plastered all over the paper. But all kinds of people, who are just common everyday people, have done some of the same dumb things and have wound up with a lot of problems, a lot of pain, heartache and hurt as a result of some of these things. So, it’s a warning.

Proverbs 8:1-3, “Does not wisdom cry out, and understanding lift up her voice? She takes her stand on the top of the high hill, beside the way, where the paths meet. She cries out by the gates, at the entry of the city, at the entrance of the doors.”

Verse 13, “The fear of the Lord is to hate evil; pride and arrogance and the evil way and the perverse mouth I hate.” What is the fear of God? The fear of God is to hate evil. If you really stand in awe and reverence of God, if you are really impressed with God, then you hate evil. It's sort of a contrast. If we are impressed with God, we hate evil because evil is the opposite of what God is. If I am impressed with someone, I want to be like him. And the things that are the opposite of them, I hate. The fear of God is to hate evil. To really stand in awe of God, we hate evil.

It mentions specifically pride, arrogance, the evil way and a perverse mouth. A perverse mouth means a mouth that is full of a lot of evil, ugly and dishonest things. We don't like that.

It speaks here of wisdom. In some of these cases, wisdom is personified. Wisdom is described as though it were a person. It goes through and talks about the importance and the beauty of wisdom.

Verses 33-36, "Hear wisdom and be wise, and do not disdain it. Blessed is the man who listens to me, watching daily at my gates, waiting at the posts of my doors. For whoever finds me finds life, and obtains favor from the Lord; but he who sins against me wrongs his own soul; all those who hate me love death."

It's speaking of wisdom. If you find wisdom, you find life and obtain favor with the Lord. If you sin against wisdom, you are just hurting and wronging yourself and really loving death. When you find wisdom, it's like finding life. It leads to good results here and now and on into the future.

Proverbs 9:1, "Wisdom has built her house, she has hewn out her seven pillars."

Verses 4-6, "Whoever is simple, let him turn in here! As for him who lacks understanding, she says to him, 'Come; eat of my bread and drink of the wine which I have mixed. Forsake foolishness and live, and go in the way of understanding.'" It's inviting the young person and says, 'Come in, sit down and eat with me.' This is speaking of wisdom. "Forsake foolishness and live."

Verses 7-9, "He who reproves a scoffer gets shame for himself, and he who rebukes a wicked man gets himself a blemish [KJV, "blot"]. Do not reprove a scoffer, lest he hate you; rebuke a wise man, and he will love you. Give instruction to a wise man, and he will be still wiser; teach a just man, and he will increase in learning."

We see quite a contrast here. If you correct or give instruction to the scorner or the wicked person, they just get mad. They don't like you telling them that they are wrong. So, on the one hand, we have people who get mad over any sort of correction or instruction. Boy, you have a blot in their book. They have it in for you now. If you don't agree with them on everything or if you point out and show them where they are wrong, they have it in for you.

Now that's quite a contrast because if you rebuke a wise man, he will love you. Why? Because he appreciates the fact that he's now smarter than he was before. If I am a wise man and you tell me something I didn't know, I am going to appreciate that. I am glad you told me because now I know more than I did. The guy who is the "know-it-all," you can't tell them anything. You try to tell them something and they just get mad. That's no way to be. If you give instruction to a wise man, he will be yet wiser. He's going to appreciate it. A wise person appreciates the value of learning. He knows that he doesn't know it all.

God says if you find wisdom, you find life and obtain favor of the Lord (Proverbs 8:35). That's something to desire and have. We have to desire to grow in that. And there's quite a contrast between correcting a wise person and correcting a foolish person.

Verses 13-18, "A foolish woman is clamorous; she is simple, and knows nothing. For she sits at the door of her house, on a seat by the highest places of the city, to call to those who pass by, who go straight on their way: whoever is simple, let him turn in here; and as for him who lacks understanding, she says to him, 'stolen water is sweet, and bread eaten in secret is pleasant.' But he does not know that the dead are there, that her guests are in the depths of hell."

So, there's a contrast. There's an allure, attractiveness to the forbidden. "Stolen waters are sweet."—Illicit sex and other things, also. "...to enjoy the passing (temporary) pleasure of sin" (Hebrew 11:25). There's a certain allure, a certain attraction to these things that are forbidden. But the end result of that lifestyle is total destruction. There's nothing good that is going to come from that sort of thing.

It's interesting. The things that Solomon really focuses in on are wisdom, knowledge and understanding. He focuses on the importance of a young person gaining knowledge and wisdom. What are the things that he talks about? He talks about how important it is to listen and be receptive to correction and instruction—starting with your parents. Parents have experience of life, plus there isn't anybody a young person is going to have in his life that loves him and cares about his future more than the parents. So, here's somebody who has experience in life and who has your best interest at heart.

This section emphasizes to listen and be receptive to correction and instruction. It emphasizes to have a thirst for knowledge, for learning and growing in what you know. There are many warnings and many descriptions about the contrast between moral and immoral behavior and where it leads. This is one of the most important things for young people to be warned about. Then there's a lot of instruction about handling finances and material things, starting off with honoring God with the first fruits—putting God first. Then it goes through and talks about getting tangled up with people who are crooked and dishonest and how they are going to come to no good. We are told to be diligent. Go to the ant. Learn how to think, to be wise by being careful, working hard and doing what you should do, when you should do it.

There are several basic things that have to do with life and the way that we handle life. There is an emphasis on wisdom, how we gain it and—what God has put in this important section in the book of Proverbs (these first nine chapters)—how to apply it in our lives.

Hopefully, in this particular section of Proverbs that we have gone through this evening, you have gotten a little bit of insight into some of the things that are really important. Proverbs is a good section to go over, to study and to talk about with our children. Sometimes it helps to get another translation. Perhaps a simple English translation sort of helps us to really get out of these proverbs what God has packed in because there's an awful lot of life and experience that is packed into this section.

Next time we are going to cover more of Proverbs beginning with chapter 10 through most of chapter 22.

The Writings Series—Proverbs 10—22:16

We are going through this series on the Writings and, particularly, here in the book of Proverbs. This evening we are covering Proverbs 10 through 22:16, the central and main section of the book.

As we started in the book of Proverbs, we found that the first nine chapters constitute a preface to the central and main section of the book. One of the things we noticed, as we went through the beginning part, is that most of the first nine chapters are in more of a discourse style. It's a little different than what we normally think of as a Proverb. A Proverb is usually a short one-sentence, concise, pithy statement that sort of sums up information. It makes a very concise, pithy statement usually by drawing some sort of contrast or comparison. The proverbs in this section are primarily proverbs as we normally think of them.

It opens in Proverbs 10:1, "The proverbs of Solomon...."

We noted at the beginning that the book of Proverbs divides into seven sections. The introduction, the first few verses, is the first section. The second section is a discourse on wisdom. Then the third section opens in Proverbs 10:1, "The proverbs of Solomon...."

There are three bodies of Proverbs. This third section (Proverbs 10 through 22:16) is the first body of Proverbs.

Proverbs 22:17, "Incline your ear and hear the words of the wise...." That begins the second body of Proverbs and continues down until the end of chapter 24.

We pick up the third body of Proverbs in Proverbs 25:1, "These also are proverbs of Solomon which the men of Hezekiah king of Judah copied." There were two bodies of Proverbs that were proverbs of Solomon, and there were a collection of sayings of the wise ones (the sophreim), the wise men of Israel. Solomon wrote the bulk of it. Some of them were collections of other wise sayings. Then a couple of centuries later, in the time of Hezekiah, there were proverbs of Solomon that had not been included in the book, that the men of Hezekiah copied out and added to the book of Proverbs. So, you wind up with these three bodies of Proverbs that we would describe as the third, fourth and fifth sections of the book.

The sixth sections would be chapter 30, the prophecy of Agur, and the seventh section, chapter 31, the prophecy of Lemuel, which is what we primarily term the discourse on the virtuous woman.

We are going through what is called the first body of Proverbs this evening. They are concise statements that express wise rules of conduct. There are warnings and lessons drawn from experience, and there is moral reflection. There isn't any particular systematic order or logical sequence that is followed because like the very phases of human life for which they offer guidance, the proverbs are of a miscellaneous character. They are arranged in miscellaneous order, just as we go through life and encounter experiences in miscellaneous order.

The book of Proverbs was not so much directed at the wise that could appreciate the loftier motives of virtuous conduct, but at the simple that needed the lesson that, in that sense, honesty is the best policy. So, many times the practical aspect of life is brought out here.

Proverbs 10:3, "The Lord will not allow the righteous soul to famish, but He casts away the desire of the wicked." We have a contrast between what God doesn't allow and what He does.

Verse 4, "He who deals with a slack hand becomes poor, but the hand of the diligent makes one rich."

Verse 5, "He who gathers in summer is a wise son, but he who sleeps in harvest is a son who causes shame."

If you look right here, there are three keys to prosperity that are brought out. God does not allow the soul of the righteous to famish. The first key to prosperity is righteousness. That's one of the reasons we've got economic problems as a nation. The solution to our economic problems is right here in Proverbs 10:3, 4 and 5. We can sit down and write President Bush a letter and tell him what he didn't include in his state of the union address. We could tell him what would solve all of the economic problems. The first thing is righteousness. We don't have a whole lot of that in this country, do we? That's a problem. Righteousness is the first key to prosperity.

Verse 4, "He becomes poor that deals with a slack hand, but the hand of the diligent makes rich." The second key to prosperity is diligence, not being careless, not being lazy, but diligent. Diligence carries the connotation of not only of hard work but also of being careful. Being slack, in a sense, means carelessness. It goes beyond somebody who is lazy. It's somebody who is just careless with what they do. They are sloppy in their workmanship. So, you have righteousness and diligence.

Verse 5 brings out the third key and that is taking advantage of opportunity. "He that gathers in summer is a wise son, but he who sleeps in harvest is a son who causes shame." If you gather in the summer, you are a wise son. Why? –Because that is when the crops are coming in. If you are sleeping through the harvest, if you don't take advantage of the opportunity when it presents itself, it will pass.

Any farmer knows that you harvest when the crop's coming in. We can't say we don't feel like it this week; we'll wait till next week. You're not going to eat—plainly and simply. The crop passes its peak. It begins to decay and deteriorate and the opportunity is no longer there. Any farmer knows you pick it when it's there. You have to go get it when it's ready.

That's a lesson of life and it applies to everyone. You don't have to be a farmer for that to work for you. You have to take advantage of opportunities when they present themselves because they don't continue forever. Here you have three keys. If you look at it, would you say that this would explain a lot of problems in terms of the American economics: 1) a lack of righteousness, 2) a lack of diligent workmanship and 3) not taking advantage of opportunity, not having an entrepreneurial spirit, not stepping out and seizing the moment.

It's amazing and very simple. It's buried right here. Really, what you have is important keys to life. It certainly would make a vast difference in this country if just these three keys were applied. There's an awful lot that is packed in here, an awful lot of wisdom. Solomon wrote it three thousand years ago; here we are three thousand years later and still haven't figured out things that we have access to right here.

Verse 8, "The wise in heart will receive commands, but a prating fool [a fool of lips] will fall." One characteristic of someone who is wise is that they will listen. A fool is just mouthing off. He's sounding off and is going to fall flat on his face. Nobody can tell him anything. He never stops talking long enough to listen. "The wise in heart will receive commands."

They will listen. You can give them instruction. Someone who is wise is not a "know-it-all." When you run into someone who thinks he knows everything, the one thing you can be sure of is he doesn't. One of the things he doesn't know is that he doesn't know everything.

Someone like that is headed for trouble. We can all save ourselves a lot of trouble if we listen to what somebody else has to say.

Let's notice some admonitions about the tongue. Verse 11, "The mouth of the righteous is a well of life, but violence covers the mouth of the wicked." We see some things right here about the use of the tongue, things that we should and shouldn't say.

Verse 12, "Hatred stirs up strife, but love covers all sins."

Verse 13, "Wisdom is found on the lips of him who has understanding, but a rod is for the back of him who is devoid of understanding."

Verse 18, "Whoever hides hatred has lying lips, and whoever spreads slander is a fool."

Verse 19, "In the multitude of words sin is not lacking, but he who restrains his lips is wise."

Verse 20, "The tongue of the righteous is choice silver; the heart of the wicked is worth little."

Verse 21, "The lips of the righteous feed many, but fools die for lack of wisdom."

Verse 31, "The mouth of the righteous brings forth wisdom, but the perverse tongue will be cut out."

Verse 32, "The lips of the righteous know what is acceptable, but the mouth of the wicked what is perverse."

There are several basic admonitions about the tongue. There is an awful lot packed in here about the tongue.

Proverbs 11:1, "A false balance is an abomination to the Lord, but a just weight is His delight." God is concerned with fairness and equity in our relationships and dealings, and certainly in our business dealings. God is concerned that we deal with one another in a fair and equitable way.

Verse 4, "Riches do not profit in the day of wrath, but righteousness delivers from death."

When the day of God's wrath comes, when the day of the Lord comes, we read in Isaiah (Isaiah 2:18-21) about people casting their gold to the moles and the bats because it is not able to deliver them in the day of the Lord's wrath. "Riches do not profit in the day of wrath, but righteousness delivers from death." That's the key. We have to get our priorities straight.

Verse 13, "A talebearer reveals secrets, but he who is of a faithful spirit conceals a matter." There's a time to hold our peace. Some people just go around telling everything they know and a lot they don't know. But someone who is of a faithful spirit, someone who really has some integrity and is a faithful friend, is not going to spread a lot of rumors and gossip.

We have some things about wise counsel.

Verse 14, “Where there is no counsel, the people fall; but in the multitude of counselors there is safety.” It shows the wisdom of a multitude of wise counsel. In Proverbs 12:5, it shows the importance of the source of the counsel. It is not just counsel; it is wise counsel.

Proverbs 12:5, “The thoughts of the righteous are right, but the counsels of the wicked are deceitful.” You don’t want the counsel of the wicked. “...in the multitude of counselors there is safety,” but you want wise counselors and right counselors. When it says, “in the multitude of counselors there is safety,” that is talking about the fact that you get input from several different people, and different ones are going to notice different things. You can gain some insight.

This verse can sometimes be misapplied by people who go from one person to another, sort of telling their side of the story until they get the story right, and then finds someone who will agree with him. That’s not what it means to have a multitude of counselors. Normally, the context of a multitude of counselors, you have several that you are talking to at the same time. They are all aware of the same information and there’s room for an interchange of information. There are insights that different ones have, and they stimulate one another.

Verse 15, “He who is surety for a stranger will suffer for it, but one who hates being surety is secure.” It’s talking about somebody obligating themselves for other’s debts.

Verse 16, “A gracious woman retains honor, but ruthless men retain riches.”

Verse 17, “The merciful man does good for his own soul, but he who is cruel troubles his own flesh.”

Proverbs 12:10, “A righteous man regards the life of his animal, but the tender mercies of the wicked are cruel.” Mercy and kindness is an attribute of character. A righteous man regards the life of his animal. He is not going to mistreat even a dumb animal. It reveals something about the character of a person. When you find somebody who has a streak of cruelty in them—if they are cruel and uncaring and mistreat a dog or a horse or something like that—they will turn around and mistreat people, too. They have that lack of any sense of responsibility or have that lack of kindness. “A righteous man regards the life of his animal...” He is going to make sure that it’s taken care of. He will make sure that it is fed and watered and is not going to mistreat it. That is, in one sense, a minor point, but it is sort of an interesting observation in terms of human character.

There are a number of things that we find concerning the use of the tongue.

Verse 13, “The wicked is ensnared by the transgression of his lips, but the righteous will come through trouble.”

Verse 15, “The way of a fool is right in his own eyes, but he who heeds counsel is wise.” This is an important point. It would make a good Bible study to go through the book of Proverbs and look up the word “fool” in a concordance. Then go through every place in Proverbs that mentions “fool” to see what one is because that’s a good list of things not to be. One characteristic of a fool is that he is right in his own eyes. You can never tell him anything.

“He who heeds counsel is wise.” Over and over, Proverbs emphasizes the importance of this principle. “Right in his own eyes”—this know-it-all-mentality or this sort of thing where somebody isolates himself and has his own mind made up and won’t listen to anybody else. “The way of a fool is right in his own eyes, but he who heeds counsel is wise.” –A very important principle.

Verse 17, “He who speaks truth declares righteousness, but a false witness, deceit.”

Verse 18, “There is one who speaks like the piercings of a sword, but the tongue of the wise promotes health.”

Verse 19, “The truthful lip shall be established forever, but a lying tongue is but for a moment.” We see a contrast here.

Proverbs 13:3, “He who guards his mouth preserves his life, but he who opens wide his lips shall have destruction.” We find that there is a way that the tongue can be used that is of value and leads to life and a wrong use that leads to destruction.

We also see a lot of keys in Proverbs 12 and 13. In fact, let’s notice, and we will find seven keys to sound financial management given in Proverbs 12 and 13.

Proverbs 12:11, “He who tills his land will be satisfied with bread, but he who follows frivolity [KJV, “vain persons”] is devoid of understanding.” The first thing we see is working steadily at a job contrasted to following after the “high rollers”—the people who have some sort of get-rich-quick scheme. The first key to prosperity is just working hard and steadily. “...he who follows frivolity [vain persons] is devoid of understanding.” You always have somebody coming down, and he has some big get-rich-quick scheme. Well, if he was going to get rich that quick, why hasn't he already done it? Why isn't he living on easy street?

This reminds me. I believe it was in the parking lot at Wal-Mart. We came back to the car and there were these cards that were up on the windshield. They were trying to interest you to call this telephone number. It said, "Would you like to earn $10,000 a month?" The way the card was written out, they had the number to fill in. It was a cheaply produced thing to begin with. This sort of disreputable-looking guy was going around the parking lot and was sticking these cards on the windshields. Obviously, he wasn't earning $10,000 a month or anything close to it. He probably hadn't earned $10,000 in the last year. He was doing this instead of just sticking with something and being productive.

Proverbs 12:24, "The hand of the diligent will rule, but the slothful will be put to forced labor." A second key is diligence; working steadily at a sensible job and being diligent.

Verse 27, "The slothful man does not roast what he took in hunting, but diligence is man's precious possession." It warns us about being wasteful. It shows the importance of utilizing what you have and not letting it waste. So, here's the third key.

The fourth key is in Proverbs 13:4, "The soul of a sluggard desires, and has nothing; but the soul of the diligent shall be made rich." Here we have a contrast between a lazy dreamer and a diligent doer. Some people always have these big ideas, but they never really get down to it.

The fifth key is v. 11, "Wealth gained by dishonesty will be diminished, but he who gathers by labor will increase." It's sort of another way of saying, "easy come; easy go." It's the way we go about it.

Verse 18, "Poverty and shame will come to him who disdains correction, but he who regards reproof will be honored." A very important sixth key to success is taking correction and instruction.

The seventh key is in v. 23, "Much food is in the fallow ground of the poor, and for lack of justice there is waste [KJV, "is destroyed for want of judgment"]." -Waste and lack of good management skills. Lack of judgment is often a major cause of poverty. It's not that there wasn't anything, but it's destroyed for lack of judgment. The analogy would be like a farmer who has a pretty good harvest but doesn't properly store it. He was careless and it rotted and decayed. He didn't get out and pull out the bad ones, so pretty soon the decay spread through the whole pile. The whole bunch of potatoes or apples or whatever, began to decay because he was not diligent in the way that he did it. It was destroyed for lack of judgment.

We see a number of basic, very commonsense principles: working steadily at an occupation, being diligent, utilizing what you have, not letting it waste, not being a lazy dreamer, being a diligent doer, not having an "easy-come, easy-go" approach, being able to take correction and instruction, being careful and managing well, trying to use good judgment with what we have. Let's notice a couple of verses in Proverbs 13 that make an interesting contrast.

Proverbs 13:12, "Hope deferred makes the heart sick, but when the desire comes, it is a tree of life."

Verse 19, "A desire accomplished is sweet to the soul, but it is an abomination to fools to depart from evil."

"Hope deferred makes the heart sick" is quite a contrast with "a desire accomplished." Frustration is perhaps the greatest cause and ultimately the root of a lot of anger, rage and depression, as well. At the root of those, you usually find frustration.

Frustration is the opposite of what is described in v. 19, "The desire accomplished is sweet to the soul." People can waste their energies on things that they don't have control over. People can waste a lot of time, effort and energy on trying to change somebody else. They get their hopes up, and those hopes keep getting dashed down. "Hope deferred makes the heart sick." Your hope has to be based on reality; otherwise, you are setting yourself up to stay upset and heartsick all the time.

This is something that often happens. For instance, this is part of the emotional and psychological toll that is taken in an alcoholic family. "Hope deferred makes the heart sick." Promises are made over and over. 'I won't do it again; next time will be different,' and there isn't any solid basis for having that hope. Unrealistic hopes are gotten up and they are continually deferred—they are continually put off. Hope is deferred.

The key is: "The desire accomplished is sweet to the soul." We have to set our goals. We have to focus our energy and our attention on the things we can do something about—not dissipate our energy and our effort in things we don't have control over. Because if you don't have any control over it, it doesn't matter how hard you strain and how much effort you put out, you can't do it. There's a great deal of peace that comes from recognizing and accepting our limits and turning it over to God because in turning loose of the things that we don't have power over and concentrating our energy and our effort on what we do have some power over, then we can have the desire accomplished. We can set a goal and achieve it; that's sweet to the soul.

Verse 20, "He who walks with wise men will be wise, but the companion of fools will be destroyed." The people we associate with and whom we spend our time with is a matter of importance. But you can carry it down to entertainment—the television shows we watch and the books we read—because, in that sense, it is something we are spending time (sometimes hours) with. Being a constant companion of fools (the things that we spend our time taking into our mind) will affect us in a negative way. "He who walks with wise men will be wise."

There is an important principle on childrearing in v. 24, "He who spares his rod hates his son, but he who loves him disciplines him promptly [KJV, "early"]." This is an important principle.

Proverbs 14:1, "Every wise woman builds her house, but the foolish pulls it down with her hands." A woman, by her actions, has the ability to contribute very, very much to the strength and stability of the home or to pluck it down and tear it up. There's an awful lot that can be done. This is a big part of the difference between a wise woman and a foolish woman.

Verse 7, "Go from the presence of a foolish man, when you do not perceive in him the lips of knowledge." When you figure out that somebody has nothing of value to contribute, don't hang around with that person because ultimately the company we keep is pretty important. That is a principle that's been recognized for a long time. The company we keep is of a great deal of importance because it rubs off on us and affects us.

What is a fool? One of the definitions is given here in Proverbs 14:9, "Fools mock at sin, but among the upright there is favor." In other words, a fool is someone who takes sin lightly, who considers sin a joke. God says that's a fool—somebody that has an attitude that treats sin as a joke. God says that person is a fool.

Verse 12, "There is a way that seems right to a man, but its end is the way of death." There are a lot of things that seem right. We can't afford to follow our own feelings. "There is a way which seems right unto a man." A lot of times people get themselves into problems because they follow the way that seems right to them. If you can't follow the way that seems right to you, then what can you follow? You follow the way that God defines as right.

There's an old country song, "How can something that feels so right be so wrong." Well, the way that it can be wrong is because, "There's a way that seems right to a man, but its end is the way of death." That's how something can feel right and be wrong. It's a matter of what we are going to follow.

Everybody follows something. We follow our own feelings and emotions, the opinions of other people around us, the crowd or we follow God's Word. Everybody follows something, and the only sure guide is the Word of God because God knows. If you follow God, He's not going to mess you up. He just won't do that. But we can.

"The heart is deceitful above all things and desperately wicked, who can know it" (Jeremiah 17:9)? The heart is deceitful. We kid ourselves. That's what it means. The primary ingredient of human nature is self-deceit. We get tangled up in things and it's hard to be honest with ourselves about what we are doing or why we are doing it.

Have you ever noticed that if you really want to do something, you can find a thousand reasons as to why it's a good idea; if you don't want to do something, you can find all kind of excuses as to why you can't, why you shouldn't and why it probably won't work. We start out, but just because of our feelings, we don't want to go.

I was talking with someone on the Sabbath, and they mentioned not having been here the previous week. They said, "Well, every time I started to go outside it was raining." Yes, it was. I noticed that when I left on the way over to services and I noticed it all the way back home. Yes, I noticed the same thing. It surely was. The point is that if you want to do something, you do it. You find a way to do it. You get an umbrella or if you don't have an umbrella, you put a newspaper over your head. If you don't do that, well, just get wet and you'll probably dry off. You are not sugar or salt and you are probably not going to melt right there in the driveway. If there were something that you really wanted to do, would a little bit of rain keep you from doing it?

The point is that we kid ourselves a lot of times about our motives. We kid ourselves about what we are doing and why we are doing it. It's an important principle to realize that, "There's a way that seems right to a man, but the ends thereof are the ways of death."

Verse 23, "In all labor there is profit, but idle chatter leads only to poverty." You have been around people who are always sounding off about what they are going to do. They have these great plans and are going to do this or that, but they never do any of them. “In all labor there is profit.” If you just find a job and stick to it, you can make some headway. But do you spend all your time standing around talking about this big deal, that big deal and this other thing? You have all these big plans, but you never actually do anything. It doesn’t matter what you do, specifically, in terms of a job. “In all labor there’s profit.” If you just get out there and work, you can make a living doing a whole lot of things. But you are not going to make a living just standing around shooting your mouth off about all these big plans and big ideas that never get off the drawing board.

Proverbs 14:26, “In the fear of the Lord is strong confidence, and His children will have a place of refuge.” It’s sort of an interesting tie in—“...a place of refuge [a place of safety]...” and, “In the fear of the Lord is strong confidence....”

Verse 27, “The fear of the Lord is a fountain of life, to avoid the snares of death.”

Verse 29, “He who is slow to wrath has great understanding, but he who is impulsive [KJV, “of hasty spirit”] exalts folly.” If you go “flying off the handle,” losing your temper, you are just heading for trouble. If you are slow to wrath and just hold your temper, you are showing some understanding.

Verse 30, “A sound heart is life to the body, but envy is rottenness to the bones.” It can make a big difference.

Verse 31, “He who oppresses the poor reproaches his Maker, but he who honors Him has mercy on the needy.” If we are really conscious of the fact that we are accountable to God, then it’s going to carry through in the way we treat our neighbor. You are not going to take advantage of somebody because you can. If we really have the fear of God, we understand that we are accountable for what we do. It doesn’t matter how much power we have; if we have the fear of God, we realize that we are accountable for what we do and the way we treat everybody and everything. There is a sense of responsibility and accountability; we are not going to take advantage of somebody. We wouldn’t cheat somebody or mistreat somebody because we know that we are ultimately accountable to God.

Verse 34, “Righteousness exalts a nation, but sin is a reproach to any people.” This is a very important concept that this nation needs to understand and doesn’t. Righteousness is what exalts a nation. Sin is a reproach to any people, and that’s the situation that we find that is so rampant in our society.

Proverbs 15:1, “A soft answer turns away wrath, but a harsh word stirs up anger.” That is a very important key to avoiding strife and contention.

Verse 13, “A merry heart makes a cheerful countenance, but by sorrow of the heart the spirit is broken.”

Proverbs 16:2, “All the ways of a man are pure in his own eyes, but the Lord weighs the spirits.” People think that their ways are clean in their own eyes. People get really defensive about what they are doing and defend that, but God weighs the spirits.

Verse 3, “Commit your works to the Lord, and your thoughts will be established.”

Verse 6, “In mercy and truth atonement is provided for iniquity [KJV, “By mercy and truth iniquity is purged”]; and by the fear of the Lord one departs from evil.” That’s the way to get rid of sin.

A lot of times, the fear of the Lord is what gets people started. I remember back when I came into the Church—and I think a lot of you do, too, (particularly, years ago)—sometimes the thing that got us motivated to start keeping the Sabbath or to start doing some of these things was we read some of those booklets on prophecy. We saw some of those graphic drawings that Basil Wolverton had in some of those things. It scared us to death, and we thought we had better hurry up and do something. Well, by the fear of the Lord, men depart from evil. What usually gets us started is that we are scared not to get started. Now, that doesn’t mean that it totally remains your motive. But many times, if there wasn’t a little bit of a healthy fear, we never would have actually gotten around to doing it because it’s often inconvenient.

Verse 24, “Pleasant words are like a honeycomb, sweetness to the soul and health to the bones.” Honey tastes good and it’s good for you. So, it’s not only a little bit of advice about diet, but it’s compared to what we say—“Pleasant words.” When we say something nice to somebody, it’s pleasant to them to receive it, and it does them good. It’s helpful.

Verse 25, “There is a way that seems right to a man, but its end is the way of death.” God thought this was so important that He put it twice in the book of Proverbs. That’s important! We just got through reading it in Proverbs 14:12. If God thinks something is very important, He repeats it. It wasn’t because He stutters, and it wasn’t because He was absentminded and forgot

He had just inspired it a couple of pages ago. If He repeats it (I figure God doesn't repeat a whole lot of things), it must be because He wants to emphasize it.

Verse 31, "The silver-haired [KJV, "hoary head"] is a crown of glory, if it is found in the way of righteousness." The term "hoary" is derived from an old English word that means "white." That's where we get the term "hoarfrost." White hair, in other words, is a sign of age. "White hair is a crown of glory, if it is found in the way of righteousness." –Somebody who has the white hair of age and experience and is doing what he should do.

If it is found in the way of righteousness, if they are living and setting an example of a godly way of life, it is a crown of glory, and that's something that should be honored. It points them out as an individual who's lived life and has experience; that's something to honor. Now, when somebody has lived a full life and they still haven't gotten their act together, then that's not much of a crown of glory. If somebody has the mark of age and experience and still hasn't learned anything, that's not a crown of glory. It's important that as we get older, we should learn and grow in wisdom.

Verse 32, "He who is slow to anger is better than the mighty, and he who rules his spirit than he who takes a city." Self-control is pointed out as being something that is of vital importance. To really control oneself is one of the hardest things. Strong self-control is brought out here. If you can rule your own spirit, you're better than he that takes a city. If you can control yourself, that is a harder job and it takes greater effort.

Proverbs 17:10, "Reproof is more effective for a wise man than a hundred blows on a fool." Part of the difference between a wise man and a fool is a wise man is not a know-it-all. He's someone to whom you can tell something. One word of correction, one admonition is going to enter into his heart. He's going to take it and think about it more than if you took out a fool, tied him to a post and gave him a hundred lashes. He wouldn't get the point as much as just giving a wise man an admonition. One thing that we can use to help us determine how wise we are, as opposed to how foolish we are, is how easily will we learn a lesson? How stubborn are we about correction? To what extent do we get the point? And are we tuned in to it?

Verse 12, "Let a man meet a bear robbed of her cubs, rather than a fool in his folly." If you meet a bear robbed of her whelps, at least you can predict what she's going to do. It's not going to be good, but it's predictable. There's no telling what a fool is going to do. At least with a bear, she's mad and you had better try and get out of her way. So, you're better off meeting the bear that's all riled up, rather than a fool in his folly because there's just an element of unpredictability there.

In Proverbs 17:17, we are told about a friend, "A friend loves at all times, and a brother is born for adversity." "A friend loves at all times." That's really the definition of a real friend. It's not hard to have friends during the good times. The prodigal son (Luke 15:11-32) got the money and left home. He showed up there, and it was sort of like, "All the drinks are on me." He had a lot of friends. Everybody in the bar was his buddy. But when he ran out of money and was "hard up" and "down-and-out," where were those friends? Where were his old drinking buddies? They weren't anywhere around.

It's interesting. He found out, when it was all said and done, the one friend he had was his father. His father was the one who loved him at all times. He was the one he didn't think understood him. He left home and thought he knew it all. And if there was one person who didn't understand him, he knew it was his dad.

Probably, in his estimation at that time, he thought his dad was one of the dumbest people that he had ever met. "This old guy is so out of it, and I just can't even stand to stay around here any longer. I am going to go into town, and boy, I have all these friends and buddies." He thought he knew all about friendship. And he thought he didn't have anything in common with his dad. He never thought of his dad as being his friend. But you know, a friend loves at all times. When he was down-and-out and nobody else wanted him, who was it that received him back with open arms? Who was the friend that loved him at all times? This is an important lesson!

When things are going well for you, you'll find there are a lot of people who want to be your buddy. They want to be your friend. If you are "on the way up," you'll find people want to hang onto your coattails; they like that. But your real friends are the ones who are your friends regardless. They are not your friends because you are in power, because you have money or because you are in a position to do something for them. It's a vast difference.

Proverbs 17:17, "A friend loves at all times...."

How do you have friends like that? Well, Proverbs 18:24 says, "A man that has friends must show himself friendly, but there's a friend who sticks closer than a brother." So, a friend loves at all times, and a man that has friends must show himself friendly. If we want to have that sort of relationship with others, if we want others to be a true friend to us, we have to be a true friend.

Proverbs 17:28, “Even a fool is counted wise when he holds his peace; when he shuts his lips, he is considered perceptive.” He’s better off if he will just keep his mouth shut. Then nobody will know he’s a fool, and that will at least have its advantages.

Proverbs 18:2, “A fool has no delight in understanding, but in expressing his own heart.” Verse 4 (an interesting statement), “The words of a man’s mouth are deep waters; the wellspring of wisdom is a flowing brook.”

Verse 6, “A fool’s lips enter into contention, and his mouth calls for blows.”

Verse 7, “A fool’s mouth is his destruction, and his lips are the snare of his soul.” One of the things we are told about a fool is that he desires to do all the talking. He would much rather talk than listen. He’s always arguing and disputing; his mouth is what brings about his destruction. That’s one of the things there. He has no delight in understanding but in expressing his own heart.

Ever notice that you tend to learn more when you listen than when you talk? That’s an amazing thing, but I guess if we think about it, we will realize it may be one of the reasons God gave us two ears and one mouth. He didn’t give us two mouths and one ear. Maybe we should do more listening than talking. But a fool has no delight in understanding. He’s not interested in learning something new. He only wants to just “blat” out whatever he’s thinking, expressing his own heart. That’s an important key.

Verse 13, “He who answers a matter before he hears it, it is folly and shame to him.” Boy, you have an opinion and haven’t even heard all of the facts.

Verse 17, “The first one to plead his cause seems right, until his neighbor comes and examines him.” We shouldn’t jump to conclusions. We need to hear both sides of something before we arrive at a conclusion. Have you ever noticed how someone comes and tells you his side of the story, and you think, ‘How in the world could somebody have so mistreated him? Boy, that’s terrible!’ Then, somehow, when you hear the other person’s story you realize, maybe it wasn’t quite as one-sided as it sounded.

Kids are great at that. One of them comes running into the house and oh, he’s mad and upset at what his brother did. He tells you his side of the story and it sounds terrible. But when you hear the other side of the story, you realize that there was more to it. The first one didn’t tell you everything. He told you the part that made him look good. That’s human nature. It’s not just three and four-year-old kids who do that; thirty, forty, fifty and sixty-year-old adults do it, too. We tend to emphasize the facts that favor us and de-emphasize the facts that don’t.

It reminds me of this comedy routine I heard a number of years ago. These two men had a dispute between them and had gone to an arbitrator. One had cut a deal with the arbitrator. He came in there and told his side of the story; the arbitrator (a lawyer) was sitting there listening to it. The first fellow came and told his story. When he had finished, the arbitrator started to hammer down the gavel and give the verdict. The second one said, ‘Wait a minute, you haven’t heard my side yet.’ The arbitrator said, ‘No, look, I have been an arbitrator for a long time, and one thing I have learned is it’s too confusing if you hear both sides of the story. I never have trouble making up my mind if I just hear one side, but I always find it’s confusing to hear both sides of the story. It’s a lot easier to make the decision when you just hear one side.’

That sort of exaggerates a point, but it’s a point we can all find ourselves in sometimes—siding on something when we don’t know all the facts. We don’t have to have an opinion on everything. A lot of times you hear about something and you think, ‘Why in the world would they do that?’ Did you ever hear decisions, perhaps some administrative decision that was done at headquarters—they did this or that. You think, ‘Why in the world would they have done a thing like that?’ It’s possible, and I understand it is remote, that they have known something that you and I didn’t know. It’s possible they might have had a little more information that we didn’t have. What we have to realize is that we don’t have to have an opinion on every single thing because we don’t have all the facts. It’s just an important concept.

Over and over, the importance of the tongue is emphasized.

We are told in v. 21, “Death and life are in the power of the tongue, and those who love it will eat its fruits.” The tongue is a matter of vast importance.

Proverbs 19:17, “He who has pity on the poor lends to the Lord, and He will pay back what he has given.” If you have an attitude of mercy and compassion and you are willing to help people, God takes note of that and blesses you for that.

The book of Proverbs contains warnings on both sides. It warns us not to be foolish. It talks about the foolishness of co-signing a note with someone or doing things like that. It warns us not to be foolish with our resources and obligate ourselves for something that can really impair our ability to provide and function. But on the other hand, it warns us not to go to the other extreme and have this attitude of selfishness. We need to have an attitude of kindness and willingness to share.

But when it comes to loaning something, if you can't afford to make a gift of it, you had better not make a loan of it. In my experience, it has been that an awful lot of the time. I made it a loan and wound up having to make it a gift because they never paid it back. That's an important principle to understand. If you can afford to write it off, then go ahead and loan it. But if you can't afford to lose it, you'd better not loan it because the odds are, more times than not, you are not going to get it back. So, if you can afford to write it off, if you are in a position to do that, well great. Then if you get it back, it's sort of lagniappe. But you are not crippled if you don't.

God wants you to be kind. He wants you to be merciful and generous, but He wants you to use some wisdom with it and not impair the ability to provide for yourself or your family. So, there's a balance.

Verse 18, "Chasten your son while there is hope, and do not set your heart on his destruction [KJV, "let not your soul spare for his crying"]." The point he is making, in terms of childrearing, is that the chastisement needs to start early. "Chasten you son while there is hope...." You don't wait until the child is almost grown before you begin to tighten down. The earlier you start, the better it is. You start chastening them while there's hope. "...let not your soul spare for his crying." It's not talking about doing some sort of long-term damage to somebody.

I have seen people who thought they were spanking their kids. They would just sort of touch them and the kid would start screaming and crying—so, you'd better not touch him again. You haven't done anything with that except make a bad situation worse. All you did was make him mad. That's not effective childrearing. There are many principles here.

Proverbs 20:1, "Wine is a mocker, intoxicating drink arouses brawling and whoever is led astray by it is not wise." It tells us not to allow ourselves to be deceived about the misuse of alcohol because it will make a fool out of us if we do. Other scriptures certainly show that there is a right use of alcohol.

Alcohol can be used in a variety of ways. It can be used and misused. The scriptures show several uses of alcohol. It shows it is used in a religious sense. It is used in the context of the offerings in ancient Israel and in the context of the Passover in the New Testament time. It is used in a religious sense and for medical purposes.

Paul told Timothy to take a little wine for his stomach's sake (I Timothy 5:23). It is used internally for medical purposes to aid digestion; it is used externally as an antiseptic. It's what the Good Samaritan poured on the wounds (Luke 10:34). It is an extremely effective disinfectant of external wounds. Frankly, there is probably nothing any better. The natural wine has just about the right amount of alcohol content in it to disinfect the germs and won't prickle the skin. And it won't leave a scar either. So, it has uses that way. It's used as a food or as a beverage in the context of a meal, particularly at a banquet or something of that sort. It aids in the digestion of rich food. It can contribute to a festive atmosphere and it is used in the context of an occasion like that.

But when it is misused as a mind-altering chemical, when somebody is just going off, pouring down the booze and tarrying long at it, they are not simply using it as it's appropriate. They are misusing it. They are using it to try to change the way they feel—to alter their consciousness. It will make a fool out of you. If they are deceived by what it can and will do to them, they are going to have trouble.

Verse 3, "It is honorable for a man to stop striving, since any fool can start a quarrel [KJV, "but every fool will be meddling"]. It's an honor to cease from strife and try to settle something peacefully. But every fool will be meddling. That's one thing you can count on from a fool. He is going to meddle in all kinds of things and sure enough he is going to have trouble.

Verse 4, "The sluggard will not plow because of winter; therefore he will beg during the harvest and have nothing." It's talking about getting the field ready for planting in the early spring. He will say it's too cold! The weather is bad and he doesn't want to get out into it. He doesn't get his field prepared and doesn't get his crop planted early enough. Come harvest, his crop didn't make, and then he is hard up and begging. He doesn't have anything. A characteristic of a lazy person is that he looks for excuses not to do what he should do. Sometimes you have to get out and plow when it's cold. You have to do what you have to do, and sometimes it's not pleasant. That, again, is an important concept.

Verse 5, "Counsel in the heart of man is like deep water, but a man of understanding will draw it out." In counsel, real intentions are like deep water. The analogy is like an old well. When you talk about deep water, we sort of miss the analogy today. I think a lot of us remember the kind of wells where you unwind the pulley and the rope goes down deep into the well. Then you have to pull it up. It takes some effort and patience to draw water out of a deep well. That's what it says here.

In counsel, the real intentions and what a person is really thinking—the deep and real thoughts and the real intents in the heart—is like deep water, but a man of understanding will draw it out. It's going to take time and patience. If you really want to know what a person is thinking, you have to spend some time with them. It takes patience and effort to draw out what's really deep down inside, rather than just superficially.

Verse 11, "Even a child is known by his deeds, by whether what he does is pure and right."

Verse 18, "Every purpose is established by counsel; by wise counsel wage war." (KJV, "...with good advice make war.") In other words, if you are going to go out for a project, you better get some good advice and good opinions. There are people who have expertise in a variety of areas. Desire that input.

Proverbs 21:2, "Every way of a man is right in his own eyes, but the Lord weighs the hearts." People go charging off and their ways are right in their own eyes, but God looks down deep inside.

Verse 5, "The plans of the diligent lead surely to plenty, but those of everyone who is hasty, surely to poverty." —Being careful, diligent, consistent and persistent leads to plenty. Sometimes somebody gets in a hurry and goes off at half cock. That can create a problem. The principle is that if you don't have time to do it right, how are you going to find time to do it over again?

Verse 17, "He who loves pleasure will be a poor man; he who loves wine and oil will not be rich." If you are out partying and doing all sorts of things like that, spending it all as fast as you get it, you will never get ahead. Some people just waste away everything they make on all sorts of luxuries and pleasures and "poof"—it's gone.

They can't pass by something and not try to buy it. They will never get ahead.

Verse 23, "Whoever guards his mouth and tongue keeps his soul from troubles."

Controlling what we say will keep us out of trouble more than virtually anything else. That's an important thing. Guard your mouth and tongue and you'll keep yourself out of an awful lot of trouble.

Verse 31, "The horse is prepared for the day of battle, but deliverance is of the Lord." That simply means that you can make all the preparations you want, but God's help and God's blessing is what is ultimately necessary to establish it. The horse is prepared against the day of battle. You can prepare the horse all you want, but real safety is going to come from God. That's something we have to realize. It's not a matter that we shouldn't make preparations, but we need to understand that there are limits to what we can do.

Proverbs 22:1, "A good name is to be chosen rather than great riches, loving favor rather than silver and gold." A good name is of value. Our reputation is something that's more precious than anything money can buy. We should give thought and consideration to our reputation—to the way we conduct ourselves.

Verse 6, an important principle of childrearing, "Train up a child in the way he should go, and when he is old he will not depart from it." Early training is a great key to future character.

Verse 7, "The rich rules over the poor, and the borrower is servant to the lender." That's a truism. It's what some have sort of used as the term "the golden rule"—he who has the gold makes the rules.

"The borrower is servant to the lender." We are finding that and we are going to find it far more in this nation. Who's been financing our spending spree? Who's been financing our massive debt for the last few years? Primarily, it's been the Japanese. Japanese banks have been buying up American bonds. They have been paying for our spending spree. "The borrower is servant to the lender." We have a major deficit from year to year. We are in a situation where the only way we can keep going is if we're selling bonds. We are going deeper and deeper into debt. We are going to find that, eventually, some of the lenders are going to come in and are going to call the shots because they have control. We haven't begun to really realize some of what's going to happen when the Japanese and the Europeans begin to do some of these things.

Verse 8, “He who sows iniquity will reap sorrow [KJV, “vanity”], and the rod of his anger will fail.” This is a very important principle. We are going to ultimately reap what we sow.

Verse 10, “Cast out the scoffer [KJV, “scorner”], and contention will leave; yes, strife and reproach will cease.” Here’s an important principle of dealing with problems. If you have a troublemaker, he needs to be gotten rid of. Things will settle down when you do.

A lot of times, even in groups, we’ve had situations and circumstances where somebody was a scorner. A scorner is not somebody who makes a mistake. A scorner is somebody who has contempt for the rules and lacks respect for the institution and for what it stands. When you tolerate somebody like that and you let them stay around, it’s just going to be strife and contention. If you have somebody who has that sort of an attitude, the best thing to do is to get rid of him. Isolate him. Get rid of him and then everything settles down. Everybody will make a mistake from time to time, but if you have respect for the institution and respect for the rules, then all it takes is a little bit of correction and it’s all back on track.

Verse 13, “The slothful man says, ‘There is a lion outside! I shall be slain in the streets!’” Boy, you talk about looking for excuses.

Verse 15, “Foolishness is bound up in the heart of a child, but the rod of correction will drive it far from him.” –This sort of immaturity that is there. Foolishness is just bound up, and it takes some discipline and correction because, otherwise, there are just problems.

Verse 16, “He who oppresses the poor to increase his riches, and he who gives to the rich, will surely come to poverty.” God says that if you take advantage of people to get ahead, it’s going to come back to haunt you. God will see to that.

We come to the end of this first body of Proverbs. Proverbs 22:17 begins what is termed “the words of the wise ones.” Proverbs 22:17 down to the end of chapter 24, we have about two and one-half chapters of Proverbs that were collected as “the words of the sopherim.”

We will conclude here this evening. There’s an awful lot packed into the book of Proverbs. We could only hit the high spots this evening. Hopefully, you have gained some insight into some of these things. We have hit a number of proverbs. We will conclude the book of Proverbs next Bible study.

The Writings Series—Proverbs 22:17—31:31

This evening we are going to conclude the book of Proverbs. We are going to survey the fourth, fifth, sixth and seventh sections of Proverbs. We've been going through this series of Proverbs. One of the things that we noted early in the book of Proverbs was the fact that the book divides itself into seven sections.

The first section is just the first few verses—vv. 1-6. That's the introduction. Verse 7 through the first nine chapters makes up the second section, which is basically a discourse on wisdom. In chapter 10, we get into the third section of Proverbs and into the part that are proverbs as we normally think of them.

When we think of a proverb, we usually think of a short, pithy, concise statement that sums up a point of truth that uses comparison or contrast. It's sort of a one-sentence summation. Beginning in chapter 10 we get into that sort of proverb. Most of the first nine chapters were a discourse on wisdom. It dealt with the subject of wisdom. It developed the subject in a little different way. Then you notice an abrupt change once you get into Proverbs 10. The subject matter seems to change, in many cases, from verse to verse. It is sort of a random sampling of principles that are given and tailor-made to be thought about and considered. We have that beginning in chapter 10 down through chapter 22:16, which is really the first body of Proverbs—the proverbs of Solomon that were included.

Beginning in chapter 22:17, which we are going to begin this evening, is the fourth section of Proverbs and the second body of actual Proverbs. There are three bodies of Proverbs. Beginning in chapter 10:1 down through chapter 22:16 is the first body of Proverbs. It is a collection of proverbs of Solomon. The second body begins in chapter 22:17 and runs through the end of chapter 24.

Proverbs 22:17, it starts out, "Incline your ear and hear the words of the wise, and apply your heart to my knowledge." Or, "...hear the words of the wise ones and apply your heart to my knowledge." This fourth section consists of what is termed "the words of the wise ones." That runs for several chapters.

Then, chapter 25 is a third body or collection of Proverbs.

Proverbs 25:1, we are told, "These also are proverbs of Solomon which the men of Hezekiah king of Judah copied." So, here's a third component or third body of Proverbs that were added considerably later. They were added at the time of King Hezekiah in the end of the eighth century B.C. (Solomon had made his compilation toward the close of the tenth century B.C.) So, it was about two hundred years later when these proverbs were copied out by the men of Hezekiah and added. They, again, are proverbs pretty much in the manner of the others. We would make each of these a section. This would be our fifth section.

The sixth and seventh sections of the book are the final two chapters.

Proverbs 30:1 tells us, "The words of Agur the son of Jakeh, his utterance [KJV, "the prophecy"]...."

Proverbs 31:1, "The words of King Lemuel, the utterance which his mother taught him." It contains the account of the virtuous woman. Each of those would be other components. So, we have seven sections.

We are going to begin our study this evening with chapter 22:17, with this second body of Proverbs and the fourth section of the book—the section that is "the words of the wise ones."

Proverbs 22:17-21, as we pick up the story, we are told, "Incline your ear and hear the words of the wise, and apply your heart to my knowledge; for it is a pleasant thing if you keep them within you; let them all be fixed upon your lips, so that your trust may be in the Lord; I have instructed you today, even you. Have I not written to you excellent things of counsels and knowledge. That they may make you know the certainty of the words of truth, that you may answer words of truth to those who send to you?" These things are to provide us the words of truth.

Verses 22-23, "Do not rob the poor because he is poor, nor oppress the afflicted at the gate; for the Lord will plead their cause, and plunder the soul of those who plunder them." As we begin to focus in on God's law, here's a point about the fact that you don't take advantage of those who are unable to defend themselves because God will take note of it.

Verses 24-25, "Make no friendship with an angry man, and with a furious man do not go, lest you learn his ways and set a snare for your soul." We are admonished that if we hang around and make associations with those who are quick-tempered, it is going to lead us into trouble. If you get entangled with somebody who is very hotheaded and quick to lose his temper, you are going to wind up in trouble. If you keep company with somebody like that, they are going to get into some bad situations, and if you are there with them, that's where you'll be, too.

We will note some of the specific proverbs that stand out. There is a warning about becoming surety for someone else's debts. This is a warning that is given throughout the book of Proverbs.

Verses 26-27, "Do not be one of those who shakes hands in a pledge, one of those who is surety for debts; if you have nothing with which to pay, why should he take away your bed from under you?"

There's an interesting contrast that is given. Over and over Proverbs admonishes in two areas, and there is a balance. It's hard for human beings to get the balance. Proverbs admonishes us to be kind, generous and not to take advantage of someone who is poor. But on the other hand, it admonishes us to be wise in our business dealings and not to set ourselves up for a lot of trouble by co-signing notes and "going out on a limb" financially, obligating ourselves in this way. The admonition, on the one hand, is to help those who are needy, and on the other hand, to be wise in your own affairs and to not make foolish decisions.

Specifically, the example it uses several times has to do with co-signing notes for someone. We get a balance out of it. We need to see that there is a balance. God wants us to be kind and considerate. He certainly doesn't want us to take advantage of someone and He wants us to have an attitude of giving, sharing and trying to help those who are needy. But He, along with that, wants us to use wisdom and not to be foolish. Sometimes people have meant well, but they have done things that were not wise business decisions. Sometimes they have obligated themselves for things that wound up really costing them money they couldn't afford. So, there's a balance, and Proverbs brings out the balance. That's why it deals with both of these subjects.

Proverbs 23 has a warning in the first few verses. Proverbs 23:1-3, "When you sit down to eat with a ruler, consider carefully what is before you; and put a knife to your throat if you are a man given to appetite. Do not desire his delicacies, for they are deceptive food." In other words, be careful of the favors of the ruler, knowing there may be more to it than meets the eye.

Verses 4-5, "Do not overwork to be rich; because of your own understanding, cease! Will you set your eyes on that which is not? For riches certainly make themselves wings; they fly away like an eagle toward heaven."

The point is that if you set your eyes on getting rich, it will lead you into entanglements that are a source of trouble. It describes this in these first five verses. If you are with someone who is a ruler, someone who is powerful and influential, "put a knife to your throat." Don't get greedy. If you are in someone's company who is like that, if you are there with someone who is powerful and rich, don't get greedy and start thinking about what you are going to be able to get out of this situation. Don't start out being anxious of what he has and "butter him up" to get some of it. You might end up getting entangled in things that you don't have any intention of doing. So, the warning is that if you set your eyes on being rich, riches sometimes have ways of making themselves wings and flying away.

There are principles in Proverbs that deal with prosperity. God is not against prosperity. He wants people to prosper and tells us how to do it in a right and balanced way—in a way that focuses on righteousness and a spirit of kindness, generosity, justice and mercy. The spiritual principles are emphasized. Honor God with the first fruits of our substance; those things are emphasized in Proverbs. Also emphasized is the importance of diligence, working hard, being productive, not being lazy, not having to have somebody constantly stand over us and supervise, but to be a self starter, to seize the initiative and opportunity. There are many principles. There are principles of being a careful manager and not wasting.

There are many principles that deal with how to get ahead financially. God is not against that. He doesn't desire to see us in terrible straits. He gives us many practical admonitions. But He warns us not to set that as our priorities to where our life revolves around the acquisition of material things. Those warnings are particularly needed in Proverbs because there are so many admonitions in Proverbs on practical ways to get ahead. Proverbs is filled with principles and terms of handling day-to-day practical life situations. But it also contains many admonitions about having our priorities straight because that's a big part of it. When our priorities get mixed up, then everything else has ways of going down the drain. If you keep your priorities straight and you follow what it says in Proverbs, there are some very, very positive things we can have.

Verses 6-7, "Do not eat the bread of a miser [KJV, "him that has an evil eye"], nor desire his delicacies; for as he thinks in his heart, so is he.

‘Eat and drink!’ he says to you, but his heart is not with you.” It’s a warning about somebody who is out to entangle you. He is putting forward a “front,” but he is entangling you in things that are going to really mess you up. He has bad intentions. ‘As a person thinks in his heart, so is he.’ That’s the thing to realize.

Verse 9, “Do not speak in the hearing of a fool, for he will despise the wisdom of your words.” One of the characteristics of a fool is he is not open to correction. You can’t tell him anything. He has a “know-it-all” attitude.

A really good source of study in Proverbs is to go through the book and just look up the word “fool.” Go through and find everything it says about a fool; find all the characteristics of a fool. Or look up “wise man” and go through and find all the characteristics of a wise man. It would make an excellent Bible study because it gives us quite a contrast—some things to sort of lay out and see what kind of contrast it is.

Verses 13-14, “Do not withhold correction from a child, for if you beat him with a rod, he will not die. You shall beat him with a rod, and deliver his soul from hell.” What is this talking about? Obviously, it is talking about punishment or correction. The term “rod” is something that needs to be understood. It is not talking about some kind of big stick that is capable of giving some sort of permanent damage. The very term means “something that is flexible,” like a switch. The rod is like a small switch or something of that sort. Something that, by definition, is flexible. We are not talking about a club. “Do not withhold correction....”

The point of it is you don’t just put off and drag your feet in giving correction to your child. Spanking is not going to kill him. If you use a switch on him, that’s not going to kill him, but it can deliver him from destruction. In other words, if you give a child the correction, teaching and the upbringing that he needs when he is young, then you can save him from a lot of trouble and destruction by doing that.

Verse 17, “Do not let your heart envy sinners, but in the fear of the Lord continue all day long.” Sometimes there is a tendency to look at people who are “getting by with it.” If we are not careful, we can sort of think that it seems like they get by with all this stuff. We can think, ‘If we weren’t in the Church, look at all the money we could make over here. Look at all the things that we could do.’

God says don’t let your heart envy sinners. Don’t look at that sort of thing, but stand in awe of God all day long. We can get into a delusion that there would be advantages if we were not a part of the household of faith—that somehow there’s an advantage to that. God says, ‘Get your priorities straight. Really stand in awe of God.’ “The fear of the Lord” means “being in deep awe of and reverence for God.”

Proverbs 23:18, “For surely there is a hereafter [latter end] [KJV, “an end”], and your hope [expectation] will not be cut off.”

Verses 20-21, he continues and says, “Do not mix with winebibbers, or with gluttonous eaters of meat; for the drunkard and the glutton will come to poverty, and drowsiness will clothe a man with rags.” Don’t run with the people that are out really boozing it up, the real “party animals.” Don’t run with that crowd because they are headed for trouble. If you run with that crowd, you’re going to do that, too.

Verse 23, there’s an interesting point, “Buy the truth, and do not sell it....”

This is the explanation as to why the magazine goes out free of charge. Mr. Herbert Armstrong read that Proverb back in 1927 and came to that conclusion as he was aspiring to publish a magazine on the basis of this verse. Whenever he started publishing a magazine (which he wanted to do), it must be given free. That’s why the magazine has never been sold. That was a conclusion that Mr. Herbert Armstrong came to based on Proverbs 23:23. This is for your information as to why that is the case. Many groups, then and now, have traditionally sold various religious literatures, but he felt, based on that verse, that the truth was not something that should be sold.

There are warnings about immorality.

Verses 27-28, “For a harlot is a deep pit, and a seductress is a narrow well. She also lies in wait as for a victim, and increases the unfaithful among men.” This is a warning of immorality. If you get tangled up in immorality, it’s like getting caught in something that is hard to get out of.

Verses 29-35, “Who has woe? Who has sorrow? Who has contentions? Who has complaints? Who has wounds without cause? Who has redness of eyes? Those who linger long at the wine, those who go in search of mixed wine. Do not look on the wine when it is red, when it sparkles in the cup, when it swirls around smoothly; at the last it bites like a serpent, and stings like a viper. Your eyes will see strange things, and your heart will utter perverse things. Yes, you will be like one who lies down in the midst of the sea, or like one who lies at the top of the mast, saying: ‘They have struck me, but I was not hurt; they have beaten me, but I did not feel it. When shall I awake, that I may seek another drink?”

If you want a poetic description of alcoholism, I don't know of any better one than this one. Who has trouble? What are the consequences? He has woe, sorrow, contentions and complaints. He has trouble. He has strife, problems and grief. He has things wrong with him that he doesn't even know where it came from. Those who tarry long at the wine have wounds without cause, and they have redness of eyes.

Some prohibitionist groups quote this section and say alcohol is a terrible sin. The misuse of alcohol is being dealt with here—those who tarry long at the wine. The scriptures show various proper uses of alcohol. There are legitimate uses. But what it's talking about here is tarrying long. In other words, it is talking about over indulgence. It's talking about misuse—they start early and go late. They are looking for it.

Verse 31 describes longingly looking at and desiring this. It's describing someone who is preoccupied with alcohol. The warning is that if you are obsessed and preoccupied with alcohol, you are dealing with something that will turn around and bite you like a snake. It will lead you into all kinds of things. It will get you tangled up in all sorts of situations.

“Your heart will utter perverse things.” Anybody who has ever been around an alcoholic knows, “Your heart will utter perverse things.” All kinds of things come out. They say just horrible things. It describes a hangover, “You'll be as he that lies down in the midst of the sea.”

Now some of you went on the fishing trip a little while back, and this is what it's talking about. What they felt out there is what you are going to feel like the morning after. You might as well be seasick. It's like you were trying to take a nap on top of the mast of the boat because you are going to be dizzy.

It's describing a hangover. You'll wake up and you'll realize they have beaten you and felt it not. You wake up, look at yourself and say, ‘Someone must have beaten me with a stick,’ but you don't remember a thing.

Then the final thing and that proves the insanity of alcoholism. What's the conclusion that he comes to at the end of it?

Verse 35, “...When shall I awake, that I may seek another drink?” He says, ‘I think I need another drink. I may seek it yet again (KJV).’ That's the insanity aspect of the obsession and the addiction. Here is something you go through. It does all these things to you, and the conclusion you come to is, ‘I think I better go get a drink.’

And here it goes again. I think it is one of the most succinct summaries of the consequences of alcoholism. It focuses in on the insanity of the addiction part. After all of these things, a person is drawn back to get some more. That tells you that something is wrong because that is not a logical thing to do if you go through something like this. I have known people who have gone on some of these fishing trips, and they have come off of them saying they are never going to get on a boat again. Here it describes this, and I think it is a very interesting description.

Proverbs 24:1-2, “Do not be envious of evil men, nor desire to be with them; for their heart devises violence, and their lips talk of troublemaking.”

Verse 10, “If you faint in the day of adversity, your strength is small.”

Let's look at this. It's a way of saying the statement, “When the going gets tough, the tough get going.” This is the general thought that's coming through. I think the admonition here can certainly be applied to people in any time of extremity and any time of difficulty. That is when it really comes to what we are made out of and what our intentions are. This is certainly an important focus for God's Church and God's work in this end time.

It increasingly seems that just as Satan has attempted to fracture the world around us (we have seen in Eastern Europe and around the world the fracturing and the sub-dividing that is going on), we have encountered some of that even in the Church in recent years. There are various ones who have become discouraged about various things; they get preoccupied and sort of pull off to themselves. It says here, “If you faint in the day of adversity, your strength is small.”

Verses 11-12, “Deliver those who are drawn toward death, and hold back those stumbling to the slaughter. If you say, ‘Surely we did not know this,’ does not He who weighs the heart consider it? He who keeps your soul, does He not know it? And will He not render to each man according to his deeds?”

You know, we have a job to do. “Deliver those who are drawn toward death, and hold back those stumbling to the slaughter.” If we divert our energies and our efforts from doing the work that God has set before us and get entangled in strife among and between ourselves, God is going to hold us responsible. We have a job to do. We have the job of carrying God's message to the world. If we let ourselves get sidetracked, it dissipates our energies on internal strife and arguments, as some have, making mountains out of molehills. They have allowed their energies to be dissipated into areas of internal strife instead of focusing in on the work that we have to do. You know, God is going to take note of that.

“If you say, ‘Surely we did not know this,’ does not He who weighs the hearts consider it? [Isn’t God, who’s taking note, going to notice that?] He who keeps your soul, does He not know it? And will He not render each man according to his deeds?” It’s very important to keep our focus like it should be. It’s very sad; many of us know people who have sort of gotten sidetracked and off track—some of these various ones or self-appointed leaders.

I think this is a section of Scripture that should have particular meaning for us. God does not want us to lose sight of the big picture and to dissipate our energy into all sorts of internal bickering and strife. We have to keep our focus on the things that are important and on the work God has called us to do.

Realize, that whatever problems may be, that’s where our faith that Jesus Christ is the living head of the Church comes in. We either believe that Christ is in charge or we don’t. If we don’t, then why are we here? And if we do, why are we worried? I think that’s sort of the way we go through it. We don’t want to allow our energies to be dissipated and lost in various internal strife and struggles and miss the point. This is an important area.

Verse 16, “For a righteous man may fall seven times and rise again, but the wicked shall fall by calamity.” If at first you don’t succeed, try and try again. God didn’t say that if you’re righteous, everything you try will succeed the first time off. “A righteous man falls seven times....” You just have to keep trying.

There is an interesting story in Scottish and English history. It’s almost an exact parallel of this. There is the story of King Robert the Bruce of Scotland who was leading a war of Scottish independence back in the early Middle Ages. The English armies had defeated him on six different occasions. He really came to the “end of his rope.”

He was in hiding in a little abandoned cottage that he had in the remote area of Scotland. Much of his army was scattered. He was discouraged and considered giving up and going into exile. As he was lying there feeling like “throwing in the towel,” he looked up and there was a spider building its web. The spider was trying to jump across to catch a beam to affix her web. He noticed the spider jump and miss the beam. It worked its way back up and then tried it again.

He noticed that. It really began to get his attention because the spider kept trying. Finally, it got all the way up to six times, which kind of struck him because the spider had tried and struck out six times, and he had, too.

He was watching and wondering when the spider was going to quit. The spider kept trying and the seventh time the spider made it. He took heart from that and considered that might be some sort of sign. Anyway, he figured that he should at least put forth as much effort as a spider. He went out and re-gathered his troops. In that final time, he was successful in his endeavor. The point is that many times we don’t always succeed when we first try, but you just have to keep going and keep at it.

Verses 17-18, “Do not rejoice when your enemy falls, and do not let your heart be glad when he stumbles. Lest the Lord see it, and it displease Him, and He turn away His wrath from him.” You’re standing there gloating because somebody else is “getting it.” God may look down at you and figure that maybe that isn’t what He wants to do after all. You let God deal with him. We shouldn’t have this sort of gloating.

Verse 19, “Do not fret because of evildoers, nor be envious of the wicked.” It’s a matter of putting some of these things in God’s hands and trusting Him.

Verse 27, “Prepare your outside work, make it fit for yourself in the field; and afterward build your house.” This simply stresses the importance of being economically sound before marriage—the need of getting things ready and being ready to provide before you build your house and before you establish yourself that way.

Verses 30-34 are a description of the lazy person who doesn’t take care of what they have and allows it to get all overgrown and falling apart. It’s a consequence of this lazy, slothful attitude.

In Proverbs 25, we go into the third body of Proverbs.

Proverbs 25:1-2, “These also are proverbs of Solomon which the men of Hezekiah king of Judah copied. It is the glory of God to conceal a matter, but the glory of kings is to search out a matter.”

God reveals in the Bible a foundation of knowledge, but there are many things that God doesn’t reveal. There are many things that God has hidden in the creation. It’s the glory of God to conceal a matter and the glory of kings to search out a matter. It’s an honor to seek out the secrets of creation—the laws of physics, things of astronomy and all of the things that God has designed. God doesn't reveal all of that information. God reveals essential knowledge in the Bible and gives man a mind and the ability to pursue, discover and to gain insight into the way He works and the way He designed and put things together.

Verse 3, "As the heavens for height and the earth for depth, so the heart of kings is unsearchable." Whether we're talking about the depths of the earth and oceans (the studies of geology), all the way up to the heavens for heights (astronomy) or the hearts of kings (the studying into people, human nature and psychology, what makes people tick, why are people the way they are), there's an awful lot that is waiting to be discovered. It's the honor of kings to search out a matter (v. 2).

Verses 9-10, "Debate your case with your neighbor himself, and do not disclose the secret to another; lest he who hears it expose your shame, and your reputation be ruined." If you have a problem with somebody or an issue comes up, deal with it with the person who is involved.

Verse 11, "A word fitly spoken is like apples of gold in settings of silver." A word fitly spoken is a very beautiful and precious thing—the right word at the right time.

Verse 17, "Seldom set foot in your neighbor's house, lest he become weary of you and hate you." It's just a matter of practical common sense. Don't wear out your welcome. You need moderation in all things. You can wear out your welcome by just always being somewhere until you become a pest with it. It's a matter that we want to be careful and not overdo a good thing.

Sometimes people begin to be a nuisance. Some contact is good, but even with friends or with neighbors you can get to where you monopolize someone's time. After a while, they begin to resent it, even though originally they enjoyed your company and friendship. But if you're calling them up every day and talking for three or four hours a day, it's not going to be long before that begins to get old. If you do that on a regular basis, you begin to wear out your welcome.

Verse 28, "Whoever has no rule over his own spirit is like a city broken down, without walls." It is simply saying that a lack of self-control in an individual is compared to a city that's broken into. The walls are breached. You're opening yourself up to serious trouble. A wall is there as a protection. It's saying that someone who has lost his self-control is defenseless. He's just wide open to attack and to trouble.

Proverbs 26:1, "As snow in summer and rain in harvest, so honor is not fitting for a fool." It's not appropriate. It is sort of out of place.

Verse 2, "Like a flitting sparrow, like a flying swallow, so a curse without cause shall not alight." This is simply saying that things are a matter of cause and effect. There are, generally, reasons if there are problems.

I think this is one area that is an important principle in our childrearing. It is an important principle in teaching children because the immature mind does not really connect cause and effect. They see effects and they see causes. But they lack the life experiences to always see how the two connect. In working with our children, point out certain things that they see and that they, obviously, don't want in their future. Point out how this came about.

Some people go through life feeling like everything that happened to them is just some sort of big cosmic accident or as though there is a roll of the dice. Some people are happy and successful and other people are miserable and go through eight marriages like Liz Taylor.

"Like a flitting sparrow...." There is a reason for it. If you see a bird, how did it get there? Well, it flew. It followed a certain path and it brought it here. If there are problems or consequences in life, there are reasons. There are things that brought them here. If we don't understand what they are, then we are doomed to keep repeating certain things because we never recognize them for what they are. It's something for all of us to learn, and I think it is also an important principle to stress to our children to help them to understand.

Verse 4, "Do not answer a fool according to his folly, lest you also be like him."

Verse 5, "Answer a fool according to his folly, lest he be wise in his own eyes." That is making a contrast. It shows that there are times to speak and there are times to keep silent. You don't answer and get into an argument with someone and wind up looking just like him because you're sounding like him. But on the other hand, there is a time to speak. You feel like somebody has made the ultimate comment. There are times that you need to say something, but you want the wisdom to distinguish when it is inappropriate and when it is appropriate.

In the Gospels, we find the way that Christ dealt with situations. There were things He simply didn't address and other times when things were brought out. It shows the way He dealt with the Pharisees and those who came to him; many were not asking their questions sincerely.

Verse 8, “Like one who binds a stone in a sling is he who gives honor to a fool.” Now what do you think is going to happen if you tie the stone in a sling shot, pull it back and shoot it? What do you think happens? It shoots forward; then it comes back. And guess whom it hits? Now the slings they used were generally slung around. But if you tie it in and sling it around, then when you turn it loose, instead of the rock flying out, the weight of the rock brings it back around and hits you in the head.

“...he who gives honor to a fool.” If you’re dealing with somebody who is really a fool and you are trying to exalt this person, it is going to backfire on you. It’s going to come back and hit you in the face. That’s just the way it is.

Verse 9, “Like a thorn that goes into the hand of a drunkard is a proverb in the mouth of fools.” I guess you could say he just doesn’t get the point. This is talking about someone who is so out of it that he doesn’t ever notice the thorn until after he sobers up. This is sort of the principle; he just doesn’t get the point.

Verse 11, another characteristic of a fool is, “As a dog returns to his own vomit, so a fool repeats his folly.” He keeps making the same mistakes over and over again. He doesn’t learn from experience.

Verse 12, “Do you see a man wise in his own eyes? There is more hope for a fool than for him.” There is not a whole lot of hope for a fool. Here is a guy who is wise in his own eyes—a “know-it-all,” the kind of person that you can’t tell him anything. He knows it all. God says a fool is going to learn quicker than this fellow. When you see all the things it says about a fool, the odds are the fool is not going to learn very quickly.

We are looking at a poetic description of another set of characteristics that we don’t want to have.

Verse 13, “The slothful man says ‘There is a lion in the road! A fierce lion is in the streets!’” We are looking at excuses. If someone is lazy and doesn’t want to do something, he will find a thousand excuses.

Verse 14, “As a door turns on its hinges, so does the slothful turn on his bed.” You can just see this old creaky door going back and forth, back and forth. You can just sort of imagine this old lazy fellow lying over there in bed and can just hear the bed creak. All he’s doing is pulling the cover up over his head when the daylight comes. He’s just turning back and forth.

Verse 15, “The slothful man buries his hand in the bowl; it wearies him to bring it back to his mouth.” He’s just so lazy he hardly wants to go to the trouble to lift his food from his plate—a poetic, humorous description to make a point. Humor serves to exaggerate certain points. It’s for the purpose of illustrating some foible. This is what it is describing. Have you ever known someone who was so lazy and trifling, it was like he almost begrudged the work that it took him to have to lift the food all the way from the plate to his mouth? He really didn’t want to do anything.

Verse 16, “The sluggard is wiser in his own eyes than seven men who can answer sensibly.” He has more excuses as to why he can’t do something than seven people who can come up with good solid reasons. I mean, whatever you have, he has excuses you have never thought about as to why he can’t do this and why he can’t do that. Some people go through life looking for excuses as to why they can’t do something. I have always found that if you really want to do something, you usually find a way to do it; if you don’t want to do it, you can find a thousand reasons as to why you can’t. It’s too hard. I can’t go. It’s too difficult. It’s amazing how that works.

Verses 18-19, “Like a madman who throws firebrands, arrows, and death, is the man who deceives his neighbor, and says, ‘I was only joking.’” It’s a joke! It’s a joke! What happens when somebody casts firebrands? Well, they start a fire don’t they? They can catch the house on fire or the city on fire. It says, ‘So is the man that deceives his neighbor and then says, “Oh, it is a joke. I’m just kidding. Can’t you take a joke?”’

A lot of times people use that as a cover-up when they have said or done things that they didn’t have any business saying or doing. They get something started and then they try to get out of it by saying, ‘I was just kidding.’ It’s sort of like the fellow who casts a firebrand. He started a fire and now there’s trouble going. We have to think those things through.

There are several things here about what gossip will do and how it keeps trouble stirred up.

Verse 20, “Where there is no wood, the fire goes out; and where there is no talebearer, strife ceases.” It’s amazing how the gossip quits and trouble settles down. It says, “Where there is no wood the fire goes out.” One way to get the fire to stop is to quit feeding it. The fire goes out; it burns itself out. The way strife and trouble is stopped in a community or group of people is when gossip quits. But as long as people are gossiping and saying things, you have trouble.

Verse 21, “As charcoal is to burning coals, and wood to fire, so is a contentious man to kindle strife.” It feeds the flames.

Proverbs 27:1, “Do not boast about tomorrow, for you do not know what a day may bring forth.”

Verse 2, “Let another man praise you and not your own mouth; a stranger, and not your own lips.”

Verse 5, “Open rebuke is better than love carefully concealed.”

Verse 6, “Faithful are the wounds of a friend, but the kisses of an enemy are deceitful.” This is saying that it is not a mark of true friendship to withhold the truth. Sometimes a real friend is someone who will tell you the truth.

Moffat translates it as, “Better a frank word of reproof than the love that will not speak.” It’s not a mark of true friendship to withhold reproof. It doesn’t mean we go around trying to fix everybody, straighten out all our friends and give them a long list of what’s wrong with them. It just means that there is a time to speak. There’s a time when it is appropriate to say something. What a real friend tells you is faithful. He tells you because he cares. He tells you the truth.

“...but the kisses of an enemy are deceitful.”

Someone who does not have your best interest at heart will tell you all kinds of nice things. He’s just up to something. Someone who’s really your friend may tell you something and it may hurt a little bit, but he has your best interest at heart. It’s a lot more valuable than somebody who really doesn’t care about you and is just saying what they think you want to hear.

Verse 12, “A prudent man foresees evil and hides himself; the simple pass on and are punished.” This is simply saying that a prudent man—somebody who is wise—is going to look and think ahead. We don’t just rush on through life. Some people, in handling their affairs, don’t think ahead.

Look at some of the economic problems we’ve had. One of the difficulties that hit this area of the country, the areas (Louisiana and Texas) that were very heavily tied in with the oil and gas industry, was that they overextended themselves. Back when the oil and gas prices were going up, up, up, there were a lot of companies and individuals that dangerously overextended themselves. They operated on the premise that it’s going to get bigger and better forever. There were a lot of companies that went bankrupt when the price came down because they operated on a very foolish assumption that what goes up, will just keep going up forever. I have always noticed that if I throw something up in the air, sooner or later it comes back down.

“A prudent man foresees the evil and he hides himself....” He looks ahead to problems. He doesn’t just leave himself wide open. “The simple pass on and they are punished.” They are oblivious to the fact of difficulties coming around the corner, and they get hit square in the face with it. A prudent man thinks ahead and realizes difficulties and adversities that are, potentially, coming and makes provision. He looks ahead and he’s not going to overextend himself. He’s not going to get way out on the end of the limb. It’s an important principle.

Verse 17, “As iron sharpens iron, so a man sharpens the countenance of his friend.” It’s talking about the fact that we can learn from one another. There is a sharpening quality that can take place in a good friendly discussion. We can learn from one another.

Verse 20, “Hell and Destruction are never full; [The grave and destruction are never full; there are always continuing cycles.] So the eyes of man are never satisfied.” Aspirations continue to rise. If someone was out on a cold rainy night and didn’t have a place to live or stay, he’d be sitting out there wishing he had some place that was warm and dry—some place out of the way. He’d just give anything for a place out of the way. If he got a place, how long would it be before he started looking around, noticing what a dump it was and thinking he wished he had a little nicer place? A guy who’s been hungry and hasn’t had anything to eat for two days is thinking he wished he could get some food. After he’s been eating for a while, he begins to notice the soup surely is bland. There’s no salt or pepper in it, and they’ve watered it down. He wished he had a decent meal. Perspectives change. When we meet one level of need, we begin to look around and notice what we don’t have. “The eyes of man are never satisfied.” People are always looking for more.

Proverbs 28:1, “The wicked flee when no one pursues, but the righteous are bold as a lion.” The real key to freedom from fear is obedience to God.

Proverbs 14:26, we are told, “In the fear of the Lord there is strong confidence....” So, the real key to freedom from fear is obedience to God.

Proverbs 28:13, “He who covers his sins will not prosper, but whoever confesses and forsakes them will have mercy.” That’s certainly the case in our dealings with God. And frankly, that usually works much better with people, too. If you try to cover it up, sooner or later it’s going to come out, and then you are really going to be in trouble. If you face up to it, admit it and you've turned around and gone the other way, you will far more likely have mercy than to just lie, cover it up, and let it come out later.

Verse 19, "He who tills his land will have plenty of bread, but he who follows frivolity [KJV, "vain persons"] [or, "vain pursuits"] will not go unpunished." If you have a worthwhile occupation and stick to it, persevere and be diligent with it, you can gradually get ahead. If you are always chasing the pot of gold at the end of the rainbow, you are just going to have poverty.

Verse 20, "A faithful man will abound with blessings, but he who hastens to be rich will not go unpunished." Someone who is in a hurry to get rich quick is going to cut corners and do things that are not going to leave them unpunished.

Verse 21, "To show partiality is not good, because for a piece of bread a man will transgress." –To treat people unfairly or mistreat someone. Someone who is unfair and unscrupulous in his dealings with people will take advantage of people for just a little bit. He will transgress; he will cheat anybody when it is to his advantage. It's a character flaw. When you see someone who deals with other people that way in business, just realize he will do it to you, too, if it is ever to his advantage and he gets the chance. It is an important principle.

Verse 22, "A man with an evil eye hastens after riches, and does not consider that poverty will come upon him." In other words, honest labor and hard work is the way to success—not some get-rich-quick scheme.

There are many admonitions in Proverbs about working hard and being diligent.

Proverbs 12:24, "The hand of the diligent will rule..." But there are also warnings about becoming materialistic. God wants us to get ahead, but He doesn't want us to become so materialistic that our life sort of revolves around material things; it leads to trouble.

Verse 26, "He who trusts in his own heart is a fool, but whoever walks wisely will be delivered." "He who trusts in his own heart is a fool..."

What does God tell us in Jeremiah 17:9? "The heart is deceitful above all things." We kid ourselves. We are told it's not in man who walks to direct his own steps (Jeremiah 10:23). To whom should we look? We look to God. People just follow their own feelings and whims, rather than looking to God and what He says.

Verse 27, "He who gives to the poor will not lack, but he who hides his eyes will have many curses." Someone who has kindness, a willingness to share and is generous will be provided for. God will take care of them. God takes note of that.

Proverbs 29:1, "He who is often reproofed, and hardens his neck, will suddenly be destroyed, and that without remedy." –An important principle. If we continually resent and resist correction, one of these days destruction is going to come like a "bolt out of the blue" and there won't be any more opportunities. It's a very important principle if we won't learn our lesson the easy way.

Another Proverb talks about how a word of reproof enters more into the heart of a wise man than a hundred stripes into the back of a fool (Proverbs 17:10). A wise person is going to learn more from a few words than a fool is going to learn from a beating. This is one of the real keys to learning lessons—whether or not we learn from life's experiences. If someone won't learn the easy way, sooner or later it's going to come on him, and then there won't be any way out. That's sad, but there comes a time where you can get into some things you can't get out of. Life can come crashing down around you. There are people who have lost businesses, fortunes, marriages, families and children. There are people who have lost all sorts of things.

Basically, in Proverbs 29:1, they are told and they are warned. Various things came up and all the signs were there. People told them you had better do this or that. They wouldn't listen. One day it all came down on top of them, and there wasn't any getting out of it.

Proverbs 29:2, "When the righteous are in authority, the people rejoice; but when a wicked man rules the people groan." The way of God produces positive results.

Verse 15, "The rod and reproof give wisdom, but a child left to himself brings shame to his mother."

Verse 18, "Where there is no revelation, the people cast off restraint; but happy is he who keeps the law." KJV, "Where there is no vision the people perish..."

Verse 25, "The fear of man brings a snare, but whoever trusts in the Lord shall be safe."

Proverbs 30, the sixth section of the book, is the prophecy of Agur. Agur goes through all of these comparisons, these categories of four.

Proverbs 30:11, for instance, "There is a generation [there is a kind of person] that curses its father, and does not bless its mother." There are people who are negative, critical and faultfinding.

Verse 12, there are others, “There is a generation [there is a kind of people] that is pure in its own eyes, yet is not washed from its filthiness.” They have this attitude of a self-righteous approach. Here they are going along and they don’t see where they are doing anything wrong. They don’t get the point.

Verse 13, there are others, “There is a generation [there is a kind of people]—oh, how lofty are their eyes! And their eyelids are lifted up.” There’s a kind of person that is just very self-centered and sort of arrogant. They always have to be the center of attention. Sometimes someone like that is entertaining for a while, but there’s shallowness there because they always have to be the center of things.

Verse 14, there’s another kind of person, “There is a generation whose teeth are like swords, and whose fangs are like knives, to devour the poor from off the earth, and the needy from among men.” Boy, they just go plowing through like a bulldozer, totally oblivious of the feelings of others. They may get things done, but man, the human debris they leave in their wake.

So, there are all kinds of people. It’s sort of an interesting one-sentence summation of some of these. It goes through many different things.

Verses 24-28, “There are four things which are little on the earth, but they are exceedingly wise. The ants are a people not strong, yet they prepare their food in the summer, the rock badger [KJV, “conies”] are a feeble folk, yet they make their homes in the crags. The locusts have no king, yet they all advance in ranks; the spider skillfully grasps with its hands, and it is in kings’ palaces.”

Take note of four things that are very insignificant, and yet they epitomize some of the greatest qualities of wisdom.

The ants are pretty insignificant little creatures. They are not all that strong and mighty. What can you learn from the ant? The ants prepare ahead. They practice the principle of being prepared. They take advantage of opportunities when they have them; they are prepared. They are pretty insignificant little insects, but that is a tremendous principle of wisdom—taking advantage of the opportunities you have, seizing the day, seizing the opportunity and being prepared.

“The rock badgers are but feeble folk.” They are little tiny animals that make their houses in the rocks—a strong foundation. What they build on has a rock-solid foundation. They are pretty insignificant little animals, but they dwell in a secure place.

Locusts are pretty insignificant little insects, but they are organized. They all go forth by bands. They exemplify organization and structure. It’s not confusion and strife.

The spider works hard and is diligent. Again, it’s a little insignificant creature, but you’ll find it up in the corner in the kings’ palace. There isn’t any place you’ll look that you won’t find a spider somewhere. It singles out these little things and there’s a lot of food for meditation here. All these little groups of four are enumerated—food for thought.

Proverbs 31 is the seventh section—the words of Lemuel. This is what his mother taught him (v. 1). Most of it focuses in on the subject of what is called “the virtuous woman.”

Proverbs 31:10, “Who can find a virtuous wife? For her worth is far above rubies.” We live in a society that measures worth and value by the wrong things. If you want to find out what we value in society, look at the pay scale. It wouldn’t take you too long to look at the pay scale and figure that we value being entertained far more than being taught. Compare what we pay our entertainers to what we pay our teachers and the status that’s given to each. We have certain values that we attach to things in our society, and a lot of these values are distorted.

A lot of women have been made to feel that their value depends on the size of a paycheck they bring home. You can find that Madonna had the highest income of any other woman in the United States last year. Well, does that make her of greater worth and value? God says, “Who can find a virtuous woman? Her worth is far above rubies.” God says virtue is what has value. That’s what God attaches value to. It’s not the size of the paycheck you bring in. It’s not external experience. It’s not all the things that the world attaches value to. God tells us what really has value; a virtuous woman has value that far exceeds rubies.

Verse 11, “The heart of her husband safely trusts her, so he will have no lack of gain.” One of the primary points that is made, one of the things about her, is that her husband safely trusts in her. The physical work that she does has a price, but the character and the attitude she exemplifies is the real contribution that she makes to the family—that’s the one that’s above any price. The work she does of cooking, cleaning and all these things is not what’s above the price of rubies. You can go out and hire that to be done. That’s not the most valuable contribution. The contribution beyond assigning a price tag to is character and the virtuous attitude that is exemplified. That is of far greater value to a family than any price tag that can be given. A virtuous woman makes a great contribution to the family.

Realize that the family is the foundation, the building block of the society. If you want to understand what's happening to our society, you have to look at what's happening to our families. I don't think that the value of a woman's contribution can be over-estimated. God says it can't. It's priceless. It's above rubies. There's a tremendous thing that it goes into here.

"The heart of her husband does safely trust in her." He doesn't have to worry because there's confidence, respect and trust. She's productive and does all these things. She is concerned about taking care of her responsibilities with her family.

Verse 26, "She opens her mouth with wisdom, and on her tongue is the law of kindness."

Verse 27, "She watches over the ways of her household, and does not eat the bread of idleness."

Verse 28, "Her children rise up and call her blessed [or it could be rendered, "will make her happy"]; her husband also, and he praises her." There is going to come an appreciation. Her children rise up and make her happy. Part of the problem with what a woman does is that during so many of the years she's doing it, as her kids are growing up, it's gets discouraging. A lot of the appreciation and feedback doesn't come until years later.

That gets discouraging sometimes because who appreciates it? Oh, sometimes a "fit" may come upon a kid, and they may say thank you. But generally you have to get older in life before you look back and really appreciate what was done. Most of us can see that. This is what it's talking about. Her children will rise up and call her blessed. It's talking about a later time of life.

I think it's important to realize that some things you reap later. It's like seeds that you plant. You won't reap the harvest for a long time, but you will reap it. "Her children will arise up and call her blessed." They will make her happy. They will respond in that way.

Verses 29-31, "Many daughters have done well, but you excel them all. Charm is deceitful and beauty is vain, but a woman who fears the Lord, she shall be praised. Give her of the fruit of her hands, and let her own works praise her in the gates."

Let her have credit for what she does. There is ultimately a public recognition of private virtue that is brought out here.

We have obviously just been able to skim the surface on some of these things. I hope this has whet your appetite for Proverbs and for the things that we can go to and study in greater depth and detail at a later time.

We are going to cover the book of Job next Bible study. We will go through a summary of the book of Job at the next Bible study. Obviously, in this series of studies, it is a survey and we are only hitting the high spots. But I hope that we do so in a way that would sort of whet your appetite to go back and really delve into some of the things that we lack the time and the opportunity in this setting to really dwell on in detail.

The Writings Series—Job

We are getting into the book of Job this evening. Job is a very interesting book. There are an awful lot of things that are in there, a lot of insight that is given.

Before we get into the details of the book, we might look briefly at the setting of the book of Job. There isn't a specific date that is assigned to Job. Clearly, Job was written during the patriarchal period. We would date it after the time of Abraham, Isaac and Jacob and prior to the time of Moses. How do we get a date like that? Let me show you a couple of ways that we do that. The clearest way is the identity of Job's friends.

Job 2:11, we find Job's friends mentioned, "Now when Job's three friends heard of all this adversity that had come upon him, each one came from his own place—Eliphaz the Temanite, Bildad the Shuhite, and Zophar the Naamathite...."

Eliphaz the Temanite is fairly easily identified. If you go back to Genesis 36:10, it gives you the names of Esau's sons, and one of his sons was Eliphaz. We find that the sons of Eliphaz were Teman, Omar, Zepho, Gatam and Kenaz. Teman was the grandson of Esau and the son of Eliphaz. So this would tie in here.

Bildad the Shuhite—by the way, that does not mean that he was the shortest man in the Bible, as is the joke. The Shuhites were descendants of Shuah who was a son of Abraham by the way of Keturah. Keturah was the wife that Abraham married after Sarah's death. In Genesis 25:1, it talks about Abraham marrying Keturah.

Genesis 25:2, the sons of Abraham by Keturah were mentioned, "...Zimran, Jokshan, Medan, Midian, Ishbak, and Shuah."

You've heard that Job was the greatest man in the land of Uz (Job 1:1). Abraham had two nephews. They were the sons of his brother, Nahor. Two of his nephews were Huz (Uz) and Buz.

Genesis 22:20-21, "...'Milcah also has borne children to your brother Nahor: Huz [Uz] his firstborn, Buz his brother, Kemuel the father of Aram.'" So, who was Uz? He was the brother of Buz. If you ever have twins, here are a couple of good names. They would be sort of original. There are not a whole lot of Uz's and Buz's running around.

The point is that while we can't identify right down to the exact one, it's pretty clear whom we are talking about. When we look at Job and his friends, we are talking about the extended family of Abraham. We're talking about either descendants through Abraham's grandson, Esau, or we are looking at descendants through Abraham's second wife, Keturah, or some nephews of Abraham and their families.

We are looking at the extended family of Abraham who dwelt in that general area of the old land of Edom and down in what would be the border area between modern Israel-Jordan-Saudi Arabia. If you look at a map and look where those areas begin to converge, that is the general area where these events took place—the old area of Edomia. We can pretty well deduce these things directly from the book. There are some Jewish translations that also confirm this.

The Septuagint translation was a Greek translation of the Old Testament made a couple of hundred years prior to Christ. As an overall translation, it's not very accurate or reliable; some of it is a little better than others. But there are two things that it does. One, it gives us a record of some traditions. It gives us some traditional understandings or interpretations that were available prior to the time of Christ in the Jewish community because some parts of the Septuagint are almost a parallel rather than direct translation. It gives you a way that they understood it or a way that some segments of the Jewish community understood it.

The other thing is, in some cases, there are scribal additions and things like that added to it. The book of Job actually has a couple of extra verses added in the original inspired text. They give you the idea of what, at least a section of the Jewish community a couple of hundred years prior to Christ, was believed about it. Those two additional verses make reference to the fact of Job being connected with the family of Esau.

Moses, according to Jewish tradition, is responsible for the book of Job, in the sense that it became a part of the Hebrew canon. Where did Moses come across the book? The events that transpired, undoubtedly, took place during the time of Israel's captivity in Egypt or perhaps during the early part of the period Israel was in Egypt.

How did Moses come to have it, and how did it come to be a part of the Bible? Well, I think the logical explanation would be that he received a copy of the book from his father-in-law. You remember Jethro (Reuel), his father-in-law, was the priest of Midian. The Midianites were descendants of Abraham through Keturah, so they were of the same general people as the Israelites. They also preserved the knowledge, at least for a time, of the true God. The title “Reuel” literally means “the friend of God.” The “el” ending, of course, is the name that is used to refer to God in the Hebrew language. It would certainly indicate that he continued the worship that was practiced in the family of Abraham.

We find a little mention of Jethro in the book of Exodus. There aren’t any indications whatsoever that he was an idolater or, in any way, not in harmony with what God was doing through Moses.

The individuals involved in the book of Job would probably have been a part of that extended family of Abraham. Job was, undoubtedly, dead by the time Moses was there in the desert. The book that he wrote of his experiences in this account was something that was known and preserved in that portion of the family of Abraham. I think both the logic and what we can deduce directly from Scripture, together with the tradition that the Jews have preserved, would lead us to see or to understand that explanation of it.

There was a direct succession to the birthright. God worked only peripherally through some of the other families descended from Abraham. It shows us that even though some were not in the direct line of promise, in the sense of what God was doing directly through the lineal descendants of Abraham, nevertheless, there were individuals in the family who availed themselves of the knowledge of God and sought God. God was very much involved with them in that context.

Job 1:1, “There was a man in the land of Uz, whose name was Job, and that man was blameless and upright and one who feared God and shunned evil.” Job was in the land of Uz. Now, we have already seen who Uz was. He was the brother of Buz. Job was in this area that bordered the Sinai portion of the old area of Edomia, the land of Edom.

Verses 2-3, “And seven sons and three daughters were born to him. Also, his possessions were seven thousand sheep, three thousand camels, five hundred yoke of oxen, five hundred female donkeys, and a very large household, so that this man was the greatest of all the people of the East.”

We’re told that he was a man of great wealth and influence, a man of note in this area. He was the most noted and remarkable man in this entire area. He was a man who feared God. He stood in absolute reverence and awe of God. He was a person who hated evil and sought to avoid it. He had a sizable family of seven sons and three daughters. He was wealthy and possessed quite a number of sheep, camels, oxen and donkeys. He was the greatest of all the men of the East. The term “people [or the sons] of the East” refers to the area from east of Jerusalem over toward the Tigris-Euphrates Valley. Job was one of the wealthiest and most noted men in this whole area.

Verse 6, “Now there was a day when the sons of God came to present themselves before the Lord, and Satan also came among them.”

We find that Satan came before God. We are given little bits of insight into certain things including a little bit of insight into the workings of God in heaven. There was a time when the angels were to appear before God, and Satan came among them.

The angels are referred to as the “sons of God.” The term “sons of God” is used in several contexts: (1) it is used to refer to angels, (2) in Genesis 4:26 it is a title that the descendants of Cain applied to themselves, (3) it is a title that is applied in a spiritual sense to Christians and (4) it is a term that is applied in a physical sense to Adam in the genealogy given in Luke.

Luke 3:38, “...Seth, the son of Adam, the son of God.” –In the sense, the only parent Adam had was God. There are various uses of the term, and we have to discern the use of it from the context. This is one of the contexts, and it uses the term to refer to angels in the sense that angels, by creation, are sons of God—though not in the spiritual sense that Christians are, either now or at the time when we are changed into spirit in the resurrection.

Verse 6, “Now there was a day when the sons of God came to present themselves before the Lord, and Satan also came among them.” Satan came among them.

Verse 7, “And the Lord said to Satan, ‘From where do you come?’ So Satan answered the Lord and said, ‘From going to and fro on the earth, and from walking back and forth on it.’”

God, at this point, called his attention to something. Note that God is the one who called the devil’s attention to Job. Satan didn’t bring up the topic of Job; God did.

Verse 8, “Then the Lord said to Satan, ‘Have you considered My servant Job, that there is none like him on the earth, a blameless and upright man, one who fears God and shuns evil?’” God said, ‘Have you noticed what a remarkable individual he is? There is no one like him.’ Satan was quick to have a comeback.

Verse 9, “So Satan answered the Lord and said, ‘Does Job fear God for nothing?’” Satan said, ‘Does he fear you for nothing? Well, I guess he does. You pay him well enough. Yeah, sure he fears you. You pay him well enough. You’ve made a hedge about him, about his house and everything that he has. Of course it’s in his best interest’ (vv. 9-10).

Satan operated under the theory that the only reason a person does something is because of what they stand to gain out of it. The fact that you could do something on the basis of love and loyalty or that you can have a commitment on the basis of love and loyalty never entered into the mind of Satan. The only reason he could see that you would be loyal and give allegiance to someone or something was because you stood to gain something out of it.

Satan said, ‘Well, yeah, you protect him. Of course he fears You. You have him on the payroll. You have everything hedged about; nothing happens to him. Of course he does. It is in his economic self-interest to fear You. He has all the motives in the world to do it. That’s why he does it.’

The devil’s attitude is that the only reason people do something is because of what they are going to get out of it. The idea that you would do something out of a sense of loyalty, allegiance and love—no, he couldn’t relate to those motives. It had to be a selfish motive. It had to be a motive of self-interest—not the fact that your interests could rise above yourself and you could do something not because of what you were getting out of it. This is one aspect that we often have not focused on in the book of Job.

There were lessons that Job had to learn, but there are also lessons for us to learn in the book of Job. That was something for the devil to learn. There was a point that God was proving to the devil. The devil was convinced that nobody, no being, would ever have complete loyalty and allegiance to God based on love.

God told him, ‘You think the only reason Job does what he does is because I protect him because he’s blessed and all his property is protected. I don’t believe that, Satan. I don’t think that’s why Job serves me. You think it is? I’ll tell you what; I will remove the hedge. You’re right; I have protected Job. I’ve watched over him. But that’s not why Job is serving me, and I will prove it to you. I’ll just remove the hedge, and you do what you will to him. I will not restrain your power except that you can’t touch him (vv. 11-12).’

We are told that Satan went forth from the presence of the Lord (v. 12). We get the impression that when the devil has something bad to do, he doesn’t waste time doing it.

You read the story and Job is out here.

Verses 14-15, “and a messenger came to Job and said, ‘The oxen were plowing and the donkeys feeding beside them, when the Sabeans raided them and took them away—indeed they have killed the servants with the edge of the sword; and I alone have escaped to tell you!’”

Verse 16, “While he was still speaking....” You get the time flow here? We are not talking about something that drags out over weeks, but we are talking about a matter of about fifteen minutes time. He gets the news from several different messengers that everything he has is gone, including his family.

And in each case you find, “While he was still speaking,” another one showed up. You’d have to say that the devil did not waste time. When he had something bad to do, he was so happy to do it that he just didn’t lose a moment.

Verse 16, “While he was still speaking....”

Verse 17, “While he was still speaking....”

Verse 18, “While he was still speaking....”

Verses 20-22, when this was finished, “Then Job arose and tore his robe and shaved his head, and he fell to the ground and worshiped. And he said: ‘Naked I came from my mother’s womb, and naked shall I return there. The Lord gave, and the Lord has taken away; blessed be the name of the Lord.’ In all this Job did not sin nor charge God with wrong.” The KJV margin renders it, “nor attributed folly to God.” He did not blame God foolishly or charge God foolishly. His loyalty or allegiance to God didn’t waver.

Job 2:1, “Again there was a day when the sons of God came to present themselves before the Lord, and Satan came also among them to present himself before the Lord.”

We are not told how often the angels come to present themselves before God. Some commentators have speculated that this may have been once a year. In this case, this situation of Job having lost his property and everything may have dragged on for a year before the events of chapter 2 happened. Maybe it wasn’t that long. I don’t know. There isn’t any particular evidence.

To my knowledge this is the only area of Scripture that clearly shows that there are designated times when all the angels are summoned to appear before God. Evidently, there is a regular basis on which all the angels come before God and Satan is compelled to appear. One of the things we understand here is that the devil's power is limited. He can only do as God allows. God places limits and Satan cannot go beyond those limits.

God, again, called his attention to Job.

Verse 3, "Then the Lord said to Satan, 'Have you considered My servant Job, that there is none like him on the earth, a blameless and upright man, one who fears God and shuns evil? And still he holds fast to his integrity, although you incited Me against him, to destroy him without cause.'" –'There wasn't any reason for it. But you wanted to do it, so I allowed you to do it. It's been done and have you noticed? Go ahead and admit it Satan; you were wrong. You said that if I took away what he had, he would curse Me to My face. That's not right; it didn't happen, did it?'

Now the devil, never being one to admit an error, didn't say, 'You're right and I was wrong.' No, that's not what he said.

Verse 4, he said, "So Satan answered the Lord and said, 'Skin for skin! Yes, all that a man has he will give for his life.'" –'No, I'll tell you what; you didn't let me touch him.'

Verse 5, "'But stretch out Your hand now, and touch his bone and his flesh, and he will surely curse You to Your face!'" There was no admission that maybe he had miscalculated Job. No, he was convinced. He felt that the only reason someone does something is because of his own self-interest or because of what he is getting out of it.

Verse 6, "So the Lord said to Satan, 'Behold, he is in your hand, but spare his life.'" –'You can do anything you want except kill him.'

Verse 7, "Then Satan went out from the presence of the Lord, and struck Job with painful boils from the sole of his foot to the crown of his head." You get the idea? Again, when Satan has a chance to do something bad to somebody, it isn't a halfway measure. He didn't cause a few of Job's oxen or donkeys to run off or get killed; he didn't cause one of his children to die. When he had a chance to do it, he did it all the way. And when he was given permission to smite Job, he went quickly. Job didn't get just a boil; he was covered with boils from the bottom of his feet to the top of his head. So, again, the devil likes to deal out trouble.

Well, Job was pretty miserable with something like that. He wound up sitting in an ash heap. How do you get relief when you are covered with boils all over? Where are you going to sit down and be comfortable? Job wound up sitting in an ash heap and scraping himself with a piece of broken pottery (v. 8). It was a pretty miserable sort of existence.

Verse 9, "Then his wife said to him..." You know, it's interesting. Satan killed everybody else connected with Job, but he didn't do anything to Mrs. Job. Verse 9 may explain the reason.

Continuing in v. 9, the only contribution we read from her is, "...'Do you still hold to your integrity? Curse God and die!'" 'Why don't you just go ahead, curse God and get it over with?' Hopefully, she learned her lesson. We aren't given any indication that when Job had his family renewed at the end of the book, he was given a new wife. So, perhaps, she learned some lessons out of all this, too. She was not contributing to Job's benefit at this point. She was frustrated and said to just get it over with.

Verse 10, "But he said to her, 'You speak as one of the foolish women speaks. Shall we indeed accept good from God, and shall we not accept adversity?' In all this Job did not sin with his lips." "Job did not sin with his lips" is worded a little differently than Job 1:22.

Job 1:22, he says, "In all this Job did not sin nor charge God with wrong."

Job 2:10, Job may have thought some things. He may have had to wrestle with some thoughts, but he didn't say anything he shouldn't have said. He did not do what the devil said he would do.

The devil, by this point, has already been proven wrong twice. It reiterates at the end of each of these incidents that Job did not sin with his lips. He did not charge God with wrong, which was exactly what the devil said he would do. So, God makes it plain that the devil was wrong—that he totally misread Job.

Now, Job had three friends that heard of this, and it mentions them (v. 11). I've mentioned already that we can identify them with the extended family of Abraham. Bildad is probably a descendant of Abraham through Keturah; Eliphaz the Temanite is probably the great grandson of Esau. Some of the generations of Esau's family were fairly close. It is even perhaps the son of Esau who's mentioned there. We don't know where this term "Temanite" comes from, although it became a reference to an area of the country and to some of the descendants of Eliphaz, the son of Esau.

These three friends came down. They made an appointment to meet together to comfort Job. They were just overwhelmed when they saw Job and the condition he was in. Job was so filled with his grief and discouragement that he just didn't feel like saying anything. They sat there with him. They sat there a week (vv. 11-13).

Job 3:1, "After this Job opened his mouth and cursed the day of his birth." He didn't curse God. What he said was he wished he had never been born. If this was where he was going to end up, he wished that the day he was born would perish from the calendar—that the day didn't exist.

Of course, the book of Job is one of the poetic books, along with Psalms and Proverbs. It is written in poetry. It is not just straight prose. Poetry is written differently than prose. In poetry, there is a repetition for the sake of emphasis. The use of language is different. You can't read the book of Job, just strictly, as you would an account in I Samuel because it is written in an expressive and a poetic fashion. Job describes his frustration and discouragement and wishes he were dead. If that was the state in which he had to come, he was wishing he had never been born.

Verses 25-26, "For the thing I greatly feared has come upon me, and what I dreaded has happened to me. I am not at ease, nor am I quiet; I have no rest, for trouble comes." One little bit of insight we gain from v. 25 is that Job evidently had been worried; he had been concerned somewhat about the loss of physical things. This was something that had been on his mind; he evidently had spent some time wondering about that and was a little bit worried about something happening. And then, sure enough, it did.

Now the friends begin to speak. Each of these friends has two discourses. Eliphaz the Temanite is the first one who begins to speak. We are told in the book of Jeremiah that the Temanites were noted for their wisdom (Jeremiah 49:7). They were noted in this way. He came to some conclusions. Notice what he said.

Job 4:7, "Remember now, who ever perished being innocent? Or where were the upright ever cut off?"

Verse 8, "Even as I have seen, those who plow iniquity and sow trouble reap the same." Eliphaz certainly had an "encouraging" way of getting his point across. He said, 'One thing I've seen in life is people always get what they have coming. One thing you can mark down is people get what they have coming to them. They plow iniquity and sow wickedness; they are going to reap the same.' Eliphaz goes through and makes his point.

There are some interesting things that Eliphaz says.

Job 5:17, "Behold, happy is the man whom God corrects; therefore do not despise the chastening of the Almighty." This part is true because it's quoted later in the book of Proverbs and re-quoted in the book of Hebrews. So, there are some points that Eliphaz made that were valid, but the fundamental point that Eliphaz made was, 'Look, you have all these problems and there has to be a reason for it.'

I'll tell you what; I've seen situations where sometimes I wondered if some people in the Church had ever read the book of Job. I've seen people have problems, be in long-term sickness or go through some other really serious trial. Some of their friends showed up and almost quoted Eliphaz verbatim. They would say, 'You know you must have really done something for God to punish you that way.' I just sort of marveled when I heard that. They must have never read the book of Job because God wasn't really happy with Eliphaz and with Eliphaz's conclusion.

God wasn't really happy with that. In fact, when you read the end of the book, you read that God was definitely less than happy with what Eliphaz, Bildad and Zophar had to say. They took it upon themselves to speak for God. God hadn't appointed them to do the speaking. They were putting words in God's mouth; that's a serious business.

James 3:1, "...let not many of you become teachers, knowing that we shall receive a stricter judgment." It's just been incredible to me through the years, how quickly some people in the Church were to come up with some great pronouncement, 'Well, I think you should just leave him. You should just divorce. You should do so-and-so.' Or, 'You must have really done something terrible for that to happen to you.' Off the top of their heads, they came up with some great pronouncement.

It evidently never dawned on them that they were putting themselves in the position of being a teacher of the will of God. Unless God had directly revealed His will to them, that's something they really should be very careful of, realizing that God is going to scrutinize what they say. If we start advising someone, we had better be sure that what we are saying is really what God would say and not something that pops off the top of our heads because that is serious business. That's what Eliphaz was doing.

Well, Job was upset by what Eliphaz had to say because Job knew that there wasn't any great specific sin. Eliphaz sort of took the idea that Job was at the center of the cause. 'You look good on the outside, but there has to be something you're doing that we don't know about. You wouldn't have all these problems if there wasn't something. God is trying to tell you something. Tell us what you have been doing. You've been running around on your wife, right? Been cheating people, right? Whatever it is, tell me.' This was his concept and this was a false concept.

Job is really depressed and frustrated. Here is a situation that has probably hung on for over a year—maybe not the illness part of it, but his total losses of everything of value to him including his family and now the loss of his health. We're looking at events that have dragged on for, probably, over a year since these things started happening. Job is discouraged, in pain and is miserable. He just doesn't understand why. Here, his friend, who came to comfort him, ends up accusing him of having done some terrible thing. So, Job really gets pretty defensive. He goes through some of that in Job 6.

Job 7:1, “Is there not a time of hard service for man on earth? Are not his days also like the days of a hired man?” In other words, a hired day laborer's days are long and hard. Normally, it was for farm work. You hired a day laborer during times of harvest and threshing—in times when there was a lot of hard work and long hours and you needed some extra hands. He sort of got paid the minimum wage of the day. He was just a day laborer, so his days were long and hard. When Job refers to “the days of a hired man,” that is what he means. We have a limited time on earth and our days can, sometimes, also be long and hard.

Verse 2, “Like a servant who earnestly desires the shade, and like a hired man who eagerly looks for his wages.” In other words, the servant earnestly desires the shade. He is looking forward to seeing quitting time. He's anxious to see the time when the sun sets and it is time to quit working. The hired man is anxious to get what he was working for.

Verse 3, “So I have been allotted months of futility, and wearisome nights have been appointed to me.” It just goes on and on and on. Job is depressed. He just wishes it were over.

Verse 17, “What is man, that You should magnify him, that You should set Your heart on him?”

Bildad begins to answer.

Job 8:6, “If you were pure and upright, surely now He would awake for you, and prosper your rightful habitation.”

Verse 20, “Behold, God will not cast away the blameless, nor will He uphold the evildoers.”

Bildad sort of takes the same “tact” Eliphaz did. He said, ‘If you were really as good as what you seem to think, God would be stepping in to take care of things. He's not going to cast away someone who's pleasing Him. He's not going to help evildoers and He's not going to cast away someone with whom he's pleased.’ Again, a very distorted perspective.

Job's response, like in Job 6:24-25, where he says, “Teach me, and I will hold my tongue; cause me to understand wherein I have erred. How forceful are right words! But what does your arguing prove?” Job is saying, ‘You are just going around and around and arguing. If I have a problem, show me what it is. Show me where I am wrong.’ Now Eliphaz couldn't do that, and neither could Bildad. They didn't see the problem, but they assumed that there had to be something.

Job continues to speak. He just doesn't know what to do. Again, he is frustrated.

Job 10:1-2, “My soul loathes my life; I will give free course to my complaint, I will speak in the bitterness of my soul. I will say to God, “Do not condemn me; show me why You contend with me.””

Job wonders why God is doing this to him. Sometimes things happen and we know that it is a matter of cause and effect. Someone is “ripping” down the road, and a policeman comes up behind him with red lights flashing on his car. He doesn't need to ask why God is doing this to him. That's not a matter of God doing something to him. He did it to himself and, generally, he knows that. But there are times things happen that aren't that way. We come through some great trial or situations that just come out of the blue. It can be financial reverses; it can be sickness. It can be death; it can be some very traumatic situation—and you don't know why it happened. Of course, our desire is to know why. Why? We don't always know why.

Zophar answered. Zophar had a really “encouraging” thought.

Job 11:6 (last part), “...Know therefore that God exacts from you less than your iniquity deserves.” Zophar is really an “encouraging” sort. He says, ‘You're getting off light. I don't know what you did, but it must have really been bad. God is not hitting you nearly as hard as what you probably deserve.’

Job 13:13-16, “Hold your peace with me, and let me speak, then let come on me what may! Why do I take my flesh in my teeth, and put my life in my hands? Though He slay me, yet will I trust Him. Even so, I will defend my own ways before Him. He also shall be my salvation, for a hypocrite could not come before Him.”

Job, in the midst of his grief, trouble, frustration and sorrow, still said, “though He slay me, yet will I trust Him.” He didn’t understand why. He couldn’t fathom what was going on. He wished he could talk to God face to face and see what this was all about. But he knew that God was right, and he would trust Him, although He slay him.

It’s easy to go through, sometimes, and say Job didn’t seem in a really good attitude when he said this or that. Well, I tell you what; I think Job set a remarkable example in terms of endurance and faith. Job never did what the devil thought he would do. He never became bitter against God. He was depressed and in the depths of despair some of the times. There were times that he wished he had never been born. But he inevitably kept coming back to the message of faith.

Job 14:1, “Man who is born of woman is of few days and full of trouble.” Job said this.

Verse 2, “He comes forth like a flower and fades away; He flees like a shadow and does not continue.” That’s a poetic description, but it’s a very beautiful description of human life. Job understood this. What we have to understand is that this human life is not the ultimate.

The emphasis in recent decades (I think we could certainly trace back for twenty years or slightly over that and, increasingly, in the 70s) was sort of dubbed the “me” decade. That was the emphasis then, and it continued on. As we sort of look back at some of the periods, the 80s was the decade of “greed.” There has been this increasing emphasis of what’s called “self-fulfillment.” It’s based on the idea that everyone is entitled to be happy here and now, and we have a right to that.

Happiness is a blessing and it’s a benefit. But Job understood that, vv. 1-2, “Man who is born of woman is of a few days and full of trouble. [We are temporary, and there are a lot of problems.] He comes forth like a flower and fades away; he flees like a shadow and does not continue.”

Verses 3-9, “And do You open Your eyes on such a one, and bring me to judgment with Yourself? Who can bring a clean thing out of an unclean? No one! Since his days are determined, the number of his months is with You; You have appointed his limits, so that he cannot pass. Look away from him that he may rest, till like a hired man he finishes his day. For there is hope for a tree, if it is cut down, that it will sprout again, and that its tender shoots will not cease. Though its root may grow old in the earth, and its stump may die in the ground, yet at the scent of water it will bud and bring forth branches like a plant.”

You’ve seen that. You cut down a tree and little sprouts begin to come back up.

Verse 10, “But man dies and is laid away; indeed he breathes his last and where is he?” It doesn’t happen when a person dies. There’s a physical part of the continuing cycle of life. A tree dies, and you can still have a little life left in the old root and a new sprout comes up. But that doesn’t happen with a human being. Man dies and he wastes away. He breathes his last and where is he?

Verse 12, “So man lies down and does not rise. Till the heavens are no more, they will not awake nor be roused from their sleep.”

Verses 13-15, “Oh, that You would hide me in the grave, that You would conceal me until Your wrath is past, that You would appoint me a set time, and remember me! If a man dies, shall he live again? All the days of my hard service I will wait, till my change comes. You shall call, and I will answer You; You shall desire the work of Your hands.”

Job understood that there was to be a resurrection. Job looked beyond this life.

I Corinthians 15:19, Paul says, “If in this life only we have hope in Christ, we are of all men the most pitiable.” That’s what he says in the resurrection chapter. If your only hope for justice and happiness is here and now, you are in trouble because we live in an unjust world. Oh, there may be certain things—we can certainly have certain benefits and sometimes things work out well—but basically we live in an unjust world.

We live in a world that is the devil’s world. There are inequities that are going to be until the Kingdom of God is established and the will of God is carried out on earth with the same alacrity that the angels carry it out in heaven. God’s will isn’t carried out that way on the earth. God can accomplish His will by intervening. Human beings aren’t anxious to carry out God’s will as the angels are. We live in an unjust world. We live in a world that is filled with pain, sorrow, trouble and difficulty. That’s the world we live in, and we are surrounded by it.

Because of the blessings of Abraham, we live in the area of the world that has had the greatest benefits and blessings. But we tend to take that for granted. We just do. Some of you can remember back. The things that we have, even on a physical level, there’s no comparison. Some of you sitting here remember when you got indoor plumbing, electric lights and some of these things. We are not that far removed. That's not ancient history. Even those among us who don't consider ourselves at all wealthy, live with a level of comfort that some of the wealthiest people didn't have too many years ago.

You know, a hundred years ago, I don't care how much money you had, if you lived in Baton Rouge in the summertime, you just sweated. You didn't have any air conditioning. I don't care if you owned the biggest plantation on the Mississippi River; you just sat there and were hot. You could fan yourself or get somebody else to fan you, but you couldn't turn on the air conditioning.

Now, that's a really simple little thing, and there are so many things. We live in an age where we have so much. We have so much more than the vast majority of human beings on the face of this earth. But as a nation we haven't appreciated it. We're not grateful for it, and as a nation we are in the process of losing it. Anybody who thinks God is not breaking the pride of our power and removing the blessings of the birthright from us hasn't read Leviticus and hasn't looked at the news lately because that's reality. I think we understand that.

Job had the message of faith and the message of the resurrection.

Job 19:25-27, "For I know that my Redeemer lives, and He shall stand at last on the earth; and after my skin is destroyed, this I know, that in my flesh I shall see God, whom I shall see for myself, and my eyes shall behold, and not another. How my heart yearns within me!"

Now, you'd have to say that Job evidenced faith. In the midst of his despair, despondency and grief, he kept coming back to the fact that he knew there's something beyond this. And his hope and confidence rested in his Redeemer. He knew that his Redeemer lived, and in the later days, His feet shall stand upon the earth.

Now, I would also point out to you that the clearest teaching of the resurrection in the Old Testament is in the book of Job and the book of Daniel. The Old Testament really doesn't talk very much about the resurrection and very, very little about the promise of eternal life. You could go through and you'd have to really do a little searching and extrapolating to try to find really clear proof scriptures. Yes, I understand the principle is there in certain things, but when you start looking for a really clear proof scripture, you are going to find that you are going to be pretty well confined to the book of Job or the book of Daniel. There wouldn't be a whole lot elsewhere.

Job understood that the time of the resurrection was the time when he would stand.

The statement, "in my flesh shall I see God" is really not the literal translation. I will read it out of the Jewish translation. Job says, "As for me I know that my Redeemer lives and that He shall stand at the latter day upon the earth and when, after my skin this is destroyed, then without my flesh shall I see God." In other words, he is not going to see God in the flesh. He is going to see God as a spirit-born Son of God in the resurrection. Job, clearly, understood some things about the resurrection. Some things that are here, we don't find clearly stated elsewhere.

Job expressed how everybody has turned against him.

Verses 16-20, "I call my servant, but he gives no answer; I beg him with my mouth. My breath is offensive to my wife, and I am repulsive to the children of my own body. Even young children despise me; I arise, and they speak against me. All my close friends abhor me, and those whom I love have turned against me. My bone clings to my skin and to my flesh, and I have escaped by the skin of my teeth."

Have you ever wondered where that expression came from? Have you heard about someone escaping by "the skin of his teeth"? The skin of your teeth is pretty thin. You don't have a whole lot of skin on your teeth. That's where that expression comes from. It comes out of the Bible. It's a poetic expression from the book of Job. Job describes that not only had he lost everything, he had lost everybody. "And those whom I love have turned against me."

He says in vv. 21-23, "Have pity on me, have pity on me, O you my friends, for the hand of God has struck me! Why do you persecute me as God does, and are not satisfied with my flesh? Oh, that my words were written! Oh, that they were inscribed in a book!" That wish got fulfilled. We are reading that.

Job was really feeling pretty miserable. He wanted a little pity and a little sympathy, but all he was getting was his friends "ganging up" on him. Job not only understood about the resurrection to eternal life, but Job 21:30 shows that he understood about the third resurrection to the lake of fire.

Job 21:30, "For the wicked are reserved for the day of doom; they shall be brought out on the day of wrath." Job understood some things about the resurrection.

As we continue on down, Eliphaz seeks to retort. In Job 22, Job answers.

Job 23:2, “Even today my complaint is bitter....”

Verses 11-12, “My foot has held fast to His steps; I have kept His way and not turned aside. I have not departed from the commandment of His lips; I have treasured the words of His mouth more than my necessary food.”

Job says, ‘It’s not because I have departed from the truth. It’s not because I have departed from God’s ways. That’s not why these things are happening to me.’

Job 25:4, well, Bildad answers briefly, “How then can man be righteous before God? Or how can he be pure who is born of a woman?”

Job answers again in Job 26. He describes a little bit about God—about God’s power and God’s creation.

Job 26:6, “Sheol is naked before Him, and Destruction has no covering.” Nothing is hidden from God.

Verse 7, “He stretches out the north over empty space; He hangs the earth on nothing.” This statement and others like it are among those that demonstrate the authority of the Bible and the scientific accuracy of the Bible. The Bible was a book way ahead of its time.

The Greeks, who were supposed to be the founders of so much of western civilization and noted for their insight and their scientific knowledge—a good four or five hundred or maybe even seven hundred years after the time Job wrote these words—the Greeks’ poets Homer and Hesiod were writing that the earth was held up on the shoulders of Atlas. That was the greatest Greek scientific theory of the day, a good six or seven hundred years after Job had written these words, “...God hangs the earth on nothing.” That’s a pretty good description.

The Chinese figured out that it was on the back of a giant turtle. I don’t know what they thought the turtle was standing on. I’ve always wondered. The Greeks thought Atlas was holding the earth on his shoulders. Job, writing hundreds of years earlier said, “God hangs the earth on nothing.”

Isaiah, in Isaiah 40:22, talked about the “circle” or the “sphere” of the earth more than two thousand years before Columbus proved to the Europeans that the earth was round rather than flat.

The point is that the Bible is a book way ahead of its time. The Bible doesn’t give us all scientific information, but when the Bible speaks about matters of science, it gives us insight and information that was way, way ahead of any of the theories of any of the cultures of other people around. The Bible is the inspired word of God.

Job did not see his problem.

Job 27:6, “My righteousness I hold fast, and will not let it go; my heart shall not reproach me as long as I live.” He said he didn’t see where he had done anything wrong. Now, Job did have a certain problem that we are going to see a little later. Job did have some problems with self-righteousness. There were some things that he did not see.

But we sometimes focus on that to the exclusion of the fact that Job was a man who was devoted to God. His loyalty, his allegiance, his devotion to God was constant. Job loved God. He was devoted to God. He was prepared to trust God and to trust what God was doing, all the way to the grave. Job looked for fulfillment beyond this life. That didn’t mean that he enjoyed suffering in this life, but Job understood the real answer and the real solution. He understood this life—we’re here and we are gone.

This life can be very difficult, but Job looked on beyond. He had a loyalty, devotion and allegiance to God that the devil never comprehended. Job was not simply motivated by what he stood to get. Job loved God. He was devoted to God and desired to serve God. But Job did not really see himself properly in relationship to God—in terms of how great God was by comparison to Job.

One of the things, in terms of scientific information, that’s sort of interesting—he talks about God and what God does.

Job 28:24-25, “For He looks to the ends of the earth, and sees under the whole heavens, to establish a weight for the wind, and mete out the waters by measure.” The Amplified Bible renders this as, “He gave to the wind the weights [or pressure].” You know, air pressure was not even understood or discovered until the modern era. People didn’t think air had any weight. But, of course, we know that it does. It’s what we call air pressure. Job understood that. God gave him insight and God makes reference here that this was the case.

Verse 26, “When He made a law for the rain, and a path for the thunderbolt.” Job understood that these were connected.

You can go through chapter 29. We get a little bit of insight into some of the power and prestige that Job had. He talks about the contrast between all that he had in chapter 29 and all that he had lost in chapter 30.

In Job 31, he describes how good he had been. Job 31:1, “I have made a covenant with my eyes; why then should I look upon a young woman?” He said he just decided that he was not going to look and lust.

Verses 2-11, “For what is the allotment of God from above, and the inheritance of the Almighty from on high? Is it not destruction for the wicked, and disaster for the workers of iniquity? Does He not see my ways, and count all my steps? If I have walked with falsehood, or if my foot has hastened to deceit, let me be weighted in a just balance, that God may know my integrity. If my step has turned from the way, or my heart walked after my eyes, or if any spot adheres to my hands, then let me sow, and another eat; yes, let my harvest be rooted out. If my heart has been enticed by a woman, or if I have lurked at my neighbor’s door, then let my wife grind for another, and let others bow down over her. For that would be wickedness; yes, it would be iniquity worthy of judgment.”

He said this was a heinous crime; it was an iniquity. Job understood the law of God. He said he had not done anything.

Verse 33, “If I have covered my transgressions as Adam, by hiding my iniquity in my bosom.” Job said, ‘I haven’t covered up my transgressions as Adam had.’

Verse 40, “...The words of Job are ended.” Finally, the words of Job are ended.

Job 32:1, “So these three men ceased answering Job, because he was righteous in his own eyes.” See! This was the problem. Job was righteous in his own eyes.

Verse 2, “Then the wrath of Elihu, the son of Barachel the Buzite, of the family of Ram...” Now, you can go back and find out who Ram was. We already know who Uz was. He was the brother of Buz. So, this was who Elihu was. Elihu hadn’t said anything. He evidently showed up later after the other fellows. He was a little younger than the rest of them and had just been sitting there listening.

Continuing in v. 2, he listened to all of this and, “...his wrath was aroused because he [Job] justified himself rather than God.”

Verse 3, “Also against his three friends his wrath was aroused, because they had found no answer, and yet had condemned Job.” He was upset at the three friends because they hadn’t found any answer and yet had condemned Job. They didn’t know why, but they were sure that it was all Job’s fault. Elihu had a “bone to pick” with both of them. He told them, ‘You don’t know what you are talking about. And as for you, Job, you’ve put a focus on how good you are and you really haven’t taken note of God. You don’t see yourself in proper relationship with God.’

Verse 8, he talks about the spirit in man.

Job 33:12-13, he goes through and says, “Look, in this you are not righteous. I will answer you, for God is greater than man. Why do you contend with Him? For He does not give an accounting of any of His words.” He said, ‘God doesn’t have to explain to us why He does what He does.’ God doesn’t always have to give us an explanation. There are “whys” we will never know until the resurrection. That’s just the way it is. That’s where a certain amount of trust and faith has to come in. Sometimes, we understand; sometimes, we don’t.

Job 34:12, he continues, “Surely God will never do wickedly, nor will the Almighty pervert justice.”

Job 35:1-6, Elihu said, “Moreover Elihu answered and said: ‘Do you think this is right? Do you say, “My righteousness is more than God’s?” For you say, “What advantage will it be to You? What profit shall I have, more than if I had sinned?” I will answer you, and your companions with you. Look to the heavens, and see; and behold the clouds which are higher than you. If you sin, what do you accomplish against Him? Or, if your transgressions are multiplied, what do you do to Him?’”

He said to look up there. God is up in heaven. All the things you do, you’re not going to harm God by it. You can’t get up there and cause Him a problem.

Verses 7-8, “If you are righteous, what do you give Him? Or what does He receive from your hand? Your wickedness affects a man such as you, and your righteousness a son of man.” You’re not doing damage to God. You’re not helping God and you’re not hurting God. Elihu tells them God is not moved by the kind of motives that all of them are assigning to Him. God is neither hurt nor helped by what you are doing.

Job 36:3, he continues, “I will fetch my knowledge from afar; I will ascribe righteousness to my Maker.”

Job 38:1-4, when Elihu finished, God said, “Then the Lord answered Job out of the whirlwind, and said: ‘Who is this who darkens counsel by words without knowledge? Now prepare yourself like a man; I will question you, and you shall answer Me. Where were you when I laid the foundation of the earth? Tell Me, if you have understanding.’”

Verses 6-7, “To what were its foundations fastened? Or who laid its cornerstone, when the morning stars sang together, and all the sons of God shouted for joy?”

God begins to talk to Job. He wanted Job to see the perspective of God’s greatness and man’s insignificance because the cure for self-righteousness is when we ultimately see ourselves in proper relationship with God. We see how great God is and our own comparative insignificance.

There’s an interesting poetic description given in Job 38. It’s written in a poetic fashion, but if you note what’s actually being said, the analogy being drawn is a very interesting one.

Verses 12-14, “Have you commanded the morning since your days began, and caused the dawn to know its place, that it might take hold of the ends of the earth, and the wicked be shaken out of it? It takes on form like clay under a seal, and stands out like a garment.” It’s talking about the morning dawning, the day coming forth and how, as the day spreads across the earth, the wicked are shaken out.

John 3:19, John tells us, “...Men loved darkness rather than light because their deeds are evil.” Most wickedness is going on at night.

You read in the paper about Baton Rouge being the murder capital. When you read the time of day that most of these things happen, more of them happen late at night or in the wee hours of the morning than happen in broad daylight. That’s just part of human nature. People like to do their wickedness late at night.

He says, “Have you commanded the morning since your days began?” Where does the morning come from? Then He talks of how the wicked are shaken out of the earth as the daylight spreads across it.

Verse 14 describes the earth as taking on form like clay under a seal when the daylight comes. The analogy is that they had a cylinder seal—a carved stone or engraved metal seal. Generally, an engraved stone seal—a cylinder—is round. What happened is the seal was rolled across the clay and the seal spread from one end to the other as the seal rolled across. It is a poetic description of how the daylight came. The sun is like the seal, and in a sense, the earth is like the clay. It rolls around the seal, and as it rolls around the seal, the inscription spreads from one end of the clay to the other. It comes gradually because we are on a round earth rotating around the sun. The daylight starts in one part and it spreads all the way around. You have to think about it a little bit to picture what’s being said.

Again, this is just a little insight in terms of an accurate description.

God talks about all that He had done and the greatness that He had accomplished. Job began to really see himself and to realize his self righteousness. All that he had done, by comparison to God and God’s power and God’s greatness, Job was a lot further down the line than Job had ever seen himself. Job had always felt there wasn’t quite as much difference between God’s righteousness and his own righteousness. Now he begins to see.

Job 42:1-6, “Then Job answered the Lord and said: ‘I know that You can do everything, and that no purpose of Yours can be withheld from You. You asked, “Who is this who hides counsel without knowledge?” Therefore I have uttered what I did not understand, things too wonderful for me, which I did not know. Listen, please, and let me speak; you said, “I will question you, and you shall answer Me.” I have heard of You by the hearing of the ear, but now my eye sees You. Therefore I abhor myself, and repent in dust and ashes.’” Job really came to see himself.

Job’s problem was not what the devil thought. The devil ascribed wrong motives to Job. The devil ascribed to Job selfish, self-centered motives. He said Job was just simply in it for what he could get, the same as everybody else. God said, ‘That was not why Job is here. Job doesn’t serve Me because of what he’s getting; Job serves Me because his loyalty, allegiance, devotion and love is centered on Me.’ The devil didn’t believe that. But that was right; Job was devoted to God.

But Job also had some lessons to learn. His problems weren’t what his friends thought. There wasn’t any great obvious sin. Job was not some “closet” sinner who was doing all sorts of wicked things that were being covered up. But Job did have a problem. God wanted Job to see himself and his own righteousness and to see that it was God’s righteousness that he needed. Job didn’t really see himself, but now he did see himself.

Verses 7-10, “And so it was, after the Lord had spoken these words to Job, that the Lord said to Eliphaz the Temanite, ‘My wrath is aroused against you and your two friends, for you have not spoken of Me what is right, as My servant Job has. Now therefore, take for yourselves seven bulls and seven rams, go to My servant Job, and offer up for yourselves a burnt offering; and My servant Job shall pray for you. For I will accept him, lest I deal with you according to your folly; because you have not spoken of Me what is right, as My servant Job has.’ So Eliphaz the Temanite and Bildad the Shuhite and Zophar the Naamathite went and did as the Lord commanded them; for the Lord had accepted Job. And the Lord restored Job’s losses when he prayed for his friends. Indeed the Lord gave Job twice as much as he had before.”

Now, I think a lot of times we read over that and we don’t consider the significance. God dealt with Job, but these events didn’t happen just as quickly as we are reading it. God dealt with Job, and Job really came to a deep personal realization of God and the realization of God’s power and his own powerlessness. But he didn’t instantly get all his camels and sheep back. He continued in the state that he was. Spiritually, he was much better. Physically, he was still in a mess.

A period of time went by. The friends had evidently left. God revealed to them that they had better go down where Job was. They thought Job had had it rough, but when He was through with them, they were going to be in worse shape than Job, so they had better get down there and get right with God.

I suspect they got in a pretty big hurry to get down there. They had to gather up the bullocks and sheep and come down to where Job was. They performed these sacrifices. God said for them to do this, and when Job prayed for them, He would remove their iniquity. Job prayed for his friends. Job had to be willing to forgive. He couldn’t nurse a grudge against these guys, ‘When I was down, you guys kicked me. You just added to my misery.’ Job could not hold resentment.

It’s interesting. When Job prayed for his friends, that’s when God lifted the cloud. I think there is a very important lesson of how important it is that we forgive. Resentment and bitterness are things to which we can’t hold on. Job could not afford to hold a grudge against his friends, and he didn’t. That was the final test.

We read it and it’s easy. But I tell you what. If you’re in a situation where you’re down and going through a real trial that drags on a year or two, and the people you thought were your best friends—all they are doing is adding to your misery—then one of the things you’d probably not instantly feel like doing is praying for God to be merciful to them and really meaning it. It’s easy, we can read through this in an hour and a half Bible study, but Job lived through it for a period of time. I don’t know exactly how long the book of Job covers, perhaps eighteen months or so—but I tell you, it’s a long time.

At this point everything turned around for him. God blessed him.

Job 42:12, “Now the Lord blessed the latter days of Job more than his beginning....” God doubled the things that He had given him (v. 10) and blessed him with more children (v. 13).

Verses 16-17, “After this Job lived one hundred forty years...So Job died, old and full of years.” He lived a long time after that period. God doubled everything, in terms of Job. This is speculation, but Job may have been seventy at the time this happened. We know God added one hundred forty more years. In terms of wealth, God doubled and gave him twice as much as he had before. He replaced the children. It’s just a matter of speculation, but I think it’s very possible that he may have given him twice as many years ahead as he had behind. Regardless of that comparison, he certainly was old and full of years because he lived for another one hundred forty years. If he had been just one year old, he’d still have been old and full of years. So, he was well on up in years.

Again, we would date it to the patriarchal period—perhaps contemporary with the end of Jacob’s life and the sons of Jacob. There is a lot of insight that we are given here in the book of Job. The book of Job has a lot of insight into God’s nature and character. It has insights with God’s dealings with man and our relationship with God. There are lessons that we should learn, even in our dealings with one another. There are lessons in our relationship with God. There is recognition of the importance of loyalty and devotion that Job expressed. There are a lot of expressions of faith.

Job 13:15, ““Though He slay me, yet will I trust Him....””

Job 19:25, ““For I know that my Redeemer lives.””

Job 14:14, ““If a man dies shall he live again? All the days of my appointed time will I wait till my change comes.””

There are many very important expressions here in the book of Job. It is a very powerful and very important book. We have just had a chance to skim through it this evening. Hopefully, this can be a steppingstone to further deeper personal study.

Next Bible study we will start into the five Festival Scrolls—the first of which is the Song of Solomon.

The Writings Series—Song of Solomon

This evening we are continuing this series on the Writings, but we are getting into another part of the Writings—the Festival Scrolls. Again, these are books that we don't tend to go through very frequently. I don't think the Song of Solomon tends to be one of the books that is most frequently heard or quoted from in sermons and Bible studies. Yet it is a very important part of the Bible and there is a very important lesson that is to be learned from it.

We have covered the Psalms, Proverbs and Job in the traditional Jewish order. The next five books (the part of the Writings we are in now) are the books that are called the Megillot or the Festival Scrolls. This is because these five books were traditionally read at certain festival occasions.

The Song of Solomon was the first of these five: Song of Solomon, Ruth, Lamentations, Ecclesiastes and Esther. We will be going through each of those books in the next five Bible studies (counting this evening).

These books were traditionally read in the temple, and later in the synagogues, during the various festival seasons. Song of Solomon was traditionally read during the Days of Unleavened Bread—normally on the Sabbath during the Days of Unleavened Bread. Ruth was traditionally read at Pentecost. Lamentations was read at a festival that was held in the summer in the fifth month of the sacred year—the month of Ab. It is a month that would normally correspond with our July/August (last of July/first of August). The ninth of Ab was the date. It was the commemoration of Nebuchadnezzar's destruction of the temple. After the destruction of the temple, it became a national day of fasting that the Jews took upon themselves. It is sort of like Thanksgiving in reverse. It was a day of lament.

The ironic thing is that six hundred plus years later, when Titus and the Romans destroyed the temple, they destroyed it on the anniversary of Nebuchadnezzar's destruction of the temple. The two times the temple was destroyed, it was destroyed on the same day—the ninth of Ab. So, they had an additional reason to fast.

Even later history in 1492, the decree that expelled all of the Jews from Spain (which was a major center of Jewish settlement) was issued on the ninth of Ab. It was just a matter of weeks before Columbus sailed to discover America. All their property was confiscated and they were expelled. So, this date has played a significant role in Jewish history. The book of Lamentations was read on that date.

Ecclesiastes was normally read on the Sabbath during the Feast of Tabernacles. And then Esther was read at Purim, which is a national holiday that commemorates the deliverance of the Jews from Persia. It is normally read in the twelfth month of the sacred year, which would correspond with February/March. We're approaching Purim. It should be right around this time. I would have to check the calendar and do a little calculation to figure out exactly when.

The point is that these books were traditionally read on these occasions. When properly understood, each of these books explains significance to these occasions—significance that has very direct implication for us today. We are going to see that as we go through. I am not going to comment on the others any further this evening.

This evening we are focusing on the Song of Solomon, which was traditionally read at the Days of Unleavened Bread. At first thought, that may seem an odd book to read during the Days of Unleavened Bread. In fact, a lot of times people have had trouble understanding the significance of the Song of Solomon. Some of the Rabbis around the time of Christ and after, who were somewhat embarrassed by the plain language of Song of Solomon, decided it was an allegory—that it was the story of God and Israel.

Many of the early Catholic fathers were similarly embarrassed by the plainness of the book and finally decided it was an allegory about Christ and the Church. But the one thing they were all convinced of was that it certainly didn't mean what it said—they found this rather embarrassing and didn't see why something like that should be in the Bible.

If you understood it from the standpoint of the Days of Unleavened Bread, what is the purpose? What do the Days of Unleavened Bread teach us? We are reminded of the importance of putting sin out of our lives. The message of the Days of Unleavened Bread is not a totally negative message. It is not just a matter of getting rid of the leavening. It is not the seven days of not having bread at all; it is the seven days of unleavened bread. We make a replacement. We get rid of the leavening and we eat unleavened bread. So many times the emphasis on putting away sin can come across as a negative matter. I think, particularly for the young people, sometimes it is a negative matter, and they feel that somehow they are missing out by putting away sin.

The story of the Song of Solomon provides the other part of the story. The reality is there is nothing that is worth having—nothing that is good or beneficial to us—that God commands us to put away.

This particular book describes and shows the joy that is available to a young couple that have remained chaste and saved themselves for one another for marriage. The joy that they are able to have is something that even Solomon, with all of his wealth and women, can't have. It is simply not available in the harem, and that's made plain in this book.

It is a beautiful story. It describes the trials of a beautiful peasant maid from Shulam. One day as she was tending the family vineyard, she was seen by the servants of Solomon as they passed by; she was drafted to be a part of Solomon's harem. When the king beholds her, he falls violently in love with her and tries to woo her with blandishments and enticements. During all of this, she remains faithful to her shepherd lover and pines away for her absent fiancé.

Now, when the king is finally convinced of the constancy of her love for the shepherd, he dismisses her from his presence and allows her to return home with the shepherd. The story ends on a triumphant note, with her and the shepherd returning to her mother's house. She has proved that love is capable of heroic endurance.

Let me read a quote from the Soncino Jewish Commentary—a quote from the introduction to the Song of Solomon. “The tale she tells to their assembled friends makes a strong protest against the luxury and vice of the court and pays testimony to the beauty and dignity of pure love and fidelity.”

I will be going through the Song of Solomon in the Jewish Publications Society translation (<http://www.sacred-texts.com/bib/jps/>), and utilizing the Soncino Jewish Commentary. There are many different ways that I have seen of presenting this book. Of all the ones that I have seen, the one that seems to respect the clear and plain meaning of the text the best is the one that is laid out here in the Soncino.

There are all sorts of allegorical interpretations and all sorts of things that come in, but this is ultimately a beautiful love story. There are lessons that we can learn. But I think one of the greatest and most important things is, as this book was read every year during the Days of Unleavened Bread, people in general and young people in particular were reminded of the fact that there are benefits and blessings that are in store when you do it God's way.

Putting away sin doesn't mean missing out on all the fun. Putting away sin doesn't mean having this sort of miserable life where you never have any fun or never get to do anything. That's not where God's way leads. There are benefits and depths of happiness and joy that come from doing it God's way that can never be duplicated any other way—and that's an important lesson to learn for the Days of Unleavened Bread. Putting away sin is not God's punishment for us.

We open in Song of Solomon 1:1, “The song of songs, which is Solomon's.” The term of the title “song of songs” is a superlative. It means the best or the choicest of Solomon's songs. We are told in I Kings 4:32 that Solomon wrote one thousand and five songs, and this is the best that he wrote. This is the choicest of the songs. It is the epitome of the songs that Solomon wrote.

Many of the rabbis and early Catholic fathers were really perplexed in how this wound up in the Bible. They couldn't figure out why this should be a part of the Bible. Solomon wrote one thousand five songs, and this song is the only one that God picked out to be put into the Bible. So, it should tell us that there is something that is important here.

It starts out with the words of the young lady who is referred to as the Shulamite. What we have here are words that she is speaking to her absent shepherd lover.

You have to realize that different parts of the Bible are written in different ways. The way you read the book of Acts or the book of I Samuel is totally different than something such as the Song of Solomon, which was written in a poetic verse. In many ways, it was written to be performed with a chorus and with characters. It is not written as a prose account. It's not written in the detailed historical way as the book of Acts, for instance, or the books of Kings, Chronicles or Judges. It is written as a poem or as a song. It is written almost like a little play—a musical production that involves different ones singing their part. You have to sort of put yourself in that opening. It's as though the curtain opens and the Shulamite is standing there and she is singing.

Verses 2-4, “Let him kiss me with the kisses of his mouth—for your love is better than wine. Your ointments have a goodly fragrance; your name is as ointment poured forth; therefore do the maidens love you. Draw me, and we'll run after you; the king has brought me into his chambers; we will be glad and rejoice in you; we will find your love more fragrant than wine! Sincerely do they love you.”

As we go on through, this tells the story of what happened to her. The story that is set out is that she was tending the vineyard and had been conscripted by Solomon’s retinue. Solomon had various palaces and at certain times of the year, he moved from area to area. That was not uncommon in that area.

If you wanted to be cool in the summer, you didn’t turn on the air-conditioning. They didn’t have any. They had a summer palace, which was normally located up in the mountains at a higher elevation where the temperature was cooler. It was not uncommon that the court would move several times in a year. There would be this great panoply and parade and you could see the dust off in the distance. The horsemen and the chariots would come and Solomon would finally come in this big contraption in which he moved. And then would come this gigantic retinue that moved when the court was transferred from palace to palace. So, this is sort of the story.

She is standing here musing this and she is expressing this. This is after she has been taken. The king has brought her into his chambers. Perhaps this is being spoken as a soliloquy as she is sort of musing or speaking to herself. Most likely the ladies of the harem would be close by and hear this.

Verses 5-6, she makes the statement, “I am black, but comely, [The word that is rendered “black” is a word that literally means “ruddy” or “sunburned.”] O ye daughters of Jerusalem, as the tents of Kedar, as the curtains of Solomon. Look not upon me, because I am swarthy, because the sun has tanned me; my mother’s sons were incensed against me; they made me keeper of the vineyard; but mine own vineyard have I not kept.”

In other words, she hasn’t pampered herself. She is comparing herself to the pampered ladies of Solomon’s court. She has been outdoors and is tanned. For some of them, all they did all day long was sit around and pamper themselves. They rubbed on various ointments, oils and all sorts of things. She, from an early age, had been helping on the farm by working out of doors. She is tan and ruddy from the sun. She is, in a sense, comparing herself to these pampered ladies of Solomon’s court.

Verse 7, “Tell me, O you whom my soul loves, where you feed, where you make your flocks to rest at noon; for why should I be as one that veils herself beside the flocks of your companions.”

Note here that she is addressing her absent shepherd lover. She asks the question, ‘Where are you feeding your flock? Where do you make your flock to rest at noon?’ When she thinks in terms of meeting her fiancé, it is not sneaking off in the dark of night.

Even the commentary brings that out. It says: “Being modest, she says at noon. Not like the wanton ladies of the court who seek their lovers at night because they are up to things they shouldn’t be.”

At this point in v. 8, there is a chorus from the women there in the court—the harem. They respond, “If you know not, O you fairest among women, go your way forth by the footsteps of the flock and feed your kids beside the shepherds’ tents.”

At this point, Solomon comes in and begins to speak to her.

Verses 9-10, “I have compared you, O my love, to a steed in Pharaoh’s chariots. Your cheeks are comely as circlets, your neck with beads.”

You have to understand that some of the comparisons don’t always come down; some of it is cultural. If you were trying to woo some girl and you told her she looked like a horse, she probably wouldn’t take it as a compliment. ‘When I look at you I think of a horse,’ wouldn’t be something that you would necessarily want to tell your wife or your fiancé. She probably wouldn’t appreciate that. But this was a culture where, when they thought of horses, they thought of beauty and the graceful movements. It was not an insult or a put-down.

Verses 12-13, she responds, “While the king sat at his table, my spikenard sent forth its fragrance. My beloved is unto me as a bag of myrrh, that lies betwixt my breasts.”

Solomon is sitting there, and even while the king is sitting there and speaking, her thoughts wander to her shepherd lover, her fiancé. He’s described like a perfume bag that sends forth a smell that wafts out and you can follow it. She is not being attracted to, or won over, by Solomon in the same way. She is being drawn to the one to whom she pledged herself and desires to marry.

Solomon continues and tries to flatter her.

Verse 15, “Behold, you are fair my love. Behold you are fair. Your eyes are as doves.”

Ignoring Solomon’s flattery, she responds. She mentally addresses her absent lover.

Verses 16-17, she describes, “Behold, you are fair, my love; behold, you are fair, your eyes are as doves. Behold, you are fair, my beloved, yea, pleasant; also our couch is leafy. The beams of our houses are cedars, and our panels are cypresses.”

Her allusion, here in vv. 16 and 17, is to the out-of-doors. Her mind hearkens back to the shepherd lover, the fiancé from whom she has been taken away. She thinks about the out-of-doors. Solomon has all these things to impress her and she says, “the beams of our houses are cedars and our panels are cypresses.” She’s thinking of the cedar trees under which they rest and shelter during the heat of the day. The word “houses” is plural and has certain significance. In other words, we have not one place but many in the forest glades.

Song of Solomon 2:1, “I am a rose of Sharon, a lily of the valleys.” A rose of Sharon or a lily of the valley is a common wildflower. She is not comparing herself to one of the pampered hothouse plants of Solomon’s harem but to a common wildflower. She says, ‘I am just like a common wildflower.’

Verse 2, Solomon responds, “As a lily among thorns, so is my love among the daughters.”

Verses 3-6, she continues, “As the apple-tree among the trees of the wood, so is my beloved among the sons. Under its shadow I delighted to sit, and its fruit was sweet to my taste. He has brought me to the banqueting-house, and his banner over me is love. Stay me with dainties; refresh me with apples; for I am lovesick. Let his left hand be under my head, and his right hand embrace me.”

We come to this refrain, which marks the end of the section.

Verse 7, “I adjure you, O daughters of Jerusalem, by the gazelles, and by the hinds of the field, that you waken not, nor stir up love, until it please.” This is repeated as a chorus several times in the book. We will see that this ends a section.

We opened with this scene. She is here and begins to speak. The chorus answers her. Then Solomon, in his attempt to flatter, answers her. But her heart, her mind and her thoughts are going back to this absent shepherd lover, to the fiancé whom she loves. The first section concludes with the failure of the king and his court ladies to persuade the peasant girl to be disloyal to her lover.

Verse 8 begins a new section. The scene is no longer Jerusalem but a royal residence in the country. It is probably in the north of Palestine from which the lovers hail. Again, the speakers are the Shulamite and the daughters of Jerusalem.

This section is devoted to an account of how one spring morning her shepherd came and invited her to join him in the field. To prevent this meeting, her brothers transferred her to work in the vineyard, from which she has then been taken by force to the royal court. She finds consolation in the certainty that her lover would seek her. His approach is traced until he reaches the wall of the building in which she is confined. Peering through the lattice window, he fails to see her and pleads for the sound of her voice. To reply, she sings to him selections of the vineyard song. In the next verse, she addresses him in rapturous language. Then fearing for his safety, she exhorts him to depart until the shadows flee away and they can meet again.

It opens up in v. 8 as she is anticipating the fact that he is coming to rescue her.

Verses 8-12, “Hark! My beloved! Behold, he comes, leaping upon the mountains, skipping upon the hills. My beloved is like a gazelle or a young hart; behold, he stands behind our wall, he looks in through the windows, he peers through the lattice. My beloved spoke, and said unto me: ‘Rise up, my love, my fair one, and come away. For, lo, the winter is past, the rain is over and gone; the flowers appear upon the earth; the time of singing is come, the voice of the turtle is heard in our land.’”

That would more properly be, “the voice of the turtledove.” You don’t normally hear the voice of a turtle. “The time of singing is come, the voice of the turtledove is heard in our land.”

Verses 13-14, “The fig-tree puts forth her green figs, and the vines in blossoms give forth their fragrance. Arise, my love, my fair one, come away. O my dove, that are in the clefts of the rock, in the covert of the cliff, let me see your countenance, let me hear your voice; for sweet is your voice, and your countenance is comely.”

The scene opens up as she anticipates his coming.

Verse 10, “My beloved spoke, and said unto me....” Then it quotes what he said as he has finally come here and has found where she is. He has come and approached the section of the palace where the harem is located.

Verses 15-17, then she responds, “Take us the foxes, the little foxes, that spoil the vineyard; for our vineyards are in blossom. My beloved is mine, and I am his, that feeds among the lilies, until the day breaks and the shadows flee away, turn my beloved, and be you like a gazelle or a young hart upon the mountain of spices.”

In other words, ‘flee away until evening, until the day breaks and the shadows flee away. Go until sunset, until it gets dark.’ She is afraid he is going to get caught and get into trouble there.

Song of Solomon 3:1, “By night on my bed I sought him whom my soul loves; I sought him, but I found him not.” Disappointed at the non-appearance of her lover with the coming of night, her sleep is troubled. She has feverish dreams and finally decides to go in search for him.

Verses 2-4, “I will rise now, and go about the city, in the streets and in the broad ways, I will seek him whom my soul loves.’ I sought him, but I found him not. The watchmen that go about the city found me: ‘Saw you him whom my soul loves?’ Scarce had I passed from them, when I found him whom my soul loves: I held him, and would not let him go, until I brought him into my mother’s house, and into the chamber of her that conceived me.”

Verse 5, we then, again, conclude this section with, “I adjure you, O daughters of Jerusalem, by the gazelles, and by the hinds of the fields, that you waken not, nor stir up love, until it please.” This refrain marks the end of the second section. She describes her dream.

In chapter 3:1, her fiancé had not reappeared that evening and in her dreams, she was fitful and seeking to find him. Notice what she wanted to do when she found him. What she anticipated doing was bringing him into her mother’s house, bringing him home to her family. This was not something that involved her sneaking around away from her family. The evidence was that he was her acknowledged lover of whom her mother approved. The section ends with v. 5.

The third section begins in v. 6. This is Solomon’s appearance at Shulam. It is a graphic description of the arrival of the king and all the pomp and ceremony.

Verses 6-7, “Who is this that comes up out of the wilderness like pillars of smoke, perfume with myrrh and frankincense, with all powders of the merchants? Behold, it is the litter of Solomon; threescore mighty men are about it, of the mighty men of Israel.”

Solomon had this giant litter that he traveled with that was carried. It took sixty men that were all around it to carry it. It was like a coach that was carried on poles that you’ve perhaps seen pictures of. There were four poles coming out, two in front and two in the back, and fifteen big, strong men on each pole carrying it. You can imagine what this thing was like. The litter of Solomon, sixty mighty men of the mighty men of Israel, is about it.

Verses 8-9, “They all handle the sword, and are expert in war; every man has his sword upon his thigh, because of dread in the night. King Solomon made himself a palanquin of the wood of Lebanon.” This is a covered litter. It’s like a couch long enough for the rider to recline. It’s covered with a canopy and resting on pillars at four corners. It has curtains hung around to exclude the sun. It has a door, sometimes of latticework, on each side. He had this thing made of the wood of Lebanon.

Verse 10, “He made the pillars there of silver, and the top thereof of gold, the seat of it of purple, the inside being inlaid with love, from the daughters of Jerusalem.” It was sort of like a portable bedroom on which Solomon was transported around. And here comes this procession—Solomon is coming up from Jerusalem to Shulam.

Verse 11, “Go forth, O you daughters of Zion, gaze upon King Solomon, and even upon the crown wherewith his mother had crowned him in the day of his espousals, and in the day of gladness of his heart.”

We have this descriptive inset in vv. 6-11 of Solomon’s appearance at Shulam.

Song of Solomon 4 begins the statement of the shepherd, who is addressing his beloved after the arrival of this retinue.

Song of Solomon 4:1, “Behold, you are fair my love, behold you are fair; your eyes are as doves behind the veil; your hair is like a flock of goats, that trail down upon Mount Gilead.”

Again, you get the description of all the comparisons. We’re talking about rural, agricultural society and some of the comparisons don’t come down. They lose a little something in transitions to our urban society. If you tell your wife or your fiancé that she has hair like a goat, she may not necessarily know that it’s a complement. The description is like a flock of goats that are coming down the mountain and their hair is glossy and sleek and the sun reflects from it. He describes all these various things.

Verses 2-12, “Your teeth are like a flock of ewes all shaped alike, which come up from the washing; whereof all are paired, and none fails among them. Your lips are like a thread of scarlet, and your mouth is comely; your temples are like a pomegranate split open behind your veil. Your neck like the tower of David built with turrets, whereon there hang a thousand shields, all the armour of the mighty men. Your two breasts are like two fawns that are twins of a gazelle, which feed among the lilies. Until the day breaks, and the shadows flee away, I will get me to the mountain of myrrh, and to the hill of frankincense. You are all fair, my love; there is no spot in you. Come with me from Lebanon, my bride, with me from Lebanon; look from the top of Amana, from the top of Senir and Hermon, from the lions' dens, from the mountains of the leopards. You have ravished my heart, my sister, my bride. You have ravished my heart with one of your eyes, with one bead of your necklace. How fair is my love, my sister, my bride! How much better is your love than wine! And the smell of your ointments than all manner of spices! Your lips, O my bride, drop honey—honey and milk are under your tongue; and the smell of your garments is like the smell of Lebanon. A garden shut up is my sister, my bride; a spring shut up, a fountain sealed.”

This is an allusion to something. The beauty of his beloved conjures up in his ardor a garden splendid in color and fertility, but it is a garden secluded to all, except its lawful possessor. She's chaste and modest. Just as gardens are walled in to prevent the intrusion of strangers, he describes her as a garden shut up, a spring shut up, a fountain sealed. She's not wide open to strangers, but she is chaste and modest.

Verse 15, “You are a fountain of gardens, a well of living waters, and flowing streams from Lebanon.”

Verse 16, she responds, “Awake, O north wind; and come, you south; blow upon my garden, that the spices thereof may flow out. Let my beloved come into his garden, and eat his precious fruits.”

Song of Solomon 5:1, the shepherd responds, “I am come into my garden, my sister, my bride; I have gathered my myrrh with my spice, I have eaten my honeycomb with my honey; I have drunk my wine with my milk. Eat, O friends; drink, yea, drink abundantly, O beloved.” –An invitation to a wedding feast.

Verse 2 is a description of her dream. A day of excitement is followed by troubled dreams.

Verse 2, “I sleep, but my heart wakes; [In other words, she's dreaming, and this is what she dreams.] Hark! my beloved knocks: ‘Open to me my sister, my love, my dove, my undefiled; for my head is filled with dew, and my locks with the drops of the night.’”

Verses 3-6, she responds, “I have put off my coat; how shall I put it on? I have washed my feet; how shall I defile them? My beloved put his hand by the hole of the door, and my heart was moved for him. I rose up to open to my beloved; and my hands dripped with myrrh, and my fingers with flowing myrrh, upon the handles of the bar. I opened my beloved; but my beloved had turned away, and was gone....”

She goes to sleep and in her dream she sees the action that has passed. Solomon and his retinue have arrived with all of the pomp and ceremony and all the commotion that has been caused.

In the meantime, the shepherd has come and has found her. They have some time there, and he goes into this ardent reiteration of his love for her and of his desire to take her away as his wife. She desires that; she desires to come away with him. She calls upon the wind to blow them away together. But then he has to leave, and she goes to bed. She wakes up and addresses him. She takes her time coming and opening the door. And when she opens the door he is gone.

Verses 6-7, in her dream, “I opened to my beloved; but my beloved had turned away, and was gone. My soul failed me when he spoke. I sought him, but I could not find him; I called him, but he gave no answer. The watchmen that go about the city found me, they smote me, they wounded me; the keeper of the walls took away my mantle from me.”

Verse 8, then she speaks, “I adjure you, O daughters of Jerusalem, if you find my beloved, what will you tell him? That I am lovesick.”

The daughters of Jerusalem, which is the chorus, respond.

Verse 9, “What is your beloved more than another beloved, O you fairest among women? What is your beloved more than another beloved, that you adjure us so?” They say, ‘What's so special about him?’

She responds in song to the daughters of Jerusalem as to what's so special.

Verses 10-16, she says, “My beloved is white and ruddy, pre-eminent above ten thousand. His head is as the most fine gold, his locks are curled, and black as a raven. His eyes are like doves beside the water-brooks; washed with milk, and fitly set. His cheeks are as a bed of spices, as banks of sweet herbs; his lips are as lilies, dripping with flowing myrrh. His hands are as rods of gold set with beryl; his body is as polished ivory overlaid with sapphires. His legs are as pillars of marble, set upon sockets of fine gold; his aspect is like Lebanon, excellent as the cedars. His mouth is most sweet; Yea, he is altogether lovely. This is my beloved; and this is my friend, O daughters of Jerusalem.”

Song of Solomon 6:1, the daughters of Jerusalem respond, “Where is your beloved gone, O you fairest among women? Where is your beloved turned aside, that we may seek him with you?”

She then responds. She is perhaps jealous of the interest that has been aroused in her beloved. She offers an evasive reply.

Verses 2-3, “My beloved is gone down to his garden, to the bed of spices, to feed in the garden, and to gather lilies. I am my beloved’s, and my beloved is mine, that feeds among the lilies.”

The rest of the chapter seems to recount another futile attempt on the part of the infatuated Solomon to win her love for him. Of course, unfortunately for him, the wrong moment is chosen because she has just made another passionate declaration of her love to the shepherd—a love that is stronger than death. The king extols her physical beauty and endorses the words of the court ladies who had sung her charms.

Verses 4-6, Solomon opens up, “You are beautiful, O my love, as Tirzah, comely as Jerusalem, terrible as an army with banners. Turn away your eyes from me, for they have overcome me. Your hair is as a flock of goats that trail down from Gilead. Your teeth are like a flock of ewes, which are come up from the washing; whereof all are paired, and none fail among them.”

Verses 9-10, “My dove, my undefiled, is but one; she is the only one of her mother; she is the choice one of her that bore her. The daughters saw her, and called her happy; yea, the queens and the concubines, and they praised her. Who is she that looks forth as the dawn, fair as the moon, clear as the sun, terrible as an army with banners?”

She recalls what she was doing on the faithful day when she was so praised, and made her attempt to run away. She begins to describe what had happened. She reminisces here.

She interrupts her royal suitor.

Verses 11-12, she says, “I went down into the garden of nuts, to look at the green plant of the valley, to see whether the vine budded, and the pomegranates were in flower. Before I was aware, my soul set me upon the chariots of my princely people.”

In effect saying, ‘Have I been going out to meet the king and to lure him to myself? When I was tending the vines and seeing what nuts and fruits were ripe in my garden, I was taken and brought to the court. Let him release me now that I may return home.’

Nuts grow very plentifully in the northern part of Palestine, which was where Solomon had his summer palace. She said, ‘I was engaged in this task and before I was aware, the servants of the king carried me away. Before I realized it, I found myself here at the court.’

Verse 13, “Return, return, O Shulamite; Return, return, that we may look upon you. What will you see in the Shulamite? As it were, the dance of two companies.”

In Song of Solomon 7, Solomon responds. Realizing that his attempts have failed, he implores her not to flee from his presence but to allow his eyes to feast upon her beauty.

Song of Solomon 7:1, “How beautiful are your steps in sandals, O prince’s daughter! ...” He goes on and describes her beauty.

Verse 5, he concludes, “...the king is held captive in the tresses thereof...” –Speaking of her hair.

Verse 6, “How fair and how pleasant are you, O love, for delights!” He finishes this statement.

Verses 10-13, she responds, “I am my beloved’s, and his desire is toward me. Come, my beloved, let us go forth into the field; let us lodge in the villages. Let us get up early to the vineyard; let us see whether the vine has budded, whether the vine blossom be open, and the pomegranates be in flower; there will I give you my love. The mandrakes give forth fragrance, and at our doors are all manner of precious fruits, new and old, which I have laid up before you, O my beloved.”

Song of Solomon 8:1, it continues, “O that you were my brother, that sucked the breasts of my mother! When I should find you without, I would kiss you; yea, and none would despise me. I would lead you, and bring you into my mother’s house, that you might instruct me; I would cause you to drink of spiced wine, and of the juice of my pomegranate. His left hand would be under my head, and his right hand should embrace me.”

Verse 4, then the section ends, “I adjure you, O daughters of Jerusalem: Why should you waken or stir up love, until it please?” Again, there is this refrain that ends in chapter 8:4 that marks the end of another section.

What we have here is Solomon’s final attempt to entice her and to keep her there.

But in chapter 7:11, the Shulamite begins to speak.

Song of Solomon 7:11, “I am my beloved’s and his desire is toward me.” She openly rejects the kings’ wooing. None can separate her from her only beloved.

At this point she addresses the shepherd who now reappears.

Verse 12, “Come my beloved, let us go away....” She addresses him and urges their departure from the palace to their former meeting places in the fields. Thrilled at the thought of her impending homecoming, she envisages the familiar scene. She is eager to be home again. She implores him, 'Let's hurry away.'

The section ends here with v. 4.

In Song of Solomon 8:5, we have the concluding part. We now see her return. The villagers see the lovers approaching and their curiosity is whetted. Every familiar scene they pass brings back sweet memories of former meeting places.

Song of Solomon 8:5-7, "Who is this that comes up from the wilderness, leaning upon her beloved? Under the apple-tree I awaken you; there your mother was in travail with you; there was she in travail and brought you forth. Set me as a seal upon your heart, as a seal upon your arm; for love is strong as death, jealousy is cruel as the grave; the flashes thereof are as flashes of fire, a very flame of the Lord. Many waters cannot quench love, neither can the floods drown it; if a man would give all the substance of his house for love, he would be utterly contemned."

Now her brothers speak.

Verses 8-9, "We have a little sister, and she has no breasts; what shall we do for our sister in the day that she shall be spoken for? If she be a wall, we will build upon her a turret of silver; and if she be a door, we'll enclose her with boards of cedar."

This is the statement her brothers made. The last seven verses record her reminisces and triumphs. She reminds her brothers how unnecessary their fear had been for her chastity when beset by temptation.

At an early age, when she was young and not mature, they made the statement, "What shall we do for our sister in the day when she shall be spoken for?"—At the time of her marriage.

Verse 9, "If she be a wall..." A wall is there to protect from intrusion or intruders and to keep out strangers. So, if she is figuratively a wall—if she remains a virgin, "...we will build upon her a turret of silver..." They say, 'We will give her many gifts. We will be very generous at the time of her wedding.'

Continuing, "...and if she be a door..." You know, a door revolves on its hinges. Somebody knocks and it's opened. So, it's a poetic contrast between one who remains chaste, as opposed to someone who was just wide open. The brothers' statement had contrasted—if she is chaste we will provide well for her, but if she is a door (figuratively speaking, a loose woman), "...we will enclose her with boards of cedar." It is barricaded to prevent a door from being broken into.

She responds, reminding her brothers about their concern for her years earlier.

Verse 10, "I am a wall, [She say, 'I have retained my chastity and now I am grown and am mature.'] and my breasts are like the towers thereof; then was I in his eyes as one that found peace."

Verses 11-13, the shepherd is speaking, "Solomon had a vineyard at Baal Hamon; he gave over the vineyard unto keepers; every one for the fruit thereof brought in a thousand pieces of silver. My vineyard, which is mine, is before me; you, O Solomon, shall have the thousand, and those that keep the fruit thereof, two hundred. You that dwell in the gardens, the companions hearken for your voice: 'Cause me to hear it.'"

The shepherd makes a contrast between what Solomon has and what he has. He says, "Solomon had a vineyard in Baal Hamon." Baal Hamon is a site near Jerusalem. It literally means "owner of a multitude." It's a description of Solomon's harem. He is described as owner of a multitude. "You O Solomon shall have the thousand." He says, 'You keep your thousand because, "My vineyard which is mine is before me."' He is speaking of his bride. He says, 'You, Solomon, you keep your thousand.'

Verse 14, then she says, "Make haste, my beloved, and be you like a gazelle or to a young hart upon the mountains of spices."—The conclusion of the story.

As we go through we see a contrast. Solomon saw in this Shulamite girl something that he didn't find in his harem. There was something special about her. And, yes, there was. What he found was virtue and constancy. That's so totally different than the flattering, flaunting attitude of the harem and all of the things that Solomon had gathered around him.

Solomon spent his life in a quest for happiness and fulfillment. For all that he gathered to himself, he really missed out on an awful lot. The only woman that he ever found, that came close to the ideal that his mother had taught him about in Proverbs 31, wouldn't have him on a "bet." She was faithful to someone else. She was looking to someone who really loved her and not someone who was simply infatuated for the moment.

We will go back through and hit the high points with some of the questions and bring out a few things. We noted that the title is a superlative. It describes her in 1:5-7 as being ruddy or sunburned because of the outdoor work of keeping the vineyard that her brothers had insisted she perform.

Her response to Solomon's blandishments is recorded in 1:12-13. Even while the king sat at his table speaking, her thoughts were wandering to her shepherd fiancé. She compares herself in 2:1 to a rose of Sharon, a lily of the valley—a common wildflower. The seasonal setting of the book, according to vv. 12-13, is springtime. It is the seasonal setting of the Days of Unleavened Bread. It describes it as a time when the flowers appear on the earth and the time of singing is come. The trees are budding out. It is the time that our attention is turned to new life, to new beginnings, to a fresh start. It is certainly the time that is the romantic time—the beauty and everything all around—springtime.

We saw the refrain—used in 2:7, 3:5 and 8:4—that marks the end of a section. It is used three different times in the book. It is like Act 1 and Act 2 is over; it represents a scene change.

In Song of Solomon 3:4, where did she desire to take her fiancé once the two of them were reunited? Well, she desired to take him back to her mother's house. It didn't involve some sort of clandestine thing, away from parental approval.

The last half of chapter 3 (beginning in v. 6) describes the coming of Solomon with his retinue to the royal residence in North Israel. It describes all the glory and grandeur of which Solomon makes his entrances and exits.

In chapter 4:8, the shepherd desires his bride to flee from Lebanon with him and to escape the clutches of Solomon and the royal harem.

We have already commented on v. 12. She describes herself as a shut-up garden, a spring sealed up. This was the reference that we find back at the end of the book. Her brothers made the comment of the allusion to a wall, a garden sealed up, referring to her. She was chaste. She had retained her chastity.

In chapter 5, we have the dream that she had as she wandered the streets looking for her fiancé and was unable to find him.

Notice the KJV where he says, "I am my beloved's and his desire is towards me" (7:10). (You may have trouble following it because the numbering of the verses in the Jewish translation is one verse off from the KJV. The translation I am reading from is v. 11, but in the KJV, it is v. 10 of chapter 7.) This is a reference to the relationship that is described and their faithfulness toward one another.

The story ends in chapter 8. We have already noted that her brothers had promised when she was a young girl that if she remained chaste and a virgin, they would help her and provide a large dowry. If she proved loose (in other words a door opening to every passerby), they would deal with her sternly. She reminds them of their promise, the dowry that they had promised and the fact that she had remained a virgin.

The comparison that we have drawn in 8:11-12 is that Solomon had his vineyard (his harem), which he shared with others.

The shepherd ends on the note of stating that his wife is his alone, and he has something that even Solomon doesn't have.

Verses 12-13, "My vineyard, which is mine, is before me; thou, O Solomon, shall have the thousand, and those that keep the fruit thereof two hundred. You that dwell in the garden, the companions hearken for your voice: 'Cause me to hear it.'"

He is asking for her response. He declares his love, faithfulness and commitment to her.

Verse 14, her response—her "I do"—is to call him and to say, "Make haste, my beloved, and be you like to a gazelle or to a young hart upon the mountains of spices." The barriers are no longer there.

It ends up as a very beautiful story—a story of the joy that a young couple can have when they have saved themselves for marriage to one another. It is far, far superior to the pleasures of a dissolute Solomon. There was something that Solomon could never have or could never take part in because Solomon, by the choices he made, certainly cut himself off from the simple pleasures. Solomon had his harem, his thousand women. He had his wealth, greatness and his grandeur. But what he didn't have was one woman who loved him with all her heart and who was really faithful to him. Solomon never had a happy marriage. He had all the women that he could ever imagine. But the only one that he finally found was loved and committed to her fiancé.

In fact, there's an interesting allusion in the book of Ecclesiastes where Solomon makes reference, in Ecclesiastes 7:28, to not being able to find the woman that he was looking for among a thousand. The problem was that he was looking in the wrong places because the women that Solomon surrounded himself with—the women who were a part of his court and harem—were not the people that reflected the kind of virtue, constancy, love and depth of commitment that we find in the Shulamite girl in the Song of Solomon.

We have a story that is a story of love. It is a story of commitment and a story of heroic endurance during very trying circumstances. It is the story of an attempt to attract and to draw away someone. Yet it was unsuccessful because there was a depth of commitment that is described in very beautiful and poetic language.

The Song of Solomon is a song that celebrates the commitment and constancy of young love that is based on a moral foundation, on a foundation of God's law. God is not against young people. God is not against love. God designed love. God designed marriage. God designed our first parents. God created and established the institution of marriage. God designed the attraction that men and women should have and feel for one another. That's not something that sort of sneaked in or evolved. God designed that. I think one of the greatest of all physical blessings is the blessing of a happy marriage. Yet sin so often mars the situation.

We have a beautiful story, a story that young people were to be reminded of every year. Every spring there was a reminder of the importance of constancy, commitment, of doing it God's way: waiting and saving themselves for the right time, resisting the blandishments, the allurements, and the enticements of the world, resisting all the glitter and glamour that was out there to attract and entice them. They say, "There's something worth waiting for." There is something worth waiting for.

It is a book, when put in the context of the Days of Unleavened Bread, which paints a very beautiful story—a very beautiful story that Solomon could only write and sing about. He could never experience it because of the situation in which he found himself. Solomon didn't follow his own advice. He gave terrific advice to his son in the book of Proverbs. Solomon was not one who really followed all of his own advice. The book of Ecclesiastes bears that out.

I think Song of Solomon is a very beautiful story, a beautiful poetic story that is brought out. It clearly shows that God is not against young people. He's not against love. God is very much for that.

There is a way of doing it that leads to happiness, and there is a way that leads to sorrow. Even in the context of the Days of Unleavened Bread and the messages that are related to removing and getting rid of sin, we should be reminded of the fact that what God has in mind to replace sin with is the joy of doing it His way. That is certainly something worth waiting for and worth desiring.

The next Bible study, we will be going through the book of Ruth. Each of these five Festival Scrolls is a book that is relatively short. They are poetic and very descriptive of some things that can be very helpful and very important for us to learn and to understand.

The Writings Series—Ruth

This evening we are getting into the second of the five Festival Scrolls—the books we commented upon last time. Having gone through the Song of Solomon, this evening we are getting into the book of Ruth.

The book of Ruth is a part of what is called the Megillot or Festival Scrolls. Traditionally, the Jews read it at Pentecost. To briefly summarize, it is the story of a Gentile maiden that voluntarily forsook her own nation and her own gods and became a part of the commonwealth of Israel.

We will note, a little later, the way in which Ephesians 2 is very helpful as a New Testament parallel, explaining some of the spiritual implications of this book—its significance for Pentecost and for the Church. Through her marriage with Boaz, Ruth became an heir of the promises to Abraham. She was the ancestor of King David and, therefore, of the Messiah. The story of Ruth typifies the story of a Christian coming out of the world and offers parallels to the marriage of Christ to the Church.

In the actual account, it is a very beautiful touching love story. According to tradition, Boaz was well advanced in years. In fact, some traditions say that he may have been upwards of about eighty years old. We will notice Ruth 3:10 as an indication of that. Boaz made reference to this.

Ruth 3:10, “Then he [Boaz] said, ‘Blessed are you of the Lord, my daughter! For you have shown more kindness at the end than at the beginning, in that you did not go after young men, whether poor or rich.’” The reference was that he was not young and evidently was well up in years. Undoubtedly, he was a widower by this time in his life. It’s interesting because there is a direct relationship in the life of Boaz with the period that covers a great deal of the period of Judges.

According to Matthew 1:5, Boaz’s mother was Rahab. Boaz’s life paralleled or covered many of the early periods of the book of Judges. Undoubtedly, he saw qualities in Ruth that must have reminded him of his mother Rahab and her example. You may note in Hebrew 11:31 that Rahab is listed in the men and women of faith.

Boaz fulfills, in this account in the book of Ruth, the role of a kinsman redeemer, which is certainly a type of the role of Jesus Christ.

Let me give you a bit of background. I am going to read portions of the Soncino Jewish Commentary on the book of Ruth. It gives some background that can be helpful and beneficial.

They make reference, “The book of Ruth is prescribed for reading as part of the liturgy on Pentecost, the festival commemorating the revelation on Mount Sinai. The connection between the book and the festival is two-fold. The festival, as its name Feast of Firstfruits indicates, is primarily a harvest festival, and the harvest figures prominently in the area. The revelation [that is, God’s revelation on Sinai] marked, as it were, the formal acceptance by Israel of that religion and law of life, which were later to prove so irresistibly attractive to the heathen damsel from Moab. The bearing of the story on the festival is the moral one, which teaches that the Torah, the Law of God, can only be acquired by those who tread the road of hardship.”

It’s sort of an interesting point that even the Jews get out of this.

They go on to make the comment, “Unbiased scholars are almost unanimous in agreeing upon the historical accuracy of the facts presented in the book. Who can doubt them or why would they have been invented? There would surely be little point in inventing a foreign ancestry for the greatest and most dearly loved king of Israel.”

The time setting in the book is during the period of the Judges. As I mentioned, Boaz was the son of Rahab. That is mentioned specifically in Matthew where we have the genealogy.

Matthew 1:5-6, we are told, “Salmon begot Boaz by Rahab, Boaz begot Obed by Ruth, Obed begot Jesse, and Jesse begot David the king.”

We take note here that we have several very long generations in this family that come down in much of the period of the Judges. We find that the period of the Judges was a very turbulent time—a time when, as you go through the book of Judges, it’s the bloodiest book in the entire Bible. The reason is summarized in the last verse of the book.

Judges 21:25, “In those days there was no king in Israel; everyone did what was right in his own eyes.” In other words, people simply pursued their own selfish will, and the result was anarchy, confusion and every sort of problem and difficulty. It was a turbulent time, and God dealt with the people. There were punishments that were sent. This provides the setting, the background, of the book of Ruth.

Jewish tradition credits the authorship of the book of Ruth to Samuel. Samuel’s literary works also include the books bearing his own name, as well as the book of Judges. It's not something that can be absolutely proven, but there isn't any reason to doubt it. That is the historic tradition that the Jews have maintained.

The commentary continues, and I think it's sort of an interesting summary in terms of their understanding. The commentary says, "What was the writer's aim and purpose in giving the book to the world? Jewish opinion declined to believe that his motive was that of mere entertainment. That's not why it was written. The books of the Torah are not in the habit of telling stories devoid of inner value. Yet the book contains no legal enactment, no decision on the questions of ritual or prohibition. What purpose then does it serve? Well, there are several things that they have gotten out of it. One is to teach us how great is the reward of those who perform deeds of kindness. The hallowing of the family is another distinct purpose in the Bible. The beautiful example, which this narrative provides of the elevating influence of domestic affection, entitled it, if nothing else did, to a place in the canon. Who can lay down the book after reading and not feel that still another of its objects is to set us upon the straight road from which we must not turn either to the right or to the left, lest we meet the fate that befell Elimelech...There's yet another purpose, a genealogical one, and on this point there's a general consensus of opinion, namely to trace the pedigree of David."

Another interesting comment that is brought out says, "It bears remarkable testimony to the meaning of the phrase 'religion and life.' It is in the words of a Gentile admirer, a monument to that ethical code, which could bring to perfection in the true Israelite, such heartfelt piety and self-sacrificing disposition as in a sense to attract and to be an example to others around."

Ruth 1:1-2, we find as we open, "Now it came to pass, in the days when the judges ruled, that there was a famine in the land. And a certain man of Bethlehem, Judah, went to sojourn in the country of Moab, he and his wife and his two sons. The name of the man was Elimelech, the name of his wife was Naomi, and the names of his two sons were Mahlon and Chilion—Ephrathites of Bethlehem, Judah. And they went to the country of Moab and remained there." Bethlehem is the ancestral home of King David and the birthplace of the Messiah.

"Ephrathites" is sometimes confused with "Ephraimites," and that is not the situation. The Ephrathites traced their descent from Ephrath, the wife of Caleb, who is mentioned in I Chronicles 2:19. This is to sort of clarify. It was a sub-group of the Jewish nation.

The period of the Judges was a turbulent time. There were various plagues, difficulties and problems that were sent by God upon the nation as a form of correction.

Here we come to a situation where the response of Elimelech and his family was to simply leave and go to Moab. They continued there.

Verses 3-5, "Then Elimelech, Naomi's husband, died; and she was left, and her two sons. Now they took wives of the women of Moab: the name of the one was Orpah, and the name of the other Ruth. And they dwelt there about ten years. Then both Mahlon and Chilion also died; so the women survived her two sons and her husband."

Naomi was left with only her daughters-in-law. She decided that she would return from Moab back to the land of Judah. Word had gotten back that the famine had broken in Judah and the situation had improved (v. 6).

She did not wish to remain there in Moab. Consider the difficulty of being the only person trying to worship God in a completely pagan setting as the Moabites were. It was one thing as long as her husband and her two grown sons were alive, but now she was left with these two Moabite daughters-in-law. Naomi wanted to go back to her own people.

The daughters-in-law had outwardly conformed to the practiced religion of the household. When they married into the family, they took upon themselves to practice the religion of Judah. But now their husbands were dead, and Naomi felt that she wanted to be back with her own people. That was where she needed to be. She was going to go back and the daughters-in-law were going to go with her.

Verse 7, "...they went on the way to return unto the land of Judah."

Verses 8-9, "And Naomi said to her two daughters-in-law, 'Go, return each to her mother's house. The Lord deal kindly with you, as you have dealt with the dead and with me. The Lord grant that you may find rest, each in the house of her husband.' Then she kissed them, and they lifted up their voices and wept."

She did not want to encourage them to leave Moab and come to Judah. She felt that they would be doing it sort of in the emotion of the moment after the recent death of their husbands and that a little while later they would regret it. By leaving Moab and going back to Bethlehem, they would sever the connection and the ties to their own family. Because she recognized that this could create long-term problems, she encouraged them to go back, to return.

Verse 10, they both responded, "...Surely, we will return with you to your people."

Verses 11-13, "But Naomi said, 'Turn back, my daughters; why will you go with me? Are there still sons in my womb, that they may be your husbands? Turn back, my daughters, go your way, for I am too old to have a husband. If I should say I have hope, even if I should have a husband tonight and should also bear sons, would you wait for them till they were grown? Would you restrain yourselves from having husbands? No, my daughters; for it grieves me very much for your sakes that the hand of the Lord has gone out against me!'"

Naomi was telling them, 'Look, there isn't any way I can be of any benefit to you. I'm too old to remarry, and if I weren't and had a husband right now, it would be looking at years in the future before I could even possibly have grown sons. I don't have anything to give you. I can't provide for you. You need a husband to take care of you and to provide for you. So, you need to go back to your family, to your people.'

Verses 14-15, "Then they lifted up their voices and wept again; and Orpah kissed her mother-in-law, but Ruth clung to her. And she said, 'Look, your sister-in-law has gone back to her people and to her gods....'" That is a very significant part of it. Orpah, at this point, went back to her people. When she went back to her people, she went back to her old culture. She went back to the old way of living. She went back into the world.

Verse 16, "But Ruth said: 'Entreat me not to leave you, or to turn back from following after you; for wherever you go, I will go; and wherever you lodge, I will lodge; your people shall be my people, and your God, my God.'" There certainly is a lot of parallel here to the calling of the individual Christian.

Most of the world's churches do everything they can to entice you to come down and join. They tell you how easy it's going to be and all you have to do is give your hand to the preacher and you are going to be saved. It's so simple, and you have to do it right now. They will use various techniques. Any of you who have had a background in the Baptist Church, like I did, can remember some of the altar calls. They would play "Just as I Am" and would keep playing and replaying it, trying to get somebody to come down.

Notice the total contrast here. Naomi was not trying to entice them. Rather, she said, 'There are going to be difficulties and adversities. You'd better count the cost. You're looking at a very serious matter.'

With Orpah, it was simply the emotion of the moment. She had an emotional attachment to her mother-in-law and was devastated by the recent death of her husband. Her first inclination was to go, but there wasn't any depth to her commitment. With a little bit of encouragement to return, she did. In reality, she was not prepared to forsake her old way of life. It held out something of an attraction to her.

Ruth, on the other hand, wanted to go with Naomi, not because she expected Naomi to get her a husband, but because she desired to follow the way of life she had seen in the household of Naomi. She was attracted to God's ways, to God's law. She could see that there was something of substance there that she had never had. There was depth to her commitment.

The Soncino Commentary makes an interesting comment, "She [Orpah] is one, in a sad series, of those not far from the Kingdom of God who needed but a little more resolution at the critical moment, and for want of it, shut themselves out from the covenant and sank back to a world which they had half-renounced."

There is a lot of parallel, if you think in terms of this book being read at Pentecost, and in terms of what Pentecost symbolizes. There are many spiritual lessons that can be gleaned from this story. It is a story of events that transpired, but the events that transpired served to illustrate through the lives of different people different approaches, different attitudes and different results that people experience in their life as a result of what they did.

Verse 17, Ruth went on to say, "Where you die, I will die, and there will I be buried. The Lord do so to me, and more also, if anything but death parts you and me."

Interestingly enough, Ruth's name in the Hebrew language is derived from a root word that means "friendship." Ruth certainly typifies, in her life and in her example, this matter of friendship.

Verse 18, "When she saw that she was determined to go with her, she stopped speaking to her." Once she realized her commitment was serious and there was depth to it, she didn't try to discourage her. It was not that she didn't want her to go. She didn't want her to make that trip, get down there, be dissatisfied and wind up as a misfit in Judah. There certainly could be difficulties in the circumstance.

Verse 19, “Now the two of them went until they came to Bethlehem. And it happened, when they had come to Bethlehem, that all the city was excited because of them; and the women said, ‘Is this Naomi?’”

Even though she had only been gone a little over ten years, those ten years had greatly aged her. She was hardly recognized by people when she came back.

Verse 20, “So she said to them, ‘Do not call me Naomi; call me Mara [Naomi means “sweetness” in Hebrew; Mara means “bitterness.”] for the Almighty has dealt very bitterly with me.’”

Verse 21, “‘I went out full, and the Lord has brought me home again empty. Why do you call me Naomi, since the Lord has testified against me, and the Almighty has afflicted me?’” Having left at an earlier time with her husband and her two sons, now she has returned alone, other than her daughter-in-law.

Verse 22, “So Naomi returned, and Ruth the Moabitess her daughter-in-law with her, who returned from the country of Moab. Now they came to Bethlehem at the beginning of barley harvest.”

The barley harvest began during the Days of Unleavened Bread. It began with the wave sheaf being cut during the Days of Unleavened Bread. The barley harvest continued for a period of fifty days—from the time of the wave sheaf offering being cut, up until what we call the Day of Pentecost, more commonly called the Feast of Firstfruits or the Feast of Weeks in the Old Testament.

Another connection that this book has to the Feast of Pentecost is that the events in it all occurred during the time of the firstfruit harvest.

We understand and have focused before on the fact that God used the physical harvest in the land of Israel as a type of the spiritual harvest. God is engaged in a great spiritual harvest. He uses various examples and illustrations that draw comparisons to that. The physical harvest season of ancient Israel served to illustrate God’s plan. God’s Holy Days are organized around that plan. Pentecost, originally, was the day on which the covenant was made with Israel at Mount Sinai. It was the time that marked the conclusion of the barley harvest. It was an occasion that celebrated the harvest of the firstfruits.

God is in the process of calling firstfruits out of the world. There were two harvests in ancient Israel. One was the early harvest, the firstfruits harvest. The other was the great harvest in the fall, the primary harvest. God uses that as an illustration of His plan of salvation. There is an early harvest, a calling of spiritual firstfruits, to be followed by the great spiritual ingathering ultimately typified by the Feast of Tabernacles, the festival that celebrated the great gathering in of the physical harvest.

Pentecost celebrates the calling of the spiritual firstfruits and also is the commemoration of the covenant that God made with Israel. Later, of course, it was on the Day of Pentecost in 31 A.D. that is recorded in Acts 2 that God began to make the New Covenant and the pouring out of His Spirit.

The most significant difference between the Old and the New Covenant is that under the Old Covenant, the law of God was written with the finger of God on tables of stone. We are told that the Spirit of God wrote the New Covenant on the tables of our hearts and minds (Jeremiah 31:33; Hebrew 8:10). It is internalized. There is a great deal of illustration in this book that we can tie in with God’s calling of His people—the calling of a spiritual firstfruits, the calling of a Church.

Ruth had returned with Naomi. They were here in Bethlehem; it was the beginning of the barley harvest during the Days of Unleavened Bread. Interestingly, they came out of sin at the Days of Unleavened Bread. That was the timing. They left Moab and returned into the land of Israel. It’s sort of an interesting parallel. It is not a parallel that’s dwelt on here, but it’s an interesting parallel that they left that area behind and returned during the Days of Unleavened Bread.

I think there is another thing to note, as we go through this. When you read the book of Judges, you read of all the turmoil, strife, warfare, bloodshed and all of the horrible sins that were being committed. It is important to realize that there were individuals who were quietly obeying God. Even in the midst of the worst turmoil, they were quietly going about their business. Naomi was, Ruth was, and Boaz clearly was a godly man. Even in the midst of problems, there are those with whom God is dealing. There are times when things are going better and times when things are going worse, but there are individuals who keep their eyes on God and continue to serve God. There are individuals who keep their eyes on man and their life has this sort of up and down to it because they are following people rather than following God.

That’s an important factor. If you were following people and were looking at some of the strife and problems going on (even the corruption in some of the judgeships that was going on as you read in the book of Judges), there wouldn't be a whole lot to inspire confidence. But the individuals who were really spiritually successful looked beyond human beings; they saw God. That's an important lesson for all of God's people.

Ruth 2:1-3, "And Naomi had a kinsman of her husband's, a man of great wealth, of the family of Elimelech; his name was Boaz. So Ruth the Moabitess said to Naomi, 'Please let me go to the field, and glean heads of grain after him in whose sight I may find favor.' And she said to her, 'Go, my daughter.' Then she left, and went and gleaned in the field after the reapers. And she happened to come to the part of the field belonging to Boaz, who was of the family of Elimelech." She didn't go out and intentionally try to do that.

Verses 4-5, "Now behold, Boaz came from Bethlehem, and said to the reapers, 'The Lord be with you!' And they answered him, 'The Lord bless you!' Then Boaz said to his servant who was in charge of the reapers, 'Whose young woman is this?'" He saw this young woman out there with whom he was not acquainted. Evidently there was something about her bearing and the way that she conducted herself that impressed him, and he wanted to know who she was.

Verses 6-9, "So the servant who was in charge of the reapers answered and said, 'It is the young Moabite woman who came back with Naomi from the country of Moab. And she said, 'Please let me glean and gather after the reapers among the sheaves.'" So she came and has continued from morning until now, though she rested a little in the house.' Then Boaz said to Ruth, 'You will listen, my daughter, will you not? Do not go to glean in another field, nor go from here, but stay close by my young women. Let your eyes be on the field which they reap, and go after them. Have I not commanded the young men not to touch you? And when you are thirsty, go to the vessels and drink from what the young men have drawn.'" "

Boaz was very impressed. He had undoubtedly heard of the situation of Naomi's return and this young lady who had returned from Moab with her—her young daughter-in-law who had been recently widowed. He had heard she had come back and had a commitment to serving the God of Israel.

Now again, knowing Boaz's background, it must have had special significance to him. He must have thought back to his own mother and how she had forsaken her background, how she had stepped out in faith to believe and trust the God of Israel and to cast her lot with the people of God and not with the people of Jericho. I am sure that the story had special significance to him when he heard it in terms of what it reminded him.

So, he wants to take special note of her and to look after her. He wants to make sure that she is provided for, and he gives strict instructions. You notice that human nature is not a whole lot different now than it was then. He said, "...Have I not commanded the young men not to touch you."

Some think that sexual harassment has only been invented in the last few years. There have been problems with people saying and doing things out of line and inappropriate as long as there have been human beings on the earth. Boaz took note of that and figured, particularly as she was a foreigner, that some of the young men might be tempted to get "fresh" with her or to say things and display inappropriate conduct. He called them over and gave them a stern warning that they had better leave her alone and had better not do anything out of line. He told her that she would be safe there—no one would bother her.

We find that there were a number of qualities that Ruth evidenced in a remarkable way. She was a young woman of great loyalty and determination. She was a person of great humility and evidenced great respect. She evidences that in many ways. She evidences characteristics that we, as the firstfruit harvest of God, certainly need to evidence.

Verses 10-12, "Then she fell on her face, bowed down to the ground, and said to him, 'Why have I found favor in your eyes, that you should take notice of me, since I am a foreigner?' And Boaz answered and said to her, 'It has been fully reported to me, all that you have done for your mother-in-law since the death of your husband, and how you have left your father and your mother and the land of your birth, and have come to a people whom you did not know before. The Lord repay your work, and a full reward be given you by the Lord God of Israel, under whose wings you have come for refuge.'" "

When we leave the world, when we turn our backs on the old way, when we turn our backs on the society that has molded and shaped us, when we turn our backs on the world and come into the Church, we are coming to take refuge under the wings of the God of Israel. The symbolism is that if you've ever seen chickens in a barnyard, you have seen how a mother hen will gather her little chicks under her wings as a means of protection. If a chicken hawk is circling up in the sky, she will run around fluffing, trying to get the little chickens to come and gather up under her wings. She is protective and that's the means of extending protection. That's the picture that is given here.

As a man of God, Boaz took his responsibility seriously. Boaz was also a man of substance and property. He took seriously his responsibility to show kindness and to do good as the opportunity presented itself. Clearly, he was a man who lived his religion. There are people who claim a religion, but there's a difference between those who claim a religion and those who live their religion. There's a lot of difference between the two.

One of the things that I think also comes out in the book of Ruth is the fact that Ruth was attracted to the example that she saw. Ruth's exposure to the truth had been in the lives of individuals who were practicing it. That's an important part. We are to be lights to the world (Matthew 5:14-16) and to seek to set an example of someone who is putting into practice the things that we claim to believe.

Verses 13-16, "Then she said, 'Let me find favor in your sight, my lord; for you have comforted me, and have spoken kindly to your maidservant, though I am not like one of your maidservants.' Now Boaz said to her at mealtime, 'Come here, and eat of the bread, and dip your piece of bread in the vinegar.' So she sat beside the reapers, and he passed parched grain to her, and she ate and was satisfied, and kept some back. And when she rose up to glean, Boaz commanded his young men, saying, 'Let her glean even among the sheaves, and do not reproach her. Also let some grain from the bundles fall purposely for her; leave it that she may glean, and do not rebuke her.'"

Boaz had seen her working hard. The crews were diligent and they were trying to gather up everything. Boaz saw her working hard and, evidently, it appeared to him that she had to work awfully hard and was getting awfully little. You sort of get the idea that he was already beginning to "tumble." He was really deeply impressed with this young woman and desired to make things easier for her.

It's interesting, even in the context of gleaning—God's system of helping people. God's system is a matter of helping people, but it is a system of helping people to help themselves. God lays great emphasis on the fact that kindness and charity were to be shown by His people, but He did not produce a situation that would simply create a welfare mentality in ancient Israel. The system that was established by God was a system that allowed people to be productive and to maintain their self-respect. It was to help others help themselves. It was available at the harvest. Those who were poor, widowed or fatherless were allowed to come in after the reapers and to pick up what was dropped. In fact, there were even specific instructions in the law that they were not to harvest the corners of their fields. In other words, they sort of made a circle on it. When the reapers went through they didn't harvest the corners. They left that out. They put themselves in a position to do that.

To show how the mentality of people has changed—I remember a number of years ago when I was a pastor in south Texas. Down in the Rio Grande Valley is an area that produces a great deal of the nation's fresh fruits, vegetables and citrus. A lot of your winter vegetable crop comes from the Rio Grande Valley. There were some farmers down there who switched over to mechanical harvesters. One of the characteristics of the mechanical harvester was there were things that were left behind because they tended to pick up what was uniform as they went through the fields.

Whether the individuals had read it in the Bible or not, I don't know—perhaps they had. There were a couple of the big farmers down there who let the word out that after the mechanical pickers had gone through, the local residents would be free to come in and get anything that remained. They allowed a certain amount of time—I forget what time they allowed—then they would come back in and plow up the field. But there was a certain time period that they opened up the field. They announced that anybody was welcomed who wanted to come in and pick what was left after the harvest was completed. They got very, very few takers, and that is one of the most poverty-stricken areas of the country. It's sort of a sad commentary on human nature in a situation like that. Very, very few people actually availed themselves of going in and doing that.

That's unfortunate because God's way is to help the needy. God wants us to show kindness and mercy. That's an important part of God's character and nature. To be selfish, self-centered and greedy is certainly not characteristic of God. God's system of helping people was a system that allowed them to maintain some dignity. It was a system that allowed them to be productive, to maintain a healthy self-respect and to do something in a constructive manner. It's an unfortunate situation that these principles haven't been utilized.

Verse 19, “And her mother-in-law said to her, ‘Where have you gleaned today? And where did you work? Blessed be the one who took notice of you.’ So she told her mother-in-law with whom she had worked, and said, ‘The man’s name with whom I worked today is Boaz.’”

When she saw the quantity of grain brought back, Naomi realized that somebody had given some special favor to Ruth because there wasn’t any way that she would have normally, in just one day’s gleaning, brought back this amount of barley. That wouldn’t have been very likely, so Naomi was impressed with that and wanted to know where she had gleaned. She told her it was Boaz.

Verses 20-23, “Then Naomi said to her daughter-in-law, ‘Blessed be he of the Lord, who has not forsaken His kindness to the living and the dead!’ And Naomi said to her, ‘The man is a relative of ours, one of our near kinsmen.’ Then Ruth the Moabitess said, ‘He also said to me, “You shall stay close by my young men until they have finished all my harvest.”’ And Naomi said to Ruth her daughter-in-law, ‘It is good, my daughter, that you go out with his young women, and that people do not meet you in any other field.’ So she stayed close by the young women of Boaz, to glean until the end of barley harvest and wheat harvest; and she dwelt with her mother-in-law.”

The barley harvest started first. That began during the Days of Unleavened Bread and continued on along. The wheat harvest came in during that seven-week period. The barley harvest took several weeks and then the wheat harvest began. Wheat comes in a little later than barley, so it was a very short difference. We are looking at a seven-week period, the period between the wave sheaf and Pentecost.

Naomi took note of the fact that God had smiled on her. She had come back very discouraged. She was feeling like God had somehow deserted her because she has had all these problems. This can be a typical human reaction when we encounter a number of problems or things go wrong for us, as it had for Naomi. She had lost her husband and her two children. She had started out at an earlier time as the wife of a relatively prosperous man and wound up pretty well destitute, returning back to family property. She was on up in years and her health was such that she was really concerned as to how she would even be able to provide for herself.

One of the things that we see is that first appearances aren’t always the reality. Sometimes we look at things and we think, ‘Well, where’s

God? Has God forgotten?’ God hasn’t forgotten. God was working out a great plan and a great purpose. How many times must Naomi have asked the question, ‘Why? Why Lord?’ Well, she began to sort of look up about this time.

Ruth 3:1-3, “Then Naomi her mother-in-law said to her, ‘My daughter, shall I not seek security for you, that it may be well with you? Now Boaz, whose young women you were with, is he not our kinsman? In fact, he is winnowing barley tonight at the threshing floor. Therefore wash yourself, put on your best garment and go down to the threshing floor; but do not make yourself known to the man until he has finished eating and drinking.’”

Naomi was playing a little bit of the matchmaker here. She had observed the way things had gone along and evidently knew that Boaz had taken more than just a casual interest in Ruth. She knew that Ruth certainly had a great affection, fondness and deep respect for Boaz. She decided that maybe she was going to have to step in on the matter.

We will note a little later the responsibilities of the kinsman redeemer. In Scripture, the kinsman redeemer had several responsibilities. One was that he was responsible for taking care of the widow and orphan children of his kinsman. If he was single, he would marry the widow and the child would inherit the father’s land and property. If a relative fell on hard times and had to sell the family property or was sold into slavery for debt, the kinsman redeemer was responsible to redeem that individual—to buy him back. He was responsible to prosecute crimes that involved his near kinsman. It was a responsibility that in many ways typified the role of Jesus Christ.

Naomi had already figured out that Ruth was attracted to Boaz and that Boaz was very much impressed with and attracted to Ruth. But she decided he was never going to propose because there was too much age difference. He was going to be self-conscious about that and figure that she’s better off with somebody young, so he wasn’t going to do it. Since her line of thought was that she didn’t think Ruth could find a better husband than Boaz, she needed to play matchmaker.

They were winnowing barley that evening at the threshing floor. Winnowing was separating the grain from the chaff. Normally, a threshing floor would be up on a hilltop where there would normally be a good breeze. They also used winnowing fans. After the grains had been threshed it was beaten to separate it, but the chaff and the grain were all intermingled. They would throw it up in the air and the breeze would blow from the winnowing fan. The chaff was light and it would blow away; the grain would settle back down. We do that in a much more sophisticated mechanized way today with some of the big harvesting equipment. It was much more of a slow tedious operation at this particular time.

So, she told Ruth to clean up and to go down to the threshing floor.

Verse 4, “Then it shall be, when he lies down, that you shall notice the place where he lies; and you shall go in, uncover his feet, and lie down; and he will tell you what you should do.” Ruth trusted Naomi. She knew that Naomi would not get her into trouble.

Verse 5, “And she said to her, ‘All that you say to me I will do.’” So, she told her that she would do that.

Verses 6-8, “So she went down to the threshing floor and did according to all that her mother-in-law instructed her. And after Boaz had eaten and drunk, and his heart was cheerful, he went to lie down at the end of the heap of grain; and she came softly, uncovered his feet, and lay down. Now it happened at midnight that the man was startled, and turned himself; and there, a woman was lying at his feet.”

You can imagine! This must have been quite a shock. All of a sudden he wakes up in the middle of the night, he looks, and here’s a woman down at his feet. Now that would be a rather startling thing.

Verse 9, “And he said, ‘Who are you?’ So she answered, ‘I am Ruth, your maidservant. Take your maidservant under your wing [KJV, “skirt”], for you are a near kinsman.” To spread the skirt or the garment was an outward symbol of taking her under his protection. In effect, Ruth proposed to him; that is what it amounts to. It doesn’t say it was leap year, but she nevertheless proposed to him. Naomi had told her to do that.

Verse 10, Boaz’s response was, “Then he said, ‘Blessed are you of the Lord, my daughter! For you have shown more kindness at the end than at the beginning, in that you did not go after young men, whether poor or rich.’”

He was impressed with her. After getting to know her, he felt that she certainly wouldn’t have any trouble attracting a husband. He was deeply impressed with the kind of young woman that she was. He was deeply touched by the fact that she would desire to marry him. He had felt that was something that was not, let’s say, practical. It was not an issue that he would have pushed because he felt like, perhaps, it would have been unfair to put her on the spot. One of the things we see, just in that example, is that real love is self-sacrificing. It is not selfish. If Boaz had been a selfish individual—if his relationship and attachment to Ruth had been on of selfishness and lust—then he would certainly have taken the initiative. But rather, though he did love her, he was not selfish. He was selfless and did not try to push the claim.

Verses 11-13, he told her, “‘And now, my daughter, do not fear. I will do for you all that you request, for all the people of my town know that you a virtuous woman. Now it is true that I am your near kinsman; however, there is a kinsman nearer than I. Stay this night, and in the morning it shall be that if he will perform the duty of a near kinsman for you—good; let him do it. But if he does not want to perform the duty for you, then I will perform the duty for you, as the Lord lives! Lie down until morning.’”

He was prepared to put it in God’s hands. He knew that this other individual had first right to the property and to exercise the responsibilities of a near kinsman.

Verse 14, “So she lay at his feet until morning, and she arose before one could recognize another. Then he said, ‘Do not let it be known that the woman came to the threshing floor.’” He didn’t want anything that would cast any shadow on her reputation. Again, that is indicative of someone who really loves, cares and respects someone and would not wish anything to tarnish that person’s reputation. Boaz was certainly concerned about Ruth in that way.

Verses 15-18, “Also he said, ‘Bring the shawl that is on you and hold it.’ And when she held it, he measured six ephahs of barley, and laid it on her. Then she went into the city. So when she came to her mother-in-law, she said, ‘Is that you, my daughter?’ Then she told her all that the man had done for her. And she said, ‘These six ephahs of barley her gave me; for he said to me, ‘Do not go empty-handed to your mother-in-law.’” Then she said, ‘Sit still, my daughter, until you know how the matter will turn out; for the man will not rest until he has concluded the matter this day.’”

Naomi knew that Boaz was not going to procrastinate on this. She knew he was going to go immediately because he had already figured the attachment that was there.

Ruth 4:1, “Now Boaz went up to the gate and sat down there; and behold, the near kinsman of whom Boaz had spoken came by. So Boaz said, ‘Come aside, friend, sit down here.’ So he came aside and sat down.” You might note that this other near kinsman is not named. His name was actually blotted out of the genealogy. So, he goes down in history as old "what's-his-name," KJV, "such a one," NKJV margin, "so and so." His name was blotted out because of his selfishness. Boaz probably knew the character of the man. There would be legal requirements to be fulfilled and there was going to be property obtained in this process as well.

Verses 2-4, "And he took ten men of the elders of the city, and said, 'Sit down here.' So they sat down. Then he said to the near kinsman, 'Naomi, who has come back from the country of Moab, sold the piece of land which belonged to our brother Elimelech. And I thought to inform you, saying, 'Buy it back in the presence of the inhabitance and the elders of my people. If you will redeem it, redeem it; but if you will not redeem it, then tell me, that I may know; for there is no one but you to redeem it, and I am next after you. [Boy his eyes lit up at that. He figured he was going to get a nice piece of land really cheap.] And he said, 'I will redeem it.'"

Verse 5, "Then Boaz said, 'On the day you buy the field from the hand of Naomi, you must also buy it from Ruth the Moabitess, the wife of the dead, to raise up the name of the dead on his inheritance.'" Now that kind of cast a different light on it. On learning that the transaction would include marriage with Ruth and its attendant responsibilities, he withdrew. The property would not be in the kinsman's name. It would be in the name of the widow whom he was to marry. And if that was going to entangle the property, well, that was a little different story. He wasn't sure he wanted to do that.

The kinsman says, on second thought, that he can't redeem it for himself lest he ruin his own inheritance. 'You go ahead; I can't redeem it' (v. 6).

Verse 7, "Now this was the custom in former times in Israel concerning redeeming and exchanging, to confirm anything: one man took off his sandal and gave it to the other, and this was an attestation in Israel." That was the legal insignia of a formal indication of contract.

Verses 8-13, "Therefore the near kinsman said to Boaz, 'Buy it for yourself.' So he took off his sandal. And Boaz said to the elders and to all the people, 'You are witnesses this day that I have bought all that was Elimelech's and all that was Chilion's and Mahlon's, from the hand of Naomi. Moreover, Ruth the Moabitess, the wife of Mahlon, I have acquired as my wife, to raise up the name of the dead on his inheritance, that the name of the dead may not be cut off from among his brethren and from the gate of his place. You are witnesses this day.' And all the people who were at the gate, and the elders, said, 'We are witnesses. The Lord make the woman who is coming to your house like Rachel and Leah, the two who built the house of Israel; and may you prosper in Ephrathah and be famous in Bethlehem. May your house be like the house of Perez, whom Tamar bore to Judah, because of the offspring which the Lord will give you from this young woman.' So Boaz took Ruth and she became his wife; and when he went in to her, the Lord gave her conception, and she bore a son."

One other factor: Ruth had been married for ten years and had not had any children. The indication is that God performed a miracle in allowing her to conceive and bear a child. God stepped in and gave her a child.

Verses 14-17, "Then the women said to Naomi, 'Blessed be the Lord, who has not left you this day without a near kinsman; and may his name be famous in Israel! And may he be to you a restorer of life and a nourisher of your old age; for your daughter-in-law, who loves you, who is better to you than seven sons, has borne him.' Then Naomi took the child and laid him on her bosom, and became a nurse to him. Also the neighbor women gave him a name, saying, 'There is a son born to Naomi.' And they called his name Obed. He is the father of Jesse, the father of David."

Then it goes into the genealogy of Pharez, one of the sons of Judah.

Verses 18-22, "Now this is the genealogy of Perez: Perez begot Hezron; Hezron begot Ram, and Ram begot Amminadab; Amminadab begot Nahshon, and Nahshon begot Salmon; Salmon begot Boaz, and Boaz begot Obed; Obed begot Jesse, and Jesse begot David." The book culminates with the birth of King David, the royal line through whom the Messiah would ultimately come.

Let me go back to Ephesians because I would like to call your attention to it.

Ephesians 2:1, "And you He made alive, who were dead in trespasses and sins." That's all of us.

Verses 2-5, "in which you once walked according to the course of this world, according to the prince of the power of the air, the spirit who now works in the sons of disobedience, among whom also we all once conducted ourselves in the lusts of our flesh, fulfilling the desires of the flesh and of the mind, and were by nature children of wrath, just as the others. But God, who is rich in mercy, because of His great love with which He loved us, even when we were dead in trespasses, made us alive together with Christ....”

Verses 11-12, “Therefore remember that you, once Gentiles in the flesh—who are called Uncircumcision by what is called the Circumcision made in the flesh by hands—that at that time you were without Christ, being aliens from the commonwealth of Israel and strangers from the covenants of promise, having no hope and without God in the world.”

Now, this is certainly a description of Ruth. Though the Moabites were descendants of Lot (who was Abraham’s nephew) and they were a kindred people, they were outside God’s covenant relationship. They were Gentiles. A Gentile includes all ethnic groups except the descendants of Jacob. Every other ethnic group is lumped together as Gentiles. It just means those who are not descendants of Jacob. And this was Ruth’s situation.

Here is the parallel that is brought out. It certainly applies to us, in terms of our calling into God’s Church, whether or not we are of the physical descendants of Israel. The New Covenant is with spiritual Israel. So, regardless of whether we are physically Gentile or Israelite, unless we become a part of spiritual Israel, we don’t have any inheritance in the Kingdom of God. The new birth that Jesus Christ spoke of in John 3 is one that does not have its origin in the flesh. It’s not those who are born of the flesh or of the will of the flesh. It’s not those whose birth is from below that are entitled to inherit the Kingdom of God. If the only claim we have is our earthly physical birth (our birth from below), it won’t do us any good because the only birth that will enable us to inherit the Kingdom of God is a birth from above—a birth that is not generated by the will of flesh and blood but is generated by God Himself.

Verses 12-14, “that at that time you were without Christ, being aliens from the commonwealth of Israel and strangers from the covenants of promise, having no hope and without God in the world. But now in Christ Jesus you who once were far off have been made near by the blood of Christ. For He Himself is our peace, who has made both one, and has broken down the middle wall of division between us.”

Verses 19-20, “Now, therefore, you are no longer strangers and foreigners, but fellow citizens with the saints and members of the household of God, having been built on the foundation of the apostles and prophets, Jesus Christ Himself being the chief cornerstone.”

In Ephesians, it’s talking about the Church, the relationship that we have and the opportunity that we have as God’s people.

The book of Ruth is an account of a physical story that certainly illustrates a number of spiritual principles. We can, in that way, compare Ruth to the individual Christian who forsakes the world and follows after the way of God. Ultimately, of course, the Church is to marry Christ. Ruth married Boaz who was a prince of Israel of the line through which the Messiah would come. He was of that royal line of Judah through whom the Messiah would come. Ruth received an inheritance through marriage. In that sense, we are told that the Church will marry Jesus Christ. Our relationship is a relationship through marriage, if you will. So, there’s a very distinct spiritual parallel to the book.

It is certainly a very beautiful love story and is a story of true love. It is a story that illustrates their loyalty and commitment. It is a story of the selflessness and the willingness to put the other person and the interest of the other person first.

There are many lessons that can be gleaned out of the book of Ruth. It is, on the surface, a very beautiful love story and that certainly is an important thing. God is the Author of the relationship between a man and a woman. God is the Author of the family. God is the Author of the love relationship. That’s something that animals don’t have. Animals reproduce—they mate—but there is not a commitment and a loving relationship. You don’t see that with cattle, horses, dogs or cats. God designed that for human beings, and certain books of the Bible illustrate what a beautiful thing it is when it is done right.

This is a book that certainly illustrates the loyalty, commitment and selflessness that is a part of true love. It certainly illustrates the importance of taking care of our responsibilities—of being kind, considerate and willing to help, give and share.

It also teaches spiritual lessons and parallels with the relationship of the Church and Christ that can be applied to the spiritual meaning of Pentecost. There’s an awful lot in the little short book of Ruth, which is a book that is not all that frequently quoted and gone to. But there is a tremendous amount that is packed in there.

The next Bible study, we will be covering the book of Lamentations. Again, it is one of those smaller books that we tend not to go to very often. Yet again I think we will see that there is an awful lot that God has inspired to be packed in there for our benefit—that can be there for our growth and our edification.

The Writings Series—Lamentations

This evening we are covering Lamentations, the third of the five books of the Megillot or the Festival Scrolls. Again, it seems that it is not frequently gone through. Yet there is quite a bit of information in it, as I think we will take note of this evening.

The book of Lamentations is traditionally read by the Jews on the Fast of Ab. Ab is the fifth month of the sacred calendar. It comes in the summer and corresponds with our latter July/early August. The Jews have observed the ninth day of the fifth month for over twenty-five hundred years as a national day of fasting.

According to Jewish tradition, there are five calamitous events corresponding to the five chapters of the book of Lamentations, which happened on the ninth day of the fifth month. According to tradition, there are five things that occurred.

One was the return of the twelve spies and the decree of forty years of wandering in consequence of the rebellion of the people. That event is not dated specifically in the book of Numbers, but Jewish tradition hold that it was on the ninth day of the fifth month.

It is clearly dated from Scripture that the destruction of the first temple by Nebuchadnezzar took place on the ninth day of the fifth month. That is the second of the five calamitous events.

The third is the destruction of the second temple by the Romans in 70 A.D. Incredibly enough, both Herod's temple and Solomon's temple were destroyed on the same day, the ninth day of the fifth month, over six hundred years apart in time. The Romans destroyed Herod's temple on the anniversary of the destruction of Solomon's temple.

The fourth event that the Jews take note of was the taking of Bether (a Jewish holdout, a community) by the Romans under Hadrian when five hundred eighty thousand were slain. This is a Roman destruction a number of years after the destruction of the temple.

Then what is called the fifth event is the plowing of Zion like a plowed field in fulfillment of Jeremiah 26:18 and Micah 3:12. Again, the Romans did this at a later time, trying to ensure that no vestige of Jewish settlement in the Jewish community remained. There is a prophecy in Jeremiah 26.

Jeremiah 26:18, “Micah of Moresheth prophesied in the days of Hezekiah king of Judah, and spoke to all the people of Judah, saying, “Thus says the Lord of hosts: ‘Zion shall be plowed like a field, Jerusalem shall become heaps of ruins, and the mountain of the temple like the bare hills of the forest.’”” This is also mentioned in the book of Micah. Micah is quoted here in Jeremiah.

Micah 3:12, the original statement was, “‘Therefore because of you Zion shall be plowed like a field, Jerusalem shall become heaps of ruins, and the mountain of the temple like the bare hills of the forest.’” This is a destruction of Jerusalem that the Romans brought about at a later time.

Jewish tradition focuses in on those five calamitous events that certainly focus in on problems that they were having. They read significance into the fact of the five chapters of the book of Lamentations.

The five chapters of Lamentations form what would be called a “modified acrostic.” If you remember, an acrostic is a type of poetry in the Hebrew language where each verse, or set of verses, begins with a different letter of the Hebrew alphabet in alphabetical order. The best example of that and the easiest to follow is Psalm 119.

If you look at Psalm 119 in your Bible, you will notice that before the first set of verses there is a funny little mark; beside the mark it says “Aleph.” Then you come down and you have “Beth,” “Gimel,” “Daleth,” “He,” “Waw,” “Zayin,” “Heth.” It comes down through the Hebrew alphabet with eight verses that are assigned to each of the alphabets in the Hebrew language. The first eight verses begin with “A”; the second eight verses begin with “B,” coming down through Psalm 119. It's easy to follow because, normally, even our English Bibles have it broken with the insignias of the Hebrew alphabet. That's what is called a perfect acrostic because every letter of the alphabet is used. All twenty-two letters of the Hebrew alphabet are used in order and nothing is out of place.

The book of Lamentations is what is called a modified acrostic because it uses that general format, but it is not perfectly developed as in Psalm 119. The first couple of chapters of Lamentations consist of twenty-two verses and each of those verses is arranged in acrostic fashion. Chapter 3 consists of sixty-six verses (3 x 22), which are arranged in a triad of verses for each letter of the Hebrew alphabet. In chapter 3, the first three verses begin with “A”; the second three verses begin with “B,” and it comes down that way. Chapter 4 goes back to the twenty-two verses—again, in an acrostic. Chapter 5 of Lamentations consists of twenty-two verses, but each verse does not begin with a different letter of the alphabet. It has the same number of verses but does not follow that same alphabetical arrangement. The book of Lamentations is what we could term a modified acrostic. Anything of that sort has a certain mark of completion or perfection. The book of Lamentations, while on the one hand, shows the evidence of complete and total destruction, yet because the focus is on destruction, there is not the complete perfection that we find in Psalm 119, which is in praise of God’s perfect law.

Now we know about the book of Lamentations and we know who wrote it. We are told very specifically in II Chronicles 35.

II Chronicles 35:1, “Now Josiah kept a Passover to the Lord in Jerusalem....”

Verses 18-19, “There had been no Passover kept in Israel like that since the days of Samuel the prophet; and none of the kings of Israel had kept such a Passover as Josiah kept, with the priests and the Levites, all Judah and Israel who were present, and the inhabitants of Jerusalem. In the eighteenth year of the reign of Josiah this Passover was kept.”

Then we are told in v. 20, “After all this, when Josiah had prepared the temple, Necho king of Egypt came up to fight against Carchemish by the Euphrates; and Josiah went out against him.”

Verse 23, “And the archers shot King Josiah; and the king said to his servants, ‘Take me away for I am severely wounded.’”

We are told in vv. 24-25, “...So he died, and was buried in one of the tombs of his fathers. And all Judah and Jerusalem mourned for Josiah. Jeremiah also lamented for Josiah. And to this day all the singing men and the singing women speak of Josiah in their lamentations. They made it a custom [KJV, “ordinance”] in Israel; and indeed they are written in the Laments [KJV, “Lamentations”].”

We are told that Jeremiah lamented for Josiah, and this was something that was sung all the way down to the time when Chronicles was written—to the time of Ezra and Nehemiah. It had been made an ordinance, or a law, in Israel and was written in the Lamentations.

Where do we find the Lamentations? Well, when you turn to the book of Lamentations, the full title of it is, “The Lamentations of Jeremiah.” We have the setting here in the book of Chronicles.

II Chronicles 34:1-3, you remember the story, “Josiah was eight years old when he became king, and he reigned thirty-one years in Jerusalem. And he did what was right in the sight of the Lord, and walked in the ways of his father David; he did not turn aside to the right hand or to the left. For in the eighth year of his reign, while he was still young, he began to seek the God of his father David; and in the twelfth year he began to purge Judah and Jerusalem of the high places, the wooden images, the carved images, and the molded images.”

Verse 14, “Now when they brought out the money that was brought into the house of the Lord, Hilkiah the priest found the Book of the Law of the Lord given by Moses.”

Verse 16, “So Shaphan carried the book to the king....”

Verse 19, “Now it happened, when the king heard the words of the Law, that he tore his clothes.”

Verse 24, God’s response to Josiah is, “Thus says the Lord: ‘Behold, I will bring calamity on this place and on its inhabitants, all the curses that are written in the book which they have read before the king of Judah.’”

Verses 27-28, “...“because your heart was tender, and you humbled yourself before God when you heard His words against this place and against its inhabitants, and you humbled yourself before Me, and you tore your clothes and wept before Me, I also have heard you,’ says the Lord. ‘Surely I will gather you to your fathers, and you shall be gathered to your grave in peace; and your eyes shall not see all the calamity which I will bring on this place and its inhabitants.’”....”

At the time of Josiah, there was a great reform movement in Judah. It was the last of the great reforms. Josiah grew up under the tutelage of Hilkiah the priest.

Jeremiah 1:1, you read, “The words of Jeremiah the son of Hilkiah, of the priests....” Jeremiah’s father was Hilkiah, the same Hilkiah the priest that brought up Josiah (II Chronicles 34:9; II Kings 22:4-8). There was a close personal connection. Jeremiah and Josiah basically grew up together. They were very close in age. Josiah was perhaps two or three years older than Jeremiah. They grew up together under the tutelage and the guidance of Jeremiah’s father who was God’s priest in those days. When Josiah came of age (at age twenty), he began to assume full authority of his kingship. There had been a council of regency prior to that time. Josiah began a reform movement that was the most zealous reform period that Judah had ever experienced.

The temple had fallen into disrepair to the point that the Book of the Law had been lost. It had been years and years since anybody had read the Bible. As the temple was cleaned, the Book of the Law was found where it had been hidden. It had been hidden away to protect it at an earlier time during the period of idolatrous kings; it had been lost. When they came in and thoroughly cleansed the temple, the Book of the Law was re-discovered and it was read to Josiah. It was read, and this would specifically refer to the blessings and curses found in the book of Deuteronomy. Josiah knew that they were “off track,” but he hadn’t realized how badly. When all the curses of the books of Deuteronomy and Leviticus were read, then they realized the dire straits they were in. God had mercy and He said, ‘As long as Josiah lives I will not bring these curses on the nation. But once he is dead all these things are going to happen because the nation has forsaken Me.’

Well, when Josiah died, it was more than just the lament for a righteous king. There was the realization that the only thing that stood between the nation and total destruction and calamity was King Josiah. The prophecy had been made years before that once Josiah was dead, all of these things would come about.

So in the aftermath of the death of Josiah, Jeremiah wrote this lament. It was written in poetic fashion. It was written to be sung and is chanted in the synagogues, sort of like a funeral dirge. It was a prophecy of the destruction that was going to come upon the nation.

The destruction that came upon Jerusalem in the time of Nebuchadnezzar is the original fulfillment of this book. The destruction that came upon Jerusalem at the time of Nebuchadnezzar was a type of the even more total destruction that came upon Jerusalem in 70 A.D. at the hands of the Romans. Jesus spoke of that destruction in Matthew 24, Luke 21 and Mark 13. Jesus spoke of that destruction and prophesied of it, but He made it very clear, in Matthew 24 and the other accounts, that the destruction that was going to come upon Jerusalem was, in itself, merely a type of the Great Tribulation that was going to come upon Israel. The Great Tribulation that was going to come is the time of Jacob’s trouble (Jeremiah 30:7). It was going to come at the end of the age, setting the stage for His return.

It has implications for us. The events that are described in the book of Lamentations have had literal fulfillment in the destruction of Jerusalem by the Babylonians and the Romans. But when you put it together with Matthew 24, the book of Lamentations looks way down to the time yet future. It is, in reality, a prophecy of the Great Tribulation. It is a prophecy of the events that are going to occur to this nation in just a matter of a few years. The destruction that came upon Jerusalem was a type. Jerusalem is used over and over as a type to prophetically represent the entire nation of Israel. Jerusalem was the only capital that all the twelve tribes had and acknowledged. And Jerusalem will ultimately be the capital of all twelve tribes in the Tomorrow’s World. The things that happened to Jerusalem were a type.

Matthew 24 makes it plain if you look at what Jesus responded to.

Matthew 24:3, “...the disciples came to Him privately, saying, ‘Tell us, when will these things be? And what will be the sign of Your coming, and of the end of the age?’”

The question that the disciples specifically asked in Matthew 24 was, ‘What is going to herald the coming of the Messiah in power and glory? What is going to herald the end of this age?’ Jesus then began to answer and to speak the words of Matthew 24 predicated on that question—the question of what events would herald His return. What events would herald the end of this age? Of course, the events that occurred to Jerusalem at the hand of the Romans were merely a type and were representative of the kinds of things that will come about.

Josephus in his Antiquities of the Jews, Book X, Chapter 5, v. 1 tells us, specifically, that Jeremiah composed the book of Lamentations upon the death of the last righteous king of Judah, Josiah. When the premature death of Josiah came, it was not only for this beloved king that lamentation was made but also for the calamities that had been prophesied to befall the nation after his death.

The prophecies of Lamentations look forward to the Great Tribulation, of which earlier calamities on the Jews were merely a type of what will ultimately happen to all of Israel. All of Israel will ultimately lament their sins and will be able to reap God’s mercy, His forgiveness and His restoration. The book of Lamentations in the Hebrew Bible is entitled “Qiyah,” which literally means, “How?” And that is the first word of the book.

Lamentations 1:1 (KJV), “How does the city sit solitary, that was full of people! How is she become as a widow! She that was great among the nations, and princess among the provinces, how is she become tributary [a slave]!”

The book of Lamentations opens with the question, “How?” And that is the name by which the Jews have customarily called it.

As we open, it clearly sets the stage that is descriptive of what happened to Jerusalem. But it is also descriptive of what is going to be the state of our nation in just a matter of years. It’s hard for us to realize as we look around at the seeming peace and security. We look around at the level of material prosperity we have, and it’s hard for the reality to really “come home” to us, that we are living on borrowed time in this country. The events that are described in the pages of this Book (the Bible) are going to occur. And then it’s going to be, ‘How? How has all this happened?’

Verse 1, “...who was great among the nations! The princess among the provinces has become a slave.” The nation that was at the top—how has it become the bottom? Of course, the answer to that “How?” is exactly what’s described here.

We have lost sight of the fact that the blessings that we have and experience are the results of God’s blessing and benefit. The blessings that God has given our people are because of the obedience of Abraham and the promises that God made to him.

When you go back and read the prophecies of Leviticus and Deuteronomy, it is very apparent that we are living in those days and some of those very things are coming about. It was brought out that we would go from being the lender to becoming the borrower (Deuteronomy 28:44). We have experienced, in just a few years, being the world’s greatest creditor nation to now becoming the world’s greatest debtor nation. We find ourselves increasingly in trouble and increasingly sick. The prophecies bring out that we are sick from the head to the foot (Isaiah 1:5-6). We are sick from the top to the bottom. And it’s not something that just getting a new congress or a new president is going to solve because our problems are ultimately spiritual problems. They are problems of a lack of morality and a lack of the things that are necessary.

So, how has she become a slave?

Verse 2, “She weeps bitterly in the night, her tears are on her cheeks; among all her lovers she has none to comfort her. All her friends have dealt treacherously with her; they have become her enemies.” And that is what we are going to find. Those nations that we think we have bought—our friends, our great allies, Germany and Japan, the nations of Europe, Russia—“All her friends have dealt treacherously with her; they have become her enemies.”

Verses 3-6, “Judah has gone into captivity, under affliction and hard servitude; she dwells among the nations, she finds no rest; all her persecutors overtake her in dire straits. The roads to Zion mourn because no one comes to the set feasts. All her gates are desolate; her priests sigh, her virgins are afflicted, and she is in bitterness. Her adversaries have become the master; her enemies prosper; for the Lord has afflicted her because of the multitude of her transgressions. Her children have gone into captivity before the enemy. And from the daughter of Zion all her splendor has departed. Her princes have become like deer that find no pasture, that flee without strength before the pursuer.”

Verse 8, “Jerusalem has sinned grievously, therefore she has become vile....”

God describes the events that are going to come about. He describes the calamities that are going to occur.

Verse 5, we are told, “...the Lord has afflicted her because of the multitude of her transgressions....” There’s a reason why these things are going to occur.

Galatians 6:7, it says, “Do not be deceived, God is not mocked; for whatever a man sows, that he will also reap.”

Proverbs 14:34, we are told, “Righteousness exalts a nation, but sin is a reproach to any people.” This is what we find in our nation and in our people.

Lamentations 1:8-11, “Jerusalem has sinned grievously, therefore she has become vile. All who honored her despise her because they have seen her nakedness; yes, she sighs and turns away. Her uncleanness is in her skirts; she did not consider her destiny; therefore her collapse was awesome; she had no comforter, ‘O Lord, behold my affliction, for the enemy has magnified himself.’ The adversary has spread his hand over all her pleasant things; for she has seen the nations enter her sanctuary...All her people sigh, they seek bread; they have given their valuables for food to restore life. ‘See, O Lord, and consider, for I am scorned.’”

It seems very farfetched in this land to believe the time is going to come when we are going to experience food shortages or when we are going to experience the things it describes here in v. 11, “All her people sigh, they seek bread; they have given their valuables for food...” We are going to experience that. We are going to see the time when people are going to be desperate for food in this land. Hopefully, we won’t see a whole lot of that because if we are faithful to God, God does promise that He will take the Philadelphia Church to a place that we term “a place of safety,” a place of protection.

Revelation 12:14, “But the woman was given two wings of a great eagle, that she might fly into the wilderness to her place, where she is nourished for a time and times and half a time, from the presence of the serpent.” –A place to be nourished and shielded from the onslaught of the Great Tribulation.

Let’s notice a little bit about how we refer the events of this book to the tribulation. This book clearly deals with events of the siege of Jerusalem by Nebuchadnezzar in 587 B.C. and later the siege of Jerusalem by the Romans in 70 A.D. But there are real implications for the future tribulation; this is made plain in several places.

To begin with, let’s look in Jeremiah 30:7-8 and see why we would attach some of these prophecies.

Jeremiah 30:7-8, ““Alas! For that day is great, so that none is like it; and it is the time of Jacob’s trouble, but he shall be saved out of it. For it shall come to pass in the day,” says the Lord of hosts, “that I will break his yoke from your neck, and will burst your bonds; foreigners shall no more enslave them.”” Notice: “That day is great, so that none is like it; and it is the time of Jacob’s trouble.” So, here is a time of incomparable trouble, a time called “the time of Jacob’s trouble.”

Matthew 24:21, let’s notice, ““For then there will be great tribulation, such as has not been since the beginning of the world until this time, no, nor ever shall be.””

Now, Jeremiah 30:7 talked about the fact that it was a time of incomparable trouble. You can’t have two times of worst trouble than ever, and yet Jeremiah 30:7, “...this day is great so that none is like it...”

Matthew 24:21 says it is a time of, “...great tribulation such as has not been since the beginning of the world until this time, no, nor ever shall.” If you have a day that is so terrible that there’s none like it, and you have a day that’s spoken of as being a terrible time such as has never been since the beginning of the world, then you are obviously speaking of the same period. You can’t have two times that are both worse than anything else. Luke 21 deals with the same matter.

Luke 21:20-23, ““But when you see Jerusalem surrounded by armies, then know that its desolation is near. Then let those in Judea flee to the mountains, let those who are in the midst of her depart, and let not those who are in the country enter her. For these are the days of vengeance, that all things which are written may be fulfilled. But woe to those who are pregnant and to those who are nursing babies in those days! For there will be great distress in the land and wrath upon this people.””

So, we again have reference to the same time period. When you go through the book of Lamentations, it is clear that the description describes the same thing—this time of complete destruction. It describes this time of incomparable difficulty and adversity.

We continue in Lamentations.

Lamentations 1:14-22, ““The yoke of my transgressions was bound; they were woven together by His hands, and thrust upon my neck. He made my strength fail; the Lord delivered me into the hands of those whom I am not able to withstand. The Lord has trampled underfoot all my mighty men in my midst; He has called an assembly against me to crush my young men; the Lord trampled as in a winepress the virgin daughter of Judah. For these things I weep; my eye, my eye overflows with water; because the comforter, who should restore my life, is far from me. My children are desolate because the enemy prevailed. Zion spreads out her hands, but there is no one to comfort her; the Lord has commanded concerning Jacob that those around him become his adversaries; Jerusalem has become an unclean thing among them. The Lord is righteous, for I rebelled against His commandment. Hear now, all peoples, and behold my sorrow; my virgins and my young men have gone into captivity. I called for my lovers [I called my allies], but they deceived me; my priests and my elders breathed their last in the city, while they sought food to restore their life. See, O Lord, that I am in distress; my soul is troubled; my heart is overturned within me, for I have been very rebellious. Outside the sword bereaves, at home it is like death. They have heard that I sigh, with no one to comfort me. All my enemies have heard of my trouble; they are glad that You have done it. Bring on the day that You have announced [proclaimed], that they may become like me. Let all their wickedness come before You. And do to them as You have done to me for all my transgressions; for my sighs are many, and my heart is faint.”

It describes the destruction and calamity. Clearly, Jerusalem represents all of Israel. It faces captivity because of serious sins and rebellion against God’s law.

Lamentations 1:5, “...the Lord has afflicted her because of the multitude of her transgression...”

Verse 8, “Jerusalem has sinned grievously...”

Verse 18, “The Lord is righteous, for I rebelled against His commandment...” The calamities and the captivity are because of the serious sins and rebellion against God’s law.

As we look at Lamentations 1:20, we find that there are not only going to be those who die as victims in warfare, but those not involved in the warfare will face starvation and disease epidemics.

Lamentations 1:20, “See, O Lord, that I am in distress; my soul is troubled [KJV, “inwards burn”]; my heart is overturned within me, for I have been very rebellious. Outside the sword bereaves, at home it is like death.” There is warfare abroad and death, famine and disease at home. There are many afflictions and many difficulties. Clearly, the prophecies reach beyond simply Jerusalem.

Lamentations 2:3, “He has cut off in fierce anger every horn of Israel; He has drawn back His right hand from before the enemy. He has blazed against Jacob like a flaming fire which devours all around.” It says, “He has cut off in fierce anger all the horn of Israel.” “Horn” is used as symbolic of a king, a nation or a kingdom. So here, we find not merely the horn of Judah but the horn of Israel.

Again, chapter 2 opens with “How?”

Lamentations 2:1-3, “How the Lord has covered the daughter of Zion with a cloud in His anger! He cast down from heaven to the earth the beauty of Israel, and did not remember His footstool in the day of His anger. The Lord has swallowed up and has not pitied all the inhabitants of Jacob. He has thrown down in His wrath the strongholds of the daughters of Judah; He has brought them down to the ground; He has profaned the kingdom and its princes. He has cut off in fierce anger every horn of Israel; He has drawn back His right hand from before the enemy. He has blazed against Jacob like a flaming fire which devours all around.”

This perhaps describes the destruction of even nuclear and atomic weapons that burn like a flaming fire.

Verses 5-6, “The Lord was like an enemy. He has swallowed up Israel, He has swallowed up all her palaces; He has destroyed her strongholds, and has increased mourning and lamentation in the daughter of Judah. He has done violence to His tabernacle, as if it were a garden. He has destroyed His assembly; The Lord has caused the appointed feast and Sabbaths to be forgotten in Zion. In His burning indignation He has spurned the king and the priest.”

It describes the calamity and affliction that is going to come and how God has caused Israel to be swallowed up.

Verse 6 (KJV), “...He has violently taken away His tabernacle, as if it were of a garden...” The marginal rendering for “tabernacle” is “hedge.” “He has violently taken away His hedge as if it were of a garden.”

In ancient times, hedges were often used as walls to enclose gardens. Thorn hedges were planted and trimmed. They grew and made a very formidable wall because they were difficult to penetrate and kept out creatures that would come in to destroy the garden. In effect, what God is saying is that He is going to remove the hedge that He’s set about our nation. We have been hedged about like a choice garden. I don’t think we realize the extent to which that has been the case.

We have never experienced full-scale warfare in terms of foreign nations on our soil. When you look around the world and see the extent to which warfare has been fought on the territory of various nations—when you look throughout Europe, Africa and the world—you realize we have been protected from that here in this country. It’s been as though there were a hedge about us and Britain in the same way.

There’s not been a successful landing on the British Isles in almost a thousand years—since William the Conqueror in 1066, which was actually a migration of Israelites. Since that time, there has never been an enemy landing that had any success there in the British Isles. They’ve not experienced that sort of invasion. The Spanish tried it with the Spanish Armada and was destroyed off the coast. Napoleon tried it, and he couldn’t do it. The Kaiser tried it in World War I; Hitler tried it in World War II.

God has set a hedge about our people. We have not experienced the kind of things that other nations have. But God says He is going to remove the hedge. He is going to remove the protection that has been set about us. He is going to remove that protective wall. The events that are going to occur are going to make the ears tingle of whoever hears it (Jeremiah 19:3).

It continues in chapter 2 speaking of “How?” Lamentations 2:8, “The Lord has purposed to destroy the wall of the daughter of Zion...”

Verse 10, “The elders of the daughter of Zion sit on the ground and keep silence; they throw dust on their heads...”

Verse 12, “They say to their mothers, ‘Where is grain and wine?’ As they swoon like the wounded in the streets of the city, as their life is poured out in their mother’s bosom.” It describes the famine and calamities that are going to come. It talks of little children wasting away.

Verses 13-14, “How shall I console [Margin, “bear witness to”] you? To what shall I liken you, O daughter of Jerusalem? What shall I compare with you, that I may comfort you, O virgin daughter of Zion? For your ruin is spread wide as the sea; who can heal you? Your prophets have seen for you false and deceptive visions; they have not uncovered your iniquity, to bring back your captives, but have envisioned for you false prophecies and delusions.”

The false prophets haven’t told the truth. They haven’t uncovered the iniquity. Our land is filled with false prophets—individuals who appoint themselves to proclaim and to announce to the nation—but they haven’t uncovered the iniquity, the lawlessness and the sin. They haven’t focused on the real problems.

Verse 19, “...Lift your hands toward Him for the life of your young children, who faint from hunger at the head of every street.”

Verse 22, “You have invited as to a feast day the terrors that surround me. In the day of the Lord’s anger there was no refugee or survivor. Those whom I have borne and brought up My enemies have destroyed.”

We find the prophets of Israel have not correctly analyzed the cause of the nation’s problems. They haven’t given solutions. They have held out false hopes and answers. We again see the destruction that is talked about, “the day of God’s anger.” God is going to allow this nation to suffer the consequences. He’s going to allow us to reap what we’ve sown.

Galatians 6:7, the scripture says, “Do not be deceived, God is not mocked; for whatever a man sows, that he will also reap.” And that is very much the case.

Lamentations 3:1-2, “I am the man who has seen affliction by the rod of His wrath. He has led me and made me walk in darkness and not in light.”

Verses 6-8, “He has set me in dark places like the dead of long ago. He has hedged me in so that I cannot get out; He has made my chain heavy. Even when I cry and shout, He shuts out my prayer.” He is speaking of the state the nation gets into.

Verse 17, “You have moved my soul far from peace; I have forgotten prosperity.” The nation is going to experience some of those things. God’s mercy is what will protect us from even further total destruction.

It describes in v. 22, “Through the Lord’s mercies we are not consumed, because His compassions fail not.”

Verse 26, “It is good that one should hope and wait quietly for the salvation of the Lord.” It is because of God’s mercy that we aren’t consumed. God’s mercy is all that’s going to stand between our nation and total, complete destruction. He is going to allow that destruction but is going to save a remnant. It describes, in poetic fashion, the calamities that are going to come.

Verses 14-15, “I have become the ridicule of all my people, and their taunting song all the day. He has filled me with bitterness, He has made me drink wormwood.”

Verses 17-20, “You have moved my soul far from peace; I have forgotten prosperity. And I said, ‘My strength and my hope have perished from the Lord.’ Remember my affliction and roaming, the wormwood and the gall. My soul still remembers and sinks within me.”

Verses 23-27, “They are new every morning; great is Your faithfulness. ‘The Lord is my portion,’ says my soul, ‘therefore I hope in Him!’ The Lord is good to those who wait for Him, to the soul who seeks Him. It is good that one should hope and wait quietly for the salvation of the Lord. It is good for a man to bear the yoke in his youth.”

It is speaking of the fact that there are lessons that are going to be learned; there is discipline that is going to have to be brought on this nation. God is ultimately our portion. He’s the One who is going to be there to deliver us. All these destructions that are described are things that are just almost beyond the limit of what we can imagine.

Lamentations 2:20 even makes reference to cannibalism. That sounds horrible, but if you read Josephus’ account, “The Siege of Jerusalem,” you find that there were things like that happening in the final days of the siege of Jerusalem. There were people who were reduced to that level of depravity. Jesus made it very plain in Matthew 24 and Luke 21 that the events that are going to occur at the very time of the end are going to far supersede even the events that occurred in Josephus’ day and time. When God corrects, God corrects in love and in mercy. Even when God removes His hedge and allows Satan's wrath to be poured out in the Great Tribulation and God Himself pours out His wrath in the Day of the Lord, God's punishment and chastening is motivated by God's love. If God didn't love our people, if God didn't love and care for us, He would not deal in the way that He does to bring our people to repentance. It makes it very plain here in Lamentations 3.

Beginning in v. 30, we notice one or two verses that even could have a reference to Christ and His crucifixion.

Verses 30-36, "Let him give his cheek to the one who strikes him, and be full of reproach. For the Lord will not cast off forever. Though He causes grief, yet He will show compassion according to the multitude of His mercies. For He does not afflict willingly, nor grieve the children of men. To crush under His feet all the prisoners of the earth, to turn aside the justice due a man before the face of the Most High, or subvert a man in his cause—the Lord does not approve."

God does not desire to see calamity, affliction and terrible things. God desires our good.

Verse 40, "Let us search out and examine our ways, and turn back to the Lord." This is what we have to do.

Verses 41-43, "Let us lift our hearts and hands to God in heaven. We have transgressed and rebelled; You have not pardoned. You have covered Yourself with anger and pursued us; You have slain and not pitied."

Verses 45-47, "You have made us an offscouring and refuse in the midst of the peoples. All our enemies have opened their mouths against us. Fear and a snare have come upon us, desolation and destruction."

Verses 55-59, "I called on Your name, O Lord, from the lowest pit. You have heard my voice: 'Do not hide Your ear from my sighing, from my cry for help.' You drew near on the day I called on You, and said, 'Do not fear!' O Lord, You have pleaded the case for my soul; You have redeemed my life. O Lord, You have seen how I am wronged; judge my case."

Verse 64, "Repay them, O Lord, according to the work of their hands." God is going to deal with the events that are going to occur. There are going to be punishments that are going to come because of disobedience. But God is ultimately going to deal with the nations that have punished and mistreated Israel.

Lamentations 4 opens with this lament:

Lamentations 4:1-2, "How the gold has become dim! How changed the fine gold! The stones of the sanctuary are scattered at the head of every street. The precious sons of Zion, valuable as fine gold, how they are regarded as clay pots, the work of the hands of the potter!"

It describes a time when physical wealth will be regarded as worthless because of its inability to deliver from the Great Tribulation. Read some of the prophecies where it talks about how people will lament and mourn and how the gold and the silver will be cast to the moles and the bats and go into the caves (Isaiah 2:18-21). People put their trust and confidence in so many of these things. People put their trust and their confidence in physical things to deliver them. They are going to find that those physical things are not the answer. Unless we are looking to God, unless God is our Deliverer and the One whom we are counting on, we are going to find ourselves in a situation where we can't deliver ourselves. We are not going to be able to buy our way out.

James 5:1-3, "Come now, you rich, weep and howl for your miseries that are coming upon you! Your riches are corrupted, and your garments are moth-eaten. Your gold and silver are corroded, and their corrosion will be a witness against you and will eat your flesh like fire. You have heaped up treasure in the last days."

Until the time of modern nuclear warfare and radioactivity, it was hard to understand James 5:3. Gold doesn't rust as we normally think of it. James 5:3, but it says (KJV), "Your gold and your silver is cankered; the rust of them shall be a witness against you, and shall eat your flesh as it were fire." This is talking about becoming contaminated by radioactivity and then describes the consequences. It will burn like fire. There are going to be people who have heaped up gold and think they have really prepared. They are going to find that their pile of gold becomes radioactive and will burn right through them. "Your riches are corrupted." These things are not going to deliver in the day of God's wrath.

It's important to understand that there's only one way that is going to bring us through the events and the calamities of the years ahead, and that involves being close to God.

Lamentations 4:4-6, continuing, "The tongue of the infant clings to the roof of its mouth for thirst; the young children ask for bread, but no one breaks it for them. Those who ate delicacies are desolate in the streets; those who were brought up in scarlet embrace ash heaps. The punishment of the iniquity of the daughter of my people is greater than the punishment of the sin of Sodom, which was overthrown in a moment, with no hand to help her!”

God says, “the iniquity of the daughter of My people,” speaking of the remnant. “The daughter of My people” is a reference to the last generation. “The punishment of the iniquity of the daughter of My people is greater than the punishment of the sin of Sodom.” Are we concerned about some of these things?

Why, just a matter of a couple of weeks ago, our “esteemed” governor issued an executive order making sure that all the sodomites have full protection here in the state of Louisiana, saying that’s not grounds for any sort of termination of employment or anything of that sort. It was very quietly put into operation through an executive order. Increasingly, as a nation, we view that and say, ‘One lifestyle is just as good as another. Who is to say that this is wrong?’ Well, we are going to find out.

God says Sodom was overthrown as in a moment. We have a lot less excuse than Sodom and Gomorrah. There’s scarcely a home in this nation that doesn’t have a Bible somewhere in it. We have gone so far from any Biblical standard of morality that it’s as though we’ve lost sight that there’s such a thing as right or wrong. God makes plain, these events are going to come and the calamities are going to come. The punishment that God is going to visit on Israel is going to be greater than the punishment on Sodom, and what He rendered on Sodom was pretty great.

Verse 10, it describes the destruction, “The hands of the compassionate women have cooked their own children; they became food for them in the destruction of the daughter of my people.” Horrible things!

Verses 11-12, “The Lord has fulfilled His fury, He has poured out His fierce anger. He kindled a fire in Zion, and it has devoured its foundations. The kings of the earth, and all inhabitants of the world, would not have believed that the adversary and the enemy could enter the gates of Jerusalem—” It’s going to be just amazing to people that we are going to be conquered and overthrown.

Verses 13-16, “Because of the sins of her prophets and the iniquities of her priests, who shed in her midst the blood of the just. They wandered blind in the streets; they have defiled themselves with blood, so that no one would touch their garments. They cried out to them, ‘Go away, unclean! Go away, go away, do not touch us!’ When they fled and wandered, those among the nations said, ‘They shall no longer dwell here.’ The face of the Lord scattered them; He no longer regards them. The people do not respect the priests nor show favor to the elders.”

Verses 19-20, “Our pursuers were swifter than the eagles of the heavens. They pursued us on the mountains and lay in wait for us in the wilderness. The breath of our nostrils, the anointed of the Lord, was caught in their pits, of whom we said, ‘Under his shadow we shall live among the nations.’”

Verse 22, “The punishment of your iniquity is accomplished, O daughter of Zion; He will no longer send you into captivity. He will punish your iniquity, O daughter of Edom; He will uncover your sins!” Again, there is a focus on what God is going to do. God doesn’t get pleasure out of punishing people.

Lamentations 3:33 says, “For He does not afflict willingly, nor grieve the children of men.” God doesn’t enjoy it. God does not delight in those things at all.

In some ways, Lamentations 5 is sort of a prayer that ends the book.

Lamentations 5:1-2, “Remember, O Lord, what has come upon us; look, and behold our reproach! Our inheritance has been turned over to aliens, and our houses to foreigners.”

It talks about the fact of our people Israel becoming dispossessed in their own land. “Our inheritance is turned over to aliens [strangers].” Increasingly we are seeing this as we see the influx of peoples pouring in. We see the fact that much of our national wealth is bought up by various peoples—the Japanese, the Arabs and various ones.

Verses 2-4, “Our inheritance [that we received from God] has been turned over to aliens, and our houses to foreigners. We have become orphans and waifs, our mothers are like widows. We pay for the water we drink, and our wood comes at a price.” We are going to find that we are going to undergo rationing—everything from fuel to water. We are going to find that these things become increasingly dear and things become increasingly difficult.

Chapter 5 describes the famine and captivity that are characteristic at the time of the Great Tribulation. We will see it as we go through more of chapter 5.

Lamentations 5:5-8, “They pursue at our heels; we labor and have no rest. We have given our hand to the Egyptians and the Assyrians, to be satisfied with bread. Our fathers have sinned and are no more, but we bear their iniquities. Servants rule over us; there is none to deliver us from their hand.”

It talks about the whole social structure turned upside down, the fact that our forefathers have sinned and we are reaping the consequences. There are consequences that come, and we are reaping the consequences for the sins of those who have gone before—those who have not properly looked to God and put to practice His laws in their lives. The nation is experiencing the consequence.

Verses 9-12, “We get our bread at the risk of our lives, because of the sword in the wilderness. Our skin is hot as an oven, because of the fever of famine. They ravished the women in Zion, the maidens in the cities of Judah. Princes were hung up by their hands, and elders were not respected.”

It describes the rape, the pillage and the destruction that is going to come.

Verses 13-16, “Young men ground at the millstones; boys staggered under loads of wood. The elders have ceased gathering at the gate, and the young men from their music. The joy of our heart has ceased; our dance has turned into mourning. The crown has fallen from our head. Woe to us, for we have sinned!” These things are going to come to pass.

Verses 19-22, “You, O Lord, remain forever; Your throne from generation to generation. Why do You forget us forever, and forsake us for so long a time? Turn us back to You, O Lord, and we will be restored; renew our days as of old, unless You have utterly rejected us, and are very angry with us!”

Note here at the end, it focuses on God’s power and mercy and our need to be protected, to be brought back and brought to repentance.

Verse 19, it says, “You, O Lord, remain forever; Your throne from generation to generation.” God is there. And when our people find themselves at the very bottom, when they find themselves cut off from God, when they find themselves languishing in the concentration camps of the future, they are going to begin to take up this lament. They are going to begin to look to God and to seek God.

Isaiah 27:13, we read, “So it shall be in that day that the great trumpet will be blown; they will come, who are about to perish in the land of Assyria, and they who are outcasts in the land of Egypt, and shall worship the Lord in the holy mount at Jerusalem.”

God is ultimately going to deliver our people. But there is going to be a tremendous lament. There are going to be tremendous and terrible problems and calamities that come upon our nation and upon our people.

The book of Lamentations sets the stage. Jeremiah wrote this lament at the time of Josiah’s death. It was a direct prophecy of the events that were going to transpire over the next few years in Judah and in Jerusalem. It was a book that set the stage and a prophecy of the events of 70 A.D.—the destruction of Jerusalem. And yet when you go through Matthew 24, it’s very, very evident that the events of 70 A.D. are merely a type of a far greater destruction. It is far greater because it will occur on a far greater scale. These things are going to come to pass. We have lived in a land that has been so blessed. We have really had an artificial isolation and prosperity. We have not had to experience so many of the things that other nations and other peoples have experienced.

The book of Lamentations is a poetic book. It puts the events in poetic fashion. It focuses on and looks forward to the terrible calamities that are going to occur. These things aren’t pleasant to think about. People like to put it out of their minds and forget about that. We have to understand that one-third of the Bible is prophecy and many of these prophecies focus in on the events of our time and on out ahead. God gives us these warnings. Some of these warnings are ultimately going to be focused on by the entire nation. People don’t want to hear this message. They don’t want to hear these things, but God is going to bring it to pass.

There’s a tremendous amount that is packed in here. God inspired Jeremiah to write these things and inspired it to be preserved for us. God is ultimately the source of mercy. There are going to be calamities that are going to occur. It is not because God is cruel. The tribulation really represents Satan’s wrath. The tribulation is made possible because God removes the hedge from around our people. What happens, in effect, is that God says, ‘You don’t appreciate the protection that I have given you. You don’t want Me. You don’t want My ways. You don’t want My protection. Fine! I will remove those things and you will be on your own.’ This means, of course, that just as when God removed the hedge around Job, he was wide open to the attack of Satan. So, when God removes the hedge around our nation and our people, we will be wide open to the attack that Satan will stir up.

The Beast power is arising right now; even as we speak this evening, there are events that are going on in Europe. Incredible events! Events that just a matter of a few years ago, seemed so far off and so remote. We are sitting on the threshold of the culminations of so many of these events that the Bible focuses upon.

Hopefully, as we had a chance to go through and to look a little bit at the book of Lamentations, we can realize that there really is a tremendous amount that God has packed in there. There are events that have a great deal of significance for us today and represents things upon which we need to focus. Some of these things are unpleasant. We don't like to focus on things that are unpleasant. But these things are there for a warning. They are there for an admonition.

Acts 10:34, "...God shows no partiality." (KJV, "...God is no respecter of persons.") If we don't learn the lesson of the things that God has inspired to be recorded, we will ultimately reap the consequences that come.

Next Bible study we will go through the book of Ecclesiastes, the fourth of the five Festival Scrolls.

The Writings Series—Ecclesiastes

We are progressing through our series this evening. We have most recently been going through that section of the Old Testament known as the Writings, which is the third division of the Old Testament Scriptures. That section is primarily poetic. The book of Psalms is the longest and the primary book in that section. The section also includes Proverbs and Job as other books that have a poetic cast to them. Then there is this particular group of five books called by the Jews the Megillot or the Festival Scrolls. These five little books (Song of Solomon, Ruth, Lamentation, Ecclesiastes and Esther) were traditionally read at various festival occasions in ancient Israel.

This is the section of the Writings we have been going through most recently. We have gone through Song of Solomon, Ruth and Lamentations. Now we are up to the fourth of the five Festival Scrolls, the book of Ecclesiastes. There's only a little bit remaining in this section. Once we finish Ecclesiastes and Esther, then the only portion of the Writings left is the book of Daniel, Ezra, Nehemiah, and I and II Chronicles. We have already covered Ezra, Nehemiah, and I and II Chronicles when we went through the historical books of the Old Testament. So, we will take a very brief look in those four books from a little different standpoint than we went into before. We will take a brief look at them in one Bible study because we have already gone through them in depth a number of months ago.

Once we finish up Ecclesiastes and Esther, we will have finished the five Festival Scrolls. We will then go through the book of Daniel. After Daniel we will take one Bible study to look at Ezra, Nehemiah and Chronicles, just to sort of round off, since we have been going through this as a specific section. That will conclude our study of every book in the Bible except the book of Revelation, which we will go into afterward. We are going to spend seven Bible studies on the book of Revelation. We will go into some depth into that.

Some books we have covered a little more quickly; some we have gone into more detail. The books of the Bible are written in different ways, and we have to understand that when we study them. Some books are written in a poetic fashion, and as a result, there is a great deal of repetition. They deal with topics in a little different way. Others are written as a straightforward narrative account, as in the case of many of the historical books. Some are written where there is a great deal of exposition of particular theological subjects. In Paul's epistles, for instance, there is a great deal of exposition of topics—as distinct from the Gospel accounts where we have the story of what Christ did and, yes, the story of what He said. And there's exposition there, too. In some of the prophetic books, we get into more symbolism that is directed.

We are going to cover Daniel in two Bible studies. We will get an overview of Daniel, but when we go through Revelation in much detail, we will have to go back to the prophetic sections of Daniel. So to avoid being repetitious, when we cover Daniel, we will concentrate on the areas that are not repeated so heavily in Revelation. Then when we cover Revelation, we will go back in more detail to earlier chapters of Daniel. We will find, as we go through it, several chapters of Daniel form the backdrop to understanding the book of Revelation. It gives you a little bit of an idea as to what will have occurred.

We will have covered every single book of the Bible. Since some of you have been here all through that time, you will have had the opportunity to go through in a detailed, systematic way, every single book of the Bible. But since none of us will have learned everything there is to know about the Bible, we will still need to go back to the Bible. We will find there is plenty more to study in the Bible, but at least we will have had an overview of all of the books.

This evening we are getting into the book of Ecclesiastes. As I have mentioned, it is the fourth of the five Festival Scrolls. It was and is traditionally read to this day in Orthodox synagogues at the Feast of Tabernacles. Normally it would be read on the weekly Sabbath that comes during the Feast of Tabernacles. At first glance, it may strike us as a rather odd book to read during that particular period because the Feast of Tabernacles is a festive time. It is a time that looks forward to and pictures the time of the millennial reign of Jesus Christ on the earth—the time when the Kingdom of God will hold sway over all the earth. We might think of certain prophetic passages that would tie in to that meaning.

The book of Ecclesiastes is a book that, at first glance, strikes many people as being sort of negative and pessimistic. Even some commentators have wondered over the years how a book like this got into the Bible. Well, it got into the Bible because God wanted it there, and it stayed in the Bible because God wanted it there. Perhaps as we go through this evening, we will understand a little more clearly the message that God wants us to have. This book describes living life to the full from a physical standpoint. There weren't any desires that were not met. Yet after all of that, there is a certain feeling of emptiness and futility when all is said and done. Solomon's reign was, in many ways, a type of the Millennium.

We refer to certain things as being a type of something else. We refer to that in prophecy. To be a type of something means to be a forerunner and in certain ways picture a later, greater event or a later, greater person. For instance, in certain passages made in the Psalms, we find that in certain ways David was a type of Christ, a type of the Messiah. That simply means that there were certain things about him that were typical of or referred to the Messiah. That's why so many passages of the Psalms that David wrote, which reflects experiences and feelings that he had, are actually quoted in the New Testament by Jesus Christ Himself to apply to and to be descriptive of the Messiah. Many events that occurred in history are used in the Bible as a type of some future event. In other words, it illustrates on a small scale, some later, greater event. We say that Solomon's reign was a type of the Millennium. Let's understand what that means.

I Kings 4:20-21, "Judah and Israel were as numerous as the sand by the sea in multitude, eating and drinking and rejoicing. So Solomon reigned over all kingdoms from the River to the land of the Philistines, as far as the border of Egypt. They brought tribute and served Solomon all the days of his life."

Verses 24-25, "For he had dominion over all the region on this side of the River [referring to the Euphrates River] from Tiphshah even to Gaza, namely over all the kings on this side of the River, and he had peace on every side all around him. And Judah and Israel dwelt safely, each man under his vine and his fig tree, from Dan as far as Beersheba, all the days of Solomon."

We are told that the nation dwelt safely, every man under his vine and under his fig tree.

Now let's turn back to the prophets.

Micah 4:1, "Now it shall come to pass in the latter days that the mountain of the Lord's house shall be established on the top of the mountains, and shall be exalted above the hills; and peoples shall flow to it." It is talking about the government of God. "Mountain" is used symbolically in the Scripture to refer to a government. "The mountain [government] of the house of the Lord will be established."

Verses 2-4, "Many nations shall come and say, 'Come, and let us go up to the mountain of the Lord, to the house of the God of Jacob; He will teach us His ways, and we shall walk in His paths.' For out of Zion the law shall go forth, and the word of the Lord from Jerusalem. He shall judge between many peoples, and rebuke strong nations afar off; they shall beat their swords into plowshares, and their spears into pruning hooks; nation shall not lift up sword against nation, neither shall they learn war any more. But everyone shall sit under his vine and under his fig tree, and no one shall make them afraid; for the mouth of the Lord of hosts has spoken."

The phrase, "But they shall sit every man under his vine and under his fig tree and none shall make them afraid," is used three times in the Bible: I Kings 4:25, Micah 4:4 and in Zechariah 3:10.

Zechariah 3:10, "'In that day,' says the Lord of hosts, 'Everyone will invite his neighbor under his vine and under his fig tree.'"

The statement in Micah 4:4 is almost an exact repetition of the statement in I Kings 4:25. That is descriptive of a time of peace, safety, security and prosperity.

Right now if we look around the world, we see great unrest. We see tremendous amounts of ethnic strife and conflict all over the world, whether it is internal problems in this nation or whether it's the world's problems. Right now, the nation of Yugoslavia has really ceased to be a nation. It is split into four small sub-groups. I may be mistaken, but I doubt if there are any of us in this room that could actually tell the difference between a Slovene, a Croat, a Serb or a Bosnian. Maybe you could, but I don't really think that I could at first glance or anything. They existed together as the nation of Yugoslavia for much of the mid-portion of this century. Now they have split into various warring factions. That is just one tiny example. You find it all over the world. We've seen the breakup of the Soviet Union into fifteen constituent republics, and some of these constituent republics are in the process of further dividing. You can go to Africa, Asia or anywhere you want on the face of the earth, and we see this ethnic strife and warring. Of course, there have always been conflicts that have existed.

What is it that everyone wants? What's all the strife about? Well, basically, what it comes down to is what everybody wants is to be able to dwell safely, every man under his own vine and under his own fig tree. Everybody wants his little spot where nobody can come in and intimidate him and threaten to take it away from him. Everybody has a yearning. That is the basis of all these nationalistic yearnings. People desire their own spot where they are not going to have to worry about some larger, stronger neighbor coming in and deciding to annex their spot and take it away from them, chop down their fig tree, steal all the grapes off their vines and leave them there beaten to a pulp. That has so often been descriptive of our history.

God uses that symbolism to describe Tomorrow's World, a time when every nation will have its spot. It will have its place under the sun. It is a time when all people will be able to sit under their own vine and their own fig tree—which by the way, shows that the millennial period is not going to be a time of communism or socialism. It doesn't say that every man will sit under the communal vine and the communal fig tree. It says, "Every man will sit under his own vine and his own fig tree."

The eighth commandment that enjoins us not to steal, presupposes private property. There's nothing wrong with private property. And again there is a yearning that people have to have their own stuff. There's nothing wrong with that, as long as greed doesn't motivate them to try to steal their neighbor's spot and annex it to theirs. God is the One who divides to the nations their inheritance.

Deuteronomy 32:8-9, we are told, "When the Most High divided their inheritance to the nations, when He separated the sons of Adam, He set the boundaries of the peoples according to the number of the children of Israel. For the Lord's portion is His people; Jacob is the place of His inheritance." And He will do so once again.

What we have is a description of a time in the history of Israel when the nation, for a brief period, existed in peace and in harmony. The phrase that is used is a phrase that is typical of the way the whole world will be under the reign of Jesus Christ.

Solomon's name is derived from the Hebrew word "Shalom," which means "peace." In that sense, Solomon's reign was a type of the millennial reign of Jesus Christ. It was a time of abundance, peace and prosperity—at least, during a brief period of that reign when people were able to dwell in the land in safety, free from incursions and threats of invasion and things of this sort. We have a reign that was a type of the Millennium.

In many ways, the book of Ecclesiastes explains the difference between the Millennium and the Kingdom of God. There is a difference. "Millennium" is a word that simply means "a thousand years." It comes from the Latin. By definition, a thousand years is a limited, finite period of time. It has a beginning and it has an end. But the Kingdom of God is eternal. It will go on and stretch out into eternity. We are told of the Messiah's reign.

Luke 1:33, "And He will reign over the house of Jacob forever, and of His reign there will be no end."

Isaiah 9:7, "Of the increase of His government and peace there will be no end..."

So, we are looking out into eternity and to infinity. The Millennium has a limitation. The Millennium is that time when the Kingdom of God rules over physical human beings and over the earth for the period of one thousand years. It has its beginning at the return of Jesus Christ and its conclusion at the time when Satan is released and allowed to go forth to deceive the nations for a very short duration, just prior to the White Throne Judgment period (Revelation 20:7-8).

The Feast of Tabernacles looks forward to and pictures the Millennium. It reminds us of that period in God's plan, and it is a time when we are enjoying the fruits of our labor. God commands us to set back a portion of our income to utilize at the Feast. It is a time when the ancient Israelites were enjoying the fruits of their labor in great abundance. They were being reminded that there was a greater, ultimate reality because when you are enjoying everything physical to the full, there is still something on beyond that. Everything physical, by its very nature, is temporary.

I don't care how great a meal you eat, how big the steak is or how delicious the food was, it's just a matter of a few hours until you are hungry again. It's temporary. You may be full and may think you won't be able to eat again. Well, in a few hours you'll be hungry and you will want to eat again. No matter what it is, it may be great, but no matter how thrilling or exciting, it's temporary. There is nothing wrong with enjoying something physical, as long as it's done in the right way. But the point is that by its nature, it is temporary.

The book of Ecclesiastes is written from the perspective of a lifetime of experience and experiment. After trying every possible way to achieve self-fulfillment, Solomon came to the conclusion that no humanly devised scheme will produce lasting results. The modern “self-actualizers,” the “me-generation” and all the theorists who advocate these various things could save themselves a lot of pain by simply reading and heeding the message of Ecclesiastes because the ultimate conclusion is that only God’s way works. That’s the conclusion of the whole matter that Solomon arrives at by the end of the book.

God inspired that he record his experience in poetic fashion as an example for us. Let’s look through this particular book and note the various things that we find here.

Ecclesiastes 1:1 (Jewish Publication Society Bible—JPS), “The words of the Koheleth, the son of David, king in Jerusalem.” The Hebrew term “Koheleth” is translated “preacher” in the KJV and NKJV. Various translations may render it a little differently. The Hebrew term “Koheleth” is the way the Jewish translation transliterates it into an English spelling. It simply means “a speaker in an assembly.” The word “preacher” would be one rendering of it. This is a reference to Solomon.

This speaker is described as the son of David, the king of Jerusalem. Which king in Jerusalem was the son of David? Well, Solomon. Was Solomon a teacher in an assembly? Well, he certainly was a wise man. We are told that people came from all over the known world to hear Solomon’s wisdom. He was celebrated for his collection of Proverbs, for his teaching and for all the knowledge and wisdom that came from him (1 Kings 4:29-34). Here, he is writing in that context.

Verse 2, “‘Vanity of vanities,’ says Koheleth; ‘vanity of vanities, all is vanity.’” What is that reference to? The word that is translated “vanity” is a word that in the Hebrew language literally means “breath.” In other words, it is something that lacks substance. The term “vanity of vanities” is a superlative in Hebrew, like “holy of holies” or “song of songs.” It is the superlative in Hebrew, the ultimate. So when he says, “vanity of vanities, all is vanity,” the statement is being made right off that there is a pervasive emptiness and a pervasive sense of futility that comes when “things” are pursued.

Verses 3-4, “What profit has a man of all his labor wherein he labors under the sun? One generation passes away, and another generation comes; and the earth abides forever.” The earth goes on and on, but there is a temporary finite nature to man. No matter what you do, one generation passes and another generation comes along. There is a transitory character to human life.

He says, “What profit has man of all his labor?” The word “profit” in Hebrew means basically what our word “profit” means in English. It is used ten times in the book of Ecclesiastes and not anywhere else in the Bible. This is the only place that this particular word is used. The literal meaning of the word is “a surplus” and “a balance sheet.” It’s basically the same as what our English word “profit” means. The point is: What is the profit? When you figure up the accounts at the end and tally it all up, what is the profit? What is the surplus that a man has of all his labor? What does he have left over? Well, he’s not going to be here. He perishes. He passes away. “One generation passes away and another generation comes.” There is a transitory character to human life.

Verse 5, “The sun also rises, and the sun goes down, and hastens to his place where he arose.” You look back and surely enough, it comes up the same place the next day.

Verses 6-7, “The wind goes toward the south, and turns about unto the north; it turns about continually in its circuit, and the wind returns again to its circuit. All the rivers run into the sea, yet the sea is not full; unto the place from where the rivers go, there they go again.”

It just goes on that way. The Mississippi has been running down into the Gulf for centuries and millennia, but it doesn’t empty out and the Gulf doesn’t fill up. It’s amazing how that works. The river just keeps flowing on. Thousands of years go by and the river just keeps coming.

Verses 9-10, “That which has been is that which shall be, and that which has been done is that which shall be done; and there is nothing new under the sun. Is there a thing of which it is said, ‘See, this is new’? –It has been already, in the ages which were before us.”

This simply shows that there is a repetitive effect to life. There is a cyclical effect to life in the physical realm. There are cycles that nature follows—the rain cycles, the wind cycles, the patterns of the weather, the seasons, the rotation of the earth on its axis and its revolution around the sun. There are patterns and there are cycles. We also find it in terms of human conduct.

Now he doesn’t mean that every technology that could ever be invented had been invented. When he says there's nothing new under the sun, the reference is not to the fact that automobiles existed before the flood or something like that. That's not what it's talking about. It is simply the fact that there is really no particular change to what people do. The motivating force behind virtually every technological revolution man has come up with has been inspired by the military. This has always been the driving force. There have been peaceful spin-offs, but whether it was the development of the bow and arrow, the advancement in bow and arrow technology in development of the long bow, the crossbow and various things that were developed through the Middle Ages, it was to give armies one "step up" on the opposing army. There were various developments in the technology of the bow and arrow, which can be great if you are a bow hunter, but it was developed to give armies a "step up" on the opposing army.

It's the same thing with aviation. Aviation was sort of a novelty prior to World War I. The greatest boost to aviation was when government money was put into it in World War I. If we could figure out a way to do this a little better, well, we would be able to drop bombs down on top of our enemies. So, a lot of money was put into aviation during World War I. It went from a novelty to being something that served an important use. The same thing happened. There was another big jump during World War II with advancement of various other kinds of technology.

In other words, human nature has remained the same. It's what man does with the opportunities that he has. There is predictability to human nature. That's part of the basis of prophecy. You put the same people in the same situation, and they basically do the same thing over and over and over again.

We see that there are historical cycles. We see it in economics. What it amounts to is one generation forgets the lessons learned by the previous generation. We find ourselves in economic problems today, just a generation down the road from the depression. The generation that grew up during the depression, that learned the economic lessons of the depression have to a great extent been replaced by the generation that "cut his teeth" on post-World War II prosperity. So, we go back and do the same thing. You see over and over and over certain repetitive cycles. We see that and Solomon brings that out here. There is nothing really new or novel when it comes to human nature and the way that people respond.

Ecclesiastes 1:12-15, "I Koheleth have been king over Israel in Jerusalem. And I applied my heart to seek and to search out by wisdom concerning all things that are done under heaven; it is a sore task that God has given to the sons of men to be exercised therewith. I have seen all the works that are done under the sun; and behold, all is vanity and striving after wind. That which is crooked cannot be made straight, and that which is wanting [lacking] cannot be numbered." He applied himself to know wisdom.

Verses 16-18, "I spoke with my own heart, saying, 'Lo, I have gotten great wisdom, more also than all that were before me over Jerusalem; yea, my heart has had great experience of wisdom and knowledge.' And I applied my heart to know wisdom and to know madness and folly—I perceived that this also is striving after wind. For in much wisdom is much vexation; and he who increases knowledge, increases sorrow."

The possession of wisdom, of and by itself, merely serves to reveal more realistically the imperfections of the current world order and increases one's weariness and unhappiness. If you clearly saw and understood everything that's going on in the world scene today, apart from an understanding of God and His revelation, there would be an awful lot of despair. In that sense, "ignorance is bliss" to a lot of people. The reason they get along as well as they do is because they really don't understand how bad things are.

The point is that there is something on beyond that represents God's revelation of the fact that He is going to step into history. There is a hope that we have, but that hope is not anchored onto the fact that man is going to fix it all for himself. What we find with human history is a repetition of the cycles. But we find that as man's technology increases, those cycles can be even more destructive. The wars that are fought are increasingly destructive. The American War Between the States is often referred to as the first modern war, and the casualties dwarfed all other wars that had been fought by American soldiers. In fact, if you combine the casualties (North and South), the number of casualties equals more than the sum total of all American military casualties in all of the other wars from the Revolution through Viet Nam.

It was called the first modern war because it involved destruction and carnage on a scale that had never been possible before then. Technology had increased. With the old muzzle-loading guns, you fired one and you had to stop and reload. That slowed down killing. When the repeating rifle came on the scene, it made it more efficient. You could kill your neighbor more quickly and could kill more of your neighbors. There were various other things that were invented during that time.

Well, just a matter of a generation later, World War I was fought. It was just about fifty-some-odd years later when World War I broke out. The technology changes that had taken place meant that World War I, in terms of the European Continent, far dwarfed what had happened on the American Continent fifty years before. American casualties weren't as much, but it devastated Europe with casualties running into the multiple millions. It was called the Great War, the war to end all wars. And just a matter of twenty-one years later (1918 to 1939), World War II broke out. World War II far dwarfed World War I, and the casualties were far, far higher. It ran into the multiple tens of millions by the time you take in all the casualties that took place there. We have found that the cycles of human nature are the same, but man's technology has allowed it to be far more destructive. A World War III would be far, far more destructive than any of the previous wars of this century.

The nature of man has remained unchanged and that's why, "That which is done is what will be done." The nature of man remains the same as when Cain picked up a stick and killed Abel. What's changed? The only thing that's changed is that now the modern-day Cain has learned how to project the "stick" from thousands of miles away. He has improved his technology, but it's the same attitude and the same spirit. It was a little more primitive. He had to reach down and pick up the club and knock his brother in the head. Now he can be ten thousand miles away, push a button and our modern-day "stick" (we call it a missile) shoots up, goes across and lands and blows up.

So what's changed? He says that the possession of more wisdom—just seeing clearly how bad things are—doesn't fix everything. That doesn't make you happy. You recognize how difficult it is to actually bring about any sort of real permanent change. That was emptiness. He says maybe pursuing knowledge and an education is the ultimate. Maybe that's the way to happiness and fulfillment. So, he pursued those things and he said all he got was frustrated. He saw these things and realized how puny man really is and how little he can really effect and change things on the earth. "What is crooked cannot be made straight" (v. 15). Things go on and there are cycles that are to be followed. Just pursuing an education wasn't the ultimate. Solomon tried everything.

Ecclesiastes 2:1, "I said in my heart 'Come now, I will test you with mirth; therefore enjoy pleasure'; but surely this also was vanity." He thought, 'What about having a good time?' He became a party animal. So, he pursued some of that and what did this accomplish?

Verses 3-14, "I searched in my heart how to gratify my flesh with wine, while guiding my heart with wisdom, and how to lay hold on folly, till I might see what was good for the sons of men to do under the heaven all the days of their lives. I made my works great, I built myself houses, and planted myself vineyards. I made myself gardens and orchards, and I planted all kinds of fruit trees in them. I made myself waterpools from which to water the growing trees of the grove. I acquired male and female servants, and had servants born in my house. Yes, I had greater possessions of herds and flocks, than all who were in Jerusalem before me. I also gathered for myself silver and gold and the special treasures of kings and the provinces. I acquired male and female singers, the delights of the sons of men, and musical instruments of all kinds. So I became great and excelled more than all who were before me in Jerusalem. Also my wisdom remained in me. Whatever my eyes desired I did not keep from them. I did not withhold my heart from any pleasure, for my heart rejoiced in all my labor; and this was my reward from all my labor. Then I looked on all the works that my hands had done and on the labor in which I had toiled; and indeed all was vanity and grasping for the wind. There was no profit under the sun. Then I turned myself to consider wisdom, and madness and folly; for what can the man do who succeeds the king?—only what he has already done. Then I saw that wisdom excels folly as light excels darkness. The wise man's eyes are in his head, but the fool walks in darkness. Yet I myself perceived that the same event happens to them all."

He said he finally figured out that what happens to the fool is going to happen to him. He said, 'We are both going to die. So, am I really that much better off?'

Solomon pursued everything. Where does satisfaction and fulfillment come from? Does it come in the pursuit of knowledge? He did that. Does it come in just partying and having a good time? He did that. Does it come in setting great goals, achieving, accomplishing, and building things, construction projects or all sorts of pursuits? He said he pursued those things. He practiced those things, and he was making money. He put his heart into various things, and it all turned out empty. Oh, there was excitement and thrill at the time. But when it was over, when he had achieved, when he had accomplished whatever it was he had done, he finally “had it.” He looked around and said, ‘Is this all there is to it?’ There was still an empty spot.

Solomon set out to perform an experiment, to arrive at the purpose of life, to learn what produced real satisfaction. We find the consequence.

Verse 17, “Therefore I hated life because the work that was done under the sun was grievous unto me, for all is vanity and a grasping for the wind.” He became depressed. He said, ‘What’s the point of it all? I am going to die and I’ll be gone. Whatever I’ve done will be left for somebody else to tear up or to enjoy or do whatever they are going to do with it. I’m just here for a short time and I’ve knocked myself out doing all this and I’m gone.’

There’s still something more. There was this sense of futility.

Verses 18-19, “Then I hated all my labor in which I had toiled under the sun, because I must leave it to the man who will come after me. And who knows whether he will be a wise man or a fool? Yet he will rule over all my labor in which I have toiled and in which I have shown myself wise under the sun. This also is vanity.” He began to look at that.

Verse 22, “For what has man for all his labor, and for the striving of his heart, with which he has toiled under the sun?” What do you get for it all?

Verse 23, “For all his days are sorrowful, and his work grievous; even in the night his heart takes not rest. This also is vanity.” He thinks about it and he worries about it.

Verse 24, “There is nothing better for a man than that he should eat and drink, and that his soul should enjoy good in his labor. This also, I saw, was from the hand of God.”

We see here, in v. 24, that to derive pleasure from your work and to enjoy the material rewards produced from it is the peak of human satisfaction. That is from the hand of God. There is nothing better, humanly, than to enjoy the reward and the benefits of what you’ve done and accomplished, to derive pleasure from your work and your labor.

That’s fine. But is there anything beyond that? Ecclesiastes 3:1-3, “To everything there is a season, a time to every purpose under the heaven: a time to be born, and a time to die; a time to plant, and a time to pluck what is planted; a time to kill, and a time to heal; a time to break down, and a time to build up.”

So, there is a time. There is the sense of the cycle of life—the ups, the downs, joys, sorrows, birth and death. There are cycles that are descriptive of life on this planet under the sun. To everything there is a season and a time to every purpose under the heavens. There is a time and place.

Verses 9-13, “What profit has the worker from that in which he labors? I have seen the God-given task with which the sons of men are to be occupied. He has made everything beautiful in its time. Also He has put eternity in their hearts (KJV, “set the world in their heart”), except that no one can find out the work that God does from the beginning to end. I know that there is nothing better for them than to rejoice, and to do good in their lives, and also that every man should eat and drink, and enjoy the good of all his labor—it is the gift of God.”

Let’s note v. 11 in the King James Bible. There is sort of an interesting term. “...He has made everything beautiful in its time; also He has set the world in their heart...” Now, what does that mean? The Hebrew word that is translated “the world” is the Hebrew word “olam.” It is not a word that refers to the physical earth. It doesn’t really refer to society as such. It is the word that is used in Hebrew to refer to the future, to forever or to eternity.

For instance, it is the word that is used back in Ecclesiastes 1:4 when it says, “...one generation passes away, another generation comes, but the earth abides forever.” The literal translation of the Hebrew “...and the earth abides forever” is the word “olam.”

Back in Ecclesiastes 3:11, I will read the comment out of the Soncino Jewish Commentary, “The Hebrew word “olam” is interpreted as “eternity.” This is the signification that it has in the Bible. God has endowed man with a sense of the future. He knows that he is more than a creature of the day, and this consciousness is the cause of his dissatisfaction with the transitory experiences which take place within the span of his lifetime.”

Man has set within him a sense of the future, a sense of eternity. This is something that animals do not possess. Animals don’t have that. They are purely creatures of the moment. They are experiencing their excitement, anticipation, joy, sorrow; whatever they are experiencing, they are experiencing the moment. They don’t have any sense of the future. They don't have any sense of a time that existed before they were or a time that will be beyond their life. They don't have any concept of time. They don't have any concept of the future, of eternity. That is one of the things that is characteristically human; that is not shared by any other physical creatures. "God has set eternity in our hearts." He has set within us a sense of the future, a sense of that which stretches out beyond us, both into the past and into the future. That makes us, all the more, desire to have something that stretches beyond the "right here" and "right now."

He looks and he says, "There is a time for everything. What is the profit? What is the surplus? What is gained with all the things that are done?" He looked at what God has given to man to be exercised therewith. Everything has its own beauty. We have a sense of the future, a sense of eternity in our heart, and yet we can't find out everything that God has done from the beginning to the end.

Ecclesiastes 3:12-13, "I know that there is nothing better for them than to rejoice, and to do good in their lives, and also that every man should eat and drink, and enjoy the good of all his labor—it is the gift of God." Derive benefit from it.

Verse 14, "I know that whatsoever God does, it shall be forever..." What God does is forever; what man does is temporary.

Verse 16, "And moreover I saw under the sun, in the place of judgment, wickedness was there; and in the place of righteousness, iniquity was there." Justice is very inequitably carried out—again characteristic of human society.

Isaiah 32:1, the prophet Isaiah tells us, "Behold, a king will reign in righteousness, and princes will rule with justice." That is the time of Christ's millennial reign. Right now in the world, we find that often other factors are considered. It's not just a matter of right or wrong, guilt or innocence. Justice hinges on so many technicalities, political factors and various things. There is an adversarial relationship that exists. Each side is not trying to simply discover the truth. They are trying to accentuate the things that make them look good and to obscure, hide and dispute the facts that make the other side look good. We find that there are many things that are not as they should be.

Ecclesiastes 3:17, Solomon said, "I said in my heart, 'God shall judge the righteous and the wicked....'" What is the answer to injustice and iniquity?—The realization that there is a time of reckoning coming. There are a lot of judges that you might be able to pay off, but I'll tell you one you can't—that's God Almighty. A lot of judges can be corrupted, a lot of bribes can be passed, but there is a Judgment Day that nobody is going to buy his way out of. They are not going to be able to come up with some slick lawyer and get pass that One. It won't work. 'The righteous and the wicked God will judge; for there is a time there for every purpose and for every work.' There is an accountability that is coming.

Verse 18, "I said in my heart, 'Concerning the estate of the sons of men, God tests them, that they may see that they themselves are like beasts.'" We are temporary.

Verses 19-22, "For what happens to the sons of men also happens to beasts; one thing befalls them: as one dies, so dies the other. Surely, they all have one breath; man has no advantage over beast, for all is vanity. All go to one place: all are from the dust, and all return to dust. Who knows the spirit of the sons of men, which goes upward, and the spirit of the beast, which goes down to the earth? So I perceived that there is nothing better than that a man should rejoice in his own works, for that is his heritage. For who can bring him to see what will happen after him?"

We are told right here that there's a cessation of consciousness after death. "As one dies, so does the other," and they all go to one place. In other words, we will return to the dust; we return to the ground.

Ecclesiastes 4:1, "Then I returned and considered all the oppression that is done under the sun: And look! The tears of the oppressed, but they have no comforter—on the side of their oppressors there was power, but they had no comforter." He looked at the injustice, inequity and the people that were cheated and taken advantage of. As he looked at so many of these things, he just despaired.

Verse 2, "Therefore I praised the dead who are already dead, more than the living that are still alive." This is terrible! You look and see these things.

Verse 4, "Again, I saw that for all toil and every skillful work a man is envied by his neighbor. This also is vanity and a grasping for the wind." The basic motivation for success is often envy and jealousy—somebody trying to get "one up" on his neighbor. He said, 'I considered this labor, this excelling in works.' So often, it's just a man's rivalry with his neighbor, and this is empty. Where does that lead? You're just in a rat race where you're just racing. The problem is, in a rat race, the rats win. This is the sort of thing we find in a society that has gotten its priorities distorted. One extreme is people who are just pursuing rivalry with their neighbor and always trying to get “one up” on their neighbor. This is vanity and striving after wind.

Now, there is another extreme.

Verse 5, “The fool folds his hands and consumes his own flesh.” He just sits there and doesn’t do anything. He just wastes away. That’s not a solution. That’s not a wise approach either. To be out pursuing success to the point that our whole life is consumed with trying to beat somebody else and being number one—that is vanity. And it’s foolish to sit on the sidelines and do nothing.

Verse 6, “Better is a handful with quietness than both the hands full, together with toil and grasping for the wind.” The balance is neither both hands full nor both hands empty. It is a balanced approach, “a handful with quietness.” You’re working and you’re productive, but you’re able to enjoy the fruits of your labor.

There are some people who pursue success and they never have a chance to enjoy the fruits of their labor. They keel over with a heart attack at age fifty or whatever it is. Somebody else has the fruits of their labor because they worked sixteen hours a day and never stopped to enjoy life. There is a balance. Yes, “whatever your hand finds to do, do it with all your might.” We will find that emphasized a little bit later. Yeah, sure, be productive, but don’t be in some race trying to beat everybody else, motivated by jealousy and envy. Nor sit on the sidelines and be lazy and do nothing. There is a balance.

Verses 7-8, “Then I returned, and saw vanity under the sun: There is one alone, without companion: he has neither son nor brother. Yet there is no end to all his labors, nor is his eye satisfied with riches. But he never asks, ‘For whom do I toil and deprive myself of good?’ This also is vanity and a grave misfortune.”

On the one hand, somebody is isolated. He labors by himself and pursues all these things but has no one to share it with.

Verses 9-11, “Two are better than one, because they have a good reward for their labor. For if they fall, one will lift up his companion. But woe to him who is alone when he falls, for he has no one to lift him up. Again, if two lie down together, they will keep warm; but how can one be warm alone?” There is the fact that two together are much better. If one falls, the other can help him up. That’s a beautiful description of the way a relationship should be between a husband and a wife. You find this description here and you might contrast it with one back in the book of Galatians, which I think gives a contrast in terms of what God intended a family relationship to be and what all too often it is.

Galatians 5:15, “But if you bite and devour one another, beware lest you be consumed by one another!” If you fight and devour one another, you will be consumed one of another. That is descriptive of situations that so often exist in families. People tear one another down; in tearing one another down, they are really tearing themselves down. In biting and devouring their mate, they are consuming themselves as well. That’s a very sad and tragic description that we find so often. It says, “Two are better than one. If they fall the one will lift up his fellow.” That’s the way it should be. When one is down, the other is there to help him up. We all have our times when we are down. That’s what is intended. Here is a description of two who are helping, encouraging and lifting up one another. It makes quite a contrast.

Ecclesiastes 4:12, “Though one may be overpowered by another, two can withstand him. And a threefold cord is not quickly broken.” This is a poetic description of the family. It describes the benefits of a united family. A threefold cord is not soon broken. This is a poetic description of not only the husband and wife but also the child that is the issue of the union.

Ecclesiastes 5:1, “Walk prudently when you go to the house of God; and draw near to hear rather than to give the sacrifice of fools, for they do not know that they do evil.” Guard your foot when you go to the house of God. Be more ready to listen, to hear, than to give the sacrifice of fools.

Verse 2, “Do not be rash with your mouth, and let not your heart utter anything hastily before God. For God is in heaven, and you upon earth; therefore let your words be few.”

Verses 4-6, “When you make a vow to God, do not delay to pay it; for He has no pleasure in fools; pay what you have vowed. It is better not to vow than to vow and not pay. Do not let your mouth cause your flesh to sin, nor say before the messenger of God that it was an error. Why should God be angry at your excuse and destroy the work of your hands?”

The point is that the sacrifice of fools has to do with rash promises made to God. The point is to not be rash with your mouth. It’s better to listen. When you come into the house of God, you come before God. It’s better to listen to what God has to say than it is to make all sorts of rash promises that you don’t keep. It is important. God takes seriously broken promises. The “sacrifice of fools” is a hasty promise or vow to God.

In Hebrew 13:15, there is a reference where it says, “Therefore by Him let us continually offer the sacrifice of praise to God, that is, the fruit of our lips, giving thanks to His name.” Our words, the sacrifice of praise, are likened to the sacrifices. Here there is a reference to hasty vows and promises to God that wind up not being fulfilled. God takes that seriously. When we make a vow, God expects us to keep our vows, to pay our vows. That’s one of the reasons marriage is so important and to be taken so seriously because marriage ultimately involves a vow before God. We speak of marriage vows. That’s not something to be taken lightly. The commitment we make at baptism is a vow and, again, should not be taken lightly. God takes these things seriously.

Verse 12, “The sleep of a laboring man is sweet, whether he eats little or much; but the abundance of the rich will not permit him to sleep.” That’s simply saying that when someone gets out and works hard, he is able to get a good night’s sleep. But someone whose whole intent is on trying to accumulate more, he is probably so worried about it that he can’t sleep. So again, Solomon focuses on these things.

Ecclesiastes 6:1, “There is an evil which I have seen under the sun, and it is common among men.” Here, he focuses on an individual working hard and accumulating wealth, yet he is never able to enjoy the fruits of his labor. That, again, is an evil and a tragedy that he focuses on.

We better pick up speed a little bit.

Ecclesiastes 7:1, “A good name is better than precious ointment, and the day of death than the day of one’s birth.” Why is the day of one’s death better than the day of one’s birth? Perhaps the best way to express it or to give a parallel verse is what Paul said in II Timothy.

II Timothy 4:7-8, “I have fought the good fight, I have finished the race, I have kept the faith. Finally, there is laid up for me the crown of righteousness, which the Lord, the righteous Judge, will give to me on that Day, and not to me only but also to all who have loved His appearing.”

In other words, Paul wrote at the end of his life and he says, “I have fought a good fight, I have finished the race and I know that there is laid up for me the crown of righteousness.” When a child is born, you don’t know what the future holds for them. You don’t know whether they will be wise or foolish, righteous or wicked, rich or poor or anything that will be about them. You know what you hope, desire and pray for, but there is a completion here.

In Ecclesiastes 7:2, Solomon talks about going to the house of mourning. In other words, it is good to contemplate on the temporary nature of life. There is a sobering aspect to realize that human life doesn’t go on forever. We had better order our lives in a way that takes into account that our lives are temporary and are going to end. We better live them in such a way that we are prepared.

We come down a little further.

Verses 16-17, “Do not be overly righteous, nor be overly wise; why should you destroy yourself? Do not be overly wicked; nor be foolish: why should you die before your time?” These are verses that some find difficult to understand. When he says, “Do not be overly righteous,” he is referring to an attitude of self-righteousness. The description is of an attitude, not a fact. There is no way you can be too righteous in the literal sense. Jesus Christ was perfect, but He was not righteous over much. The Pharisees were righteous over much. They were perfect in their own eyes. They were self-righteous. Jesus Christ was righteous. He was the law of God personified.

Psalms 119:172, “All Your commandments are righteousness.” Jesus Christ personified that. But He didn’t have the self-righteous attitude of the Pharisees. They had this attitude of looking down on others.

Ecclesiastes 8:6-8, “Because for every matter there is a time and judgment, though the misery of man increases greatly. For he does not know what will happen; so who can tell him when it will occur. No one has power over the spirit to retain the spirit, and no one has power in the day of death. There is no discharge in that war, and wickedness will not deliver those who are given to it.”

In ancient times, it was very possible for a person to buy himself out of serving in a war. Even up through the time of the American Civil War or War Between the States, it was possible in the North, when the draft was instituted, to hire someone to take your place. Many wealthy individuals hired someone to take their place in the war, and that was perfectly legal. There was a legal means of dodging the draft. If you were drafted, you just paid someone to take your place. That was eliminated after the Civil War, but that has been practiced in a lot of societies and still is in a lot of ways. We have just been subtler with it. You don’t just come out and ask, “What do you charge if I hire you to take my place?’ We are a little subtler with it now. That’s what is being “played on” here. When he says, “There is no discharge in that war,” he is speaking of death. No man has power over the spirit to retain his spirit in the day of death. You don’t buy your way out of that one. When the time comes for you to die, it doesn’t matter how rich you are, how poor you are, how righteous you are or how wicked you are. It doesn’t matter anything. You are going to die when the time comes for you to die. You can’t buy your way out of it. You can’t get out of it.

Verse 11, “Because the sentence against an evil work is not executed speedily, therefore the heart of the sons of men is fully set in them to do evil.” If you want an explanation as to why we have so much of an upsurge in crime, you might just study Ecclesiastes 8:11. It says, “Because the sentence against an evil work is not executed speedily....”

What was it? –A day or two ago, they executed some guy in Florida who had raped and murdered a teenager fifteen years earlier. I mean, it’s almost like rolling the dice when you commit a crime. Oh, sure, there are a handful of people who are executed, but none of them are executed speedily. Punishment is not executed speedily. Things drag on for years and it sort of loses its deterrent effect. It’s like shooting dice. Maybe you’ll get in trouble, but then maybe you’ll get out of it. It says, “Because sentence...is not speedily executed, the heart of the sons of men is fully set in them to do evil.” People figure they can get by with it. The carnal human nature sort of weighs the odds, and if they think they have a pretty good chance and can get by with it, if they think they can “beat it,” they do it.

Verses 12-13, “Though a sinner does evil a hundred times, and his days are prolonged, yet I surely know that it will be well with those who fear God, who fear before Him. But it will not be well with the wicked; nor will he prolong his days, which are as a shadow, because he does not fear before God.” He says you can look at it and think there are people who are getting by with it, but sooner or later there is a day of reckoning coming. There is a Day of Judgment.

Ecclesiastes 9:2, “Everything come alike to all....” This is referring to death.

Verse 5, “For the living know that they will die; but the dead know nothing, and they have no more reward, for the memory of them is forgotten.” Death is a cessation of consciousness.

Verse 10, “Whatsoever your hand finds to do, do it with your might; for there is no work, or device, or knowledge, or wisdom in the grave where you are going.” We should be wholehearted. We should do what we can and do it all the way. This is brought out here in this verse.

Verses 11-12, “I returned and saw under the sun that—The race is not to the swift, nor the battle to the strong, nor bread to the wise, nor riches to men of understanding, nor yet favor to men of skill; but time and chance happen to them all. For man also does not know his time: like fish taken in a cruel net, like birds caught in a snare, so the sons of men are snared in an evil time, when it falls suddenly upon them.”

The point here is the fact that no matter what you do by way of preparation, you cannot totally guarantee the results. Things happen. Sometimes time and chance happen. It’s sort of like a bird being caught in a snare or fishes snared in a net. Sometimes things happen and you are in the wrong place at the wrong time.

I don’t think the truck driver in Los Angeles was beaten up because he was the most wicked truck driver in all of Los Angeles. God didn’t look down and say He was going to teach this guy a lesson because he was the wickedest person in Los Angeles. I don’t know anything about him, but I don’t think he was singled out for some special divine wrath. He was in the wrong place at the wrong time. He had probably driven through there any number of times before. I don’t know whether he will again or not, but other truck drivers will. The point is that time and chance happen to all men. Sometimes a person may just simply be in the wrong place at the wrong time. Things happen, like a bird caught in a snare.

That’s not saying you shouldn’t do or prepare for anything. It says, “The race is not to the swift.” That doesn’t mean to sit down and you’ll be the guy who wins. It just means that no matter what you do, there are factors that are beyond our control. Man is limited. You can do all that you can do, but there are still factors that are beyond our control. We have to understand that. We prepare and try to use wisdom. We try to be careful and be safe. We try to do the things that we should do and be responsible persons. But we realize that those things cannot guarantee success. There is something on beyond that, and that’s God’s blessing and protection. Sometimes time and chance can happen to anyone. You’re just in the wrong place at the wrong time. He brings that out here.

Ecclesiastes 10:1, “Dead flies putrefy the perfumer’s ointment, and cause it to give off a foul odor; so does a little folly to one respected for wisdom and honor.” Something dies and decays; it can spoil some beautiful oil or perfume. Something crawls up in there and dies and sort of spoils it. The same thing is true—a little bit of folly can ruin a reputation for someone who has a good reputation. One dumb stunt and it can really mess them up.

Verses 5-6, “There is an evil I have seen under the sun, as an error proceeding from a ruler: Folly is set in great dignity [exalted positions], while the rich sit in lowly place.” This goes back to the rulers—individuals who are incompetent and untrustworthy are being put in positions of responsibility. This is a tragic thing. Things get turned upside down. People that should be at the bottom, wind up at the top; some that should be at the top, wind up at the bottom. This is an evil that I see. One of the problems of human government is that human beings get “taken in” by other human beings. They get flattered and appealed to in various ways and are impressed by the wrong things.

If God had allowed Samuel to pick the king, he would have picked Jesse’s oldest son. You remember when God sent Samuel to anoint one of Jesse’s sons king over Israel (I Samuel 16)? He brought in the oldest son. When Samuel saw him, immediately he knew this must be the one. ‘He’s the one. I’ll make him king right now.’ He was impressed with him. They ran through the list of sons and then, finally, they brought in David who was sort of the runt of the litter. His father hadn’t even bothered to bring him in from the field. That was the one God chose.

I Samuel 16:7, “But the Lord said to Samuel, ‘Do not look at his appearance or at the height of his stature... For the Lord does not see as man sees; for man looks at the outward appearance, but the Lord looks at the heart.’” Things that impress people are not the things that impress God. That’s one of the reasons we find folly set in exalted positions. Too many times people are impressed with the wrong things. In the Kingdom of God, that will not be the problem. The right people will be in the right places. Nobody’s going to “pull one over” on God.

Ecclesiastes 11:1, “Cast your bread upon the waters, for you will find it after many days.” In other words, this is simply another way of saying that eventually you are going to reap what you sow. What you send out is eventually what you are going to get back. It’s a matter of life that things have a way of coming back at us.

Verse 4, “He who observes the wind shall not sow, and he who regards the clouds shall not reap.” There is such a thing as being overly cautious. You can be so worried about something going wrong that it holds you back. ‘No, better not plant today. I think it is a little too windy to scatter the seed.’ The time to plant will pass you by. Or you look and say, ‘There are clouds up there. It might rain. I better not get to harvesting.’ Yes, we need to use wisdom. If it’s about ready to pour down raining, that’s not the time that you want to get out and cut your hay. But there is such a thing as being overly cautious. That’s an extreme that is warned about. Verses 9-10, “Rejoice, O young man, in your youth, and let your heart cheer you in the days of your youth; walk in the ways of your heart, and in the sight of your eyes; but know that for all these God will bring you into judgment. Therefore remove sorrow [vexation] from your heart, and put away evil from your flesh, for childhood and youth are vanity.” They are temporary. They are passing. They are transitory. They are like a breath.

When you are young, it’s hard to believe that your young years pass that quickly. But it does. Just ask someone who is even a few years older than you how quickly those high school years go by—how quickly some of those times go by. That’s what it is saying here. Rejoice in youth. Have a good time but understand that you are accountable for what you know. You are responsible for what you know, whether you are young or old.

“...remove sorrow from your heart and put away evil from your flesh.” Childhood and youth are temporary. They are going to pass. Don’t get into something that is going to foul up your life. That’s what it is saying. Don’t do something dumb that you are going to have to live with the consequences for the rest of your life. Those young years are here today and gone so, so quickly. They are gone. There are some things you can do that you have to live with the consequences. It says rejoice in your youth.

Ecclesiastes 12:1, “Remember now your Creator in the days of your youth...” The time to think about God is not when you are old. The time to start thinking about God is when you are young, when you have your life before you. You see, there’s nothing God tells you to do that’s going to hurt you and mess you up. There’s nothing God tells you to do that’s going to be to your detriment. There’s nothing God tells you not to do that you are going to be better off having done. So, think about God when you are young. That’s the time to start being mindful of God and His ways.

Verses 2, 3, 4, 5 and 6 are a very poetic description of old age. You might look it up in various translations. It is a very poetic description of old age. It is, of course, a poetic book and describes it that way.

Verses 7-12, “Then the dust will return to the earth as it was, and the spirit will return to God who gave it. ‘Vanity of vanities,’ says the Preacher [JPS, “Kohleth”]; ‘all is vanity.’ And moreover, because the Preacher [Kohleth] was wise, he still taught the people knowledge; yes, he pondered and sought out and set in order many proverbs. The Preacher [Kohleth] sought to find acceptable words; and what was written was upright—words of truth. The words of the wise are like goads, and the words of scholars are like well-driven nails, given by one Shepherd. And furthermore, my son, be admonished by these. Of making many books there is no end, and much study is a weariness to the flesh.”

You can pursue all sorts of learning and books. There are thousands and millions of books, books that deal with all sorts of things as to the key to getting ahead in life.

But the real conclusion of the whole matter is in v. 13, “Let us hear the conclusion of the whole matter: Fear God and keep His commandments, for this is the whole duty of man.” The word “duty” is in italics (KJV), which means the translators put it in thinking it clarified it. But really, just as it is written is the simplest thing. “...fear God and keep His commandments, for this is the whole man.” This is what life is all about.

Verse 14, “For God will bring every work into judgment, including every secret thing, whether it is good or whether it be evil.” The best way is ultimately God’s way. This is the only way that leads to real fulfillment. As you look at life and you pursue any of the things that physical life holds out, if that’s all there is, there’s a sense of emptiness and futility. There are injustices, inequities and all sorts of things that lead to frustration. The answer is that there is something that lies beyond the right here and right now, the purely human and purely physical.

God’s way is the way that leads to the ultimate and greatest sense of satisfaction and fulfillment. That is the only way that any of us can really be satisfied, happy and productive in life in the long run.

The book of Ecclesiastes has an awful lot that is a source of wisdom. It is a source of a perspective on life and one that can be of aid and benefit to all of us. And certainly it ties in with the Feast of Tabernacles. The Feast of Tabernacles is the Feast of Temporary Dwellings—the realization that there is something beyond the physical, something beyond even the physical things and blessings that will be poured out during the reign of Jesus Christ on the earth.

The book of Ecclesiastes is the fourth of the five Festival Scrolls.

Next Bible study we will go through the book of Esther, which is the fifth and final of the five Festival Scrolls.

The Writings Series—Esther

This evening we are here at Esther, the fifth and final book of this five-book section called the Megillot. The Megillot is that five-book section called the Festival Scrolls by the Jews. Of course, it was a portion of the Writings section. Traditionally, the Old Testament was divided as The Law, The Prophets, and The Psalms (Writings)—the three traditional divisions of the Old Testament as preserved by the Jews.

Jesus Himself referred to that in the book of Luke where He made reference to what constituted the Old Testament.

Luke 24:44-45, “Then He said to them, ‘These are the words which I spoke to you while I was still with you, that all things must be fulfilled which were written in the Law of Moses and the Prophets and the Psalms concerning Me.’ And He opened their understanding, that they might comprehend the Scripture.”

Jesus clearly defined the Scriptures of the Old Testament as consisting of the Law, the Prophets and the Writings, or Psalms as it is sometimes termed. This means there isn’t any room for the apocryphal books. Jesus Christ defined the Scriptures for us here. We know they consist of the three traditional divisions preserved by the Jews since antiquity.

The first five books of the Bible are called the Book of the Law. The final of these three sections—the section of Psalms or the Writings—consisted of the book of Psalms, Proverbs, Job, then the five Festival Scrolls which we have been going through—Song of Solomon, Ruth, Lamentations, Ecclesiastes and now this evening, Esther. The remaining portion of the Writings (the Psalms division), were the book of Daniel, Ezra, Nehemiah and Chronicles.

We covered Ezra, Nehemiah and Chronicles in a little greater depth when we went through the historical books of the Old Testament. Since we are taking this section (the Writings) as the Jews preserved it, we will have one Bible study to include those so we can wrap it up. We will cover Esther this evening. Esther is the final of the five Festival Scrolls. Then we will cover the book of Daniel next couple of Bible studies.

The book of Esther is the fifth of the five Festival Scrolls. They are called Festival Scrolls because traditionally they were read at festival periods. Song of Solomon was read on the Sabbath during the Days of Unleavened Bread; Ruth was read on Pentecost. Lamentations was read on a national day of fasting called the Fast of Ab on the ninth day of the fifth month. It commemorates the destruction of the temple. Ecclesiastes was read on the Sabbath during the Feast of Tabernacles. Esther was read on another national day called Purim. We will understand about Purim this evening because we will notice it as we read through this book.

The setting of the book of Esther is during the captivity of the Jews during the Persian period. If you remember, the kingdom was united. They had their first king with King Saul. He was replaced with David, a man after God’s own heart (I Samuel 13:14). Under David and his son Solomon, the kingdom of Israel and Judah was united. At Solomon’s death the kingdom split. The northern ten tribes elected their own king, Jeroboam the son of Nebat, while the southern kingdom of Judah (with its capital at Jerusalem) clung to its loyalty to the house of David in the person of Solomon’s son, Rehoboam. These two nations (the two kingdoms) continued down over the course of the next two hundred years.

About two hundred years later (around 721-718 B.C.), the Assyrians invaded and carried the northern kingdom captive. The southern kingdom continued on for over a hundred years. It was later on, beginning in 604 B.C., almost one hundred twenty years later that Nebuchadnezzar of Babylon (another king/another kingdom) invaded the southern kingdom of Judah and began the process of captivity that culminated in 587 B.C. with the destruction of the temple. The Jews were forcibly removed from Jerusalem and Judea to Babylon, and the area of Judea laid waste.

Almost fifty years later, as we will read the story in Daniel, the Medes and the Persians entered into Babylon and overthrew the Babylonians; they possessed the kingdom. The Jews continued in captivity, first under the rule of the Babylonians and now under the rule of the Persians. Several years later, beginning about 535 B.C., the Persian king issued a decree that allowed the Jews to begin to return to Jerusalem under Zerrubabel.

We have the story of Ezra and Nehemiah and the return of some of the Jews back to Judea and Jerusalem to rebuild the city and the temple. A very sizable percentage of the Jews remained in the areas where the Babylonians transported them. They remained in the area of Babylon, but they were now under the rule of the Persians.

The book of Esther is set during this Persian period. It is set during the reign of the king that is known in classical history as Xerxes. He is called Ahasuerus in the book of Esther. That is the term by which he is called here.

This is in the latter part of the fifth century B.C. This would be approximately contemporary with the story of Ezra and Nehemiah. The story of Ezra and Nehemiah tells what was happening to the Jewish community in Judea. The book of Esther tells what was happening around the same time to the Jewish community in Babylon and in the areas of Persia where, actually, more Jews lived than in Judea. This provides the setting.

It tells the story of the attempted destruction of the nation of the Jews by their traditional enemies. We find that the one who was the instigator of this destruction was a man known as Haman the Agagite. If you will look it up, you will find that Agag was an ancient king of the Amalekites. In fact, there is sort of an interesting point about it that we will notice as we go through. Haman was responsible for stirring up an attempt to destroy the Jews.

This book is, as I mentioned, traditionally read on the Feast of Purim, which is a national holiday authorized in the book of Esther. It is similar to our Thanksgiving Day.

Esther is unique in the Bible in that it is the only book in the Bible that does not mention the name of God. God's name does not appear in this particular book. It is the only book that way. Now, certainly, in the story of the book, the intervention of God to deliver His people is very evident. The divine name is omitted for a very important reason. It is omitted so there is no confusion over the fact that Purim, which is established as a holiday in the conclusion of the book, is not a Holy Day proclaimed by God. It is a national holiday authorized by the Jewish community, but not in any way is it to be confused with a Holy Day given sanctity by God.

The king, as I mentioned, is identified as King Xerxes who reigned from 485-464 B.C. The story in the book, beginning with Esther 2:16, tells the story of what happened after the disastrous Greek campaign that Xerxes carried out from 480-479 B.C. Xerxes took an army of one million men, which was the largest army assembled in ancient times, and he set out to conquer Greece.

He was going to cross the area called the Hellespont, that area that divides Asia from Europe. If you look at a map, you'll see how Asia Minor (modern-day Turkey) comes out and is divided from the Greek peninsula. The Black Sea is up above; the Mediterranean is down below. The area called the Dardanelle (that strait of water that connects the Black Sea to the Mediterranean) divides the Turkish peninsula (the Asia Minor peninsula) from Greece and the European mainland. Xerxes took this gigantic army and came to the area called the Hellespont, which was the area that was the closest distance across. He was going to march this gigantic army across into Greece and was going to teach the Greeks a lesson. It turned out to be one of the greatest debacles that occurred.

Xerxes was the kind of fellow that you could never tell him anything. Maybe you've known one or two people like that in your lifetime. You can't tell them anything. Xerxes was sort of that way. He had the idea that what he was going to do was take boats and latch these boats together to make one giant pontoon bridge over which he was going to march his army. Well, that seemed like a good idea, except that when he put the things together, a storm came up. The boats crashed against each other and a number of them sunk. They had a big fiasco and couldn't get the troops across. It was not nearly as he had anticipated.

It gives you an idea as to what a perfectly sane and balanced individual he was. His response was that he was going to punish the sea by giving it a hundred lashes. He lined up soldiers with whips to whip the sea. That would really inspire confidence. You see a "crackpot" like this and realize he is in charge. It really inspires confidence. Needless to say, he never successfully got very far into Greece.

He was the father of the King Artaxerxes who is mentioned in Ezra 7:1; he is the one who issued the decree that allowed for the rebuilding of Jerusalem and the walls of Jerusalem. Xerxes is shown in secular history by the Greek historian Herodotus, as well as the Biblical account in the book of Esther. He is shown as a very vain and capricious monarch, and he was anything but an ideal husband.

In this book, we are going to take note that God sometimes allows His servants to find themselves in very disagreeable circumstances. If He chooses not to deliver them out of it, He will give them the help to endure it. Many times He uses those circumstances to accomplish His own purpose.

We pick up the story in Esther. According to tradition, Esther was written by Mordecai, the older cousin of Esther.

Esther 1:1, “Now it came to pass in the days of Ahasuerus [referring to Xerxes] (this was the Ahasuerus who reigned from India to Ethiopia, over one hundred twenty seven provinces).” He reigned over a tremendous empire.

Verses 2-3, “in those days when King Ahasuerus sat on the throne of his kingdom, which was in Shushan the citadel, that in the third year of his reign he made a feast for all his officials and servants—the powers of Persia and Media, the nobles, and the princes of the provinces being before him—” Everybody was there.

Verse 4, “when he showed the riches of his glorious kingdom and the splendor of his excellent majesty for many days, one hundred and eighty days in all.”

They had this big “blowout.” It lasted one hundred and eighty days. Now, if you think you’ve been to a party, Xerxes really knew how to throw a party.

Verse 5, “And when these days were completed, the king made a feast lasting seven days for all the people who were present in Shushan the citadel, from great to small, in the court of the garden of the king’s palace.” This was the finale.

Verse 6, “There were white and blue linen curtains fastened with cords of fine linen and purple on silver rods and marble pillars; and the couches were of gold and silver on a mosaic pavement of alabaster, turquoise, and white and black marble.” It was really decked out.

Verse 7, “And they served drinks in golden vessels, each vessel being different from the other with royal wine in abundance, according to the generosity of the king.” To give you an idea, I would like to call your attention to one thing.

Verse 3 says, “...in the third year of his reign he made a feast to all his officials and servants...” The Jewish commentary brings out that the literal translation of the Hebrew word “feast” would be “a drinking.” The accent was more on the drinking than on the eating. I’m sure they had plenty of food, but what they really had was plenty of booze. So, they had “a drinking.” He knew how to have a real party. It doesn’t say if he had any crawfish or not, but he very well might have. He had plenty of other stuff.

Verse 8, “In accordance with the law, the drinking was not compulsory; for so the king had ordered all the officers of his household, that they should do according to each man’s pleasure.” They weren’t drinking toasts. They were just quaffing it down as quickly as they could. It was sort of “name your poison.” You could have whatever you wanted, and they kept giving it to you.

Verses 10-11, “On the seventh day, when the heart of the king was merry with wine...” You can believe it. Here, this is a seven-day drunk. His heart is merry with wine. He’s really loaded, and so are all his buddies. They have really been “tying one on” for a while.

Continuing, “...he commanded...seven eunuchs who served in the presence of King Ahasuerus, to bring Vashti the Queen before the king wearing her royal crown, in order to show her beauty to the people and the officials, for she was beautiful to behold.”

Verse 12, “But Queen Vashti refused to come at the king’s command...therefore the king was furious, and his anger burned within him.” Some commentators say that the sense of the words “to bring Vashti the Queen before the king wearing her crown royal” meant that was all she was going to have on. He was going to make a great display out of her. I don’t know whether that was the case or not. The point was that he wanted her to come and she didn’t want to come. Evidently, they both had enough to drink that the results were not good. She wouldn’t come and he was mad.

Verse 13, “Then the king said to the wise men...”

Verse 14, it lists all of them.

Verse 15, “What shall we do to Queen Vashti, according to law, because she did not obey the command of King Ahasuerus...?” He said, ‘She has not done what I told her to do.’

You have to get the picture. He and his buddies have been “boozing it up” for the last week. You can imagine the state they are in. He calls for the queen; she will not come because she is in the other court with all the women and they have been “boozing it up,” too (v. 9). She will not come. They have a real setto here. He wants her to come and she will not. So, he gets his buddies around and he asks them, ‘What do you think we should do?’

They say, v. 16, “...‘Queen Vashti has not only wronged the king, but also all the princes, and all the people who are in all the provinces of King Ahasuerus.’” They say, ‘She’s done wrong, not only to you King, but to all the rest of us.’ You can just see them all nodding their heads, “Yes.” They are agreeing to that. They’ll drink to that.

Verse 17, “For the queen’s behavior will become known to all women, so that they will despise their husbands in their eyes, when they report, “King Ahasuerus commanded Queen Vashti to be brought in before him, but she did not come.”” They say that if word of this becomes known, all women are going to start ignoring what their husbands tell them to do. They are going to say, ‘The king commanded the queen to come and she wouldn’t do it; so, we don’t have to do what you say either.’

They say, ‘What you need to do is to put forth a royal commandment.’

Verses 19-21, “‘If it pleases the king, let a royal decree go out from him, and let it be recorded in the laws of the Persians and the Medes, so that it will not be altered, that Vashti shall come no more before king Ahasuerus; and let the king give her royal position to another who is better than she. When the king’s decree which he shall make is proclaimed throughout all his empire (for it is great), all wives will honor their husbands, both great and small.’ And the reply pleased the king....” He thought that sounded like a good idea; that would show her.

Verse 22, “Then he sent letters to all the king’s provinces—that each man should be master in his own house....” They were really going to tell it like it is.

You have to sort of get the picture in your mind. This guy is all “boozed up.” He’s sitting in the bar complaining about the way his wife treated him. He asks his buddies (who have been drinking along with him) what he should do about it. That’s sort of the picture of it. You can imagine the way this thing comes out. The only thing is that this is the king.

Now the Medes and the Persians had a particular law because they worshipped the king as god incarnate. Since one of the things about God is that God doesn’t make mistakes, the law of the Medes and the Persians could never be reversed. You could never change the law. It was permanent. If you changed or repealed the law, you were admitting that the previous law had been a mistake. Now if the king doesn’t make mistakes, how can you change, repeal or replace the law with something else. You couldn’t do that because then you are saying that the king made a mistake. And since the king never makes a mistake, the law of the Medes and the Persians meant that something was never changed.

You get the idea? If you have ever met somebody that was never wrong and you never could tell him anything—meet Xerxes. We are introduced to him, and the first thing we see is that the guy clearly has some problems. He, evidently, has a drinking problem and that seems to have played a big role here. Another thing that we find is that he is an individual who wants what he wants. When he has been drinking for a while, well, that is going to make that situation even worse.

Esther 2:1, “After these things, when the wrath of King Ahasuerus subsided, he remembered Vashti, and what she had done, and what had been decreed against her.” Now he’s feeling badly about it, as so often happens. A guy gets drunk; he really sounds off and does all this stuff. Afterwards he starts feeling remorse. Here, he is missing Vashti. He liked Vashti and he was missing her. Well, you can imagine; the guys that had advised him to get rid of her began to get a little nervous about this time. They are thinking that he is going to lie around here and mope around. He will start missing her. He is going to look for somebody to blame, and they are the guys who are going to be in trouble. He is going to say that they talked him into it. It’s their fault—“Off with your heads!” They could see “the handwriting on the wall.” So, they said they had a good idea.

Verse 2, “Then the king’s servants who attended him said: ‘Let beautiful young virgins be sought for the king.’” They said, ‘Let’s have a beauty contest. Let’s pick out the prettiest girl in the whole empire and give her to you for a new queen.’ Well, the king could see some merit to that idea. He thought maybe that wasn’t too bad an idea.

Verses 3-4, “‘and let the king appoint officers in all the provinces of his kingdom, that they may gather all the beautiful young virgins to Shushan the citadel, into the women’s quarters... Then let the young woman who pleases the king be queen instead of Vashti.’ This thing pleased the king, and he did so.” He said, ‘That’s a good idea.’ They were trying to come up with a good idea to keep the king’s mind off of something else.

We are introduced to a little bit of background. As we go on, we are introduced to something else that is going on in Shushan, which was the capital of the Persian Empire.

Verses 5-7, “Now in Shushan the citadel there was a certain Jew whose name was Mordecai the son of Jair, the son of Shimel, the son of Kish, a Benjamite. Now Kish had been carried away from Jerusalem with the captives who had been captured with Jeconiah king of Judah, whom Nebuchadnezzar the king of Babylon had carried away. And Mordecai had brought up Hadassah, that is Esther, his uncle’s daughter [his first cousin], for she had neither father nor mother. [She was evidently considerably younger than he, so he had brought her up. She was an orphan and he had brought her up, taking care of her.] The young woman was lovely and beautiful. When her father and mother died, Mordecai took her as his own daughter.”

Verse 8, "So it was, when the king's command and decree were heard, and when many young women were gathered at Shushan...Esther also was taken to the king's palace...."

Now, let's look at something here for a moment. Can you imagine what Esther must have felt like? The soldiers showed up, knocked at the door and said, 'You are coming with us.' Can you imagine what Mordecai must have felt like? Obviously, this was not the kind of marriage that Mordecai had ever had in mind for Esther when she was growing up. Certainly, it was not the kind of marriage that Esther had ever had in mind for herself. This must have seemed like a horrible, terrible calamity. How could God allow something like this to happen? That's the question that goes through our minds when things happen that just don't seem like it should be that way.

There are a couple lessons that are important that we learn from this book. Sometimes God allows things to happen to His people. He allows circumstances to occur that you and I would say, 'Well, that's not good. Why would this happen?' God doesn't guarantee that we go through life with no bumps, hurts, cuts and scrapes. There isn't any guarantee that sometimes we won't find ourselves in difficult and adverse circumstances. This certainly happened to Esther.

The other thing is that God can work in circumstances that look horrible and impossible, where it looks as though, 'What good can come of this?' God can work in circumstances and accomplish His own purpose in ways that you and I could never imagine. We can't second-guess God.

God worked in the circumstance. God used circumstances.

Verse 8, continuing, "...Esther also was taken to the king's palace, into the care of Hegai [the eunuch] the custodian of the women."

Verse 9, "Now the young woman pleased him [he was very impressed with her], and she obtained his favor; so he readily gave beauty preparations to her, besides her allowance. The seven choice maidservants were provided for her from the king's palace, and he moved her and her maidservants to the best place in the house of the women."

I'll read the commentary on v. 9. "He speedily gave her portions as a mark of favor. He lost no time in beginning the necessary preparations. 'Portions' were not cosmetics but rather special foods that were part of the preparation. The Hebrew word is the same as that for 'portions' of food in chapter 9:19-22. Each candidate had the right to be given seven women attendants. Esther was given maidens suitable to her exceptional charm."

Verse 9, "...he moved her and her maidservants to the best place in the house of the women."

Verse 10, "Esther had not revealed her people or kindred, for Mordecai had charged her not to reveal it." He was concerned about her. He knew that there was a lot of animosity directed at the Jews and he had counseled her that she should not let it be known ahead of time as to whom she was.

Verse 11, "And every day Mordecai paced in front of the court of the women's quarters, to learn of Esther's welfare and what was happening to her." He was worried. He was concerned. Every day he would come and try to get news.

Verses 12-13, "Each young woman's turn came to go in to King Ahasuerus after she had completed twelve months' preparation, according to the regulations for the women, for thus were the days of their preparation apportioned: six months with oil of myrrh, and six months with perfumes and preparations for beautiful women. Thus prepared, each young woman went to the king, and she was given whatever she desired to take with her from the women's quarters to the king's palace."

She could pick out whatever she wanted to wear.

Verse 14, "In the evening she went, and in the morning she returned to the second house of the women, to the custody of Shaashgaz, the king's eunuch who kept the concubines. She would not go in to the king again unless the king delighted in her and called for her by name."

They were waiting their turn.

Verse 15, "Now when the turn of Esther the daughter of Abihail the uncle of Mordecai who had taken her as his daughter [Mordecai had raised her.] to go in to the king, she requested nothing but what Hegai the king's eunuch, the custodian of the women, advised. And Esther obtained favor in the sight of all who saw her."

Instead of relying on her own judgment to pick out what to wear, she asked the king's eunuch who was in charge, what he thought would be the most appropriate. He picked out for her what was appropriate.

Verse 16, "So Esther was taken to king Ahasuerus, into his royal palace, in the tenth month, which is the month Tebeth, in the seventh year of his reign." This was right after the great debacle in Greece. After he had the original fiasco with Vashti, he went on a great military campaign, and that was a fiasco. So, it was decided the best thing to do was to keep the king out of the battlefield. They didn't need his strategy on the battlefield. What they needed to do was occupy him in the harem—keep him busy there and let the rest of them run the country. This was sort of the solution. He consoled himself with Esther. He was attracted to Esther.

Verses 17-18, "The king loved Esther more than all the other women, and she obtained grace and favor in his sight more than all the virgins; so he set the royal crown upon her head and made her queen instead of Vashti. Then the king made a great feast, the Feast of Esther, for all his officials and servants; and he proclaimed a holiday in the provinces and gave gifts according to the generosity of a king."

Verse 20, "Now Esther had not yet revealed her kindred and her people, just as Mordecai had charged her, for Esther obeyed the command of Mordecai as when she was brought up by him." She listened to his advice.

Verse 21, "In those days, while Mordecai sat within the king's gate..." He was sitting there by the palace. Mordecai spent time every day at the gate of the king's palace waiting for word of Esther. He just very much desired to find out what was going on and what was happening to her.

Continuing, "...two of the king's eunuchs, Bigthan and Teresh, doorkeepers, became furious and sought to lay hands on King Ahasuerus." He overheard two of the king's chamberlains who were mad and were plotting to murder the king.

Verse 22, "So the matter became known to Mordecai, who told Queen Esther, and Esther informed the king in Mordecai's name." When he knew it, he got word to Esther, and Esther got word to the king in Mordecai's name.

Verse 23, "And when an inquiry [investigation] was made into the matter, it was confirmed, and both were hanged on a gallows; and it was written in the book of the chronicles in the presence of the king."

Esther 3:1-2, "After these things King Ahasuerus promoted Haman, the son of Hammedatha the Agagite, and advanced him and set his seat above the princes who were with him. And all the king's servants, that were in the king's gate, bowed down, and prostrated themselves before Haman; for the king had so commanded concerning him. But Mordecai bowed not down, nor prostrated himself before him."

Agag was the king of the Amalekites. If you read the story back in I Samuel 15:3-9, Saul was supposed to destroy the Amalekites, and if you remember, he spared Agag and his family. You know, "Old sins cast long shadows." If you don't do what God says, things can come back to haunt you. Saul didn't see what difference it made. He was going to do some of what God said and also some other things. There wouldn't have been any Agagites if Saul had done what God had told him to way back in the time of the prophet Samuel. But as so many times, people want to improve on God's instructions. God says something; since they don't see what difference it makes, they want to do it some other way.

Well, here was Haman the Agagite. He was parading by and everybody was bowing down, "licking the dust." Mordecai didn't do that. He didn't bow down or prostrate himself. Evidently, Haman claimed divine honors for himself. He was a religious as well as a political leader. He was the great Pontifex Maximus of the Babylonian mystery religion, and everyone was doing him obeisance. Mordecai wouldn't bow down.

Verse 3, "Then the king's servants who were within the king's gate said to Mordecai, 'Why do you transgress the king's command?'" 'Why don't you do this?'

Verse 4, "Now it happened, when they spoke to him daily and he would not listen to them, that they told it to Haman, to see whether Mordecai's words would stand; for Mordecai had told them that he was a Jew." They kept telling him, 'You better bow down.' He wouldn't listen. So, one of them eventually decided to point out to Haman that Mordecai the Jew wasn't bowing down.

Verse 5, "When Haman saw that Mordecai did not bow or pay him homage, Haman was filled with wrath." Oh, it just ruined his whole day—the fact that this guy wouldn't bow down in the dust. It made him so mad.

Verse 6, "But he disdained to lay hands on Mordecai alone, for they had told him of the people of Mordecai. Instead, Haman sought to destroy all the Jews who were throughout the whole kingdom of Ahasuerus—the people of Mordecai." He figured Mordecai, by himself, wasn't worth the trouble it would take. So, he decided what he was going to do. He would destroy all the Jews. He didn't like Jews anyway. It would be a good excuse. He would just destroy all the Jews.

Verse 7, "In the first month, which is the month Nisan, in the twelfth year of King Ahasuerus, they cast Pur (that is, the lot), before Haman to determine the day and the month, until it fell on the twelfth month, which is the month Adar.”

In Hebrew, the “im” ending in Purim is plural. “Pur” is the singular. They didn’t shoot dice; they rolled a dice—one. Basically, they rolled this lot before Haman from day to day, from month to month, to pick out the lucky day and the lucky month. They came up with a month (the twelfth month); then they came up with a day that was going to be the good time or the auspicious time.

Verses 8-10, “Then Haman said to King Ahasuerus, ‘There is a certain people scattered and dispersed among the people in all the provinces of your kingdom; their laws are different from all other people’s, and they do not keep the king’s laws. Therefore it is not fitting for the king to let them remain. If it pleases the king, let a decree be written that they be destroyed, and I will pay ten thousand talents of silver into the hands of those who do the work, to bring it into the king’s treasuries.’ So the king took his signet ring from his hand and gave it to Haman, the son of Hammedatha the Agagite, enemy of the Jews.”

The king said, ‘You keep your silver. You want to do this, just go ahead.’

The ring contained the signet seal. This was the mark of authenticity. Even today, if you get ready to promulgate an official document, it often has to be notarized. The notary seals it. He puts that stamp on there. The notary seal is that mark of genuineness or authenticity. The king had a special signet ring, and there was only one like it. It was the means by which authenticity of a decree was established. A decree was written, hot wax was put on it, and the king’s ring was pressed into it. This was the seal of genuineness. Here, the king took off the ring and gave it to Haman and said, ‘Write a decree and do it.’ You get the idea the king was a very capricious sort of fellow. If he liked you, he pretty well gave you carte blanche to do what you wanted. If he didn’t like you, he would cut off your head. We will see that a little later, too.

Verse 12, “Then the king’s scribes were called on the thirteenth day of the first month, and a decree was written according to all that Haman commanded...In the name of King Ahasuerus it was written, [They wrote a letter.] and sealed with the king’s signet ring.”

Verse 13, “And letters were sent by couriers into all the king’s provinces, to destroy, to kill, and to annihilate all the Jews, both young and old, little children and women [that should pretty well take in everything], in one day, on the thirteenth day of the twelfth month, which is the month Adar, and to plunder their possessions.”

Verse 14, “The copy of the document was to be issued as law in every province, being published for all people, that they should be ready for that day.”

We are told in the end of v. 15, “...So the king and Haman sat down to drink, [This was one of the king’s favorite pastimes. He figured this was something that deserved a good drink.] but the city of Shushan was perplexed.” It was a mystery to them how some crazy thing like this comes out.

Esther 4:1, “When Mordecai learned all that had happened, he tore his clothes and put on sackcloth...” He was ready to fast, pray and mourn.

Verses 2-5, “He went as far as the square in front of the king’s gate, for no one might enter the king’s gate clothed with sackcloth. And in every province where the king’s command and decree arrived, there was great mourning among the Jews, with fasting, weeping, and wailing; and many lay in sackcloth and ashes. So Esther’s maids and eunuchs came and told her, and the queen was deeply distressed. Then she sent garments to clothe Mordecai and take his sackcloth away from him, but he would not accept them. Then Esther called Hathach, one of the king’s eunuchs whom he had appointed to attend her, and she gave him a command concerning Mordecai, to learn what and why this was.”

She wanted to find out what was going on. She didn’t know.

Verses 6-8, “So Hathach went out to Mordecai in the city square that was in front of the king’s gate. And Mordecai told him all that had happened to him, and the sum of money that Haman had promised to pay into the king’s treasuries to destroy the Jews. He also gave him a copy of the written decree for their destruction, which was given at Shushan, that he might show it to Esther and explain it to her, and that he might command her to go in to the king to make supplication to him and plead before him for her people.”

Word was brought back to Esther and she then sent a message to Mordecai.

Verses 10-11, “Then Esther spoke to Hathach, and gave him a command for Mordecai: ‘All the king’s servants and the people of the king’s provinces know that any man or woman who goes into the inner court to the king, who has not been called, he has but one law: put all to death, except the one to whom the king holds out the golden scepter, that he may live. Yet I myself have not been called to go in to the king these thirty days.” It’s been a month since she had seen him.

Now imagine living with a man given to such fits of temper and rage. You never know what mood you are going to find him in. If you walk in unbidden, he’ll chop your head off. Sometimes we make the statement of someone, ‘Boy, he really bit my head off.’ Well, we don’t mean it literally; we mean it figuratively. Esther meant it literally. She said, ‘He has a guard posted, and if I walk in there, the guard’s job is to cut off the head of anybody that walks in unless the king specifically says not to. I don’t know what kind of mood this guy’s in. I haven’t seen him for a month.’

You kind of get the idea that we don’t have the ideal marriage described here. That’s a little bit of an understatement. Esther was not in a really enviable situation. Yes, she was the queen and yes, she had great comfort, money and luxury available to her. But what she never experienced in this life was a close, happy marriage with a husband that she could completely trust and with whom she could really share her life—though he, evidently, had a regard for Esther. That was remarkable, but he was not the kind of individual who was ever going to make a very outstanding husband.

She was concerned. She didn’t want to go to the king. She sent word back to Mordecai and said she couldn’t do that. Mordecai then sent an answer back to her.

Verse 13, “Then Mordecai told them to answer Esther: ‘Do not think in your heart that you will escape in the king’s palace any more than all the other Jews.’” He said, ‘You don’t think that you are going to escape, do you? Do you think you are going to be the only Jew that’s going to escape this thing? Even though he doesn’t know that you are a Jew, don’t think that you can stand idly by in a time of crisis like this and escape it.’

Verse 14, “‘For if you remain completely silent at this time, relief and deliverance will arise for the Jews from another place [God will work out something else], but you and your father’s house will perish. Yet who knows whether you have come to the kingdom for such a time as this?’”

Mordecai said to her, ‘You and I have wondered many times why God allowed you to be taken and brought to the king’s harem. Maybe this is why you are there. You are in the right place at the right time. Maybe that’s why God allowed that. You have a responsibility. You can’t just think of yourself. If you don’t take advantage of the opportunity God has given you, God will do something. He will work out something else, but you will not escape.’

Verse 15, Esther then sent an answer back to Mordecai. She said, ‘Okay.’

Verse 16, “‘Go, gather all the Jews who are present in Shushan, and fast for me; neither eat nor drink three days, night or day. My maid and I will fast likewise. And so I will go to the king, which is against the law; and if I perish, I perish.’”

She had to fast for three days and get all her friends to fast with her—three days of fasting and prayer—to get up the courage to walk into the room where he was. You have to realize that’s sort of an extreme situation—this terrorized kind of outbursts.

Esther 5:1-3, “Now it happened on the third day that Esther put on her royal robes and stood in the inner court of the king’s palace, across from the king’s house, while the king sat upon his royal throne in the royal house, facing the entrance of the house. So it was, when the king saw Queen Esther standing in the court, that she found favor in his sight, and the king held out to Esther the golden scepter that was in his hand. [Of course, God worked that out. God put him in a good mood.] Then Esther went near and touched the top of the scepter. And the king said to her, ‘What do you wish Queen Esther? What is your request? It shall be given to you—up to half of the kingdom!’”

Now get the idea. Here’s this fellow. I mean he may chop off your head; he may give you half his kingdom! It just sort of depends on the mood he’s in. Now, how’s that for a mood swing? If he’s happy, he’s very happy; if he’s mad, he is very mad. How would you like to live with a character like that? It’s not a good situation.

What we have to realize is that many of God’s people—I guess most of God’s people—have certainly lived in far less than ideal circumstances. We all have less than ideal circumstances in some facets of our lives. Certainly, many of God’s servants through the centuries have had blessings in certain areas and others have had blessings in other areas.

Well, Esther obtained favor and the king said, ‘What do you want? I will give you anything you want.’ Esther said, ‘I do have a request.’

Verse 4-6, “So Esther answered, ‘If it pleases the king, let the king and Haman come today to the banquet that I have prepared for him.’ Then the king said, ‘Bring Haman quickly, that he may do as Esther has said.’ So the king and Haman went to the banquet that Esther had prepared. At the banquet of wine [she knew what he liked and what to give him to get him in a good mood] the king said to Esther, 'What is your petition? It shall be granted you. What is your request, up to half my kingdom? It shall be done.'"

He knew that she didn't just walk in there and risk her life to invite him to dinner, but that was the only request she made. 'I've prepared a special meal and I wish you and Haman would come and enjoy this meal with me.' He wasn't just loaded with brains, but he was able to figure out that she didn't walk in there just to invite him to eat. So he, again, said this to her.

Verses 7-8, she says, "...My petition and request is this: If I have found favor in the sight of the king to grant my petition, and to fulfill my request, then let the king and Haman come to the banquet which I will prepare for them, and tomorrow I will do as the king has said.'"

She said, 'You know what I would really like is for you and Haman to come back to dinner again tomorrow.' So, again, he knew there had to be a little more to it than this, but he agreed.

Verses 9-10, "So Haman went out that day joyful and with a glad heart; but when Haman saw Mordecai in the king's gate, and that he did not stand or tremble before him, he was filled with indignation against Mordecai. Nevertheless Haman restrained himself and went home and he sent and called for his friends and his wife Zeresh. Then Haman told them of his great riches, and the multitude of his children, all the ways in which the king had promoted him, and how he had advanced him above the officials and servants of the king. Moreover Haman said, 'Besides, Queen Esther invited no one but me to come in with the king to the banquet that she prepared; and tomorrow I am again invited by her, along with the king. Yet all this avails me nothing, so long as I see Mordecai the Jew sitting at the king's gate.'"

Haman said, 'The Queen didn't let anybody come into the banquet except the king and me. And I'm invited back again tomorrow. None of this makes any difference as long as I see Mordecai the Jew sitting there in the king's gate. Boy, it makes me mad. It just ruins my whole day. It "rains on my parade" when I see this guy sitting there.'

Verse 14, "Then his wife Zeresh and all his friends said to him, 'Let a gallows be made, fifty cubits high....'" That's about seventy-five feet tall. We are not talking about a little gallows; we're talking about a seven-story office building. Build a gallows that is really a gallows. When he gets hung on this thing, he's going to know he's been hung.

Continuing, "...and in the morning suggest to the king that Mordecai be hanged on it; then go merrily with the king to the banquet.' And the thing pleased Haman; so he had the gallows made." He thought that was a wonderful idea. That just made his whole day, to go out and hang someone.

God does have a sense of humor. Notice the timing on this.

Esther 6:1, "That night the king could not sleep. So one was commanded to bring the book of the record of the chronicles; and they were read before the king." It just so happened that night the king couldn't sleep. He tossed and he turned. He figured anything that dry and dull was bound to put him to sleep. He ordered them to bring in the book of the Chronicles and read it to him. So, they open it up and start reading.

Verse 2, "And it was found written that Mordecai had told of Bigthana and Teresh, two of the king's eunuchs, the doorkeepers who had sought to lay hands on King Ahasuerus." The part they read just happened to be the story of Mordecai telling him of Bigthana and Teresh, two of the king's eunuchs, and how they were going to assassinate the king. That just happened to be the spot where the Chronicles fell open. They were reading that story to him, and the king pipes up and says, 'By the way, what did we ever do for Mordecai? He saved my life. What did I ever do for him?' They said, 'Nothing. You never got around to doing anything, king. Nothing has been done' (v. 3).

Verse 4, "And the king said: 'Who is in the court?' Now Haman had just entered the outer court of the king's palace to suggest that the king hang Mordecai on the gallows that he had prepared for him." It just so happened that Haman had come to request the king's permission to hang Mordecai on the gallows. This was not a good time to bring up the subject of hanging Mordecai. Can you just see why the king couldn't sleep that night? God could have worked it out in other ways, but God has a sense of humor and He allowed this. It just so happened that very night they were reading about Mordecai and the king got stirred up to do something. Haman was there and was coming in to request to hang Mordecai.

Verse 5, "The king's servants said unto him, 'Haman is there, standing in the court.' And the king said, 'Let him come in.'" 'That's just the fellow I want to see. Bring him in here.'

Verse 6, “So Haman came in, and the king asked him, ‘What shall be done for the man whom the king delights to honor?’ [‘Got any good ideas?’] Now Haman thought in his heart, ‘Whom would the king delight to honor more than me?’” Haman thought, ‘It must be me that he has in mind.’ Haman said, ‘I have some good ideas if you want to honor somebody.’

Verses 7-9, “And Haman answered the king, ‘For the man whom the king delights to honor, let the royal robe which the king has worn, and a horse on which the king has ridden, which has a royal crest placed on its head. And let this robe and horse be delivered to the hand of one of the king’s most noble princes, that he may array the man whom the king delights to honor. Then parade him on horseback through the city square, and proclaim before him: “Thus shall it be done to the man whom the king delights to honor.””

Haman was really laying it on thick. Boy, he was thinking of all the things he would enjoy doing. He was a really vain sort of a fellow, pretty arrogant and impressed with his own importance. He said everything he could think of.

Verse 10, “Then the king said to Haman, ‘Hasten, take the robe and the horse, as you have suggested, and do so for Mordecai the Jew who sits within the king’s gate. Leave nothing undone of all that you have spoken.’” The king said to Haman, ‘Those are good ideas. I want you to take the apparel and the horse and everything you’ve said. I want you to do it for Mordecai the Jew. You know the guy. He’s the one that sits in my gate every day. And make sure you follow these instructions to the “T.”’

Can you imagine Haman’s face? This was not a good time to bring up the subject of hanging Mordecai. Haman was not the brightest guy in the world, but he did figure out that “discretion was the better part of valor.” It was not going to be to his advantage to mention to the king why he had come.

Verse 11, “So Haman took the robe and the horse, arrayed Mordecai and led him on horseback through the city square, and proclaimed before him, [Haman was the guy that had to go before him.] ‘Thus shall it be done to the man whom the king delights to honor.’”

Verse 12, “Afterward Mordecai went back to the king’s gate. But Haman hastened to his house, mourning and with his head covered.” Oh, it just ruined his whole day. He told his wife and all his friends the things that had happened.

Verse 13, some of his buddies said, “...‘If Mordecai, before whom you have begun to fall, is of Jewish descent, you will not prevail against him, but will surely fall before him.’”

Verse 14, “While they were still talking with him, the king’s eunuchs came, and hastened to bring Haman to the banquet that Esther had prepared.”

Esther 7:1-2, “So the king and Haman went to dine with Queen Esther. And on the second day, at the banquet of wine, the king again said to Esther, ‘What is your petition, Queen Esther? It shall be granted you. And what is your request, up to half my kingdom? It shall be granted.’” By this time he was sort of mellowed out. Let’s put it that way.

Verse 3, “Then Esther the queen answered and said, ‘If I have found favor in your sight, O king, and if it pleases the king, let my life be given me at my petition, and my people at my request.’” She said, ‘Please don’t kill me.’

Verse 4, “For we have been sold, my people and I, to be destroyed, to be killed, and to be annihilated. Had we been sold as male and female slaves, I would have held my tongue, although the enemy could never compensate for the king’s loss.”

Boy, this really stirred up the king. What she did was sort of fall down before him and say, ‘Please spare my life. Please spare my life and that of my family.’ Well, he didn’t realize she was a Jew. None of this had ever dawned on him. By this time he was really feeling warm and sort of “glowy.” He had a little “buzz” on and was feeling really happy with Esther and visions of sugarplums dancing in his head. He was ready to do anything but kill her. So when she falls down, and says, ‘Please don’t kill me,’ he gets pretty stirred up.

Verse 5, “Then King Ahasuerus answered and said to Queen Esther, ‘Who is he, and where is he, who would dare presume in his heart to do such a thing?’” He said, ‘Where is he that dares presume in his heart to kill my wife?’

Verse 6, “And Esther said, ‘The adversary and enemy is this wicked Haman!’ So Haman was terrified before the king and queen.” You can imagine; all of a sudden he went from having a big smirk on his face, to his knees knocking. Well, the king jumped up.

Verse 7, “Then the king arose in his wrath from the banquet of wine and went into the palace garden; but Haman stood before Queen Esther, pleading for his life, for he saw that evil was determined against him by the king.” He was being a little bit perceptive. He began to pick up on the fact that, ‘You know, I think my days are numbered.’

Verse 8, “When the king returned from the palace garden to the place of the banquet of wine, [The king had stormed out of the room, out into the garden. This had really taken him by shock and surprise. He was trying to collect his wits. He walked around for a few minutes and came back in.] Haman had fallen across the couch where Esther was. Then the king said, ‘Will he also assault the queen while I am in the house?’” Esther was reclining on a couch and Haman had fallen down there on the couch, where he was begging. When the king came in, he asked if he was going to force the queen right before him in the house. Boy, he was really stirred up. ‘What are you trying to do?’

Continuing, it says, “...As the word left the king’s mouth, they covered Haman’s face.” You can just see these old guards standing by there. They didn’t need any further instructions. They knew Haman’s “goose was cooked.” About that time, they just pulled the sack down on his head and started taking him away. They didn’t need detailed instructions.

Then, v. 9, one of the eunuchs (these guys were always trying to ingratiate themselves) “piped up,” “Now Harbonah, one of the eunuchs, said to the king, ‘Look! The gallows, fifty cubits high, which Haman made for Mordecai, who spoke good on the king’s behalf, is standing at the house of Haman.’ Then the king said, ‘Hang him on it!’” The eunuch said, ‘That new gallows was built out there—that big seventy-five-foot gallows—you can see it from the palace. Did you know that Haman built that to hang Mordecai? You remember Mordecai. He’s the fellow who saved your life.’

This shows you a little something about politics. And it hasn’t changed. When somebody is on the way up, everybody is his friend. When somebody is on the way down, they all gang up to kick him under another rung further down the ladder. When Haman was riding high, none of these eunuchs went to the king and asked if he thought it was right that Haman was building the gallows out there to hang Mordecai. ‘Mordecai hasn’t done anything.’ You think anybody spoke up for Mordecai? No, they didn’t care what happened to Mordecai. They were “battering up” to Haman because they figured Haman was the “number one” man. They wanted to be on Haman’s good side. Now they saw (they could put two and two together) these guys dragging Haman out and knew what was going to happen to him. They wanted to make themselves look good. Immediately, they jumped in and said, ‘Let me tell you something else about him. He built that gallows out there to hang Mordecai. Mordecai’s the guy that saved your life from that assassination coup.’ The king said to hang Haman on it.

Verse 10, “So they hanged Haman on the gallows that he had prepared for Mordecai....” There are some lessons here in human nature. It hasn’t changed. Politics is still the same. People will seek to ingratiate themselves to the individual who is in power. And, so often, as soon as somebody falls out of favor and somebody else comes into favor, they immediately switch positions. We have a lot of politicians who have to read the opinion polls in the morning to find out what they are for and against. They don’t know. They have to find out which way everybody is going—I’m their leader. I need to run around and get in front of them, but I have to find out which way they are going.’ There isn’t any leadership there and very little courage. It’s the same thing—human nature!

Esther 8:1, “On that day King Ahasuerus gave Queen Esther the house of Haman, the enemy of the Jews. And Mordecai came before the king, for Esther had told how he was related to her.” Esther told the king that Mordecai was her cousin who had raised her.

Verse 2, “So the king took off his signet ring, which he had taken from Haman, and gave it to Mordecai; and Esther appointed Mordecai over the house of Haman.” Boy, can things ever turn around! There’s a lesson of faith here. Don’t look at things and judge them by physical circumstances. Just a matter of a few days earlier, you would have looked at the situation and said, ‘There isn’t any way. Haman is firmly entrenched. He is an avowed enemy of the Jews, and there isn’t any way. How in the world can things turn around?’ In a day’s time, the situation had totally reversed.

One point we need to understand: As we look at adversities and difficulties, we sometimes see things heading the wrong direction. We look at it and ask, ‘How can this be? Why would God allow that? It’s going this way and I don’t see how anything can change it.’ Well, when we say there isn’t anything that can change it, we are leaving God out of the picture. God can change it. When God gets ready, He can act, oh, so swiftly and work out a scenario that you and I would never in a thousand years dream up. God has ways of doing it. He can work in circumstances. It’s a very important lesson of faith. Just because I don’t see how God’s going to do it, how does that limit God? The fact that I can't figure it out—what does that prove? That just proves that I can't figure it out. It doesn't prove God can't figure it out. God has already figured it out. The fact that I can't figure it out just proves, 'His ways are higher than my ways and that the heavens are above the seas' (Isaiah 55:9).

Verses 3-8, "Now Esther spoke again to the king, and fell down at his feet, and implored him with tears to counteract the evil plot of Haman the Agagite, and the scheme which he had devised against the Jews. And the king held out the golden scepter toward Esther. So Esther arose, and stood before the king, and said, 'If it pleases the king, and if I have found favor in his sight, and the thing seem right to the king and I am pleasing in his eyes, let it be written to revoke the letters devised by Haman... which he wrote to annihilate the Jews who are in all the king's provinces. For how can I endure to see the evil that will come to my people? Or how can I endure to see the destruction of my kindred?' Then King Ahasuerus said to Queen Esther and to Mordecai the Jew, 'Indeed, I have given Esther the house of Haman, and they have hanged him on the gallows because he tried to lay his hand on the Jews. You yourselves write a decree for the Jews, as you please, in the king's name, and seal it with the king's signet ring; for a letter which is written in the king's name and sealed with the king's signet ring, no one can revoke.'"

Verse 9, "So the king's scribes called at that time, in the third month, which is the month of Sivan, on the twenty-third day...." They had to get together to figure this out. They had to reverse the decree without reversing the decree. They couldn't just ride out and say, 'This was a crackpot idea from start to finish. The king must have really been "bombed" out of his mind when he allowed something like that to go through, so we reverse it.' Well, they couldn't say something like that. That would make the king look bad. It would make him look like he was wrong, and if there was one thing the king could never be, that was wrong. So, they had to get together and figure out how to reverse the decree without reversing the decree.

Continuing in v. 9, what they did, "...and it was written, according to all that Mordecai commanded, to the Jews, the satraps, the governors, and the princes of the provinces from India to Ethiopia, one hundred and twenty-seven provinces in all, to every province in their own language, and to the Jews in their own script and language." They wrote out commands concerning the Jews, and this was sent out to the governors and the princes of the provinces, which stretched from India to Ethiopia. You realize the Persian Empire was a vast empire that stretched all the way from India to Ethiopia, one hundred twenty-seven provinces. Everyone got the decree in his own language. This was written in the king's name (v. 10).

Verses 11-14, "By these letters the king permitted the Jews who were in every city to gather together and protect their lives—to destroy, kill, and annihilate all the forces of any people or province that would assault them, both little children and women, and to plunder their possessions, on one day in all the provinces of King Ahasuerus, on the thirteenth day of the twelfth month, which is the month Adar. A copy of the document was to be issued as a decree in every province and published to all people, so that the Jews would be ready on that day to avenge themselves on their enemies. Then the couriers who rode on royal horses went out, hastened and pressed on by the king's command. And the decree was issued...."

They couldn't reverse the decree that said, 'On this day, the thirteenth day of the twelfth month the Jews are fair game.' But they issued another decree and said, 'On the thirteenth day of the twelfth month the Jews can get together and defend themselves. We told you earlier that you could kill a Jew on that day. Well, that's fine, but the Jews have permission to band together and defend themselves against the attackers on that day.'

We are told in vv. 16-17, "The Jews had light and gladness, joy and honor. And in every province, and city, wherever the king's command and decree came, the Jews had joy and gladness, a feast and a holiday. Then many of the peoples of the land became Jews, because fear of the Jews fell upon them."

Again, what happened? They realized the Jews could defend themselves, and the king's soldiers were going to be standing there to make sure that they were well defended. You didn't want to be perceived as being against the Jews. The Jews were in good favor now because it was realized that the queen and the prime minister were Jews. So, all of a sudden, these people that the day before were ready to go out and steal the Jews' property, now they were trying to "buddy up" to them and say that they have always liked Jews. 'Yeah, I really like you people. I wish you would kind of tell me a little bit about things. I'd like to find out a little bit about your religion. I've really been giving a little thought to that.'

It's human nature. People look to see which way the wind's blowing. They want to find out and get on the winning side. This was the case. Well, the Jews realized when this second decree was issued that things were looking very positive.

Esther 9:1-3, "Now in the twelfth month, that is the month Adar, on the thirteenth day, the time came for the king's command and his decree to be executed. On the day that the enemies of the Jews had hoped to overpower them, the opposite occurred, in that the Jews themselves overpowered those who hated them. The Jews gathered together in their cities throughout all the provinces of King Ahasuerus to lay hands on those who sought their harm. And no one could withstand them, because fear of them fell upon all people. And all the officials of the provinces, the satraps, the governors, and all those doing the king's work, helped the Jews, because the fear of Mordecai fell upon them."

They knew which side their "bread was buttered" on. All of a sudden, the same politicians who were ready to kill all the Jews and confiscate their property, now that Mordecai was the Prime Minister, they said, 'We really like Jews. I tell you what—we surely are going to help these Jews. We are not going to let anything happen to them.'

Verses 4-6, "For Mordecai was great in the king's palace, and his fame spread throughout all the provinces; for this man Mordecai became increasingly prominent. Thus the Jews defeated all their enemies with the stroke of the sword, with slaughter and destruction, and did what they pleased with those who hated them. And in Shushan the citadel the Jews killed and destroyed five hundred men."

In vv. 7-10, it goes through and mentions the various ones.

Verse 10, "...but they did not lay a hand on the plunder."

Verse 11, "On that day the number of those who were killed in Shushan the citadel was brought to the king." Word was brought to the king.

Verse 12, "And the king said to Queen Esther, 'The Jews have killed and destroyed five hundred men in Shushan the citadel, and the ten sons of Haman. What have they done in the rest of the king's provinces? Now what is your petition? It shall be granted to you. Or what is your further request? It shall be done.'"

They said, 'Let us have tomorrow to finish this up.' The sons of Haman who had been in collaboration on the whole thing were hanged on the gallows (v. 13).

Verses 14-32, "So the king commanded this to be done; the decree was issued...And the Jews who were in Shushan gathered together again on the fourteenth day of the month Adar and killed three hundred men at Shushan; but they did not lay a hand on the plunder. The remainder of the Jews in the king's provinces gathered together and protected their lives, had rest from their enemies, and killed seventy-five thousand of their enemies; but they did not lay a hand on the plunder. This was on the thirteenth day of the month Adar. And on the fourteenth day of the month they rested and made it a day of feasting and gladness. But the Jews who were at Shushan assembled together on the thirteenth day, as well as on the fourteenth; and on the fifteenth day of the month they rested, and made it a day of feasting and gladness. Therefore the Jews of the villages who dwelt in the unwalled towns, celebrated the fourteenth day of the month of Adar as a day of gladness and feasting, as a holiday, and for sending presents to one another. And Mordecai wrote these things and sent letters to all the Jews who were in all the provinces of King Ahasuerus, both near and far, to establish among them that they should celebrate yearly the fourteenth and fifteenth days of the month of Adar, as the days on which the Jews had rest from their enemies, as the month which was turned from sorrow to joy for them, and from mourning to a holiday; that they should make them days of feasting and joy, of sending presents to one another and gifts to the poor. So the Jews accepted the custom which they had begun, as Mordecai had written to them, because Haman, the son of Hammedatha the Agagite, the enemy of all the Jews, had plotted against the Jews to annihilate them, and had cast Pur (that is, the lot), to consume them, and destroy them; but when Esther came before the king, he commanded by letters that this wicked plot which Haman had devised against the Jews should return on his own head, and that he and his sons should be hanged on the gallows. So they called these days Purim, after the name Pur. Therefore, because of all the words of this letter, and what they had seen concerning this matter, and what had happened to them, the Jews established and imposed it upon themselves and their descendants and all who should join them, that without fail they should celebrate these two days every year, according to the written instructions and according to the prescribed time, that these days should be remembered and kept throughout every generation, every family, every province, and every city, that these days of Purim should not fail to be observed among the Jews, and that the memory of them should not perish among their descendants. Then Queen Esther, the daughter of Abihail, with Mordecai the Jew, wrote with full authority to confirm this second letter about Purim. And Mordecai sent letters to all the Jews, to the hundred and twenty-seven provinces of the kingdom of Ahasuerus, with words of peace and truth, to confirm these days of Purim in their appointed time, as Mordecai the Jew and Queen Esther had prescribed for them, and as they had decreed for themselves and their descendants concerning matters of their fasting and lamenting. So the decree of Esther confirmed these matters of Purim, and it was written in the book.”

An official proclamation was made proclaiming a day of festivity and rejoicing, a national day of thanksgiving to God.

Very carefully, the name of God is omitted in this section because, while the decree was issued, it was something that applied to the Jews. It was a national day of festivity. It was a national day of deliverance. It was not something that was to be confused with a Holy Day ordained by God. So, very carefully, there isn't any mention that God decreed or commanded it. But, rather, it originated with Esther and Mordecai.

Esther 10:2-3, we are told, “Now all the acts of his power and his might, and the account of the greatness of Mordecai, to which the king had advanced him, are they not written in the book of the chronicles of the kings of Media and Persia? For Mordecai the Jew was second to King Ahasuerus, and was great among the Jews and well received by the multitude of his brethren, seeking the good of his people and speaking peace to all his kindred.” We have a conclusion here.

As we go through, there are several things that are brought out that we might look at. Haman had cast lots to pick out the lucky day—what he thought was going to be his lucky day and the Jews unlucky day—the thirteenth of the twelfth month. You know, in various pagan superstitions, the number thirteen always equated with being unlucky. Haman thought that thirteen was going to be unlucky for the Jews. Friday the thirteenth didn't turn out as unlucky for God's people as it turned out unlucky for Haman. Of course, there is a lesson there. When you are up to “no good,” things have a way of coming back on you. Haman chose the day by casting of lots. God is our deliverer. He chooses to effect deliverance in a way that we would never anticipate. He sometimes allows His people to go through difficult situations in order to accomplish His purpose.

The book of Esther is, in many ways, a book of faith and deliverance. It anticipates the time when all people everywhere are ultimately going to want to join themselves to God's people. It anticipates and celebrates God's deliverance of His people. And it is a story that certainly ends up with great festivity and rejoicing.

The book of Ecclesiastes was read at the Feast of Tabernacles. What comes afterwards? –The Last Great Day. Then we have the part of God's plan that represents the new heavens and the new earth. A time when the wicked are destroyed in the Lake of Fire and all of God's people are delivered into the glories of the Kingdom of God.

The final Psalm is a song of praise to God. The book of Esther ends that way. It ends with the destruction of the wicked and the deliverance and final salvation of the people of God. It ends with rejoicing and festivities, a celebration of their deliverance.

We commented earlier that the five books of the Psalms correlate and parallel the five books of the Megillot and these five festival occasions.

The final Psalm, Psalm 150:1-6, “Praise the Lord! Praise God in His sanctuary; Praise Him in His mighty firmament! Praise Him for His mighty acts; Praise Him according to His excellent greatness! Praise Him with the sound of the trumpet; Praise Him with the lute and harp! Praise Him with the timbrel and dance; Praise Him with stringed instruments and flutes! Praise Him with loud cymbals; Praise Him with high-sounding cymbals! Let everything that has breath praise the Lord. Praise the Lord!”

It ends on a very festive note of celebration and deliverance.

The book of Esther ends on a festive note of celebration and deliverance. It concludes with the destruction of the wicked and the celebration that God's people have on their deliverance. That is ultimately the way God's whole plan ends, isn't it? So, there is a parallel, even of the two national days. Lamentations is prophetic of the Great Tribulation, and Esther celebrates God's deliverance of His people. It focuses in on what will be the ultimate destruction of the wicked and the deliverance of His people. That's the message of the book of Esther. The message that God will ultimately intervene, destroy the wicked and save and deliver His people. That is the ultimate conclusion of the matter. God is going to see that occurs. The book of Esther is a reminder of that and celebrates that. The celebration of Purim normally occurs about a month prior to the Passover and Days of Unleavened Bread.

I think with that we are pretty well to the conclusion of the book of Esther.

As I mentioned, we will go into the book of Daniel next time. This is the next book in this section of the Writings. We will spend two Bible studies on Daniel. Then, when we get into the book of Revelation, we will come back to certain of the prophetic portions of Daniel. We will take a couple of Bible studies on the book of Daniel and then we will have a concluding Bible study on Ezra, Nehemiah and Chronicles to wrap up this section. So, three more Bible studies and we will have concluded this portion. The book of Revelation will be all that's left.

We will have spent time going through, step by step, every book of the Bible. There's plenty in the Bible to go back to, so we are not at the end of everything there is to study. But, hopefully, you will have a little bit of an overview and will have had the opportunity to have gone through and heard commented upon every section in God's Word.

The Writings Series—Daniel—Part 1

We are getting into the book of Daniel this evening. Daniel is one of the books of what is called the post-exilic books. That is, it was written after the exile of the Jews from Jerusalem.

Daniel's name literally translated means "God has judged" or "God is Judge." That meaning certainly accords quite well with the message of the book. The book has to do with God's judgment on the Gentile kingdoms.

In common with the other books in this Writings section, it was written both by royalty and about royalty. That's one comment I think I have not made about the Writings series. The book of Psalms was written mostly by King David. King Solomon wrote Proverbs. Job, who was called the greatest man in the East, in terms of power and possessions, would certainly be of the rank of a king or a prince. When you look at the Megillot, Song of Solomon was written by King Solomon and Ruth was written about the royal lineage and climaxed with the birth of King David. The book of Lamentations is the lament for King Josiah. King Solomon wrote the book of Ecclesiastes. The book of Esther was written about Queen Esther. There is a connection of royalty that goes through.

Daniel was written by a man who rose to prominence in the Babylonian Empire and became the number two man of the empire directly under the king. It was certainly written about royalty, and it was written in an entirely different style than the prophetic books.

Generally, we would tend to think of Daniel as being part of the Prophets. But Daniel was not included in the Major and Minor Prophets in the traditional Jewish order. There are several reasons for that. Daniel has the distinction of being one of those books that was written outside of the Holy Land. It was not primarily concerned with Israel in terms of its content. The style of it is different.

If you go through the Prophets, over and over the style there is 'that the word of the Lord came unto "so-and-so" the prophet in this year or that year.' That is the method or style used as you go through all of the three Major Prophets (Isaiah, Jeremiah and Ezekiel) and the twelve Minor Prophets.

But that is not what you see in the book of Daniel. There is a totally different style. In its prophetic sense, the prophetic material is almost all involved in the interpretation of dreams. And we find that it is of a different style.

Daniel is the book of the Old Testament that most directly corresponds with the book of Revelation of the New Testament. The book of Daniel and the book of Revelation correspond. In the Jewish order, the Writings are the third and final division. If Daniel were the end of the Old Testament (if that's where it stopped), it would certainly correspond with Revelation in the New Testament.

The books that had to come after Daniel had to close out the story of the exile. When you read the book of Daniel, you have the background of the story of what happened in Babylon during the time of the captivity. You have the story from the time the Jews were taken from Jerusalem and throughout the whole seventy-year period of captivity. That story is told in the book of Daniel. It was a first-person account. Daniel was there. He was on the scene.

In the book of Esther, we have the story of what transpired even later after many of the Jews had returned to Judea. It was the story of what transpired in the Jewish community that had remained behind and what was by that time the Persian Empire. Daniel and Esther both told the story of the Jews in exile.

The books of Ezra and Nehemiah pick up the story with the Jewish community that returned from exile. After the captivity the Jewish community was split. There were those who remained in exile and those who returned to the Promised Land. Ezra and Nehemiah tell the story of the return. When you put those together with Daniel and with Esther, you have the story of the post-exilic period.

Chronicles, as we will see, comes back and sums up the whole story from beginning to end—from the beginning of the Old Testament period with Adam right on down to the Jews being allowed to return. It ends on that note. We will notice that in the Bible study on Ezra, Nehemiah and Chronicles a little later.

The book of Daniel is a very important book because it sets the stage. You cannot understand the book of Revelation without the book of Daniel. We will see, as we go through Revelation, how much of what John states in Revelation is a quotation and an expansion of material given in Daniel.

The authenticity of Daniel has been greatly disputed by the critics. There's a reason why they want to dispute the book of Daniel. They want to dispute the book specifically because of the detailed prophecies contained in the book of Daniel. The longest, most detailed prophecy in the entirety of the Bible is Daniel 11. (I will give you a two-page handout that will take you verse by verse through Daniel 11 that you can use for your own Bible study.)

Do you see the problem with that? If Daniel was written when Daniel says it was written, which is in the period of the sixth century B.C., then you have detailed prophecies that run right on down to who married whom, who got mad at whom and all this going back and forth between the king of the North and the king of the South (the Ptolemys down in Egypt and the Seleucids up in Syria). You have a detailed account of all this strife and all these things that cover a period of about four hundred years or so. How could a human being have known every “in” and “out” on down?

Clearly, you can follow prophecies in Daniel 11 in great detail down to about 165 or 164 B.C. This is why many of the critics try to assign the book of Daniel to the period of the Maccabees after all of the events of Daniel 11 had happened. To recognize that it was written when it says it was written, you have to acknowledge God’s hand in it being written.

The critics run into some problems on that because the book of Daniel stands proven by the very details that the critics in past years sought to use to disapprove it. Daniel mentions people such as Belshazzar and Darius the Mede. Those individuals were not mentioned in secular sources. The only accounts that came down in terms of book form were those written by the Greek historians—primarily Herodotus and a few other Greek historians. There were details that they didn’t mention. Of course, they were Greeks and were writing the history of Babylon and Persia from a Greek standpoint. They had records available to them that we don’t have today. They told the story and there were details they left out. The histories that were written in Babylon and Persia had not survived.

In the last couple of decades, archaeology has made great strides. They uncovered some of the histories that were written by the Babylonians and the Persians and some of the monuments that they erected. And guess what? The very details that the critics had said proved the book of Daniel was a “pious fraud” confirmed the book. That is a contradiction in terms. How can you be pious and perpetuate a fraud? But that was what the critics called Daniel. The very details that they used to “prove their point” that it was not authentic are the very things that have confirmed the book. Here were people that had long since been lost to history. When they dug up some of the material in Babylon and Persia, what did they find but records of Belshazzar and of Darius the Mede!

We will go into the story in the book of Daniel. Remember Belshazzar promised Daniel that if he would interpret the handwriting on the wall, he would make him the third man in the kingdom (Daniel 5:7). That was his promise of reward. ‘If you can tell me what this means, I’ll make you the third man in the kingdom.’ Why did he say the third man in the kingdom? –Because he, himself, was the second man in the kingdom. He was reigning as king in Babylon but was associated on the throne with his father, Nabonitus, who was elsewhere. He was the one who was actually holding court in Babylon. He was like a co-king with his father and had actually sort of worn the crown. This was a detail of history that the Greeks had not recorded. It wasn’t understood or confirmed by secular history until, let’s say, in the last fifteen years. But Daniel records that. The very details that the critics said proved that Daniel is a fraud, in reality, confirmed it. You had details at the time the critics thought Daniel was written four hundred years after the fact, which had long since been lost to history.

Think about it; let’s use a little common sense. Four hundred years would be 1592. How easily do you think you could forge a document that you claim had been written in 1592? You include in all kinds of details and you’re writing a firsthand account as though you were there at the court of the king of France. You are recording details of all the “ins” and “outs” of things that were going on. How accurate a history do you think you could concoct from something like that? It wouldn’t be very much. And realize that we have a lot greater access to written records and the preservation of historical material from four hundred years ago to today than they had from four hundred years back then.

With the printing press and things like that, you have multiple copies of books. Back then, when you had books, you had maybe one or two copies. In some cases, that was all there ever was because they had to be hand copied. So, there were not many copies of a lot of the records. If it got lost, the whole thing got lost. Even today, for books that were printed hundreds of years ago, there were at least a few thousand copies that were printed. So, an awful lot can be destroyed and you still have bits and pieces that remain.

The point is that the idea of being able to forge a document is ridiculous. To put it in our terms, can you come along and forge a document that you claim was written by somebody on the spot four hundred years ago? How are you going to have it accepted by the whole nation and give it great religious authority? Well, it would be like trying to come up with an extra paragraph of the constitution—slipping it in and fooling everybody that it was a part of the original thing all along. It's ridiculous! Some of the crazy theories these critics come up with. You wonder how in the world they can do it.

The whole point is that they have an innate prejudice against the fact of a real God—a God who steps into history and intervenes. Sometimes they come up with something that contains incontrovertible proof of that; then boy, they have to try and explain that away. There are many other things. There are details—names of people, specific information of the Babylonian court, all kinds of information and internal details—that prove that Daniel was written as stated in the book.

Another proof that Daniel was written as stated in the book is the proof of language. The book of Daniel is written partially in Hebrew and partially in Aramaic. Aramaic is a similar language to Hebrew in that it is a kindred language—perhaps in the way that French and Spanish are kindred languages. There is a certain similarity. If you read one well, there's a lot you can figure out in reading the other.

There were two different Aramaic dialects. The Aramaic used in the book of Daniel is what's called the Imperial Aramaic dialect. It was the Aramaic dialect of the Persian court in the fifth and sixth centuries—not the so-called Western Aramaic dialect, which was extant in Palestine centuries later. Western Aramaic was the common language extant in the time of Christ and for two or three centuries prior to that in Palestine.

The Aramaic used in the book of Daniel is not the common Aramaic of Palestine. It is what's called the Imperial Aramaic dialect. There are Persian technical terms that are used in the book that have fallen out of use in the language in the later periods. Persian names for things changed over the years. You may think back of old expressions that perhaps your grandmother or grandfather used that you never hear anymore. You will occasionally run across it and it will remind you, 'I haven't heard that expression for years and years.' Expressions and names go out of fashion. If one or two hundred years go by, nobody even recognizes them anymore. They just simply cease to be used, and that occurs over a period of time.

When the Jews were living in Persia, they picked up names for things that they would use even in their own language. In the case where two languages exist together, you sometimes pick up names of items from the people of the other language. It's just like certain terms or expressions that have come into the French language that's used in South Louisiana. Over the years they picked up or borrowed terminology, and this sort of trading goes on. Again, this is another proof that Daniel was written at the Persian period because it used terminology that several hundred years later was not in use at all any longer. There are many things that certainly authenticate the book of Daniel.

There is a tremendous amount that's packed into the book of Daniel. Let's get directly into Daniel. We pick up the story.

Daniel 1:1-2, "In the third year of the reign of Jehoiakim king of Judah, Nebuchadnezzar king of Babylon came to Jerusalem and besieged it. And the Lord gave Jehoiakim king of Judah into his hand, with some of the articles of the house of God, which he carried into the land of Shinar..." —The land of Babylon. This was in 604 B.C. This was the original Babylonian invasion.

Verse 3, "Then the king [King Nebuchadnezzar] instructed Ashpenaz, the master of his eunuchs, to bring some of the children [teenagers] of Israel and some of the king's descendants and some of the nobles." These could have been young people from perhaps ten to twelve years of age up to perhaps fourteen or fifteen. They were young enough that it was felt that they still had several years of education left and could be utilized by the Babylonians.

They brought those who were healthy and seemed to be well educated and had good abilities. They brought the ones that they felt had potential in terms of the Babylonian Empire (v. 4). It was appointed that they should live in an area annexed to the palace.

They would live in the general palace compound and eat of the food from the king's table. Eventually after several years of education, they would be brought and examined before the king and be utilized (v. 5). The Babylonians were on the lookout for talent.

Verse 6, “Now from those of the sons of Judah were Daniel, Hananiah, Mishael, and Azariah.” There were four specific ones who were singled out. Hananiah, Mishael and Azariah are better known to us by their Babylonian names Shadrach, Meshach and Abed-Nego. Those are the names that we are most familiar with. Those are the Hebrew and the Babylonian names. It goes through and gives the Babylonian names that each of them was given (v. 7).

Verse 8, “But Daniel purposed in his heart that he would not defile himself with the portion of the king’s delicacies, nor with the wine, which he drank; therefore he requested of the chief of the eunuchs that he might not defile himself.”

Why did Daniel want to avoid these things? Well, undoubtedly, part of the reason was because a lot of the food the king ate was unclean. Even what wasn’t unclean had been, in most cases, sacrificed to idols. And this was the case with the wine. Daniel could see that this was not right.

Think about it. We are not told exactly how old he was, but he was a teenager. He had been brought up in Jerusalem. He had been brought up learning God’s law. He knew right from wrong. He and his friends were brought to Babylon. This enemy army came in, besieged and captured the city. They took the king and they took many of the young people, the children of the leading people in Jerusalem. They are brought back to Babylon. It’s a very intimidating situation. Now they are confronted with all these things. What are they going to do?

“Daniel purposed in his heart...” He had to make a decision at that point in his life whether or not he was going to do what he knew was right. You know, Dad and Mom weren’t there looking now. In fact, Dad and Mom may have been dead. We are not told exactly who his parents are, other than that he would have been of the general royal seed of the nobility or the princes of Judah. Very possibly they may have been dead. If they weren’t, they certainly weren’t there in Babylon to know what he was doing. So, here he was, removed away from all of this. Now he was on the spot. What was he going to do? He made up his mind that he was going to do what he knew was right. He talked with these three friends of his and they decided that they were going to obey God.

In v. 9, we are told, “Now God had brought Daniel into the favor and good will of the chief of the eunuchs.” Obviously, Daniel had conducted himself in such a way that won the affection and respect of this man who was in charge. He had behaved himself in an appropriate way and this person wanted to do him a favor. But he was scared. He wouldn’t mind doing him a favor, but he didn’t want to get in trouble. And the king was sending in his good food. He labeled it “delicacies.” It was the richest, junkiest food of the day. He thought, ‘This is good stuff. You’re going to pass up all this, and when the king sees you, you’re not going to look healthy. You’re going to look weak and sickly, and then he’s going to find out I haven’t been giving you all this good stuff he’s sending over here. Then I’m going to get in trouble’ (v. 10).

Then Daniel said, ‘Look, let’s make a deal. The king’s not going to call us in anytime soon. Just give us ten days; give us fruit and vegetables to eat and water to drink. Then examine us and see who looks the healthiest’ (vv. 11-13).

Well, you can guess what happened. After the siege of Jerusalem and all these things, most of them came there, and what did they start doing? They started gorging themselves on all the junk food—the refined flour and sugar—all of the rich pastries and even some of the unclean delicacies they had never been allowed to taste before. What do you think happened? Well, by the time they finished gorging themselves on that for a week and a half, they were all sick. Probably half of them had colds. You can imagine the situation.

Daniel and his friends had been on a really strict healthy diet. They had been drinking a lot of water and eating a lot of fresh fruits, vegetables and whole grains. And sure enough, when the man in charge came in to look at them, ‘Hey, how about that! You guys look healthy and you seem to feel good. These others over here are sluggish and look kind of “green around the gills.”’ So, he said he would give them permission to continue to eat this. They took a strong stand when they were confronted with compromise. What was the result? God blessed them. You know, God takes note of our efforts. God takes note, and God appreciates our efforts and our sincerity. When we step out and try to do something because we know it’s right, God has ways of working things out.

Verse 17, “As for these four young men, God gave them knowledge and skill in all literature and wisdom [God gave them insight and perception that made them stand out above everybody else there.]; and Daniel had understanding in all visions and dreams.” God took note of these young men and He blessed them.

And, of course, eventually this period of time ended and they were to be brought in and examined before the king.

Verses 18-19, “Now at the end of the days, when the king had said that they should be brought in, the chief of the eunuchs brought them in before Nebuchadnezzar. Then the king interviewed them, and among them all none was found like Daniel, Hananiah, Mishael, and Azariah; therefore they served before the king.” God made them stand out above all these fellows. The king talked with them, quizzed them, asked questions, held discussions and these four clearly stood out. The king was much more impressed with them than he was with any of the others.

Verse 20, “And in all matters of wisdom and understanding about which the king examined them [the more he talked to them], he found them ten times better than all the magicians and astrologers who were in all his realm.” He was impressed with these young fellows. They were perhaps twenty years of age by this time. The king thought these guys had more “on the ball.” They were ten times smarter than all these advisors he had over here. You see—God can work things out. And God’s law and truth are a source of wisdom.

Daniel 2:1-2, “Now in the second year of Nebuchadnezzar’s reign, Nebuchadnezzar had dreams; and his spirit was so troubled that his sleep left him. Then the king gave the command to call the magicians, the astrologers, the sorcerers, and the Chaldeans to tell the king his dreams. So they came and stood before the king.” He called them in and he said, ‘I want you to tell me my dream and the interpretation.’

Verse 4, they said, “You tell us the dream and we will tell you the interpretation.”

You find that a lot of these kings were rather quick to “fly off the handle.”

Verse 5, ““But the king answered and said to the Chaldeans, ‘My decision is firm [KJV, “The thing is gone from me.”]; if you do not make known the dream to me, and its interpretation, you shall be cut in pieces, and your houses shall be made an ash heap.’” The king said, ‘The thing is gone from me. I want to know what it is. And if you don’t tell me, I am going to chop you up in little pieces.’

Verse 6, ““However, if you tell the dream and its interpretation, you shall receive from me gifts, rewards, and great honor. Therefore tell me the dream and its interpretation.’”

Verses 7-8, they said, ‘You tell us what you dreamed and we will tell you the interpretation.’ The king was suspicious of them.

Verse 9, ““if you do not make known the dream to me, there is only one decree for you! For you have agreed to speak lying and corrupt words before me till the time [situation] has changed. Therefore tell me the dream, and I shall know that you can give me [declare to me] its interpretation.’” The king said, ‘If I tell you the dream, you will make up some kind of meaning for it. But if you really have insight, if you really know, if God’s really revealing these things to you, then you will know what I dreamed. You tell me what I dreamed and then tell me what it meant.’ And they said, ‘We can’t do that.’

Verse 10, “The Chaldeans answered the king, and said, ‘There is not a man on earth who can tell the king’s matter; therefore no king, lord, or ruler has ever asked such things of any magician, astrologer, or Chaldean.’”

They answered, ‘Nobody can tell you what you dreamed. If you tell us what you dreamed, we have an interpretation for you. We just have to know what you dreamed.’ Well, the king wasn’t stupid. He was in some ways, but he was able to figure out a few things. He decided that these guys could make up something. They went on back and forth and they were scared. They were really sweating. But they knew better than to make up some dream that he had dreamed because he would know that it wasn’t the dream that he had dreamed. Then they would really be in trouble. So, they kept trying to stall for time.

Verse 12, “For this reason the king was angry and very furious, and gave a command to destroy all the wise men of Babylon.” –‘They are all a bunch of frauds. Since they are all fakes, I might as well chop the heads off of all of them.’ He was fed up with this.

Verses 13-19, “So the decree went out, and they began killing the wise men; and they sought Daniel and his companions, to kill them. Then with counsel and wisdom Daniel answered Arioch, the captain of the king’s guard, who had gone out to kill the wise men of Babylon; he answered and said to Arioch the king’s captain, ‘Why is the decree from the king so urgent?’ Then Arioch made the decision known to Daniel. So Daniel went in and asked the king to give him time, that he might tell the king the interpretation. Then Daniel went to his house, and made the decision to Hananiah, Mishael, and Azariah, his companions, that they might seek mercies from the God of heaven concerning this secret, so that Daniel and his companions might not perish with the rest of the wise men of Babylon. Then the secret was revealed to Daniel in a night vision. So Daniel blessed the God of heaven.”

Daniel went back to his friends and said, ‘Let’s pray about it and God will show us.’ Daniel evidenced a tremendous amount of faith here. He was put in a situation where he was completely dependent upon God. Time and time again, what did Daniel do? He spent a lot of time in prayer.

Verses 20-21, “Daniel answered and said: ‘Blessed be the name of God forever and ever, for wisdom and might are His. And He changes the times and the seasons; He removes kings and raises up kings; He gives wisdom to the wise and knowledge to those who have understanding.’”

Then he went to the captain of the king’s guard and he said not to destroy the wise men of Babylon. ‘Bring me in before the king and I will tell the king what he wants’ (v. 24).

Verses 25-28, “Then Arioch quickly brought Daniel before the king, and said thus to him, ‘I have found a man of the captives of Judah, who will make known to the king the interpretation.’ The king answered and said to Daniel... ‘Are you able to make known to me the dream which I have seen, and its interpretation?’ Daniel answered in the presence of the king, and said, ‘The secret which the king has demanded, the wise men, the astrologers, the magicians, and the soothsayers cannot declare to the king. But there is a God in heaven who reveals secrets....’”

Notice Daniel didn’t claim credit. He didn’t say, ‘Yes, king, I really am quite a bit wiser than all these other wise men, and I have insight into this.’ Daniel didn’t claim any credit.

Continuing in v. 28, he said, “...there is a God in heaven that reveals secrets and He has made known to King Nebuchadnezzar what will be in the latter days....” It’s concerning what will be in the latter days; Nebuchadnezzar’s dream was a dream that relates to the end time.

As we go through, we have the dream that Daniel had described to Nebuchadnezzar.

Verses 31-38, “You, O king, were watching; and behold, a great image! This great image, whose splendor was excellent, stood before you; and its form was awesome. This image’s head was of fine gold, its chest and arms of silver, its belly and thighs of bronze, its legs of iron; its feet partly of iron and partly of clay. You watched while a stone was cut out without hands, which struck the image on its feet of iron and clay, and broke them in pieces. Then the iron, the clay, the bronze, the silver, and the gold were crushed together, and became like chaff from the summer threshing floors; the wind carried them away so that no trace of them was found. And the stone that struck the image became a great mountain and filled the whole earth. This is the dream. Now we will tell the interpretation of it before the king. You, O king, are a king of kings. For the God of heaven has given you a kingdom, power, strength, and glory—you are this head of gold.” The Babylonian kingdom, symbolized by Nebuchadnezzar who was its king, was this head of gold.

Verse 39, “But after you shall arise another kingdom inferior to yours [It won’t have quite the brilliance and luster that you have. Now, we know from history that the empire of the Medes and the Persians conquered Babylon in 539 B.C.]; then another, a third kingdom of bronze, which shall rule over all the earth.” A third kingdom would come along. The kingdom of Alexander the Great, the Greco-Macedonian Empire, conquered the Persians in 331 B.C.

It continues in v. 40, “And the fourth kingdom shall be as strong as iron....” Well, the Roman Empire emerged and by 31 A.D. had swallowed up all the pieces of the old Greek Empire. The Roman Empire continued down. About three hundred years later, it divided into the Eastern Roman Empire and the Western Roman Empire; it continued down to modern times through various revivals and resurrections.

It’s interesting to realize that at the beginning of this century, there were two titles in Europe used by European royalty that traced their origin back to Caesar. The word “Kaiser” is the German form of Caesar. Actually, the Latin pronunciation of Caesar is Kaiser. We use the Anglicized pronunciation, but even the Latin pronunciation would have been Kaiser. The Germans simply spelled it out to duplicate that pronunciation. “Kaiser” is the German form of Caesar; the Russian “Czar” or “Tsar” meant “Caesar.” The Russian Czars traced their title back through the Eastern Roman emperors. The Eastern Roman Empire, with its capital at Constantinople, continued down until the 1400s before the Turks finally conquered it. The niece of the last Eastern Roman emperor married the Grand Duke of Moskove and he took the title “Caesar” after Constantinople fell. The successors of the Eastern Roman Empire were the Greek-Slavic Orthodox realm of eastern and portions of central Europe that were the Greek-Slavic Orthodox areas. The various Orthodox churches acknowledged the supremacy of the patriarch at Constantinople.

If you have ever seen Russian printing, you realize that the Russian alphabet is derived from Greek, as apposed to our alphabets in Western Europe, which derived from the Latin.

The successors of the eastern realm came down through the Greek-Slavic Orthodox areas of Eastern Europe and the Latin-Germanic Catholic realm in the west came down through the Holy Roman emperors. All that was centered in the west comes all the way down—and finally you have ten toes. We are told that these ten toes represent ten kings (vv. 41-42).

Verse 44, ““And in the days of these kings the God of heaven will set up a kingdom which shall never be destroyed....””

We trace it clearly. Daniel 2 runs from ancient Babylon all the way down to the time ahead of us when Jesus Christ is going to return and set up the Kingdom of God. These ten toes represent the final ten kings—this ten-nation union that is going to be smashed by Jesus Christ at His return.

All of the things that have been happening in Europe, these are things Mr. Herbert Armstrong was talking about thirty, forty, fifty years ago and more. We have one or two here who have been associated with the work and have magazines and heard the broadcasts going way back to the time right after World War II. If you talk to anybody who has been around the Church for years, they will tell you that the events that happened when the Berlin Wall fell and when Germany reunited, they were not surprised. Nobody who has been around the Church for years was surprised or shocked because we heard those things years ago. I heard Mr. Herbert Armstrong talking about it way back in the 60s, and I’ve read articles that he’s written. I’ve talked to others who heard him say it in the 50s and in the 40s. The reason he said it was because he read Daniel 2 and other places that we will go through.

Here we find that the king was very impressed and he put Daniel over the province of Babylon (v. 48).

Daniel 3 shows the extent to which Nebuchadnezzar generally did not get the point. As he got to thinking about this, he decided that he would build a big ninety-foot tall image of gold, set it up in the plain of Dura and everybody would worship it (v. 1). And I’m sure he made the thing to look like himself. It started out with a head that looked like him and came on down. He was going to build this thing. Daniel had told him about this dream and he said this “image business” gave him a good idea. So, he put up this image and all the leaders were gathered together. They were going to strike up the band and play, and when everybody heard the music, they were all supposed to bow down to the image. And Nebuchadnezzar said, ‘Anybody that doesn’t want to worship my new image, we are going to throw them into a fiery furnace (vv. 3-6).

Daniel 3:7, “...when all the people heard the sound of the horn, flute, harp and lyre, in symphony with all kinds of music, all the people, nations and languages fell down and worshiped the gold image which King Nebuchadnezzar had set up.”

Verse 10, ““You, O king, have made a decree that everyone who hears the sound of the horn, flute, harp, lyre, and psaltery, in symphony with all kinds of music, shall fall down and worship the gold image.”” ‘You made a decree and said that when you strike up the band, you want everybody to all fall down.’

Verse 12, ““There are certain Jews...Shadrach, Meshach, and Abed-Nego...They do not serve your gods or worship the gold image which you have set up.”” They evidently decided not to go after Daniel at this point. I guess they figured that Daniel had a little too much “stroke.” They would get his friends and then go for him next—a typical political move.

Verse 13, “Then Nebuchadnezzar, in rage and fury, gave the command to bring Shadrach, Meshach, and Abed-Nego. So they brought these men before the king.”

He said, ‘I’ve heard a report that you don’t serve my gods and you’re not worshipping my image. I tell you what. I am going to give you another chance because I am a nice guy. I have the band right over here. I’m going to give the maestro the nod and the band is going to strike up. All you fellows have to do is fall down and worship and everybody’s happy’ (v. 14-15). Nebuchadnezzar went on and made a very foolish statement at the end of this.

Verse 15, ““...But if you do not worship, you shall be cast immediately into the midst of a burning fiery furnace. And who is the god who will deliver you from my hands?””

The king said, ‘If you don’t, I’m going to throw you into the fiery furnace. I don’t care which God you worship, He can’t get you out of that.’ That was not a smart statement.

Verse 16, ““...‘we have no need to answer you in this matter.’”” They answered, ‘You don’t need to give us time to think this over. We want to tell you something.’

Verse 17, ““...our God whom we serve is able to deliver us from the burning fiery furnace, and He will deliver us from your hand, O king.”” They said, 'Do you want to know which God can do this? Well, we want you to know our God can do it. He can deliver us and He's going to deliver us out of your hands. He can deliver us from this fiery furnace.'

Verse 18, "...let it be known to you, O king, that we do not serve your gods, nor will we worship the gold image...."

Verse 19, "Then Nebuchadnezzar was full of fury, and the expression on his face changed...."

Boy, he was mad. He commanded that they heat the furnace seven times hotter. He wanted them to really crank up the steam.

Verse 20, "And he commanded certain mighty men of valor who were in his army to bind Shadrach, Meshach, and Abed-Nego, and cast them into the burning furnace." They bound them up and threw them in (v. 23).

Verses 24-26, "Then King Nebuchadnezzar was astonished; and he rose in haste and spoke, saying to his counselors, 'Did we not cast three men bound into the midst of the fire?' They answered and said to the king, 'True, O king.' 'Look!' he answered, 'I see four men loose, walking in the midst of the fire; and they are not hurt, and the form of the fourth is like the Son of God.' Then Nebuchadnezzar went near the mouth of the burning fiery furnace and spoke, saying, 'Shadrach, Meshach, and Abed-Nego, servants of the Most High God, come out, and come here....'" You better believe he was really asking nicely this time. They came out.

Verse 27, "...and they saw these men on whose bodies the fire had no power; the hair of their head was not singed nor were their garments affected, and the smell of fire was not on them."

Verse 28, "Nebuchadnezzar spoke, saying, 'Blessed be the God of Shadrach, Meshach, and Abed-Nego....'"

Verse 29, "Therefore I made a decree [he liked to make decrees] that any people, nation, or language which speaks anything amiss against the God of Shadrach, Meshach, and Abed-Nego shall be cut in pieces, and their houses shall be made an ash heap...." This was Nebuchadnezzar's famous and favorite punishment. Every time he got mad he threatened to cut you up in little pieces—unless he threatened to throw you into the fiery furnace. So, now he was "gung ho." He gave them a promotion. You find out what an emotional sort that old Nebuchadnezzar was.

Then in chapter 4 there is actually a chapter of the Bible that King Nebuchadnezzar himself wrote.

It starts out in Daniel 4:1-2, "Nebuchadnezzar the king, to all peoples, nations and languages that dwell in all the earth: peace be multiplied to you. I thought it good to declare the signs and wonders that the Most High God has worked for me." Oh, so he learned a little bit. You better believe!

He had this dream. He tells the story, and I am going to summarize it for the sake of time. He saw in the dream this tree; it was a great tree. All the birds and the beasts lodged in it and it grew strong. Then a holy one gave the signal from heaven to cut down the tree (vv. 5-14).

Verses 14-17, "He cried aloud and said thus: 'Chop down the tree and cut off its branches, strip off its leaves and scatter its fruit. Let the beasts get out from under it, and the birds from its branches. Nevertheless leave the stump and roots in the earth, bound with a band of iron and bronze, in the tender grass of the field. Let it be wet, with the dew of heaven, and let him graze with the beasts on the grass of the earth. Let his heart be changed from that of a man. Let him be given the heart of an animal, and let seven times pass over him. This decision is by the decree of the watchers, and the sentence by the word of the holy ones, in order that the living may know that the Most High rules in the kingdom of men, gives it to whomever He will, and sets over it the lowest of men.'"

Daniel came in and talked to Nebuchadnezzar about it. Daniel was astonished when he heard it (vv. 18-19). It really bothered him because he had developed affection and a liking for the king. Daniel told him that he represented the tree (vv. 20-22). The upshot of the vision was that the king was going to lose his sanity. His kingdom would be taken from him. He would roam the fields for seven years like an animal stark raving mad. At the end of those seven years, he would return to his kingdom (vv. 25-26).

Then he gave the king some advice.

Verse 27, "Therefore, O king, let my counsel be acceptable to you; break off your sins by being righteous [You need to repent.], and your iniquities by showing mercy to the poor. Perhaps there may be a lengthening of your prosperity."

He told him, 'If you will really try to straighten out and do what you should do, maybe this won't happen anytime soon.' You better believe he walked softly for a while. It scared him to death. But a day went by, a week and a month went by—and nothing happened. The carnal mind begins to forget some of these things. It begins to fade. It doesn't seem very real. And sure enough, about a year later he was strutting around up there in the palace.

Verse 30, “The king spoke, saying, ‘Is not this great Babylon, that I have built for a royal dwelling by my mighty power and for the honor of my majesty?’” ‘Look at what I’ve done and how great I am.’

Verse 31, “While the word was still in the king’s mouth, a voice fell from heaven: ‘King Nebuchadnezzar, to you it is spoken: the kingdom has departed from you!’”

He went absolutely insane and wound up living like an animal for seven years (v. 33).

Verse 34, “At the end of the time I, Nebuchadnezzar, lifted my eyes to heaven, and my understanding returned to me; and I blessed the Most High and praised and honored Him who lives forever.” He came back and issued this decree that was an acknowledgement of the supremacy of God.

There are prophetic implications to chapter 4. I will not entirely go into it right now. I gave a sermon on this during the Feast of Trumpets 1989. You might want to go back to that because as we are going to see when we get into the handwriting on the wall, God lays out the appointed time (Daniel 8:19).

[The 1989 Feast of Trumpets sermon “Babylon” is included with Bible Study # 91.]

Seven times (v. 16) can be seven literal times. It can be seven literal years or seven prophetic times. What Nebuchadnezzar went through was typified by what happened with the fall of Babylon. These seven prophetic times translate out into twenty-five hundred twenty years that passed over until the final form of Babylon could once again begin to emerge. You might want to go back on some of that.

It’s no accident at all that the events that happened all centered around the Festival period of 1989. What used to be the communist block—everything began unraveling with the fall of the Berlin Wall and the collapse of the communist regime around the Festival period of 1989. It all centered at the beginning of the Feast of Trumpets, and you can tie in those specific things. You can go back and look at the exact dates, and it was just “bang, bang, bang.” We sat and watched those things during the Feast of Tabernacles. Every night some of these things were occurring—twenty-five hundred and twenty years from the fall of Babylon. Babylon fell on the Feast of Trumpets 539 B.C. Twenty-five hundred and twenty years later brings you to the Feast of Trumpets 1982.

What occurred at that time was a reversal of policy in Germany. Overnight the coalition party that had formed an alliance with the Social Democrats announced they were pulling out of the alliance and they brought the Christian Democrats, which is the official Roman Catholic political party, into Germany. Politics in Europe do not have separation of church and state. There is an official Catholic party (Christian Democrats) in most of those nations. That’s why they use the term. It was formed by the bishops after World War II.

The Christian Democrat Party was brought to power as a result of the switch on the evening that began the Feast of Trumpets 1982. Two weeks later, it took power on the evening that began the Feast of Tabernacles in 1982. Exactly seven years to the day (seven literal times from that), the Berlin Wall fell and the whole situation in Eastern Europe came together.

Some of you who were at the Feast of Tabernacles in Biloxi heard those things back in 1979. Those things were gone through and laid out. We were told exactly what was going to happen—and sure enough it came out just exactly that way. I know I have preached on this at various times. It’s a matter that is laid out in advance. We will get into some of that a little bit later. If I don’t pick up speed, we are going to be bogging down here.

Daniel 4 tells the story of the lessons that the Most High rules in the affairs of men. God sets over nations whomsoever He will (vv. 17, 32). God has a master plan. God overrides history.

Daniel 5 tells the story of Nebuchadnezzar’s grandson who had not learned that lesson. Belshazzar made a great feast. They were really boozing it up in there.

Daniel 5:1, “Belshazzar the king made a great feast for a thousand of his lords, and drank wine in the presence of the thousand.” It wasn’t just a little tiny wine glass. He was really “belting” it down.

Verse 2, “...Belshazzar gave command to bring the gold and silver vessels which his father Nebuchadnezzar had taken from the temple which had been in Jerusalem, that the king and his lords, his wives, and his concubines might drink from them.” These were sacred vessels.

Verse 4, “They drank wine, and praised the gods of gold and silver, bronze and iron, wood and stone.” If they were toasting each one of these gods, by the time they got down to the god of stone, you can believe they were pretty well “crocked.” They started out with the gods of gold. They all had to drink to the gods of gold.

Then they drank to the gods of silver. By the time they got down to the gods of stone and wood, nobody cared to what they were drinking. They were really going to it.

Verses 5-6, "In the same hour the fingers of a man's hand appeared and wrote opposite the lamp stand on the plaster of the wall of the king's palace; and the king saw the part of the hand that wrote. The king's countenance changed, and his thoughts troubled him, so that the joints of his hips were loosed...." KJV, "the joints of his loins were loosed."

Now that's an interesting expression. It means that he had a very embarrassing accident about that point. It just absolutely scared the "daylights" out of him, and as I say, he had a very embarrassing accident about that time. "...and his knees knocked against each other." He must have been rubbing his eyes and wondering if he was having the D.T.'s (Delirium Tremens) or seeing pink elephants. But what he saw was this hand that appeared out of nowhere and started writing. It just absolutely frightened him to death.

Verse 7, "The king cried aloud to bring in the astrologers, the Chaldeans, and the soothsayers. And the king spoke, saying to the wise men of Babylon, 'Whosoever reads this writing, and tells me its interpretation, shall be clothed with purple and have a chain of gold around his neck; and he shall be the third ruler in the kingdom.'"

He was the second ruler of the kingdom. This account doesn't mention his father Nabonidus because he was several hundred miles away with another army and didn't figure in the point at this time. Belshazzar had been here for a couple of years as the regent in Babylon.

The king's wise men couldn't explain what it meant and he was greatly troubled (vv. 8-9). The queen came in (v. 10).

She said in v. 11, "There is a man in your kingdom in whom is the Spirit of the Holy God. And in the days of your father, light and understanding and wisdom, like the wisdom of the gods, were found in him; and King Nebuchadnezzar your father—your father the king—made him chief of the magicians...." He was greatly thought of and he was able to interpret many things for Nebuchadnezzar.

Verse 12, "...let Daniel be called and he will give the interpretation." Daniel was brought in. Belshazzar tries to "lay it on thick" (vv. 13-15).

Verse 16, "And I have heard of you, that you can give interpretations and explain enigmas. Now if you can read the writing and make known to me its interpretation, you shall be clothed with purple and have a chain of gold around your neck, and shall be the third ruler in the kingdom."

Verse 17, "Then Daniel answered, and said before the king, 'Let your gifts be for yourself....' He knew that his gifts weren't going to do him any good.

Verse 18, "O king, the Most High God gave Nebuchadnezzar your father a kingdom and majesty, glory and honor."

Verse 20, "But when his heart was lifted up, and his spirit was hardened in pride, he was deposed...."

Verses 21-22, "Then he was driven from the sons of men, his heart was made like the beasts, and his dwelling was with the wild donkeys. They fed him with grass like oxen, and his body was wet with the dew of heaven, till he knew that the Most High God rules in the kingdom of men, and appoints over it whomever He chooses. But you his son, Belshazzar, have not humbled your heart, although you knew all this."

'You remember this. You were a child when these events were going on. You remember this, but it hasn't changed your conduct. You have this contemptible attitude toward the God of heaven.'

Verse 23, "And you have lifted yourself up against the Lord of heaven. They have brought the vessels of His house [temple] before you...." They brought in the sacred vessels.

Verses 24-25, "Then the fingers of the hand were sent from Him, and this writing was written. And this is the inscription that was written: MENE, MENE, TEKEL, UPHARSIN [KJV, PERES]." These were words, in the language, that were units of measurement. The minah, the shekel and the peres were units of measurement. The problem wasn't that they didn't recognize the words. It's like you had something that was suddenly written on the wall that said, 'pounds, pounds, tons and ounces.' What does that mean? You recognize the words, but the statement doesn't make sense. 'Feet, feet, inches and yards.' I know what an inch is and I know what a foot and a yard is, but that's nonsense. It doesn't mean anything. It wasn't that they didn't know what a minah, a shekel or a peres was, but it didn't mean anything. It was a meaningless expression. They knew that it had to mean something, but they couldn't figure it out.

He said in vv. 26-28, "This is the interpretation of each word. MENE: God has numbered your kingdom, and finished it; TEKEL: You have been weighed in the balances, and found wanting; PERES: Your kingdom has been divided, and given to the Medes and Persians.” Verses 30-31, “That very night Belshazzar, king of the Chaldeans, was slain. And Daruis the Mede, received the kingdom, being about sixty-two years old.”

Babylon had been besieged by the Persians for a period of time. But the Babylonians thought they were invincible. They didn’t think that Babylon could be conquered. The walls of Babylon were tremendous. They were so thick that there was like a highway that ran around the top. They could literally have chariots races on it. There wasn’t any way to break through; you could batter on it for a year. They thought it was impossible. No way! They had all the food they wanted. They had water. And they had an impregnable wall. There wasn’t anything they could do. So, they were feasting and thought they were invulnerable. They weren’t.

You know what the Persians did? They dug a trench. The Euphrates River flowed right through Babylon. There was a guard that came down into the water so you couldn’t come through with boats or anything like that. But the Persians dug a diversionary canal away from Babylon that connected the Euphrates River with a small tributary. That night they broke the earthen dam and diverted the water of the Euphrates. Within a very short time the water level started dropping when they broke the dam loose back several miles away. All of a sudden, the water was diverted and it began to drop. When it dropped far enough, they moved their army into the muddy river channel underneath the wall. While Babylon was boozing it up, all of a sudden, the army was on the inside rather than out. And in one night’s time Babylon fell.

People boast, and they think, ‘We have it made and we have security.’ I tell you what—when God is ready for something to happen, it can happen so quickly that it just makes you shake your head. That is a very important lesson.

This MENE, MENE, TEKEL, UPHARSIN is interesting. “MENE” has to do with numbers. We are told that this is something that has to do with numbers that are weights and they are to be divided. “MENE” is derived from “minah,” which is a unit of measuring weight. “TEKEL” is the alternate spelling of “shekel,” another unit of weight. “UPHARSIN” means “and peres.” The “u” or the “v” in the Hebrew language is the “and.” “Peres” is yet another unit of weight.

There are fifty shekels in a MENE and twenty-five shekels in a peres. There are one hundred twenty-six shekels of weight altogether counting the one shekel.

When you divide them into their smallest unit of weight, which is the “gerah,” you find a reference to that back in Leviticus 27.

Leviticus 27:25, ““And all your valuations shall be according to the shekel of the sanctuary: twenty gerahs to the shekel.””

There are fifty shekels in a minah and twenty-five shekels in a peres. So, if you have minah and minah, add that and you have one hundred shekels. Add the one shekel, the shekel (or tekell) itself, and that’s one hundred one. Plus the twenty-five shekels that are the peres and you come up with one hundred twenty-six. We are told twenty gerahs to the shekel. To divide it down, take these numbers that are weights and divide them down to the smallest number. Then you multiply the twenty times one hundred twenty-six and you come out with two thousand five hundred twenty. Babylon was weighted and found wanting (v. 27). It remained in abeyance. Again, you come back to this two thousand five hundred twenty-year period—the seven times.

MENE = 50 shekels = 1000 gerahs
MENE = 50 shekels = 1000 gerahs
TEKEL = 1 shekels = 20 gerahs
PERES = 25 shekels = 500 gerahs
126 shekels 2520 gerahs
x 20 gerahs
2520 gerahs

Revelation 12:14 defines times, time and half a time (three and one-half years). Revelation 11:2-3 defines that as forty-two months (three and one-half years) or one thousand two hundred sixty days (three and one-half years). Seven times is twice three and one-half years. Twice one thousand two hundred sixty is two thousand five hundred twenty. So seven times comes out to two thousand five hundred twenty prophetic days. Mene, mene, shekel and peres—if you take those numbers that are weights and divide them down to the smallest denominator, they add up to a total of two thousand five hundred twenty. Again, you have this interesting number that comes out. Babylon was weighed, found wanting and remained in abeyance for this period after it fell to the Medes and the Persians on this evening in 539 B.C.

Cyrus was the king over the entire Medo-Persian Empire. Darius the Mede was the number-two man that was set as king of Babylon. Cyrus did not enter Babylon, but he masterminded the siege. Once he saw what was occurring, he took a large part of the army and went elsewhere. This was the fall of the capital, but all the battles weren't over. The battle with Nabonidus, who was the king of the Babylonian Empire, took place a little later. Cyrus took his army to go after Nabonidus and allowed Darius the Mede to come in as the king or regent in Babylon.

Daniel 6:1-2, "It pleased Darius to set over the kingdom one hundred and twenty satraps, to be over the whole kingdom; and over these, three governors, of whom Daniel was one [KJV, "of whom Daniel was first"]..."

Word must have gotten out very quickly about what Daniel had done. He was very impressed and set Daniel in positions of power.

People were jealous of him. They figured they couldn't find anything to accuse Daniel of except in areas pertaining to his worship of God (vv. 4-5). They talked Darius into making his crazy decree that nobody could pray to anybody except him for a month. They made the decree (vv. 7-9). Sure enough, they found Daniel kept doing what he was always doing.

Verse 10, "...And in the upper room, with his windows open toward Jerusalem, he knelt down on his knees three times that day, and prayed and gave thanks before his God, as was his custom since early days." He didn't make a big public show about it, but he went to his house and knelt down and prayed. So, sure, they were spying on him. They went and told the king he violated the decree.

King Darius had a little more humility than Nebuchadnezzar.

Verse 14, "And the king, when he heard these words, was greatly displeased with himself [It just really upset him that he could have been so stupid as to do something like that.], and set his heart on Daniel to deliver him; and he labored till the going down of the sun to deliver him."

But remember the law of the Medes and Persians? Once a decree had been issued, it couldn't be reversed. The king kept trying to figure a way to get Daniel out of this and he couldn't.

So, Darius told him in v. 16, "...they brought Daniel and cast him into the den of lions. But the king spoke, saying to Daniel, 'Your God, whom you serve continually, He will deliver you.'" So, even Darius evidenced some faith.

He was ashamed of himself for having done something like this. He had allowed himself to be flattered and his ego "button" pushed to where he did something like this. He told Daniel he believed that the God that he served would deliver him. He knew how diligent he was and believed God would deliver him. In fact, the king passed the night fasting. He wasn't able to sleep (v. 18). He just worried and was just sick all night about what he had done. So, he certainly showed a little more humble attitude than many of the kings we have run into.

Verses 19-20, "Then the king arose very early in the morning and went in haste to the den of lions. And when he came to the den, he cried out with a lamenting voice to Daniel. The king spoke, saying to Daniel, 'Daniel, servant of the living God, has your God, whom you serve continually, been able to deliver you from the lions?'" And Daniel said, 'Yes!'

Verses 22-23, "'My God sent His angel and shut the lions' mouths, so that they have not hurt me, because I was found innocent before Him...Then the king was exceedingly glad for him....'"

Verse 24, "And the king gave the command, and they brought those men who had accused Daniel, and they cast them into the den of lions...." We find that by this time, the lions had worked up a good appetite. The angel had shut their mouth. These old lions—can you imagine? Here are these lions. They had dinner right in front of them and their stomachs were growling and churning away, but they couldn't get their mouths open. They must have been pretty frustrated by the time those other guys were thrown down in there. The angel left and then the lions helped themselves.

Darius wrote a decree (vv. 25-27). He was impressed.

Verse 28, "So Daniel prospered in the reign of Darius and in the reign of Cyrus the Persian." Daniel was given great favor.

We go through in sort of the story flow of the book.

Now, as we come to Daniel 7, we have a vision that Daniel had in the first year of Belshazzar. He saw four great creatures: a lion, a bear, a leopard that had four heads, and a fourth great dreadful beast (vv. 1-7).

Daniel 7:17-18, "'Those great beasts, which are four, are four kings which arise out of the earth. But the saints of the Most High shall receive the kingdom, and possess the kingdom forever, even forever and ever.'" We have this sequence.

Remember, you had the gold, silver, brass and the iron. Here you have the lion, the bear, the leopard and this terrible creature with iron teeth. It ends up with God taking the kingdom. Again, we have this same sequence. We will go more into that in the book of Revelation.

Verses 19-20, "'Then I wished to know the truth about the fourth beast, which was different from all the others, exceedingly dreadful, with its teeth of iron and its nails of bronze, which devoured, broke in pieces, and trampled the residue with its feet; and about the ten horns that were on its head, and about the other horn which came up, before which three fell, namely, that horn which had eyes and a mouth which spoke pompous words, whose appearance was greater than his fellows.”

We are told in v. 25, ““He shall speak pompous words against the Most High, shall persecute the saints of the Most High, and shall intend to change times and law. Then the saints shall be given into his hand for a time and times and half a time.”” You will find this reference to either seven times or to half that duration that figures very prominently prophetically.

Just to call your attention to something, go back to Revelation 11.

Revelation 11:2, “...And they will tread the holy city underfoot for forty-two months.” Now, how long is forty-two months? Thirty-six months is three years; six more makes forty-two—that’s three and one-half years.

Then notice in v. 3, ““And I will give power to my two witnesses, and they will prophesy one thousand two hundred and sixty days, clothed in sackcloth.””

In v. 2, we find forty-two months and in v. 3, it talks about one thousand two hundred sixty days. Now, if you take a thirty-day month and multiply thirty times forty-two, that’s one thousand two hundred sixty. Forty-two thirty-day months is one thousand two hundred sixty days.

Continue down in Revelation 12:6, ““Then the woman fled into the wilderness, where she has a place prepared by God, that they should feed her there one thousand two hundred and sixty days.””

Continue down in v. 14, ““But the woman was given two wings of a great eagle, that she might fly into the wilderness to her place, where she is nourished for at time and times and half a time....”” One thousand two hundred sixty days, forty-two months or time, times and a half a time—these are equated right here in Revelation 11 and 12. It’s not just me, reaching up in the air and pulling out some numbers. The Bible uses those numbers and clearly defines one thousand two hundred sixty days, forty-two months, time, times and a half a time, and three and one-half years. You double it and you have seven years. When you double one thousand two hundred sixty days, you have two thousand five hundred twenty days. So, certain of these numbers have significance.

[I can see one number that has significance is the time. There isn’t any way I can do justice to the rest of the book of Daniel if we quit by 8:30. I tell you what we’ll do. We are going to finish up the book of Daniel next time. I’ll make a two-part out of Daniel.]

Let me go on a little further here in Chapter 7. There’s still a lot of material here.

In chapter 7, Daniel sees these four creatures coming up out of the sea. He sees the one like a lion; he sees one like a bear. This bear has three ribs in its mouth (vv. 3-5).

Daniel 7:6, ““After this I looked, and there was another, like a leopard, which had on its back four wings of a bird. The beast also had four heads, and dominion was given to it.””

Verses 7-9, ““After this I saw in the night visions, and behold, a fourth beast, dreadful and terrible, exceedingly strong. It had huge iron teeth; it was devouring, breaking in pieces, and trampling the residue with its feet. It was different from all the beasts that were before it, and it had ten horns. I was considering the horns, and there was another horn, a little one, coming up among them, before whom three of the first horns were plucked out by the roots. And there, in this horn, were eyes like the eyes of a man, and a mouth speaking pompous words. I watched till thrones were put in place, and the Ancient of Days was seated....””

He talks about the Kingdom of God being established.

Verses 12-13, ““As for the rest of the beasts [referring to the ten kings], they had their dominion taken away, yet their lives were prolonged for a season and a time. I was watching in the night visions, and behold, One like the Son of Man coming with the clouds of heaven....””

Daniel uses the term “One like the Son of Man” or “One like the Son of God” several times. Do you know why he uses that term? Though Jesus Christ eternally co-existed with the Father, until He became flesh and was born of the Virgin Mary, He was not the Son of God. He became the Son of God. He was God—the Logos or the Word. There was a relationship between the Ones that we know as the Father and the Son, but they did not have a Father-Son relationship until the One that we know as Jesus Christ—the Word—became flesh. This is prior to Christ’s incarnation as a human being. Daniel can only describe Him as “One like the Son of man” or “Son of God.” That was what He was going to be, and that is the appropriate term that we use. But that exact relationship had not yet been defined because this was several hundred years prior to that event in history.

Continuing in v. 13, "...One like the Son of Man, coming with the clouds of heaven! He came to the Ancient of Days, and they brought Him near before Him."

Verse 14, "Then to Him was given dominion and glory and a kingdom, that all peoples, nations, and languages should serve Him. His dominion is an everlasting dominion, which shall not pass away, and His kingdom the one which shall not be destroyed."

Daniel didn't understand what this meant (v. 15). He was told that these four great beasts are kings or kingdoms that will arise (v. 17).

Verse 18, "But the saints of the Most High shall receive the kingdom, and possess the kingdom forever, even forever and ever."

He was really curious about this fourth beast and about the ten horns (vv. 19-20).

Verses 21-22, "I was watching; the same horn was making war against the saints, and prevailed against them, until the Ancient of Days came, and a judgment was made in favor of the saints of the Most High, and the time came for the saints to possess the kingdom."

Verse 23-24, "Thus he said: 'The fourth beast shall be a fourth kingdom on earth [If you remember the image, this would be the legs of iron; this is the Roman Empire.], which shall be different from all other kingdoms, and shall devour the whole earth, trample it and break it in pieces. The ten horns are ten kings who shall arise from this kingdom. And another shall rise after them [Or, 'in the same way.' Not 'after them' chronologically but 'in like manner as they arise' coming up out of this empire. There will be these successor states to the Roman Empire and this little one pops up. It is, in some ways, a successor and in other ways, it is not.]; he shall be different from the first ones, and shall subdue three kings.'"

Verse 25, "He shall speak pompous words against the Most High, shall persecute the saints of the Most High, and shall intend to change times and law. [Here we have what, in reality, is a religious authority trying to change the law of God, trying to change the Sabbath from Saturday to Sunday, trying to change the Holy Days to pagan holidays.] Then the saints shall be given into his hand for a time and times and half a time."

Verses 26-27, "But the court shall be seated, and they shall take away his dominion, to consume and destroy it forever. Then the kingdom and dominion, and the greatness of the kingdoms under the whole heaven, shall be given to the people, the saints of the Most High. His kingdom is an everlasting kingdom, and all dominions shall serve and obey Him."

The Roman Empire fell. After it collapsed in 476 A.D., there were three quick successor kingdoms that established themselves there in Italy and in portions of the Empire: the Vandals, the Heruli and the Ostrogoths. We will go into a little bit more about them next time.

The little horn (vv. 8, 24-25) is a reference to the papacy. The bishop of Rome was responsible for soliciting Justinian, the emperor of the east, to come in and to overthrow the Vandals, Heruli, and the Ostrogoths. Justinian came in to conquer those kingdoms and to establish what is called in history, The Imperial Restoration, which was established in 554 A.D.

When Rome collapsed in 476 A.D., the Vandals, the Heruli and the Ostrogoths successfully came in and took over. Justinian was solicited out of the east several decades later. Finally, in 554 A.D. he came in and overthrew them. We will pick up the story there next time.

You have the handout material on Daniel. We will come back and pick it up and go through some more details on Daniel 11.

There is an awful lot of material packed into the book of Daniel. There are, certainly, principles relating to Christian living and to handling ourselves in various circumstances. There is the history of the people of God during this period after the exile. There is also the background of a tremendous amount of prophecy that sets the tone for what's happening in the world today. Why do we see what's happening on the world scene? What we see are events of tremendous significance. There are events going on in Central Europe right now down in the Balkans. There are a lot of things that tie in and are setting the stage for the final emergence of a great power in Europe.

In Daniel 2, the final ten kings are composed part of iron and part of miry clay (vv. 33, 41). This term "miry clay" could also be rendered "ceramic." If you take something that is composed of iron and miry clay, it doesn't stick together well. You can make something of iron and ceramic and you can paint it and it can look all the same. But you know what? If you smote it with something hard, you know what would happen? All the ceramic would shatter.

What you have in Europe right now, on the one hand, is the Germanic realm. And, of course, Germany is the successor of the iron kingdom. Remember what the highest decoration that the Germans gave? The Iron Cross! Everybody else gave gold medals. The Germans had the Iron Cross. On the one hand, you have hardness and regimentation. But what do you have in the Central European areas? What do you have in the Balkans? What do you have in the old communist regime, the old successor states of the Eastern Empire? You have something that can fracture a thousand different ways. That's what it is doing right now. Eventually it's going to be put together, but it has that potential to fracture. There's always been that fractious tendency in the Eastern realm. You can go back and look at ancient Greece. Greece was never a nation. It was composed of about fifty different city-states that were always squabbling among one another. There was always that fractious tendency.

If you look at the Orthodox realm as opposed to the Catholic realm, the Orthodox realm is split. You have Serbian-Greek Orthodox, Russian Orthodox and all these various Orthodox groups that are technically in communion with one another, but they fracture and they sub-divide. They have always had the fractious tendency in the Greek realm. The Balkans keeps dividing down. They keep dividing some of these countries down and down and down.

The word "Balkans" comes from a word that means "mountain." It is a very mountainous, rugged area. So you had all these little isolated groups, and everybody spoke a little bit different dialects. Until modern times, it was hard to get over the mountains. Every little group sort of thought they were similar, but there were differences. And it was difficult to even rule because it was such a rugged area.

There's always been that fractious tendency that they've had. That's why, when it's likened to a mixture of iron and miry clay, it's likened to something that won't stick together. When you smite it, the iron reverberates and the ceramic shatters. Now, when God smites it, the whole thing is going to shatter. Eventually, it's going to shatter internally. It won't last very long. We will go into that when we get to Revelation. We see the stage being set. You see these fractures that are spreading through Eastern Europe and all these nations are sub-dividing. Yugoslavia has already fallen apart. Czechoslovakia is about to fall apart right now between the Czechs and the Slovaks. They are going to divide it up. It keeps dividing and sub-dividing in those areas.

We will stop there and pick it up next time.

The Writings Series—Daniel—Part 2

We are continuing in the book of Daniel. I want to come back a little bit to some material that we have touched on a little earlier. We are going to have a chance to pick up a few details that we had skimmed over.

Daniel is organized in terms of subject matter. As you go through the book, it does not strictly follow chronological development. You will notice that many of the chapters in Daniel are dated in terms of when the prophecy came. One of the things that you note is that Daniel dates some of the chapters later on in the book as having been received at times earlier than some of the previous chapters. Now there are reasons for that.

He starts out and sort of follows the chronological order up to chapter 3. Chapters 4 and 5 are interesting because they are many years apart. Many of the events recorded in chapters 6 through 12 certainly occurred prior to some of what is here in chapter 5. Daniel 4 and 5 are back to back not because they chronologically follow one another, but because there is a point that God is making in terms of the lesson. Chapter 4 records a lesson that Nebuchadnezzar learned. This lesson centered around the fact that, as is brought out in Daniel 4:17, “...in order that the living may know that the Most High rules in the kingdom of men, gives it to whomever He will, and sets over it the lowest of men.”

In Daniel 4, Nebuchadnezzar had this vision of this great gigantic tree that was cut down and severed. But it was not uprooted. The stump was left. It was banded with iron and brass, and seven times, prophetically, were to pass over the stump of this tree (vv. 10-15, 20-23, 26). And then the obvious implication was that it would begin to bud and put forth life once again.

There is sort of an interesting statement recorded in the book of Job.

Job 14:7-9, “For there is hope for a tree, if it is cut down, that it will sprout again, and that its tender shoots will not cease. Though its root may grow old in the earth, and its stump may die in the ground, yet at the scent of water it will bud and bring forth branches like a plant.” The point is that a tree can be cut down and nothing but the stump is left. You can have new life that can spring up from those roots.

There was a rather remarkable tree that I noticed that way. I think it was on that stretch of Highway 90 between Beaumont and Dayton, Texas. There was a house on the side of the road and a tree had been cut down. The original tree had grown up and it had been cut off. Two shoots had come up later; one out of the very end and one on the other end had come up. But this time they had grown up considerably and it was a very odd-looking tree. It was almost like a built-in seat where the original trunk was. You could see that the trunk was much thicker. But two shoots had come up and it had grown to where it was now putting out shade.

We have, here in Daniel 4, this big tree that was cut down. The tree was symbolic of Nebuchadnezzar. Nebuchadnezzar personified the Babylonian Empire. He was the first king of what is called in history the Neo-Babylonian Empire—the empire that began to be put together about three years prior to the conquest of Judah in 604 B.C.

What Nebuchadnezzar saw here in chapter 4, the tree being cut down (v. 14), symbolized him being cut off. And yet specific instructions were to leave the stump. The stump was to be left in the ground. It was not to be uprooted or cut out. The stump was there and it was to be banded with iron and brass (v. 15). Nebuchadnezzar lost his mind and his kingdom.

A period of seven literal years went by (v. 16). Nebuchadnezzar learned a lesson. When he assumed control of his kingdom again, he had learned a lesson. He had learned, as a result of those seven years of his kingdom being in abeyance—as far as he was concerned—that God rules in the affairs of men (v. 17).

We pick up the story in chapter 5 a number of years later with Nebuchadnezzar’s grandson Belshazzar. In fact, we would date the seven years of Nebuchadnezzar’s insanity from 569 to 562 B.C. When we pick up the story of Belshazzar, this is dated in 539 B.C. So, about twenty-three years had transpired between the end of chapter 4 and the beginning of chapter 5. Nebuchadnezzar had been dead for many years by this time.

We pick it up in chapter 5. Nebuchadnezzar’s son Nabonidus became king several years later. Nabonidus associated Belshazzar with him on the throne as co-ruler. Warfare had broken out. Nabonidus took a great army and has now been gone from Babylon for a period of a couple of years. Belshazzar was left as the ruler in Babylon as his father Nabonidus was leading the army that had gone out to deal with the Persians.

Babylon is under siege, but in their own mind, Belshazzar and his advisors are absolutely convinced that Babylon is impregnable—that Babylon can never be broken into. So, they have a party to show the absolute contempt in which they hold the Persian army. Cyrus the Great and his army had been encamped outside of Babylon for a period of months. Belshazzar held them in contempt and thought there wasn't any way that they were going to get into Babylon.

So, on this evening of the new moon in the fall of the year 539 B.C. (that was none other than the Feast of Trumpets), Belshazzar has this big drunken party. After they had been drinking for a while, he called for the sacred vessels which had been taken from the temple in Jerusalem to be brought in (Daniel 5:2-3). In effect showing that, 'Look, none of the other gods have been able to deliver their people from the mighty hand of Babylon. Babylon's gods [kings] are great over all.' To show his disdain, he brings out these sacred vessels that would have normally been shown respect because they were considered sacred to God.

So, he's in there and they are drinking toasts and really "boozing" it up. You remember the story of the handwriting on the wall. The handwriting was interpreted.

Daniel 5:26-28, "This is the interpretation of each word, MENE: God has numbered your kingdom, and finished it; TEKEL: You have been weighed in the balances, and found wanting; PERES: Your kingdom has been divided, and given to the Medes and Persians." It was going to occur.

Now, Belshazzar had not learned the lessons that his grandfather had learned twenty-three years before—the fact that God rules over men. The nation had an opportunity to learn through lessons given to its first king. Nebuchadnezzar may have learned certain lessons, but certainly the nation as a whole and certainly his grandson Belshazzar who was sitting on the throne of Babylon had not profited at all. We have these two chapters in a position together showing the contrast.

As we touched on last time, one of the interesting things is the use of the term "seven times" in prophecy. We noted, as we went back to the book of Revelation, that there were three synonymous terms that were used in Revelation 11 and 12: forty-two months, one thousand two hundred sixty days and time, times and half a time.

Revelation 11:2, we find, "...they will tread the holy city underfoot for forty-two months."

Verse 3, "...two witnesses...will prophesy one thousand two hundred and sixty days..."

If you come down to Revelation 12:6, "Then the woman fled into the wilderness...one thousand two hundred and sixty days."

And in v. 14, "...the woman was given two wings...that she might fly into the wilderness ...where she is nourished for a time and times and half a time..."

Now, forty-two months is three and one-half years. Forty-two, thirty-day months, is one thousand two hundred sixty days. Take one thousand two hundred sixty and divide it by thirty and that will come out to forty-two. Forty-two thirty-day months is one thousand two hundred sixty days. So time, times and half a time is representative of three and one-half years or forty-two months or one thousand two hundred sixty days.

I will just call to your attention that we find in the book of Ezekiel and other places, the principle of a day for a year.

Ezekiel 4:6, "And when you have completed them, lie again on your right side; then you shall bear the iniquity of the house of Judah forty days. I have laid on you a day for each year."

You will find that same statement back in Numbers 14:34, "According to the number of the days in which you spied out the land, forty days, for each day you shall bear your guilt one year, namely forty years, and you shall know My rejection." So, the principle of a day for a year is utilized in prophecy. Seven times would be twice as much as time, times and half a time. Three and one-half doubled is seven. So, one thousand two hundred sixty years or one thousand two hundred sixty days doubled is two thousand five hundred twenty.

We see that aspect in Daniel 4. Nebuchadnezzar went through insanity for a literal period of seven years. Babylon was without a king for a literal period of seven years. In effect, it was under the regency of Daniel and his friends and others, perhaps of the family. But Babylon was without a king. The empire was sort of on hold for this period. Nebuchadnezzar personified that empire. He was not around for those seven years. He came back and he had learned a lesson. But his kingdom had not learned a lesson. His family had not learned a lesson.

Now we see the reference of the stump being banded seven times. That's what we were told in Daniel 4:14-16. The stump was to be left and seven times were to pass.

When we came down to Daniel 5, we saw the handwriting on the wall. We commented that MENE, MENE, TEKEL, UPHARSIN were numbers that were weights—the mina, the shekel and the peres. Just to mention, the “u” or the “v” in Hebrew as it is here in “upharsin” is just the conjunction “and.” That’s why I say peres rather than upharsin. The name of the weight was peres. “Upharsin” means “and peres.” These are simply alternate spellings. They are known by the more common Hebrew names. The mene, shekel and upharsin are the Chaldean names.

There were fifty shekels in a mina and twenty-five shekels in a peres. They were to be added. These are numbers (that are weights) that are to be divided. We noted that you are going to divide this down (just like in terms of math), going for the lowest common denominator. If you add something up this way, you would have to use the smallest number.

Mina is mentioned twice. The shekel is the smallest of the numbers that are mentioned here. There would be fifty shekels in one mina and fifty shekels in a second mina—that would be one hundred. The shekel itself would be one more—one hundred one. Then there are twenty-five shekels to the peres—that would be twenty-five more shekels. That would all add up to one hundred twenty-six.

Now what is the significance of that?

Go back to Leviticus 27:25, ““And all your valuation shall be according to the shekel of the sanctuary: twenty gerahs to the shekel.””

The smallest unit of measurement was the gerah, and there are twenty gerahs to the shekel. We see that the numbers that were given in the handwriting on the wall added up to one hundred twenty-six shekels. If you divide it down to the smallest, there are twenty gerahs to the shekel. If you multiply twenty times one hundred twenty-six, you would come up with two thousand five hundred twenty. Here’s the interesting thing. In chapters 4 and 5 you have these same numbers—two thousand five hundred twenty. They are given in two different ways, but you come out with the same thing. You have two totally different ways of arriving at it, but it comes out to exactly the same thing.

That evening was the fall of Babylon. Babylon fell. The point is that the Most High rules in the kingdom affairs of men and gives it to whomever He chooses (Daniel 4:25; Daniel 5:21). God sets over nations whomever He chooses. That’s an important lesson to learn. It has implications for us.

There are those who become upset, in terms of the Church, and have concluded that since Christ is unable to govern, they had better take over. You know, if God sets over nations whomever He chooses, how much more does He set over the Church whomever He chooses?

God governs in the affairs of nations. That doesn’t mean that since God governs in the affairs of nations that the best man for the job is always there—the best man for the job in the sense of what job God wants accomplished. No, Daniel 4:17 makes plain that, in terms of nations and governments of this world, sometimes the basest (lowest) of men are the ones that are set there, and God allows that.

Acts 17:26, “... [God] has determined their pre-appointed times and the boundaries of their habitation.” God has a great plan and a great purpose. He puts individuals into positions that will carry out that purpose. Sometimes there are various lessons to be learned. God has done that even in the nations of the world where He’s not nearly as involved as He is right in his own Church. So, clearly we have to understand and realize that God is the One who is in charge and to whom we look.

We have this two thousand five hundred twenty-year period that clearly refers to the time, as it is mentioned in Daniel 4, when the stump is banded. No new growth can come out of the stump. It’s got a cap on it. It can’t be broken through and no new growth is going to come until the bands are broken or cut asunder. And then, you don’t have a full-grown tree that pops up overnight, but new growth begins to come.

In Revelation 18:2, the end-time empire is called, ““BABYLON THE GREAT.”” It’s not called Rome the Great or Greece or Persia the Great—it’s called BABYLON THE GREAT. It’s a restoration of something on a little different scale. It’s of wider range than what had come before.

Both Daniel 4 and 5 indicate the two thousand five hundred twenty years in different ways but come to the same conclusion. Two thousand five hundred twenty years would elapse during which all the attempts at putting Babylon together again would be doomed to failure. It’s very interesting in the way some of these things have worked out and the things that we see shaping up right now.

I want to go back and pick up a little of that in chapter 4 and 5. We commented on chapter 6.

I might mention that Darius the Mede was the ruler of the Medes who were tributary to Cyrus. Originally the Medes had been the dominant part of the empire. Cyrus the Great was the heir to both the Median and Persian Empire. He united them together. His mother was a princess of the Medes. She was the daughter of the king of the Medes; his father was the king of Persia. The Medes had been the dominant power until Cyrus came on the scene and changed the configuration around. Darius the Mede was an older man. He was a prince of the Medes who were associated with Cyrus.

Daniel 5:31, “Darius the Mede received the kingdom, being about sixty-two years old.”

Evidently, when Cyrus saw that the situation in Babylon was over and the matter was resolved, he did not bother to enter into Babylon that night. He left Darius with a part of the army to come in, take and rule Babylon. Cyrus took the larger portion of the army and quickly went elsewhere. He was on his way to meet Nabonitus to defeat him and completely overthrow the Babylonian Empire. Cyrus did not return to Babylon for a few years. So, we read of Cyrus besieging Babylon, and yet we read of Darius the Mede being the king entering in. Darius was serving under Cyrus, but he was the one who was actually there in Babylon. It was about two or three years before Cyrus returned.

Daniel 7:1, “In the first year of Belshazzar....”

Now this goes back earlier than chapter 5, but it is added in at this later point. Chapters 7 and 8 deal with things during the reign of Belshazzar. God, in His organization of the book of Daniel, wanted chapters 4 and 5 back-to-back for clear emphasis of the two thousand five hundred twenty years. Also, the emphasis of the lesson Nebuchadnezzar learned and Belshazzar didn't learn were clearly shown in a position with one another.

Now, we pick up some of the events in the story that happened earlier. In chapter 7, Daniel saw four creatures coming up out of the sea, each different from one another: the lion with an eagle's wings, the bear that had three ribs in its mouth, the leopard that had four wings and four heads and then a fourth great dreadful beast (vv. 3-7).

You can look at Daniel 7 and Daniel 2 together. You remember the great image in Daniel 2—the head of gold, the chest of silver, the thighs of brass and the legs of iron. Again, you had four kingdoms that were illustrated. Daniel explained to Nebuchadnezzar that he and the Babylonian Empire over which he ruled were represented by the head of gold. After him another kingdom would arise. There were four kingdoms (vv. 38-40).

Here again in Daniel 7:3-7, we have these four beasts.

Daniel 7:17, we're told, ““These great beasts, which are four, are four kings which arise out of the earth.””

The lion represented the first one; that would have to be Babylon, the starting point. It's the only one that was mentioned that, v. 4, ““The first was like a lion, and had eagle's wings. I watched till its wings were plucked off; and it was lifted up from the earth and made to stand on two feet like a man, and a man's heart was given to it.””

God uses the analogy of wild creatures (animals of the jungle) to describe these great world-ruling Gentile empires. The reason He uses that analogy is because that was the way they acted. The “law of the jungle” is that whoever is the biggest and strongest eats and devours the others—and this is the way these empires and kingdoms have conducted themselves. The only exception is brought out. It mentions the lion had a man's heart given to it and stood on its feet. Nebuchadnezzar went through his period of insanity and there was a change. He came back with a little different attitude. That is very evident in Daniel 4, but that's the only one. That lesson was lost on everyone else. Nebuchadnezzar personally learned a lesson, but others didn't learn from his lesson. So, it's had to be repeated.

Verse 5, the bear is the second kingdom. It represented the kingdom of the Medes and the Persians. It's pictured as having three ribs in its mouth. It is told to arise and devour much flesh. The three ribs represent the three kingdoms that were swallowed up by the Medes and the Persians when they established their empire. The significance would be that they swallowed up the kingdoms of Lydia, Babylon and Egypt.

Verse 6, the leopard is pictured as having four wings and four heads. The empire that swallowed up the Medes and the Persians was the Greek Empire of Alexander the Great. But it had a very short duration. His empire as a unified empire lasted ten years—actually less than that because he didn't finish his conquest at the beginning of the ten years. Alexander died and his empire split and divided. Four of his generals ultimately came out with portions of his empire. Seleucus ruled the portion that would be modern-day Syria coming across to Iraq. Let's say, modern-day Iraq and Syria would be the portion Seleucus ruled. Coming down into Egypt, Ptolemy, one of Alexander's generals, took that part. Lysimachus, who was the third general, ruled ancient Asia Minor, the area up in what is now a portion of modern-day Turkey. Cassander, the fourth general, ruled over the area that basically would be modern-day Greece and coming up into some of the Balkan area.

There was a splintering of Alexander's empire. It splintered into four basic divisions, all of which were Greek speaking, Greek culture and Greek language. It was a continuation of what Alexander had started, but it splintered. They were unable to hold it all together. It's what's known in history as the Hellenistic period because it was the period of Greek dominance. It was the dominance of Greek language and culture that set the stage for the New Testament period.

Verse 7, then there was a fourth beast, dreadful and terrible. It was something that was really so beyond all these others that there wasn't even an animal that was used to signify it. It's pictured as having great iron teeth. It swallowed up and devoured everything else. It picked up all the rest. It was the fourth. And, of course, the Roman Empire did that. It swallowed up the remains of each of the four divisions of Alexander's empire.

A lot of people have heard the story of Mark Anthony and Cleopatra. Cleopatra was a direct descendant of Ptolemy. She was the last Greek ruler of Egypt. She committed suicide when Julius Caesar's nephew Octavian, better known in history as Augustus Caesar, defeated her army. In 31 B.C., the battle of Actium marked the complete triumph of the Roman Empire and the complete devouring of what was left of Alexander's old empire.

This beast (v. 7) is pictured as having ten horns; among these horns, a little horn pops up and causes the first three horns to be plucked up by the roots (v. 8). When the Roman Empire fell in the historical date of 476 A.D., the Vandals overran Rome and established a kingdom. Basically, three groups came in and vied for the supremacy in the Roman Empire. They are known historically as the Vandals, the Heruli and the Ostrogoths. From a historical standpoint, those would be the first three successors of the Roman Empire.

In 554 A.D. at the behest of the bishop of Rome, Justinian the Great, who was the ruler in Constantinople (the Eastern Empire), brought in an army and defeated the Vandals, the Heruli, and the Ostrogoths over a period of several years and caused their kingdom to be completely plucked up and ended. In 554 A.D., what was called the Imperial Restoration was proclaimed.

This was another successor to the Roman Empire, but this time at the behest of the bishop of Rome.

The first three, the Vandals, Heruli and Ostrogoths, though each of them nominally professed Christianity, were a different brand of heresy than the case of the bishop of Rome. There was quite a controversy.

We find here, in Daniel 7, this continuation that comes down and culminates in the return of Jesus Christ.

Daniel 7:20-21, the little horn, we are told, "...the other horn which came up, before which three fell, namely, that horn which had eyes and a mouth which spoke pompous words, whose appearance was greater than his fellows. I was watching; and the same horn was making war against the saints, and prevailing against them."

He was not counted among the ten. But one of the successors of the Roman Empire was none other than the papacy itself. The papacy took much of its imperial trappings from the old Roman Empire. In the fading of the Roman Empire, the papacy achieved its greatest power and prestige. Now it's described, "whose appearance was greater than his fellows." Even though it was by comparison a little horn, it outlasted any of the rest of them. It's been around for a whole lot longer. It spoke great swelling things—great pronouncements and great claims were made. It was responsible for persecution against the true Church (against the saints), the inquisitions and such. And it endures until the Ancient of Days establishes His Kingdom (v. 22).

We are told in v. 25, "He shall speak pompous words against the Most High, shall persecute the saints of the Most High, and shall intend to change times and law...."

Who claims to have changed the Sabbath? Who claims the authority to change the Sabbath? The very calendar we use is called the Gregorian calendar. It takes its name from Pope Gregory because he changed the old Julian calendar that was promulgated by Julius Caesar. "Change times and laws." Well, he changed sunset to sunset. Time was measured in terms of a day from sunset to sunset. Based on a papal decree in the early Middle Ages, that was changed to midnight. The day of rest was changed from the Sabbath to Sunday. The whole configuration of things was changed. Here we see that authority brought out.

Daniel 8:1-3, "In the third year of the reign of King Belshazzar a vision appeared to me—to me, Daniel—after the one that appeared to me the first time. I saw in the vision, and it so happened while I was looking, that I was in Shushan, the citadel...and I saw in the vision that I was by the River Ulai. Then I lifted my eyes and saw, and there, standing beside the river, was a ram which had two horns, and the two horns were high; but one was higher than the other, and the higher one came up last.”

This was a peculiar looking ram. This ram has two horns and one of them seems like it's growing. It pops up a little later and gets bigger. You probably have never seen a ram that you just stand there and watch his horns grow. You've seen rams that had horns. But Daniel saw this ram and, all of a sudden, he saw these horns start growing. One came up first; then another one came up a little later and it was taller. So, this was a peculiar-looking ram.

Verse 4, “I saw the ram pushing westward, northward, and southward, so that no beast could withstand him...”

Verse 5, “And as I was considering, suddenly a male goat came from the west, across the surface of the whole earth, without touching the ground; and the goat had a notable horn between his eyes.” Now this was a peculiar-looking goat. It didn't have two horns. It had one.

Verses 6-7, “Then he came to the ram that had two horns, which I had seen standing beside the river, and ran at him with furious power. And I saw him confronting the ram; he was moved with rage against him, attacked the ram, and broke his two horns. There was no power in the ram to withstand him [the ram just sort of withered down], but he cast him down to the ground and trampled him; and there was no one that could deliver the ram from his hand.”

Verse 8, “Therefore the male goat grew very great; but when he became strong, the large horn was broken, and in place of it four notable ones came up toward the four winds of heaven.” Now this must have been awfully peculiar. All of a sudden, the big horn got broken off and then four little horns sprouted out.

Verses 9-10, “And out of one of them came a little horn which grew exceedingly great toward the south, toward the east, and toward the Glorious Land [a reference to the land of Israel]. And it grew up to the host of heaven [or to the people of God]; and it cast down some of the host [some of God's people] and some of the stars to the ground, and trampled them.”

Verses 11-12, “He even exalted himself as high as the Prince of the host; and by him the daily sacrifices were taken away, and the place of His sanctuary was cast down. Because of transgression, an army was given over to the horn to oppose the daily sacrifices; and he cast truth down to the ground. He did all this and prospered.”

Verse 14, “And he said to me, ‘For two thousand three hundred days; then the sanctuary shall be cleansed.’” Daniel couldn't figure out what all this was about. Well, we don't have to just guess.

Verses 20-22, notice what he says, “‘The ram which you saw, having the two horns—they are the kings of Media and Persia. And the male goat is the kingdom of Greece. The large horn that is between its eyes is the first king. As for the broken horn and the four that stood up in its place, four kingdoms shall arise out of that nation, but not with its power.’”

That is a very clear description of the empire of the Medes and the Persians. It spread out. The Medes represented the first horn. Even though the Persians came on the scene a little later, they became the dominant portion of the empire. Then the Greeks, characterized by this male goat, came forth and conquered and smashed the empire of the Medes and the Persians. This was represented by the one great horn—its first king, Alexander the Great. When he was cut off, four kings took his place, but none of them exercised a level of power he did. Here is a very clear explanation. When you put Daniel 8 together with Daniel 7 and Daniel 2, it is very clear who the succession of empires has to be.

Verses 23-25, “‘And in the latter time of their kingdom, when the transgressors have reached their fullness, a king shall arise, having fierce features, who understands sinister schemes [KJV, “dark sentences”]. His power shall be mighty, but not by his own power, he shall destroy fearfully, and shall prosper and thrive; he shall destroy the mighty, and also the holy people. And through his cunning, he shall cause deceit to prosper under his hand; and he shall magnify himself in his heart. He shall destroy many in their prosperity. He shall even rise against the Prince of princes; but he shall be broken without human hand.’”

Here is something that obviously stretches down to the end time. There is a final king that is going to arise that is described as a king of fierce countenance. This is clearly the individual that is personified in the book of Revelation called the beast because he is the one that is going to stand up against the Prince of princes (referring to Christ) and will be broken without hand.

Remember in Daniel 2:45, we saw the stone cut out without hands that's going to smash the image on its toes. Well, he (the beast) will be broken without human hand. In other words, it will be of supernatural origin.

There's a reference in vv. 13-14 that the daily sacrifice would be taken away. I am going to come back here in just a moment to comment on that a little further. I want to go on here.

Daniel 9:1, "In the first year of Darius the son of Ahasuerus, of the lineage of the Medes, who was made king over the realm of the Chaldeans—" He was the uncle of Cyrus the Great. Cyrus made him king over the Chaldeans while he went elsewhere.

Daniel says in v. 2, "in the first year of his reign I, Daniel, understood by the books [or perhaps better rendered, "I understood by letters"], the numbers of the years specified by the word of the Lord, given through Jeremiah the prophet...."

Daniel had been studying the book of Jeremiah. Jeremiah was an older contemporary of Daniel. The scroll had been taken from Jerusalem to Babylon along with all the other treasures out of the temple. That's the way the Bible was preserved during that period.

Continuing, "...that He would accomplish seventy years in the desolations of Jerusalem." Daniel had been studying this seventy-year prophecy in the book of Jeremiah. He didn't understand what it meant. He, perhaps, even corresponded with Jeremiah about it. He had been fasting and seeking God, trying to understand where that fit in. It has, here, his prayer of contrition to God (vv. 3-19). Gabriel the angel appeared to him in this prayer and begins to give him some information (vv. 20-23).

Verses 24-25, "Seventy weeks are determined for your people and for your holy city, to finish the transgression, to make an end of sins, to make reconciliation for iniquity, to bring in everlasting righteousness, to seal up vision and prophecy, and to anoint the Most Holy. Know therefore and understand, that from the going forth of the command to restore and build Jerusalem until Messiah the Prince, there shall be seven weeks and sixty-two weeks...."

Seven weeks and sixty-two weeks are sixty-nine weeks. There's a reason why this distinction is made.

But notice, "from the going forth of the command to restore and build Jerusalem." This was the decree that was issued by Artaxerxes I. The record of it is given in Ezra 7 and the date in history is 457 B.C.

Now, here's something that the critics really have trouble with. You see, no matter how late they try to put the book of Daniel, you can't put the book of Daniel after the New Testament because there are copies of it that are that old. So, you can't put it back that late. This really gives the critics a problem.

What does it say? "From the going forth of the command to restore and build Jerusalem until Messiah the Prince, there will be sixty-nine weeks." Let's just look. How many days in a week? Seven. Everybody agrees on that. Seventy weeks is how many days? Four hundred ninety days. So, sixty-nine weeks would be seven days less than that—four hundred eighty-three days. Now do a little math. We have sixty-nine weeks, which equals four hundred eighty-three days. We have already seen a day for a year. You have four hundred eighty-three years from the going forth of the decree to restore and to build Jerusalem until Messiah the Prince. The decree was issued in 457 B.C.

Now just do a little subtraction. Four hundred fifty-seven from four hundred eighty-three—well, if your math is correct, you will come out with an answer of twenty-six. You add one to that and you have 27 A.D. Why do you add one? You're going from B.C. to A.D. You are going from 457 B.C. and going forward four hundred eighty-three years. There isn't any such thing as the year zero. The year 1 B.C. is followed by the year 1 A.D. There isn't any such year as the year zero. So, when you take those numbers and go through from B.C. to A.D. this way, you have to add a year to compensate for the fact that there isn't a year zero. You can work it out on a chart or do it however you want to if you have trouble following this. But if you start with 457 B.C. and come forward four hundred eighty-three years, you come out to 27 A.D. The significance of 27 A.D. is that this was the beginning of the public ministry of Jesus Christ. That's dated in the Gospel account. I'll give you the exact reference here.

Luke 3:1, "Now in the fifteenth year of the reign of Tiberius Caesar, Pontius Pilate being governor of Judea, Herod being tetrarch of Galilee...." It goes through all the different things.

Verses 2-3, "Annas and Caiaphas being high priests, the word of God came to John the son of Zacharias in the wilderness and he went into all the region around the Jordan, preaching...." This was in the spring of 27 A.D. Then we find Jesus' appearance here, coming to be baptized of John and the beginning of his public ministry as we have described here in vv. 21-23. The point is that the beginning of Christ's public ministry was in 27 A.D., exactly when prophesied.

Now here's a seventy-week prophecy. Sixty-nine weeks were going to elapse from the going forth of the decree until the coming of the Messiah.

In Daniel 9:25, we're told that, "...the street shall be built again [in Jerusalem], and the wall, even in troublesome times." What it amounted to was that the decree went forth in 457 B.C. There was a period of forty-nine years during which the rebuilding took place and was finished by 408 B.C. That was the first seven weeks. Sixty-two weeks later, we are told, brings us down to the full sixty-nine—the Messiah would come.

Verse 26, "And after the sixty-two weeks Messiah shall be cut off, but not for Himself; and the people of the prince who is to come shall destroy the city [referring to Jerusalem] and the sanctuary. The end of it shall be with a flood, and till the end of the war desolations are determined."

Verse 27, "Then he shall confirm a covenant [Christ the Messiah confirmed the New Covenant] with many for one week; but in the middle of the week He shall bring an end to sacrifice and offering. And on the wing of abominations shall be one who makes desolate...." We are told Christ was going to be cut off in the middle of a week. A ministry of one week (or seven years) was prophesied. But He was cut off in the midst of this. "In the middle of the week He shall bring an end to sacrifice and offering." His ministry lasted three and one-half years; then He was crucified.

Verse 24 tells us, "Seventy weeks are determined for your people and for your holy city, to finish the transgression, to make an end of sins, to make reconciliation for iniquity, to bring in everlasting righteousness...." When Christ died, the need for sacrifices and oblations ceased.

Now the clear implications of Daniel 9 are interesting, in that Christ was cut off in the middle of the seventieth week. There are three and one-half years of a ministry yet to be completed. I think that when you put it together with everything else, this clearly will be what occurs in the first three and one-half years of the Millennium, the completion of His ministry to Israel. I might go into a lot of detail on that at some time. He was cut off in the middle of that seventieth week. The result was that the Romans ultimately came in a few years later and destroyed Jerusalem, the Temple and the whole works.

In Daniel 10:1-7, a little later after Cyrus had come back, Daniel sees another vision. He is praying to God and the angel appears to him. We have a little bit of insight brought out here, a little bit of insight into what goes on in the spirit realm (vv. 1-7).

Verse 9, Daniel heard this voice.

Verse 11, "And he said to me, 'O Daniel, man greatly beloved....'"

Verse 12, "Then he said to me, 'Do not fear, Daniel....' 'I have been sent to help you.'

Verse 13, "But the prince of the kingdom of Persia withstood me twenty-one days; and behold, Michael, one of the chief princes, came to help me, for I had been left alone there with the kings of Persia."

The reference is to the fact that the unseen power behind the throne in many of the governments of this world is nothing other than Satan and his demons. Here was Gabriel, who having been withstood by a great demon spirit, very possibly even Satan himself, was the real power behind the throne of Persia. Michael was sent by God to assist him and Gabriel came to reveal this information to Daniel.

Daniel 11:2-5, "And now I will tell you the truth: Behold, three more kings will arise in Persia, and the fourth shall be far richer than them all; by his strength, through his riches, he shall stir up all against the realm of Greece. Then a mighty king shall arise, who shall rule with great dominion, and do according to his will. And when he has arisen, his kingdom shall be broken up and divided toward the four winds of heaven, but not among his posterity nor according to his dominion with which he ruled; for his kingdom shall be uprooted, even for others besides these. Then the king of the South shall become strong, as well as one of his princes; and he shall gain power over him and have dominion. His dominion shall be a great dominion."

Daniel 11 is the most detailed prophecy in the Bible. I gave you a handout that is a reference for Daniel 11. [Daniel 11 reference is included at end of this Bible study.] If you note, it is a verse-by-verse commentary.

Verse 2 says, "...three more kings will rise in Persia...." The point is made that there were actually twelve kings of Persia after Cyrus, but there were only three that were historically significant or important: Cambyses, Darius and Xerxes. The fourth is actually Xerxes (we have to count Cyrus to get the four). He is the first important king and is the one who led the attack on Greece in 480 B.C. That set the stage for the resentment and antagonism that ultimately resulted in a mighty king (Alexander the Great) who united the Greeks, came in and conquered the Persians.

In v. 4, it describes that after Alexander's death in 323 B.C., his empire was divided among his four leading generals.

Verse 5 refers to a king of the South. Alexander's empire split in four divisions. There were ultimately two that proved significant in terms of Jerusalem. There was a king of the North and a king of the South—south of Jerusalem was the Ptolemaic kingdom of Egypt and north of Jerusalem was the Seleucid kingdom of Babylon. There were problems back and forth and Jerusalem was in the middle.

We have recorded in Daniel 11 detailed squabbling back and forth as the kings of the North (the Seleucids) and the kings of the South (the Ptolemys) were going back and forth trying to dominate the area and dominate one another. I am not going to go through every detail of Daniel 11 because you have it in handout form and for the sake of time, I will let you go through it as you follow down sort of by marriage and by year all the way down.

We pick it up in v. 29, "At the appointed time he [Antiochus] shall return...." About this time, we are down to Antiochus who was the Seleucid king of the North. He was known in history as Antiochus Epiphanes. That was the name by which he called himself. "Epiphanes" in Greek means "of the glorious appearing." So, he had a pretty favorable impression of himself.

Verses 29-30, "At the appointed time he shall return and go toward the south; but it shall not be like the former or the latter. For ships from Cyprus [this is a reference to the Roman fleet] shall come against him; therefore he shall be grieved...." He came down and was going to "whip up" on the king of Egypt. But the Roman fleet sided with the Egyptians. They weren't going to let him conquer Egypt and they made him surrender. So, he had to go back and he was in a pretty bad attitude when he did. So, he started back through Jerusalem.

Continuing, "... and return in rage against the holy covenant, and do damage. So he shall return and show regard for those who forsake the holy covenant." He came back through and cut a deal with the apostate Jews giving them special favor.

Verse 31, "And forces shall be mustered by him, and they shall defile the sanctuary fortress; then they shall take away the daily sacrifices, and place there the abomination of desolation." On the fifteenth day of Kislev (which is the tenth month) in 168 B.C., Antiochus stopped the daily sacrifices at the temple. He offered a pig on the altar. He established a statute of Jupiter Olympus in the Holy Place. This is called "the abomination of desolation." This led to desolation or destruction in Jerusalem. There was a death penalty that was pronounced on the Jews who sought to practice the religion of the Bible.

Of course, there were many who tried to jump over. You always have people that look around and whatever side is winning, they tried to side with it. There are people who don't have deep convictions of their own. They are simply playing politics and trying to come out on top. But God has a way of dealing with people like that.

When Antiochus came in and tried to put a stop to the religion of God, defiled the temple, offered a pig on the altar and set up this idol, you had Jews who came over and tried to side with him. Oh, yes, they were going to "buddy-up" to him. They wanted to be on the inside track.

Any time an invader has come in, there have always been those who would collaborate. You can look at any period of history—World War II or any other period—you've always had those who will sell out the cause that they supposedly believed in. They sell out because they want to be on the winning side.

Here were those who wanted to be on the winning side. The problem with that is sometimes the side that looks like it is winning, won't win when it's all over with. If you want to be on the winning side, the side you better pick is God's side because that's the side that's going to win—God's side. It may appear to be coming out on the bottom end for a while, but the end of the story is that God's side is the one that's going to win. So, here are these who sought to do this.

Verse 31, "...and place there the abomination of desolation."

Verse 32, "Those who do wickedly against the covenant he shall corrupt with flattery; but the people who know their God shall be strong, and carry out great exploits." This certainly speaks, in type, of the Maccabee revolt that was led by the priest Mattathias that succeeded in driving out the Syrians and cleansing the temple.

Earlier in Daniel 8:13-14, we read of the daily sacrifices being taken away and these two thousand three hundred days. The word "days" is not the word that is rendered "days" elsewhere in the Old Testament. It is not the normal Hebrew word for "day." Literally, what it says is, "for two thousand three hundred evenings and mornings."—Twenty-three hundred evenings and mornings. The King James translators rendered that as “days,” but if you look at the context of Daniel 8, it is a reference to the sacrifices.

Sacrifices were offered every evening and every morning. There were two sacrifices a day, one in the evening and one in the morning. If we are talking about two thousand three hundred evenings and mornings, then you really are only talking about one thousand one hundred fifty days because you have an evening and a morning for every day. So, if you had two thousand three hundred evenings and mornings, you are looking at one thousand one hundred fifty days. The interesting thing is that from the fifteenth day of Kislev (the day the sacrifices were taken away and the abomination set up)—if you come forward until the purging of the temple and the rededication of the altar by the Maccabees three years later, it was exactly two thousand three hundred sacrifices that were missed. There were two thousand three hundred sacrifices that were not offered. That’s the real key to it.

In the book of I Maccabees (which is not a part of Scripture but a contemporary historical account), it gives the date. If you work it out on a calendar, that’s the way it comes out. There may be some sort of end-time correspondence to it, but there was clearly a fulfillment of this abomination that makes desolate, holding sway for this period of time.

In Daniel 11, we’ve gone through a very detailed blow-by-blow account of the events that occurred in the Middle East during, sort of, the time between the Testaments, down to the time that the altar was desecrated and then was restored. We sort of summarized in a verse and began to jump down to the very end time—the time of the end as mentioned in v. 40, “At the time of the end....”

The summary of the history of the people of God is given.

Daniel 11:33-35, “And those of the people who understand shall instruct many; yet for many days they shall fall by sword and flame, by captivity and plundering. Now when they fall, they shall be aided with a little help; but many shall join with them by intrigue. And some of those of understanding shall fall, to refine them, purge them, and make them white, until the time of the end; because it is still for the appointed time.”

We have a summation. We pick it up here and come all the way down, summing up centuries in just a couple of verses.

There is a parallel in the events that occurred. Clearly, there was historically an abomination, which was the desecration of the Holy Place. It was the taking away of the daily sacrifices and the desecration that led to destruction of Jerusalem. Historically, the abomination of desolation that Daniel describes occurred with Antiochus Epiphanes in 168 B.C.

But if you go to Matthew 24:15-16, Jesus said, “Therefore when you see the abomination of desolation, spoken of by Daniel the prophet, standing in the holy place (whoever reads, let him understand), then let those who are in Judea flee to the mountains.”

Christ spoke of a time yet future—a time that He speaks of in answer to the disciples’ question about what will be the sign of His coming and the end of the age (Matthew 24:3). He spoke of a future abomination of desolation.

Luke makes reference to this in Luke 21:20, “But when you see Jerusalem surrounded by armies, then know that its desolation is near.”

Verse 24, “And they will fall by the edge of the sword, and be led away captive into all nations. And Jerusalem will be trampled by Gentiles until the times of the Gentiles are fulfilled.”

There’s also a reference in Mark 13:14, “But when you see the abomination of desolation, spoken of by Daniel the prophet, standing where it ought not (let the reader understand), then let those who are in Judea flee to the mountains.” Clearly, the abomination that Daniel spoke of has significance for the end time.

Daniel 11:40-42, as we come down we are told, “At the time of the end the king of the South shall attack him; and the king of the North shall come against him like a whirlwind, with chariots, horsemen, and with many ships; and he shall enter the countries overwhelm them, and pass through. He shall also enter the Glorious Land, and many countries shall be overthrown; but these shall escape from his hand; Edom, Moab, and the prominent people of Ammon. He shall stretch out his hand against the countries, and the land of Egypt shall not escape.”

Verse 44, “But news from the east and the north shall trouble him; therefore he shall go out with great fury to destroy and annihilate many.”

Daniel 12:11, we are told, “And from the time that the daily sacrifice is taken away, and the abomination of desolation is set up, there shall be one thousand two hundred and ninety days.”

Clearly, the abomination that makes desolate is associated with the daily sacrifice being stopped. Right now daily sacrifices are not going on, which means, of course, that there will have to be at least the re-consecration of an altar. It doesn’t mean a full temple has to be built. Sacrifices were offered in the book of Ezra. It makes plain that an altar was consecrated and work on the temple was begun. Sacrifices were begun a long time before the temple was ever completed (Ezra 3:3-6).

We have a summation in Daniel 12. Daniel asks the question, "How long?"

Verse 6, "...How long shall the fulfillment of these wonders be?"

He was told in v. 7 (latter part) that this time of trouble, "...it shall be for a time, times and half a time; and when the power of the holy people has been completely shattered, all these things shall be finished." In other words, these one thousand two hundred sixty days are three and one-half years when the Church has its power scattered.

Revelation 12:14 shows that the Philadelphia era, or phase, of God's Church is in her place of protection in the wilderness and no longer actively pursuing doing a work and carrying it out in a powerful way.

Daniel 12:8, Daniel wanted to know what would be the end.

Verse 9, he was told, "And he said, 'Go your way, Daniel, for the words are closed up and sealed till the time of the end.'" It didn't say that it would never be understood. It was written down to be understood, but it could not be understood until the end time—until this age, this time, this century.

Verse 10, "Many shall be purified, made white, and refined, but the wicked shall do wickedly; and none of the wicked shall understand, but the wise shall understand."

Psalm 111:10, "The fear of the Lord is the beginning of wisdom; a good understanding have all those who do His commandments." The wise are going to be those who fear God and keep His commandments. They will be able to understand when the end time was to come.

Daniel 12:11-13, "And from the time that the daily sacrifice is taken away, and the abomination of desolation is set up, there shall be one thousand two hundred and ninety days. Blessed is he who waits, and comes to the one thousand three hundred and thirty-five days. But you, go your way till the end; for you shall rest, and will arise to your inheritance at the end of the days." We can make a little sense of this. What is it that we are told?

Daniel 12:1, "At that time Michael shall stand up, the great prince [the great archangel] who stands watch over the sons of your people [the children of Israel]. [Michael, as an angelic being, is the one that God gave responsibility for the nation of Israel.] And there shall be a time of trouble, such as never was since there was a nation [He's talking about the Great Tribulation.], even to that time. And at that time your people shall be delivered. Every one who is found written in the book."

When it concludes, vv. 2-3, "And many of those who sleep in the dust of the earth shall awake, some to everlasting life, some to shame and everlasting contempt. Those who are wise shall shine like the brightness of the firmament, and those who turn many to righteousness like the stars forever and ever." What are we told? We are told that this is going to end up when? —At the time of the resurrection when those that sleep awaken.

In v. 13, Daniel is told, "...go your way till the end; for you shall rest [You are going to die; you are going to lie in the grave.], and will arise to your inheritance at the end of the days."

He gave him two sections of days—one thousand two hundred ninety and one thousand three hundred thirty-five days. The clear implication of v. 13 is that all these days end at the same point—the resurrection, the return of Jesus Christ. You go back out three and one-half years or one thousand two hundred sixty days. One thousand ninety days is thirty days prior to that—that's an extra month, something that starts a month before. Then the one thousand three hundred thirty-five days is a month and a half even earlier. We are clearly told that the one thousand two hundred ninety days not only ends with the return of Christ, but it begins with the taking away of the daily sacrifice. That's made plain in v. 11. We are not told what event begins the one thousand three hundred thirty-five days. We are just told, "Blessed is he who waits" for this whole time.

I am going to go into some of these things in sermons and Bible studies in Revelation.

I think one aspect of it, when you tie it in with Luke 21:20, Jesus said, "But when you see Jerusalem surrounded by armies, then know that its desolation is near." He didn't say when you see Jerusalem being bombarded with armies. Look, if you are in a city and it's being shelled—like Sarajevo in Yugoslavia and in Bosnia right now—you don't need somebody to come in and say, 'I think the desolation of this place is pretty near.' Everybody knows that. You can look around and the whole place is falling apart.

Earlier we saw this individual—the beast power—an individual who will seek to obtain the kingdom by flatteries and how he will do that. He will enter in and will attempt to do some of these things in an underhanded way. When Jerusalem is encompassed with armies, it is not going to appear to everybody else that the desolation thereof is near.

We have Christ's warning in Luke 21 and we will know. I think it's very likely that this extra forty-five days mentioned here is a time period prior to the onset of hostilities and the taking away of the sacrifices, during which God's Church will have time to flee and relocate. That's partly speculation, but if you put the whole thing together, I think it certainly fits. I realize that a lot of this is a little bit complex. We are going to come back. As we go through the book of Revelation, we are going to pick up more of this. You might go through and check over parts of it.

I think the handout material on Daniel 11 will give you the information that will tie in with a more detailed explanation of that.

There aren't any questions to be passed out on the final Bible study in the Writings series. Next Bible study will be Ezra, Nehemiah and Chronicles.

References for Daniel 11

Verse 2: While there were actually twelve kings of Persia after Cyrus, there were only three important ones. They were Cambyses, Darius and Xerxes. The fourth king referred to is Xerxes (i.e. the fourth important king, counting Cyrus as the first). He led an attack on Greece about 480 B.C.

Verse 3: The mighty king refers to Alexander the Great who led the Greek armies in the conquest of Persia.

Verse 4: After Alexander's death in 323 B.C., his empire was ultimately divided among his four leading generals—Ptolemy who got Egypt, Seleucus who got Syria and Babylon, Lysimachus who got Asia Minor and Cassander who got Greece and Macedonia.

Verse 5: Ptolemy I, the king of the South (Egypt), was a very strong king, but in 312 B.C., one of his top generals, Seleucus, took advantage of Ptolemy's involvement in a war to take Syria and Babylon for his own empire.

Verse 6: After several decades of intermittent fighting between the Ptolemys and the Seleucids, a peace was finally achieved in 252 B.C. when Antiochus II put away his wife Laodice and married Berenice, the daughter of Egyptian king Ptolemy II. In 247 B.C., Ptolemy II died and Antiochus divorced Berenice and took back Laodice. Laodice proceeded to murder both Antiochus and Berenice and to secure the Syrian throne for her son, Seleucus II.

Verse 7: Berenice's brother Ptolemy III of Egypt invaded and plundered Syria in 245 B.C. to avenge his sister.

Verse 8: Seleucus II died in 226 B.C.; Ptolemy III, in 222 B.C.

Verse 11: In 212 B.C., Ptolemy retook Palestine from Syria.

Verse 12: Ptolemy IV made a speedy peace treaty and soon dissipated the fruits of his victory in a wanton live style.

Verse 13: In 205 B.C., after Ptolemy IV had died and was succeeded by his infant son Ptolemy V, Antiochus launched a successful war during which he wrested Palestine from the Egyptians.

Verses 15-16: Antiochus took Sidon, beat Egypt in Palestine and in 198 B.C., annexed Palestine to Syria.

Verse 17: Antiochus arranged for his daughter Cleopatra to marry Ptolemy V, thinking in this way to gain Egypt for himself. This backfired because Cleopatra sided with her husband against her father.

Verse 18: Antiochus then turned his attention to try to conquer the islands and coasts of Asia Minor. The Romans under Scipio defeated him at the Battle of Magnesia in 187 B.C.

Verse 19: Antiochus then tried to recover his dissipated wealth by sacking the temple of Belus, during which he was killed.

Verse 20: Antiochus' successor Seleucus IV was murdered after 11 years by Heliodorus, a tax collector he had put over getting revenue for the kingdom. Heliodorus was later driven out.

Verse 21: Seleucus didn't leave an heir, so his brother Antiochus Epiphanes—having obtained the favor of a neighboring king—succeeded in driving out Heliodorus and taking the kingdom.

Verse 22: Antiochus attempted to replace the Jewish high priest with one of his own choice.

Verses 23-24: Though only a few were with him, Antiochus prospered and invaded Galilee and Lower Egypt. Though his fathers had favored the Jews, he hated them.

Verses 25-26: Antiochus launched an invasion of Egypt in which he met with great success—partly because Ptolemy Philomater was betrayed by his own officers in 171 B.C.

Verse 27: At a banquet in 174 B.C., Antiochus pretended to ally himself with Ptolemy against his younger brother Euergetes II. Both were trying to deceive one another.

Verse 28: On his way back to Syria from Egypt, he passed through Palestine and desecrated the temple in 168 B.C. He slaughtered 80,000 Jews.

Verses 29-30: Antiochus returned to Egypt, but the Roman fleet sided with the Egyptians and made him surrender. On his way back through Jerusalem, he extended special favors to apostate Jews.

Verse 31: On 15 Kislev 168 B.C., Antiochus stopped the daily sacrifices at the temple and offered a hog on the altar. A statue of Jupiter Olympus was set up in the Holy Place. This is a type of the future Abomination of Desolation spoken of by Jesus Christ in Matthew 24.

Verse 32: This speaks in type of the Maccabee revolt led by the priest Matthias which ultimately succeeded in driving out the Syrians and cleansing the temple.

Verses 32-35: This begins to skip ahead to the end time and provides a 2000-year capsule history of the Church of God. The remainder of the chapter is dealing with the end-time fulfillment of prophecies.

Sermon—Feast of Trumpets
September 30, 1989
Mr. John Ogwyn

“Babylon”

Last night was an anniversary. It was, in fact, the two thousand five hundred twenty-seventh anniversary of the fall of Babylon. You may not initially see what that has to do with Trumpets, but in many ways, what we are celebrating here today ties in very directly with an event that occurred two thousand five hundred twenty-seven years ago last night. In many ways, the events that we are celebrating here today are events that will culminate in the fall of Babylon the Great and the establishment of the Kingdom of God. These events that we are celebrating were, in many ways, prefigured by an event that happened so many hundred years ago.

I would like for us to understand more clearly the prophetic implication of the fall of ancient Babylon to see what it portends for us today and to understand it in light of this Feast of Trumpets. I would like for us to understand more clearly where we stand at this critical juncture in the course of human events—in the course of the events that are prophesied right in the pages of our own Bible.

Let’s start out by setting the prophetic stage. You may wonder, where would you start to set the prophetic stage? To set the stage of events that have transpired, we would begin with Genesis 11. Genesis 11 begins the story of mankind’s attempt to build his own civilization and government apart from God after the flood.

In Genesis 11, we have the story of the attempt of mankind, under the leadership of Nimrod, to build the Tower of Babel. This was the beginning of the city of Babylon. This is the tower from which Babylon takes its name. Babylon had its beginnings a little over a hundred years after the flood—just a little over a hundred years after God had wiped out humanity off the face of the earth and spared only the family of Noah.

The family had increased and now there was an individual prepared to stir up and lead mankind in a rebellious effort to establish their own government, society and civilization. There was the attempt of mankind—all branches of the human family—working together. But the problem is that when everybody works together apart from the direction, leading and inspiration of God, His Spirit and His laws, the results are catastrophic.

Mankind attempted to do something under the leadership of Nimrod—the Tower of Babel, the beginning of Babylon. It was cut short because God stepped in and intervened.

Genesis 11:6-7, “And the Lord said, “Indeed the people are one and they have one language, and this is what they begin to do; now nothing that they propose to do will be withheld from them. Come, let Us go down and there confuse their language, that they may not understand one another’s speech.”

God confused their language and the nations were forced to scatter out on the face of the earth as God intended (v. 8). At that point, we are introduced to Babylon; we are introduced to the Tower of Babel.

Now, as we come down historically, we pick up the story of Babylon again. We pick up the story of Babylon in the book of Daniel.

God scattered the empire that Nimrod sought to build a hundred years after the flood. God scattered the empire that Nimrod sought to build centered around the Tower of Babel. Centuries passed. A civilization continued to grow up and thrive there in the plains of Shinar, the area centered around ancient Babylon.

As we pick up the story in the book of Daniel, we find an empire that began to come together centered around ancient Babylon. It became the first of four world-ruling empires.

In Daniel 2, we have the story of a great image that Nebuchadnezzar saw. He had a very troubling dream. In this dream he saw a great image. It was an unusual image because the head was of gold, the shoulders and the chest were of silver, the thighs were of brass, the legs were of iron and the feet were of iron and clay (vv. 31-33). Now this was an unusual mixture. Normally when you see a great statue or image, the whole thing is made of the same thing. But in Nebuchadnezzar’s dream he saw this gigantic image set upon a plain and it was made of different things. At different points, the composition of the image changed. And then, most puzzling of all, he saw a stone cut out without hands (a stone of supernatural origin) and it came down and smashed this image on its toes (v. 34). When it smashed the image on its toes, it didn’t just crack the toes off, the whole image turned to dust and the wind blew it away. The stone became a great mountain until it filled the whole earth (v. 35).

If you had been Nebuchadnezzar and you had awakened from something like that, you’d be scratching your head, too, wondering, “What in the world is this?” Maybe you would have thought it was something you ate the night before.

Nebuchadnezzar sensed that this dream had important implications. It was at this point that Daniel was brought to Nebuchadnezzar's attention. Daniel was given wisdom by God to reveal to Nebuchadnezzar the meaning of the dream (v. 19).

Daniel began to interpret the dream for him. He spoke to Nebuchadnezzar.

Daniel 2:37, "You, O king, are a king of kings. For the God of heaven has given you a kingdom, power, strength, and glory." He said, "You are a great ruler, a great emperor. You rule over many nations. You rule not simply Babylon, but a great empire of many nations put together under your rule."

Verse 38, "...you are this head of gold." This head of gold represents the Babylonian Empire and was personified by Nebuchadnezzar as its king.

Verse 39, "But after you shall arise another kingdom inferior to yours; then another, a third kingdom of bronze, which shall rule over all the earth." "...another kingdom inferior to yours..." symbolized by the silver was the empire of the Medes and the Persians that succeeded Babylon. Then he said, "...a third kingdom of bronze, which shall rule over all the earth." This was historically the Greco-Macedonian Empire of Alexander the Great that swallowed up the Medes and the Persians.

Verse 40, "And the fourth kingdom shall be as strong as iron, inasmuch as iron breaks in pieces and shatters all things; and like iron that crushes, that kingdom will break in pieces and crush all the others." The Roman Empire succeeded and swallowed up all of those that continued through. These two legs all the way down to the end and the ten toes (v. 41) at the bottom represent what is extant at the time when the God of heaven will set up a kingdom (v. 44)—in other words, the time immediately ahead of us.

What we have in Daniel 2 is the outline of history from the time of ancient Nebuchadnezzar (six hundred years before Christ) all the way out to the time immediately ahead of us. We have a summary of over two thousand five hundred years of the history of this world that continues right on out to the years immediately ahead of us when the God of heaven is going to intervene and set up a Kingdom.

So, we are introduced to Babylon once again. Babylon is the fountainhead from which this world's civilization springs. It had its origin with Nimrod and the Tower of Babel, and here we see it personified with Nebuchadnezzar and the Babylonian Empire.

As we continue through the book of Daniel, Nebuchadnezzar had another dream. This was a most troubling dream.

Daniel 4:4-5, "I, Nebuchadnezzar, was at rest in my house, and flourishing in my palace. I saw a dream which made me afraid, and the thoughts on my bed and the visions of my head troubled me." He saw something that concerned him very much. He began to explain what he saw.

Verse 10, "These were the visions of my head while on my bed: I was looking, and behold, a tree in the midst of the earth, and its height was great." It was a very impressive tree. It was tall.

Verses 11-12, "The tree grew and became strong; its height reached to the heavens, and it could be seen to the ends of all the earth. Its leaves were lovely, its fruit abundant, and in it was food for all. The beasts of the field found shade under it, the birds of the heavens dwelt in its branches, and all flesh was fed from it." There were many leaves and a lot of fruit. It was a bountiful and very impressive tree. The beasts had shade under it and there were nests in it.

Verses 13-15, "I saw in the visions of my head while on my bed, and there was a watcher [an angel], a holy one, coming down from heaven. He cried aloud and said thus: "Chop down the tree and cut off its branches, strip off its leaves and scatter its fruit. Let the beasts get out from under it, and the birds from its branches. Nevertheless leave the stump and roots in the earth [Don't uproot it; don't dig out the stump. Cut it down, cut off the branches, scatter it away, but leave the stump and the roots in the earth.], bound with a band of iron and bronze..." "Put a cap on this stump to protect it, bind it and leave it there."

Verse 16, "...and let seven times pass over him." Seven times would pass over it.

Nebuchadnezzar was troubled. He was wondering what this was.

Verses 20-22, he was told that the tree was symbolic of him and of the Babylonian Empire.

Nebuchadnezzar went through a very remarkable personal experience. God warned him, through Daniel, as to what this portended for him personally.

Verses 23-25, "An inasmuch as the king saw a watcher, a holy one, coming down from heaven and saying, "Chop down the tree and destroy it, but leave its stump and roots in the earth, bound with a band of iron and bronze in the tender grass of the field; let it be wet with the dew of heaven, and let him graze with the beasts of the field, till seven times pass over him”; this is the interpretation, O king, and this is the decree of the Most High, which has come upon my lord the king: they shall drive you from men, your dwelling shall be with the beasts of the field, and they shall make you eat grass like oxen. They shall wet you with the dew of heaven, and seven times shall pass over you, till you know that the Most High rules in the kingdom of men, and gives it to whomever He chooses.”

He was impressed for a short period of time, but as months went by and nothing happened, he lapsed back into his old attitude. One night when he least expected it and was standing there surveying the great Babylon that existed, all puffed up in his pride and vanity as to what he had accomplished (vv. 28-30), he was struck with insanity, and for seven years he roamed the fields like a wild animal (vv. 31-33). At the end of those seven years his sanity returned and he was restored to his kingdom (vv. 34-36). He continued to rule Babylon for several years until his death.

Nebuchadnezzar went through an experience that had implications and significance, not simply for him personally, but for Babylon and for the civilization that Babylon was symbolic of. We are going to come back to that in just a moment. Nebuchadnezzar went through an event that taught him a lesson. His successors did not learn that lesson. Nebuchadnezzar was a different man when he came out of this experience. Several years passed. We come to the next chapter, Daniel 5.

Daniel 5 is not in chronological order. It is in the order of subject matter. It is put next to Daniel 4. It is the last event of Belshazzar. Belshazzar was the grandson of Nebuchadnezzar. He was the son of Nabonidus who was the king, or the emperor, of the Babylonian Empire. He had associated his son Belshazzar with him on the throne as co-ruler. At the time that Daniel 5 records these events, Nabonidus was elsewhere in the empire with an army. Belshazzar was sitting on the throne and holding sway in Babylon.

In Daniel 5, we pick up the story of an event that actually took place on the Feast of Trumpets 539 B.C. The dating of that event is attested to in many historical documents. It is one of the most well-documented occurrences of the ancient world in terms of when it occurred. You have to understand that Babylon was, to all intents and purposes, impregnable. Babylon appeared to be the city that was impossible to conquer.

Herodotus, the Greek historian, gives us the dimensions and the information of Babylon. The walls of Babylon were three hundred thirty-five feet high. Do you realize how high that is? That is as tall as a thirty-three-story building. The walls were eighty-five feet wide. There was literally a racetrack for chariots that ran around the top of the walls of Babylon. There were a hundred brass gates. The Euphrates River flowed through the middle. Babylon was impregnable. The Babylonians were absolutely certain there wasn't any way to conquer Babylon.

The armies of the Medes and the Persians were besieging Babylon and sought to besiege it. Belshazzar thought so lightly of that and treated it as such a trivial matter that he had a great feast. He had a big party, and as was often the case, these parties turned into a regular drinking bout, as we find here.

Daniel 5:1-2, “Belshazzar the king made a great feast for a thousand of his lords, and drank wine in the presence of the thousand. While he tasted the wine, Belshazzar gave the command to bring the gold and silver vessels which his father Nebuchadnezzar had taken from the temple which had been in Jerusalem, that the king and his lords, his wives, and his concubines might drink from them.”

They were sitting there really “boozing” it up. He began to feel pretty good and was really going to impress all of these various high-ranking rulers of the Babylonian Empire. They were sitting there, laughing and mocking this vast army of Persians that was gathered around to besiege Babylon. How ridiculous it is that anyone could think that mighty Babylon could fall. After he had “boozed” it up for a while, he began to feel pretty good. He said, ‘Let’s get the sacred vessels from the temple in Jerusalem in here and we will drink another toast to that because our gods [the gods of Babylon] are above all the other gods.’ They brought in the vessels from the temple and they began to drink and to “booze” it up out of the sacred vessels that God had commanded Solomon to make for the temple.

Verse 4, we are told, “They drank wine, and praised the gods of gold and silver, bronze and iron, wood and stone.” I’m sure they drank a toast to each of them individually. By the time they got through with all of them, you can believe they had gone through quite a bit.

About this time they were well lubricated. They were really in the process of “tying one on” and they got sobered up. If you want the absolute world’s record for how quickly somebody can be sobered up, read the next verse. They were sitting there just really enjoying the party.

Verse 5, "In the same hour the fingers of a man's hand appeared and wrote opposite the lampstand on the plaster of the wall of the king's palace; and the king saw the part of the hand that wrote." Here was this hand that just appeared out of nowhere and began to write in great letters on the wall.

Verse 6, "Then the king's countenance changed, and his thoughts troubled him, so that the joints of his hips were loosened...." KJV, "joints of his loins were loosed." If you look that up, you will find that is a rather poetic description of an "accident" that the king suffered about that time. He had a rather unfortunate accident. That's what it means when it says, "the joints of his loins were loosed." You talk about scared! I don't know about scared straight, but he was scared sober or at least about as sober as he could get, drunk as he was.

Continuing, "...and his knees knocked against each other." He wasn't feeling nearly so great and powerful. He wasn't feeling so important and so impressive. Something had thrown cold water all over the party. The party was over.

Verse 7, "The king cried aloud to bring in the astrologers, the Chaldeans, and the soothsayers" The king said, 'Bring somebody in here. Get all the wise men in here and tell me what this means.' Well, none of them knew.

The queen (she was the queen mother) told him, 'In the days of your grandfather Nebuchadnezzar there was a man in high esteem by Nebuchadnezzar, one of the Jewish captives who was the interpreter of the secrets of God. If you bring him in here, he undoubtedly will be able to tell you what this means' (vv. 10-12). Daniel was brought in before the king (v. 13) and he read the writing.

Verse 25, "'And this is the inscription that was written: MENE, MENE, TEKEL, UPHARSIN.'" This phrase may be meaningless to us as reference, but the words themselves were not unknown words. It is a form of the term "mina, shekel and peres." These were weights or units of measurements. The shekel was a standard unit of measurement. There were fifty minas to one shekel. The peres was half of a mina. So, there were twenty-five peres to the shekel. That's all well and good, but if you saw something written on the wall that said, "pounds, pounds, ounces and tons," you may know the words are units of measurements and units of weight, but the words joined together that way would be absolutely meaningless to you. That's the way it was to them. The words were not some nonsense words. They were words that were known in the Hebrew, the Aramaic and the Babylonian language. They were units of measurements with which these people were familiar, but these words appearing there didn't make sense. What was the significance?

Daniel told him in vv. 26-28, "'This is the interpretation of each word. MENE: God has numbered your kingdom, and finished it; TEKEL: You have been weighed in the balances, and found wanting; PERES: Your kingdom has been divided, and given to the Medes and Persians.'"

Verse 30, "That very night Belshazzar, king of the Chaldeans, was slain." That night! What he thought was impossible occurred.

Cyrus the Great of Persia had directed that the Persian troops would dig a canal to divert the Euphrates River. That night, as the party drew on, they burst the dike and began to drain off the flow of the Euphrates River as it was going through Babylon. The height of the River went down, down, down until finally they were able to put the army in the riverbed, march under the great iron gates of Babylon and emerge on the other side. Babylon fell in one night. Belshazzar was slaughtered.

Let's look a little bit. Obviously, Belshazzar had not learned the lesson that the Most High rules in the affairs of men (Daniel 4:25; Daniel 5:21). This is the lesson that God had impressed on Nebuchadnezzar. We have the story in Daniel 4 followed by the events of Daniel 5. There are other events that are recounted in the book of Daniel that chronologically come in between these two events, but these chapters are back-to-back because they tell a continuing story.

What happened to Nebuchadnezzar was symbolic for Babylon. Nebuchadnezzar was cut off. The tree symbolized him. In reality, it symbolized the Babylonian Empire. It was cut off and was banded by bands of iron and brass. The stump was left. The roots were left in the ground. The tree was cut down. How long would the dry stump and roots be left in the ground? It said, "seven times must pass over him" (Daniel 4:16). What is a "time" in a prophetic sense?

Let's notice, very briefly, how the Bible defines its own terms. Turn back to Revelation 11. I want to illustrate the point of how long is "seven times." Let's notice some things that are used synonymously.

Revelation 11:2, "...And they will tread the holy city underfoot for forty-two months."

Verse 3, "'And I will give power to my two witnesses, and they will prophesy one thousand two hundred and sixty days....'" We saw forty-two months and one thousand two hundred sixty days. Let's go down.

Revelation 12:6, "Then the woman fled into the wilderness, where she has a place prepared by God, that they should feed her there one thousand two hundred and sixty days."

Go down a little further to v. 14, "But the woman was given two wings of a great eagle, that she might fly into the wilderness to her place, where she is nourished for a time and times and half a time...."

Let's notice here. We have several terms and they are used interchangeably. Forty-two months is how long? Three and one-half years. Thirty-six months is three years; six more months make forty-two. So, three and one-half years is forty-two months. One thousand two hundred sixty days is forty-two thirty-day months. You can multiply it out if you don't trust my math. One thousand two hundred sixty days equals three and one-half years. "Time, times and half a time" is a prophetic term to refer to three and one-half years, one thousand two hundred sixty days or forty-two months.

We read in Daniel 4:16, "....and let seven times pass over him.""

The tree was cut down, the stump banded with iron and the roots in the ground remained (vv. 14-15). Seven times would pass over it. Seven is twice as much as three and one-half. Time, times and a half time is three and one-half years. If that's one thousand two hundred sixty days, then how many days is seven times? Add it up. Take one thousand two hundred sixty and double it. That comes out to two thousand five hundred twenty. Two thousand five hundred twenty days is the equivalent (demonstrated right here) for seven times or two thousand five hundred twenty days would pass over it.

From a prophetic standpoint, God utilizes the symbolism of a day for a year when it comes to Bible prophecy.

For instance, Numbers 14:34, "....According to the number of the days in which you spied out the land, forty days, for each day you shall bear your guilt one year; namely forty years...."

In Ezekiel 4:6, basically the same statement is made, "And when you have completed them, lie again on your right side; then you shall bear the iniquity of the house of Judah forty days. I have laid on you a day for each year." So in terms of prophetic implications, a day for a year is utilized prophetically.

Two thousand five hundred twenty days is the seven prophetic times that were to pass over this stump from the time the tree was cut down and the stump was banded with iron and brass. Seven times—two thousand five hundred twenty prophetic days or two thousand five hundred twenty years—was to pass over this stump. It was banded with iron.

Let's look a little further. We saw the handwriting on the wall, "MENE, MENE, TEKEL, UPHARSIN." Let's look at that a little further. We see the significance. They are numbers that are weights, which are to be divided. The literal meaning of the word "peres" is "divide." It was a term that meant a "division" or "half"—numbers that were weights and were to be divided. The shekel was the basic unit. There were fifty minas to the shekel and twenty-five peres to the shekel.

Let's add up here. We want to find out how many shekels we have here. Mina, the first one, that's fifty. If you add up, you have fifty minas; then you have another mina, so you have fifty more—that's a hundred. The shekel is one shekel, that's one. And then you have twenty-five peres. You have fifty, fifty, one and twenty-five—or one hundred twenty-six. Now what is that? Let's go back to Leviticus 27 and notice something.

Leviticus 27:25, "....And all your valuations shall be according to the shekel of the sanctuary: twenty gerahs to the shekel." The gerah is a smaller unit than the shekel. The shekel was the basic unit. The mina was worth fifty of them. The peres was worth half that many; it was worth twenty-five. So, there were one hundred twenty-six shekels represented here. If you took these numbers that were weights and you divide them down to the smallest unit, we are told in Leviticus 27:25 that, "....the valuations are to be made according to the shekel of the sanctuary and there are twenty gerahs to the shekel." If you had one hundred twenty-six shekels, how many gerahs would that be? Multiply one hundred twenty-six times twenty. You notice something? Do you know what you come up to? You come up to two thousand five hundred twenty.

Nebuchadnezzar had a dream. The seven prophetic times—two thousand five hundred twenty prophetic days or two thousand five hundred twenty years—was to pass over this tree after it was cut down. The stump was left banded with iron and brass.

Now we come to the time when Babylon was going to fall. We come to the night of the fall of Babylon—the Feast of Trumpets 539 B.C.—the handwriting on the wall because the kingdom had not learned the lesson that the king had learned. So it fell. It was weighed in the balances and found wanting. Its days were numbered and it was divided to the Medes and the Persians. Babylon fell. Prophetically, there were two thousand five hundred twenty years that had to pass.

If you want to do a little more math, start with 539 B.C., come forward two thousand five hundred twenty years and you will find that brings you to the Feast of Trumpets 1982. That was exactly two thousand five hundred twenty years later. If you calculate it out and come out one year off from that, you have to add in one year because there isn't any such thing as the year zero. The year 1 B.C. was followed by the year 1 A.D. There isn't any such thing as a year zero. If you go through and calculate that up, you're off from just using regular math. But the Feast of Trumpets 1982 is the date you come out to.

What is the significance of the Feast of Trumpets 1982? That was exactly seven years ago. We are seven years down the road from the time that those seven prophetic times were up. When the seven times were up, the bands of iron and brass that bound the stump were clipped.

Notice what Job has to tell us.

Job 14:7-9, “For there is hope for a tree, if it is cut down, that it will sprout again, and that its tender shoots will not cease. Though its root may grow old in the earth, and its stump may die in the ground, yet at the scent of water it will bud and bring forth branches like a plant.”

The tree was cut down. The roots were left in the ground and they grew old. The stump was bound with bands of iron and brass. Seven times or two thousand five hundred twenty years passed over from the time Babylon was cut down until those bands were clipped. What happens when the band is clipped? As Job expresses it, ‘through the scent of water it will bud, and it will bring forth branches like a plant.’ The tree begins to grow again.

The tree is Babylon. The final world-ruling kingdom that is described in the book of Revelation and other places is not called Persia the Great or Greece the Great or Rome the Great. That final world-ruling empire that Jesus Christ is going to smash when He returns is called BABYLON THE GREAT.

Seven years ago from last night, an event occurred in Germany that was without precedent in post-war Germany. There was an abrupt switch. There had been an alliance governing Germany for a number of years. It was an alliance of the Socialist Party and the Centralist

Free Democratic Party. Together they had governed Germany for a number of years. Unexpectedly (as it were “out of the blue”), that night the Free Democrats decided to pull out of the coalition and the Chancellor of Germany was shocked by losing a vote of confidence in his own Parliament. This was on the evening that began the Feast of Trumpets seven years ago. Fourteen days later on the evening that began the Feast of Tabernacles (seven years ago), a new Chancellor was sworn in—the present Chancellor. A new government, the Christian Democratic Party, which is the official Roman Catholic Party in West Germany, came in.

We think in terms of separation of church and state. We need to understand that is not the situation in Europe. There are, in many cases, officially designated religious parties. The Christian Democratic Party, which exists in Germany, Italy, Spain and several European nations, is the official Roman Catholic political party. It was established as such in the aftermath of World War II. There is not the concept of a division of church and state there. In many cases, there are relationships that exist between church and state.

Very surprisingly, there was a remarkable governmental change that came about. The new government that took office began a series of decisions that have had implications in terms of the events that have occurred with the European Economic Community with the decisions to move forward.

Now, lost again in the events of the time, there was a matter of a few days later (right after the Feast of Tabernacles 1982), just as these bands on the stump had been prophetically clipped, Pope John Paul traveled to Spain. He spent ten days traveling through Spain, speaking and conducting mass meetings. On the tenth day of his trip to Spain, he made a speech on the unity of Europe. He made, in that speech, a remarkable statement and I want to quote it for you.

He said, “I, the Bishop of Rome and pastor of the universal church, issue to you, Europe, a cry. Give life to your roots. Give life to your roots.” A number of remarkable events occurred.

Let's step back. We're seven years down stream from the loosing of the bands. Let's step back. Let's look and assess briefly the events that have transpired in Eastern Europe.

Pope John Paul was elected, or chosen, as Pope on the last day of the Feast of Tabernacles 1978.

You remember the story? Pope Paul VI died and was succeeded by an Italian prelate who took the name, John Paul I. This man held office for just over one month and, shockingly, died. Everybody was caught by surprise. The College of Cardinals had to come back into session. On the last day of the Feast of Tabernacles 1978, for the first time in four hundred fifty-five years, a non-Italian was elected as Pope—Pope John Paul II.

A few months later on the Pentecost weekend of 1979, he made a trip to Poland. Not only was he a non-Italian Pope, he was a Pope from behind the Iron Curtain.

You have to understand that in the aftermath of World War II, when the Russian boot was planted on the nations of Eastern Europe and the attempt was made to wipe out religion, there was a disheartenment and disillusionment that settled. There were attempts to revolt. Poland made its attempt. Hungary made its attempt in 1956; Czechoslovakia, in 1968. At the time, Russian tanks rolled in and put a stop to that “foolishness” in a matter of a few days.

It took Stalin three and one-half years, from the close of World War II in the fall of 1945 to the spring of 1949, to consolidate his hold on Eastern Europe. By the spring of 1949, the Iron Curtain, as it was called, had rung down on Eastern Europe. By that time, all of the nations of Eastern Europe had Communist governments. There was a three and one-half-year period from the close of World War II until Stalin was able to completely impose a Communist government on all the nations that were east of the line where his troops had stopped in 1945 in the defeat of Hitler’s Reich.

In 1949 the Iron Curtain came down on Eastern Europe. They imposed Soviet Communist domination and attempted to wipe out the impact of religion. There was a disheartenment and a disillusionment that had spread. The attitude was, ‘It’s useless to resist. God has abandoned us.’

You have to understand, to realize, how exciting it was to the people behind the Iron Curtain when a Polish Pope was chosen. That was something that was remarkable, something no one expected. A few months later on the Pentecost weekend of 1979, he returned to Poland. He set in motion events that by the Feast of Tabernacles 1980 (a little over a year later), there was widespread labor unrest. In almost forty years, the first independent labor union behind the Iron Curtain came to prominence. Solidarity was recognized legally right after the Feast of Tabernacles 1980. Things continued to rock along. There was the threat of Russian intervention and Soviet troops. Events began to unfold on the Last Great Day of 1982—the Last Great Day of the Feast. Just a matter of three weeks after the bands on the stump had been clipped, the government of Poland sought to reimpose complete Communist rule. Solidarity was outlawed and Lech Walesa was put in jail. Seven years from that event, Poland has a non-Communist Prime Minister. Seven years! Those seven years have seen events that have begun to unfold, and we are now seeing the crumbling of what has existed behind the Iron Curtain.

Let’s understand a little bit of the post-war world. For many centuries in Europe, there were empires. The world was dominated by empires that ruled over many nations, many languages and tongues. This was the common story.

Beginning with the events of the French Revolution and the Napoleonic period (at the end of the eighteenth century/beginning of the nineteenth century), the influence of nationalism began to spread, first to Europe and then out to the world. At the beginning of World War I, there were three great multi-national empires that ruled over many different nationalities and language groups in Europe. The Ottoman Empire ruled from Turkey. They ruled over a large grouping of the Middle East and the Balkan parts of Europe. The Austro-Hungarian Empire ruled over much of Central Europe, and the Russian Empire ruled over a great deal of Central Europe as well as the whole Russian Empire on into Asia.

There were three great multi-national empires that dominated Central and Eastern Europe. The nations of Yugoslavia, Czechoslovakia, portions of Romania, Australia, Hungary and various portions that were spun off to other nations were all created in the aftermath of World War I from the Austro-Hungarian Empire. The same thing happened with the breaking of the Ottoman Empire. The Russian Empire changed. There was a Communist Revolution that overthrew the Tsar, but the Empire remained mostly intact. A few nations were pried loose. Poland, Lithuania, Latvia and Estonia were pried loose, but they only stayed loose for a very short time. By 1939, Stalin made a pact with Hitler. He moved back in and he took them back. The nationalism that was set loose at the time of the French Revolution and the Napoleonic period began to spread and filter out throughout Europe and elsewhere throughout the nineteenth century. It flamed up in World War I and even more so in the aftermath of World War II. The flames of nationalism had swept around the world.

We're now seeing that ingredient of nationalism taking root inside Russia, the only multi-national empire left in Europe. There are many, many different language groups and constituent groups conquered over a period of several hundred years that were forged into the Russian Empire. These people have never looked upon themselves as Russians. They were subject to the Russian Empire, first to the Tsar and later to the Communists, but now the flames of nationalism have been fanned.

We have come to the end of forty years. We have come to the end of a period of trial and testing. "Forty," as used in the Bible, is significant of "trial and testing." After the establishment of the post-war world, we are now seeing a destabilization take place in Eastern Europe.

Let's go on. Let's understand. We looked at Babylon the Great. We saw the image of Daniel 2. We saw the head of gold, the shoulders of silver, the thighs of brass—Babylon, Persia, Greece. We come down to the Roman Empire symbolized by two legs of iron that culminated in ten toes.

Now understand something remarkable about the Roman Empire. The Roman Empire is symbolized by two legs. We have always commented on the fact that this is significant because the Roman Empire was split into the Eastern Roman Empire and the Western Roman Empire. Remember your history? It took place in the third century A.D. under Diocletian the Emperor. He split the empire for administrative purposes. A matter of a few decades later, Emperor Constantine, who was the emperor that made Catholicism the official religion of the Roman Empire, made the split final. Rome was made the capital of the Western Empire and the ancient city of Byzantium was made capital of the Eastern Empire. Constantine, being the "humble" sort, changed its name to Constantinople. You'd never guess where he came up with a name like that. The empire was so vast, communication and transportation being what they were, it was impossible to administer from one city. The empire was officially split to an Eastern and a Western branch, the two legs.

When we have followed the story of the revivals of the Roman Empire, we have only followed the revivals of the Western leg. In our studies of prophecy, we have only followed the story of the Western leg. The reason is because that is what is prophetically significant as we are told in Revelation 13 and 17, where we see the Beast pictured in the various revivals.

In Revelation 17, we see that there were seven revivals pictured as seven heads on a beast on which the woman rode. The Catholic Church only dominated the revivals of the Roman Empire that took place in the West. We know the Roman Empire in history as the Holy Roman Empire or as it was officially styled during the Middle Ages, the Holy Roman Empire of the German Nation. That was its official title. It took in most of central Europe. It took in Germany, Italy and a vast portion of Europe. The revivals that centered on Rome and were dominated from Rome were the only part that was the successors of the Western branch of the Roman Empire.

What is the obvious implication when we come down to the final resurrection of the empire that is symbolized by the two feet and the ten toes? The obvious implication is that the final resurrection involves putting the empire back together again. You have five toes on each foot and you have one foot attached to each leg. Have you ever seen somebody otherwise, where they had two feet attached to one leg and no feet attached to the other leg? That would be a rather unusual looking image—an image where you had two feet, but all ten toes are on one foot and no toes on the other foot. No, the obvious implication is that when you get at the end, we have two feet and ten toes. The final ten toes symbolize the final revival of the empire. We have not only the successors that come through the Western Empire, but we see, at the end, the East comes back together.

Many don't recognize that. Just as there was a continuation of the Western Empire, there was also a continuation of the Eastern Empire. Rome fell. The Western Empire came to an end in 476 A.D., one of the important dates you probably had to memorize years ago in World History. But the Roman Empire was revived in 554 A.D. There was the Imperial Restoration under Justinian, the restoration under Charlemagne, the restoration under Otto in the 900s, then the Hapsburgs in the late Middle Ages and under Napoleon. Finally, it collapsed in 1814. From the Imperial Restoration, for one thousand two hundred sixty years, we follow through these revivals of the Holy Roman Empire. Mussolini attempted to revive it once more. It was a feeble sixth resurrection that culminated in the Rome-Berlin Axis that plunged the world into World War II. And there is a seventh resurrection yet to occur. That seventh resurrection is the two feet, the ten toes.

What happened to the Eastern Empire while all these resurrections centered or dominated by Rome were going on in the West? What was happening in the East? Well, the Eastern Roman Empire, known in history as the Byzantine Empire, continued down through the period of the Middle Ages until 1453 when the Turks conquered Byzantium (or Constantinople). The Turks conquered it and the Byzantine Empire (the Eastern Roman Empire) fell just a matter of forty years before Columbus discovered America. The Eastern Roman Empire, under the rule of Emperor Constantine XIII, fell in 1453.

That's not the end of the story because there was, a matter of several hundred miles away, an obscure little Grand Duke by the name of Ivan III. He ruled over a small territory centered around a village of wooden buildings. The buildings were of logs. It was not a very impressive city and it was not a very impressive state. This little Grand Deutsche (that's what it was termed) was the Grand Deutsche of Moskove. It is the name from which Moscow comes. It was a very small, little state centered around the area of Moscow, ruled by the Grand Duke Ivan III. Ivan III came to the throne in the 1450s. In 1472, he married Sophia who was the daughter of the last emperor of the Eastern Roman Empire, the Byzantine Empire. When he married her, he took the title of "Tsar." That's the title the Russian rulers were known as, "Tsar." If you spell it out in English, it looks like "Caesar." Well, it is the Russian word for Caesar.

Moscow was then termed "the third Rome" because they viewed Rome originally, then it was transferred to Constantinople and then to Moscow.

Ivan began a process of conquest that spread out and within a matter of a hundred years, gave life to the great Russian state, the Russian Empire. He was the beginning. He became known as Ivan the Great. He began the conquest that began the Russian Empire. He was the first Russian ruler to take the title "Tsar." He viewed himself as the successor to the Byzantine Empire.

Let's go back a thousand years to 990 A.D. Next year they are going to be celebrating the establishment of Christianity in Russia. Gorbachev is going to Rome to make arrangements for it. The Pope is going to go to Moscow in 1990 to celebrate the one thousandth anniversary of the establishment of Christianity in Rome. Gorbachev is going to Rome to visit the Pope in a matter of a few weeks. Part of what they are going to be arranging is the trip that the Pope is going to make to Russia to commemorate the one thousandth anniversary of the establishment of Christianity in Russia. Christianity was established in Russia in 990 A.D.

There was a split that took place. Sixty-four years later, in 1054 A.D., what was called the great schism took place, which was the split between the Roman Catholic Church and the Greek Orthodox Church. The Greek Orthodox Church was headquartered in Constantinople and the Roman Catholic Church in Rome. The Russians were Orthodox. They followed Constantinople and the Tsar. When the Grand Duke of Moscow took the title "Tsar," he viewed himself as the protector of the Orthodox Church. In Europe, you had two rulers with the title "Caesar," coming all the way down to the nineteenth century. In German, they didn't call themselves "emperors." That is the English term. Their term was "Kaiser," the German spelling of "Caesar." There were two rulers in Europe for hundreds and hundreds of years. From the time of Rome, all the way down to the beginning of the nineteenth century, there were two rulers in Europe who used the title "Caesar" and viewed themselves as the rightful heirs of the throne of Caesar.

The Kaisers, who ruled the Holy Roman Empire of the German Nation, traced their claim to the title back through all of the various resurrections of the Holy Roman Empire all the way back to Rome. The Caesars, or the Tsars, who ruled in Moscow traced their claim back through Constantinople to the Eastern Empire. So, you had two legs of the empire that came down. One was a German-Latin dominated Western European leg of the succession of the empire that came down. It was Catholic. That is the leg whose history is foretold in prophecy.

But there was also an Eastern leg, the Slavic leg, the successor of Constantinople and the successor of the Eastern Roman Empire that came down that was personified by the Russian rulers.

We come down and we find that what we term Eastern Europe is not really Eastern Europe. It is Middle Europe because Europe goes all the way into Russia. It goes all the way to the Ural Mountains. If you look at a continental map of Europe, the nations we call Eastern Europe—Poland, Hungary, Czechoslovakia and Yugoslavia—call themselves Middle Europe. All these nations that we think of as Eastern Europe, that's not the term that they use for themselves. The Germans do not refer to those nations as Eastern Europe, but as Middle Europe. Western Europe is the German-Latin end and Eastern Europe is the Russian-Slavic end. Middle Europe is in between, and that is the area that the Russians and the Germans have fought over for hundreds of years.

Most of the time, those nations haven't even existed on the map. They have been ruled either by the Germans or the Russians. That's why it wasn't any new thing when Hitler and Stalin drew a line in 1939 and all the nations of Eastern Europe disappeared from the map. Hitler took part of them and Stalin took part of them. The Germans and the Russians have been doing this for centuries. You can trace it back. Poland existed on the map for twenty-one years, from 1918 until 1939. That was the length of its existence as an independent country. The Tsar of Russia and the ruler of Germany had divided it up between themselves way back in the 1700s. That has been the story.

What we're seeing in Eastern Europe is an unfolding. Logically, when you come down, you have the two legs and you come to the final two feet and then to the ten toes. The obvious implication is you have Western toes and Eastern toes—toes that come out of the Western world and toes that come out of the Eastern realm.

Let's look, very briefly, at the book of Ezekiel. We've kind of set the stage for some of this. I am going to try to summarize and conclude very quickly.

In Ezekiel 27, we find the description of the final great world economic combine. Notice what it says.

Ezekiel 27:12, “Tarshish was your merchant because of your many luxury goods...” We have explained that the ships of Tarshish refer prophetically to Japan and the Japanese fleet. “The ships of Tarshish...” (v. 25).

Verses 12-13, “Tarshish was your merchant because of your many luxury goods...Javan, Tubal, and Meshech were your traders...” Meshech and Tubal very specifically refers to Russia. Meshech is the name from which Moscow is derived. It refers to the Moscow branch of the Great Russians. Tubal refers to the Tubalsk, the Eastern and Western branches of the Great Russian people. There are three peoples called Russians: what are termed Great Russia, White Russia and Little Russia. The Little Russians are the Ukrainians; the White Russians are the Belarusians (Belorussia); and the Great Russians are Russia itself. There are two branches of Russia centered at Moscow and Tubalsk. We find, “...Javan, Tubal and Meshech were your traders...”

Verse 14, “Those from the house of Togarmah [referring to the area of Siberia and East Asia] traded for your wares...”

Verse 15, “The men of Dedan were your traders...”

Verse 17, “Judah and the land of Israel were your traders. They traded for your merchandise wheat of Minnith, millet, honey, oil and balm.”

It talks about the Middle Eastern nations. It talks about all those various things.

Verse 25, “The ships of Tarshish were carriers of your merchandise...”

Then it talks about destruction that is going to come and the wailing for the destruction of the city (vv. 26-32).

You can read Ezekiel 27 at your leisure. Go through and read Ezekiel 27. Then go back and read Revelation 18. You will find that many of the expressions and descriptive phrases John gives in Revelation 18 of the fall of Babylon the Great are exact quotations that are lifted out of Ezekiel 27.

Babylon the Great is a great world economic combine. It is a world economic order that is going to arise in Europe. What we are seeing in Eastern Europe, the bands have been clipped and the tree is beginning to sprout and bud. It is beginning to grow and it is going to make a great tree to fill all the earth. It is going to include all kinds of people in it. It is going to include the nations that we have viewed as behind the Iron Curtain. It is going to include nations all over the world. It will be a great worldwide economic combine. That is the description that is described.

We come to Revelation 18 and it talks about all nations have been made rich (vv. 3, 15). It is seemingly giving the world prosperity.

But then we find that there is a crisis that occurs in the Middle East that threatens the collapse of the worldwide economic order. The United States and Britain are involved in that. There is a rededicated altar that is set up in Israel, a holy place where sacrifices are to be made. There is a crisis that is precipitated in the Middle East that draws in the United States and Britain and threatens a collapse of a worldwide economic order.

In response to the crisis, we find in Revelation 17:12-13, “And the ten horns which you saw are ten kings who have received no kingdom as yet, but they receive authority [KJV, “power”] for one hour with the beast. These are of one mind, and they will give their power and authority to the beast.”

There are going to be ten nations (ten rulers) in Europe, representing both Eastern and Western Europe that will collectively combine and voluntarily relinquish power to a super leader for the purpose of sending in an army to resolve the problem—as they see it—to resolve the threat of peace and prosperity. They move very quickly into the Middle East and occupy the land of Israel, and they move in very swiftly and occupy the United States and Britain—the Anglo-Saxon nations. The problem with the ten-nation combine, that very quickly comes together and emerges out of this great worldwide economic order, is that they are composed of iron and clay. These ten nations (rulers) that give their power to the beast are composed of iron and clay.

As you go through Revelation 17 and Revelation 13, there are not only economic implications, but there are religious implications. There is a worldwide unity that appears on the surface. ‘Peace, peace!’ they say. They come together to put a stop to this threat to peace, as they view it. Daniel tells us that these ten nations, these ten toes, these two feet, are composed of iron and clay. They are a mixture that will not stay mixed. It is partly strong and partly brittle. It will not endure. It only lasts for a short time because there is a disillusionment that comes. First, they are disillusioned with the religious leader and that causes these nations to turn on him. That brings things to a crisis. Revelation 9 describes the breakup of this worldwide economic combine. Once again history repeats itself.

Napoleon and the Tsar of Russia were allies, and Napoleon “stabbed him in the back” because he didn’t trust him. Hitler and Stalin were allies, and Hitler “stabbed him in the back” because he didn’t trust him. We are going to find, once again, the West and the East are going to be allies, but the Germans aren’t going to trust the Russians.

The first woe (Revelation 9:1-12) describes the Western European attack on the Soviet Union. They will pre-empt and, once again, do the same thing. They haven’t learned. Hitler didn’t learn from Napoleon and the future ruler is not going to have learned from Hitler.

We have the two woes unleashed. We have the first woe, Western Europe attacking Russia; then the counter attack is described as the second woe (vv. 13-21). This worldwide trade combine breaks into war and into catastrophe that brings us to the point that all life on this planet would be annihilated except for the fact that the God of Heaven is going to set up a Kingdom.

What did Daniel see at the end of Daniel 2? What did Daniel describe? This Stone of supernatural origin smashed the image on its toes. The ten toes and the image were smashed into dust (v. 45). Daniel said this symbolizes the fact that the God of Heaven is going to set up a Kingdom.

Daniel 2:44-45, “‘And in the days of these kings the God of heaven will set up a kingdom which shall never be destroyed; and the kingdom shall not be left to other people; it shall break in pieces and consume all these kingdoms, and it shall stand forever. Inasmuch as you saw that the stone was cut out of the mountain without hands, and that it broke in pieces the iron, the bronze, the clay, the silver and the gold—the great God has made known to the king what will come to pass after this....’”

Genesis 11 and the story of the Tower of Babel are followed by Genesis 12. What is that story? That is the story of a man God called out of Babylon, a man by the name of Abraham. Abraham lived in Ur of the Chaldeans (Genesis 11:31). Ur was a neighboring city to Babylon, a part of the land of Babylonia. God called a man out of Babylon to go out to a land that He would afterward show him (Genesis 12:1). We’re told that Abraham departed (v. 4).

We are told in Hebrews 11 that Abraham departed.

Hebrews 11:8-10, “By faith Abraham obeyed when he was called to go out to the place which he would afterward receive as an inheritance. And he went out, not knowing where he was going. By faith he sojourned in the land of promise as in a foreign country, dwelling in tents with Isaac and Jacob, the heirs with him of the same promise; for he waited for the city which has foundations, whose builder and maker is God.”

Abraham turned his back on the civilization that man sought to build, the civilization that was described and personified in the Tower of Babel. The Tower of Babel represented man’s attempt to build and unify a one-world empire and a unified one-world government. Abraham turned his back on that. He left and went to where God showed him because Abraham looked for a city that has foundations, whose maker and builder is God.

The story of the Tower of Babel in Genesis 11 is followed by the story of Abraham in Genesis 12. There are implications for us today.

Referring to Babylon, we are told in Revelation 18:2, “...Babylon the great is fallen, is fallen....”

The word for us is in v. 4, “And I heard another voice from heaven saying, ‘Come out of her, my people, lest you share in her sins, and lest you receive of her plagues.’” Just as God called Abraham to come out of Babylon, we, also, are called to come out of and turn our backs on spiritual Babylon.

We are living through the events that are mentioned in the pages of our Bible. The bands have been clipped and the tree is sprouting and growing. As we are living through these events in the days, weeks, months and years immediately ahead of us, there is a warning that Jesus Christ gave to His Church in our time and in our day.

Brethren, if we are where we think we are in prophecy, what Jesus said in Matthew 24:42-51 applies very directly to us. The warnings that John gave to the Church in Revelation 3 apply very directly to us. If we are where we think we are in prophecy, these things apply to us.

Revelation 3:6, “He who has an ear let him hear....”

Matthew 24:42, Jesus said, “Watch therefore, for you do not know what hour your Lord is coming.”

Verse 44, “...be ready....”

Verses 45-48, “Who then is a faithful and wise servant, whom his master made ruler over his household, to give them food in due season? Blessed is that servant whom his master, when he comes, will find so doing. Assuredly, I say to you that he will make him ruler over all his goods. But if that evil servant says in his heart, ‘My master is delaying his coming.’”

He says, ‘It’s way off! Oh, it’s a long ways off! I have time to do a lot of things.’ “That evil servant shall say, ‘My Lord delays His coming.’” The result of thinking that it is way off is in v. 49, “[he] begins to beat his fellow servants, and to eat and drink with the drunkards.”

We find discord and animosity inside the Body. We find a worldly life style. We find they begin to eat and drink with the drunken. They begin to blend in, fit in and be part and parcel of this world.

Jesus said in vv. 50-51, “the master of that servant will come on a day when he is not looking for him and at an hour when he is not aware of, and will cut him in two and appoint him his portion with the hypocrites. There shall be weeping and gnashing of teeth.” That’s a very important warning for us today.

Roman 13:11-12, the Apostle Paul writes, “And do this, knowing the time, that now it is high time to awake out of sleep; for now our salvation is nearer than when we first believed. The night is far spent; the day is at hand. Therefore let us cast off the works of darkness, and let us put on the armor of light.” –“The night is far spent; the day is at hand.”

In Hebrews 10:37-39, the Apostle Paul tells us further, “For yet a little while, and He who is coming will come and will not tarry. Now the just shall live by faith; but if anyone draws back, My soul has no pleasure in him. But we are not of those who draw back to perdition, but of those who believe to the saving of the soul.”

Brethren, it is high time for us to awake out of sleep. The warning to God’s Church in the end time is the tendency to go to sleep, the tendency to go to sleep at the switch. Right before the time comes, the tendency is to begin to drift off to sleep and to be lulled into a spirit of spiritual slumber. Some are going to begin to smite their fellow servants. Others are going to begin to eat and drink with the drunken. That is the warning that is given to our time, our day and our people. That’s the warning that Jesus gave to His disciples.

We are told that it is time to wake up. God warns His people in the end time. He says, ‘WAKE UP! The night is far spent; the day is at hand.’

Revelation 18:4, He warns, “... ‘Come out of her My people....’” Come out of Babylon. Leave the world behind. Don’t drag it into the Church with you. Leave the world behind. We are told to be busily “so doing.”

Matthew 24:46, “Blessed is that servant whom his master, when he comes, will find so doing.” Doing the work of God.

Hebrews 10:37, we are told, “...He who is coming will come and will not tarry.”

Brethren, do you realize what it means? The time is literally really going to come when the air is going to be split with the blast of the trumpet and the dead in Christ are going to rise up (I Thessalonians 4:16), and Jesus Christ is going to return to this earth. He that shall come will come and will not tarry. That time is really going to come—it really, really is. It’s in the time ahead of us. We are right now living in the times that the prophets foresaw. We can’t set the exact day or hour. God has reserved those things into His own hand (Acts 1:7). But he is indeed blind who cannot look at the outline of what the Scriptures say, what we see on the world scene and what we see shaping up. The warning is going out. Are we going to wake up? Are we going to come out of Babylon? Are we going to be prepared, ready and so doing? Because, “He that shall come will come and will not tarry!”

The Writings Series—Ezra, Nehemiah, I & II Chronicles

This evening we are wrapping up the Old Testament. We are right at the very conclusion of the Old Testament, wrapping up this section of the Writings. The books of Ezra and Nehemiah, as well as Chronicles, have already been covered in one form when we went through an earlier Bible study on the historical survey of the Old Testament. However, I want to cover these books this evening in a little different way because these were the books that marked the conclusion of the third section of the Old Testament, the Writings section.

These books are what are called “post-exilic.” That just means “after the exile.” The exile was one of the major events in the history of God’s dealing with ancient Israel. It was certainly a major event in the history of the Jewish people. They would rank, basically, the Exodus and then the exile, in terms of the major events that define them.

The exile was the captivity that Nebuchadnezzar brought about. He invaded Jerusalem and Judea in 604 B.C. He took some of the leaders and some of the young princes of the children of the noble families back to Babylon as hostages. He took some captives and exacted a heavy penalty or tribute—a yearly tax that was to be paid. Things went along for several years. Then, when he decided that the king of Judah that he had left on the throne wasn’t paying up as much as he should or as frequently as he should, he came back in 596 B.C. and put Zedekiah on the throne. In general, he did some other things. He finally came in, completely destroyed Jerusalem and the temple and took the whole nation into captivity in 587 B.C. That concluded the independent Jewish nation.

The book of Daniel tells the story of the entire period that Judah was under the Babylonian domination. Daniel was in that original captivity of 604 B.C. His time as an individual of note in the Babylonian Empire went all the way down to 539 B.C. when Babylon fell and the Medes and the Persians took over. It then extended for several years on into the time of the Medes and the Persians.

Ezra and Nehemiah were always reckoned as one book. They were simply two sections of one book. They did not appear separate in any Hebrew manuscript up until about 1500 A.D. Ezra and Nehemiah tell the story of the restoration of God’s people after the exile.

The book of Daniel tells the story of the fall of Babylon in 539 B.C. We saw that the night of the “handwriting on the wall,” the army of the Medes and the Persians came in under Darius the Mede. Then a few years later, Cyrus himself came back and took the throne of Babylon, after having defeated all the armies elsewhere. He came back and ensconced himself there. Cyrus was the one who issued a decree that allowed the Jews to begin a return to Jerusalem. A period of almost seventy years had gone by. The Jews have been in exile since Nebuchadnezzar’s original invasion.

Cyrus issued a decree. When he issues that decree is where it opens it up in Ezra. Ezra 1 is the story of Cyrus issuing a decree. When he issued a decree, a man of the royal house, whose name was Zerubbabel, was appointed as the Persian governor for Judah. He was authorized to lead a delegation of Jews—those who wished to go—to lead them back and to rebuild the cities and rebuild Jerusalem. Accompanying him were a number of people, including the man who was to be the high priest upon the return to Jerusalem—a man by the name of Joshua. Zerubbabel and Joshua came back, led the delegation back out of Babylon and began the restoration. One of the things that they did immediately, of course, was the physical rebuilding; they laid and dedicated an altar and began work on the temple.

The book of Ezra carries us down through the completion of the work that Zerubbabel did. Then, we skip a period of time—in the neighborhood of just about sixty years—from the end of the story of Zerubbabel’s completion of the temple until the time that Ezra himself returned from Babylon. The gap is right there in the book of Ezra. In that gap, there isn’t anything in the book of Ezra that tells us exactly what happened. The only book of the Bible that fills in the middle of that gap is the book of Esther. The book of Esther gives the story, but gives it elsewhere. Ezra himself came back several years later. He came back as a priest. Then Nehemiah was allowed to come back about ten years later. He came back as the new Persian governor.

Ezra and Nehemiah were contemporaries. The book of Ezra covers a duration of about eighty years. The book of Ezra starts prior to Ezra’s lifetime. It tells the story of the original return under Zerubbabel. Then there is a gap of about sixty years and it picks up the story with Ezra's return.

If you go through the story, as told in Samuel and Kings, and compare it with Chronicles—I and II Chronicles provide a parallel account of the accounts that are given in I and II Samuel and I and II Kings—you find that Chronicles tells the story from a totally different viewpoint. When we went through it in the historical outline of the Old Testament, we went through sort of a harmonized version of Samuel, Kings and Chronicles. We went through the historical flow and through whichever book had relevant material.

But if you were to just read the story flow, I and II Samuel and I and II Kings run through consecutively telling the story. I Samuel starts with the end of the Judges period—the time of Eli and Samuel—and comes all the way down through Saul and King David. Then we pick up the story with Solomon and come all the way through the events of all the kings of Israel and Judah, which takes us down through the end of II Kings.

When you read it in Chronicles, you are reading of the same period, but it's written in a totally different way. Chronicles does not try to repeat; it's not merely a repetition of what you can read elsewhere. Since it was written for a specific reason, a specific purpose, it highlights different information.

First, if you look at it, Chronicles has genealogies and then picks up the story of the kings. It tells you everything it has to say about King Saul in a few verses and spends the rest of the entire book of I Chronicles on the reign of King David. About two-thirds of I Chronicles is spent on the reign of King David. The first ten chapters of II Chronicles are spent on the reign of Solomon. And then everybody else is jammed into the next twenty-six chapters. We find, even then, that only a few kings are picked out and a great deal of attention is given to them. Most of the others are summarized in a matter of a few verses.

Second, Chronicles tells the story from a standpoint of what was going on in Judah and Jerusalem and virtually omits any information on what was happening in Israel, except as it had connection or relevance to what was going on in Jerusalem. Kings, on the other hand, tells the story in a much more evenhanded way.

Why was Chronicles written in that way? Why was the story retold from a different vantage point? One thing we have to understand is that Satan goes about as a roaring lion seeking whom he may devour (I Peter 5:8). Satan has always—in the past, the present and the future—wanted to destroy God's work and God's people. I don't think that's any great revelation to any of you. I suspect all of you knew that and heard that before. We all know that. God inspired this material to be preserved for us because it gives us insight. When we find ourselves in similar circumstances, we know how to handle it.

I Corinthians 10:11, Paul tells us, "Now all these things happened to them as examples, and they were written for our admonition, on whom the ends of the ages have come." The things of the Old Testament are written down as examples for us. They are written down as examples for our admonition.

He also tells us in v. 13, "No temptation has overtaken you except such as is common to man..." The point is that any problem we find, anything we encounter in our lives, anything we encounter as God's people today, similar type things have been encountered by God's people in the past. One of the reasons for the stories and examples in the Old Testament is so we can look through and see how God's people handled and responded to these matters. That's an important key to being able to handle it properly. We find Satan has always wanted to destroy God's people, and when the Jews came back under Zerubbabel, Satan was prepared. He had adversaries stirred up. But notice the way he went about it.

Let's start in Ezra. In Ezra 1 and 2, we have the story of Cyrus allowing the Jews to return; we have the list of those who were going to be going.

In Ezra 3, we find the altar was rededicated and the Feast of Tabernacles was kept.

Now notice, as they began to work, what happened.

Ezra 4:1-3, "Now when the adversaries of Judah and Benjamin heard that the descendants of the captivity were building the temple of the Lord God of Israel, they came to Zerubbabel and the heads of the fathers' houses, and said to them, 'Let us build with you, for we seek your God as you do; and we have sacrificed to Him since the days of Esar-haddon king of Assyria, who brought us here.' But Zerubbabel and Joshua and the rest of the heads of the fathers' houses of Israel said to them, 'You may do nothing with us to build a house for our God; but we alone will build to the Lord God of Israel, as King Cyrus the king of Persia has commanded us.'"

Notice that we are told these were the adversaries, these were the enemies. What was their first attempt? You know, the devil has a couple of different tactics. One, he will try and weasel in from the inside; if he can't "weasel" in and destroy something from the inside, then he will attack it from the outside. If he can't destroy it from the outside, he will try to "weasel" in from the inside. When you go down through the story of the people of God through the centuries, that's what you find. The devil is either trying to get in on the inside, "weasel" in and destroy it from within or he's trying to attack it and harm it from without. No, he's not particular; whichever way will work is fine with him.

The first thing he did—these fellows came and said, 'Hey, you know, look, let's all join up together. We all worship the same God; we're all going to the same place. We will just all kind of pitch in and do this thing.' Zerubbabel said, 'No we won't. Guess again. You have nothing whatsoever to do with us and what we are doing.'

Now, who were these people? They were the Samaritans. Ezra, Nehemiah and Chronicles are the books that conclude the Old Testament; they end the Old Testament. They set the stage for the New Testament. The Samaritans play a very important role, and their role is made plain when you read Ezra, Nehemiah and Chronicles. It is plain where God is working and where God is not working. Now, that is helpful because when we come into the New Testament, we are going to read some things about these Samaritans. We are going to find that they played a very key role in establishing a great false church that purports to be the Christian church. The origin of these Samaritans was given back in II Kings 17. You remember?

Samaria was originally the capital of Northern Israel. Omri, who was one of the kings of Northern Israel, was the father of Ahab. The city of Samaria was founded and built under his dynasty, which consisted of himself for a number of years, then his son Ahab (who is perhaps better known) and then their successors. Samaria was the capital of Northern Israel. Northern Israel, about two hundred years after Solomon's death and its establishment as an independent kingdom, was invaded by the Assyrians and taken into captivity. When the king of Assyria took them, he settled them in an area up between the Black and the Caspian Seas, and he brought in other people. He brought in Babylonians and settled them in the area, in the cities of Northern Israel, the cities centering there in Samaria.

This story is told in II Kings 17:6, "In the ninth year of Hoshea, the king of Assyria took Samaria and carried Israel away to Assyria and placed them in Halah and by the Habor, the River of Gozan and in the cities of the Medes." This was because of their sins. They had disobeyed God and had not heeded what God had said.

Verse 28, "Then one of the priests whom they had carried away from Samaria came and dwelt in Bethel, and taught them how they should fear the Lord." We find the king of Assyria sent one of the Israelite priests back to be in the area.

We are told in v. 23, "until the Lord removed Israel out of His sight, as He had said by all His servants the prophets. So Israel was carried away out of their own land to Assyria unto this day." Up until the time that Isaiah wrote this, that was the way it was.

Verse 24, "Then the king of Assyria brought people from Babylon, Cuthah, Ava, Hamath and from Sepharvaim [these were all suburbs around the city of Babylon] and he placed them in the cities of Samaria instead of the children of Israel and they possessed Samaria and dwelt in the cities." So, here's a different group of people. One of the Israelite priests was sent back to teach them.

Verses 27-28, "Then the king of Assyria commanded, saying, 'Send there one of the priests whom you brought from there; let him go and dwell there, and let him teach them the rituals of the God of the land.' Then one of the priests whom they had carried away from Samaria came and dwelt in Bethel, and taught them how they should fear the Lord."

He taught them how they should fear the Lord. Now, don't you know these priests of Northern Israel did a good job. These were the ones that Jeroboam had made priests. Remember, those were some of the lowest people (KJV, I Kings 12:31). He had made them priests—people who were not Levites. Jeroboam had instituted the golden calf and all of this. That's what Israel had been doing ever since. So, don't you know, one of these priests was going to do a really good job of really teaching them how to serve God.

II Kings 17:29, notice what it says, "However, every nation continued to make gods of their own [used their own idols] and they put them in the houses of the high places which the Samaritans had made...."

Then it names off what they did and says in v. 32 (KJV), "So they feared the Eternal and made unto themselves the lowest of them priests of the high places...."

Verse 33, "They feared the Eternal and served their own gods...." Now that is a key statement.

Verse 34, “To this day they continue practicing the former rituals; they do not fear the Lord, nor do they follow their statutes or their ordinances, or the law and commandment which the Lord had commanded the children of Jacob, whom he named Israel.” It says they don’t really fear God; they don’t really keep His statutes or his laws or His commandments. They are not really obeying God.

Verse 41, “So these nations feared the Eternal and served their graven images, both their children, and their children’s children, as did their fathers so do they unto this day.” That’s the origin of the Samaritans. This is the group of people that showed up when Zerubbabel came back, and said, ‘We worship your God just like you do. We are all in this thing together. We are all going to the same place. Let us help. We will help build the temple. We’ll just all get together.’

They didn’t really worship God. They used God’s name, and this is the key to understanding the Samaritans and their contribution. Frankly, when you look at the Catholic Church, what you see is just “baptized” paganism. The Protestants have just taken it and maybe refined some rough edges, but they are just “chips off the old block,” too. Their holidays and their basic customs derive from “Big Mama” all the way back to Babylon.

Well, what do they do? They use the name of God; they use the name of Christ. They use the name of various people in the Bible; they use biblical-sounding terminology. They use the names of “saints” out of the Bible, and they keep on following the same old pagan stuff they have always followed. They had their various idols—the god of this, that, and the other. But now, instead of being the “god” of travel, well, he’s the “patron saint” of travel. Instead of being the “god” of this, well, he’s the “patron saint” of it. They just changed the name and kept doing the same thing. The only change was changing the name. Just sprinkle a little water on it—this statute was “this”; now it’s “that.” They kept doing the same thing. It’s incredible.

I don’t know if any of you have actually been to St. Peter’s Cathedral. If you’ve ever seen pictures of St. Peter’s Cathedral, you will notice right there in the great courtyard this giant obelisk that sticks up there; you see in all the pictures. Do you realize what that was? That was actually transported from Egypt. It was the temple of the sun god at Heliopolis in Egypt. It was one of the great feats of the ancient world. They actually transported that thing across miles of North Africa, loaded it on barges, brought it across the Mediterranean and brought it up there at St. Peter’s courtyard. They wanted the real thing. It’s the most pagan thing you can get—the center and the absolute symbol of ancient pagan sun worship. Heliopolis, which means “the city of the sun,” was the center of the worship of the sun god in Egypt. They took it and set it up right there at St. Peter’s. I don’t want to get off into that or into some of the symbolism. But the point is that the Samaritans played a very important part and this has always been the Samaritan approach.

In Ezra and Nehemiah, we have the story of Satan’s attempt to undermine the work of God. We have the story in Ezra and Nehemiah and the restoration of God’s work. The nation had gone into captivity with the Babylonians and now the work was being restored. The work of God in that day consisted of building a literal temple and preparing the way for Christ’s first coming. Christ was going to come to His own (John 1:11); there was to be an identifiable group. That was necessary.

There were a number of important things to be done that set the stage for the New Testament. First, the Old Testament Scriptures had to be put in final form and preserved. Part of the work of God was the preservation of the Scriptures because that’s part of the very foundation of the Church. That’s what points to Jesus and identifies Jesus as the Messiah. So, it was important that the Scriptures be preserved. And if the Scriptures are going to be preserved, you have to know where to look to find them. The knowledge of the truth had to be preserved.

Second, an identifiable people of God had to be preserved to serve as a nucleus around which God’s Church would be built. When Paul went throughout the Roman Empire and preached—even in the Gentile cities—do you know where he always went to preach first? He went into the synagogues because that was where the converted Jews, as well as the Gentiles who attended synagogue services, were. Gentiles did not convert to Judaism but would attend synagogue services and hear the law read.

Why was it necessary to start there? Because you started with people who knew the law—people who were familiar with the Sabbath, the Holy Days, clean and unclean meats, and all of these things. They were familiar with the Scriptures. They were familiar with the Bible. You had a nucleus of people that were familiar with the Scriptures and familiar with the law. Then, as others who were not familiar with those things were converted, they were added to the group. They were added to the nucleus where certain customs and practices were already being done. That was simply the way that God chose to build His Church. These things had to be preserved.

This is what we find. Satan tried to subvert by entangling the work of God with people who were not serving God. They were just practicing the same old paganism, but they had cleaned it up a little bit. These Samaritans continued to practice the same old Babylonian religion but called it by the name of YHVH, the God of Israel. Instead of calling their idol Baal or Marduk or whatever, they called him YHVH. They used the name of God and they used Biblical-sounding terminology to apply to the paganism they had been practicing. That was what the Samaritans did.

That's one of the reasons it's called the Babylonian Mystery religion. The thing was so mixed up and so mysterious that you couldn't figure out one thing from another. The first thing they did—they tried to subvert; they tried to come in from within. It has always been a major problem of the people of God to preserve their distinct identity and not to lose that identity by simply becoming absorbed with the world and the society around them. When God's people lose their identity, then they are quickly on the way to ceasing to be the people of God. So, the Samaritans tried to subvert it this way.

Zerubbabel rebuffed them and said, 'No, you don't have anything to do with this.' Notice what they did. Did they really want to help build the temple? Notice.

Ezra 4:4, "Then the people of the land tried to discourage the people of Judah. They troubled them in building." They stirred up trouble, spread gossip and rumors and, just in general, were a source of trouble.

They also went to court. I tell you—read v. 5 on down the rest of the chapter and it sort of sounds like 1979.

Verse 5, "and hired counselors against them to frustrate their purpose all the days of Cyrus king of Persia, even until the reign of Darius king of Persia." They wrote an accusation. They went to court and literally got a court order from the court of the Persian king that was a cease and desist order that said 'you have to stop until we investigate this matter.'

They wrote an accusation.

Verse 6, "Now in the reign of Ahasuerus, in the beginning of his reign, they wrote an accusation against the inhabitants of Judah and Jerusalem."

Verse 12, they said, "Let it be known to the king that the Jews that came from you to us under Jerusalem are building the rebellious and the bad city, and they have set up a wall thereof and joined the foundations." It's amazing how you can make something sound bad. How are you going to build a city if you don't set up the walls and join the foundation? But the way they were telling it, it sounds sinister. 'They are setting up the walls of that place and are building the foundations.' That's what they came back for! That was no secret. But they said they were building the rebellious and bad city.

Then they made an accusation.

Verse 13, "Let it be known to the king that, if this city is built and the walls completed, they will not pay tax, tribute, or custom, and the king's treasury will be diminished." They said, 'You know why they are building that city? They are going to build the walls and then they are going to quit paying their taxes.'

That wasn't true, but you can accuse anybody of anything. They hired counselors (attorneys, lawyers) and they went to court. They said, 'We are worried about the king and don't want to see the king lose any money.' They were just being good helpful citizens. You can hardly read some of these verses with a straight face.

We have an order that was issued.

Verse 21, "Now give the command to make these men cease, that this city may not be built until the command is given by me."

Verse 23, "...they went up in haste to Jerusalem against the Jews, and by force of arms made them cease." They sent in troops and stopped the work. They took the work of God under receivership, if you will. It is a remarkable parallel to what we experienced in 1979, which just shows that the devil is not really original.

The reason why there are so many parallels is because he does the same thing over and over again. Human nature is the same and the devil is the same. He has the same objectives and uses a lot of the same tactics. He tried to subvert, discourage and stir up adversaries and enemies. The work of God ceased.

Ezra 5:1, "Then the prophet Haggai and Zechariah the son of Iddo, prophets, prophesied to the Jews who were in Judah and Jerusalem, in the name of the God of Israel, who was over them." Haggai and Zechariah were stirred up as prophets and told Zerubbabel that he needed to get back to building—and so he did.

Verse 2, "So Zerubbabel the son of Shealtiel and Joshua the son of Jozakak rose up and began to build the house of God which is in Jerusalem; and the prophets of God were with them, helping them.” They got back to building and it went back to court. Finally, the issue was fought out in court.

Ezra 6:1-3, “Then King Darius issued a decree, and a search was made in the archives, where the treasures were stored in Babylon. And at Achmetha, in the palace that is in the province of Media, a scroll was found, and in it a record was written thus: In the first year of King Cyrus, King Cyrus issued a decree concerning the house of God at Jerusalem: ‘Let the house be rebuilt, the place where they offered sacrifices; and let the foundation of it be firmly laid, its height sixty cubits and its width sixty cubits.’”

Darius made a search of the records and found the decree that Cyrus had issued allowing the temple to be rebuilt. Finally, the court case was won. The temple was finished and rededicated (vv. 15-16). So, we go through this struggle with the Samaritans.

In Ezra 7, we pick up the story about sixty years later with Ezra the priest returning.

Ezra 7:10, “For Ezra had prepared his heart to seek the law of the Lord and to do it and to teach statutes and judgments in Israel.” He was given authority by the king to return and was allowed to take something back that had evidently not been taken back earlier.

Verse 14, “And whereas you are being sent by the king and his seven counselors to inquire concerning Judah and Jerusalem, with regard to the Law of your God which is in your hand.” Ezra brought back the official temple scrolls of the Law from Babylon. He was given authority by the Persian king to go back and inquire of the state of the nation and to take the Law back with him. Ezra was allowed to go back.

We find that he came down and he came into Judah.

When he got to Jerusalem, he was informed, Ezra 9:2, “For they have taken some of their daughters as wives for themselves and for their sons, so that the holy seed is intermingled with the people of those lands. Indeed, the hand of the leaders [princes] and rulers has been foremost in this trespass.”

When you go through and find problems among the people of God, you very rarely find problems in the congregation if you don’t find problems in the leadership. When you find a righteous king of Israel or Judah, you find the people pretty well doing what they should do. When you find a wicked king, you find the people doing what they should not do. When you find a righteous judge that God had raised up, you find people pretty well responding to that. When you find a lack of righteous leadership and a bad example being set, you find people not doing what they should do, at least as a general thing.

Here, we find the hand of the leaders and the rulers had been foremost in this trespass. What we have now come to is that the very identity of the people of God was threatened. They were on the verge of losing their identity—in terms of culture, religion, language and as a separate ethnic group—in every area. If this had gone on, within another couple of generations they would have simply lost their identity and been absorbed into the general mix of the Middle Eastern population. There wouldn’t have been a separate identity. There wouldn’t have been a Bible preserved and an identifiable people who would have remained.

Ezra was very concerned. He was astonished by what he saw and the state of things. Ezra called the people together. He called the nation together and told them that they needed to enter into a covenant.

Ezra 10:3, “Now therefore, let us make a covenant with our God to put away all these wives and those who have been born to them, according to the covenant of my master and of those who tremble at the commandment of our God, and let it be done according to the law.” They made a covenant to put away all of these foreign wives. There had to be a distinction. The nation was at the point of losing its identity.

Verses 5-7, “Then Ezra arose, and made the leaders of the priests, the Levites, and all Israel swear an oath that they would do according to this word. So they swore an oath. Then Ezra rose up from before the house of God, and went into the chamber of Jehohanan the son of Eliashib; and when he came there, he ate no bread and drank no water, for he mourned because of the guilt of those from the captivity. And they issued a proclamation throughout Judah and Jerusalem to all the descendants of the captivity, that they must gather at Jerusalem.”

It then goes into this covenant that they made.

Now we skip down about twelve years. We pick up the story in Nehemiah 1. Nehemiah comes to the king of Persia and requests the job of governor (2:5). Ezra was not governor. He had certain civil authority, but primarily he was a priest and had the authority to teach and bring back the law. Perhaps, Nehemiah had been in communication with Ezra and maybe others. He knew what was going on and was very concerned about it. Things really hadn’t changed a whole lot; we are going to see why they hadn't changed.

Nehemiah went to the king of Persia, Artaxerxes, and asked for the job of governor in Judah. He was given the job and was allowed to return with full governmental authority (v. 6). He came in and began to oversee the repair of Jerusalem. It describes that in Nehemiah 3.

Nehemiah 4:1-3, "But it so happened when Sanballat heard that we built the wall, that he was very furious and very indignant, and mocked the Jews. And he spoke before his brethren and the army of Samaria, and said, 'What are these feeble Jews doing? Will they fortify themselves? Will they offer sacrifices? Will they complete it in a day? Will they revive the stones from the heaps of rubbish—stones that are burned?' Now Tobiah the Ammonite was beside him, and he said, 'Whatever they build, if even a fox goes up on it, he will break down their stone wall.'"

Tobiah the Ammonite was with him and he was making fun of it. He said a fox could jump over that wall.

Verse 6, Nehemiah said, "So we built the wall, and the entire wall was joined together up to half its height, for the people had a mind to work."

We find that Sanballat, Tobiah and all of these others created trouble.

Verses 8-9, "and all of them conspired together to come and attack Jerusalem and create confusion. Nevertheless we made our prayer to our God, and because of them we set a watch against them day and night."

When Nehemiah came back, he found the work was in shambles. The tendency of people is to lose their zeal and their enthusiasm. When they came back under Zerubbabel, they were all "charged up" to do the work; they were excited. They were coming back to Jerusalem. They were going to rebuild the temple and they were really going to get back on the right track.

There have been a lot of revivals and ups and downs of God's people through the centuries. That's a part of the story. And boy, they were all "charged up" and were really going to get back on the track. Difficulties came and time went on, and you know what happened. It's hard for people to maintain excitement and enthusiasm. They got sidetracked. They got absorbed in their businesses, building their own houses and doing their own thing. After a while, interest was diverted. When trouble came up and the work was interfered with, interest was diverted. Then God raised up a prophet, Zerubbabel, and he finished the temple. Then again, they got off track.

Sixty years went by. By the time Ezra got there, they were intermarrying with the people of the land; their religious practices were affected. It was a mess. Ezra preached and the people promised they were going to do better. They were all charged up, but it didn't last.

Nehemiah came back; the wall was still in shambles and all sorts of things. He said, 'The first thing we are going to do is get this thing cleaned up and get it into shape.' Immediately, the Samaritans were the source of the problem. Here they were stirring things up again. They did everything they could think of. They conspired and tried to discourage the people. They spread gossip and rumors and made accusations and threats.

Nehemiah was a remarkable character. Read through the story of Nehemiah. God has worked through different types of people and people of different personalities. The time that we are looking at here was a crisis period. It was a period when the very identity of the people of God could have been lost. It was one of those crucial periods in history. Nehemiah was a strong leader. I mean, he was the kind of guy that you would not want to cross. You can read the book and find out what happened to the ones that did. Nehemiah was a remarkable individual in that way.

Every leader that God has worked through hasn't necessarily been as forceful and determined as Nehemiah, at least in the sense that Nehemiah was going to get it done. It was going to be done that way, and he was not going to tolerate any deviation from it. A man of that caliber, a man of that sort of temperament, was really needed because if there had been someone who had taken a softer approach than Nehemiah, it wouldn't have "stuck." It was everything Nehemiah could do to set things back on the right track.

Certain things remind you of other things. Any time I read the book of Nehemiah and about some of the things where Nehemiah sort of "scorched the hair" off of them with some of the things that he said, it sort of takes me back a few years. It sort of reminds me of a few sermons that I heard Mr. Herbert Armstrong give in Big Sandy when he sort of "rattled" the metal building there. There are a few of you who remember some of those things.

When I go through and think of Nehemiah, I think Nehemiah must have sort of been like that. Nehemiah had a way of really throwing the fear of God into the people. He was facing a monumental task. So, they prayed to God, got busy about it and they built. Nehemiah went to God about it, but they guarded this thing. You talk about working!

Verse 18, “Every one of the builders had his sword girded at his side as he built. And the one who sounded the trumpet was beside me.” The Samaritans said they would disrupt it. Nehemiah said, ‘We are going to build this thing. We are going to camp out here; we are going to work around the clock.’

Verse 23, “So neither I, my brethren, my servants, nor the men of the guard who followed me took off his clothes, except that everyone took them off for washing.”

‘None of us even took our clothes off except to change, in order to wash what we had. There is no rest. We sleep in our clothes; we have our sword by our side. The guy who was to sound the trumpet of alarm was next to me and we kept this thing under surveillance around the clock.’

Nehemiah was the kind of guy that you weren’t going to scare; you weren’t going to discourage him. You talk about determined; you talk about a fellow that you didn’t want to rile up. There were a couple of things you weren’t going to do to Nehemiah. You weren’t going to scare Nehemiah and you weren’t going to discourage him. Nehemiah understood where the real help came from. It came from God.

Verses 19-21, “Then I said to the nobles, the rulers, and the rest of the people, ‘The work is great and extensive, and we are separated far from one another on the wall. Therefore, wherever you hear the sound of the trumpet, rally to us there. Our God will fight for us.’ So we labored in the work, and half of the men held the spears from daybreak until the stars appeared.”

In Nehemiah 10, we find that the people were brought together to renew the covenant and they were reminded not to intermarry with the people around, with other nations. They were commanded to strictly observe the Sabbath. They were told to bring in the tithes and the offerings and all these things were done (vv. 29-39).

In Nehemiah 13, Nehemiah was gone for a little while. When he came back to Jerusalem, he found that things had fallen in disrepair while he was gone. These people really didn’t have a whole lot of heart to obey.

Nehemiah 13:15-17, “In those days I saw in Judah some people treading wine presses on the Sabbath, and bringing in sheaves, and loading donkeys with wine, grapes, figs, and all kinds of burdens, which they brought into Jerusalem on the Sabbath day. And I warned them about the day on which they were selling provisions. Men of Tyre dwelt there also, who brought in fish and all kinds of goods, and sold them on the Sabbath to the children of Judah, and in Jerusalem. Then I contended with the nobles of Judah, and said to them, ‘What evil thing is this that you do, by which you profane the Sabbath day?’”

Verses 19-20, “...I commanded the gates to be shut, and charged that they must not be opened till after the Sabbath. Then I posted some of my servants at the gates, so that no burdens would be brought in on the Sabbath day. Now the merchants and sellers of all kinds of wares lodged outside Jerusalem once or twice.” Here were people that hadn’t really gotten the big picture yet. They sort of got on the outskirts.

Verse 21, “So I warned them, and said to them, ‘Why do you spend the night around the wall? If you do so again, I will lay hands on you!’ [He wasn’t talking about ordaining any of them, either.] From that time on they came no more on the Sabbath.”

He came down there and said, ‘I thought I told you guys to “get.” If I see you here again, I am going to turn you every which way but loose.’ They didn’t come back.

Verses 23-26, “In those days I also saw Jews who had married women of Ashdod, Ammon, and Moab. And half of their children spoke the language of Ashdod, and could not speak the language of Judah, but spoke according to the language of one or the other people. So I contended with them and cursed them, struck some of them and pulled out their hair, and made them swear by God, saying, ‘You shall not give your daughters as wives to their sons, nor take their daughters for your sons or yourselves. Did not Solomon king of Israel sin by these things? Yet among many nations there was no king like him, who was beloved of his God; and God made him king over all Israel. Nevertheless pagan women caused even him to sin.’”

Here is a key.

Verse 28, “And one of the sons of Joiada, the son of Eliashib the high priest was a son-in-law of Sanballat the Horonite; therefore I drove him from me.” Now, you wonder why there was so much problem of getting this thing straightened out. The high priest’s grandson was married to the daughter of the leader of the Samaritans. That was why they had never really been able to get the situation straightened out, up until then. People knew what was going on and they said, ‘Why should we do “so and so”?’ The high priest’s grandson is married to old Sanballat’s daughter.’ Nehemiah said he had enough, ‘You’ve had enough time to do something about this.’ So, he chased him out.

Now what happened? Josephus tells us that Sanballat then built a rival temple on Mt. Gerizim up in Samaria and made this grandson of Eliashib (whose name was Manasseh) the high priest of the Samaritans.

Let me just call your attention to the statement in John 4. When Jesus confronted the woman at the well in Samaria, do you remember what she said?

John 4:20, “Our fathers worshiped on this mountain [Mt. Gerizim], and you Jews say that in Jerusalem is the place where one ought to worship.” Why were the Samaritans worshipping in Mt. Gerizim? Because that’s where old Sanballat had built the temple and that’s where the apostate priest had gone.

Verse 22, Jesus said, “You [Samaritans] worship what you do not know; we know what we worship, for salvation is of the Jews.” Jesus made it very plain where you look to find the work of God. It’s preserved in Jerusalem (Romans 3:1-2). It was preserved in the Jewish community, not by the Samaritans. You don’t look to Samaria to find the inspired text of the Bible. You don’t look to Samaria to find the pattern for what you should do. You don’t look to Samaria; you look to Jerusalem. You don’t look to the Samaritans; you look to the Jews. It was very apparent where God was working and where God’s work was centered. It was centered in Jerusalem.

The story of Ezra and Nehemiah is the story of revival and decline—God’s Old Testament Church getting off track and getting put back on track. As soon as somebody wasn’t looking, they were getting off again—on and off and on and off. God had a work to be done. He had to set the stage for the New Testament period and the coming of Jesus Christ as the Messiah. The problems that were extant, in terms of the Samaritan community, are clearly identified.

Now let’s just look very briefly at I Chronicles.

I Chronicles 1-9 deal with genealogy.

Chapter 10 tells the story of King Saul.

I Chronicles 11:1, 3, “Then all Israel came together to David at Hebron...Then they anointed David king over Israel, according to the word of the Lord by Samuel.”

Verse 4, “And David and all Israel went to Jerusalem....”

Verse 5, “...Nevertheless David took the stronghold of Zion (that is, the City of David).”

He made this the capital.

Verse 9, “Then David went on and became great, and the Lord of hosts was with him.”

I Chronicles 11-29 all deal with David.

Chapter 11 tells how he became king and Jerusalem was made the capital.

Chapter 12 goes on and tells a little bit about the things that David did as king.

Chapter 13 tells about bringing the ark to Jerusalem.

Chapter 14 tells more of David’s greatness as king.

Chapter 15 tells the story of how the ark was brought in.

Chapter 16 goes on and discusses more information about the ark being brought into Jerusalem and shows that this was the headquarters of the work of God.

Chapter 17 tells about David wanting to build the temple.

As you come on down through Chronicles, chapter 22 tells how plans were made for the building of the temple.

Chapter 23 gives more details of these plans.

In chapters 24 and 25, David sets and reorganizes the priests and the Levites; songs are written and added to the canon of Scripture.

Chapter 28 tells how Solomon was given the pattern of the house.

Chapter 29 tells more details about the building of the temple.

I Chronicles focuses on King David’s reign and primarily focuses on the part that had to do with building the temple.

II Chronicles starts with the reign of King Solomon. The first nine chapters deal with Solomon and the building of the temple.

II Chronicles 1:1, “Solomon the son of David was strengthened in his kingdom, the Lord his God was with him and magnified him exceedingly.” It talks about all the grandeur connected with Solomon.

Chapters 2, 3 and 4 tell about the building of the temple.

Chapter 5 talks about the building of the temple and about the Ark of the Covenant being brought into the temple.

Chapter 6 tells about the temple and God’s covenant with Solomon.

Chapter 7 tells about Solomon’s prayer and the dedication of the temple.

Chapter 8 tells about Solomon’s palace.

Chapter 9 tells about the Queen of Sheba.

Chapters 10, 11 and 12 tell the story of the split between Israel and Judah and what transpired.

Then we go through the story of the ups and downs, the revivals and the declines.

In chapters 14, 15 and 16, we look at the story of Asa, the story of the revival and the renewal of the covenant on Pentecost.

In chapters 17, 18, 19, 20 and 21, we have the story of Jehoshaphat, a righteous king who was setting judges and was trying to turn the people to obey God and to teach the law.

Chapters 22, 23 and 24 tell of a remarkable occasion. It tells the story of the royal family of Judah. One of Jehoshaphat's sons married the daughter of Ahab and Jezebel, and it tells the problems that were created. This is the only time that Samaria and Northern Israel get mentioned, and it was in a negative context. Jezebel and Ahab's daughter married Jehoshaphat's son and there was trouble. When her husband and her son died, she ultimately made herself king; she tried to kill all her kids and grandkids. She was a "chip-off-the-old-block" in terms of her mother. One of her little grandchildren, a little one-year old grandson Joash, was hidden in the temple. Six years later he was brought out and crowned king. He was made king and she was executed.

Chapter 26 tells of King Uzziah who tried to appropriate to himself the dignity of the priesthood.

In chapters 29, 30, 31 and 32, we have the story of King Hezekiah, one of the great periods of revival in Judah. It was a time when the very existence of the nation was threatened from without by Assyrian invasion and how Hezekiah sought God. God hearkened, intervened and wiped out the Assyrian army. It tells about the expansion of the canon of Scripture in II Chronicles 32:32. It tells how Hezekiah sought to repair the temple and rediscovered the Law. It tells about the great Passover that was held and how he was involved in all this sort of thing.

In chapter 33, we have the story of Hezekiah's son Manasseh and his problems.

Chapters 34 and 35 tell about the great revival under Josiah. In II Chronicles 34:15, it tells about the rediscovery of the Book of the Law and the revival that took place as the people turned back to God.

Chapter 36 summarizes everything else that happened, ends up with the captivity, and then the fact that Cyrus, King of Persia, allowed the Jews to return. II Chronicles 36:23 ends with permission to return, to go up.

Even though Samuel and Kings were already a part of the canon, Chronicles was written to tell the story from an entirely different outlook. It tells the story from a priestly outlook. It deals almost entirely with the history of the southern kingdom, the Kingdom of Judah. It deals with the house of David. The emphasis is on Jerusalem as God's headquarters and the place where God has set His name. The focus is on David, Solomon, the temple and the periods of revival in Judah. It is setting the stage. It is focusing in on what we need to know when we come to the New Testament period. We got a little glimpse of it in John 4 when we found the contrast between the Jews and the Samaritans.

But, when you come down a little further to Acts 8, you read that Philip went to Samaria to preach. You find that there was a certain man there who was the religious leader of all the Samaritans. His name was Simon, Simon the Sorcerer, known in secular history as Simon Magus. "Magus" is simply the Greek word for "sorcerer" or "magician." That's where we get our word "magician."

We are told in Acts 8:9-11, that all of the Samaritans from the greatest to the least gave heed to Simon the Sorcerer. He was an individual that was looked to by all of them, wherever they might be, regardless of their station in life. We are told that he of a long time had bewitched them with sorcery. He was an individual who worked great false miracles and lying wonders. We are told that Simon was acknowledged by the Samaritans as being the great power of God. They viewed him as the religious leader, the great power of God. They looked to him; they venerated him as their religious leader.

We are told that when Philip came and preached and many of the Samaritans were baptized, Simon himself was baptized (vv. 12-13). But it's very apparent that all Simon did was get wet because a little bit later when Peter and John came down, Simon was very impressed with what they did. He called Peter aside and offered to give him money (v. 18). He offered to buy a position of leadership—to pay him. He wanted an apostleship. He wanted the power that Peter had and the position and rank that Peter had. He offered to buy it.

Acts 8:20-21, Peter said (KJV), "...Your money perish with you...you have neither part nor lot in this matter..." Now the expressions "part" and "lot" are only used one other place. It's used in Acts 1:24-26 to refer to Matthias being chosen by lot to have part of the apostleship of the twelve to take Judas' place. It was a play on words. It was used back in the Psalms as a prophecy of Judas and what would happen. It's used in Acts 1, and Peter uses the same play on words when he tells Simon "you have neither part nor lot in this matter."

Acts 8:23, he told Simon, “I see that you are poisoned by bitterness and bound by iniquity.” – ‘You are bound up and wrapped up in lawlessness, iniquity and in transgression of the law; you are bitter.’

We find, twenty years later, Paul is writing in II Thessalonians.

II Thessalonians 2:7, he says, “The mystery of lawlessness is already at work.” The mystery of lawlessness was already at work less than twenty years after Peter’s encounter with Simon of Samaria.

There were two dispersions; there were two Diasporas in the ancient world. One was the dispersion of the Jews throughout the Middle Eastern areas and into Europe. But there was another dispersion that had taken place during the days of Alexander the Great—a dispersion of the Samaritan community. There were sizable colonies of the Samaritans, particularly in Alexandria, Egypt and Rome, Italy. Simon, we are told, was acknowledged by all of the Samaritans, from the greatest to the least, as the great power of God.

What we have is the story of the beginning of two different churches that for a while gave the outward appearance of being one. Paul recognized and wrote to the Thessalonians that the mystery of iniquity was already at work. The mystery religion that taught lawlessness and turned grace into license was already at work less than twenty years after that.

Jude had to write to the Church and exhort them to “contend earnestly for the faith which was once for all delivered to the saints” (v. 3). By the time Jude was writing in the late 60’s A.D., it was already getting to the point that you had to look for and be careful to find “the faith once delivered” because there was a counterfeit gospel. Another gospel was being preached—a false gospel—a gospel that was simply a message about the person of Christ but ignoring the message of the Kingdom that He brought. It was a message that turned grace into license to sin. It de-emphasized and played-down the law until, by the end of the century, the law was being outwardly and openly discarded.

The mystery of iniquity grew up around the nucleus of the Samaritan community in Rome and Alexandria, just as the Church of God grew up around the Jewish community as a nucleus, and then other cities of the Roman Empire. Simon and the Samaritans had always tried to take what looked like the best things going that any other religion had to offer and just sort of mix it in with what they had. They watered it down and made it easy. People didn’t really have to do very much. The stage was set.

The post-exilic books of Ezra, Nehemiah and Chronicles are put at the end of the Old Testament to tell the story of the conflict between the people of God and the adversary of God’s work. They are there to tell the story of how Satan sought to undermine the work of God. They are there to tell the story of how God’s work was preserved and to make plain where God was working and where you should look for the authoritative canon of Scripture. You are not to look off somewhere, here or there, but you should look to the official Jewish community in Jerusalem.

John 4:22, Jesus said salvation was of the Jews. They are the ones who had retained and preserved the knowledge necessary for salvation, not with the Samaritans.

Acts 4:22, Jesus told the woman at the well, “You [Samaritans] worship what you do not know [You don’t even know what you are talking about.]; we know what we worship, for salvation is of the Jews.”

The Jewish community preserved the authoritative Word of God (Romans 3:1-2) and that is where you look to find the Bible. The stage was set for the New Testament work of God. The end of the Old Testament made it plain to God’s people in the first century of the New Testament where you should look to find the work that God was doing.

The Old Testament is filled with the stories of the ups and downs of the work of God and of the people of God. God has chosen to work through human beings; he raised up people and he raised up a work. Time goes on; people die and another generation comes along. There are very vital and important lessons. That’s why these examples are recorded for us. Human nature hasn’t changed. The pulls of human nature are the same. There may be specifics that change, in terms of what the specific issue is at a given point in time, but the principles remain the same. There is the importance of God’s people retaining and preserving their identity—the importance of retaining a complete allegiance and devotion to God, of not being enticed by the world around us and the attempts that Satan will make either to subvert God’s work from within or to attack it and destroy it from without.

The one thing you can be assured of is that the devil is never going to let God’s work alone. He is either going to be doing one or the other, but he’s not just going to go out and leave it alone. You go through the Scriptures and find over and over this continual thing. God is allowing that because that's a trial and a test on God's people. Are we, when the work is being attacked from without, going to show courage and the dedication to look to God, to trust God and to serve God in the midst of external persecution and difficulty? When the work is being attacked and the devil is attempting to subvert it and destroy it from within either through gossip, rumor and accusation or through compromise, as occurred in the days of Zerubbabel, Ezra and Nehemiah, what are we going to do? Are we going to keep our eyes on God's law? Are we going to be careful and do what we should do? These things were preserved for God's people. The thing we can be assured of is that we go through some of these things over and over. We have to keep our orientation where it should be—to serve God, to put God first and to realize that God has a plan and a purpose. We can't afford to get derailed from the track that God wants His people going down. As you go through the story, you find over and over that those were the issues.

When God concluded the Old Testament, He concluded it in the Writings section, with books that had a timeless message for the people of God. That set the stage for the New Testament with information that was important for God's people to understand at the time when Jesus came as the Messiah and the New Testament Church was raised up and established.

With that, we have concluded the Old Testament. We have concluded the section of the Writings. We will get into the book of Revelation next Bible study.

Introduction to Revelation

This evening we are going to be getting into the book of Revelation. I want to give you some background in regards to the book of Revelation, as well as an overview of the book and the material that is coming.

The Apostle John wrote the book of Revelation. He was the last surviving of the original twelve apostles. He lived about twenty-five to thirty years beyond the other original apostles. The Apostle John, the last surviving of the twelve, wrote the book of Revelation while he was in exile on the Isle of Patmos. This was during the reign of the Roman emperor Domitian. From secular historical sources, we are able to date the couple of years that John was in exile. He was banished to Patmos, a tiny, little rocky island off the coast of ancient Asia Minor. John was exiled and banished from the mainland to a tiny island in the Mediterranean off the coast of modern-day Turkey.

We date the book of Revelation about 96 A.D. Conceivably the date could vary a year, one way or the other. John was on Patmos for about two and one-half years or something like that, so we pick the middle date.

The first question we might look at has to do with the matter of John's authorship. Depending on which commentary you use and which sources you look at, you will find that many of the commentators, particularly the modern commentaries, will question that John wrote the book of Revelation. Let's look and understand why I say that he wrote the book of Revelation. There are several reasons for not questioning John's authorship.

To begin with, the fact that John was the author of the book of Revelation was never called into question until about 200 A.D. There aren't any records that there was a dispute. The book of Revelation itself clearly states that John wrote it. It starts out clearly stating that John wrote it. No one questioned until 200 A.D. that the John who wrote the book of Revelation was the John who was one of the twelve. The questioning of John's authorship was never an issue or question in the area of Asia Minor (modern-day Turkey) at the time of the first century and for quite a number of centuries afterward.

This was primarily an area of Greek settlement. There were other areas, but this was a Greek-speaking area. There was a very large Greek population that had colonized in that area.

If you remember, the book of Revelation was addressed to the seven Churches in cities in Asia Minor. Churches were located in cities that were on an ancient Roman mail route. The cities of Ephesus, Smyrna, Pergamos, Thyatira, Sardis, Philadelphia and Laodicea were the ones that were specifically enumerated in Revelation. The Churches in those seven cities were the recipients of this original book.

John had lived in Ephesus. It appears from the historical record that the city of Ephesus was where he lived during the latter years of his life.

The Apostle Paul raised up the Church in the area of Ephesus on his first evangelistic journey back in the late 40s A.D. It was the same area to which Timothy was later assigned responsibility. We find Timothy residing in Ephesus in the latter epistles of the Apostle Paul. Ephesus was an area that Paul visited on several occasions and had spent quite a bit of time there. It is the area where we find the Apostle John living in the 80s and 90s A.D. He was exiled from there by the emperor Domitian. About 98 A.D. he was allowed to return from exile on Patmos. He died within a relatively short period of time in or near Ephesus.

There isn't any record that any of the Churches in ancient Asia Minor or any of the Christian writers in that area ever disputed John's authorship. In those cities, it was taken for granted that John wrote the book of Revelation. The question of John's authorship was primarily raised after 200 A.D.

The original focus of that rejection was in the area of Alexandria, Egypt. The only reason they questioned John's authorship was to undermine the authority of the book or to remove it from the canon of Scripture. Of course, there were those in the area of Alexandria (and in Rome a little later) that certainly had incentive to do this.

There are various reasons why the book of Revelation was viewed as an undesirable book by the professing Christian church. What you find developing and what Revelation and other parts of the New Testament certainly make plain is that there is a clear dichotomy between two churches. One Church really was the Church Jesus Christ built—the Church of which He Himself was the living head, the Church that remained faithful to Jesus Christ and what He taught. A second church was a professing Christian church—a church that professed or acknowledged, on the one hand, that Jesus of Nazareth was the Messiah—they acknowledged that, they said that—but they didn't teach what He taught.

The professing Christian church substituted a message of their own devising. They substituted various heresies that were rampant in the Jewish world in the early first and second century A.D., along with the ideas of the Samaritans and some of the concepts that were extant in the pagan Greek and Roman world. All these heresies were brought into this other church.

There were two churches: one was a church that was certainly increasingly visible and powerful; the other was God's Church that was increasingly disappearing from public view.

II Thessalonians 2:7, Paul wrote, "For the mystery of lawlessness is already at work...." The mystery religion that deals with lawlessness and is based on lawlessness was already at work.

About fifteen years after Paul wrote those words in II Thessalonians, the Apostle Jude wrote and told the Christians in Jude 3, "Beloved, while I was very diligent to write to you concerning our common salvation, I found it necessary to write to you exhorting you to contend earnestly for the faith which was once for all delivered to the saints."

This shows there was an increasing danger of the faith once delivered being lost and obscured because something else was increasingly dominant and visible.

In the last Bible study where we concluded the Old Testament period, we focused on the role of the Samaritans. We went forward to the New Testament and saw that there was a man by the name of Simon the Sorcerer or Simon the Magician. In secular history he is called Simon Magus. "Magus" is simply the Greek word for "magician" or "sorcerer." It's where we got our word "magician."

In Acts 8:9-13, we are simply told that this Simon was the religious leader of the Samaritan community. He was one to whom all of the Samaritans gave heed, from the greatest to the least. He was considered by them to be the great power of God. He was an individual who practiced sorcery and witchcraft and accomplished various false miracles. We are told that he bewitched the people of Samaria with sorceries. He was an individual of great renown. He was an individual who was impressed by the preaching of Philip and he accepted (at least outwardly or seemingly) the message that Philip preached. When many of the Samaritans were baptized, Simon was baptized.

Verses 18-21, he sought to buy for himself a position of leadership. He sought to buy an apostleship from the Apostle Peter. Peter told him, 'You have neither part nor lot with us.' "Part nor lot" was a phrase that specifically had reference to an apostleship, a membership in the group of the twelve. The only other place that phrase is used in the New Testament is in Acts 1:24-26 where it refers to Matthias being chosen by lot to fill the part of Judas and be part of the twelve.

So, when Peter said in Acts 8:21, "You have neither part nor portion [KJV, "lot"] in this matter," that was the reference.

Verse 23, he told Simon, "For I see that you are poisoned by bitterness and bound by iniquity [lawlessness]."

We looked at the Samaritans and the Samaritan religion at the last Bible study. This plays an important role because when you go through the book of Acts, you find that the core, the center, of the congregations that were raised up in the New Testament were in the Jewish community in various cities. Whether in Ephesus, Colosse, Rome or wherever—it might be throughout the Gentile world—still, the starting point was in the synagogue.

As the Church expanded out of Judea and the immediate areas, still, the starting point was in the synagogue and the core of believers were Jews and Gentiles who attended the synagogue and listened to the law. There were many Gentiles who were sort of "hangers-on." They had not formally converted to Judaism and been circumcised, but they would regularly attend the Sabbath services and hear the law read. The original Christian community in any of these areas centered among the Jews who were converted and Gentiles, conversant with Judaism, who were converted. Then from there, other Gentiles were added in. You had a central core of people that were familiar with the law and the Scriptures.

That was possible because there was a Jewish Diaspora—in other words, a dispersion, a scattering of the Jewish community throughout the known world. It had happened because of the various captivities. God is able to take something that looks like a catastrophe and make something good and positive out of it. The captivities and the scattering of the Jewish community must have looked catastrophic to many, and yet God took it and made something positive out of it. This scattering of the Jewish community throughout the Roman world meant that there was a nucleus in virtually any city of size. There were people who were conversant with the law and had access to the Scriptures.

You have to realize that access to the Scriptures was a key point. In many of these cities and locales, there was only one copy in the whole community, and that was in the synagogue. And a lot of synagogues did not even have a complete copy of all the books of the Scriptures. They may have only had copies of the book of the Law (the five books of Moses) and perhaps portions of some of the others.

You have to realize it was a very expensive proposition. If you had to hire a scholar to sit down and copy out by hand a manuscript of the Bible, how expensive do you think an entire copy would be? How long would it take someone to sit down and copy out the whole thing by hand? You are probably looking at the equivalent of a year's wages. That would be at a professional level because the scribes of the law were some of the most educated people in the community. Otherwise, you would wound up with all sorts of errors creeping in. So, you are looking at something that was very expensive.

For an individual to have his own copy of the entire Bible would have cost a fortune. As a result, there would have been only a very, very few people who could have ever had such a thing. An individual would have to be very wealthy. In most cases, there were copies in the synagogue and people came in and studied there. They came in and had access to it there, and it was read on the Sabbath. They could come in through the week and have access to portions of it. It was important. That was the nucleus.

The point I am getting to is that while the Jewish community was the core and nucleus for the spreading of the Gospel and for the expansion of the true Church of God, there was another Diaspora that had taken place in the days of Alexander the Great. There was a Samaritan Diaspora, or dispersion; there was a scattering from the Samaritan community. The two centers of the Samaritan community outside of Samaria were in Alexandria and Rome.

We read that Simon was the religious leader of the Samaritans. He was the one to whom they all gave heed, from the least to the greatest, as being the great power of God (Acts 8:10). What we have to understand is that here is a man who had influence and was recognized wherever there was a Samaritan community. We went into a little bit of the background of the Samaritans in the last Bible study and in previous Bible studies. We must realize that while they outwardly acknowledged the name of God and identified with many things relating to the God of Israel and to the Scriptures, they in reality practiced the customs and the traditions of the old Babylonian pagan religion. There were various Greek thoughts that had come in and even other ideas and philosophies added in. So, just as there was the true Church, there was also a mystery of iniquity that was already at work in the early days that ultimately became the great visible church that was dominant.

In the book of Revelation, the seat of apostasy is clearly identified as being Rome. That's one of the reasons why some of the early church fathers objected to the book of Revelation. They did not like it because the seat of apostasy is clear.

In Revelation 17, it talks about the great whore, a great fallen woman, a great prostitute.

Revelation 17:1, we are told, "...the great harlot who sits on many waters." What is that?

Verse 15, "...The waters which you saw, where the harlot sits, are peoples, multitudes, nations and tongues." Here is a great whore that is dominant over many different people, languages and nations. It is pictured as riding the beast (v. 3).

Verse 5, this is identified further, "And on her forehead a name was written: MYSTERY, BABYLON THE GREAT, THE MOTHER OF HARLOTS AND OF THE ABOMINATIONS OF THE EARTH."

The true Church of God is pictured under the guise of a woman. The true Church is pictured as the virgin bride of Christ awaiting Jesus Christ. Here we have another woman who is pictured, but this time it is someone that would be typical of or a type of Jezebel, as opposed to Sarah.

Why do I say Rome is identified?

Verse 9, as we come down a little further, "Here is the mind which has wisdom: The seven heads are seven mountains on which the woman sits."

Verse 18, "And the woman whom you saw is that great city which reigns over the kings of the earth."

Now which great city reigns over the kings of the earth and sits on seven literal mountains? Even in the first century you could figure that out. The great city that was predominant was Rome. Traditionally, Rome was called "the city of seven hills." Rome was built on seven hills. It was the city of seven hills. It was a city that reigned over the kings of the earth. It was the world capital. Really, it was the capital of the known world—of the Roman Empire.

In Revelation 17, we have a woman (a false church) who is identified with Rome. How many great cities reign over the kings of the earth and sit on seven hills? How many of those are you aware of? Certainly with that description, it fit into the first and second centuries. The identification of Rome as the seat of apostasy was clear enough that even early church commentators realized where it was, what was being addressed and who was being addressed. Therefore, you might realize that the book of Revelation was not particularly popular in Rome. It was not popular there because it pointed out Rome as the seat of apostasy.

Another factor is that by about 250 A.D., they began to get away from the understanding of the literal one thousand-year reign of Christ on the earth. The book of Revelation teaches the literal one thousand-year reign of Christ and the saints. Revelation 5:10, ““And have made us kings and priests to our God; and we shall reign on the earth.”” That’s pretty clear; it’s pretty plain. We will go through that in a couple of Bible studies.

Revelation 20:4, “...And they lived and reigned with Christ a thousand years.” It talks about the fact of the one thousand-year reign of Jesus Christ.

Verse 6, “Blessed and holy is he who has part in the first resurrection...they shall be priests of God and of Christ, and shall reign with Him a thousand years.”

As the false church (that ultimately developed into the Roman Catholic Church) grew in terms of influence in the Roman world, the teaching of the literal one thousand-year rule of Christ and the saints was discarded. Certainly, by the time of the conversion of the Emperor Constantine, the teaching was discarded. It ultimately came to be viewed that the Kingdom of God was already here. The church was viewed as the kingdom of God on earth.

Augustine, one of the early Catholic Church fathers in the fifth century A.D., wrote the book for which he is perhaps most well known entitled, The City of God. He makes the point that the church is the kingdom of God on earth. Rome becomes the city of God and the Roman Empire is transformed. The book of Revelation clearly teaches the fact that the kingdoms of this world will collapse and be replaced by the government of God.

As the professing Christian church moved further and further in that direction and into political accommodation with the Roman Empire, the one thousand-year reign of Christ on earth became increasingly an unpopular teaching. The literal proof of the Millennium began to be considered as simply an opinion or as one possible interpretation. Then within a matter of years, it began to be regarded as sort of a curiosity or something that was a doubtful idea and opinion. Within a matter of years after that, it was treated as absolute heresy and something that was contrary to teaching.

We have to realize that those who gave heed to Simon Magus and those in the areas of the Samaritan community accepted these fundamental errors. Fundamentally, their problem revolved around the authority of the law of God. The Samaritans had a tendency toward absorbing popular religious teachings and a melding of things together. They picked what was viewed as the best out of all of it and melded it together. That was the Babylonian approach and an approach the Samaritans had evidenced.

The fundamental problem was a problem with the law of God and with the necessity for literal obedience to the law of God. They got off track with that. The fundamental error was a misunderstanding of grace and a false teaching regarding the necessity to keep the commandments. Other heresies and other ideas came in. There were a variety of heresies and some of these various sects persecuted one another. They didn’t agree individually. There was one standard brand that sort of came out and became predominant.

During the time Constantine was emperor, there were various heresies in various parts. Constantine saw the potential of having one religion to unite the empire. The old Roman mythology was pretty well bankrupt. Nobody took it seriously. Many approaches to Christian teaching had spread. He saw there was a need for standardization and picked, as his brand, that which was promulgated by the bishop of Rome. He called the Council of Nicaea and basically presided over it. What came to be considered the Catholic Church derived much of the standardization from there. Various heresies that were extant in the pagan world were increasingly accepted and the heresies grew. They got further and further away from the truth. We, perhaps at some future time, will go through a Bible study on that. It’s very interesting as to how, once they began to get off track, they literally moved further and further away.

Revelation clearly teaches the literal one thousand-year reign of Christ on earth. By the second century A.D., that was an unpopular doctrine. The book of Revelation is very Old Testament in flavor. There are at least two hundred eighty-five specific Old Testament references given in the book of Revelation. The Old Testament had fallen out of favor. Revelation certainly teaches obedience to the law of God.

In Revelation 12:17, the true people of God are those identified as those, “who keep the commandments of God and have the testimony of Jesus Christ.” The true people of God are clearly identified as commandment keepers. That wasn’t a very popular teaching at the time the authority of the book of Revelation came to be questioned. There isn’t any reason to question the authorship of the book of Revelation apart from trying to undermine the authority of the book. There was a clear agreement in the areas to which Revelation is addressed. There was never a dispute as to who wrote it. The dispute arose elsewhere at a later point in time.

The book of Revelation plays a very important part in the canon of the Bible. The canon is a set of books that are accepted as authoritative. There have been many books that have been written. There have been many books that have been written by servants of God, but everything that has been written was not chosen as a part of the canon of Scripture.

You can read in I Kings 4:32 about how many songs and proverbs Solomon wrote. You can look in the Bible and you don’t find all of those. Solomon wrote a portion of the Bible, but everything he wrote isn’t in the Bible. You find various prophets mentioned in the Old Testament for whom there isn’t any book in the Old Testament. That’s not to say that they didn’t write letters or certain things, but God didn’t preserve everything that any servant of His ever wrote.

There were specific things that God inspired to be preserved for His people for all times. Some things only had relevance to those people at that time. Elijah was a great prophet of God, but there isn’t a book of Elijah preserved in the Scriptures. Elijah’s message was, for the most part, a message that had relevance to his time, his age and his people. The portion of it that has relevance to us is preserved in I & II Kings and II Chronicles. We have a little summary of Elijah’s ministry and some examples but very little of what he preached. That was not primarily relevant for us and God didn’t see fit to preserve that.

Much of what Isaiah wrote is clearly preserved for us because it has relevance to us today that is far more relevant than the relevance it had at the time it was delivered. So, certain books were chosen as a part of the canon of Scripture.

The book of Revelation clearly finishes up the canon of Scripture. Revelation clearly is the logical conclusion of the Bible. Just as Genesis begins the Bible, Revelation ends it. The book of Revelation perfectly corresponds to the book of Genesis. The Bible starts in a logical place.

Genesis 1:1, “In the beginning God created the heavens and the earth.” Where would you start with a book like the Bible? Well, you start in the beginning; that’s a logical place to start. You could start it in a number of places, but that’s where God chose to start and tell the story in a logical way.

We conclude with the book of Revelation. How does the book of Revelation perfectly correspond to the book Genesis? Here are two books written in two different languages in completed form. Moses wrote the book of Genesis and completed it prior to 1400 B.C. The book of Revelation was completed just prior to 100 A.D. You are looking at fifteen hundred years. Fifteen hundred years is a long time.

Fifteen hundred years ago was just after the fall of the Roman Empire. I tell you what—there’s a lot of “water under the bridge” in fifteen hundred years. How much do any of us know about what was going on fifteen hundred years ago? Here was a book that was written fifteen hundred years later than another book. It was written in a different language, in a different culture and different societal setting; yet they perfectly correspond as the beginning and the end.

Let’s notice one contrast. The book of Genesis starts where?

Genesis 1:1, “In the beginning God created the heavens and the earth.” The book of Genesis starts with the creation of the heavens and the earth. What does the book of Revelation end with?

Revelation 21:1, “And I saw a new heaven and a new earth, for the first heaven and the first earth had passed away. Also there was no more sea.” Genesis starts with the fact that in the beginning God created the heavens and the earth. Revelation ends with the fact that the old heavens and earth pass away and a new heaven and a new earth come to be.

There is a second contrast. The book of Genesis opens with a tree in the midst of the garden, a tree that was called the tree of life (Genesis 2:9). We find man excluded from the garden (Genesis 3:22-24). Why?

Genesis 3:22, “...lest he put out his hand and take also of the tree of life, and eat, and live forever.” Man is excluded from the Garden of Eden. Man is excluded and cut off from access to the tree of life. Genesis begins with man's exile from access to the presence of the tree of life.

Revelation 22:2, we find, "In the middle of its street, and on either side of the river, was the tree of life, which bore twelve fruits, each tree yielding its fruit every month. And the leaves of the tree were for the healing of the nations." We have a description of a time when access is given to the tree of life. The book of Genesis opens with man being excluded from the tree of life. The book of Revelation concludes with man being given access to the tree of life. The tree of life is made available. Again, we have this description.

Revelation 22:14, "Blessed are those who do His commandments, that they may have the right to the tree of life, and may enter through the gates into the city." We conclude the book of Revelation with access to the tree of life.

There is a third contrast. In Genesis, we find death introduced.

Genesis 2:17, "but of the tree of the knowledge of good and evil you shall not eat, for in the day that you eat of it you shall surely die." Death is introduced in the book of Genesis. Death is abolished in the book of Revelation.

Revelation 21:4, "And God will wipe away every tear from their eyes; there shall be no more death, nor sorrow, nor crying; and there shall be no more pain, for the former things have passed away." We are told there will not be any more death. Genesis opens with death being introduced. Revelation ends with death being abolished.

There is a fourth contrast. Genesis 3 introduces Satan's deception of man.

Genesis 3:1-4, "Now the serpent was more cunning than any beast of the field which the Lord God had made. And he said to the woman, 'Has God indeed said, you shall not eat of every tree of the garden?' And the woman said to the serpent, 'We may eat the fruit of the trees of the garden; but of the fruit of the tree which is in the midst of the garden, God has said, "you shall not eat it, nor touch it, lest you die.'" And the serpent said to the woman, 'You will not surely die.'"

We open the book of Genesis with lies and deceits promulgated by Satan the devil. We end the book of Revelation with the story of what's going to happen to conclude Satan's deception.

Revelation 20:1-3, "Then I saw an angel coming down from heaven, having the key to the bottomless pit and a great chain in his hand. He laid hold of the dragon, that serpent of old, who is the Devil and Satan, and bound him for a thousand years; and he cast him into the bottomless pit, and shut him up, and set a seal on him, so that he should deceive the nations no more till the thousand years were finished...."

As we go through Revelation 20 and 21, we find that the consequences of Satan's deception are concluded. Satan and his influence on mankind are ultimately and finally removed. Genesis opens with Satan's deception. Revelation concludes with the final consequence and result of that deception.

Revelation 20:14-15, ultimately, "Then Death and Hades [hell, the grave] were cast into the lake of fire. This is the second death. And anyone not found written in the Book of Life was cast into the lake of fire."

There is a fifth contrast with Revelation and Genesis. The book of Genesis gives us the story of the removal of God's government from the earth; the book of Revelation concludes with the restoration of God's government and the presence of God. Mankind elects to build his own society, his own culture, his own civilization cut off from God and under the sway of Satan's deception. The book of Revelation concludes with the collapse and destruction of the civilization that man built.

In Genesis, we read of a city that had its beginnings with a tower—the Tower of Babel. If you look at Genesis 11 and 12, you have a story in contrast between two men who each had a vision of a city. In Genesis 11, you read of a man by the name of Nimrod who was looked to by others. We find that the beginning of his kingdom was Babel. He built the beginnings of Babylon. The story of the rest of the Bible—the story of mankind's civilization, society and culture—is the story of Babylon.

Revelation 18:2, we read, "And he cried mightily with a loud voice, saying, 'Babylon the great is fallen, is fallen....'" —The destruction of Babylon.

In Genesis 12, we read of a man who came from the area of Babylon, a man by the name of Abraham or Abram as he was known originally.

Genesis 12:1, "Now the Lord had said to Abram: 'Get out of your country, from your kindred and from your father's house, to a land that I will show you.'"

Verse 4, we are told, "So Abraham departed...." He left Babylon. He went to another place where he dwelt as a stranger, a pilgrim and a sojourner.

Hebrews 11:10 tells us, "for he waited for the city which has foundations, whose builder and maker is God." He died in faith, not having received the promises that he believed, and lived his life in anticipation of (v. 13). The book of Revelation concludes with the destruction of Babylon, that final continuation of what Nimrod had begun.

In Revelation 21, we find New Jerusalem.

Revelation 21:2, “Then, I, John, saw the holy city, New Jerusalem, coming down out of heaven from God...”

A city whose maker and builder is God (Hebrews 11:10), a city that has twelve foundations (Revelation 21:19-20). That is the city Abraham looked for throughout the period of his life and died in faith without ever having seen it.

We have a clear contrast in the book of Revelation between the beginning of man’s civilization and society cut off from the government of God. The book of Revelation shows the collapse of that system and the restoration of the government of God to this earth. Genesis shows God’s government removed from the earth and Revelation shows God’s government restored to the earth.

The sixth contrast has to do with the final fulfillment of God’s promises to Abraham. In Genesis 12, Abraham was told to go out of his country.

Verses 9-10, 13, we are told that Abraham, Isaac and Jacob dwelt as pilgrims and sojourners and they died in faith, not having received the promises. They looked for a city.

Hebrews 11:15-16, “And truly if they had called to mind that country from which they had come out, they would have had opportunity to return. But now they desire a better, that is, a heavenly country...” They sought a city whose maker and builder was God. The book of Revelation shows the final fulfillment and accomplishment of the promises of God. We finally see the fulfillment of the promises God made to Abraham beginning in Genesis 12. Genesis shows the promises made; Revelation shows the promises fulfilled.

The seventh contrast, we will note, is that the book of Genesis introduces curses. The book of Revelation abolishes curses. There are several curses that are mentioned in the book of Genesis. We will notice three. In Genesis 3, we have the deception and the sin of Adam and Eve. We have a curse pronounced. The first curse is pronounced.

Genesis 3:17-19, “Then to Adam He said, ‘Because you have heeded the voice of your wife, and have eaten from the tree of which I commanded you, saying, ‘You shall not eat of it’: Cursed is the ground for your sake; in toil you shall eat of it all the days of your life. Both thorns and thistles it shall bring forth for you, and you shall eat the herb of the field. In the sweat of your face you shall eat bread till you return to the ground...”

The ground was cursed because of mankind’s sin.

In Genesis 4, we read of yet another curse. We find Cain murdering Abel.

Genesis 4:11-12, “‘So now you are cursed from the earth, which has opened its mouth to receive your brother’s blood from your hand. When you till the ground, it shall no longer yield its strength to you. A fugitive and a vagabond you shall be on the earth.’”

As we come forward, a little bit further in Genesis, we find the story of Noah. The sin of Canaan is described in Genesis 9. We find Canaan cursed.

Genesis 9:25, “Then he said: ‘Cursed be Canaan; a servant of servants he shall be to his brethren.’”

Genesis starts out with the introduction of curses on the human family. There are various curses. There were curses that were introduced on the very ground and its productivity and curses that were introduced upon branches of the human family because of sin. Curses are ultimately there because of sin.

When the book of Revelation concludes, we find that there will not be any more curses. God removed the curses that were there.

Revelation 22:3, “And there shall be no more curse...”

If you go through, there are various curses that you can read. I just mentioned three. It might be interesting to go through the book of Genesis sometimes and look at the curses that were introduced. We are to realize that those curses will not be completely removed until the time of the new heavens and the new earth because curses are ultimately the consequences of sin.

Revelation tells us the end of the matter, just as Genesis tells us the beginning. Genesis tells us the beginning of sin and the curses that originated from sin. Revelation tells us the conclusion of God’s plan and the removal of those curses.

There are four basic ways of interpreting the book of Revelation. The first approach of those is called a spiritual interpretation. That may sound like the best because, after all, we do want to be spiritual. But that is not the case. The spiritual interpretation means spiritual as opposed to literal. It is an interpretation that originated in Alexandria. It is based on the concept of allegory. The Greeks had developed a practice of treating their earlier writings in mythologies as allegories. If you've read Greek mythology, you realize it's the stuff which modern soap operas are made. The moral tone and character of it are sort of like "As the Stomach Turns" or whatever it is. "As the World Turns"—that's what they call it. The point is that most of Greek and Roman mythology is about every sort of thing from rape, incest, murder, intrigue and lying. —Just read the stories that Homer wrote, The Iliad and The Odyssey, that Virgil, the Roman writer, wrote of the story, The Enid or when you read what Hesiod, another of the early Greek contemporaries of Homer, wrote of the basic myths of the Greek and Roman world.

In later centuries, they were a little bit embarrassed by this, so they developed a method of interpretation and treated it all as allegory. They said it was not meant to be taken as a literal story about people or about God. They said it was allegory and the names of the individuals were symbolic of various vices and virtues. That was the way they held on to the tradition of their mythology and yet got away from the embarrassment that was attached to the fact that such trash would be the best religious literature they could come up with. This was their approach. It became an approach toward interpretation and of treating things as an allegory.

That proved to be a very convenient method for some of the early writers, even in the Jewish and Samaritan communities in the early so-called Christian community because it was a convenient way of getting around the literal statements of the Bible. If you treat the Bible as an allegory, then you don't have to literally take what it says. If you come across something that's inconvenient to do or to believe, just treat it as an allegory.

The spiritual interpretation of Revelation originated in Alexandria. Alexandria was a seat of this sort of thing and this approach based on allegory. In other words, this approach overlooked the fact that Revelation claimed to be a prophecy. The primary Catholic approach to the interpretation of Revelation is that it is an allegory of the struggle between good and evil. If you were to consult a Catholic commentary, they would tell you that Revelation should primarily be understood as an allegory of the struggle between good and evil. If you treat it all as an allegory, then when it says there is going to be a thousand-year reign of Christ on the earth, that's not saying He's really going to reign a thousand years—that's just an allegorical way of saying that good will eventually triumph over evil. They treat it as an allegory and get around having to really examine what the text says. That was the approach that came to be introduced when they couldn't actually get rid of it. It was too clearly attested to as a part of Scripture, so the approach was to treat it as an allegory. That was one way of interpreting it. You will find that mentioned in some of the commentaries.

There is a second approach that is commonly used by a lot of modern commentaries. I will give you the term. It is a technical term, but you may run across it if you read a commentary that deals with Revelation. It's called "Praeterism." That means the whole book of Revelation has already been fulfilled, that it was fulfilled at the persecution of Nero. They say, 'When it talks about these seven heads and all of this, this is just talking about Roman emperors way back in the first century. It is saying that John was simply writing about this time and all the symbolism refers to what was going on in the Roman Empire—the problems the church was having in the first century, the destruction of Jerusalem in 70 A.D. and all this sort of thing. That's all it was talking about.'

If you throw God out of the picture or if you don't believe that God was inspiring something, you say, 'Well, look, these people were simply writing about what was going on around them. They were writing about the events they were living through. And John describes with hyperbole and with exaggeration. He describes in symbolic language specific things that were happening in the Roman Empire at the time. It's not prophetic and there are all sorts of interpretations.'

Revelation 17:10, where it talks about the seven horns, it says, "...five are fallen and one is and the other is yet to come..." Certain commentaries will even tell you this is talking about Roman emperors and that Nero is the "one that is," that there were five before him and then the next one after him. They say, 'It's just that things were so bad at the time of Nero that John thought that the world was going to come to an end at the time of Nero.'

Well, that's silly. There are several reasons. It ignores all of the evidence that the true date of the book is about thirty years after Nero died. It would be sort of stupid for me to sit down and write a book about how World War II was the end of the world. It wouldn't make a whole lot of sense. It's a little bit late to come up with something like that now.

There's plenty of evidence that clearly dates the fact that Revelation was written in the late 90s A.D. It was written at the time that John was in exile on the isle of Patmos. There are even secular records that attest to the date that John was in exile on Patmos and the specific persecution in the reign of Domitian. There are even secular historical records of the reign of Domitian that specifically date the period of the exile of Christian leadership that exiled John.

The book of Revelation claims as a time setting the day of the Lord (Revelation 1:10). They cannot accept the book for what it claims to be. The book of Revelation clearly claims to be something far beyond merely the historical record of what was happening in Rome at the time. The Praeterist approach is primarily used by many of the modern and more secular commentators that really want to distance themselves from God and any specific revelation from God.

There is a third approach of interpreting the book of Revelation. It is called the continuous historical approach. This claims that the book covers the whole period of church history from John until the present. What they try to do is to correlate the events that are described in Revelation with various historical events. The abomination of desolation, for instance, is often connected to the days that the Moslems built the Dome of the Rock on the site of the original temple. That is one point that is often made. It uses the historical approach. There is a tiny element in this approach, but there's far too much emphasis on the historical. It's the wrong thrust because the book of Revelation clearly says that its primary setting is the Day of the Lord (Revelation 1:10); the prophecies of Revelation center around the Day of the Lord.

A fourth approach of interpreting the book of Revelation is what's called the futurist approach. This claims that the book is future and centered around the time of Christ's return. This approach is the nearest to being correct. We will see more specifics on this as we go through the next Bible study. It will give you an idea.

Let's look a little bit at what Revelation is. Revelation 1:1, "The Revelation of Jesus Christ, which God gave Him to show His servants—things which must shortly take place. And He sent and signified it by His angel to His servant John."

Here is the "specific purpose statement" of the book. Everybody who's been in Spokesman's Club knows the importance of having an SPS (specific purpose statement). Here is John's SPS. It clearly tells you exactly what Revelation is. It is the Revelation of Jesus Christ. A lot of people say you can't understand anything about Revelation. The word is "revelation." It's not the concealing of Jesus Christ; it's the revealing of Jesus Christ. The word in Greek is "apocalypse." It is where we get our term "apocalyptic." "Apocalypse" is a Greek word for "revealing." This is a revealing of information. You remember when Jesus ascended to heaven? The disciples asked Him, "How long?"

Acts 1:6-7, "Therefore, when they had come together, they asked Him, saying, 'Lord, will You at this time restore the kingdom to Israel?' And He said to them, 'It is not for you to know times or seasons which the Father has put in His own authority.'" There were things that God had simply not revealed before.

Daniel concluded with a desire to know what his prophecies meant.

Daniel 12:8-9, "Although I heard, I did not understand. Then I said, 'My lord, what shall be the end of these things?' And he said, 'Go your way, Daniel, for the words are closed up and sealed till the time of the end.'"

Revelation provides the information that is necessary. It is the revelation. It is the revelation by the living resurrected Jesus Christ of information that God gave Him.

Revelation 1:1, God the Father allowed this to be revealed by Jesus Christ for the purpose of "[showing] His servants the things that must shortly take place. And He sent and signified it by His angel to His servant John."

The book of Revelation records three things. That's mentioned in v. 2. What did John bear witness (KJV, "record") of?

Verse 2, "who bore witness to the word of God, and to the testimony of Jesus Christ, and to all things that he saw."

Three things: 1) "the word of God," which is direct statements of God, the law of God which is the revelation of God, 2) "the testimony of Jesus Christ," which is the things of which Jesus Christ bore witness to John and 3) "to things that John saw," which is John's dream or vision.

In much of the book of Revelation, John wrote a description of what he saw. He had to describe it in a language of his day. If you or I were to see a movie and in that movie there were all sorts of things that we had never seen before, if we were describing it to somebody else, we would have to use terminology that had significance to us. We would say we saw something. 'It was like this, yet it was a little bit like that. It was sort of similar to something else and we saw it.' We would have to use the vocabulary we have.

As new inventions have come along, of course, new words have had to be created for the language. If you were to go back one hundred fifty years and mention the word "automobile," nobody would know what you meant. Certain words in the English language had origins in Latin. The term "auto" and "mobile" had their origin in the Latin language. "Auto" meant "self" and "mobile" had to do with "something that moved." So, a new word was created out of words that already existed. Here was something that moved by itself, as opposed to being pulled by an animal. But if you were to use that word at an earlier time, they wouldn't have known what you meant. That's why when the automobile was first invented, many people referred to it as a horseless carriage.

Mr. Armstrong used to tell the story of when he was a little boy about six years old. One day his father said, 'Quick, quick, come here and look. There's a horseless carriage.' That was something they had heard of but had never seen. He came running to the window to look out and here was a carriage that was hitched up to mules instead of horses. His father had a big laugh, 'See, it's a horseless carriage.'

The point is that John, with his vocabulary, had trouble describing what he saw. He had to describe what you read in Revelation in the vocabulary that he had, just as you and I would have to describe something we saw in the vocabulary we have. Many of the things he saw in vision were things that, at the time he lived, didn't yet exist. He was transported in vision about two thousand years into the future.

Revelation includes "the word of God," what God said. It includes "the testimony that Jesus Christ bore," the statements that He made to John. And it includes "the things that John saw." The theme of the book of Revelation is given in Revelation 1:10, "I was in the Spirit on the Lord's Day, and I heard behind me a loud voice, as of a trumpet."

This expression "in the Spirit" has to do with receiving a vision or a revelation of God. The word that is translated "on" in v. 10 is from a Greek word that would be spelled "en." Most times when that word is used in Greek, it is rendered by the English word "in." This little word in Greek is pronounced "in," only it is spelled "e-n." Our word "in" is spelled "i-n."

The Greek word "en" is most commonly rendered by the English word "in" and it means "in" in the sense of "during the time of"—"in" in the sense of time, as opposed to "in" as inside something. Our word "in" can have a variety of meanings. John says, "I was in the Spirit in [or during] the time of the Lord's Day."

Now, what is the Lord's Day? Many of the Protestants like to quote Revelation 1:10 and say they don't keep the Sabbath; they keep the Lord's Day just like God does. Show me here anything that gives any indication whatsoever that it is talking about Sunday. There isn't any place in the Bible that says Sunday or the first day of the week is the Lord's Day. The point is that he is not talking about Sunday or Saturday. He's not talking about either one. If you want to know what he is talking about, just turn back to the book of Joel.

Joel 1:15, "Alas for the day! For the day of the Lord is at hand..." Joel talks about the "Day of the Lord." Revelation talks about the "Lord's Day."

That is a distinction we make in English; it wouldn't be an issue in French. If you were saying "the Lord's Day" in French, it would literally translate as "the Day of the Lord." We use the "'s" for possessive in English. We use two different possessives in English. You can say either "Day of the Lord" or "Lord's Day." We have two ways of making the possession. You can say "John's house" or "the house of John." In the French language, as in many other languages, you don't have that double type of possessive. A number of you speak French. The only way you translate it would be "Day of the Lord."

By the way, that's the way a French Bible translates Revelation 1:10, "I was in the Spirit in the day of the Lord..." which is exactly the way the Greek is, too. The Greek does not have "'s." The problem with Revelation 1:10 is a problem that only exists in English translations. If you were reading it in a French translation or in original Greek, it wouldn't create the same problem.

It only creates a problem in English because some have tried to say that "Lord's Day" means something totally different from "Day of the Lord." They say it's talking about Sunday. Where does it say anything about Sunday? It doesn't mention first day, seventh day or any other day. John was in the Spirit. He was transported in the Spirit (in vision) forward to the time of the Day of the Lord. That's the point of the book of Revelation. The theme of the book of Revelation is centering around the Day of the Lord. The book of Revelation isn't centering around the Sabbath. It's not centering around Sunday. It's centering around that period in time of God's intervention, the period when God steps into history and intervenes in the affairs of man. It's called in Scripture by the general broad term "the Day of the Lord."

This is man's day—a time when God is pretty well keeping hands off except in specific cases where He might choose to intervene because He is working out a plan and a purpose. But, basically, this is the day of man. This is the time when man is pursuing his own way. The time is going to come when God will step into history.

Revelation centers on that Day of the Lord. Revelation 1:10 makes it very clear that the primary setting of the book of Revelation is prophetic. It is for a time in the future, centering around the time of Christ's intervention and return to the earth.

Revelation 1:1 shows that some of what is revealed consisted of things that were going to shortly take place. We are going to get into some of that next time. We are going to go into Revelation 2 and 3 that deal with the specific messages to the seven Churches. You will find there are story-flow chapters and inset chapters.

The first five chapters are sort of inset chapters. Chapter 1 is an introduction.

Chapters 2 and 3 deal with a summary of the history of the Church from the time of the New Testament period all the way down to ahead of us.

Chapters 4 and 5 deal with a vision of heaven.

Chapter 6, we get into the story flow. Chapter 6 deals with the opening of the first six of the seven seals.

Chapter 7 is another inset which gives the story of the sealing of the one hundred forty-four thousand.

Chapters 8, 9 and 10 continue the story flow down through the events connected with the seventh seal.

Chapters 11, 12, 13 and 14 again are inset information.

Chapter 11 deals with the two witnesses.

Chapter 12, the true Church is protected in the wilderness.

Chapter 13 gives a description of the Beast.

Chapter 14 focuses on the one hundred forty-four thousand again.

Chapters 15 and 16 continue the story flow of the seven last plagues.

Chapters 17 and 18 again are insets.

Chapter 17 is about the Beast and the great whore.

Chapter 18 is the fall of Babylon the Great (or Rome).

Then the story flow is continued in chapters 19, 20 and 21.

Chapter 19 gives the marriage supper. It tells us about the marriage supper of the lamb.

Chapter 20 is about the Millennium and the White Throne.

Chapter 21 describes the new heavens and the new earth.

Chapter 22 is another inset with sort of concluding remarks.

If you follow the story down through, chapter 6 has the first six seals. Chapters 8, 9 and 10 have the description of the seventh seal (the seven trumpets). Chapters 15 and 16 have more description of the seven last plagues, which are a part of the seventh seal or the seventh trumpet of the seventh seal. Then chapter 19 tells what happens after that—the marriage supper. Chapter 20 is about the Millennium and the White Throne. Chapter 21 is about the new heavens and the new earth.

It just runs down in story flow with continual insets that sort of break into the story flow to give you information and details about something. We will go through that in detail in the following Bible studies.

The next Bible study we will cover the first three chapters of Revelation, primarily focusing on the message to each of the seven Churches.

Bible Study # 94
August 11, 1992
Mr. John Ogwyn

Book of Revelation Series—Revelation 1—3

I want to get right into the book of Revelation this evening. We had an introduction to the book last time. Primarily, we are focusing on Revelation 2 and 3 this evening that deal with the seven Churches of the book of Revelation.

Much of the material we looked at last time focused on the setting of the book and the fact that this is written as a revelation—a revealing—from God Himself. It was given to Jesus Christ to show His servants the things that must shortly come to pass. It was sent and signified by His angel unto His servant John (Revelation 1:1). This is the message that God gave.

We saw in v. 10 that John addressed the fact that he was in the Spirit. He was transported into the Day of the Lord in Spirit. This is a time setting. This is a point of time that focuses in on the end time, the time of the return of Jesus Christ, the period of the Day of the Lord, as it's termed in the book of Joel and other places.

Revelation 1:10-11, "...and I heard behind me a loud voice, as of a trumpet, saying, 'I am the Alpha and the Omega, the First and the Last,' and, 'What you see, write in a book and send it to the seven churches which are in Asia: to Ephesus, to Smyrna, to Pergamos, to Thyatira, to Sardis, to Philadelphia, and to Laodicea.'" So, in vision, John is transported.

All of a sudden he hears this great voice behind him.

Verses 12-19, "Then I turned to see the voice that spoke with me. And having turned I saw seven golden lamp stands, and in the midst of the seven lamp stands One like the Son of Man, clothed with a garment down to the feet and girded about the chest with a golden band. His head and His hair were white like wool, and white as snow, and His eyes like a flame of fire; His feet were like fine brass, as if refined in a furnace, and His voice as the sound of many waters; He had in His right hand seven stars, out of His mouth went a sharp two-edged sword, and His countenance was like the sun shining in its strength. And when I saw Him, I fell at His feet as dead. But He laid His right hand on me, saying to me, 'Do not be afraid; I am the First and the Last. I am He who lives, and was dead, and behold, I am alive forevermore. Amen. And I have the keys of Hades and of Death. Write the things which you have seen, and the things which are, and the things which will take place after this.'"

Then He begins to interpret some of the symbolism that John saw.

Verse 20, "'The mystery of the seven stars which you saw in My right hand, and the seven golden lamp stands: The seven stars are the angels of the seven churches, and the seven lamp stands which you saw are the seven churches.'"

There were seven Churches picked out in Asia Minor. If you have a map of Asia Minor in your Bible, I would suggest you turn to it. Asia Minor is now modern-day Turkey. These seven Churches were there. If you look closely, you will find there were other Churches that were also nearby. For instance, very near Laodicea was the Church of Colosse, to which the book of Colossians was written. There are several other cities that are mentioned. These seven are picked out.

Understand that God uses numbers in a symbolic fashion. Seven is used over and over in the book of Revelation because seven is symbolic of completion and perfection. Go back to the seven days of creation; seven stands out as God's number of completion and perfection. All through the book of Revelation you find seven stars, seven candlesticks, seven Churches, seven angels, seven seals, seven trumpets, seven last plagues, seven heads of the beast. You have the number seven over and over. You have seven here, there and yonder that is used in a symbolic way all through Revelation.

These Churches were picked out. These were Churches on a Roman mail route. They are addressed in a particular order.

The seven candlesticks—where does that symbolism come from? Does it remind you of something? If you think about it, it will remind you of the tabernacle back in the book of Exodus. Let's go back and notice, very briefly, Exodus 25 and Exodus 37.

Exodus 25:1-2, "Then the Lord spoke to Moses, saying: 'Speak to the children of Israel, that they bring Me an offering....'"

Verses 8-9, "'And let them make Me a sanctuary, that I may dwell among them. According to all that I show you, that is, the pattern of the tabernacle and the pattern of all its furnishings, just as you shall make it.'" God revealed the way it was to be.

The Apostle Paul tells us in Hebrews that it was because it was the pattern of heavenly things (Hebrews 8:5). The things in the ark had symbolic value. They were built in a particular way. Hold your place in Exodus 25. I want to read what Paul says in Hebrews 8.

Hebrews 8:1-2, “Now this is the main point of the things we are saying: We have such a High Priest, who is seated at the right hand of the throne of the Majesty in the heavens, a Minister of the sanctuary and of the true tabernacle which the Lord erected, and not man.” This is referring to the tabernacle that Moses pitched. He said that Jesus Christ is the Minister of the true tabernacle.

Continuing down in v. 5, “who serve the copy and shadow of the heavenly things as Moses was divinely instructed when he was about to make the tabernacle. For He said, ‘See that you make all things according to the pattern shown you on the mountain.’” Why was it so important that Moses make it according to the pattern? – Because it had symbolic value. Everything in the tabernacle symbolized something either in heaven or in God’s great heavenly plan.

In Exodus 25, we go through what was to be built.

Exodus 25:31-32, we find, “‘You shall also make a lamp stand of pure gold...And six branches shall come out of its sides: three branches of the lampstand out of one side, and three branches of the lamp stand out of the other side.’” There were six branches that came out of the candlestick. There was one central branch that came up, and then three on one side and three on the other, which made, of course, seven altogether.

Verse 37, “‘You shall make seven lamps for it, and they shall arrange its lamps so that they give light in front of it.’”

In Exodus 37, it describes further the making of this and how they were to do that.

Exodus 37:17, “He also made the lampstand of pure gold....”

Verse 23, “And he made its seven lamps, its wick-trimmers, and its trays of pure gold.” It talks about the seven lamps and the snuffers of it.

Here’s the point. In the tabernacle itself, when you went into the Holy Place, there were three articles of furniture. The priesthood walked into the Holy Place and there were three articles of furniture. There was a rectangular room. On one side there was a table that contained the twelve loaves of showbread or the bread of presence. This was brought in fresh every week. It was symbolic of the twelve tribes. It was there as an offering to God. These twelve unleavened loaves were on this table, the table of showbread. On the other side was this big seven-branched candelabrum. Really, it was not a candelabrum in the sense that it held candles. It held a little bowl of olive oil because that was what they burned rather than a waxed candle. This was perpetually kept burning. This was the only light in there. Then at the back, right before the curtain that separated off the Holy of Holies, was the altar of incense.

Revelation 1:20 tells us that the seven candlesticks are the seven Churches. In the tabernacle we had this seven-branch candlestick. In Revelation, we have seven candlesticks. The people of God were symbolized by what was described there in the tabernacle. The twelve loaves were symbolic of each of the twelve tribes. They symbolized the people of God and were presented before God. These unleavened loaves represented the people of God.

Then we had the light that was provided by this candelabrum. What did Christ say in the Sermon on the Mount? Didn’t He say that we are to be the light of the world (Matthew 5:14-15)? God’s people through the centuries are symbolized as the light of the world. The lamp burned olive oil. Olive oil is used in the Bible as a type of God’s Spirit.

How do we give off light to the world? For light to be given off, there has to be a fuel supply. Our lights in here are electric. If the electricity went out, we wouldn’t have any lights. If you have candles and all the wax burns away, you don’t have any more light. If you have a kerosene lantern, when the kerosene burns up, you don’t have any more light. There has to be a supply of fuel. Olive oil was the fuel. Just as in our lives—the only way we are going to be a light to the world is God’s Spirit in us. This was symbolic of the people of God.

I don’t have time to go into the parallels of the Old Testament. But if you go through the history of the people of God in the Old Testament period, there were seven successive stages in the history of the people of God: 1) the period of Moses and Joshua, 2) the period of the Judges, 3) the period of the united monarch of Saul, David and Solomon that ruled over the entire nation, 4) the period of the divided monarchy that continued on down to the captivity, 5) the period of restoration and after the time of Zerubbabel, Ezra and Nehemiah, that restoration period that continued all the way down through the Hellenistic time, 6) the revival that took place at the time of the Macabbees, about one hundred sixty years prior to Christ and the brief work that they did in the physical sense and then finally, 7) the final stage of the history of the Old Testament Church was what we found when we come on the scene in the New Testament when Christ said the Scribes and the Pharisees sit in Moses' seat (Matthew 23:2). That was the final stage of the history of the Old Testament Church.

The New Testament Church also has its history symbolized in seven stages, symbolized by these seven churches that were picked out.

These churches were picked out to illustrate something. There were other Churches in the area. This was not a letter to every Church that was in Asia Minor. There were many more than seven Churches. Colosse was right there where the rest of them were but wasn't in this group to receive the letters.

There were seven that were specifically picked out. They were on a Roman mail route, but the mail didn't run in only one direction. We have one-way streets. They didn't have one-way roads that they could go from "here to there," but they couldn't turn around and go back the other way. They didn't build roads that way in the Roman Empire. Roads ran both ways.

If you looked at the seven Churches, they sort of go around in a circle. You could have started one way or started the other way. He started where he started because there was a particular symbolism involved. God inspired that John would pick out and focus in with a message to each one of these seven congregations, focusing on certain characteristics of that congregation that were used to typify the people of God down through the centuries.

The history of God's people can be summarized in seven successive stages, symbolized by the seven candlesticks. In the Old Testament, it was one candlestick with seven branches because it was in one place, one location and everything came out of the one place. The New Testament Church was different. You are looking at different groups, different places stretched across half of the globe, as we will see as we progress through the history of the New Testament Church.

It's important to understand that Jesus Christ pictures Himself standing in the midst of these candlesticks (Revelation 1:13). The candlesticks represent the Church, the light of the world. The seven candlesticks were literally oil lamps, if you want to be technical about it because what's addressed here burned oil. Christ is pictured as standing in the midst. He wasn't just in the midst of those seven congregations in ancient Asia Minor. He is symbolized as standing in the midst because the seven Churches symbolized God's Church throughout the centuries. Jesus Christ is pictured as standing in the midst. We see Him addressing it this way, and He addresses a message to each of the seven Churches.

Let's briefly look and summarize the history of the seven stages of God's Church. Then we will go through some of this material verse by verse.

The Church at Ephesus is the starting point, so that would obviously be the Church in the apostolic time. The Church of God, of course, had its beginnings Pentecost, 31 A.D. It was originally centered in the area of Judea. John died in Ephesus. This was the headquarters of the Apostle John. Remember, John outlived all the other apostles by about thirty years. For about the last thirty to thirty-five years of his life, he was the last living of the twelve. The Church was originally centered in Jerusalem and in Judea. Jerusalem was the headquarters. The Church spread out through the ministry of Paul and the other apostles. There were a number of things that happened.

I've brought these books along for a purpose. I want to show you something in just a few moments that is very instructive for us.

By 70 A.D., the true Christians had left Jerusalem. Remember, the Romans came in, destroyed Jerusalem and the Church fled Jerusalem in 69 A.D. They went to a little place called Pella and were there for a period of about sixty-five years. In the meantime, of course, various problems and difficulties had come in. There were heresies that came in. The Apostle John lived until the 90s A.D. He died in Ephesus. The Jerusalem Church, as I mentioned, fled Jerusalem in 69 A.D. They fled to Pella. By 135 A.D., most of the Jerusalem church apostatized. That is the year the Jerusalem church ceased to keep the Sabbath and the Holy Days and began to observe Sunday. I'll read the documentation on that in a moment.

Sunday observance began to be openly promulgated in Rome and I have, interestingly enough, a book here entitled From Sabbath to Sunday—A Historical Investigation of the Rise of Sunday Observance in Early Christianity, published by the Pontifical Gregorian University Press in Rome. So, this is not just what I might say or what somebody else might say. It has the imprimatur of the Vatican right here. You can read it. You can even translate the Latin inscription: "With the approval of the Vicar in Rome." And it's dated. This represents a statement of history that is in accordance with what Catholic scholars would not take exception to at all, in terms of the statement that Sunday observance did not begin in Jerusalem.

Sunday observance began in Rome and they date it. There isn't any proof of it earlier than 115 A.D. In fact, the date for the first Easter Sunday service that was held in Rome, as opposed to a Passover observance, dates to 115 A.D. About fifteen or sixteen years after the death of the Apostle John, it was openly being taught that Sunday was the day of worship and not the Sabbath. I want to go into this because I think we should understand.

How can people get so far off in such a short period of time? There were people who had heard John preach. You're only one man removed from Jesus Christ Himself. John was the disciple whom He loved. He was the one who took care of Mary during the latter years of her life. He was the one who was there as a part of the twelve. If somebody knew what Jesus taught, it should have been John. He certainly should have known. He was with Him as a disciple three and one-half years. He was the one that Christ trusted to take care of His mother. So, John certainly should have known and understood. And, interestingly, we are going to see some things, but I don't want to get ahead of myself. I want to give you an outline and then I want to come back and fill in some details. I want to fill in more of the details on Ephesus because that's an important area.

It's interesting that the literal city of Ephesus came to an end shortly after 135-140 A.D. The population moved a short distance to higher ground. Ephesus was the capital of the Roman province of Asia.

I will read a brief quote from this book. This is a Protestant book. I have Catholic books and Protestant books here, as well as a couple of these early church fathers. For example: Apostolic Fathers, Eusebius, Ecclesiastical History, and Gibbon's Triumph of Christendom in the Roman Empire. So, these are not just something that represents what Mr. Herbert Armstrong said or what the Church says in terms of our "ax to grind."

It's interesting—this book that I say is a Protestant book, a book by Jesse Lyman Hurlbut, The Story of the Christian Church. He makes an interesting comment.

He says, "We name the last generation of the first century, from 68 to 100 A.D., 'The Age of Shadows,' partly because the gloom of persecution was over the church; but more especially because of all periods in the history, it is the one about which we know the least. We have no longer the clear light of the book of Acts to guide us; and no author of that age has filled the blank in the history. We would like to read of the later work by such helpers of St. Paul as Timothy, Apollos and Titus, but all these and St. Paul's other friends drop out of the record at his death. For fifty years after St. Paul's life, a curtain hangs over the church, through which we strive vainly to look; and when at last it rises, about 120 A.D. with the writings of the earliest church fathers, we find a church in many aspects very different from that in the days of St. Peter and St. Paul."

Amazing! Very different because you see one church was on the horizon when the mist settled, and another church was on the horizon when the mist departed. How did the change take place? What happened?

Revelation 2 and 3 gives the history of the true Church. The Church at Ephesus was symbolic of the first stage of Church history, which is basically the history of the Church from about 31 A.D. down to about 135 A.D.

The Church at Smyrna pictures the second stage in the history of the Church. We pick up the story in the period after the death of the Apostle John and trace it down to about the mid-seventh century. We will use 650 A.D. as an approximate date.

The first leader, on whom we will focus, was Polycarp. Polycarp was the bishop or leader of the Church in the literal city of Smyrna, which was a neighboring city to Ephesus. Polycarp had been a disciple of the Apostle John. In fact, we have two or three of the letters of Polycarp that actually remain. They have been preserved. Polycarp died about 160 A.D. He had been a disciple and personal acquaintance of the Apostle John. He was a very elderly man when he died. He was probably in his late 20s when the Apostle John died and he was well into his 90s at the time of his own death.

We come down. We'll read a little bit about the Church during this time. Various names are applied to the Church. The history of the true Church was primarily written by its enemies. The true Church was being persecuted. It was on the fringes of the Roman Empire during much of this time.

This period, which is symbolized by the Church at Smyrna, was a time of intense persecution and martyrdom. One of the names attached to the people of God was the term "Ebionites." There were others who were called Ebionites, too. It was a term that meant "poor people." We will see some things about that.

The Catholic Church, as we know it, emerged during this period. It arose from the confusion and multiple heresies that existed in the first century. It wasn't just one heresy in a straight-line shot; there were multiple heresies. There were certain things that became predominant. There was the emergence of a predominant leadership in Rome. It was the alliance of church and state made at the time of the emperor Constantine that ensured the supremacy of the bishop at Rome and the particular brand of Christianity that he happened to champion. The Council of Nicaea, which was called to standardize Christian practice, was called by the authority of the emperor Constantine. The Council of Nicaea was presided over by the emperor Constantine. He was the one who actually sat in the chair and presided over the meeting. The empire had become split and splintered, so it was his intent to use religion to reunify the empire. The old Roman state religion no longer had much influence.

I will give you a quote about Polycarp and later Polycrates. Polycrates was a later disciple of Polycarp. A dispute that was called the Quartodeciman Controversy came to a head around 200 A.D. "Quartodeciman" is just a Latin word that means "the fourteenth." The controversy about the fourteenth is what it means. We celebrate the Passover on the fourteenth day of the first month. The controversy was when should the Passover be celebrated? You know, of course, that the term that is used in the Latin to refer to Easter, which is celebrated in the Catholic world, is the Latin word for Passover. It's called the "Paschal" season. A similar term is used in French to refer to it. French, Spanish and Italian all use terms that are derived from Passover. What it amounted to was the old Samaritan trick of calling the wrong thing by the right name. They appropriated names from the Bible and applied them to pagan things. The controversy over celebrating Passover was: should you celebrate the fourteenth day of the first month as Passover or should you celebrate on a Sunday morning as the Paschal service?

Eusebius was a Catholic historian and bishop who attended the Nicaean Council. He lived in the fourth century A.D. He was there with the emperor Constantine and the others at the Council of Nicaea. He wrote a history of the church up until the time of the emperor Constantine.

Quoting here from Eusebius' history, he said, "The bishops, however, of Asia [referring to Asia Minor], persevering in observing the custom handed down to them from their fathers, were headed by Polycrates. [Polycrates was the disciple of Polycarp, and Polycarp had been the disciple of John]. He, indeed, had also set forth the tradition handed down in them, in a letter which he addressed to the vicar and the church of Rome. 'We,' said he, 'therefore, observe the genuine day, neither adding thereto nor taking there from. For in Asia great lights have fallen asleep [interesting his use of terms], which shall rise again in the day of the Lord's appearing in which He will come with glory from heaven and will raise up all the saints.'"

Now, Polycrates didn't believe that they had all gone off to heaven. He didn't say, 'They are up in heaven watching us.' He said, 'They've fallen asleep and they are going to wake up when Christ comes back in power and in glory.' He names all various ones. He mentions Philip, one of the twelve apostles who sleeps in Hieropolis. He mentions John who rested on the bosom of our Lord, who's buried in Ephesus. He mentions Polycarp of Smyrna. He goes through and mentions various others.

He said, "[All these who are now] awaiting the episcopate from heaven [the visitation from heaven; the return of Christ], when he shall rise from the dead. All these observed the fourteenth day of the Passover according to the gospel, deviating in no respect, but following the rule of faith. Moreover, I, Polycrates, who am the least of all of you, according to the tradition of my relatives, some of whom I have followed. For there were seven, my relatives bishops, and I am the eight; and my relatives always observed the day when the people threw away the leaven.'"

Oh, they observed the Passover and the Days of Unleavened Bread! He said "my relatives always observed the day when the people threw away the leaven."

"I, therefore, brethren, am now sixty-five years in the Lord [He had been in the Church for sixty-five years, so he was a very elderly man by this time—certainly well into his eighties.] who having conferred with the brethren throughout the world, and having studied the whole of the sacred Scriptures, am not at all alarmed at those things with which I am threatened, to intimidate me. For they who are greater than I, have said, 'We ought to obey God rather than men.'..."

Upon this vicar, the bishop of the Church of Rome forthwith endeavored to cut off the churches of all Asia, together with the neighboring churches, as heterodox, from the common unity. And he publishes abroad by letters, and proclaims that all the brethren there are wholly excommunicated.”

It goes on. A little later he talked about Polycarp, who had actually made a trip to Rome many years earlier, trying to explain to the church at Rome that the Passover should be kept on the fourteenth day of the first month.

It said: “And when the blessed Polycarp went to Rome in the time of Anicetus [bishop of Rome], and they had a little difference among themselves...for neither could Anicetus persuade Polycarp not to observe it because he had always observed it with John the disciple of our Lord and the rest of the apostles with whom he associated; and neither did Polycarp persuade Anicetus to observe, who said that he was bound to maintain the practice of the presbyters [elders] before him.”

So, Anicetus followed the tradition in Rome which dates back to 115 A.D. Anicetus’s predecessors were Pius, Hygenius, Teleforus and Sixtus. Sixtus is the first of the bishops who is mentioned by Eusebius as having observed Easter Sunday. Sixtus, according to the dates given, came to his position in 115 A.D. That is why I gave the date 115 A.D. The idea certainly was around before then, but it was in 115 A.D. that Sixtus took over control as the presiding bishop in Rome and accepted Easter Sunday. We are going to see a little later how he made and introduced something like that.

Notice Polycarp and Polycrates. Here were people who were the true Church, who had a connection to the original apostles and even a matter as preserved by Catholic historians recognized, they were observing the days we observe. This would be the time of Smyrna.

Pergamos was the third church and the third phase mentioned. There was a time when the Church was in hiding. The very word “Pergamos” means “fortified.” They were known in history as Paulicans and Bogomils. These were terms that were applied to them. Some of the leaders, of whom we have record, are men such as Constantine of Mananali, Simeon who flourished about 690 A.D. and Sergius who flourished about 830 A.D. Pergamum was originally the seat of the Pontifex Maximus. It was also the city of Escalapius the serpent, the original city.

Thyatira was the fourth church; the fourth stage. It symbolizes the Church in the Middle Ages. It was a period during which one of the primary terms that was applied was the Waldenses. Peter DeBruys and Peter Waldo were some of the best-known leaders. Peter Waldo flourished between about 1150 and 1200 A.D. These were people who were scattered in the latter part of their history. They were scattered in areas of Southern Europe and Eastern Europe, down in the Alpine areas stretching across through portions of France and Italy. Originally, they had moved into that area from Bohemia. By about 1500 A.D., they were pretty well extinct.

However, the fifth stage, the Church at Sardis, known as the Lollards in English History, came to England in the late 1300s and 1400s. They spread in from some of the German and Bohemian-speaking realm. There are records of Sabbath-keeping Churches in England during the 1500s, 1600s and 1700s. We have a record of Stephen Mumford who came from England to Newport, Rhode Island in 1668 A.D. and established the first Church of God in the new world. It started in Rhode Island in 1668 A.D. In the early 1800s, a group called Seventh Day Baptists split off from the Church of God. About 1860 A.D., the largest portion of the Church followed the wife of an elder in the Church. This woman claimed to be a prophetess and to have visions. Her name was Ellen G. White. Those who followed her took the name Seventh Day Adventists. It was the remnants of these people that Mr. Herbert Armstrong came among in the 1920s and gave rise to what we term the sixth stage of the history of the church, typified by the Church at Philadelphia.

It’s interesting. The original city of Philadelphia was in a very earthquake-prone area of Asia Minor, and it was the site of frequent earthquakes. The name “Philadelphia” means “brotherly love.” We find that the Church in Philadelphia is pictured as going through open doors to do a work. We find that it is promised protection from the tribulation. This represents the work that God raised up through Mr. Herbert Armstrong, of which we are a continuation.

The Church at Laodicea pictures the final stage. Laodicea, in Asia Minor, was originally a very wealthy city. It was known for its soft wool and for its very soft life. It was a very prosperous area. There was a great pagan temple in Laodicea, which served as sort of the medical center of Asia Minor. It was an area to which pilgrimages were made from all over the area. It was also prominent in the manufacture of eye salve. We will notice a “play” on that a little later in the message to the Laodicean Church. The name “Laodicea” means “the people judge.” “Lao” means “people” in the Greek language; “dicea” is the word for “judge.” It clearly is the era that is the final stage of the Church. The description given is very much in tune with the permissive, do-your-own-thing, materialistic, complacent attitude that is so pervasive in our society. And, certainly, the people of God are not immune from the attitude and the spirit of the time.

I want to go back and comment a little bit on the situation at Ephesus—the Ephesians Church and the message to the Church at Ephesus.

Revelation 2:1, “To the angel of the church of Ephesus write...” This is addressed to the angel of the Church of Ephesus.

Verses 2-7, “I know your works, your labor, your patience, and that you cannot bear those who are evil. And you have tested those who say they are apostles and are not, and have found them liars; and you have persevered and have patience, and have labored for My name’s sake and have not become weary. Nevertheless I have this against you, that you have left your first love. Remember therefore from where you have fallen; repent and do the first works, or else I will come to you quickly and remove your lampstand from its place—unless you repent. But this you have, that you hate the deeds of the Nicolaitans, which I also hate. He who has an ear, let him hear what the Spirit says to the churches. To him who overcomes I will give to eat from the tree of life, which is in the midst of the Paradise of God.”

What is he talking about? The test of the Ephesians era was they had to weigh the claims of those who claimed to be apostles and were not.

Paul addressed that in II Corinthians 11:13-15, “For such are false apostles, deceitful workers, transforming themselves into apostles of Christ. And no wonder! For Satan himself transforms himself into an angel of light. Therefore it is no great thing if his ministers also transform themselves into ministers of righteousness...”

This is going back to Simon the sorcerer. We studied about him in Acts 8. We went into a little bit about him last Bible study. According to history, Simon the sorcerer (from Samaria) left Samaria and went to Rome by 42 A.D. I should have brought the Encyclopedia Britannica, the old eleventh edition, to read the article. They have about a three-page spread on Simon Magus. If you look him up in a modern encyclopedia you won’t find much, but the old encyclopedia had quite a spread on him. According to historical sources, he went to Rome about 42 A.D. and remained there on up until his death in the late 60s. He was very much responsible for the heresies that eventually coalesced into the Catholic Church.

The Church in Ephesus (the Ephesians era) was tested in having to weigh the competing claims of those who claimed to be apostles—whether or not they were. They hated the deeds of the Nicolaitans. “Nicolaitans,” if you translate it, “Nicolas” is the Greek translation of “Baal.” “Nicolas” (“niko” in the Greek) means “conqueror” or “ruler”; “lao” means “people”—ruler of the people. “Balaam,” “Baal” means “lord” or “ruler”; “am” means “people.”

In Jude 3, Jude told them, “...contend earnestly for the faith which was once for all delivered to the saints.”

Verse 11, “Woe to them! For they have gone in the way of Cain, have run greedily in the error of Balaam for profit [KJV, “reward”], and perished in the rebellion of Korah.” This is the mystery of iniquity that Paul said was already at work when he wrote to the Thessalonians in the 50s (II Thessalonians 2:7).

Here is the way things got off the track. I am reading from a book, The Collier Catholic Reader’s Series entitled “Heresy and Orthodoxy.” In the book, he is quoting from the writings of Marcion. Marcion was a teacher. This is written about 144 A.D.

Here is the statement: “Paul alone preached the gospel, the essence of which is salvation by faith. For it’s enough to believe and to love.”

This is the statement that was made and began to be preached; you see how he got off the track. We are warned about those who would turn the grace of God into lasciviousness, into lawlessness. They confused God’s grace with a license to sin. They say the law is done away and that grace replaces the law.

Notice Peter’s warning in II Peter 3:15-16, “and account that the longsuffering of our Lord is salvation—as also our beloved brother Paul, according to the wisdom given to him, has written to you, as also in all his epistles, speaking in them of these things, in which are some things hard to understand, which those who are untaught and unstable twist to their own destruction, as they do also the rest of the Scriptures.”

Peter said there are people who are taking what Paul said out of context. They are twisting the Scriptures. What were they teaching? They were teaching that all you had to do was to believe and to love. If you really understand what it means to believe, and if you really understand what it means to love, yeah, that’s fine. But they didn’t understand it that way.

John said in I John 5:3, “For this is the love of God, that we keep His commandments....”

But their teaching was, ‘Look, all you have to do is believe on the person of Jesus Christ.’ Their gospel is a message that exalts the person of Jesus Christ and leaves aside the message Jesus Christ brought. It substitutes a gospel about Jesus for the gospel of Jesus Christ, the gospel He, Himself, brought. It was an “all you have to do is to believe and to love” gospel. That sounds good. That’s pretty and that’s flowery. That sounds beautiful. But if all you have to do is to believe and to love, it sets the stage for the next thing. This was the foundation of the heresy that was undermining the necessity of observing the law.

When you look at the earliest church fathers, they didn’t say it was wrong to keep the Sabbath. They simply said, ‘It’s fine to do it as a custom, but it’s not necessary for salvation.’ They didn’t try to stop people from doing it, originally. They just said, ‘It’s fine to do it and to follow the example of the apostles and the ones that have gone before, but it’s not necessary for salvation. Because for salvation all you have to do is to believe and to love. All you have to do is believe in Jesus and love one another. That’s all you have to do to be saved. Now, it’s fine to observe these things.’

But by about the time of John’s death, intense anti-Jewish persecution began to break out in Rome. There had been several previous expulsions of the Jews from Rome. But at that time, a very virulent wave of anti-Semitism swept Rome, in particular, and other parts of the empire. So, at that point, the bishop of Rome said, ‘Sabbath observance is fine, but it’s not necessary for salvation. All it does is get us unnecessary persecution because we are confused with the Jews. What we need to do is to make a clear distinction in our identity from the Jews. So, let’s not follow their custom anymore. It’s not necessary for salvation. All we have to do is to believe and to love. We just have to believe in Jesus and love one another. So, why should we get persecuted because everybody’s mad at the Jews? Let’s substitute. Let’s just have our services the next day.’ That sounds reasonable, right?

It’s interesting. Let me find my quote here in From Sabbath to Sunday, Chapter 7: “Anti-Judaism in the Fathers and the Origin of Sunday.” This quotes Ignatius who was bishop of Antioch right after the Apostle John’s death. You have to realize there was a mixture; there were people who were lurking around the fringes. There were various ones who had various positions, and once John died, it all came out of the woodwork.

Even when John was alive—read I, II and III John—you remember, John even wrote in III John 9-10, “I wrote to the church, but Diotrephes, who loves to have the preeminence among them, does not receive us. Therefore, if I come, I will call to mind his deeds which he does, prating against us with malicious words. And not content with that, he himself does not receive the brethren, and forbids those who wish to, putting them out of the church.”

John said, ‘If I come down there, I’m going to deal with that fellow.’ But you see, John was on up into his late 90s and he died. And when John was dead and no longer on the scene, then you had all this stuff that began to erupt.

Ignatius writes and I’ll just read the quote from his writings here in the Apostolic Fathers, “For if we are still practicing Judaism, we admit that we have not received God’s favor.”

The frequent recommendations to abandon the practice of Judaism imply a strong leaning toward Jewish practices within the Christian community of Asia Minor. You don’t have to keep telling people not to do something if they are not doing it already. The fact that you had letters written to Christian churches in the second century condemning the practice of Judaism means that these people were doing these things. The condemnation of Jewish practices such as Sabbatizing (which is the observance of the Sabbath) and the beginning of the use of the term “Lord’s Day” had to do with this.

Ignatius urges Christians to stop practicing Judaism and to stop living like the Jews. He’s writing within five or ten years of John’s death.

Ignatius says, “If then those who have walked in ancient practices attained the newness of hope, no longer walk observing the Sabbaths, but fashioning their lives after the Lord’s Day. It is monstrous to talk of Jesus Christ and to practice Judaism.” He is writing this sort of thing.

I want to read a little bit here from the Epistle of Barnabas. He’s writing about 120 A.D. He tried to spiritualize away the law. He said, “Moreover, concerning the Sabbath, likewise it is written in the Ten Words, which He spoke to Moses face to face on Mount Sinai, ‘You shall hallow the Sabbath with clean hands and a pure heart.’ And in another he says, ‘If my sons keep the Sabbath, then I will bestow mercy upon them.’ Of the Sabbath he speaks in the beginning of the creation, ‘And in six days God made the works of His hands, and ended on the seventh day, and He rested on it and made it holy.’ Now give heed children, what this means, ‘He ended in six days.’ It means this: in six thousand years the Lord will bring all things to an end; the day with Him signifies a thousand years. This He, Himself bears me witness, saying, ‘Behold the day of the Lord will be like a thousand years.’ Therefore, children, in six days, that is, in six thousand years everything shall come to an end. ‘He rested the seventh day’ means when His Son shall come and abolish the time of the lawless one, shall judge the ungodly, shall change the sun and moon and stars, then shall He truly rest on the seventh day.”

He goes on to say that, “If therefore a man is able now to hallow the day which God hallowed, though he be pure in heart, we’ve utterly gone astray. But if after all then and not till then shall we truly rest and hallow it when we ourselves be able to do so after being justified and receiving the promise.”

His contention was, ‘We can’t really keep the Sabbath until after Christ gets back. We don’t need to do away with it.’ There’s an interesting statement that he made. Barnabas took a very allegorical approach to the Scripture.

He said, “Now for as much as Moses said you shall not eat swine or eagle or falcon or crow or any fish that has no scale upon it, he received in his understanding three ordinances. So, then it’s not a commandment of God that they shouldn’t bite with their teeth, but Moses was speaking it in spirit. Accordingly, he mentioned the swine with this intent. You shall not cleave, says he, to such men that are like swine; that is when they in their luxury forget the Lord.”

What he did was quote Scripture and say, ‘He didn’t really mean that. He didn’t really mean you shouldn’t eat swine in the sense of eating it with your teeth. He’s just saying you shouldn’t associate with people who act like pigs.’ They gave an interesting line of reasoning.

I am going to paraphrase a little of this for the sake of time. They said, ‘Now, look, on the first day of creation God said, “Let there be light.” He did that on the first day. We call the first day of the week Sunday. Who is the light of the world? –Jesus Christ. He’s called, in Malachi 4:2, the Sun of Righteousness. So, really, the first day is the day that should be symbolic of Jesus Christ.’ This was the sort of reasoning that they used. See, no commandment and no particular point.

Justin Martyr, who was writing about 150 A.D., used various things to justify Sunday worship—the creation of light on the first day, the resurrection of Christ. They quite often used the term “the eighth day.” What is the eighth day? Well, it’s the day after the Sabbath. So, the eighth day would be the first day. Justin Martyr went into all sorts of things—the fact that circumcision was on the eighth day (well, circumcision of the heart...), there were eight souls in the ark, the flood covered the mountains fifteen cubits, which means seven plus eight. Now what does that have to do with it? It was only at a later time that the emphasis on a Sunday resurrection began to be the primary reason. That couldn’t be used at first because you had to get further and further away from the time of the original apostles. Since John was there as a witness to the resurrection, you couldn’t very well preach about Easter Sunday when he was around. He was there. He saw Jesus Christ in His resurrected state. But once John was dead, the “floodgates” were open. All kind of things could come out. John wasn’t around to say, ‘No, it wasn’t that way.’ Paul’s writings were the ones that were primarily twisted and misapplied.

Let me read just one other brief thing. This was from Edward Gibbon who was a famous British historian. He was writing on “The Decline and Fall of the Roman Empire.” To show you a little bit of the way things changed that way, he says, “The ancient and popular doctrine of the Millennium was intimately connected with the second coming of Christ. As the works of the creation had been finished in six days, their duration in their present state, according to a tradition that was attributed to the prophet Elijah, was fixed to six thousand years. By the same analogy, it was inferred that this long period of labor and contention, which was now almost elapsed, would be succeeded by a joyful Sabbath of a thousand years and that Christ, with a triumphant band of the saints and the elect who had escaped death or who had been miraculously revived, would reign upon the earth until the time appointed for the last and general resurrection.” He explains what the church taught.

“The doctrine of Christ’s reign upon the earth was at first treated as a profound allegory.” By the time of the second and third century, it was profound allegory. Irenaeus, Ignatius and some of these others said it was a profound allegory.

“[It] was considered by the Greeks as a doubtful and useless opinion.” He said, ‘That’s just a matter of speculation. We don’t really know about that. He may not really reign for a thousand years. We can’t really prove that He’s going to literally come back and rule for a thousand years. That's just speculation. And, you know, it gets our minds off this speculating about Christ coming back and everything. That's doubtful and useless opinion.'

"...at length it was rejected as the absurd invention of heresy and fanaticism." It started out being accepted and taught as the truth. Then it was a profound allegory. Then it was just sort of a useless opinion and didn't really matter one way or the other. Then it progressed to being heresy and fanaticism and they were ready to persecute you if you believed that. It was a step-by-step progression. This sort of approach was the way so much of the rest of this went. The first approach was to continue to do the law. They continued to follow many of these customs. But what they undercut was whether or not it was necessary.

It's sort of like boiling a frog in water. You turn up the heat and the water comes to a boil. If you threw the frog in the boiling water it would hop out. But if you put it in cold water and turn up the heat, it gets warm gradually and the old frog doesn't notice until it's too late.

If they had come along and just immediately said the Sabbath and the Holy Days were done away and they were going to keep Sunday, Easter and Christmas, boy, that's quite a contrast. They couldn't do that while John was alive. They couldn't just instantly come up with that as the "first dash out of the box." What they came up with is, 'Look, the only thing you have to do is to believe.'

As Marcion wrote, 'It's just to believe and to love. That's all that's necessary, to believe and to love—believe in Jesus and love one another. All of these other things really aren't necessary. It's fine, but it's not necessary. Well, if it's not necessary, why should you be persecuted for it? Maybe we should just do something else.' And so they did. They said it would make a clear demarcation of their history from that of the Jews.

I will read a little bit. Gibbon says, "The history of the church in Jerusalem affords a lively proof of the necessity of those precautions and of the deep impression which the Jewish religion made on the minds of its followers. The first fifteen bishops of Jerusalem were all circumcised Jews and the congregation over which they presided united the Law of Moses with the doctrine of Christ. [In other words, it was the true Church.] The Jewish converts were called Nazarenes. [We find that term is actually used in the Bible; that was a term that was applied to them.] The Nazarenes retired from the ruins of Jerusalem to the little town of Pella beyond the Jordan where that ancient church languished about sixty years. And after the second Jewish revolt in 135 A.D., it links under the reign of Hadrian the desperate fanaticism of the Jews filled up the measure of their calamities. And the Romans, exasperated by their repeated rebellions, exercised the right of victory with unusual rigor. They completely destroyed Jerusalem, founded under the name of 'Aelia Capitolina' a new city on Mount Zion to which he gave the privileges of a colony and denounced the severest penalties upon any of the Jewish people who should dare to approach its precinct. He fixed a vigilant garrison of a Roman cohort to enforce the execution of his orders. The Nazarenes had only one way left to escape the common prescription. They elected Marcus for their bishop, a prelate of the race of the Gentiles. He was a native of Italy. At his persuasion, most of them renounced the Mosaic Law [which would be the Sabbath] and by their sacrifice of their habits and prejudices, they purchased a free admission into the colony of Hadrian."

Then he goes on to describe, "The obscure remnant of the Nazarenes which refused to accompany their Latin bishop spread themselves into the villages adjacent to Damascus and are known by the title of Ebionites." He went on to describe, "Traces of the Ebionites can be discovered as late as the fourth century."

When Christ talked to the Church in Ephesus, He addressed those who had to make a distinction. The test of the true Church at that point was 'to try those that said they are apostles' (Revelation 2:2). —Whether or not they were. How do you try them? You put it to the test.

Isaiah 8:20, "To the law and to the testimony! If they do not speak according to this word, it is because there is no light in them." There isn't any truth in them. The test as to whether someone was what he said he was, was whether or not he taught God's truth. It was a time of demarcation between many who called themselves "Christian." We find that very few really preserved and held on to the truth. They took the path of least resistance, undermined by things that took place over a period of years.

During much of the Ephesians era, there wasn't a clear distinction between the true Church and the false church. In many cases, brethren were meeting in congregations that consisted of various ones because everybody called themselves Christians and congregated together. Communication, transportation and many things played into this. The clear cleavage between what became the Catholic Church and what remained as the true Church of God was accomplished during the time of the Smyrna Church.

Revelation 2:8-9, he says, “And to the angel of the church in Smyrna write, “...‘I know your works, tribulation, and poverty (but you are rich) [Spiritually, they were rich; physically and materially they were in poverty and under great persecution.]; and I know the blasphemy of those who say they are Jews and are not, but are a synagogue of Satan.’””

The Samaritans anciently claimed to be Jews, but they weren't. You can read of that back in the period of the Old Testament. We read of it when we went through Ezra and Nehemiah. Here were their modern-day New Testament descendants. The followers of Simon Magus claimed to be spiritual Jews and they weren't that either. The message to Smyrna is, ‘I know those that claim to be My true people and really aren't. For them to attach My name to them is blasphemy. I know that these false heretical groups are not the Church of God. It's the synagogue of Satan.’

Verse 10, “Do not fear any of those things which you are about to suffer. Indeed, the devil is about to throw some of you into prison, that you may be tested, and you will have tribulation ten days [There was a ten-year persecution from 303 to 313 A.D. by the emperor Domitian that seems to be addressed here.]. Be faithful until death, and I will give you the crown of life.”

This Church was perhaps the most persecuted period. It was a time of intense persecution. It was during the next stage that God removed His people from the bounds of the Roman Empire. For about one thousand two hundred sixty years, the Church remained primarily outside the pale of the Roman Empire and the populated urban areas.

It was basically during this Smyrna period that the emperor Constantine came on the scene. There are historical records in the church fathers concerning controversies involving the true Church and the heretics, all the way up to the time of Constantine.

The Council at Nicaea was called to settle the issue of when to observe Passover. The Roman practice of Easter Sunday was the decree. Then just five or six years later, the Council of Laodicea set enforcement on the issue of Sunday observance in place of the Sabbath. You don't have to make an issue of those things if they were universal. If Christ is the One who had changed it, why do you find disciples three hundred years later still doing something else? The only reason that Constantine and the Roman government had to get in on the act was because they were trying to make something that had crept in and had become predominant, universal. But it wasn't by any means universal. The true Church visibly disappeared from the scene during this period.

Smyrna comes from the word “mer.” It means “perfume.” That was what was offered on the altar of incense. They were, in that sense, a living sacrifice to God.

“Pergamos” means “fortified.” The Church at this point, the seventh century A.D., migrated out of Asia Minor up into the very mountainous regions of Armenia and remote mountain valleys. They were pretty well isolated from the general population.

Revelation 2:13, Pergamos was told, “I know your works, and where you dwell, where Satan's throne is. And you hold fast to My name, and did not deny My faith even in the days in which Antipas was My faithful martyr, who was killed among you, where Satan dwells.”

Pergamos was the ancient seat of the Pontifex Maximus of the Babylonian Mystery religion. It was in 133 B.C. that Attalus III, god-king of Pergamum, died. In his will, he left his kingdom and his title “Pontifex Maximus” to the Romans. He literally bequeathed his kingdom to the Roman rulers in his will in 133 B.C. The title “Pontifex Maximus” was used by the Roman rulers. It became a title of Julius Caesar; he became Pontifex Maximus. It continued on down and all the emperors of the Roman Empire used that title up until Emperor Gratian in 378 A.D. He resigned the title “Pontifex Maximus” and bestowed it upon Pope Damascus in 378 A.D. That title has since been used by Rome. That's why the term “Roman Pontiff” is used referring to the pope. It goes back to that title. That's the trace of it.

It refers to Pergamos as being “the place where Satan's seat dwells” because that ancient city was the location of that. “Antipas” in Greek could be translated “anti pater” or you could translate it literally as “anti pope” or “one who was against or opposed the pope” in that way. It's very likely a reference to Constantine of Mananali who was martyred in 684 A.D. for preaching against the pope. They labeled him as the antichrist of the gospels. It describes this.

The Church at Pergamos began to remove itself from the confines of the empire up into that area of Armenia.

Verse 14, he said, “But I have a few things against you, because you have there those who hold the doctrine of Balaam....”

Verse 15, “Thus you also have those who hold the doctrine of the Nicolaitans, which thing I hate.”

There was a certain involvement of spiritual fornication. It was a time of persecution. There were various attempts of those who would try to make political arrangements and alliances with the world trying to protect themselves.

Verse 16, they were told, “Repent, or else I will come to you quickly and will fight against them with the sword of My mouth.” They were warned that the way to resolve their problem was not to enter into political alliances.

The term “Bogomils” came to be applied to this group of people. They moved up into the areas of Armenia and on into sections of what’s now portions of Bulgaria and portions of Eastern Europe. They moved in that very mountainous Trans-Carpathian mountainous area. Many of them got tired of running, entered into alliances with some of the people around and tried to protect themselves. This is what they are being indicted for here. There were others who trusted God and they moved on a little further.

We pick up the remnants of them in the next Church, the Church at Thyatira. Cloth merchants coming from that area of Bulgaria came into the Alpine areas of Europe and brought the truth that emerged there in the Middle Ages. It was the brightest flame in the Middle Ages. Particularly, the preaching of Peter Waldo had significant effect and influence through that remote Alpine area in southern France and northern Italy.

Verses 19-20, he says to the Church at Thyatira, “I know your works, love, service, faith, and your patience; and as for your works, the last are more than the first. Nevertheless I have a few things against you, because you allow that woman Jezebel, who calls herself a prophetess, to teach and beguile My servants to commit sexual immorality and to eat things sacrificed to idols.”

There were those among the Waldenses who counseled people, ‘Go ahead and attend mass (which was enforced by civil decree) to avoid persecution. Go ahead and attend mass. You know it doesn’t really mean what it says. You go ahead and partake of the symbols there at the mass.’ In reality, you are eating something sacrificed to an idol because that’s what’s there. Idols are all over the place.

He says, “to teach and beguile [KJV, “seduce”] My servants to commit immorality [KJV, “fornication”].” –To enter into illicit relationships with the world and the society around. He said, “you allow that woman Jezebel” Jezebel was a type of the great whore of Revelation 17. The Catholic Church was personified in Jezebel. If you really want to know what God doesn’t like in a woman, go back and study about Jezebel. She sort of sums it up. When God gets ready to mention a bad example, she’s the one He uses. He uses her here symbolic of the false church because she literally committed fornication (immorality) with various surrounding kings trying to build alliances. The church, as a symbolic woman, symbolically entered into illicit relationships and various alliances. Thyatira was indicted on this. They had allowed some of these things, and He said, ‘I am going to allow persecution.’

Verses 22-23, “Indeed I will cast her into a sickbed, and those who commit adultery with her into great tribulation, unless they repent of their deeds. And I will kill her children with death. And all the churches shall know....” We have the emergence of the beginning of some of the reform movements. Even the problems and persecutions that came are made reference to here.

Revelation 3:1, the Church at Sardis was told, “...you have a name that you are alive, but you are dead.” They were spiritually dead. This is certainly the description of the Church when Mr. Herbert Armstrong came among them. They had a name, but for all intents and purposes they were spiritually dead.

Verse 2, they were told, “Be watchful, and strengthen the things which remain, that are ready to die, for I have not found your works perfect before God.”

Verses 3-4, “...hold fast and repent. Therefore if you will not watch, I will come upon you as a thief, and you will not know what hour I will come upon you. You have a few names even in Sardis who have not defiled their garments; and they shall walk with Me in white, for they are worthy.” But, of course, many had defiled their garments. “Sardis” means “remnant.”

Philadelphia was told in v. 7, “...“These things says He who is holy, He who is true, ‘He who has the key of David, He who opens and no one shuts, and shuts and no one opens.’”” “Philadelphia” means “brotherly love.”

The key of David was the symbol of opening and closing, the power to open and close. This was coming forth from the throne of David. It’s interesting that the key that unlocks and opens up prophecy to our understanding is the knowledge of where the throne of David is, the throne that God established, the throne to which Christ will return. Christ pictures Himself to Philadelphia as opening doors for a work to be done and in some cases shutting doors.

Verses 8-9, he says to Philadelphia, “I know your works. See, I have set before you an open door, and no one can shut it; for you have a little strength, have kept My word, and have not denied My name. Indeed I will make those of the synagogue of Satan, who say they are Jews and are not, but lie—indeed I will make them come and worship before your feet....”

That means in the resurrection. We will have to be born into the Family. We will have to be God, as a part of God’s Family, for anybody to be able to worship us because it’s a sin to worship even an angel.

When John bowed down before an angel, the angel said in Revelation 19:10, “...See that you do not do that! I am your fellow servant....” He said, ‘Stand up. I’m a servant of God just like you are (cf. Daniel 8:16-18).’ So, if Christ is going to make somebody come worship at our feet, that will only be after we have entered into the Family of God and have, in that sense, been literally born as sons of God. We are sons of God right now but not in glory as at the resurrection. We are not sons in the full sense that we shall be.

Verse 10 (KJV), “Because you have kept the word of My patience....” That’s the test of this era—to patiently wait for God to do what He says He will do. If you get ahead of God, you get in trouble. That’s one thing that is very important for us to understand and to remember.

It was God’s purpose to bring Israel under Joshua across the Jordan River and into the Promised Land, wasn’t it? God intended to do that. Because the Jordan was at flood stage, you couldn’t cross it. God worked a miracle. He opened the Jordan River and let them come across on dry ground. Do you know how He did it? He had the priests bring the ark. They carried it on their shoulders and came down. When the first priest stuck his first foot into the water, the waters stopped and the waters parted. The priests walked out and stood in the middle. They held the ark in the middle and people walked across.

What do you think would have happened if somebody had gotten ahead of the ark? If they had said, ‘well, God wants us on the other side so why wait,’ you know what would have happened? They would have drowned in the river. You don’t get ahead of the ark.

Verse 10, the Philadelphia Church is told, “Because you have kept My command to persevere, I also will keep you from the hour of trial which shall come upon the whole world, to test those who dwell on the earth.” This is a reference to the Great Tribulation.

Verses 11-12, “Behold, I come quickly! Hold fast what you have, that no one may take your crown. He who overcomes, I will make him a pillar in the temple of My God....”

The pillars of Solomon’s temple had names. You can go back and read it in I Kings 7:15, 21 and II Chronicles 3:15, 17. The pillars of Solomon’s temple were named Boaz and Joaichim. It literally meant “strength” and “stability.” That’s what’s involved here. The pillars were supports—strength and stability. That’s part of what God’s trying to build in. He says the reward is being with Christ at headquarters in the New Jerusalem.

The Church of the Laodiceans is the final stage of the Church.

Verses 15-18, he says, “I know your works, that you are neither cold nor hot. I could wish you were cold or hot. So then, because you are lukewarm, and neither cold nor hot, I will spew you out of My mouth. Because you say, “I am rich, have become wealthy, and have need of nothing”—and do you not know that you are wretched, miserable, poor, blind, and naked—I counsel you to buy from Me gold refined in the fire, that you may be rich; and white garments, that you may be clothed, that the shame of your nakedness may not be revealed; and anoint your eyes with eye salve, that you may see.”

The problem is that they don’t see themselves. Their own evaluation is that they think they are in great shape. This is descriptive of a complacent, materialistic, permissive sort of watered-down, tepid approach, very much in harmony with the state of our society and our world. The world we live in is a lot more conducive to producing Laodiceans than it is Philadelphians. Christ indicts this final stage of the Church because they reflect too much of the spirit of society, as opposed to the Spirit of God. They don’t really see themselves for what they are. They want to basically do what they want to do. They are not all stirred up and all excited about God and about God’s way. They are preoccupied with other things.

Verses 19-21, he says, “As many as I love, I rebuke and chasten. Therefore be zealous and repent. Behold, I stand at the door and knock. If anyone hears My voice and opens the door, I will come in to him and dine with him, and he with Me. To him that overcomes I will grant to sit with Me on My throne, as I also overcame and sat down with My Father on His throne.” We see this involvement here.

We see these statements to the seven Churches. One refrain that runs through after the message to each one of the seven Churches is, “He who has an ear, let him hear what the Spirit says to the churches” (Revelation 2:7, 11, 17, 29; 3:6, 13, 22).

There are three aspects of the messages to the Churches. The first aspect is that it was a literal message to seven literal congregations in Asia Minor nineteen hundred years ago. Second, it certainly is descriptive of attitudes that have been extant in and among God’s people all the way down through the centuries. At any given time, you would find people who reflected a variety of these attitudes and states of mind. But that’s not all it’s about because we have seven distinct congregations that are successive stops on a mail route. It’s not simply of historical significance to what was going on in congregations nineteen hundred years ago. It’s not simply attitudes that are prevalent. Surely there are those who have lost their first love and there are those who are Laodicean. There are those who are “this” or “that” in terms of attitudes. But third, there are also seven distinct successive stages typified by seven distinct successive stops on a Roman mail route that symbolized the seven stages through which the history of the Church of God will pass. We should be aware of that and aware of these things because they are messages for us.

Revelation 3:22, “He who has an ear, let him hear what the Spirit says to the churches.”

You, perhaps, thought that by taking seven Bible studies on the book of Revelation, we could go into every detail and cover in depth every word of the book of Revelation. I have skimmed the high points of the first three chapters and haven’t covered a third of what I wished I had covered. But we’re not going to spend twenty-one Bible studies on Revelation. We are just going to keep it to seven. We will come back and pick up some of this stuff in later Bible studies and sermons on other subjects. This is to give you an overview.

You have study questions for next time. We are going to cover chapters 4, 5 and 6. By the way, if you have copies of Revelation: The Mystery Unveiled and The Beast of Revelation, Myth, Metaphor or Soon-Coming Reality, it would be good to study them.

We are getting on a little further into the book of Revelation this evening. We are going into chapters 4, 5 and 6.

One thing I might mention at the beginning. You know there are various groups, particularly a number of the Protestants, who teach the doctrine of the rapture, which is the idea that the second coming really isn't the second coming. It is sort of the second "almost" coming, sort of a near miss. The doctrine of the rapture, of course, is not found in the Bible.

It's amazing how certain terms find their way into the religious vocabulary and you don't find them in the Bible. The Protestant doctrine of the rapture, you won't find in the Bible. The doctrine of the trinity, you won't find in the Bible. It was not used until a couple of hundred years after the Bible was completed and a Catholic writer used it.

The doctrine of the rapture is the idea that Christ doesn't really come all the way back. He only comes as far as the clouds and He catches up the church. He takes them all up to heaven; we sit up there and watch while the Tribulation is going on. Perhaps you've seen a car with a bumper sticker that says, "In case of the rapture this car will be driverless" or whatever. "This car will be without a driver in the case of the rapture." One of the scriptures that they quote to prove their doctrine is Revelation 4.

Revelation 4:1, John says, "After these things I looked, and behold, a door standing open in heaven. And the first voice which I heard was like a trumpet speaking with me, saying, 'Come up here....'" They stop at that point and say, "This is the point at which the rapture occurs and throughout the rest of the book of Revelation, the church is no longer on the earth. The church is no longer pictured as on the earth throughout the rest of the book of Revelation, so this proves the rapture."

Well, it doesn't prove the rapture. It's not talking about that at all. This is a vision that John saw. Let's go on and read the rest of the verse.

Verses 1-2, "...the first voice which I heard was like a trumpet speaking with me, saying, 'Come up here, and I will show you things which must take place after this.' Immediately I was in the Spirit; and behold, a throne set in heaven, and One sat on the throne."

John saw a vision, and his vision transported him into the presence of God. It's a remarkable thing when we read some of this. John was describing what he saw in the vocabulary that he had. Sometimes you read a description and you have trouble picturing it in your mind. But what you have to consider is that if you were shown things you had never seen before, how would you describe it? You would have to use words and terms that you were familiar with and say, 'It was like this' and 'it was like that.' You wouldn't know what it was. You wouldn't know the name of it unless someone told you, and if you put down the proper name, no one else would know what you were talking about.

What if someone of a hundred years ago were transported forward into the future and saw a television and a VCR and then they went back to their point in time and were trying to describe to someone what they saw. If they used the word "television" and "VCR" that would be meaningless because nobody in the 1890s would have any idea of what that was. You might as well have called it a "whatyoumacallit" because it would be just about as meaningless to them.

It reminds me of an old man that I knew in the Church in Texas. He told me about when he was a boy, which was in the 1890s. One day they went to town in a wagon and while his father was shopping, he was wandering around as kids would. There was what was called a "magic lantern show" that was being held in the back part of somebody's barn there in town. There were barns in town back at that time. The magic lantern show was sort of the ancestor of the moving picture. It was a very primitive sort of thing. It was literally a magic lantern show because the lantern was the means of light and there was a sort of flipping through these cards. Some of you may be familiar with that. Anyway, it was a very crude and primitive thing, but it did project the picture onto a sheet that was hung there in the dark barn. The lantern was what gave the light and somebody had to manually put through the sequence. It looked like it was moving. It gave the illusion of moving—jerking, yes, but moving nevertheless. When he got back home, he was telling his Dad about seeing moving pictures. And his Dad whipped him for lying. He said, 'Pictures don't move. Don't be coming back telling me tall tales.' It seemed a very farfetched thing.

The point that I am making is what is unfamiliar is very difficult to describe. You describe it in terms that are familiar to you. Back then, they called it a magic lantern show because they literally used the lantern and it seemed like magic. Instead of still shots, you saw things projected on the screen that seem to be moving. It was very primitively done.

John described things that he had never seen before. He described things that there were not appropriate words for in his vocabulary to describe. He described things and if he had put down the real name of it, nobody he was writing to would have known what it was. They would be looking at it and wouldn't be able to figure it out either. John described, in the vocabulary of his day, the things that he saw.

As we go through the book of Revelation, some of these things may very well have to do with futuristic battle scenes, weapons and things of this sort that there simply weren't any words for. When he describes battles and weapons, he talks about chariots. He talks about something that looked like a swarm of locusts flying through the air. If he had seen a squadron of attack helicopters moving through, what would it have looked like? It would have looked like a swarm of locusts coming through. He would have looked up and would have seen, transported in vision, things that were simply beyond the scope of his imagination. So, he would have used terminology familiar to him.

Just like when the first cars came along, they were called horseless carriages. That was the way people described them. It was like a carriage but didn't have a horse in front of it. In describing some of these things, the problem is a matter of vocabulary.

If somebody wants to make the point that God's Church isn't found on the earth again after Revelation 4:1, all they have to do is go to Revelation 5:10 and find that we are kings and priests on the earth. There are plenty of other places. Revelation 12:14 talks about God's Church literally being taken to her place in the wilderness, to a place of protection or a place of safety to be protected from the Tribulation. There are some that object to the use of the term "place of safety" because they say that exact term is not in the Bible. No, it's not exactly what it says.

Revelation 12:14, "But the woman was given two wings of a great eagle, that she might fly into the wilderness to her place, where she is nourished for a time and times and half a time, from the presence of the serpent."

We could call it "the place in the wilderness where the Church is nourished for a time, times and half a time" every time we discuss it, but it's simpler to refer to it as "a place of protection" or "a place of safety"; a place for God's Church to be protected and nourished. What is a place of safety? It's not a matter of quibbling about terms. We find that the place where the woman, or the Church, is to be nourished is a place in the wilderness. It's a place on the earth, not off up in heaven somewhere; it's not in some situation like that.

John sees a vision (Revelation 4:1). John had seen another vision about sixty-five years or more before he saw what he saw in Revelation 4. John had seen another vision. That vision is recorded back in Matthew 17.

You remember at the very end of Matthew 16:28, Jesus said to the disciples, "...there are some standing here who shall not taste death till they see the Son of Man coming in His kingdom."

Then the very next verses, Matthew 17:1-2 says that a week later, He took James, Peter and John and went up into a mountain apart from the rest of them and was transfigured before them. They saw Him in His glorified state. They saw Moses and Elijah in glorified form conversing with Him (v. 3).

At the end of that experience He told them, v. 9, "...Tell the vision to no one until the Son of Man is risen from the dead." They saw a vision. That was the fulfillment of the promise that some of them would not taste death until they saw Him coming in the Kingdom. They saw it in vision. They saw Him in the glorified state that is representative of the Kingdom of God. They saw Him with individuals who will be in top positions in the Kingdom of God. They saw a vision of the resurrection. They were transported in vision into the Kingdom.

Now, over sixty-five years later, John is an elderly man in his nineties in exile on the island of Patmos and is given a vision. He had previously been given information. Now, in vision, he is transported into the very presence of the throne of God.

There are those who say, 'We don't know anything about what God is like or what heaven is like.' Oh, yes, we do! We wouldn't know it if God didn't tell us. But we can know. It's not the idea, 'well, whatever you try to imagine and visualize—God and whatever you are imagining—it won't be that way.' Perhaps, if all you had was imagination, but there are various things that you can certainly know. We know that there is a brilliance, a glory like the sun. In fact, we even know what color His hair is.

Revelation 1:14, “His head and His hair were white like wool, as white as snow....”

Verse 13 describes the garment that He has on. It describes various things. So, those things that God reveals can certainly be known. Now, if God doesn't reveal it, we can't know it. But God does reveal certain things. He wants us to have a grasp of what He is like. So, He reveals information about Himself and about His throne. God gave John the vision. John was to write these things down to show these things to the servants of God (Revelation 1:1).

When John was transported in his vision, he saw a throne in heaven and he saw an Individual sitting on that throne.

Revelation 4:2, “...I was in the Spirit; and behold, a throne set in heaven, and One sat on the throne.” There are several places in scripture where we find references to that. You can go back to Ezekiel 1; you can go to the book of Daniel where it talks about the Ancient of Days sitting on a throne (Daniel 7:9). There are places in Daniel 7 and Ezekiel 1. There are places that are references to God and to a vision of heaven and God's throne. This is what John sees.

Revelation 4:3, “And He who sat there was like a jasper and a sardius stone in appearance; and there was a rainbow around the throne, in appearance like an emerald.” What he saw was a reflection of light. It was brilliant. There was a splendor and a brilliance of color and light that was just overpowering to him. He saw it like a rainbow.

We've probably all seen prisms. My wife has a little one that hangs on a shade. Certain times of the year, at the right angle of the sun, the sun will hit it and will make little rainbow colors that come through the kitchen and shine on a kitchen cabinet. Many of us have seen that sort of thing. It's just a tiny bit, but it's pretty. We see here where God is surrounded by things like that.

Verse 6, “Before the throne there was a sea of glass, like crystal. And in the midst of the throne, and around the throne....” The light that is emanated and the refraction of that light, the brilliance of color and beauty were just overwhelming. He describes it like a rainbow around the throne. There was all this brilliance and this beautiful light.

Who is it that designed color to be a part of life? That's an incredible thing. Here you have sunlight. There isn't any color in sunlight, but when it shines through a glass prism, all of a sudden you have red, yellow, blue—you have color. Where did that come from? Well, it came from the light. How did it get there? God put it there. He designed light in a way like that. He designed all sorts of things and we see just a tiny glimmer of it. Here, on this earth, we get to enjoy some of the beauty that God has designed. But do you think God has given us something that is beyond what He has? Do you think God looks down and is sort of envious and thinks, ‘People get to have all the fun; they get all these nice things.’

Sometimes people, particularly young people, are concerned. They want Christ to come back, but they don't want Him to come back too soon because they want to be able to have some fun in life. If you stop and think about it, do you think God looks down and is envious of what people are doing? Do you think God says, ‘Those people get to have all this fun. They have such exciting lives and get to do these thrilling fun things—all I get to do is just sort of sit here.’

Psalms 16:11, “...In Your presence is fullness of joy; at Your right hand are pleasures forevermore.” Believe me, there isn't anything we can enjoy on the human level that even holds the flicker of a candle to the kind of enjoyment we can have on the God level. There just isn't!

It's hard for us to fathom. Just like it would be hard for your two or three year old to fathom the things that you enjoy as an adult. Why would that be so thrilling? A little child can sit there and make all these noises with his mouth and run his little truck across the floor. He's having a ball. Do you look down there and say, ‘I wish I could do that again. That's just so much fun.’ Would you just want to spend your day making all those noises with your mouth. No, there are a lot of other exciting things—things that never even entered into his mind. He can't comprehend what it's like to live on an adult level. And in the same way, we can't comprehend what it's like to live on the God level. God gives us a little bit of insight.

John sees this and he's overwhelmed by it.

Revelation 4:4-5, then he notices, “Around the throne were twenty-four thrones, and on the thrones I saw twenty-four elders sitting, clothed in white robes, and they had crowns of gold on their heads. And from the throne proceeded lightnings, thunderings, and voices. And there were seven lamps of fire burning before the throne, which are the seven Spirits of God.”

I am going to show you a little bit about who these seven Spirits are. We are going to see that this is identified in the Scriptures. Who are the twenty-four elders? What are they? The term for “elder” in the Greek language is the word “presbyteros.” The Presbyterian Church takes its name from that term. That's the style of government they have—government by the elders or the presbyters, as it is in the Greek. Basically that word means what our word "elder" means in English. The primary meaning of "elder" is "one who is older," and by implication, therefore, "one who has great experience and wisdom." The elders of ancient Israel were the ones that people went to for counsel and advice. They were the ones who made judgmental decisions in a community. The elders were the ones who gave guidance. They were older men who had experience and were looked to by others as a source of wisdom. They occupied governmental function, in the sense that they often sat as a council to make decisions and give advice. The Jews applied that term to the members of the Sanhedrin.

Here, we find created beings at the throne of God who occupy very high-level positions in God's government. Who are they counseling and advising and making judgmental decisions pertaining to? –Undoubtedly, the various angelic creatures and creation. We are not told how many angels there are. Perhaps there are billions of them. In Revelation 5:11, it talks about ten thousand times ten thousand. Well that is a hundred million, so you know that there are many. And it talks about many others, so there are perhaps even billions of angels. We are not told exactly how many, but God is not the author of confusion (I Corinthians 14:33). There is order and organization in everything that God does.

Twelve is God's number for organization, for government structure or for organized beginnings. When God began the nation of Israel, He did so with twelve tribes. When you go back to the book of Exodus and Numbers, you find there were twelve princes, a prince for each tribe. When you go into the New Testament, Christ chose twelve apostles as a foundation of the New Testament Church. So, twelve is a number of organizational beginnings. It denotes governmental structure.

Here in Revelation 4:4, we have twice twelve. Two times twelve is twenty-four. Here is the governmental structure that the angelic realm is predicated upon. God doesn't have angels out there just sort of swarming all over the place. There's organization and structure. There is structure and a hierarchy. God doesn't reveal all of it to us. We don't need to know it all, but He gives us little bits of insight.

These twenty-four great angelic creatures sit like a council and occupy a position of administering the angelic realm right there at the throne of God. They are a source of advice, counsel, instruction to the angels and deal with matters that come up. They are seen there.

It mentions these seven lamps burning before the throne.

Verse 5, "...And there were seven lamps of fire burning before the throne, which are the seven Spirits of God."

Verse 6, "Before the throne there was a sea of glass, like crystal..." Here we find this great expanse. John describes it. It's like crystal. It was reflective. Evidently it was sort of like a mirror finish. Perhaps parts of it may have even been some sort of crystalline design that refracted light. There was brilliance and shine to it. John had never seen anything like it. And, of course, the reason is because there is nothing like it. It is something that exists at the throne of God.

Then it describes these four creatures that were full of eyes.

Verse 6, "...And in the midst of the throne, and around the throne, were four living creatures full of eyes in front and in back." It describes them as having characteristics like a lion, a calf, a man and an eagle (v. 7) and they had six wings (v. 8). We think that sounds like an awfully unusual creature. It seems unusual to us because you and I have never seen anything like that.

They are mentioned back in Ezekiel 1. Ezekiel 1:5-10 describes four creatures. Ezekiel tells us they have four faces: one face was like a man, one was like a lion, one was like an eagle and one was like an ox; it describes that they had wings. They were unusual-looking creatures. The reason they strike us as unusual is because we have never seen anything like that and have trouble imagining anything like it.

Let me ask you a question. What did God model the animals here on earth after? Ever thought about that? You know, God modeled man after Himself. He made man in His image (Genesis 1:26; Genesis 5:1, 3). God made man a clay model that had the shape, outline and imprint of His characteristics. God modeled man after Himself. There are creatures in the spirit realm. Many of the angels also have the look of what we would term a human being. They carry that outward form and shape. But there are others that don't.

The proof of that—remember when Elijah was taken up into heaven in a chariot (II Kings 2:11). He was taken up into the sky (the atmosphere). What was he taken up in? He was taken up in horses and chariots of fire. Where do you think they got the horses of fire? Do you think they went down to the auction and bought the first horses that came through the ring? They wouldn't have gotten very high off the ground, and you wouldn't have gotten them close to a chariot of fire, that's for sure. These were angelic horses. They were horses that existed in the angelic realm. We know that there are creatures that have the appearance of a horse because even Jesus Christ is pictured as sitting on a horse.

Revelation 19:11, "Then I saw heaven opened, and behold, a white horse. And He who sat on him was called Faithful and True, and in righteousness He judges and makes war."

Verse 14, "And the armies in heaven, clothed in fine linen, white and clean, followed Him on white horses."

We find a description that there are angelic creatures. Since they are made of spirit, they are angelic creatures, creatures in the angelic realm. Certainly, some beings in the angelic realm have the appearance of what we would term animals. Just as God modeled man after Himself, certain animals that He made were modeled after counterparts or certain characteristics of angelic beings. Now, I am not saying that every animal you come across has some sort of a heavenly counterpart. I don't think that's necessarily the case at all. There isn't any indication of opossums and armadillos and all the rest of it. So, I am not indicating that at all. But there are some. How many are there; I don't know. We are not told. We have certain ones.

Revelation 4:5, "...And there were seven lamps of fire burning before the throne, which are the seven Spirits of God."

Revelation 1:4-5, if we go back, "John, to the seven churches which are in Asia: Grace to you and peace from Him who is and who was and who is to come, and from the seven Spirits who are before His throne, and from Jesus Christ, the faithful witness, the firstborn from the dead..." We again read of the seven Spirits before the throne of God.

Revelation 3:1-2, "And to the angel of the church in Sardis write, "These things says He who has the seven Spirits of God and the seven stars: 'I know your works....'" There's a reference to these Spirits. What are they? Let's turn back to the book of Zechariah and we will notice in Zechariah 3 and 4.

Zechariah 3:8-9, "...For behold, I am bringing forth My Servant the BRANCH [This is a reference to Jesus Christ; in most of your Bibles, the term "BRANCH" is probably in all capital letters.]. For behold the stone that I have laid before Joshua: upon the stone are seven eyes. Behold, I will engrave its inscription," says the Lord of hosts, "and I will remove the iniquity of that land in one day.""

Zechariah 4:10, "For who has despised the day of small things? For these seven rejoice to see the plumb line in the hand of Zerubbabel. They are the eyes of the Lord, which scan to and fro throughout the whole earth."

Revelation 5:6, "And I looked, and behold, in the midst of the throne and of the four living creatures, and in the midst of the elders, stood a Lamb as though it had been slain, having seven horns and seven eyes, which are the seven Spirits of God sent out into all the earth."

"...seven eyes which are the seven Spirits of God sent forth into all the earth." We find that reference in Zechariah 4:10. We find these seven Spirits referenced in other places in the book of Revelation. This is not the Holy Spirit. These are spirit beings.

Just hold your place here, and let's notice one other place.

Hebrews 1:7, "And of the angels He says: 'Who makes His angels spirits and His ministers a flame of fire.'" His ministers are His servants. His angels are spirits. Some servants are likened to flames of fire. Here, this describes created angelic spirit beings that evidently serve as an information-gathering source to God. They are the means by which God keeps up with every single thing that's going on all over the earth.

Our technology is very primitive, but there are certain things that we are aware of that can give us some insight. Our technology is perhaps more than generations past, though I don't think we should think that what we have is comparable to what God has. To compare what we have to what God has is like comparing a little flickering candle with the sun in full glory. There's not a whole lot of comparison. A little flickering candle and the sun both provide light and heat, but the distinction between them is awfully significant.

We can put satellites in the sky and we can have various ones located in orbit in various places around the earth. We call them spy satellites. They can send back pictures. Somebody can be sitting in a room watching on a television set something that is going on a world away. We have telephoto. We can take photographs and watch things that are going on a long ways away. We have sent probes into outer space. We can sit and watch film footage coming from the moons of Jupiter—just incredible things. Somebody can sit and watch something projected onto a television screen.

Here, it's being projected back. These seven Spirits that John described serve, in that sense, as the eyes of God. They are the means by which God watches what is going on. They are described here.

John sees a great celebration of praise for God going on in heaven.

Revelation 4:11, ““You are worthy, O Lord, to receive glory and honor and power; for You created all things, and by Your will they exist and were created.””

For all of this brilliance, magnificence, power and grandeur that are described in the spirit realm, none of them are created to be part of God's Family. Just hold your place here and let's go back to Hebrews. God is speaking of Jesus Christ.

Hebrews 1:4-5, “having become so much better than the angels, as He has by inheritance obtained a more excellent name than they. For to which of the angels did He ever say: ‘You are My Son, today I have begotten you?’ And again: ‘I will be to Him a Father, and He shall be to Me a Son?’”

For all the grandeur, power and greatness that these angels were created with, none of them are part of God's Family. They are created as servant beings to serve and carry out God's government. But we have the opportunity to actually be a part of His Family, to actually be a part of the very Family of God.

In Revelation 21:7, God says to us, “...I will be his God and he shall be My son.” “You are My sons!” Now, if we are sons and He's the Father, that's a Family, isn't it? It's a relationship the angels can't have. We don't just become angels. We won't sprout wings, grow a halo and become an angel. Our destiny is far, far greater than any of the angels.

Let's compare it. In a monarchy, the only way you can be a part of the royal family is to be born into the royal family. If you're a commoner, the highest thing that you could aspire to is to be the Prime Minister. If you actually look at the meaning of the words “Prime Minister,” it simply means “the first servant” or “the chief servant.” But you can never be higher than that because the only way you can be a prince or a king is to be born into the royal family.

The angelic beings have great power, authority, grandeur and greatness—far greater than what we have as human beings right now. Our destiny is not just simply to be a super angel. It is far, far above the angelic realm. It's incredible.

John sees a little bit of this. He sees heaven. He sees the very throne of God.

Revelation 5:1, “And I saw in the right hand of Him who sat on the throne a scroll [KJV, “book”] written inside and on the back, sealed with seven seals.”

Verse 3, “And no one in heaven or on the earth or under the earth was able to open the scroll, or to look at it.” None of the created angelic beings that were in heaven—not the twenty-four elders, not the four living creatures, not Michael or Gabriel or any of the angelic beings that were in heaven—were worthy to open that book. There wasn't any human being alive on the earth that was worthy to open that book. There wasn't anybody dead and buried under the earth that was worthy to open that book. John was just overwhelmed that there wasn't anyone who could open the book (v. 4).

Verses 5-6, “But one of the elders said to me, ‘Do not weep. Behold, the Lion of the tribe of Judah, the Root of David, has prevailed to open the scroll and to loose its seven seals.’ And I looked, and behold, in the midst of the throne and of the four living creatures, and in the midst of the elders, stood a Lamb as though it had been slain....”

John uses the metaphor “Lamb of God.” He uses it in his gospel and he uses it in the book of Revelation. It is referring to Jesus Christ.

He describes in v. 7, “Then He came and took the scroll out of the right hand of Him who sat on the throne.” He took it out of the hand of God the Father.

Verse 8, “Now when He had taken the scroll, the four living creatures and the twenty-four elders fell down before the Lamb, each having a harp, and golden bowls full of incense, which are the prayers of the saints.”

“Golden bowls full of incense, which are the prayers of the saints.” Do you ever think of God having a means of storing up prayers? It describes here golden bowls full of incense. Incense was offered in the Holy Place and was symbolic of the prayers of God's people—it's sweet savor coming up to God. God evidently has a means by which He preserves the prayers of His saints. They are really precious to Him. If we consider and think about that, we might be more careful in our prayer life. Think about that.

I don't know about you, but I have a box at home. In that box, I have an accumulation of cards. I have things my children made for me years ago when they were really small. I have cards that they would make or a letter that they would write to me. I have cards that various people have sent over the years. From time to time I like to go back through, look and think back about some of that and to sort of take encouragement from some of that. We often save things that our children do when they are young because it means a lot to us. It's very precious to us. As they get older, you look back and see some of these things. It's something you enjoy reminiscing about. God appreciates and values the prayers of His children.

Verse 9, "And they sang a new song, saying: 'You are worthy to take the scroll, and to open its seals; for You were slain....'" I want to call your attention to a technical point in vv. 9 and 10, so we can understand it.

The King James Version translates it with the first person pronoun.

Verses 9-10, "... 'And have redeemed us to God by Your blood out of every tribe and tongue and people and nation, and have made us kings and priests to our God; and we shall reign on the earth.'" First-person pronouns are used. Many other translations will render the third-person pronoun which is "they" or "them," and that is correct.

The Greek text that the King James was translated from is called the "Textus Receptus." Overall it is a very accurate text. It is not identical to what is called the "Majority Text" or the "Byzantine Text," which comprises about ninety percent of the Greek manuscripts. It is a text that was available there in Europe and was primarily compiled from those. Overall it was a very excellent text, but when you check the Majority or Byzantine Text, which is really the authoritative New Testament manuscript, it uses the third-person pronoun "they" or "them." That is correct because if you look at the context, angelic beings are the ones that are singing. Well, they haven't been redeemed out of tribe and tongues and peoples and nations. They would be using the third-person pronoun "they" or "them." Most modern translations render it that way. The New King James renders it the way the Old King James does, but they have a footnote in the margin where they tell you that the King James text is really a deviation from one of the few originals.

The angelic creatures are singing a new song to Christ.

Verse 9, "... 'You are worthy to take the scroll, and to open its seals; for You were slain, and have redeemed them to God by Your blood out of every tribe and tongue and people and nation.'" It's talking about human beings from every ethnic background who have been redeemed to God through the blood of Jesus Christ. Angelic beings are singing this. So naturally they would use a third-person pronoun.

Verse 10, "'And have made them kings and priests to our God; and they shall reign on the earth.'" "

Verse 11, "Then I looked, and I heard the voice of many angels around the throne, the living creatures, and the elders; and the number of them was ten thousand times ten thousand, and thousands of thousands." He saw a hundred million and then thousands of thousands. That's millions! John saw millions of angels. One choir was a hundred million angels. Can you imagine what sort of a volume of song that ten million angels could make?

We hear our choir sing and that's inspiring. When you go to the Feast they have a large choir that consists of a hundred or two hundred at a big Feast site and that's really impressive. Can you imagine the choir that God has in heaven? –A hundred million angels. That must be quite a thing.

They were singing and glorifying God and Jesus Christ. They were worshipping Him because now the Lamb opens the seals (v. 5). The Lamb is Jesus Christ. He opens the seals. He is the Revelator. Jesus Christ is the One who reveals what the seals meant.

A document was written and sealed. It says it was a book (v. 1, KJV), but what we are seeing is actually a scroll. Books that are bound, as we think of them, didn't come into use until at least a couple of hundred years after the time John had written Revelation. Up to that time a scroll, which is unrolled, is what was utilized. Here we find something that was sealed. It was sealed and a seal was broken. You unrolled it and then you got to another seal. You broke that seal and unrolled it further.

Seals were put on letters. It was a way of making something tamper proof, of ensuring that only the authorized individual used it. In ancient times and coming on up into fairly modern times, sealing was generally done on legal documents. Sealing wax was put on them and then a signet ring was pressed into the warm wax. Something that identified or authenticated the genuineness was pressed into it. Pages of a will or something similar were folded. Then they would heat wax, let that blob of wax fall on the fold and then put a seal in it. If anybody broke it, it was obvious. You couldn't repair it. So, it would be apparent whether or not it had been tampered with. It was a means of protecting a legal document and guaranteeing that no unauthorized entry was made. Nobody had access to it. If they did, it was readily discovered that they had done so. No one was authorized to open it except the individual who was authorized to break that seal.

No one was allowed to break that seal. God had written it. He had sealed it and no one was authorized to break the seal. No one was worthy to break the seal except Jesus Christ. He broke the seal. As Jesus Christ would break the seal, John described it. It's like John is in heaven. He's transported to heaven and he's before the throne. The seals are broken and it's like he's watching on a big television. Now that's a poor analogy, but it sort of gives you the picture. It's almost as though he's there. All of a sudden, he sees all of these events going on. Then another seal is broken and he sees all these other events going on. This is a remarkable thing. You can sort of picture it. It's something like a giant movie screen, though perhaps a 3-D movie screen or something far more impressive than anything we have.

All of a sudden, John actually sees these events taking place. What he sees is symbolic and these symbols are interpreted. Where would we look to find the interpretation? We have to go to the interpretation given by Jesus Christ because He's the Revelator. He's the only one worthy to open the seals.

Revelation 6:1-2, "Now I saw when the Lamb opened one of the seals...And I looked, and behold, a white horse. And he who sat on it had a bow; and a crown was given to him, and he went out conquering and to conquer."

Verses 3-4, "When He opened the second seal, I heard the second living creature saying, 'Come and see.' And another horse, fiery red, went out. And it was granted to the one who sat on it to take peace from the earth, and that people should kill one another and there was given to him a great sword."

Verses 5-6, "When He opened the third seal, I heard the third living creature say, 'Come and see.' And I looked, and behold, a black horse, and he who sat on it had a pair of scales in his hand. And I heard a voice in the midst of the four living creatures saying, 'A quart of wheat for a denarius, and three quarts of barley for a denarius....'"

Here was food rationing—famine. Food was being rationed out. A denarius was the daily wage of a laboring man at that point in time. So, here we are looking at a small ration of food for a day's wages—at least a day's wages, what we would term "minimum wages." We are looking at food being scarce, being rationed and being very expensive.

Verse 7, "When He opened the fourth seal, I heard the voice of the fourth living creature saying, 'Come and see.' And I looked, and behold, a pale horse. And the name of him who sat on it was Death, and Hades [grave; the grave follows after death] followed with him. And power was given to them [The previous horsemen, particularly the red horseman of war and the black horseman of famine, together with the pale horse of death.] over a fourth of the earth, to kill with sword, with hunger, with death...."

Among those three—warfare, famine and disease—one-fourth of the earth's population dies, along with many animals. It's a horrendous event.

Verses 9-11, "When He opened the fifth seal, I saw under the altar the souls of those who had been slain for the word of God and for the testimony which they held. And they cried with a loud voice, saying, 'How long, O Lord, holy and true, until You judge and avenge our blood on those who dwell on the earth?' And a white robe was given to each of them; and it was said to them that they should rest a little while longer, until both the number of their fellow servants and their brethren, who would be killed as they were, was completed."

Let's talk about this fifth seal a little bit. There's some who point to Revelation 6:9 and say, 'This proves there's people in heaven. People go to heaven when they die because it talks about them right here.' Well, if Revelation 6:9 proves that people go to heaven when they die, it also proves that they all go under the altar, which must be a rather crowded place by now. They want to take that literally and say that proves they are going to heaven. If you are going to take it literally rather than symbolically, then it proves they went down under the altar and they are stuffing another one down under there. Those who believe in going to heaven don't think they are going to lie under the altar stacked up like cordwood for centuries and millennia. They think they are rolling around the streets of gold.

What is it talking about? What was under the altar? The altar in the tabernacle and temple was where the sacrifices were slaughtered. What was under the altar? There was a basin that collected the blood of the sacrifices. There was a basin at the foot of the altar and the blood ran down. The blood was collected in the basin and was utilized. The blood was symbolic of the life of the creature. We are told that the life is in the blood (Leviticus 17:11).

Let's go back to the book of Genesis 4. We read the story of Cain and Abel.

Genesis 4:8-10, "Now Cain talked with Abel his brother; and it came to pass, when they were in the field, that Cain rose against Abel his brother and killed him. Then the Lord said to Cain, 'Where is Abel your brother?' And he said, 'I do not know. Am I my brother's keeper?' And He said, 'What have you done? The voice of your brother's blood cries out to Me from the ground.'"

Did he mean that Abel's blood literally had a voice? Well, no, he's using what is termed "metaphorical language." The very presence of the blood of a righteous man demands retribution from a just and holy God. He told Cain, "Your brother's blood cries out to Me from the ground." In other words, the very presence and existence of the blood of Abel demanded retribution from a God who is holy and just—not simply One who stands by and ignores it—when one of His servants is slaughtered.

Now, the blood of righteous Abel cried out. If the blood of one righteous man—one martyr—cried out for vengeance, how much more loudly is the collective cry from the blood of all of the servants of God who have been slain down through the centuries—from righteous Abel on down? How much more loudly does the blood of all righteous men cry out collectively? The martyrdom of men and women of God demands that a God who is just and holy has to intervene for there to be justice. If God is a God of justice, then somewhere along the line there has to be some retribution. In this life, many times the righteous perish and the wicked prosper (Psalm 73). Unless there is a final evening of the score, then how do you come out ahead by obeying God?

What he sees is the collective martyrdom of the people of God down through the centuries who were figuratively crying out, just as Abel's blood had cried out.

Revelation 6:10, "And they cried with a loud voice, saying, 'How long, O Lord, holy and true, do You not judge and avenge our blood on them that dwell on the earth?'"

Verse 11, "And a white robe was given to each of them; and it was said to them that they should rest a little while longer, until both the number of their fellow servants and their brethren, who would be killed as they were, was completed."

They would rest a little while longer; they would remain in the grave yet a little season until the resurrection. There is a final end-time martyrdom yet to come.

Revelation 12:13-14, "Now when the dragon saw that he had been cast to the earth, he persecuted the woman who gave birth to the male Child. But the woman was given two wings of a great eagle, that she might fly into the wilderness to her place, where she is nourished for a time and times and half a time [three and one-half years] from the face of the serpent." He's not allowed to get at her. He tries, but he can't. So, he's angry.

Verse 17, "And the dragon was enraged with the woman, and he went to make war with the rest of her offspring, who keep the commandments of God and have the testimony of Jesus Christ." He goes to make war with those who weren't taken to a place of protection. He goes to make war with the only portion of God's Church that he is allowed to get at—the portion that is not in the place of safety.

When you go through Revelation 3, it is apparent that the Philadelphia Church is taken to a place of protection and the Laodiceans are not. I covered some of that in a sermon. The Tribulation is Satan's wrath. It is Satan's wrath against the people of God—against God's people nationally and against God's people spiritually. God's people nationally are the nations of modern-day Israel—the United States and British Commonwealth nations, the people who were the descendants of Abraham and with whom God made His covenant.

Jeremiah 30:7, "'Alas! For that day is great, so that none is like it; and it is the time of Jacob's trouble, but he shall be saved out of it.'" It is the time of Jacob's trouble. It's a time that is terrible. There is none like it. Here is an unsurpassed time of calamity called the time of Jacob's trouble.

Let's go to Matthew 24. Here we find Christ the Revelator. Hold your place in Revelation 6 and Matthew 24 because we are going to go back and forth a little bit.

Matthew 24 is the focal point of Bible prophecy. This is where Jesus Christ unveils and gives the key to understanding what we read in Revelation 6.

In Matthew 24:21, He talks about a time of "great tribulation, such as has not been since the beginning of the world until this time, no, nor ever shall be." You can't have two times that are worse than any other time. If the time of Jacob's trouble is a time such as there has never been, and if the time Christ speaks of right here in Matthew 24:21 is the time worst than any other time, then obviously it's the same time.

It is Satan's wrath. It is Satan's wrath against physical Israel. It is the time of Jacob's trouble. It is also Satan's wrath against God's Church. God protects the Philadelphians era of His Church. Satan can't get to them. He wants to, but he can't because God won't let him. So, he then goes after the only part that is there, which is the remnant—those that have been left behind, the Laodiceans. He goes after them with full force and fury. Many of them are martyred. That is the final time of the martyrdom of the people of God. The Great Tribulation is Satan's wrath.

Revelation 6:12-13, "I looked when He opened the sixth seal, and behold, there was a great earthquake; and the sun became black as sackcloth of hair, and the moon became like blood. And the stars of heaven fell to the earth as a fig tree drops its late figs when it is shaken by a mighty wind." This is speaking of giant meteor showers, heavenly signs. It is just an incredible thing.

Now, let's go to Matthew 24:3, "Now as He sat on the Mount of Olives, the disciples came to Him privately, saying, 'Tell us, when will these things be? And what will be sign of Your coming, and of the end of the age?'" How are we going to know?

Verse 4, "And Jesus answered and said to them: 'Take heed that no one deceives you.'" The first thing we have is deception. We have false messiahs, false Christs.

What is the first seal? It's someone coming on a white horse (Revelation 6:1-2). Some commentators will tell you this is talking about Christ. No, it's not talking about Christ. Christ doesn't come back until Revelation 19. He's pictured as coming on a white horse all right. What we find in Revelation 6 is somebody masquerading as Christ, somebody who tries to give the outward appearance.

But notice there is a significant difference. The rider in Revelation 6 has a bow (v. 2). Christ is never pictured as having a bow. He's pictured as having a sword (Revelation 19:11, 15). The sword represents the word of God (Hebrew 4:12). The bow was the symbol of Nimrod the mighty hunter. Back in Genesis 10 and 11, we have the story of Nimrod and the tower of Babel. Genesis 10:8-10, "...Nimrod; he began to be a mighty one on the earth. He was a mighty hunter before the Lord; therefore it is said, 'Like Nimrod the mighty hunter before the Lord.' And the beginning of his kingdom was Babel..." Here was the beginning of Babylon. He was the great conqueror, the mighty hunter and the founder of the Babylonian Mystery religion.

Here we find the final end-time successor. We find those who were a perpetuation of the Babylonian Mystery religion coming with the sign and symbol—in reality, the successor of Nimrod—coming and purporting to be Christ.

What did Jesus say?

Matthew 24:5, "'For many will come in My name, saying, 'I am the Christ,' and will deceive many.'" They are going to come giving this impression. There's going to be deception. There are going to be false messiahs, false Christs.

I may go into some of these seals a little more on the Feast of Trumpets. The first seal is the white horse of deception—"those coming in My name."

Matthew 24:6-7, notice the second thing, "'And you will hear of wars and rumors of wars. See that you are not troubled; for all these things must come to pass, but the end is not yet. For nation will rise against nation, and kingdom against kingdom....'" The second seal is the fiery red horse of wars. There's going to be wars on the international scale. That's kingdom against kingdom. There's also going to be wars in terms of ethnic strife and violence, which is "nation against nation" or ethnos against ethnos.

We use the word "nation" in modern English to refer to various countries like Canada, the United States, Mexico, Britain, France or whomever. But the word "nation" derived from a Latin word that we get our word "nativity" (like in nativity scene). Hospitals have a prenatal unit. The word comes from the Latin word for birth. When you talk about "neonatal" or "prenatal" you are talking about the care prior to the birth of a child, as in prenatal care. When you talk about a nativity scene, you are talking about the traditional Christmas scene centering around what is purported to be the birth of Christ. Our English word "nation" is derived from the same Latin root. It means those who are bound together by birth, those who share a common ancestry. It's translated from the Greek word "ethnos," from which we get our word "ethnic."

You can see the ethnic violence and that's happening all over the world. It's happening in Africa, Asia, Europe and all over the world. It's happening in this country. It is violence of one group against another, who may be within the same country, but they are of different "ethnos," different ethnic groups. In some cases, there are different political entities such as countries or nation states—"kingdom against kingdom." It is warfare and violence internally among various ethnic groups and on the international scene.

What was the second seal? Wasn't it the red horse? The red horseman had the power to take peace from the earth; that's war (Revelation 6:3-4). That's the second seal. Christ interpreted it right here in Matthew 24.

What did He say the third seal was? Famine! Matthew 24:7, "For nation will rise against nation, and kingdom against kingdom, and there will be famine...." What was the third seal? It was the black horse, rationing food, famine (Revelation 6:5-6).

What was the fourth seal that Jesus revealed? Matthew 24:7, "For nation will rise against nation, and kingdom against kingdom, and there will be famines, pestilences...."

Revelation 6:8, "...And power was given to them over a fourth of the earth, to kill with sword [warfare], with hunger [famine], and then with death." The fourth seal is the pale horse which is death. There will be disease epidemics. There will be things like the black plague that devastated Europe during the early Middle Ages. We are finding that there are things and will be things we have only seen the very beginning of. I tell you what—AIDS and some of these other things that are coming along—they haven't seen anything yet, in terms of what is going to transpire.

It talks about earthquakes right along with this (Matthew 24:7; Revelation 6:12), an upsurge in earthquake activity. There will be earthquakes and natural disasters in various places. We are certainly experiencing that.

Matthew 24:8, he says, "...all these are the beginning of sorrows." The first four horsemen are the beginning of sorrows.

What's next?

Matthew 24:9, "Then they will deliver you up to tribulation and kill you, and you will be hated by all nations for My name's sake." Oh, that's martyrdom! What was the fifth seal? —A future martyrdom of the saints (Revelation 6:9-11).

Matthew 24:29, he comes down, "Immediately after the tribulation of those days the sun will be darkened, and the moon will not give its light; the stars will fall from heaven, and the powers of the heavens will be shaken." That's the sixth seal; that's the heavenly signs (Revelation 6:12-17).

Jesus Christ opened up the seals of Revelation. Matthew 24 is where we look to find the interpretation that Jesus Christ gave of these symbols. The sixth seal is God stepping into history. That is the beginning of the Day of the Lord.

Verse 17 is the last verse of Revelation 6.

Revelation 6:17 says, "For the great day of His wrath has come, and who is able to stand?"

The Great Tribulation is Satan's wrath. Satan's wrath is directed primarily at the people of God, physically and nationally, as well as spiritually. It is aimed at the modern-day descendants of Israel (the United States and British Commonwealth nations) and at God's Church, God's people, spiritually. It's the time of Jacob's trouble and it's the time when Satan goes to make war with the remnant that is left behind. That's the Great Tribulation of Satan's wrath; that's the fifth seal.

The other seals are already opened prior to the beginning of the Tribulation. They are opened one at a time. They follow one another sequentially. But the first seal is not closed back up when the second one is opened. The first is opened first and it begins. It's followed by the second. Now, you have the first and the second both going on. Then the third one is opened up and the first and the second are still going on. And then the fourth one is opened up and all are going on. The first four horsemen are already riding when the Tribulation starts. They haven't done everything they are going to do because each of these seals, as it's ongoing, is continuing to build in its intensity.

When the Tribulation starts and it proceeds along, we come to a point where God steps in and the Day of the Lord begins. The final one year of that three and one-half year period represents God stepping in and beginning to deal with the beast power.

The sixth seal is simply God saying, 'Let Me have your attention, please!' Only He says it very dramatically. He is going to get the world's attention. I want to tell you what—an earthquake has a way of getting people's attention. A hurricane can get your attention. I've been in hurricanes and I've been in earthquakes. The advantage of a hurricane is that at least you know it's coming. If you want, you can try to do something, either by taking refuge or leaving and getting away. An earthquake just comes. You don't know it's coming until it's here and there isn't any place you can go because the most solid permanent thing you know of is shaking and quivering like a bowl of Jell-O right under your feet.

If you go up in an airplane and there's a lot of turbulence, you say, 'If I ever get my feet on solid ground again, you're not going to get me back up here.’ I’ve known of people who have been talked into going on a deep-sea fishing trip. They got out there and, boy, it (rough sea) was going. They were saying, ‘If I ever get off this boat and get my feet on solid ground again, you’re not going to get me back out here.’ We think if we are in the air and it’s turbulent or if we’re on the water and it’s turbulent, well, if we can just get onto solid ground, we’re okay. But when you are on solid ground and it’s not solid—it begins to quiver and shake like a bowl of Jell-O—where are you going to go and what are you going to do? The only things you can do is stand there and pray that it doesn’t get bad enough to bring down whatever you’re in on top of you. It’s just a matter of intensity.

Science can’t tell you how intense it’s going to get. They can’t tell you when it’s going to come. Interestingly enough, certain animals are the best predictors—horses in particular. They can sense it a day or so before. We think we are so smart. Our instruments can’t pick up what animals sometimes can pick up. God’s designed a few things in, and we still haven’t figured out all of it.

The point is that God is getting ready to step into history and He does so in a dramatic way. Earthquakes begin to shake; there are tremendous meteor showers and inexplicable signs in the heavens like a total eclipse. Incredible things are occurring and it’s frightening. God is getting ready to intervene. That is the sixth seal. It sets the stage for the seventh seal.

I will call to your attention that you may want to go back and read Ezekiel 1 (the vision that Ezekiel saw) and compare it with Revelation 4. Ezekiel saw a miraculous appearance. God appeared in a certain conveyance—a way that He at times chose to transport Himself through the universe. It describes this. Some will say Ezekiel saw the first UFO. It’s not a UFO. “UFO” means “unidentified flying object.” What Ezekiel saw is clearly identified. It’s the throne of God. It was an IFO, an identified flying object. There isn’t any question as to what Ezekiel saw because he explains and interprets it. There’s an awful lot packed into the book of Revelation. We’ve only just sort of skimmed the surface of it.

Next Bible study we will have a chance to go through chapters 7, 8, 9 and 10 as we progress a little further.

Book of Revelation Series—Revelation 7—10

As we continue along, we will go right into the book of Revelation this evening. We are getting into Revelation 7, 8, 9 and 10 this evening.

There are several things to understand in terms of a basic outline of the book of Revelation and what is involved. Chapter 6 gives us an outline of the first six seals of the book of Revelation. Then in chapter 8 we get into the seventh seal. There are seven seals to the book of Revelation that seals the whole book. Coming down you have seven seals and then the seventh seal is comprised of seven trumpets. When the seventh seal is opened, seven trumpets begin to blow successively through that period of time. And then the seventh trumpet consists of seven last plagues. We have that outline as we go through. You have the seven seals; the seventh seal is seven trumpets and the seventh trumpet is seven last plagues. I am going to touch on some of these things in more depth on the Feast of Trumpets. I will comment more on other things here this evening.

I want to give you a little bit of a background. There are a couple of things to understand in regard to this. The first six seals are all listed in Revelation 6. That's a good way to remember them, by the way. Where are the first six seals? Well, Revelation 6. The six seals go through: 1) the false prophets, 2) wars and rumors of war, 3) famines, 4) disease epidemics, 5) the Great Tribulation and 6) a great earthquake and heavenly signs.

The heavenly signs set the stage for the Day of the Lord; the seventh seal is the Day of the Lord. The Day of the Lord is comprised of the seven trumpets. The trumpet plagues that are dispersed from them begin in Revelation 8.

The Great Tribulation is the fifth seal. From that we understand that the first four seals are all opened prior to the beginning of the Tribulation. The Great Tribulation, we are told, consists of the last three and one-half years prior to the return of Christ. It's defined in Scripture as time, times and a half time or one thousand two hundred sixty days or three and one-half years. It's the time that God's Church is to be protected in a place of safety. That's in Revelation 12, which we will get into next Bible study. This is our last Bible study until after the Feast.

There is a distinction that needs to be understood between the Tribulation and the Day of the Lord. The Tribulation, the fifth seal, is Satan's wrath. Satan's wrath is poured out in two directions: it's poured out against God's people nationally and against God's people spiritually (God's true Church). God's people nationally are, of course, not only the Jews, but also the modern descendants of the so-called "lost ten tribes."

Approximately one-third of the Bible consists of prophecy. The most important key to unlocking and understanding Bible prophecy is the identity of Israel because if you don't know who and where Israel is, then you are in a fog. When you read prophecy in the Old Testament, you don't know who it's talking about. That is an important key. It is a doubly important key when you understand the responsibility of warning Israel that is outlined in the book of Ezekiel—the message of the watchman and all these things. It represents an important key to understanding Bible prophecy.

In Jeremiah 30:7, we are told of the Tribulation, "Alas! For that day is great, so that none is like it; and it is the time of Jacob's [Israel's] trouble, but he shall be saved out of it." That's why I say that the Tribulation is the wrath against physical Israel—the United States and British Commonwealth nations, in particular. It's the time of Jacob's trouble. We are told in Jeremiah, "...that day is great, so that none is like it..." Now, you can't have two times that are "great, so that nothing is like it." If something else is like it, then it doesn't stand out as unique. This is a unique period. It is a time of great trial and great tribulation. No time is comparable to it.

When you go to the book of Matthew 24, it talks about the time of the Great Tribulation.

Matthew 24:21, "For then there will be great tribulation, such as has not been since the beginning of the world until this time, no, nor ever shall be." Here's a unique period of time called the Great Tribulation. It surpasses every other time of adversity that has ever been known up until that time.

In Jeremiah 30:7, we are told, "...it is the time of Jacob's trouble..." No day is like it. So, we are talking about the same thing—the Great Tribulation.

In Revelation 12, we find that the Church is taken to a place of protection, a place of safety. Satan goes to make war with that portion of the Church left behind—the Laodiceans era. It is wrath directed at physical Israel and at spiritual Israel. The prophecies of the Old Testament particularly relate to the national aspect of it.

This period of Tribulation—this time of intense pressure, adversity and all of the calamities that are associated with it—includes invasions, captivity and all the things that are prophesied in the books of Ezekiel, Isaiah and Jeremiah, as well as in the Minor Prophets. It includes all of these things. This is Satan's wrath.

What it amount to is that God removes His protection. It's not God's wrath, but God removes His protection. You know if we don't value what God gives us, God may say, 'You want to do it your way; go ahead and see how well you handle it.' Nationally, we have not really appreciated and valued God's blessing and God's protection.

The Laodiceans are not really stirred up and excited about the work of God. They don't have the burning zeal to really do the work that the Philadelphians are pictured as having. Rather, they are described in Revelation 3 as having sort of a compromising, lukewarm, little bit of a watered-down attitude. They don't have that zeal. That's what they are told they are lacking.

In Ezekiel 3 and 33, it talks about the watchman. The watchman is to go and deliver the message and be a watchman for the house of Israel. The watchman has the zeal to do the work to proclaim the message of God, to give the warning and the witness message that God has given. Philadelphians have the real zeal to go forth and to do that. In the book of Ezekiel (Ezekiel 9:4), it talks about those who sigh and cry for the abominations of Israel, those who are really bothered by what's going on. That zeal is there. That's one of the great contrasts.

We come down. The fifth seal is opened in Revelation 6. Then there comes a point where God steps in. The sixth seal—the heavenly signs and earthquake—is the beginning of God's intervention. These other events have been going on now for a period of time. The sixth seal sets the stage.

Revelation 6:17, "For the great day of His wrath has come, and who is able to stand?" The seventh seal is the Day of the Lord; the Day of the Lord is the day of God's wrath. God gets ready to pour out His wrath, especially directed at the world that is under the full sway of Satan.

We note that Revelation 7 is an inset. If you are following the story flow, you come down through the sixth seal in Revelation 6. Then in Revelation 8:1 the seventh seal is opened. That is the sequence. Chapter 7 is a break into the sequence.

It seems very likely that what is termed "Day of the Lord" probably refers to the last year prior to Christ's return. We know that many times a day is used for a year in Bible prophecy. I am going to prove to you in a few moments that there are a number of months that are involved in this. There's a specific period of five months that's mentioned in the context of one of the trumpet plagues. When you look at the severity of them, it's unlikely that we could be looking at any sort of an extended period of time.

The Tribulation begins with the cessation of the sacrifices in Jerusalem. And, of course, they haven't started yet. They will start and they will be stopped. It doesn't say how long they will continue between the time they are initiated and the time they are stopped. But when they are stopped, we are told in the book of Daniel and other places that it will be the beginning of a period of one thousand two hundred ninety days. That is one month more than the one thousand two hundred sixty days that the Church is to be protected in a place of safety. So, we are looking at the onset of these things about three and one-half years before Christ returns. They continue on along for a two-and-one-half year period and the beast power is doing these things. But part way through the Tribulation (about two-thirds of the way through), God begins to step in. God begins to intervene. The heavenly signs are when He gets people's attention.

Then in chapter 7, He does something. Let's notice.

Revelation 7:1-3, "After these things I saw four angels standing at the four corners of the earth, holding the four winds of the earth... Then I saw another angel ascending from the east, having the seal of the living God. And he cried out with a loud voice to the four angels to whom it was granted to harm the earth and the sea, saying, 'Do not harm the earth, the sea, or the trees till we have sealed the servants of our God on their foreheads.'" The events of the Day of the Lord are held up for the completion of the sealing of the servants of God.

Now, how are they sealed? What does that mean? With what are they sealed? If you get a legal document, what does a seal do? A seal authenticates genuineness. Sometimes you have to get a legal document notarized. The notary affixes his seal. The seal authenticates genuineness. That's the purpose of a seal. The seal that God places on His servants authenticates that they are the genuine thing.

Ephesians 1:13-14, "In Him you also trusted, after you heard the word of truth, the gospel of your salvation; in whom also, having believed, you were sealed with the Holy Spirit of promise, which is the guarantee [KJV, “earnest”] of our inheritance until the redemption of the purchased possession, to the praise of His glory.”

We are sealed with the Holy Spirit of promise. God’s Spirit seals us. It authenticates us as the genuine article. It’s the earnest of our inheritance. You know what “earnest” is? If you have ever purchased a house, you frequently put down what’s called “earnest money.” That is a proof that you are going to come back. They, at that point, take the house off the market. You give them a certain portion; that’s earnest money. That means you are going to be back and fulfill the terms of the contract. You are going to come back at a designated time and complete the verbal agreement made with them. You are going to pay in full. You are going to finish what you have promised. This is the proof that you are going to come back and follow through with that promise.

When God gives us His Spirit at baptism, it is the earnest of our inheritance. You haven’t received the inheritance yet. When we’re baptized, we don’t suddenly become immortal to where we never die. You have the Spirit of God residing in you. In that sense, you have eternal life in you, but you have to endure to the end in order to be saved. That Spirit is the authentication of our genuineness. It is the earnest of our inheritance. We are told that we are sealed with that Holy Spirit of promise. God’s Spirit seals us as the real thing. It is the evidence that God is going to ultimately finish what He has started in us. When God gives you His Spirit, He starts a process.

In Job 14:15, Job tells us, “...You shall desire the work of Your hands.” Job understood that God was going to have a desire to finish what He had started in you. There are other scriptures in the New Testament that talk about God bringing to completion the work that He has started in our lives (Philippians 1:6).

Revelation 7:4, “And I heard the number of those who were sealed. One hundred and forty-four thousand of all the tribes of the children of Israel were sealed.”

This sealing of the one hundred forty-four thousand—the Holy Spirit is what seals God’s people.

We read an analogy that is given in Ezekiel 9 of the writer’s inkhorn.

Ezekiel 9:4-5, “and the Lord said to him, ‘Go through the midst of the city, through the midst of Jerusalem, and put a mark on the foreheads of the men who sigh and cry over all the abominations that are done within it.’ To the others He said in my hearing, ‘Go after him through the city and kill; do not let your eye spare, or have any pity.’” Everyone is going to be subject to this.

Verse 6, “...but do not come near anyone on whom is the mark; and begin at My sanctuary...” They begin right there. It talks about being set aside. It talks about God’s people being sealed in that way.

One thing to understand is the fact that the greatest harvest of our work is yet in the future. There are people who have listened to the broadcast and read the magazines or booklets for years. They have heard all these things and somehow it doesn’t seem that important. They have either filed it away or said, ‘that may happen some day; it doesn’t really pertain to me’ or whatever they have done. But I am going to tell you what; when these events begin to happen (some of them have begun to happen) and when the reality of the Tribulation is here, it’s going to be a little late to be arguing about some of these things that maybe some have argued about.

When the events that are prophesied really begin to fully come about, you’re going to have people who are going to come to repentance during that period of Tribulation. Some of them are going to be martyred and others are going to survive through it. But there are going to be individuals who really begin to repent and their whole attitude changes. Instead of wanting to strive, argue about “the way I see it” and all this sort of thing, that is not going to be their attitude. When the troops are marching down the streets, it’s going to be a little late to argue about the Greek and the Hebrew. The Tribulation is going to be here. Individuals who have sort of played around with the truth, in many cases, are going to wake up at that point because the reality is going to be there.

Revelation 7:3, we find that they are told to wait, hold up, until we seal the servants of our God. There is a sealing that is completed. If you check this, it doesn’t necessarily have to mean that none of the one hundred forty-four thousand have been sealed prior to this time. There are two different ways of reading the term for “seal.” Either the whole one hundred forty-four thousand are sealed at this point or the final group that comprise the one hundred forty-four thousand (those that bring it up to the full contingent) are sealed at that time. In other words, this sealing marks the completion of sealing those who will comprise the one hundred forty-four thousand. I think the clearest understanding of it is that the last of those who will be a part of that group will be sealed at this time.

God has selected this number for certain reasons. There are twelve thousand who are assigned for each one of the tribes of Israel. You have this assignment that goes on down (Revelation 7: 5-8). Twelve is the number of organized beginnings. Twelve is an organizational number that is used throughout Scripture, so here is something that is going to play an important part in God's government.

Revelation 7:9, "After these things I looked, and behold, a great multitude which no one could number..." When you say, 'no man could number,' what does that mean? Does that mean nobody can count that high? Well, no. You can count up into the millions and billions. We've been able to number the people of the United States in terms of population. When it says, "a great multitude which no one can number," it is simply talking about a large crowd of undetermined or undefined number that no man could number, in the sense that no man was permitted to number. No man was allowed to number it. It was a large crowd. God has a specific designation, this one hundred forty-four thousand. But, in addition, there is a multitude (a large crowd or group) that comes out.

Continuing v. 9, "...of all nations and tribes and peoples and tongues, standing before the throne and before the Lamb, clothed with white robes..." We see them here as well.

Verse 11, we see the angels here, "And all the angels stood around the throne and the elders and the four living creatures, and fell on their faces before the throne and worshiped God."

Verse 13, "Then one of the elders answered, saying to me, 'Who are these arrayed in white robes, and where did they come from?'"

John says, 'Well, I'm not sure. I'm sure you know.'

Verse 14, "And I said to him, 'Sir, you know.' So he said to me, 'These are the ones who come out of the great tribulation, and washed their robes and made them white in the blood of the Lamb.'"

We find a number of people who are defined as having repented during the Tribulation—in many cases, having been martyred. The great harvest of this work is yet future. The time setting on this is important.

Many years ago in the early part of this century, the Jehovah's Witnesses have locked in on the one hundred forty-four thousand in this verse and decided they were the one hundred forty-four thousand, which presented a problem to them when their membership got larger than one hundred forty-four thousand. I think there are over a million of them now. So, they obviously can't all be the one hundred forty-four thousand. The sealing did not take place in 1914 or 1918. The sealing that is described here is to take place in the future. The heavenly signs have not occurred yet. The Tribulation has not occurred yet. We are looking at an event that is yet future, an event that will occur.

The reason this is set apart is that God, at this point, is getting ready to pour out His wrath on unrepentant mankind. God will protect those who have really learned their lesson and come to repentance through the Tribulation. God will protect them from His wrath that is poured out. The Philadelphian Church is in a place of protection, geographically, where they have been protected through the Tribulation, which is continuing. Now, God is getting ready to step in and pour out His wrath. God is going to protect those who have really learned their lesson and come to deep repentance from the consequences of what He is going to pour out.

Revelation 8:1-4, "When He opened the seventh seal, and there was silence in heaven for about half an hour. And I saw the seven angels who stand before God, and to them were given seven trumpets. Then another angel, having a golden censer, came and stood at the altar. And he was given much incense, that he should offer it with the prayers of all the saints upon the golden altar which was before the throne. And the smoke of the incense, with the prayers of the saints, ascended before God from the angel's hand." – God's people praying to Him.

Incense was used in the tabernacle. The smoke of the incense is symbolic of the prayers of the saints ascending. We symbolically have pictured the prayers of God's people for God's intervention, deliverance and judgment all the way down through the centuries. Up until this point, God has not stepped in and answered those prayers. Collectively, those prayers are preserved. Now they are offered up. It's now time. It's time for those prayers to be answered.

Verse 5, "Then the angel took the censer, filled it with fire from the altar, and threw it to the earth. And there were noises, thunderings, lightnings, and an earthquake." Pretty impressive!

Verses 6-7, "So the seven angels who had the seven trumpets prepared themselves to sound. The first angel sounded: And hail and fire followed, mingled with blood....” Here is a lightning storm. You talk about a thunderstorm! I suspect all of us have been in thunderstorms and perhaps had some hail. It can be pretty intimidating. Lightning flashing and hail falling can be pretty frightening. There’s never been a storm like this. When God gets ready to unleash the weather, you talk about showing man how puny he is. Oh, we can do so much. Look how great we are. Yeah, just one little “blow” (hurricane) came through here. It just rattled, shook and shivered things every which way. And that was nothing by comparison.

Verse 7, it talks about, “... a third part of the trees were burned up, and all green grass was burned up.” Lightning triggers forest fires. Can you imagine this kind of storm that is occurring worldwide and fires breaking out everywhere? You wind up with a third of the vegetation destroyed. There is tremendous hail coming down. There is lightning and thunder. That would be just about the most frightening thing people have been able to imagine up until then. But they haven’t seen anything yet. That’s only the first trumpet.

One of the things that has to happen is (go back to the plagues of Egypt) God has to humble haughty man.

In Isaiah 66:2, God says, “...But on this one will I look: on him who is poor and of a contrite spirit, and who trembles at My word.” – Somebody who has that spirit of humility and walking with God, rather than filled up with pride and thinking how great we are and what we can do.

Revelation 8:8, “Then the second angel sounded: And something like a great mountain burning with fire was thrown into the sea, and a third of the sea became blood.” This could refer to a giant meteor or asteroid that hits the earth. Where it describes a mountain burning with fire, that is perhaps some sort of gigantic volcanic activity.

The result is in v. 9, “and a third of the living creatures in the sea died, and a third of the ships were destroyed.” Here is something horribly disruptive to the oceans. Can you imagine the horrible stinking mess you wind up with when a third of the sea life is destroyed?

Anybody who lived on the Atchafalaya River in Louisiana got a little bit of a taste of that with all the destruction of fish following the hurricane and the stench and smell out there. All these fish stinking will almost be enough to be a plague in itself. One dead fish can smell pretty bad; here’s a whole bunch of them.

This is followed by vv. 10-11, “Then the third angel sounded: And a great star fell from heaven, burning like a torch, and it fell on a third of the rivers and on the springs of water; and the name of the star is Wormwood; and a third of the waters became wormwood; and many men died from the water, because it was made bitter.” We are looking at a poisoning effect that this has on the ground water and on the fresh water. A large part of this becomes undrinkable. Many people die.

Verse 12, “Then the fourth angel sounded: And a third of the sun was struck, a third of the moon, and a third of the stars, so that a third of them were darkened; and a third of the day did not shine, and likewise the night.” This is some sort of disruption in the earth’s orbit—a tilt on the axis to where there is a disruption of the cycle. Everything that gives any sort of normalcy and stability is disrupted.

Verse 13, “And I looked, and I heard an angel flying through the midst of heaven, saying with a loud voice, ‘Woe, woe, woe to the inhabitants of the earth, because of the remaining blasts of the trumpet of the three angels who are about to sound.’” The next three trumpets are called the three woes. The first four are the easy ones. We hadn’t even gotten to the three woes yet. If what has already happened isn’t bad enough to be called a woe, you certainly don’t want to be around for these.

Revelation 9:1, “Then the fifth angel sounded: And I saw a star fallen from heaven to the earth. And to him was given the key to the bottomless pit [shaft of the abyss].” “Star” is often used as symbolic of an angel. When “star” is mentioned in the earlier chapters, it could very well be referring to an angel or perhaps also a meteor or an asteroid.

Verses 2-3, “And he opened the bottomless pit, and smoke arose out of the pit like the smoke of a great furnace. And the sun and the air were darkened because of the smoke of the pit. Then out of the smoke locusts came upon the earth. And to them was given power, as the scorpions of the earth have power.” Here, it refers to power being given to unleash something.

John describes what he sees. This is one of the keys to understanding some of the symbolism. John is describing what he sees in the language of his day. When he describes this war-making power, he describes it as looking like a horde of locusts, yet not really locusts but sort of like that. He could be describing big attack helicopters. Can you imagine? What would that look like to John. The sky becoming dark with these big military attack helicopters. What would that look like to him? It would sort of look like a swarm of locusts or some sort of thing that comes through. Exactly what it was is not entirely possible to know. You find it described here as something rising up out of this great abyss. Later on we find the beast is pictured as ascending out of this great abyss, this bottomless pit (Revelation 17:8). We are looking at something that is pertaining to the beast power that is swallowed up. We are looking at something that comes up out of this great abyss, a great war-making power that comes upon the earth.

Verse 4 describes some sort of futuristic weapon. Revelation 9:4, “They were commanded not to harm the grass of the earth, or any green thing or any tree, but only those men who do not have the seal of God in their foreheads.”

Verse 5, “And they were not given authority to kill them, but to torment them for five months. And their torment was like the torment of a scorpion when it strikes a man.”

Here is some sort of a bomb. There was a lot of work that was done on what is called the neutron bomb, which was supposed to kill people and not destroy buildings. This has always been one of the things that people like to come up with—how to wipe out the enemy without wiping out everything the enemy has. So, this is some sort of a weapon that they come up with.

In this case, it’s not exactly a neutron bomb. It doesn’t kill people. Perhaps it has something in it that affects the central nervous system or some sort of thing that creates some sort of pain and torment yet doesn’t necessarily result in death. It’s not destructive to plants, buildings and things of that sort. It only affects human life. God is going to protect those whom He has set apart.

It describes this torment. It describes it like the torment of a scorpion. If you have ever been stung by something like that, you realize how painful something of that sort can be. This is something that causes some sort of an allergic reaction that hangs on and on but does not necessarily end in death. In fact, people are going to be so miserable they are going to seek death and not find it (v. 6). Things they thought were going to deliver them are not going to deliver them. They are not going to come up with a vaccine that’s going to solve this problem. They are not going to run down and get something prescribed that is going to solve this.

Just like in Egypt. What in effect has to happen—just like the plagues of Egypt—people have to recognize that everything in which they have placed their trust and confidence in to deliver them, can’t. The gods of Egypt are not gods. God executed vengeance against all the gods of Egypt. The ten plagues that came on Egypt executed judgment against the gods of Egypt. It showed that the gods of Egypt were not gods. They could not deliver the people who placed their trust and confidence in them.

John describes what these weapons look like. He talks about them looking like locusts.

Verse 10, “They had tails like scorpions, and there were stings in their tails...” This would indicate weapons that are fired out from the rear or from the bottom. What would it look like to John to see some sort of wave after wave of attack jets, attack helicopters or something like that coming over?

The real instigator is in v. 11, “And they had as king over them the angel of the bottomless pit, whose name in Hebrew is Abaddon, but in Greek he has the name Apollyon.” —Which means “destroyer.”

Verses 12-16, “One woe is past. Behold, still two more woes are coming after these things. Then the sixth angel sounded: And I heard a voice from the four horns of the golden altar, which is before God, saying to the sixth angel who had the trumpet, ‘Release the four angels who are bound at the great River Euphrates.’ So the four angels, who had been prepared for the hour and day and month and year, were released to kill a third of mankind. Now the number of the army of the horsemen was two hundred million, and I heard the number of them.”

Here was a great army that consisted of two hundred million.

Verses 18-19, “By these three plagues a third of mankind was killed—by the fire and the smoke and the brimstone which came out of their mouths. For their power is in their mouth and in their tails; for their tails are like serpents, having heads; and with them they do harm.”

This is a pretty good description of a nuclear attack—fire, smoke and brimstone that issued out. It describes that their power is in their mouths and in their tails. So, it comes out both the front and the back. What you have described here is something that’s not quite as high tech, but it’s pretty efficient. Not quite the high technology of the fifth trumpet. What you have described here is an insanity that breaks loose that would result in total destruction and annihilation of the human race if God did not step in to stop it. Really a loss of sanity because the fifth trumpet (vv. 1-12), this great military machine that arises up out of the beast power, is described as something coming up out of this great industrial complex. This is the military power of the beast. Against whom is it directed? Well, it is directed at those who counter-attack them in the last part of the chapter (vv. 13-21)—the sixth trumpet.

Let's notice. Just hold your place and go back to Daniel 11.

Daniel 11:40, ““At the time of the end the king of the South shall attack him: and the king of the North shall come against him....” The king of the South is referring to the area south of Jerusalem, the Arab-Islamic combine centered there. The king of the North is the area north of Jerusalem, referring specifically to the beast power. Europe is going to come in with an invasion. They are going to invade the Middle East and take possession of this whole vital area (vv. 40-41). This marks the onset of the Tribulation—this period of Tribulation against the people of God spiritually (the Church) and God's people nationally (physical Israel). This is going to go on. The whole world is going to be tied up, dominated and acquiescing to this. But there's going to be trouble and rumblings.

Verse 44, we are told, ““But news from the east and the north shall trouble him; therefore he shall go out with great fury to destroy and annihilate many.””

As time continues into the Tribulation, the beast power is going to be more and more convinced that there is trouble and resistance in the East. There are problems and rumblings in nations like China, India and what used to be Soviet Central Asia. They are not satisfied with the status quo and with the place they have in the new world order that is going to come about. There is a lack of trust.

The beast power comes up with this technology. They think launching this pre-emptive blitzkrieg-type of an attack will resolve their problems. They launch it, all right, and it is tremendously devastating and destructive. But there is a counter-attack. The only place you can put together an army of two hundred million is from places like China, India and that area. This vast invasion army has prepared a nuclear attack. An all-out nuclear attack is launched against Europe.

Very likely this is the timing of the destruction of Rome that you read of in Revelation 18. This takes place perhaps just days or a week or two prior to the very end—just right down to the wire—as the sixth angel sounds (Revelation 9:13) and this nuclear attack is launched that is destructive to the beast power. When this is launched, a third of the people die as a consequence of this attack (Revelation 9:18). They don't have quite the sophisticated technology.

Revelation 9:19-21, ““For their power is in their mouth and in their tails; for their tails are like serpents, having heads; and with them they do harm. But the rest of mankind, who were not killed by these plagues, did not repent of the works of their hands, that they should not worship demons, and idols of gold, silver, brass, stone, and wood, which can neither see nor hear nor walk; and they did not repent of their murders or their sorceries or their sexual immorality or their thefts.”

What is the idolatry God is talking about? – Materialism, violence and sorceries. Interestingly enough, the word “sorcery” in the Greek language is “pharmakon” or “pharmakeia.” It could very easily refer to drugs and the drug problems that are so prevalent—the drug pushers and all of the things connected with that. That's the sense. We even get our modern word “pharmacy” from “pharmakeia.” The term referred to various potions, poisons and things that were mixed up, various concoctions that certainly included many of the things that are commonly abused drugs of today. That may very well be a reference to that sort of thing. Certainly it is one of our major social problems. Violence, drug dealings, immorality, theft—a pretty good rundown of major social problems we encounter.

We see these trumpets blown and God's hand removed.

Verses 13-14, ““Then the sixth angel sounded: And I heard a voice from the four horns of the golden altar which is before God, saying to the sixth angel who had the trumpet, ‘Release the four angels who are bound at the great River Euphrates.’”

Euphrates is evidently going to be sort of a dividing line in terms of a sphere of influence with what are called the kings of the East and the beast power. This is going to result in an armed invasion of the Middle East. The beast and the false prophet have their headquarters in Jerusalem. For this period of time, they have made Jerusalem the place from which they are seeking to direct the new world order they are establishing. We will get to that in a moment.

But this matter of the Euphrates—the Euphrates River right now is in the nation of Iraq, close to the border with Iran. It is close to the Iran-Iraq border. Based on this prophecy, we have speculated as to whether or not there may literally be a dismemberment of Iraq. It's sort of interesting. The area where the Shites are, in southern Iraq, is the area to the east of the Euphrates River and they, of course, are tied in with the Iranians, in the sense that they are sort of allied with them. It's very possible that Iraq may become dismembered at this point in time or a little later on when the beast power invades the Middle East and they simply choose not to go beyond the river Euphrates.

Anciently, the Euphrates River was the line of demarcation between the Roman Empire and the Partheon Empire. The Partheon Empire stretched through Iran and into India, and then the Roman Empire stretched from the Euphrates to the west on through Western Europe. That was sort of the line of demarcation between East and West and in many ways still serves that point.

There have been demon spirits that been restrained and have not been allowed to progress beyond that point. Satan and his demons can go no further than what God allows. One of the reasons they don't do worse than what they have done is because of restraints that God places. In the book of Job, you find that Satan can't go beyond what God permits him to do. When God removes restraints, there are things that happen. At the appropriate time, God removes certain restraints. He simply takes hands off and allows these things.

Now we have an inset. Chapters 10, 11, 12, 13 and 14 all provide an inset into the story flow.

We don't come to the seven last plagues until we get to chapters 15 and 16. The purpose of an inset is to go back and pick up some threads of the story and bring them down to this point. Here, we are down to the point just before Christ returns because, after all, the seventh trump is the last trump, isn't it? When are we going to be changed from mortal to immortal?

I Corinthians 15:52, "In a moment, in the twinkling of an eye, at the last trumpet. For the trumpet will sound, and the dead will be raised incorruptible, and we shall be changed."

We are not at the last trump yet. We are just prior to it. Now, we are going to go back and pick up details of the earlier story and bring them down.

Revelation 10:1-4, "And I saw still another mighty angel coming down from heaven, clothed with a cloud. And a rainbow was on his head; his face was like the sun, and his feet like pillars of fire. And he had a little book open in his hand. And he set his right foot on the sea and his left foot on the land, and cried with a loud voice, as when a lion roars. And when he cried out, seven thunders uttered their voices. Now when the seven thunders uttered their voices, I was about to write; but I heard a voice from heaven saying to me, 'Seal up the things which the seven thunders uttered, and do not write them.'" That was not something that needed to be written.

Verses 5-6, "Then the angel whom I saw standing on the sea and on the land lifted up his hand to heaven and swore by Him who lives forever and ever, who created heaven and the things that are in it, the earth and the things that are in it, and the sea and the things that are in it, that there should be delay no longer." Or as one translation renders it, "no further delay." There would no longer be a lengthening of time.

But rather, v. 7, "but in the days of the sounding of the seventh angel, when he is about to sound, the mystery of God would be finished, as He declared to His servants the prophets." We are coming down to a point where there should be no further delay.

As we come down, chapter 11 follows right on the heels of chapter 10. When the seven thunders had finished, it is at this point that John is told that the time is now come for God to begin to step in. Here we are picking up an earlier sequence. We are picking up the seven thunders uttered earlier.

What do the seven thunders have reference to?

The most likely explanation that I have ever heard of this is one that I discussed with an evangelist in the Church a number of years ago. Down through the centuries the Church of God has thundered God's message. The message that God delivered through them has been thundered to the world. You know, some thunder is near, close, loud and overwhelming. Other thunder has a faint distant roll. It's thunder, but it is a roll of thunder that is faint in the distance. Some is closer and has great power. The point is that down through the centuries, each of the seven Churches has thundered God's message. Some have been a faint distant echo; others have been a powerful blast. At the time when the messages of all the seven Churches have been delivered, it is at that point that there's no longer a reason to wait any longer. Rather, it is time for God to step in. It is the culmination when the seventh angel sounds. Everything will come to a climax.

Revelation 10:11, John is told, "And he said to me, 'You must prophecy again about many peoples, nations, tongues, and kings.'"

It continues on. There isn't really a break in the sequence.

Revelation 11:1, "Then I was given a reed like a measuring rod. And the angel stood, saying, ‘Rise and measure the temple of God, the altar, and those who worship there.’”

Verses 3-4, “‘And I will give power to my two witnesses...These are the two olive trees and the two lampstands standing before the God of the earth.’” The two olive trees are symbolic of the two witnesses.

Verses 14-15, as we come on down, “The second woe is past. Behold, the third woe is coming quickly. Then the seventh angel sounded....” We pick up the story flow again in Revelation 11:14. Chapters 10 and 11 provide an inset. They go back and pick up the story, bringing us down through the role of the Church in the end time. We are not going into chapter 11 very much this evening. That deals with the work of the two witnesses.

Each of the seven Churches has its job to do. Some do their job powerfully; others do their job faintly. Christ is going to be more pleased with the job some have done than others. There is a job that each of the seven Churches have to do, based on the circumstances of their time and age, the opportunity set before them and the zeal that they have to pursue those opportunities. The time is going to come when the thunder will cease and God begins to fulfill these things that will take place. One interesting thing John is told is that he is given a book and told to take it and eat it (vv. 8-9).

Revelation 10:10, “‘And I took the little book out of the angel’s hand and ate it, and it was as sweet as honey in my mouth. But when I had eaten it, my stomach became bitter.’” It was sweet and it was tasty, but when he had eaten and digested it, it became bitter.

In many ways that’s the way prophecy is. It can be tasty. It can be interesting. It can be sort of like eating desert. It can be sort of the desert at Bible study when you get interested in these things—and that’s fine. A third of the Bible is prophecy, so prophecy is important. But two-thirds of the Bible isn’t prophecy. Those two-thirds are pretty important, too.

All the prophecy in the world won’t do you any good if you are not living a Christian life and doing what you should do—keeping the commandments, seeking to serve God and really walking with Him. Prophecy is given to encourage the people of God. It is given to warn specific nations and specific groups of what God’s judgment will be if they don’t repent. It is given as a proof of God. God is the One who can declare the end from the beginning (Isaiah 46:10). Prophecy is given to stir up and motivate the people of God. It helps us to perceive where we stand in the overall scheme of things of the plan of God. It is able to stir up and inspire us to do the things we need to do and give us hope and encouragement with respect to the future.

It can be tasty when you eat it. But when you really digest it, when you really grasp what it is talking about, some of these things are horrible. They really, really are. That’s the way it was with John. It was tasty to eat, but then as he digested it, it was bitter. So, many things are going to happen and it will get so bad before they get better. It’s like the world has to hit bottom before it can begin to surrender and recover. Until people are brought to the point that they’re prepared to really surrender unconditionally and turn their life and their will over to the care of God, there’s not going to be a whole lot that can be done. There has to be a consequence, so there are things that are going to take place.

We see these things are outlined. As we come down, we have the trumpet plagues. The trumpet begins to sound. Evidently, this final year—this Day of the Lord—signals God’s intervention. It starts out with tremendous cataclysmic storms—thunderstorms, hail storms, fires break out worldwide, terrific devastation of the environment, of grasslands and trees and tremendous fires. It’s followed by destructiveness that occurs to the oceans and seas. Sea traffic is disrupted, sea life is destroyed and a third of the ocean waters become like blood. Very swiftly on the heels of that, a third of the freshwater becomes poisonous and there are tremendous problems in that regard. There is tremendous death that takes place as a result. This is followed by the fourth trumpet blast which sees these great upset astronomical conditions that are just totally disruptive, followed by what then are called the three woes (Revelation 8:7-13).

The first of those results in the military machine that ascended up out of the abyss—the beast system—launching an all-out attack on Asia with high-tech sophisticated weapons, attempting to quell it before anything gets out of hand (Revelation 9:1-12). You see, the point is that they never really trust one another. This is going to result in a great counter attack. A gigantic army is mobilized and counters an attack. A nuclear attack devastates Europe and sets the stage for the final gathering of armies. When the seventh trumpet blows, the armies that are converged in the area of Armageddon advance toward Jerusalem to be destroyed because as those armies come in, Christ returns and the seven last plagues are poured out in that final day—the day that Christ returns. These armies temporarily throw aside their disagreement with one another to seek to repel what, for them, is going to look like an invasion from outer space. That's going to be stopped in a moment.

We come down through these trumpets. We see this inset that shows the work of God down through time. There are events that are going to occur in the end time. There is a measuring of the temple or the Church (Revelation 11:1).

Mr. Herbert Armstrong felt that chapter 11:1, at least partially, had analogy to God's Church, in effect, to measuring up. It talks about measuring those that worship therein.

The temple can be used to refer to a literal temple (to a building); it can be used metaphorically to refer to the Church collectively. Even our bodies are called the temple of the Holy Spirit (I Corinthians 6:19).

Many times, several examples or analogies are used to refer to the same thing. In some cases, the same analogy or example is used to refer to two or three different things. The point of an example, analogy or figure of speech is to help illustrate a spiritual truth. It is to help physical people grasp something that is on the spiritual level by comparing it to something that is on the physical level.

That is why God's Church can be collectively compared to a temple. The temple was built as the dwelling place of God. The Church is pictured as collectively being a holy temple of the Lord—the spiritual temple.

In I Peter 2:5-6, Christians are compared to being living stones—like component parts. Jesus Christ is the chief cornerstone. This is one example, one analogy. The term “temple” is also used to refer to individual Christians.

I Corinthians 6:19, “Or do you not know that your body is the temple of the Holy Spirit....”

The same analogies apply to something a little differently. The Church is compared to the bride of Christ. We will marry Christ. Paul uses that analogy in Ephesians 5.

The whole point is that he's not saying the Church has changed into a literal building or the Church has changed into a woman. It's to illustrate an aspect of spiritual truth. It's to give us something physical that we can relate to, so that we have a concept of what it is God is describing that illustrates at least one aspect of what God is doing.

Mr. Herbert Armstrong felt that Revelation 11 was generally a reference to the Church at the end time—let's say a measuring that was going to be applied. I'm sure we may not understand every detail of certain prophecies until we have arrived at the juncture in history where it's necessary for us to understand. It isn't necessary for us to understand everything in total detail right now. We have sort of a broad outline of understanding, and the closer we get to that juncture of history, the clearer some of the things will be.

We have a little bit of an overview, coming down through chapter 10.

Chapter 11, as I mentioned, gets to the two witnesses, which we will comment on briefly next time. We will comment on their work. They will be the ones primarily doing the work of God during the Tribulation when the Philadelphian Church is in a place of protection. The Laodiceans certainly have to witness in a personal way with their lives, as they have to come to grips with their lack of taking God's way seriously, and their attempt to sort of have a foot in the world and a foot in the Church. They are going to have to get both feet in the same place.

Those events are yet to come. God will use these two individuals, these two witnesses. They are described as His representatives, in the way that He used Moses and Aaron in the court of Pharaoh, to serve as a witness and a testimony during this period of beast-power domination and control.

I think this pretty well brings us to the conclusion of our Bible study period this evening. We are already four Bible studies into Revelation. We have three more Bible studies in Revelation to wrap things up.

We are getting into chapters 11, 12 and 13 of the book of Revelation tonight. We have a chart that I think will be helpful as we go through some of the material this evening. It is a chart that lays out in chart form the material that we are going to go through in Revelation 13 on who is the Beast and the succession of the beast powers. Some of you may have this chart in the booklet, The Beast of Revelation—Myth, Metaphor or Reality?

Mr. Herbert Armstrong had a similar chart. In fact, before we get started, I might tell you something. When I was a student at Ambassador College, I had a chance to see the original version of this in a mimeographed copy of the magazine at that time. I think it was the 1937 or 1938 copy of the magazine. The chart looked just like it is now except it was drawn out by hand and mimeographed. This had been set to type and hand lettered. I actually went through and compared to see if there was any difference.

There was exactly one difference, and I will show you exactly what it was. If you take the far right-hand column, go all the way to the bottom. The second one from the bottom on the far right hand says, "Italy and Germany ending in the Hitler-Mussolini Axis 1870-1945." See that? The only difference in the original chart was the fact that it said, "Italy, united by Garibaldi, 1870-[blank]" because it was 1937 or 1938 and 1945 hadn't gotten here yet. Mr. Armstrong didn't know the date would be 1945. He didn't know what date to fill in there. But that was the only difference.

As a young college student I was sort of intrigued by that—of being able to go back through that at that time. They had available, there in the college library in bound form, all of the magazines and all the literature going back to the first material that had ever been printed. They had a bound copy available in the reference section there in the library. It was very interesting to me as a young college student to go back and go through that to see what had been said and what the earliest literature and things like that had looked like.

This chart will make it easier for you to follow the Bible study this evening. This will be sort of a handy detachable copy you can have and keep.

This is the fifth of our seven-part series on the book of Revelation. We are going to be covering chapters 11, 12 and 13 of the book of Revelation. We will spend a great deal of this time in chapter 13. That is one of the reasons that I passed out this material. The chart will give it to you in written form and make it much easier to follow.

Chapters 10 and 11 sort of go together. Last time we commented a little bit on the tie-in from chapter 10 into chapter 11. Chapter 11 is an inset to be taken in connection with chapter 10.

Chapter 11 focuses in on the activities of the two witnesses. In many ways, the actions of the two witnesses were typified by Moses and Aaron. You could say that what Moses and Aaron did in the court of Pharaoh was sort of an analogy to the way that God is going to use the two witnesses at the end time. Here were two of God's servants that came before the leader of the world power at the time. They came in as representative of God, stating God's announcements and proclamations and, in case after case, announcing plagues that were going to come.

Many of the plagues of the book of Revelation were foreshadowed by many of the plagues that God sent on Egypt. Part of the reasons for the plagues is much the same as why God sent the plagues He did on Egypt. If you go back and read the account in Exodus, one of the things stated about the plagues God sent on Egypt was that they were sent against all the gods of Egypt. In effect, God was showing that the gods the Egyptians worshipped were not gods.

Their gods were not able to deliver them. They worshipped the Nile. The Nile couldn't deliver them. The Nile was turned to blood. They worshipped the sun god. The Creator God who made the sun blotted it out and it became so dark that you couldn't see your hand in front of your face. So, the gods the Egyptians worshipped failed to deliver them.

We see the same thing today. We find, in our time, that we have our modern gods. We have our gods of technology and progress that we worship as a nation and as a world. We think we can deliver ourselves from so many of the problems of the past.

We are going to find that all of our great technology and all of our great skills can't deliver us. Our great medical skills are not going to keep the plagues from wiping out a large part of humanity. Our great technology—all of our computer resources, our transportation and all of these things—are not going to keep the famine from coming. It's not going to keep many of these catastrophes from occurring.

The two witnesses are going to announce these plagues. We will notice some things about them. Chapter 12 is another inset. It focuses on God's Church. Where is the Church going to be during the time that all of the catastrophic events are going on?

Chapters 8 and 9 brings us through the events of the Day of the Lord.

With Chapter 10, we begin to get into an inset. It goes back and shows sort of an overview of the work of the Church coming down into chapter 11 that leads up to the events of the two witnesses.

Then chapter 12 goes back and picks up the story of the Church in terms of how God protects it.

Chapters 10 and 11 focus on the Church in terms of how God worked through His Church and how He will work through His Church in the context of all of these plagues.

Chapter 13 focuses in on the beast. It describes the succession of world-ruling empires by using the descriptions of Daniel 7 and sort of bringing them up to date. It continues on details that Daniel did not primarily give. God inspired Daniel to give the overview. John picked that up and focuses in greater detail. Other identifying signs are pointed out: the number of the beast's name, the image of the beast, the mark of the beast and the second beast that looked like a lamb but speaks like a dragon. There is a tremendous amount in this material.

Revelation 10:11, "And he said to me, 'You must prophesy again about many peoples, nations, tongues, and kings.'" If you notice, it just continues right on.

Revelation 11:1-2, "Then I was given a reed like a measuring rod. And the angel stood, saying, 'Rise and measure the temple of God, the altar, and those who worship there. But leave out the court which is outside the temple, and do not measure it, for it has been given to the Gentiles. And they will tread the holy city underfoot for forty-two months.'" "

Most likely, as is so often the case in Scripture, this is something that is a type and an antitype. There is going to be an altar that is rededicated. There is going to be a restoration of physical sacrifice because the Bible very clearly prophesies that they are going to be cut off; they are going to be stopped (Daniel 11:31). You can't stop it unless you start it. So, there is that physical aspect. There are references to the Gentile nations coming in and the beast power taking over Jerusalem.

However, there can also be allusions here to the Church itself, which in the Bible is likened to a spiritual temple. Mr. Herbert Armstrong applied these verses, in type, to what he was doing back in 1978-1979. Some of you remember that. At that particular time, he drew the analogy of what he was doing to measuring the temple (the Church) in terms of what he viewed as the responsibility that God had given him to put the Church back on the track after the events of much of the 70s.

There is reference to the forty-two months. Three periods are used synonymously in the Scriptures: forty-two months, one thousand two hundred sixty days and time, times and half a time. Forty-two months is three and one-half years. Thirty-six months is three years; six more months makes forty-two. Twelve hundred and sixty days—if you divide one thousand two hundred sixty by thirty (just strike off the zero and divide three into one hundred twenty-six), you get forty-two. So, one thousand two hundred sixty days is forty-two thirty-day months. These terms are used interchangeably. There is a reference to this period of three and one-half years—the time of the Tribulation. It is a time when the beast power will be in occupied possession of Jerusalem.

Certainly, there are allusions to the events of, let's say, measuring or preparing the Church and the fact of a distinction that is given. There are various analogies that are drawn. We have the analogy of the temple itself. There was a temple compound, a courtyard. There was an outer courtyard called the court of the Gentiles. People who were interested in being able to hear the message could come in. But there was a gate that went into an inner courtyard, the court of the Israelites. It was forbidden to enter the inner courtyard unless you were circumcised. Circumcision was the sign of the full acceptance of the covenant.

Inside that inner courtyard (the courtyard of the Israelites) was the altar of burnt sacrifice where the sacrifices were made. Then a little closer to the temple proper was the brazen laver, which was a big brass pot that contained water out of which anyone who was going to enter the sanctuary had to wash. Then there was the temple itself into which only the priesthood could enter. There was the Holy Place and then the Most Holy Place—the Holy of Holies—into which only the high priest could enter. That symbolized the very presence of God. The closer you got in, the greater level of sanctity was required. The whole issue was descriptive of access to God—how close were you to God or how far were you from God. That’s sort of descriptive. If this is an analogy drawn to the Church then, clearly, we have those who are described in the courtyard as sort of the hangers-on and those who are really going all the way with it. That’s the measuring rod that is described here in v. 1.

Verse 3, we are told, “And I will give power to my two witnesses, and they will prophesy one thousand two hundred and sixty days.” Who are the two witnesses? You want to know?

Well, it tells you right here.

Verses 4-6, “These are the two olive trees and the two lamp stands standing before the God of the earth. And if anyone wants to harm them, fire proceeds from their mouth, and devours their enemies. And if anyone wants to harm them, he must be killed in this manner. These have power to shut heaven, so that no rain falls in the days of their prophecy; and they have power over waters to turn them to blood, and to strike the earth with all plagues, as often as they desire.”

The two witnesses are actually the ones who will announce and call down the succession of the plagues that we have been going through a little earlier. God allowed Moses and Aaron to do that. God used Elijah to do that sort of thing. Elijah prayed and God shut the heavens (I Kings 17:1; James 5:17). In fact, there is an account in the case of Elijah where fire was called down (I Kings 18:38). Elijah called down fire from heaven. So, the work of the two witnesses has been prefigured by individuals who have gone before.

Now, let’s notice a little bit of the symbolism. In v. 4, they are compared to two olive trees and two candlesticks. There are some things that could perhaps be speculated about. I will just call your attention to some of the things that you might want to cross reference here. Hold your place and turn back to Zechariah.

Zechariah 4:1-7, “Now the angel who talked with me came back and wakened me, as a man who is wakened out of his sleep. And he said to me, ‘What do you see?’ So I said, ‘I am looking, and there is a lampstand of solid gold with a bowl on top of it, and on the stand seven lamps with seven pipes to the seven lamps. Two olive trees are by it, one at the right of the bowl and the other at its left.’ So I answered and spoke to the angel who talked with me, saying, ‘What are these, my lord?’ Then the angel who talked with me answered and said to me, ‘Do you not know what these are?’ And I said, ‘No, my lord.’ So he answered and said to me: ‘This is the word of the Lord to Zerubbabel: “Not by might nor by power, but by My Spirit,” says the Lord of hosts. “Who are you, O great mountain? Before Zerubbabel you shall become a plain! And he shall bring forth the capstone with shouts of ‘Grace, grace to it!’””

Verses 9-14, “The hands of Zerubbabel have laid the foundation of this temple; his hands shall also finish it. Then you will know that the Lord of hosts has sent Me to you. For who has despised the day of small things? For these seven rejoice to see the plumb line in the hand of Zerubbabel. They are the eyes of the Lord, which scan to and fro throughout the whole earth.’ Then I answered and said to him, ‘What are these two olive trees, one at the right of the lamp stand and the other at its left?’ And I further answered and said to him, ‘What are these two olive branches that drip into the receptacles of the two gold pipes from which the golden oil drains?’ Then he answered me and said, ‘Do you not know what these are?’ And I said, ‘No, my lord.’ So he said, ‘These are the two anointed ones, who stand beside the Lord of the whole earth.’”

You sort of come back full circle to Revelation 11. The two anointed ones are the two witnesses who are symbolized by these two olive trees. If you go through the context of Zechariah 3 and 4, it focuses on two individuals. Zechariah was writing at the time when the temple was being restored and the Jews were being brought back out of Babylon. Zerubbabel was the leader out of Babylon. He was the one who brought them back. That’s what the name “Zerubbabel” means; it means “out of Babylon.” He led the Jews out of Babylon. He came back and was ruler over them. Joshua the high priest who is mentioned in Zechariah 3:1 accompanied him.

Joshua the high priest is pictured as being clothed in filthy raiment and needing to be cleaned up by God. He goes through that in Zechariah 3. So, in that sense, Zerubbabel and Joshua served as a model for the description that is given. The prophecies that are made in Zechariah 3 and 4 stretch far beyond the literal Zerubbabel and Joshua of twenty-five hundred years ago. It comes down to individuals who, let’s say, have roles that would be played in the end time. If you look in the context of Zechariah 3 and 4, we could say that the two olive trees, in that sense, would be analogous to the role of Joshua and Zerubbabel.

The other comparison in Revelation 11 is the two lampstands (KJV, “candlesticks”). The two witnesses are compared to the two olive trees and they are compared to the two candlesticks. The candlesticks are alluded to back in Zechariah 4. There are seven candlesticks that are described in Zechariah 4, and if you look in Revelation 11:4, there are also two candlesticks.

In Revelation 1:20, we are told (last part of the verse), "...and the seven lampstands [KJV, "candlesticks"] which you saw are the seven churches." This has led some to speculate that the two witnesses, who are compared here to being two candlesticks and two olive trees, may be the individuals who would be the physical leaders of the last two stages or eras of God's Church, pictured in Revelation 3 as the Church at Philadelphia and the Church at Laodicea. There are seven candlesticks that symbolize the seven Churches or the seven stages of the one Church.

Actually, the original symbolism of these seven candlesticks goes back to the temple. The seven candlesticks provided light in the temple. They really weren't candlesticks as we think of them burning wax candles. They were shaped like that but had a golden bowl that was filled with olive oil. Olive oil was the fuel that was actually burned and gave off light. It was like an oil lamp. The oil was olive oil, and that was the light.

Now, in this sense, who is it that is going to be the light to the world from God? Well, these two individuals are going to represent God. The olive oil is used as a type of the Holy Spirit, so the analogy of a candlestick is certainly appropriate. The two olive trees symbolize the Holy Spirit of God. We have speculated on this. We have, of course, wondered who the two witnesses are. Various ones have speculated various things at various times. I don't have any names to fill in the blanks here, but God certainly does. At the appropriate time, it will be evident and it will be evident by the way God is using them at the time.

The time setting of the work of the two witnesses is the time of the Great Tribulation. They will have great miraculous power. But, of course, realize that the false prophet is working false and lying wonders for the beast during this time, countermanding that God is working true miracles through His servants. They will accomplish this during this period of one thousand two hundred sixty days.

Revelation 11:7-8, "Now when they finish their testimony, the beast that ascends out of the bottomless pit will make war against them, overcome them, and kill them. And their dead bodies will lie in the street of the great city which spiritually is called Sodom and Egypt, where also our Lord was crucified." Jerusalem is where they are going to be prophesying. It's where the beast and the false prophet will have set up their headquarters.

Verse 9, it says, "Then those from the peoples, tribes, tongues, and nations will see their dead bodies three and a half days, and not allow their dead bodies to be put into graves." How are they going to do that? It will probably be on television and satellite hookup. This is a verse that you could never have literally understood in times past. Now, we can watch what is going on half a world away. When they are rioting in Tennenman Square in China, people in Europe and America are watching it. Here, we are going to find people and kindred and tongues and nations that are going to see their dead bodies. This is going to be the focus of things. They are not buried. They are just allowed to lie out there.

Verse 10, "And those who dwell on the earth will rejoice over them, make merry, and send gifts to one another...." You see, when the plagues come, they will blame their problems on the two witnesses. Instead of repenting at the message of the two witnesses, they are going to be like Pharaoh. Pharaoh thought his problem was Moses. In Pharaoh's mind, the problem was Moses. Pharaoh thought that if Moses would quit calling down all these plagues, he wouldn't have any problems. The problem wasn't Moses; the problem was Pharaoh. He wouldn't repent. He wouldn't do what God said, which was, "Let My people go."

The people of the world who are caught up in this beast system, as far as they are concerned, the problem is these two witnesses. Nothing is allowed to get to them. Three and one-half years go by and nobody can harm them. If somebody tries to harm them, fire comes down. I tell you what—it wouldn't be long before you would run out of assassins who are wanting to line up for that job. You talk about a suicide mission! This would be a real suicide mission.

Things go along. They come in and announce what God is going to do next. Instead of people repenting, realizing that they and their sins are to blame for what's happening, they are going to view these two fellows as the problem. If they could be rid of them, everything would be okay. When they are finally allowed to be killed, everybody is rejoicing. They think the problems are over.

Verse 11, "Now after the three and a half days the breath of life from God entered them, and they stood on their feet, and great fear fell on those who saw them.” I think that’s probably an understatement. All these people have been dancing and having a party. Here are the two corpses lying out there for three and a half days. All of a sudden, they stand up and sort of dust themselves off. You can just imagine the pandemonium that breaks out.

Verse 12, “And they heard a loud voice from heaven saying to them, ‘Come up here.’ And they ascended to heaven in a cloud, and their enemies saw them.”

Now, we realize that there are three heavens spoken of in the Bible, and you have to determine it by context. The Bible speaks of the clouds of heaven and the birds flying in the midst of heaven. It uses the word “heaven” to describe the earth’s atmosphere—where the clouds are, where the birds fly or the rains of heaven are. Then there is another heaven that’s spoken of. It talks about the stars of heaven, outer space. So, you have the heaven of the earth’s atmosphere and the heaven of outer space. Then there is the heaven of God’s abode, which Paul refers to in II Corinthians 12:2 as the third heaven.

The Bible doesn’t use the phrase “first and second heaven.” That exact phrase isn’t found in the Bible, but it does use the term “third heaven.” If you have a third heaven, you have to have a first and a second. The Bible does use the term “heaven” referring to the rains of heaven, the clouds of heaven or the birds of heaven. That’s clearly the first heaven. That’s the one closest to the earth. Then the stars of heaven obviously have to be the second one; that’s outer space. Then the third heaven is the heaven of God’s abode.

When it talks about “ascending to heaven in a cloud” (Revelation 11:12), the context has to describe which heaven. Christ is going to come. When He returns to the earth, He’s going to return in the clouds of heaven. The saints are going to be caught up to meet Him in the clouds (Acts 1:9-11; I Thessalonians 4:16-17). They ascend up to heaven in a cloud. How high do you ascend in a cloud? You ascend up into the earth’s atmosphere. Once you are above the earth’s atmosphere, there aren’t any more clouds. You won’t ascend to the moon in a cloud. You don’t go into outer space in a cloud.

Revelation 11:12, “...and they ascended to heaven in a cloud, and their enemies saw them.” They see that they are rising up.

Verses 13-15, “In the same hour there was a great earthquake, and a tenth of the city fell. In the earthquake seven thousand men were killed, and the rest were afraid and gave glory to the God of heaven. The second woe is past. Behold, the third woe is coming quickly. Then the seventh angel sounded: And there were loud voices in heaven, saying, ‘The kingdoms of this world have become the kingdoms of our Lord and of His Christ, and He shall reign forever and ever!’”

In terms of the resurrection and ascension of the two witnesses, we could compare that to Elijah ascending up and being caught up into the heavens in the fiery chariot (II Kings 2:11). At first glance, it would seem that when the two witnesses are raised up, this is the first resurrection and the return of Christ. But if you continue down in context, you get the idea that this may actually be a few days before the end because the seventh angel doesn’t sound until v. 15. So, it’s very possible that the two witnesses are actually raised up in the same way that Lazarus was raised up (John 11:43-44) or caught up into heaven in the same way Elijah was caught up into heaven and removed from where he was. If it is before the coming of Christ, it is likely a matter of a day or two or three—just immediately before.

That is sort of the context because the earthquake that’s described in v. 13 is not the great earthquake that is described a little bit later. In the earthquake of v. 13, only a tenth part of the city falls. The great earthquake described in Revelation 16:18 is the greatest earthquake the world has ever seen. In Revelation 16:19, we find that the city was divided into three parts. The earthquake mentioned in Revelation 11:13, at the time the two witnesses are resurrected, is simply a prelude. I guess you could say that the earthquake of Revelation 16:18-19 is the aftershock. Those who come from California are familiar with aftershocks of an earthquake. In this case, the aftershock is going to be a lot more than the original shock.

If you put it together and really examine it closely, I think the indication is clear that the three and one-half years the two witnesses will prophesy in Jerusalem will almost be an exact overlap of the Tribulation but not exactly. It may actually have its beginning a few days or a week or so earlier because they are going to prophesy one thousand two hundred sixty days and then they are going to be killed. They are going to be dead three and one-half days; then they are going to be raised up, caught up into the clouds and disappear from everyone’s view. An earthquake is going to occur. It will be a great earthquake. It will destroy ten percent of the city. Now that sounds bad until you read on in Revelation 16 where you have an earthquake that causes everything to fall apart. So, we are looking at an event that is just setting the stage. When that is finished, the second woe is passed and the third woe comes quickly (v. 14). The third woe is the seventh trumpet, which is described in v. 15. We sort of get the view of what's going on.

Revelation 12 is another inset.

Revelation 12:1-5, "Now a great sign appeared in heaven: a woman clothed with the sun, with the moon under her feet, and on her head a garland of twelve stars. Then being with child she cried out in labor and in pain to give birth. And another sign appeared in heaven: behold, a great fiery red dragon having seven heads and ten horns, and seven diadems on his heads. His tail drew a third of the stars of heaven and threw them to the earth. And the dragon stood before the woman who was ready to give birth, to devour her Child as soon as it was born. And she bore a male Child who was to rule all nations with a rod of iron. And her Child was caught up to God and to His throne."

Who is the male Child? The male Child is Christ. Who is the woman? The woman is used symbolic of the Church. The Church is a continuum that had its beginnings in the wilderness—the Old Testament Church in the wilderness, the congregation of Israel.

The symbolism of the sun, the moon and the stars is associated with Israel. Hold your place and let's go back to Genesis. Notice this symbolism that is associated with Israel.

Joseph had a dream.

Genesis 37:9, "Then he dreamed still another dream and told it to his brothers, and said, 'Look, I have dreamed another dream. And this time, the sun, the moon, and the eleven stars bowed down to me.'" That was symbolic of what was going to happen later on when Pharaoh made him ruler over all the land in Egypt. The sun, moon and stars were used symbolic of the family of Israel—in other words, Jacob and Rachael and the twelve sons who became the twelve tribes. The sun, moon and twelve stars were used symbolically of the family of Israel.

Here we have a woman—the Church, the congregation of Israel as she was—who is described with the symbolism that denoted Israel who brought forth the Messiah. Israel, in that sense, brought forth the Messiah who was ultimately caught up to God. In the Old Testament period, it was the congregation (KJV, "church") in the wilderness (Acts 7:38). It was the congregation of Israel. In the New Testament period, it is the Church of God. It is still symbolically the woman or the Church (God's people).

Revelation 12:6, after the Messiah is caught up to God, we find, "Then the woman fled into the wilderness, where she has a place prepared by God, that they should feed her there one thousand two hundred and sixty days." We are going to come back to that and make comment on it in a moment.

In v. 3, we saw the great red dragon.

Verse 9 defines the great dragon as the devil and Satan. We find him described as a dragon with seven heads and ten horns (v. 3), which is symbolic of the beast system and symbolizes his kingdom.

The reference, in vv. 4 and 9, of his being cast to earth and his angels pulling a third part of the stars (stars were used to symbolize angels) has led us to understand that very likely Satan pulled one-third of the angels when he rebelled and was cast down.

Verses 7-9 gives us a glimpse of that, "And war broke out in heaven: Michael and his angels fought against the dragon; and the dragon and his angels fought, but they did not prevail, nor was a place found for them in heaven any longer. So the great dragon was cast out, that serpent of old, called the Devil and Satan, who deceives the whole world; he was cast to the earth, and his angels were cast out with him."

Verse 10, "Then I heard a loud voice saying in heaven, 'Now salvation, and strength, and the kingdom of our God, and the power of His Christ have come, for the accuser of our brethren, who accused them before our God day and night, has been cast down.'"

Verses 12-14, it says, "'Therefore rejoice, O heavens, and you who dwell in them! Woe to the inhabitants of the earth and the sea! For the devil has come down to you, having great wrath, because he knows that he has a short time.' Now when the dragon saw that he had been cast to the earth, he persecuted the woman who gave birth to the male Child. But the woman was given two wings of a great eagle, that she might fly into the wilderness to her place, where she is nourished for a time and times and half a time, from the presence of the serpent." Here we find something different.

In vv. 5-6, we find the woman fleeing after the Messiah is caught up to heaven. That was a type of what will occur at the end. In the description that we have in v. 6, the woman, or the Church, is taking the initiative and fleeing into a wilderness area, which is basically an area that is sparsely inhabited, and remains there for this period of one thousand two hundred sixty days, as it is described.

Verse 13, “Now when the dragon saw that he had been cast to the earth....”

There was war in heaven a long time ago and Satan was cast out (Isaiah 14; Ezekiel 28). But here in Revelation 12, we are reading of another war when Satan is cast down. This time he has great wrath because he knows that he has but a short time (v. 12). The Tribulation is Satan’s wrath. It is prompted by his being cast back down. He comes down and he has great wrath because he knows that it’s almost over. In rage and frustration, he lashes out at the people of God.

The difference is: in v. 6 the Church flees and in v. 14 the Church is taken.

Verse 14, “But the woman was given two wings of a great eagle, that she might fly into the wilderness to her place, where she is nourished for a time and times and half a time, from the presence of the serpent.”

What the Church went through in the Middle Ages was a type of what it will be going through at the time of the Great Tribulation in the end time.

In 325 A.D. at the Council of Nicaea, it was established that from that time on those who continued to keep the Sabbath and the Holy Days, contrary to the customs and practices by those who called themselves Christians in Rome, were now to be persecuted by the power of the government. The Roman emperor Constantine devised, in collaboration with the bishop of Rome, a standard brand of Christianity among all of the groups that called themselves Christian, and enforced a uniformity and unity.

Unity is a wonderful thing, but first and foremost, unity has to be with God and has to be centered around God. Unity for unity’s sake—if you’re unified with the devil, you’re not in good shape. That’s not the kind of unity that God wants. We are going to find that the world is going to enforce unity; it’s going to be called “the mark of the beast.” Unity, as God looks on it, is unity that originates with God and with the Spirit of God. There’s a unity of the Spirit of God.

The unity that Constantine enforced was a unity that was imposed by the iron power of the state. In 325 A.D., pressure on the Church was brought to bear from the government—primarily to those existing in the areas of Asia Minor. It forced the people who refused to compromise with the law of God to liquidate what they could liquidate and, in some cases, just walk off and leave it and get out of there. They went to the area of the mountains of Armenia. Portions of them went up into some of the Balkan mountain area; some branched out into the Alpine Mountain region. Some went up into the Tran-Carpathian Mountain areas of Central Europe.

In recent months, we have come in contact with remnants of Sabbath keepers who are there. These were areas that God’s people fled to—areas that were sort of on the edge of civilization—mountainous, wilderness regions.

In ancient times when transportation and communication was pretty skimpy, if you were in a remote area, the power of the state didn’t really come in where you were. It’s sort of like some of the old hillbillies back during the last century and certainly the early part of this century. The revenue men simply didn’t get that far back into the hills because it was remote and transportation was difficult. There are areas of this state that it has not been that many years ago that outsiders just didn’t venture in. They didn’t have much way to get in and couldn’t find their way around. It was sort of remote and cut off.

That’s the way these areas were. God’s people simply disappeared into some of those remote areas that were so far off the beaten path that it wasn’t worth the trouble and effort of the civil government to try to penetrate that far back. Now with modern communication and transportation, it’s sort of hard to lose yourself.

That was not the case at this time. God’s people simply fled and moved into those areas. We pick up bits and pieces of them through the medieval period. They remained in those areas that were the border areas of the Holy Roman Empire, the Byzantine Empire and the other empires. This was sort of the border area. What it amounted to was they were left alone for the most part.

If you want to run an exact one thousand two hundred sixty-year period, using a day for a year, you could run it from 325 A.D., when the Council of Nicaea and the Roman emperor Constantine imposed a death penalty for any Christian who continued to Judaize, as the decree stated it. By Judaize, he meant keeping and observing the days the Jews kept—the Festivals, the Sabbath. If you come down one thousand two hundred sixty years, it brings you to 1585 A.D.

That was the year in which England gave religious liberty. Full religious liberty and toleration was not given, but that was the last recorded imprisonment for Sabbath keepers. There wasn’t any more imprisonment. Sabbath keeping and observance was not reckoned as a criminal offense. It was decriminalized in England in 1585 A.D., and it was in that year that the first congregation began to emerge in the “light of day” there in England.

There are records of early Sabbath-keeping congregations that date back at that point—the Millyard Church in England, a Sabbatarian Church from whence later Stephen Mumford (less than one-hundred years later), in the 1660s, came from England to Rhode Island and founded the first Sabbath Church in the new world, from whence the Church has spread through Rhode Island, into New Jersey, down into the area of West Virginia and from there, in the middle 1800s, on into the Northwest. It is this group with which Mr. Herbert Armstrong came into contact.

It was at that point, one thousand two hundred sixty years later (1585), that God’s Church finally was able to emerge from hiding. For the first time in one thousand two hundred sixty years, God’s people were able to emerge and at least be able to function openly in society.

That period of persecution, martyrdom, all the atrocities of the medieval period, the Inquisitions and the attempts to destroy any deviation was merely a type. What the Holy Roman Empire did during that time was a type of what the final resurrection of the Holy Roman Empire will do in the end.

In v. 14, we are told the Church is taken into her place to be protected and to be nourished.

Verse 17, “And the dragon was enraged with the woman, and he went to make war with the rest of her offspring, who keep the commandments of God and have the testimony of Jesus Christ.”

When you compare it, we have a distinction. Revelation 3, the Church in Philadelphia, that sixth era or sixth stage in the history of the Church has the promise given to it.

Revelation 3:10, ““Because you have kept My command to persevere [because they faithfully held on to and kept the word of God’s patience], I also will keep you from the hour of trial [or the hour of tribulation], which shall come upon the whole world, to test those who dwell on the earth.””

The Laodiceans are told in v. 16, ““...because you are lukewarm [complacent], and neither cold nor hot, I will spew you out of My mouth.”” Because Christ loves them, He is going to allow them to be chastened, so they can be awakened (v. 19).

Revelation 12:17, you find that Satan is going to make war with the remnant—those who are left behind. We find that distinction.

We see the reference to a place of protection, or a place of safety, as we have termed it. The specific words “place of safety” are not used here, but the word “place” is used. What is the purpose of the “place”? It’s a place to be safe from the dragon. So, we call it “the place of safety.” I don’t see where that represents a problem. It simply is descriptive of a place where God will protect His people from the atrocities of the Tribulation.

Revelation 13:1-3, “Then I stood on the sand of the sea. And I saw a beast rising up out of the sea, having seven heads and ten horns, and on his horns ten crowns, and on his heads a blasphemous name. Now the beast which I saw was like a leopard, his feet were like the feet of a bear, and his mouth like the mouth of a lion. And the dragon gave him his power, his throne, and great authority. I saw one of his heads as if it had been mortally wounded, and his deadly wound was healed. And all the world marveled and followed the beast.”

Ultimately, they were worshipping the dragon, which was the source of power. They worshipped the beast by admiring the beast.

Verse 4, “So they worshiped the dragon who gave authority to the beast; and they worshiped the beast, saying, ‘Who is like the beast? Who is able to make war with him?’” They adored and worshipped the beast. The beast had this veneration. They stood in awe of the beast. They were deeply impressed with its system.

Verse 5, “And he was given a mouth speaking great things and blasphemies, and he was given authority to continue for forty-two months.”

Verses 7-8, “And it was granted to him to make war with the saints and to overcome them. And authority was given him over every tribe, tongue and nation. And all who dwell on the earth will worship him....” Everybody will be directed toward worshipping it.

At this point, let’s stop and I will direct your attention to the chart that you have.

If you look at the top, you will notice that we have several things lined up. We have Daniel 2, Daniel 7, Daniel 8, Revelation 13, Revelation 17, with an explanation of the symbols and events fulfilled in history.

Look at the chart. Remember, Daniel 2 uses the analogy of the great image that Nebuchadnezzar saw. He saw the head of gold, the shoulders of silver, the thighs of brass, the legs of iron, the feet of iron and potter’s clay with the ten toes that are smashed by Christ at His return (vv. 32-35). When you go down through the progression in Daniel 2, we are told in v. 44, "...in the days of these kings the God of heaven will set up a kingdom which shall never be destroyed..." That is defined. Daniel told Nebuchadnezzar in vv. 37-38, "You, O king, are a king of kings...you are this head of gold."

Verses 39-40, "But after you shall arise another kingdom [which was the Medes and the Persians]...then another, a third kingdom [which was Alexander the Great which swallowed up the Persian Empire]...And the fourth kingdom shall be as strong as iron [that was the Roman Empire that swallowed up Alexander's empire]." It continued all the way down. The final end time culmination of the Roman Empire is in the final ten toes, which are described as iron and potter's clay (vv. 41-43).

In Daniel 7, Daniel sees four creatures that are compared to a lion, a bear, a leopard and a great fourth beast that has ten horns (vv. 3-7). When we go through the sequence that's given in Daniel 2 and Daniel 7, we find by comparing the two visions that Daniel defines the head of gold (the Babylonian Empire) in Daniel 2 equated with the lion in Daniel 7. The second kingdom, the kingdom of silver in chapter 2 is the bear of chapter 7, which symbolized the Medes and the Persians. The third kingdom of bronze in chapter 2 corresponds to the four-headed leopard, which symbolized the empire of Alexander the Great because after his death, it split into four sections. Then finally, the fourth beast in chapter 2 is represented as two legs of iron and in chapter 7 as a creature possessing great iron teeth. This fourth creature that had the ten horns was the Roman Empire. This chart lines it up. You can see how it lines it up coming down.

Revelation 13 and Daniel 7 correlate very much. They looked at it from different perspectives. Daniel looked at it at the time when only one creature had emerged. The Babylonian Empire was on the scene, to be followed in Daniel's lifetime by the Persians.

Daniel saw four creatures: the lion, the bear, the four-headed leopard and the fourth great creature. John saw it as one creature that had characteristics of a lion, a bear, a leopard and had seven heads (Revelation 13:1). Well, how many heads were in Daniel's vision? The lion had a head, the bear had a head, the leopard had four and then the fourth creature had one—that makes seven heads. The fourth creature of Daniel's vision had the ten horns.

You find that Daniel looked at it as four different, distinct creatures that were emerging. John saw one big system that had the characteristics of these four that Daniel had seen. It was simply the same thing viewed in a little different way. You still had the same creatures described. You had the same number of heads and the same number of horns. Now the seventh head (the fourth creature) had ten horns. The ten horns were the ten successive stages of the old Roman Empire that continued down through history.

I am not going to totally cover the chart this evening because we are going to cover some more when we get to Revelation 17. We are going to realize that when John describes it in Revelation 13, he is describing the beast as he viewed it in his day and continuing to the future. The Babylonian-Roman system had not yet received its deadly wound (Revelation 13:3). The beast received a deadly wound in 476 A.D. The Roman Empire fell. The last Roman emperor, Romulus Augustus, was forced to abdicate and the Roman Empire fell. The date that is often used as the closing date of ancient history is 476 A.D. The fall of Rome was the end of ancient history and the beginning of the Medieval World. Just like 1492 A.D. is considered the end of the medieval period and the beginning of the modern world.

We are told that the beast received a deadly wound; then the deadly wound was healed and it was given power to continue forty-two months (Revelation 13:5). The deadly wound was healed in 554 A.D. There occurred what was called the Imperial Restoration. You can see it on the chart. The Imperial Restoration occurred in 554 A.D. Justinian, the ruler from Byzantine (the Eastern Empire) at the behest of the pope came in and cleared out the other occupying groups. The Roman Empire was restored in the West. The restoration of the Roman Empire was called in history the Imperial Restoration.

There were successive periods down through history. There was successive crownings. You had the Imperial Restoration by Justinian, beginning in 554 A.D. The Roman Empire continued down. The pope crowned Charlemagne on Christmas day in 800 A.D. as the restored Roman emperor. There was the crowning of Otto, the German king, in 962 A.D. Continuing down, there was the Habsburg ("Hapsburg" in English) Dynasty and the crowning of Napoleon. When Napoleon was defeated in 1814, that ended the forty-two months or one thousand two hundred sixty years of unbroken continuation of the Roman imperium—the Roman Empire.

When Napoleon was defeated in 1814, that succession had a stop. So, the deadly wound was healed and power was given to continue forty-two months (Revelation 13:3-5). This is described right here on the chart. If you look toward the bottom, the line that goes across, you can see the deadly wound and the quotation that is given. We will compare some of that with Revelation 17 at the next Bible study.

Let's notice some other things. We find that this blasphemous system had the name of blasphemy stamped on it (Revelation 13:1). Throughout its history from the time that it was restored under Justinian (the Imperial Restoration), it was known as the Holy Roman Empire, as opposed to simply the Roman Empire. It was the Holy Roman Empire, or as it was called later in the Medieval period, the Holy Roman Empire of the German nation. That was, in effect, a blasphemous title because "holy and reverend" is the name of God (KJV, Psalm 111:9); to attach God's name to that Babylonish system is blasphemous. There is nothing holy about it.

In Revelation 13:11, we find another beast described, "Then I saw another beast coming up out of the earth, and he had two horns like a lamb and spoke like a dragon." It outwardly looked like a lamb. It had two horns. A horn is symbolic of governmental authority. It was like a lamb yet it spoke as a dragon.

Verse 12, "And he exercises all the authority of the first beast [the old Roman Empire] in his presence, and causes the earth and those who dwell in it to worship [To worship is to give loyalty, allegiance and devotion.] the first beast [the Roman system], whose deadly wound was healed."

The second beast is the papacy. The Catholic Church is described here. "The two horns"—it had civil power and ecclesiastical power. The Catholic Church is both church and state. Vatican City is a state. It has diplomatic relations with many nations. They are on the verge of establishing diplomatic relations with Israel right now. They have established diplomatic relations with Russia. They exchange ambassadors. It is the only church that is a state. The pope has the position of a head of state and Vatican City is sovereign territory.

Technically, Vatican City is not a part of Italy. It is located in Italy, but the Italian law doesn't have predominance there. It is a sovereign territory, a sovereign state. At one time during the Middle Ages, they ruled as a temporal power.

They ruled a larger section. The papal state was the whole middle section of Italy. Now, all that's left is Vatican City. It has both temporal power and ecclesiastical power, so it is symbolized by two horns. It outwardly resembles a lamb—like Jesus Christ. It has the outward guise of that. Yet in reality, it is not Christ's system but Satan's system. It exercised the power of the old Roman Empire.

Verse 12, "And he exercises all the authority of the first beast in his presence, and causes the earth and those who dwell in it to worship the first beast, whose deadly wound was healed." Once the deadly wound was healed, the Roman Empire came back as the Holy Roman Empire. The Catholic Church insisted that everybody give loyalty, devotion and allegiance to the Holy Roman Empire.

Next Bible study I am going to bring some history books—secular history books that came out of the college—outlined series on medieval and ancient history. I want to read some quotes out of the one that deals with the Roman Empire and the Catholic Church during the Middle Ages.

Here, we find in v. 13, "He performs great signs, so that he even makes fire come down from heaven on the earth in the sight of men."—Lying miracles that deceive people.

Verse 14, "And he deceives those who dwell on the earth by those signs which he granted to do in the sight of the beast, telling those who dwell on the earth to make an image of the beast who was wounded by the sword and lived."

An image is something that bears an outward resemblance. What we have here, in terms of an image of the beast, is a system that is set up. The papacy and the establishment there really was, in that sense, an image. It was a reflection. Here was a church government that was organized on exactly the same pattern that the old Roman Empire was.

I'll read some quotes. It describes, "that during the age of Constantine the Roman Empire was divided into dioceses, thirteen in number, made up of numerous provinces over which bishops with the title of metropolitans or primates presided." The point is that they used the Roman Empire as its model. It used the structure of the Roman Empire and, in that sense, it was a religious model of the secular realm.

They insisted in v. 15, "...as many as would not worship the image of the beast to be killed." This man-made church governmental structure of the Roman Catholic Church insisted that those who would not give their loyalty and devotion to the image of the beast should be killed. During the Middle Ages, if you would not conform to that system and give your loyalty, allegiance and devotion to the religious and civil system, you were in danger of being killed. And that is ultimately going to happen again. What occurred then was a type of what is going to occur again in the Great Tribulation.

Verses 16-18, “And he causes all, both small and great, rich and poor, free and slave, to receive a mark on their right hand or on their foreheads, and that no one may buy or sell except one who has the mark or the name of the beast, or the number of his name. Here is wisdom. Let him who has understanding calculate the number of the beast, for it is the number of a man: His number is 666.” Let’s notice several things relating to this.

Let’s first note the mark of the beast. A “mark” is a “sign or an insignia that is forced.” It is like a brand. We are told that it is a mark on the hand and the forehead.

In Deuteronomy 6:8, God’s people are told God’s law is to be what? “You shall bind them as a sign on your hand, and they shall be as frontlets between your eyes.” The law of God is a “sign” for God’s people.

Exodus 31:13, “Speak also to the children of Israel, saying, “Surely My Sabbaths you shall keep, for it is a sign between Me and you throughout your generations, that you may know that I am the Lord who sanctifies you.”” God’s law is a sign that is to be carried on the hands and between the eyes—in other words, the forehead of God’s people. Your hand is the means of action. If I work, labor or do something, I do it with my hands. If I think, I do it with my mind. God’s law is to control our thought and our actions. The Sabbath is tied in to our thought and our actions. We rest and observe the Sabbath in our minds and by what we do. Exodus 31:17, “It is a sign between Me and the children of Israel forever....” The Sabbath is a sign between God and His people forever. It was a sign of obedience.

Here, in Revelation 13:16, we have a sign of disobedience, a mark or brand of disobedience.

In Revelation 14:10, it talks about the wrath of God.

Revelation 14:9-10, “...‘If anyone worships the beast and his image, and receives his mark on his forehead or on his hand, he himself shall also drink of the wine of the wrath of God....”

Notice in Colossians 3:6, “Because of these things the wrath of God is coming upon the sons of disobedience.” On whom is the wrath of God poured out? It’s poured out on the children of disobedience. The mark of the beast is a brand of disobedience to the law of God. The Sabbath is a sign of obedience to the law of God. The wrath of God is poured out on the children of disobedience.

Revelation 14:12, “Here is the patience of the saints; here are those who keep the commandments of God and the faith of Jesus.” We are looking at a distinction between keeping the commandments and not keeping the commandments.

In Exodus 31, God uses the Sabbath as the sign of obedience to God. It is the commandment that is pointed out as the test commandment—the one that is used as the sign of obedience.

What is the sign of disobedience? –The breaking of the Sabbath and the observance of pagan holidays (Sunday, Christmas, Easter and all the pagan holidays) in replacement of God’s Holy Days.

Why is it called the mark of the beast—the beast was the Roman Empire? Did you know Constantine proclaimed Sunday the official day of rest throughout the Roman Empire? Do you know what it’s titled? I don’t have my copy here, but I could read it to you. Eusebius was a Catholic historian who was actually the secretary who kept the minutes at the Council of Nicaea and recorded Constantine’s decree. Constantine referred to it as “requiring all to keep the venerable day of the sun.” The sun god! The old Babylonian sun god! The old Babylonian Mystery religion! The worship of the sun god! This was the day of the sun. It was the day that was viewed as holy to the sun god. That’s why it had his name.

You see different days were holy to different gods. Each day, if you were a particular devotee of this god, well, you paid special attention to this day or that day. Different ones had different things, different rituals that took place. Each day was sacred to a particular god. It connected with various things. It connected with astrology and all kinds of things. We don’t need to get into it, but it was the mark of the beast because it was a day that had its origin in the old Roman-Babylonian system. It was adopted by the church and used as something that is set out as a brand of disobedience.

If you look at Christmas, Easter and the various pagan holidays, they go back to pagan antiquity and they are tied in with the old Babylonian-Roman system. They are a part of something that was foisted off and enforced. Constantine issued the decree that made Sunday a day of worship.

He closed Roman courts on Sunday and all of those things. I will try and remember to bring the book with some of the material because we will go through more on this. We are going to get into Revelation 14 next time. There are parts of it that we are going to get this time and parts of it we will pick up next time.

Here is a brand of disobedience that is going to be enforced once again. There is going to be an attempt at a unified one-world system. Unity is great if it originates with God. Unity is horrible if it originates with the devil. You'd better not be united with the devil.

Nearly the whole world is going to look at us as being sort of the odd ones out. They are going to say, 'Everything would be great if you oddballs would conform. Then we could all be unified.' We don't want conformity with the devil. We want conformity with God. God is the One we want to conform to. If there's only one person obeying God and nine thousand nine hundred ninety-nine who aren't, who needs to change? Who needs to get in step with whom? It doesn't matter how many people want to repeal the Ten Commandments. That's not up for debate. That's not on the ballot because God is the One who decrees it and they stand by God's authority.

Here, we have a brand of disobedience. A brand that is symbolic of ignoring the law of God and replacing it with festivities of pagan origin.

There is also the reference to the number of the beast, 666. In earlier times, alphabets like the Greek and Hebrew alphabets had numerical value. When we were in school, most of us learned about Roman numerals. "V" is five, "X" is ten and "L" is fifty. We learned Roman numerals. Do you realize that's the way that math was done? Can you imagine having to do all your math additions and subtraction with something like that?

We were up into the early medieval period before we had what we call our "numbers," which were called Arabic numerals. The Arabs didn't actually invent them, but they served to transmit them. They were adopted as a separate means of numbers.

In Greek and Hebrew in which the Bible is written, all the letters had numeral value. So, every name had a number attached to it. It wasn't numbers that you made up. You could simply figure it up in Roman numerals. Some names would have numeric value. Take, for instance, "Louis" in Roman numerals. The "L" would be fifty. The "O" doesn't have value. The "U" was a "V" in Latin; the alphabet's the same. That would be "V," which is five. The "I" would be one. The "S" doesn't have a value. So that would be a Roman numeral value of fifty-six.

Names are not spelled the same way in different languages. You have to translate a name from one language into another. In French, you would spell Peter, "P-i-e-r-r-e." In English, you would spell it "P-e-t-e-r." In Greek, you would spell it as "P-e-t-r-o-s" and in Hebrew, you would spell it "C-e-p-h-a-s." There's different ways of spelling it out in a different language.

If you take the name "Romulus," translate it into Hebrew and spell it out in Hebrew script, it adds up to 666. That's the numeric value. If you translate it into Greek and spell it out in the Greek letters, it adds up to 666. It's the only word, that I am aware of, that when translated into Hebrew and spelled out in Hebrew script, adds up to exactly the same numeric value as when you translate it into Greek and add it up in Greek script.

Romulus was, of course, the founder of the Roman Empire—the Roman system. The name Rome and Roman derives from him. So, in effect, that name is labeled here. Now, many things tie in with the Roman system that in Greek, Hebrew or Latin will add up to that. But the two biblical languages are normally where you would expect it, not in some man-devised thing. You could spell out anybody's name, invent your own number value and make it add up. If I had time, I would show you several little tricks you can do of adding up things. It doesn't prove anything. But when you go back to where you would actually expect to find this, you would expect that the languages of the Bible would be the ones that you would look to try to find this numeric value.

Nero Caesar, the emperor at the height during much of the New Testament period and the height of persecution during the New Testament period, his name in Hebrew adds up to 666.

There are various names associated with the Roman Empire and the Roman Government that adds up to 666. There were signs all over Italy during the time of and previous to World War II that said, "Viva el duce." These were signs of support for Mussolini. If you add it up to numeric value in Roman numerals, it adds up to 666. There are a lot of different things that certainly stamp this number on the Roman system. What we are looking at is the Roman Empire, the Holy Roman Empire, the Roman Catholic Church and the whole Babylonian system that is stamped through and through. We will cover this part more next Bible study. We will cover other portions as well.

This sort of brings us toward a conclusion. There's so much material to cover here. When we started into Revelation and said we were going to cover Revelation in seven parts, we said we would not go into such detail that we would cover everything. I think you are already seeing that covering Revelation in seven parts still means you are just skimming the surface because there's so much detail. Some books in the Bible are written where there is so much detail that is packed in that, if you are going to get anything out of it, it takes a little more time.

You have this chart. I will have some other material for you next Bible study that will supplement this and hopefully the two together will be helpful. When we get into Revelation 17, we will cover some of the material that we did not have a chance to cover this evening, in terms of the beast power and its resurrections. These are things that are very applicable for us because they help us understand where we stand in the context of what God is doing.

As we look at the world scene, God wants us to understand where we stand. One of the purposes of prophecy is to understand where we stand in the scope of world affairs and world events. God doesn't spell out every detail where we can pinpoint the day and the month and the year. That's not the point. But God does want us to discern the times. So, hopefully, some of the material we are going through this Bible study and some of this handout material will be helpful to you in that regard.

Next Bible study, we will cover Revelation 14—18.

Bible Study # 98
November 10, 1992
Mr. John Ogwyn

Book of Revelation Series—Revelation 14—18

If you didn't get the handout that I handed out last time, you might want to go ahead and do so now. The handouts I have given you will simply make it easier for you to follow the Bible study because we are in that section of the book of Revelation that gets a little bit technical as far as keeping horns, heads and all sorts of things like that together. If you have the chart to follow along, it will perhaps be a little bit easier for you to do so.

Last time we finished up going through Revelation 13, which is a rather detailed exposition on who is the beast and focusing in on the succession of revivals of the Roman Empire. I brought something along and I want to read a few quotes just in preface of this Bible study this evening. This is a college text from The Problems in European Civilization Series. This particular book is titled The Holy Roman Empire in the Middle Ages. It has selections from top authors in the field on analyzing the significance of the Holy Roman Empire. I don't want to get off into all of that, but there are a number of things that are sort of interesting. It's amazing how much is recognized even in the secular realm.

Did anybody see the editorial cartoon in the paper today? Anybody take note of that? It's very interesting. I think I will post it on the bulletin board. It shows this setting out in front of this old building in Argentina. Of course, Argentina is where all the Nazis fled after World War II. It shows these two old geezers sitting out there. One is obviously Adolph Hitler and the other is his buddy. They are sitting there and the Nazi flag is in the background. It shows these guys pouring gasoline in the boats. Hitler is sitting there in his wheelchair and his buddy is sitting there in his wheelchair. Hitler is reading the paper. The headlines are: "German Riots, Neo Nazis Attack Immigrants." He looks at his friend and he says, "Pack your bags Borman. It's time."

So, it's interesting that even the secular media has picked up on the significance of some of what is going on because whoever did this didn't have a particular religious "ax to grind." But it's like even the world is beginning to grasp that something is happening and it makes them a little bit uncomfortable. They don't quite know.

We can have understanding as to what is happening, to where it is going to lead and how it will culminate. Not that we know every detail and can plug in dates and specific names for every specific thing. God hasn't revealed all of those details to us, but He has revealed a broad outline, an overview. He revealed something that enables us to make sense of the world in which we live and to understand from whence we came, where we are going and how the events in which we are living are going to culminate.

I am going to do it a little differently this evening. We finished up in Revelation 13. I want to carry that over into Revelation 17, which sort of picks it up, and then I am going to come back to Revelation 14 and 15.

I want to read a couple of quotes out of this book, The Holy Roman Empire in the Middle Ages. This is from one particular historian, Johannes Holler. He says, "In the memory of the German people, the old empire [speaking of the Holy Roman Empire] lives on as a time of greatness and splendor that must one day come to life again."

That's sort of an interesting thing and in many ways, sort of ties in with the little editorial cartoon.

Last Bible study in Revelation 13, we talked about the image of the beast and how the papacy and the structure of the Roman Catholic Church derived from the structure of the old Roman Empire.

James Bryce, who was a famous British historian, a professor at Oxford University and also ambassador to the United States, wrote an article titled "The History of the Holy Roman Empire Must be Deduced from Its Theory." He says, "Thus the emperor [speaking of the Holy Roman emperor] answers in every point to his antitype, the pope. His power being yet of a lower rank, created on the analogy of the papal, as the papal [system] itself had been modeled after the elder empire."

This makes the clear statement that the papacy was modeled after the elder empire, the old Roman Empire. Keep that quote in mind.

Let's look at Revelation 13:14, "And he deceives those who dwell on the earth by those signs which he was granted to do in the sight of the beast, telling those who dwell on the earth to make an image of the beast who was wounded by the sword and lived." Who was the beast that was wounded? The old Roman Empire came to an end. So, they said, 'We should make an image of the beast.' He says that the papacy itself was modeled after the elder or the old Roman Empire.

Holler says, “The parallel holds good even in its details, for we have seen the churchmen assuming the crown and the robes of the secular prince. The Holy Roman Church and the Holy Roman Empire are one and the same thing seen from different sides. Catholicism, the principal of the universal Christian society, is also Romanism. That is, it rests upon Rome as the origin and type of its universality, manifesting itself in a mystic dualism...”

I like that expression, and it seems like we read about mystic things here. In fact, we read of something called Mystery Babylon the Great.

It says, “...manifesting itself in a mystic dualism as divine and eternal, its head is the pope to whom souls have been entrusted as human and temporal the emperor commissioned to rule men’s bodies and acts.”

Just a couple of other things: this was part of the teaching; this is speaking in the latter part of the thirteenth century. It is a book that was written about the Roman Empire and its translation to Germany. It goes through and the point that it makes is: ‘It was the will of God, not of men, that led to the granting of the Roman Empire to Germany.’

Maybe just one or two others: “The empire was always viewed as the city of God and the emperor as the vicar of Christ. His first duty being the furtherance of justice and law.”

A couple of other quotes: “The task of the empire was to be God’s protagonist on earth, to fulfill His aims here, to protect Christianity and the church, to preserve the righteousness of God and the divine order of the Universe on earth.”

That’s just a fancy way of saying that when you read about the mark of the beast and about how the papacy exercised the power of the first beast, their allegiance must be given to the empire.

Revelation 13:12, “And he exercises all the authority of the first beast [the old Roman Empire] in his presence, and causes the earth and those who dwell in it to worship the first beast, whose deadly wound was healed.” It pointed people toward the fact that their devotion, allegiance and loyalty must be given to the empire. The beast ultimately enforced a mark and persisted in these things.

Holler says, “The most important struggle assigned to the Holy Roman Empire was the fight against infidels. [Infidels were somebody who didn’t believe what they believed; this was the basis of all the religious persecution.] The Holy Roman Empire was made synonymous with the people of God, with Christendom. In the imperial symbols, this claim was displayed to the whole world with the imperial apple filled with earth from the four corners of the world. The emperor holds the whole world in his hands. The royal gold of the crown signifies the dominion over the world.”

The Holy Roman emperors were crowned and one of the things that they received was this golden apple. In this apple were four spoons of earth taken from what were considered symbolically the four corners of the earth. Four extremities symbolized the fact that he ruled the world as God’s vice regent. He didn’t exercise real power over the whole world, but as far as he was concerned, he did. And this was accepted. You’ve heard the song “He holds the whole world in his hands.” Did you know the Holy Roman emperor made that claim?

The imperial crown was called “corona urbis et orbis.” In other words, “The crown of the city and of the globe”—speaking of the crown of Rome and of the world. That was the way he was. The title he carried as Holy Roman emperor was “caput mundi” which means “head of the world” and “dominator orbis et urbis” which means “lord of the globe and of the city.” So, he was the head of the world, the ruler of the globe and the ruler of Rome. Rome was sort of on a level with all the rest of the world. I think it’s interesting to understand that this is the symbolism and these are the claims to which the Holy Roman Empire laid claim during the Middle Ages.

Here’s another thing that ties in with the matter of the image of the beast. Speaking of the original Roman Empire before its collapse, Holler says, “The dismantling of the emperor’s priestly powers were paralleled by the pope’s accumulation of the titles, ranks, offices and duties of the emperor. [This of course happened. Even the title “Pontifex Maximus,” which is commonly used by the pope, was previously a title of Roman emperors.] The Roman church was the unique legitimate successor of the Roman Empire, the empire of ancient Rome. [Only papal Rome could be Rome’s heir.] The pope was the only lawful inheritor of the rights and authority of the old Roman emperors.”

Anyway, enough quotes. But I think it gives you a flavor that, certainly, even secular historians, who are not writing from any religious standpoint, focus in on the correlation between the Roman Catholic Church and the old Roman Empire and ultimately the Holy Roman Empire, which was revived by the papacy during the Middle Ages.

If you have the chart, you can follow that down and look at the one thousand two hundred sixty years of continuation of that Holy Roman Empire through the various emperors that were crowned.

Revelation 17:1-3, we find, “Then one of the seven angels who had the seven bowls came and talked with me, saying to me, ‘Come, I will show you the judgment of the great harlot who sits on many waters, with whom the kings of the earth committed fornication, and the inhabitants of the earth were made drunk with the wine of her fornication.’ So he carried me away in the Spirit into the wilderness. And I saw a woman sitting on a scarlet beast which was full of names of blasphemy, having seven heads and ten horns.”

To call itself the Holy Roman Empire was in itself a blasphemous title because “Holy and reverend is God’s name” (KJV, Psalm 111:9). Here was a title that was attached. This was not really the Holy Roman Empire, but this was the way they termed it.

A woman, of course, is used in prophecy to symbolize a church. Here, we find quite a contrast to the true Church, which is symbolized as a chaste virgin waiting for Jesus Christ who’s coming back as the husband to marry the Church (Revelation 19:7).

Here we find a woman who is pictured as the very opposite of a virgin. She is described as a great whore.

Verse 5, she is, we are told, “...THE MOTHER OF HARLOTS AND OF THE ABOMINATIONS OF THE EARTH.” She entered into illicit relationships with kings of the earth.

The true Church is compared to a virgin, in that the Church does not enter into relationships with the civil governments of this world. The Church looks to Jesus Christ as the One who is in the role of the Protector and Provider for the Church.

Here we find a description of a church that has entered into many alliances and relationships with all sorts of civil governments. And she has harlot daughters. Her daughters are the offspring of her relationship with all of these kings of the earth. Right? If she is the mother, then who is the daddy? There’s a bunch of daughters and all of them have different fathers. You find that nearly all of the churches that came out of the reformation were national churches. The Lutherans in Germany, the Church of England, or the Anglicans in Britain—you had all of these different churches that came out that were national churches. They held on to the basic traditions that came from “Big Mama.” They held on to Sunday, Christmas and Easter—the whole overview and perspective that they had derived from her, but they each had a nationalistic flavor. You had state churches in all of the various Protestant nations: Norway, Denmark, Sweden, Germany, England and Scotland. All the Protestant nations had their own state church. You had the Dutch Reform Church or you had the Lutheran Church, which was the state church in each of the Scandinavian nations plus Germany. Each one of those had its own little brand. The Church of England—the Anglican or Episcopal Church—was the state church of England. The Presbyterian Church was the state church of Scotland. They were the daughters. They were fathered by the kings of the earth and were mothered by the Great Whore of Babylon—just to be very plain and say what the Bible says.

Verse 5, we are told she is called, “...MYSTERY BABYLON, THE MOTHER OF HARLOTS AND OF THE ABOMINATIONS OF THE EARTH.” This is the mystery religion that originated in Babylon now grown great.

Verse 6, “And I saw the woman, drunk with the blood of the saints and with the blood of the martyrs of Jesus....”

Verses 3 and 7 describe a beast that is ridden by the woman. When someone rides a horse, they are astride the horse. But sometimes you mount a frisky horse and he doesn’t always do exactly what you want him to do. Sometimes he sort of gets away from you for a while.

If any of you have ever ridden very much, you know that if you are sitting in the saddle, you are supposed to be in control. But sometimes you are not in as complete control as you would like. Sometimes he tries to throw you off. Sometimes he takes off running and you spend quite a while trying to slow him down or keep him from trying to jump something he’s going to jump or from going in the direction he wants to go in. If you manage to sit in your saddle, you can eventually regain control, but he may be a frisky creature.

Well, that’s the history of the woman and the beast. She’s ridden the beast. She’s managed not to be knocked off and thrown out of the saddle. Sometimes the beast was a little more docile when she said “whoa” or when she said “giddy-up.” Other times he sort of had a mind of his own and she just held on for the ride. That has sort of been the history of the woman and the beast that you read of down through the period of the Middle Ages. She's continually remained in the saddle. She hasn't always been able to exercise as total a control as what she would like, but she never got bucked off. She always managed to sort of ride it out. If you have that picture in mind, then when you read the history of the events, you can sort of visualize it that way.

Notice on your chart, it lays it out in several ways. Daniel 2, Daniel 7, as well as Revelation 13 and Revelation 17 are laid out as the main groupings. There is Daniel 8 as well, which focuses in on the ram and the goat.

You will find that Daniel sees the beast from his perspective. He was writing almost six hundred years before John was writing. Daniel saw it at the time when the beast was first arising. Daniel actually saw four different creatures, but there were seven heads between them. He saw them as distinct empires: Babylon came up, Persia came up, Greece came up, which split into four heads. Then the fourth terrible creature (the Roman Empire) came up. It had the ten horns, the successive revivals of it. He viewed it that way.

When John was writing about six hundred years later, the Babylonians, the Persians and the Greeks had passed into history and the Romans were on the scene. The Romans had swallowed up the aspects of all the predecessors. John looked at it as one creature. It had seven heads and out of that seventh head came ten horns.

In Daniel, the fourth beast had the ten horns. But if you count heads, it was the seventh head. That's what John saw. He saw it as one creature. The seventh head was the focus that he placed attention on because that was what was viable in his day. And he saw these ten horns. He saw that creature dying. He saw that succession ending. He saw the old Roman Empire collapsing—the deadly wound. Then he saw it revived and it was revived in a particular way.

When you come to Revelation 17, we pick up something a little different. Notice on your chart that the entire creature of Revelation 17 is ridden by the beast. The only part of the beast of Revelation 13 dominated by the woman (the church) was the last seven horns. The Catholic Church did not dominate Babylon, Persia, Greece, the original Roman Empire and the first three successor states to it (the Vandals, the Heruli and the Ostrogoths). None of those were dominated and controlled by the Catholic Church. But beginning with the Imperial Restoration in 554 A.D., there was a period of papal domination.

The final seven horns of Revelation 13 are comparable to the seven heads of Revelation 17. It is laid out on the chart in that way. What we are focusing on, in Revelation 17, is simply the creature that the woman rode.

Revelation 17:11, we are told, “‘And the beast that was, and is not, is himself also the eighth, and is of the seven, and is going to perdition [destruction].”

That's sort of a very ambiguous statement. If you break it down, “the beast that was” was the Roman Empire; “is not,” it ceases. What comes back when the wound is healed is really, in effect, sort of “the eight” if you're looking back to Revelation 13 where you had the seven-headed creature. The beast that was and then is not because it's cut off, receives a deadly wound. When it is revived, in one sense, it is like the eighth. It is like another entity that has come up, and yet it's really of the seven. It's just a continuation. In some ways, it looks like something different, and yet it's really just a continuation of the previous creature. It is ultimately going into perdition. It's going into destruction.

Speaking of the seven heads, a very interesting thing comes out.

Revelation 17:10, “‘There are also seven kings. Five have fallen, one is, and the other has not yet come. And when he comes, he must continue a short time.” Have you ever stopped and thought about that? The statement, “‘five are fallen, one is and one is yet to come,” can only be true at one precise short period of time. He didn't say that “‘one is fallen and six are yet to come” or that “‘three are fallen.” He says, “‘five are fallen.”

If you go down through the historical period, you are looking at Justinian the Great and his Imperial Restoration, which began the revivals of the beast. It is the beginning of this creature that the deadly wound was healed. Justinian the Great, the revival under Charlemagne, the revival under Otto the German, the revival under the Habsburgs (Hapsburgs in English) and the revival under Napoleon—that's five. And they are fallen. The time setting for v. 10 is after Napoleon because five of the kings are fallen.

The sixth revival was what? The sixth revival began with the unification of Italy under Garibaldi in the 1870s and culminated with the revived Roman Empire of Mussolini that ended at the end of World War II in 1945—“one is.” The other is “not yet come.” That's the one that's still has not yet come. Today we wouldn't say the “‘five are fallen and one is and the other is not yet come.” Today we would say, “‘six are fallen and one is not yet come.” The time setting of v. 10 makes sense in the context of the time when Mr. Herbert Armstrong came to understand these things back in the late 1920s/early 1930s. That is the period that was specifically prophesied of.

When Daniel wrote the prophecies, he didn’t know what they meant. Was he told, ‘I gave you these things to confuse you because nobody will ever know what they mean?’ That’s not what he was told.

Daniel 12:9, he was told, “...‘Go your way, Daniel, for the words are closed up and sealed till the time of the end.’”

Verse 10, then he was told, “...and none of the wicked shall understand, but the wise shall understand.” If we are in the time of the end, then the wise should understand. If somebody doesn’t understand, perhaps they are not wise because it says the wise will understand. Right?

Where do you get wisdom?

Psalm 111:10, “The fear of the Lord is the beginning of wisdom; a good understanding have all those who do His commandments....”

It’s interesting. When God began working with Mr. Herbert Armstrong, the first thing he learned was about the Sabbath and the Holy Days. That was the starting point. His willingness to keep the Sabbath and Holy Days was the basis by which God opened his mind to understand other things. If he hadn’t been willing to keep the Sabbath and the Holy Days, he never would have understood the rest. That was the starting point.

Obedience is the key. That is the starting point.

Daniel 12:4, the angel told Daniel, “‘But you, Daniel, shut up the words, and seal the book until the time of the end....’” But at the time of the end, the wise will understand.

It is important to understand and to realize that because the statement is made in Daniel 12:9-10, “And he said, ‘Go your way, Daniel, for the words are closed up and sealed till the time of the end. Many shall be purified, made white, and refined [KJV, “tried”]....’” That’s God’s Church down through the ages. People have been called out. They have been purified, made white and cleansed by God’s power. They have been tried. They have gone through trials and difficulties.

Continuing v. 10, “...but the wicked shall do wickedly; and none of the wicked shall understand, but the wise shall understand.” That is a very clear-cut promise and a very clear-cut prophecy. You can go through many scriptures to understand all about where wisdom comes from. So, we shouldn’t be surprised that the wise understand. We shouldn’t be surprised that some of these things are understood. As we move forward in time and we get closer to the end, even more details become apparent.

It’s sort of interesting that in Revelation 17:10, the time is zeroed in. God already had the time period in mind because God knew when the time of the end was. Right? He didn’t just start wondering if it is at the time of the end.

Isaiah 46:9-10 says, “‘...For I am God, and there is no other; I am God, and there is none like Me, declaring the end from the beginning, and from ancient times things that are not yet done, saying, “My counsel shall stand, and I will do all My pleasure.”’” God declares the end from the beginning. He knows where He’s going before He ever starts, which is part of the basis of our faith of trusting Him.

Revelation 17:12-13, we are told, “‘And the ten horns which you saw are ten kings who have received no kingdom as yet, but they received authority for one hour as kings with the beast. These are of one mind, and they will give their power and authority to the beast.’”

We have a picture of ten kings, ten rulers in Europe that merge their power and relinquish power to one great super ruler. Traditionally, that sort of thing has only happened in the context of a crisis. People get scared. When you put other prophecies together, I think we have pretty clear indications of some of the things that are going to scare them.

You have to realize what Europe has gone through. I should give a sermon on this. I don’t want to take too much Bible study time or we won’t get to the rest of the Bible study.

You have to realize what has happened to Europe in the twentieth century. Europe completely and totally dominated the world at the beginning of the twentieth century. You know what happened to Europe? Ethnic strife in the Balkans got out of hand in the early part of the century—1910, 1911 and 1912. It had been simmering and finally erupted. It was drawn more and more into it until it finally erupted in 1914 as World War I—the bloodiest, deadliest war in which Europe was ever engaged.

When the war was over, Europe was in shambles. All the old continent-based empires—the German Empire, the Austrian Empire and the Russian Empire—had all collapsed into shambles. Within a generation, it set the stage for the things that produced Hitler and Mussolini coming to power. Again, the world was plunged into World War II, which was sort of retribution. The Germans were really sort of “licking their wounds” for what had happened a few years earlier. World War II ended in 1945. Britain and France, who possessed overseas empires, had managed to hold on and even flourish in the aftermath of World War I. But by the time World War II was over, everything in Europe was exhausted. The Russians dominated all of Eastern and Central Europe. That “scared the daylight” out of Western Europe, which was too exhausted to do anything else. The empires of Britain and France now dissolved in the aftermath of World War II and Europe was in the very humbling position of having to be dependent on the United States to protect them for a period of several decades.

Now everything on the world scene has changed. What are they looking at now? They are looking at a situation where—guess what! They are still “going at it” down in the Balkans, and it’s about to get out of hand again. There are already some that are afraid because this thing keeps spreading.

What happens is every one of these little, tiny entities there in the Balkans has friends elsewhere. Serbia, historically, has had connections with Bulgaria and Russia because they are all Orthodox. In portions of the rest of it, they had connections with Turkey because they are Muslim. In Bosnia and some of that area, there is a great deal of animosity. They are already looking at a potential of Greece, Bulgaria, Turkey and Albania being dragged in. There are tremendous arms sales going on right now. In fact, Greece has bought all sorts of armaments that the United States is discarding in Germany. The Germans have turned around and sold them to the Greeks. What do you think the Greeks are going to do with them? Well, why are they buying them? They are buying them because they are preparing to shoot somebody with them. And what the Greeks haven’t bought, the Turks have bought.

There are no two people that hate each other any more than the Greeks and the Turks. They have been “going at it” for the better part of a thousand years. They have been “at it” ever since the Turks came into that area of the world. You are looking at a bubbling caldron of hatreds and animosities that is getting out of hand. The only time those people have ever had peace is when some empire has sort of ruled over them and kept them in check. As soon as everybody else leaves them alone, they start shooting at one another again. That has sort of been their history.

But the thing is that other people get dragged in. That doesn’t have the effect on us that it has in Europe. It “scared the daylight” out of them because they know what happened the last time they stood by and let things get “out of hand” in the Balkans. It cost them world domination for the better part of a century—for three-quarters of a century. It totally disrupted them. They spent the twentieth century rebuilding and trying to recoup what they lost; they don’t want to go through that again. It frightened them in a way that it doesn’t frighten us because they saw what happened the time it had gotten “out of hand.” It blew up into a mess for them. That scares them.

As this thing continues to go along and as the situation gets more and more volatile in Europe, they see their future, their peace and their prosperity threatened. Crisis in the Middle East and trade war with the Anglo Saxon powers is coming. Whether it erupts over this particular issue or not, it’s in the air and it’s building. God is the One who knows the timing of it. I don’t necessarily expect this is going to bring full-scale trade war, but it heightens the tensions and is setting the stage.

We have a lot of things going and, of course, we have a very sizable percentage of the good Catholics in America and probably a majority of the house of bishops who are ready to tell the pope, ‘Go fly a kite. We will ordain women if we want to.’ They are not quite prepared to tell him in those words, but I’m sure he gets the message. I don’t think this pope cares for it very much. The problem with American Catholics is they want to put everything to a vote. When he tells them something “infallible,” he expects them to accept it. So, things are building and we read of it right here in Revelation 17.

Now let’s go back to Revelation 14. It is an inset and it pictures the Lamb standing on Mount Zion and the one hundred forty-four thousand with Him. We are looking at a time after Christ’s return—a time when He will stand on Mount Zion and the one hundred forty-four thousand are with him. They learned a song that no one else was allowed to learn. The one hundred forty-four thousand, we are told, represent the firstfruits (vv. 1-4).

We see three angels who fly in the midst of heaven (vv. 6-9). Remember there are three heavens in Scripture. The heavens can refer to where the clouds are and where the birds fly, the birds of heaven or the clouds of heaven. Outer space is referred to as the heavens. We use that term; we talk about looking up into the heavens, speaking of the stars, the moon and the sun. Then there is what the Apostle Paul calls in II Corinthians 12:2, the third heaven, which is the heaven of God’s abode. So, three different places are designated as heaven. When this angel flies through the midst of heaven (v. 6), this is obviously the first heaven because he's preaching. He proclaims a message that the hour of judgment is come (v. 7).

Revelation 14:8-10, immediately after him, "And another angel followed, saying, 'Babylon is fallen, is fallen, that great city, because she has made all nations drink of the wine of the wrath of her fornication.' Then a third angel followed them, saying with a loud voice, 'If anyone worships the beast and his image, and receives his mark on his forehead or on his hand, he himself shall also drink of the wine of the wrath of God, which is poured out full strength into the cup of His indignation. And he shall be tormented with fire and brimstone in the presence of the holy angels and in the presence of the Lamb.'"

We read here that these things are going to be poured out right at the time when Christ returns.

Verse 12, we are told, "Here is the patience of the saints; here are those who keep the commandments of God and the faith of Jesus."

The saints are defined as those who keep God's commandments and have the faith of Christ.

Verses 14-16, "And I looked, and behold, a white cloud, and on the cloud sat One like the Son of Man, having on His head a golden crown, and in His hand a sharp sickle. And another angel came out of the temple, crying with a loud voice to Him who sat on the cloud, 'Thrust in Your sickle and reap, for the time has come for You to reap, for the harvest of the earth is ripe.' So He who sat on the cloud thrust in His sickle on the earth, and the earth was reaped." It describes the events that were going on.

It goes right on. We see the seven last plagues beginning to be poured out.

Revelation 15:1-3, "Then I saw another sign in heaven, great and marvelous: seven angels having the seven last plagues, for in them the wrath of God is complete. And I saw something like a sea of glass mingled with fire, and those who have the victory over the beast, over his image and over his mark and over the number of his name, standing on the sea of glass, having harps of God. And they sing the song of Moses..."

If the Old Testament has been done away as a lot of Protestants think, why would they be singing the song of Moses?

It mentions this sea of glass. The Bible makes reference back in Ezekiel 1 to a very amazing picture. Ezekiel saw something and he was certainly amazed by it. He saw what originally looked like a whirlwind. It looked like a tornado coming toward him. Of course, that scared him. When it got closer, it looked even worse. It looked like there was fire in it and was enfolding itself. Well, you can imagine. He's just standing there and sees this thing getting closer and closer. Then when it gets even closer and he can make out something out of it, he sees out of all of this the most awesome sight he's ever seen. There appears to be this great sea of glass and on it was a throne. There was all the brilliance of color, the rainbow and the One like the Son of God sitting there. Under it were these creatures that had an amazing look to them.

You couldn't call it a UFO because it is fully identified. It's not an unidentified flying object; it's an identified flying object. It was like some conveyance by which God transported Himself and it appeared here to Ezekiel. You find described this sea of glass, a crystal sea.

Evidently when you put Revelation 14, 15 and 16 together, when Christ returns, we are told that He returns in a cloud (Matthew 24:30; Revelation 1:7).

I Thessalonians 4:16-17, we are told, "...and the dead in Christ will rise first. Then we who are alive and remain shall be caught up together with them in the clouds to meet the Lord in the air..." Now, we know from Zechariah 14:4 that in that day His feet will stand on the Mount of Olives. But does He just come down instantly? Well, it says we meet Him in the clouds. So, there's a point at which we meet Him. What happens at that time?

Let's put chapters 14, 15 and 16 together. In Revelation 14, it describes Him there in the clouds watching these plagues being poured out. We are told in Revelation 14:10 that they are poured out in His presence. Revelation 15:2 describes the saints standing on the sea of glass. Very likely, as Christ returns, there is a period of about a day that these things are actually poured out. We are there in the area of the clouds. It is a time when rewards are given out. It is a time when we see the things that are transpiring because all of these things are poured out in His presence.

Revelation 15:2-3 describe the resurrected saints standing on this sea of glass and singing praises, singing the song of Moses. Then there is a vision of what happens in heaven when the seven angels come out of the temple having the seven last plagues (vv. 6-8). And then the first angel goes to pour out his bowl (Revelation 16:1).

Revelation 16:2, "So the first went and poured out his bowl upon the earth, and a foul and loathsome sore came upon the men who had the mark of the beast and those who worshiped his image.”

I don't think we can necessarily prove this one hundred percent, but I think the clear indication is that these plagues have a duration of hours, not a day, weeks or months. My basis of saying that is looking at some of the plagues.

Revelation 16:3, “Then the second angel poured out his bowl on the sea, and it became blood as of a dead man; and every living creature in the sea died.” How long could life on the planet survive if all the sea became blood and everything in the sea died? –Hours or maybe a day or two. This is not a plague that could endure for weeks or months. There simply wouldn't be any life on the planet within a very short period of time. You are looking at something that very likely could only go on for hours.

Verse 4, “Then the third angel poured out his bowl on the rivers and springs of water, and they became blood.” Well, life on the planet can't survive with that. You are looking at maybe hours before everything that's left alive begins to die.

Verse 8, “Then the fourth angel poured out his bowl on the sun, and power was given to him to scorch men with fire.” We find the scorching heat, solar flares and activity. People are scorched.

Verse 10, “Then the fifth angel poured out his bowl on the throne of the beast, and his kingdom became full of darkness...” You are looking at things that can only last for very short durations of time.

Verse 12, “Then the sixth angel poured out his bowl on the great River Euphrates, and its water was dried up, so that the way of the kings from the east might be prepared.”

Verses 13-14, “And I saw three unclean spirits like frogs coming out of the mouth of the dragon, out of the mouth of the beast, and out of the mouth of the false prophet. For they are spirits of demons, performing signs, which go out to the kings of the earth and of the whole world, to gather them to the battle of that great day of God Almighty.”

These demon spirits are allowed to go forth and to bring about this convergence of armies. How long does it take armies that are ready and mobilized to converge? How long does it take airplanes and helicopters to fly a hundred miles? We are not talking about days and months. We are not talking about people having to ride for nine months to get somewhere. We are talking of military buildup that's already there and ready.

These demon spirits are allowed to go out and stir up this convergence at Armageddon to strike at this time. We are looking at something that will culminate with the seventh plague, and Christ Himself returns to the earth.

Zechariah 14:4, we are told, “And in that day His feet will stand on the Mount of Olives...” His coming is a deliberate coming. We are told in other places the saints meet Him in the heights of the clouds (I Thessalonians 4:17). We meet Him at cloud level. Evidently we remain there for a period of time because when you look at Revelation 14:14, he said, “And I looked, and behold, a white cloud, and on the cloud sat One like the Son of Man, having on His head a golden crown, and in His hand a sharp sickle.”

Verse 10, we are told, “...And he shall be tormented with fire and brimstone in the presence of the holy angels and in the presence of the Lamb.”

When the seventh trumpet sounds, the seven plagues are poured out (Revelation 11:15, 18; Revelation 15:1). The seventh trumpet is also the signal for the return of Christ and the resurrection. So, you are looking at events that everything culminates within a very short period of time.

There's a reason why it has to get so catastrophic. People have to come to a point of utter desperation where they give up on everything else. People can go through a lot and still think that somehow they can do it. The only way the world is going to surrender to God is to come to a point where they have bottomed out so much that they are absolutely convinced that they are totally powerless to solve the problem. Everything becomes unmanageable and they give up.

We're not at that point yet. People think all they have to do is elect “so and so.” People think, “We have a new Democratic President. He will be able to work with the Democratic Congress and that will solve all the problems.” If any of you hold to that illusion, I hate to disappoint you, but I don't think that's going to happen. That's not going to solve all the problems. If we had reelected President Bush, he couldn't have solved all of the problems either. The point is not that somehow we are going to elect the right guy and he's going to fix it. If man could fix it, he'd fix it. People have to be convinced. They are not convinced. They don't need Christ to come back. They think we can fix our own problems—they are not that bad.

God's going to say, 'Just all come down.' The kind of things that can begin to happen is incredible. It's going to take the very supernatural intervention of God Himself to put a stop to these things.

Revelation 16:17, the seventh angel pours out his bowl into the air.

When Christ comes back we are told in vv. 18-21, "...and there was a great earthquake, such a mighty and great earthquake as had not occurred since men were on the earth. Now the great city was divided into three parts, and the cities of the nations fell. And great Babylon was remembered before God, to give her the cup of the wine of the fierceness of His wrath. Then every island fled away, and the mountains were not found. And great hail from heaven fell upon men, every hailstone about the weight of a talent [about one hundred twenty pounds]...." Now that's incredible.

I didn't bring it, but there's an interesting article in the newest Newsweek magazine. It talks about what would happen if meteors and things of different weights and sizes fell on the earth and the things that can happen. It's just incredible. We have historic records of some things that have happened. There are geologic records of things far greater that have happened, which go back, undoubtedly, to some of the great cosmic battles of Satan's rebellion. Scientists don't understand that's what it was, but we are told. Of course, the whole basis of the Tribulation is that Satan is thrust back down (Revelation 12:12-13). So, you may very well, in the tantrums that he throws, find cosmic things occurring. Even in some of the plagues, we are looking at consequences that are unleashed. In effect, God lets man have the consequences of what he has produced and what he has done by following the devil's way.

You're looking at an earthquake that is so tremendous that it just totally reshapes the topography of the earth. That's important because there are a couple of things that happen with that earthquake. Prophecies in the Old Testament talk about mountains being made low and valleys being made high. That doesn't mean everything is going to be made flat as a tabletop. It just means that the earth is made a more viable place.

Do you know why we have some of the problems in terms of climate that we have? Take rain for instance. We have the great American desert. Do you know why we have the great American desert? Because the Rocky Mountains are high enough that they block off the flow of the rain that blows in from the Pacific and so much of it doesn't cross over. You have the same thing in Africa with the Sahara Desert—the Atlas Mountains block off certain things. If you look at a globe, you'll find that you always have deserts on the other side of mountains. Look at the Himalayan Mountains. You have the great Gobi Desert of China. Mountainous areas divert and disrupt the flow of clouds, the moisture and rains that come in.

What are you going to do if you are going to make the deserts bloom like a rose (Isaiah 35:1)? Well, you are going to have to change the topography of the earth a little bit to where it changes the flow of the clouds that blow in from the sea. When the rain blows in, it doesn't all get dumped on one side of the mountain. It's able to flow across and provide a more even distribution.

We have vast areas of the earth that are uninhabitable. Perhaps somebody can live at the South Pole. We have scientific camps that are set up down there. But the South Pole is not a viable place to live. If you couldn't bring in food from other places, you couldn't live down there because you can't grow your food. It's too cold. There are vast areas of the earth that are too hot, too cold, too dry or too wet to be useful to man.

It's not that everything is going to become the same, but it's going to be balanced out enough that the entire earth is basically usable. If you have decent rainfall, then things open up and are usable in a different way. You won't have vast areas of desert that are uninhabitable.

You have vast areas that are now productive farmland. People can grow crops, run cattle, graze sheep and do things that are useful and viable. You go through great stretches of places like Nevada, Arizona and Colorado and you have vast areas where there either isn't any life or very little life that can be supported because rainfall is so sparse. The climate pattern needs to be changed. That's why there's this great earthquake that totally rearranges a lot of the earth's topography.

One of the things it's going to do was brought out in one of the sermons at the Feast when it was talked about how the Dead Sea becomes the living sea. You remember when Christ returns at the Mount of Olives, it splits in two—it divides—the great East-West Rift Valley. Part of the mountain moves to the north; part of it moves to the south. So, you have this Great Rift Valley that runs through. It connects the Dead Sea with the Mediterranean. There is a bubbling fountain called in Zechariah a fountain of "living water” that breaks forth from under Mount Zion (Zechariah 14:4-8).

Notice Revelation 16:3, “Then the second angel poured out his bowl on the sea, and it became blood as of a dead man; and every living creature in the sea died.”

Just hold your place and turn to Ezekiel 47:1, “Then he brought me back to the door of the temple; and there was water, flowing from under the threshold of the temple toward the east...”

Verses 2-8, there’s this bubbling fountain that comes out and it turns into a river. He saw the river and it stretches out and flows all the way to the Mediterranean. It flows across there.

Notice what it says in vv. 8-9, “Then he said to me: ‘This water flows toward the eastern region, goes down into the valley and enters the sea. When it reaches the sea, its waters are healed. And it shall be that every living thing that moves, wherever the rivers go, will live. There will be a very great multitude of fish, because these waters go there; for they will be healed, and everything will live wherever the river goes.’”

What’s going to happen to all these fish that died? Did you know fish are going to be resurrected? What it is—there is a healing that takes place. In other words, when this great earthquake occurs, this Great Rift Valley forms and this bubbling spring begins to come up. It is symbolic. It is there to remind us that life is going to flow forth from Jerusalem. This water will flow forth in this new channel. As it hits the Mediterranean, everywhere it touches, all of a sudden, it’s like a ripple effect and very rapidly life begins to spread around the earth. The waters that were like blood begin to change to be like water. All of sudden dead, stinking, putrid fish are healed. It becomes a living sea. Can you imagine what that’s going to be like and the impact of something like that? Immediately Christ begins to heal a wrecked and destroyed planet.

Some of the great calamitous events of Revelation 16 may very well endure for merely a matter of hours or in some cases days. Then there begins the removal of those consequences. Tremendous events begin to take place.

Revelation 17 provides an inset. It describes the woman riding the beast (v. 3, 7). We’ve already talked about that.

Verse 18, “And the woman whom you saw is that great city which reigns over the kings of the earth.” What was the great city? What city would John have called the great city that dominated the kings of the earth? That is Rome.

In fact in v. 9, it even alludes to the woman sitting on seven mountains or seven hills. Rome, of course, has traditionally been called the city of seven hills.

Revelation 18:1-2, “After these things I saw another angel coming down from heaven, having great authority, and the earth was illuminated with his glory. And he cried mightily with a loud voice, saying, ‘Babylon the great is fallen, is fallen...’” We’ve already seen that this was the second angel’s message. Here we see details as to what that meant.

Verse 2, “... ‘Babylon is fallen, is fallen, and has become a habitation of demons, a prison for every foul spirit, and a cage for every unclean and hated bird!’”

Where are Satan and his demons going to be restrained? Revelation 20:1 tells us that he is going to be put in a great bottomless pit; a great abyss, a great hole in the ground. Here in Revelation 18, you’re told where the hole in the ground is going to be. It’s where modern Babylon is. It’s going to become the habitation of demons, the prison of every foul spirit. It’s going to become the place where they are all going to be locked and restrained. What you find, and just to be very plain (we will see as we go through Revelation 18), that where Rome is, is going to become just one big giant nuclear crater into which Satan and his demons will ultimately be confined for the duration of the Millennium. What is called the “eternal city” will henceforth be known literally as the “infernal city.” That’s what it says. Babylon is fallen and it has become the habitation (the location) of all the demons. That’s where they are going to be.

Verse 3, “For all the nations have drunk of the wine of the wrath of her fornication...” She has intoxicated the nations with her false doctrines and teaching. What has come out from her has intoxicated the nations. It uses intoxication, a state of intoxication or stupor to describe the state of the nation. When somebody is intoxicated they have lost their sense of perspective. Their conduct and everything is all exaggerated. It’s out of control. That’s what we are looking at if you look up some of those words and terms in the dictionary. It’s a lack of and absence of sobriety. Sober conduct is conduct that is restrained, controlled and balanced. So, you are looking at what’s out of control, out of balance and unrestrained. That’s the state of the world.

Why is the world in the state that it’s in? Well, the world has imbibed of something that has given it a false sense. It’s interesting that when someone is intoxicated, they often have a very distorted sense of their own power and ability. If you try to argue with a drunk and tell him that he is too drunk to drive, there's one thing he knows and it's that he can do anything. He doesn't need for you to get in his way. He knows what he's doing. In fact, it's sort of proverbial about the drunk who's ready to take on everybody else in the bar. He can whip anybody in there.

From a spiritual standpoint, we are looking at a world that has become that way. Their sense of their own limitations is totally distorted. Just everything is distorted. It's out of control and exaggerated and that erupts in the situation that exists.

You see, rather than recognizing limitations and dependence upon God and having balanced sober judgment, we find that the world is described like being on a spiritual drunk. What the world has was supplied by Babylon the Great.

God says in v. 4, "... 'Come out of her, my people, lest you share in her sins, and lest you receive of her plagues.'" God's message to His people is, 'Don't be part of Babylon the Great.' God is going to deal with her.

Verses 8-10, "Therefore her plagues will come in one day—death and mourning and famine. And she will be utterly burned with fire, for strong is the Lord God who judges her. And the kings of the earth who committed fornication and lived luxuriously with her will weep and lament for her, when they see the smoke of her burning, standing at a distance for fear of her torment, saying, 'Alas, alas, that great city Babylon, that mighty city! For in one hour your judgment has come.'"

That, to me, is a pretty graphic description of a nuclear blast. You are standing afar off for fear of her torment. You see the smoke of her burning. What is it you see from a distance when a nuclear weapon has been dropped? You see this great mushroom-shaped cloud. You can see it for miles away. What do you do? You stay away for fear of her torment, for the radiation that's going to come down with it. You have the original blast, which is a great burning and melting. The heat is just incredible. If you read what happened when we bombed Hiroshima and Nagasaki, it's just incredible. I won't even go into the details because they are enough to turn your stomach when you realize some of the things that happened.

And you realize, in terms of power, the weapons we have today so far overshadow those. The heat that was generated and the melting point of certain things—you talk about utterly burned with fire. You're talking about something so hot that literally concrete is melted and disintegrated. It's not just blasted to smithereens. You know, when you melt concrete, you've gotten hot! You're looking at something that, at the flashpoint, the air catches on fire. That's what happens at the flashpoint. The air itself catches on fire because you reach the ignition point of oxygen and all the gasses in the air. So, the air itself is burning. That's an incredible thing. Even though we have the technology to do it, it just boggles our minds because it goes beyond what we are familiar with in our everyday life. That's what happens when one of these things occurs.

Verses 17-18, "For in one hour such great riches came to nothing." And every shipmaster, all who travel by ship, sailors, and as many as trade on the sea, stood at a distance and cried out when they saw the smoke of her burning, saying, "What is like this great city?"

These big ships that are out to sea converge and see this cloud going up. They know what's happened and they lament. Why? —Because the whole system and this city, which symbolized the very focal point of it, has collapsed.

Revelation 18 focuses more on the economic aspect. It talks about how all the merchants who have been made rich will weep and mourn because nobody buys their merchandise (v. 11). It describes their merchandise (vv. 12-15).

Verse 15, "The merchants of these things, who became rich by her, will stand at a distance for fear of her torment, weeping and wailing." It talks about the shipmasters (v. 17).

Babylon the Great is a great religious, military, political and economic combine: Revelation 13 focuses in on the military and the political aspects. Revelation 17 focuses in on the religious aspect. Revelation 18 focuses in on the economic aspect.

It is centered in Europe and centered in Rome. It is a great economic combine. That's why we have always understood that the European Common Market, in some ways, sets the stage for it. Not that the Common Market is going to evolve into the beast, but it is the basis. That's what they are trying to do. They are trying to build a great economic combine that will dominate the world economically. But they are reaching the point where they are being forced to understand that they won't successfully dominate the world economically unless there is military and political power to go with it. That's what they are being confronted with right now. Then they are going to have to face the fact that they are going to need a “glue” to hold everything together; that’s where religion comes in. That’s the part religion will play. It will be an emotional “glue” to hold things together.

The whole system is going to collapse at this point as described in Revelation 18.

Revelation 18:21, “...‘Thus with violence the great city Babylon shall be thrown down, and shall not be found anymore.’” We have the destruction of that system. This world’s society is headed toward a climax and a conclusion. As we look at the world and see what is transpiring on the world scene, we are seeing the coming together of some of these things. We are looking at something that is going to come together, and it is shaping up on the world scene right now. We have just little bits and pieces all around the world. We have the situation in the Middle East, the situation in the Balkans and the unsteadiness in Eastern Europe. We are seeing all of these things that are going on. Europe recognizes the need to do something. They recognize the need to put it together and, of course, a strong revived Germany right at the heart and core. Events are shaping up.

We don’t know the exact time frame. God hasn’t revealed those details, but He certainly gives us enough insight to understand the times in which we are living. These prophecies were written so that at the end time, the wise would understand. They are not put in the Bible just to take up space. It’s not that God wanted to write a book of so many pages and couldn’t think of anything else to say, so He threw in a few prophecies that take up a third of it that nobody would ever understand. You know, that doesn’t make sense. God doesn’t waste any words. What He says is there, and it is for our benefit. We have an overview, and as we see some of these things begin to come together and begin to converge, we need to really take heed to it.

We are almost to the end of our series on the book of Revelation. We have one more Bible study on Revelation. At that point, we will have completed going through the entire Bible.

Now you know everything you always wanted to know about the Bible, right? You have all the answers? No, there’s plenty more. Plenty more!

I will mention again that we do have a question box in the back. Because of the nature of a lot of these Bible studies of recent date, we haven’t been taking Bible study questions. I don’t want you to think we will never have a chance to ask questions at Bible study again. No, if you have some that you want to send up, you can put in the box. When we finish the series on Revelation, we’ll take what we have. If we have enough, we will make a Bible study out of it. If we don’t, we’ll answer the one or two that we have and we will go into a new series. With that we will be concluded this evening.

Mr. John Ogwyn

It has taken us five and one-half years to complete, but we are at the point of concluding this series of Bible studies this evening. We are down to the last four chapters of the last book, the book of Revelation. I think we've had some of you who have been here for just about all of this. You've had the opportunity to go through the entire Bible and that's good.

We've gone through the Bible in terms of books. After we've covered Bible study questions next time, I think we are going to get into a study of doctrines of the Bible. We will go into some things in that regard. No matter how many times you study the Bible, there's always more there that you can go back through. But this has given us an opportunity to go through it systematically.

There is one thing I would like to mention as we finish up the material for this evening. The last couple of Bible studies were focusing on the mid-section of Revelation—particularly the material involving the successions of the beast power and the things of that sort. The last time, as we were going through Revelation 17, we looked at the seven revivals of the Roman Empire that were to be dominated by the church—the woman of Revelation. Of course, that was pointed out on the chart that I handed out and in the Bible studies. That series of succession began with the Imperial Restoration by Justinian (the Eastern Roman emperor) in 554 A.D. That is when the “deadly wound” was healed (Revelation 13:3). That's what's called the “Imperial Restoration.”

Now, I would like to give you a little bit of background. We said that these were the specific revivals and the church dominated them. What is our basis of drawing that conclusion?

I have a couple of books I want to quote from. One is a volume entitled The Age of Faith by Will Durant. It's part of a multi-volume history. The other is an interesting book. It's entitled The Bad Popes. If they looked at all of them, perhaps the book could be longer than this. But it focuses in on seven medieval popes. It's not a religious attack on them. It focuses in on certain crisis periods of the medieval church. There are some interesting quotes. I will share a few of them with you.

When the Roman Empire collapsed in the West in 476 A.D. (if you look at your chart), that was prophetically called the “deadly wound.” At that point, the Roman Empire became divided between two successor states: the Heruli under Odoacer (also known as Odovacar) and the Vandals.

The Vandals took over the southern part of Italy and North Africa. They had come through Rome a little earlier. What they did to Rome is why the word “vandal” is in our English vocabulary today. That was originally the name of the people, but what they did to Rome has sort of given meaning to their name. Now, we talk about people “vandalizing” things, which means they did “like the Vandals did.” So, you can get a pretty good guess as to the way the Vandals did things. The Vandals wound up occupying the Western Roman Empire in terms of North Africa and up into the southern “boot” of Italy.

The Heruli under Odoacer came down and occupied the northern part of Italy and Rome. The Eastern Roman emperor recognized (he sort of de facto) those rulers as patricians and gave them a title and a rank. While they took the title “king” and ran the empire themselves, they continued the Latin language and many of the outward trappings of the Roman government. So, in that sense, they were a part of the Roman order but were greatly at odds with the papacy. The reason was that they were adherents, not to Catholicism, but to a particular brand of religion called Arianism. The Arians had certain heresies that they introduced. They were opposed to the doctrine of the trinity, which was fine, but their own explanation and approach in the other direction was just about as wrong as the Catholics. They introduced a different set of heresies.

The Vandals and the Heruli both claimed to be Christians but were Arians, not of Catholic persuasion. This, of course, was a considerable threat to the primacy of the bishop of Rome and the brand of Christianity to which he adhered. So, he besought Zeno, the emperor in the East (in Constantinople), to send troops to uproot and get rid of the Heruli and the Vandals. The emperor in the East didn't have any troops to send, but he paid the Ostrogoths (a Germanic people up north of Italy) to invade. They were also Arians. He paid them to invade and to cast out the Heruli, which they did.

His successor, Justinian, sent troops into North Africa at the behest of the pope and cast the Vandals out of North Africa. In the meantime as Theodoric (who was the king of the Ostrogoths) took over, the situation continued. Again, the papacy considered itself threatened. He appealed to the emperor Justinian. There was a war of about eighteen years duration called the Gothic War that finally ended in 553 A.D. By that point, all three—the Vandals, Heruli and Ostrogoths—had been uprooted from the Western Roman Empire.

If you remember Daniel's vision, when he saw the seventh head (the Roman head of the beast), it had ten horns. And then there was a "little horn" that came up out of it that had the first three horns plucked up (Daniel 7:7-8). The "little horn" was the papacy, which at his behest had the first three successive states, the Vandals, Heruli and Ostrogoths, "plucked up" because their brand of Christianity was a different brand. They were Arians as opposed to Catholic in their doctrine. So, this was the case.

Then 554 A.D. is called the date of the "Imperial Restoration." Here is what the Imperial Restoration entailed. In 554 A.D., Justinian promulgated a decree. He had cast out the Vandals, Heruli and the Ostrogoths. How was he going to govern Italy? He promulgated a decree requiring that "fit and proper persons, able to administer the local government, be chosen as governors of the province by the bishop and chief persons of each province" (Durant, pp. 519-520).

The bishop of Rome was now given the "deal" that was cut. When Justinian cast out the Vandals, Heruli and the Ostrogoths, he acquiesced to the right of the pope to choose the rulers in Italy. In that sense, they were to be subservient, looking to him as emperor in the East, but the actual rule in Italy was to be done by those who were chosen by the pope. It marked the "Imperial Restoration." The imperial powers—the powers of the Roman Empire—were restored. The power of the emperor was restored in the West.

That situation continued along for a short period of time. Justinian died and another group of people, called the Lombards, invaded Italy from the north. They invaded northern Italy and came down and took Rome. They were content to rule as vassals of the Roman emperor in the East, and they continued to send tribute to him. They were allowed to exercise power on behalf of the Eastern Roman Empire. This situation continued down.

Of course, the Imperial Restoration under Justinian was the first restoration. That continued for a period of time, and then an issue came up in 726 A.D. This is about one hundred seventy years later. Here is what arose.

This is quoting from the book entitled The Bad Popes: "The primitive Christians had attacked image worship as the work of the devil and there had been wholesale destruction of every type of idol when Christianity had at last triumphed. But over the succeeding centuries, the images crept back appearing under new names, but to the critical eye was an identical role. [Which, of course, is exactly right; all the old pagan insignias continued.] It was the Christians of the East who first began to feel that much of the pagan religion that their forefathers had destroyed at such cost in martyrs' blood was insensibly being restored. Disturbed by the mockery of the neighboring Muslims, a decree was issued."

Trouble came up. Let's come down. Roman emperor Leo, III solved the problem.

"In 726 A.D., the Eastern Roman emperor Leo, III, issued an edict commanding the breaking of all images throughout the empire in the West as well as the East."—So, the breaking of the idols.

Gregory II was pope. He was in the eleventh year of his reign. He wrote two letters to the emperor defying the edict and urging him to return to "the true path." This meant idol worship. The result was that finally in 731 A.D., a decree was issued by the pope at Rome pronouncing to "excommunicate all those who would attack the images of the saints." Things had come to a head over the issue of idol worship. There was a decline of Byzantine power in the East. The pope sort of severed the situation when he excommunicated the emperor and his adherents to the East for wanting to break idols. Oh, that was terrible to break all these pretty images.

Now he was faced with difficulty because the Lombards were making the situation even worse. They were pouring in. He sought to the Franks, to a man by the name of Pippin. In 755 A.D., the pope made a long journey to the Frankish court and besought Pippin to come down. Pippin, who was king of the Franks, came in and drove out the Lombards. The situation continued along.

Pippin is not very well known, but his son, Charlemagne, is much better known. Fifty years later there continued to be problems. The Lombards were coming in and Rome was threatened. Finally, Charlemagne came in and cleaned out things.

I will read this quote: "Charlemagne had hastened to Rome at the appeal of Pope Leo, III, to put down a rebellion. In return, on Christmas day 800 A.D., Leo crowned him emperor of the West.”

To give you a couple of details out of the other book, The Age of Faith: “Christmas day, Charlemagne, wearing the tunic and the sandals of a Roman patrician, knelt before St. Peter’s altar in prayer. Leo suddenly produced a jewel crown and set it on the king’s head. The congregation cried out, ‘Hail to Charles the Augustus, crowned by God, the great peace-bringing emperor of the Romans.’ The royal head was anointed with holy oil. The pope saluted Charlemagne as emperor and offered him the act of homage that had previously been reserved for the emperor in the East.”

First, there was the resurrection under Justinian; now, the resurrection under Charlemagne. This created a problem because now there were two emperors. The emperor in the East was a little bit miffed at the fact that somebody else was claiming to be Roman emperor. But finally in 812 A.D. (twelve years later), the Greek emperor recognized Charlemagne as co-emperor of the Romans; Charlemagne gave certain portions of Italy to the Eastern Empire.

A couple of other quotes: “Charlemagne and his advisors conceived of this new authority as a revival of the imperial power.”

It was a revival, a restoration, of the Holy Roman Empire. That’s what was taking place.

The situation continued. After Charlemagne’s death it says, “One hundred fifty years passed since Charlemagne had been crowned emperor of the West by the pope. During the century and a half, the crown of the empire had become the debased pretext for faction and war, even sort of a hollow title that continued on. Finally there were, again, invasions by revival of some of the Lombards and again invasions of Northern Italy. The pope again needed to look for a champion. This time he looked to Otto the Saxon German king. Otto came in, invaded Italy at the pope’s behest and finally reached Rome in 961 A.D. and cast out the Lombards at the behest of the pope.”

Then we are told: “Above the shrine of Peter, Otto knelt and received that crown, whose weight eventually crushed the crown of the German kingdom. On February 2, 961 A.D., the Holy Roman Empire came into being tying Italy and Germany together.”

Otto was crowned. We could go through the other revivals. I am not going to go through them all, but you can come down to the Habsburgs (“Hapsburg” in English). The final emperor to be crowned in the 1500s was Charles V. Charles the Great and the pope, having come in at his behest, again crowned the Habsburg emperor. You can go through the story of the crowning of Napoleon by the pope. The restorations of the empire are very much tied together. I think it is good to realize that even from secular sources we can document the outline that we have utilized.

Let’s continue. We covered Revelation 18 last time. We covered the destruction of the Babylonian system as it is outlined here.

Revelation 19:1-4, “After these things I heard a loud voice of a great multitude [angels] in heaven, saying, ‘Alleluia! Salvation and glory and honor and power to the Lord our God! For true and righteous are His judgments, because He has judged the great harlot who corrupted the earth with her fornication; and He has avenged on her the blood of His servants shed by her.’ Again they said, ‘Alleluia! And her smoke rises up forever and ever!’ And the twenty-four elders and the four living creatures fell down and worshipped God who sat on the throne, saying, ‘Amen! Alleluia!’”

Verses 7-9, “‘Let us be glad and rejoice and give Him glory, for the marriage of the Lamb has come, and His wife has made herself ready.’ And to her it was granted to be arrayed in fine linen, clean and bright, for the fine linen is the righteous acts of the saints. Then he said to me, ‘Write: “Blessed are those who are called to the marriage supper of the Lamb!”’....”

The bride represents the Church, the firstfruits, which are God’s called out people. You could go through Hebrews 11 and start out with righteous Abel all the way down through Enoch, Noah, Abraham and down through the centuries, down through the New Testament era and all the way down to our time and the time immediately ahead of us. We are told that the wife has made herself ready. She is arrayed in fine linen, clean and white, which is the righteousness of the saints.

The priests of ancient Israel wore white linen robes. Those things have significance. The white linen was symbolic of righteousness. We have to put on God’s righteousness.

Psalms 119:172, “...all Your commandments are righteousness.” It is righteousness that has to come from God because it’s not just the commandments in the letter. It goes beyond the letter to the spirit of the law as Christ magnified and amplified it. Those who will be in the marriage supper are clothed with fine linen.

That is the danger being pointed out to the Laodiceans in Revelation 3. They are poor and wretched and miserable and naked and blind

(v. 17). They have taken their clothes off and are too blind to know it. That's the problem you see. They are told that they need two things: they need to anoint their eyes with eye salve that they can see, and they need to get some garments that the shame of their nakedness may not be revealed (v. 18). What do they need to be covered with? With righteousness! We are told that any Laodiceans who are going to be a part of this are clearly those who have gotten spiritual sight where they could see; you can't work on a problem you don't see. The most dangerous problems are the problems you don't see. You can never work on something you don't see. The greatest affliction of the Laodiceans is that they don't see their condition. They are spiritually blind to the state they are in because if they could see themselves for what they were, then they could work to rectify the rest of it. Any of the Laodiceans that are going to be in this group are: 1) those who have gained some spiritual sight to where they could take stock of themselves and see what Christ sees and then 2) to have obtained spiritual garments from God to obtain righteousness.

The Church collectively is described symbolically as the bride of Christ. The firstfruits are at the marriage supper of the Lamb. John was overwhelmed with this.

Revelation 19:10, "And I fell at his feet to worship him. But he said to me, 'See that you do not do that! I am your fellow servant, and of your brethren who have the testimony of Jesus. Worship God! For the testimony of Jesus is the spirit of prophecy.'"

Jesus provided the testimonies (witness) that is the spirit of prophecy. The spirit is what gives life. God breathed into Adam the breath of life or the spirit of life, and Adam became a living soul. He didn't have a soul. He was a soul. What gives life and animation to prophecy is the testimony of Jesus, that which Jesus Christ bore witness of. Of course, the book of Revelation together with Matthew 24 and the parallel accounts are the backbone of the prophetic witness that Jesus bore. Much of the book of Revelation is direct quotation from Jesus Christ.

Revelation 1:1, "The Revelation of Jesus Christ, which God gave Him to show His servants—things which must shortly take place...." It was given as a revealing, as an unveiling.

Daniel 12:9-10, Daniel was told, "...Go your way, Daniel, for the words are closed up and sealed till the time of the end...none of the wicked shall understand, but the wise shall understand." It was intended to be opened up;

that was the whole purpose. God didn't give all this section of the Scriptures (a third of the Bible) to have a padlock on it until after Christ returned. If that was the case, He could have saved Himself (and us) the trouble and the extra space in the Bible.

We can only understand prophecy in the context of the gospel message that Jesus Christ brought and the specific things that He gave which provide so much of a framework.

Revelation 19:11-13, "Then I saw heaven opened, and behold, a white horse. And He who sat on him was called Faithful and True, and in righteousness He judges and makes war. His eyes were like a flame of fire, and on His head were many crowns. He had a name written that no one knew except Himself. He was clothed with a robe dipped in blood, and His name is called The Word of God."

"The Word of God" is a name that John uses throughout much of his writings in reference to Jesus Christ.

You read in John 1:1-3, "In the beginning was the Word, and the Word was with God, and the Word was God. He was in the beginning with God. All things were made through Him, and without Him nothing was made that was made."

As you come down in v. 14, "And the Word became flesh and dwelt among us, and we beheld His glory, the glory as of the only begotten of the Father, full of grace and truth." The Word of God is a reference to Jesus Christ.

Revelation 19:14-16, "And the armies in heaven, clothed in fine linen, white and clean, followed Him on white horses. Now out of His mouth goes a sharp sword, that with it he should strike the nations. And He Himself will rule them with a rod of iron. He Himself treads the winepress of the fierceness and wrath of Almighty God. And He has on His robe and on His thigh a name written: KING OF KINGS AND LORD OF LORDS."

Christ is going to have to strike (KJV, "smite") the nations. He is going to have to rule the nations with a rod of iron. Why? Because at the time of His return, there are many that are still going to be rebellious. Human will is a very difficult thing to break, and it's the matter as to why many of these horrible events have to occur. Before a person comes to a point of total and unconditional surrender to God, you have to come to a point where you recognize that your life, managed by you, is not good. Your life is unmanageable by you. You must admit that things are out of control and you can't fix it yourself. You have to be at the end of your rope to where you are ready to turn loose of self-will and unconditionally surrender.

It's interesting that in working with alcoholics, they say the first step an alcoholic has to take is to come to a point of admitting that they are powerless over their addiction and that their lives have become unmanageable. They have to recognize and accept the hopelessness of their condition. That is an interesting parallel because God draws a parallel with the world as on a spiritual drunk.

Revelation 17:2, “with whom the kings of the earth committed fornication, and the inhabitants of the earth were made drunk with the wine of her fornication.” He says that all nations have become drunk on the wine of the great whore. The world has been intoxicated with the false doctrines and teaching of the false religious system.

Behavior that is controlled by intoxication is behavior that is out of control. It's exaggerated. It lacks balance and proper perception. That's a pretty good description of the state of the world. It's out of control. Behavior and conduct is exaggerated. There is a lack of perception of what's normal and what's appropriate. The world is going to have to hit bottom. The world is going to have to come to a point where people are at the end of their rope. They will have to finally come to take that first step and to realize that they are absolutely powerless to fix it because they don't know how to fix it.

People don't think that right now. Oh, they think, 'We have a new president in there and he's going to solve it. We have a new governor in; he'll fix it.' How many have we already had? How many of them have fixed it? How many presidents have we already had, and how many leaders do we have around the world that were going to fix it? Back in the 1950s, the nation of Somalia thought all it had to do was get its independence from France and their problems would be solved. They'd have independence and they'd have freedom.

Look around the world. In effect, the whole world is going to have to be in that sort of “basket-case” condition for people to realize, Jeremiah 10:23, “...the way of man is not in himself; it is not in man who walks to direct his own steps.” The way of man is not in himself. That's why Christ is going to have to come back with a rod of iron (Revelation 19:15). He's not going to use the rod of iron on those who have a humble and contrite spirit and tremble at His word (Isaiah 66:2). The rod of iron is reserved for those who are still puffed up and cocky and “Nobody's going to tell me; I know what I am going to do” attitude. They are going to find out that God says, ‘No, your time is over.’ The sun will have set on man's six-day week. The millennial Sabbath will have started. God is going to say, ‘Your time is over. Christ is coming back as King of kings and Lord of lords’ (Revelation 19:16).

Revelation 19:19, “And I saw the beast, the kings of the earth, and their armies, gathered together to make war against Him who sat on the horse and against His army.” These armies have converged at Armageddon; suddenly they are going to turn their weapons on the returning Jesus Christ. This sort of reminds you of Psalm 2.

Psalm 2:4, “He that sits in the heavens shall laugh....” You know, little puny man!

They are going to come together. You know what Christ is going to do? He's going to pick up the beast and the false prophet. He will carry them and throw them alive into the lake of fire burning with brimstone (Revelation 19:20). Suddenly, the emptiness of that system is going to be shown. These two individuals, the beast and the false prophet that ride atop of it, are going to be picked up and cast in that lake of fire.

Evidently, this lake of fire is in the Valley of Hinnom outside of Jerusalem. It is between Jerusalem and the Mount of Olives, known in New Testament parlance as Gehenna.

There's a great earthquake that's going to hit at the time of Christ's actual return. The Mount of Olives splits in two (Zechariah 14:4-5)—tremendous earthquake activity.

Where are you going to get a lake of fire? That sounds like some sort of volcanic activity or something of that sort. A vast crater opens up and all of this bubbling, molten magma begins to come up. Instead of spewing out, it's just going to be coming up and bubbling up. We know there are things like that on earth. There are geysers that come up under tremendous pressure and all sorts of things.

When this gigantic earthquake hits, it's going to shift things around in such a way that there is actually going to be a lake of fire that is going to be there in this valley outside Jerusalem. The first two candidates for it are the beast and the false prophet. That sort of gets everybody else's attention. By the time the armies are consumed and the beast and false prophet are thrown in the lake of fire, then it's a matter of looking around and saying, ‘Okay, anybody else have any questions?’

All of a sudden, you are going to find that everybody is in a listening mode. Rebellion is not going to be tolerated. This lake burning with fire is going to be there throughout the Millennium. It will be there as a symbol of what's going to happen to individuals who are incorrigible, individuals who cannot be taught and will not submit.

Evidently, these two are the only ones tossed into this lake of fire at this time because the armies are consumed. They are literally consumed by the birds, by the buzzards and things of that sort. In fact, you can go back in other scriptures and find that there's going to be other things that come in. In one case, there's going to be an invasion and it takes seven months to clean up after that and to do all the burial (Ezekiel 39:11-14).

When Jesus Christ returns there are these great dramatic events that surround His return.

Revelation 20:1, "Then I saw an angel coming down from heaven, having the key to the bottomless pit [The bottomless pit is a great chasm as far down as can be imagined or measured; there isn't any discernable bottom, certainly, by human beings.] and a great chain in his hand."

Verses 2-3, "He laid hold of the dragon, that serpent of old, who is the Devil and Satan, and bound him for a thousand years; and he cast him into the bottomless pit...." This is not the lake of fire. It's a bottomless pit.

We read in Revelation 18:2 that when Rome is destroyed in these atomic blasts, there is a great crater that is left that becomes the habitation of every demon and every foul spirit. So, this is clearly the bottomless pit. There are caverns that are uncovered there that stretch down into the depths of the earth. Satan and his demons are confined there. They are not confined physically in the sense they couldn't get out. They are confined to that geographic location and are not able to get out because God doesn't allow them out. Undoubtedly, God places angels there and Satan is not allowed to come out throughout this thousand years.

Revelation 20:3-6, "and he cast him into the bottomless pit, and shut him up, and set a seal on him, so that he should deceive the nations no more till the thousand years were finished. But after these things he must be released for a little while. And I saw thrones, and they sat on them, and judgment was committed to them. And I saw the souls of those who had been beheaded for their witness to Jesus and for the word of God, who had not worshiped the beast or his image, and had not received his mark on their foreheads or on their hands. And they lived and reigned with Christ for a thousand years. (But the rest of the dead did not live again, until the thousand years were finished.) This is the first resurrection. Blessed and holy is he who has part in the first resurrection. Over such the second death has no power, but they shall be priests of God and of Christ, and shall reign with Him a thousand years."

It's interesting that this is the first place in the Scriptures that clearly defines the reign of the Messiah as being of one-thousand-year duration.

There is a brief allusion in Psalm 90:4. The term "thousand years" is mentioned, but it's a very vague poetic allusion. Peter quotes and paraphrases this section from Psalm 90 in II Peter 3:3-9 where he talks about scoffers thinking that the Lord delays His coming, that all things continue as they were and it's way off somewhere. They think it's remote and God's not going to intervene.

Peter goes through in II Peter and outlines it in a more definitive way. He gives a much clearer allusion to the fact of the parallels between the thousand years as with a day in God's plan. When you put it together with the allusions of the Old Testament to the reign of the Messiah being like a Sabbath, you certainly get an implication.

Isaiah 14:7 and other places allude to that. You get something that's implied, but you don't get a real clear-cut statement that the time of the Messiah is one thousand years. Peter explains and draws the allusion of the week—"one day is as a thousand years and a thousand years is as a day." The Jews, to whom Peter wrote, were very familiar with the fact that the time of the Messiah was compared to a Sabbath.

Isaiah 14:7, "The whole earth is at rest and quiet; they break forth into singing." That is the expression that is used. The whole earth is at rest or is observing a Sabbath because the word "Sabbath" is the Hebrew word for "rest." The whole world is Sabbatizing and they break forth into singing.

The allusion was understood, but you have to get to Revelation 20 (the very end of the Bible) before God really spells it out clearly. There is a progressive revealing of truth. But the progressive revealing is in the Bible.

A lot of worldly religions think the progressive revealing is the fact that the Bible was fine for its day, but as time goes on, people become a little smarter and they figure out a little more. The Catholics take that approach. That's the way they justify changing up the Bible with their own tradition. When they talk about progressive revelation, they mean that every generation understands things a little differently; each generation's experience sort of adds to it and God reveals through that.

God's revelation to man is complete in the Bible. Progressive revelation, from a Biblical standpoint, is the fact that God didn't tell everything there was to reveal in Genesis. You have to get to the book of Revelation before you get the end of the story. There is a progressive revelation, but the progressive revelation is between Genesis 1:1 and Revelation 22. There are more details that are continually added through the story, and when you get to the end of Revelation, we have everything we need.

We are going to notice that a little later. There's not some other revelation apart from the Bible. There may be deeper understandings of the Bible. But many of the Protestants believe that Biblical revelation isn't enough.

The flak going on today is that a lot of pressure is on the Catholic Church about ordaining women to the priesthood, and the same issue has come up in many of the Protestant churches. Their concept is that Biblical revelation isn't enough. They say that they didn't do it back then, but we have progressed a lot. Obviously, God should have changed with the times, has changed with the times and He would do it now. He just didn't do it back then. The Bible is not where they go.

The Catholics are sort of in a "pickle" on it because they don't want to ordain women. But if you will notice, they don't quote Scripture as proof. They just say they have the model that Christ didn't choose any women for the twelve apostles. And they lay claim to the apostolic succession. They don't quote Scripture. They don't quote I Corinthians 14:34 and others about women not preaching in the churches. The reason is because...

[Some wording was lost when tape was turned over.]

...sort of inference from other things and ignore the plain teachings of Scripture on it. They don't call on the strongest verses because if they started calling on verses to prove that, then people would pretty soon start calling on verses to prove a lot of other things, like images in the church and things of that sort. They don't want to get into having to cite chapter and verse on things.

The mindset of people tells us a little bit of the way people look at things. What it amounts to is people are reading contemporary culture back into the Bible. They operate under the illusion that somehow everything that is changed in human culture represents progress.

Well, the Bible says in II Timothy 3:13, "...evil men and impostors will grow worse and worse, deceiving and being deceived." The Bible doesn't teach historical progress in the sense of moral and cultural progress. It prophesizes that there would be technological progress, but there's a vast difference between technological progress and moral and cultural progress.

Some people say the solution to all the problems is education. It's interesting. Do you know what the first totally literate society in history was? The late nineteenth century Germany had total literacy—and they also had Adolph Hitler. Education didn't solve all their problems. Everybody in Germany could read and write. They prided themselves in being the first totally literate society. They had total, one hundred percent literacy. It's not a matter of if you can read; it's what you read. If you were reading Hitler's Mein Kampf rather than the Bible, you'd be better off if you couldn't read.

The whole foundation underlying the world's approach is faulty. The whole foundation on which our society is built is faulty. In Ezekiel 13:14, it talks about the foundations being uncovered. They are going to be uncovered and shown the hollow shells that they are.

We are going to reign for a thousand years. We could go back to the Old Testament and go through a lot of things about what those thousand years are going to be like. Revelation does not give us those details because they are found elsewhere.

Revelation provides the testimony of Jesus Christ, which is the spirit of prophecy (Revelation 19:10). It gives us a means of putting everything else together and making sense of it. If you had the book of Isaiah and you didn't have the book of Revelation, you wouldn't be able to put it together in terms of what's going to happen—when and what these periods are going to be. You'd know that there was a time of the Messiah, but wouldn't know when and you wouldn't know after what.

If you go through some of the Old Testament prophecies, in some of these books you find a chapter here that talks about "this," and then it skips over to "something else." It does not go through sequentially. It's topical. It will talk about the Tribulation here and it will talk about the Millennium there. Then it will talk about the Day of the Lord, then about the Tribulation again and then about something else. It just kind of hops, skips and jumps around.

When you understand the book of Revelation, then you have a framework. You can go back and plug in those chapters where they fit because you have a framework of a sequence of events. You have to have the book of Revelation to understand the sequence of events. And you have to have Matthew 24 to understand the book of Revelation. That's where the seals are opened up. It gives a broad outline. Now, there are details we are not going to understand until we get right down to that time. We will understand at the appropriate time. But there's a broad outline and the closer we get to the events, the more details we will understand.

Revelation 20:7-8, "Now when the thousand years have expired, Satan will be released from his prison and will go out to deceive the nations which are in the four corners of the earth, Gog and Magog..." This is Gog and Magog spiritually because Gog and Magog physically are in one corner of the earth over in the East.

You read in the book of Ezekiel (Ezekiel 38) that just a few years into the Millennium there is an invasion of the Middle East from the areas of the Far East—Gog and Magog, the areas of what used to be called Soviet Central Asia, China, Mongolia, up into Siberia, some of the vast gigantic areas of the East. They are going to come in at the beginning of the Millennium and they are going to have to be put to a stop.

At the end of the Millennium when Satan goes out to deceive the nations, they are spiritually Gog and Magog. In other words, these are people at the end of the Millennium that still have the same mindset that some did at the beginning. The ones at the beginning haven't learned yet. They are going to be resurrected and dealt with. God is going to have to get their attention. Nothing can get their attention so much as being struck dead. Then when they wake up, they'll be ready to listen. Christ can do that. He wakes them up and says, 'Alright, now that I have your attention, let Me explain some things to you.' All of a sudden, they are very receptive.

Here are these people at the end of the Millennium; spiritually speaking, they are still in this attitude.

Verse 8, "...To gather them together to battle, whose number is as the sand of the sea." It's an undefined number. It gives the idea that there will be a number of them.

Satan is loosed. God does things to test His people. God ultimately sets a choice before everyone.

Moses told Israel in Deuteronomy 30:19, "...I have set before you life and death, blessing and cursing; therefore choose life..." God said, 'I set before you a choice.' And He even told them what to choose. God gives us a choice, but He tells us what to choose. He defines what the choice is. He says, 'I set before you a choice—good and evil, life and death.' "...choose life that you and your descendants may live." God compelled them to choose.

It's easy to go along when all the pressures are that way. But how much is internalized? It's an incredible thing. We read this, and I am amazed every time I read it because during the Millennium, people are going to have the Bible. They are going to be taught out of the Bible. They are going to read this in the Bible, so how in the world could somebody be deceived? They will have been reading in Revelation 20 how Satan is going to be turned loose at the end of the Millennium and he's going to deceive the people. How could people be deceived?

Brethren, there are prophecies in the Scriptures. There are prophecies in Jude and II Peter and other places about deception that is going to occur. There are many warnings to the Church in the Bible.

Jesus mentions in Matthew 24:48-50, "But if that evil servant says in his heart, 'My master is delaying his coming,' and begins to beat his fellow servants, and to eat and drink with the drunkards, the master of that servant will come on a day when he is not looking for him and at an hour that he is not aware of."

I can remember reading that scripture years ago and wondering, 'How in the world?' The closer we get to the time, why would anybody say, 'My Lord delays His coming'? How would that scripture apply to anybody? How could people in the Church wind up doing that?

There are warnings that are there. It's amazing how we can sometimes be blindsided. The real key comes down to what we are internalizing—what we are putting in ourselves and to what extent we are walking with God personally. Are we going along in order to get along? Going with the flow is one thing, but it's a vastly different thing from walking with God. It's vastly different.

God is going to put us in situations. He wants it clearly evidence how many of us are simply going along in order to get along and how many of us are walking with Him.

It's going to come up at the end of the Millennium. A lot of people are going along. As long as the devil is locked up, they'll go along. They are not giving any trouble. But when Satan is loosed, they are receptive to it. They get caught up in it. That should be a lesson for all of us.

Revelation 20:9, "They went up on the breadth of the earth and surrounded the camp of the saints and the beloved city [This is evidently referring to Jerusalem.]. And fire came down from God out of heaven and devoured them."

Verse 10, "And the devil, who deceived them, was cast into the lake of fire and brimstone where the beast and the false prophet are...." If you have a King James or New King James Bible, notice the "are." It says, "...where the beast and the false prophet are...." You'll notice the word "are" is in italics. There isn't a verb in the Greek. The beast and the false prophet simply modify the lake of fire and brimstone. The emphasis in the verse is that the devil is cast into the same lake of fire that the beast and the false prophet were thrown into a thousand years earlier.

Now the translators, operating under the illusion that man has an immortal soul, supplied the word "are" to make it more readable in English because they assume the beast and the false prophet were still there. But that's reading something into the Bible. The Bible just defines the fact that the devil is thrown into the same lake of fire the beast and the false prophet were thrown into a thousand years earlier. You have to go elsewhere in the Bible to find out what happened to the beast and the false prophet.

When you go to Ezekiel 18:4, you're told, "the soul that sins shall die." The beast and the false prophet died. They were burned up. The devil doesn't burn up. He's just thrown into the same lake that they were thrown into earlier. He's going to be tormented. He'll be tormented because he's spirit; he is not tormented by the fire. It's not that the fire burns him. He's tormented because he is going to see the destruction of everything for which he worked.

The book of Jude indicates that he and the demons are ultimately going to be exiled into some further reach of outer space.

Jude 13, they are referred to as, "...wandering stars for whom is reserved the blackness and darkness forever." Perhaps some black hole out there somewhere. Science thinks they have discovered black holes in the universe. They don't know what they are for. Perhaps that's what they are for.

He's going to be cast into the lake of fire.

Revelation 20:11-12, "Then I saw a great white throne and Him who sat on it, from whose face the earth and the heaven fled away. And there was found no place for them. And I saw the dead, small and great, standing before God, and books were opened [The books of the Bible are opened.]. And another book was opened, which is the Book of Life. And the dead were judged according to their works, by the things which were written in the books."

Verses 13-14, "The sea gave up the dead who were in it, and Death and Hades delivered up the dead who were in them. And they were judged, each according to his works. Then Death and Hades were cast into the lake of fire. This is the second death." This is a period of judgment at the end.

I went into that in detail in Pensacola, Florida on the morning of the Last Great Day, so I am not going to go back into detail this evening for lack of time.

This culminates God's working with man. At this point, every human being who has ever lived has had an opportunity for salvation. They have either accepted that opportunity or have rejected it. At the end of this time, whoever is not found written in the Book of Life is cast into the lake of fire. The Book of Life is opened again at the beginning of this time when the dead, the small and great, are raised. The first resurrection is better (Hebrew 11:35) because if you are raised in the first resurrection, you're raised to immortality. You don't have to worry about a second death. There is a mortal resurrection and a second death. The Book of Life is opened so that there is a choice. At that point, you have an opportunity to either have your name written in or not. At the end of this period of judgment, if your name isn't in there, you go into the lake of fire. If your name is in there, then you enter into life.

Peter describes in II Peter 3:12, "...the heavens will be dissolved being on fire, and the elements will melt with fervent heat?" The earth is purged with fire. The earth will have been cleansed twice: once by water and once by fire. It was cleansed by water in the days of Noah. It will be cleansed by fire in the future. You can wash something with water, but you have to use fire in order to sterilize it. God is, in effect, going to sterilize the earth because everything that has ever in any way been tainted with sin is obliterated. The only thing that survives is that which has been made spirit.

Revelation 21:1, “And I saw a new heaven and a new earth, for the first heaven and the first earth had passed away. Also there was no more sea.” The sea was totally vaporized when the earth burned. All of the elements melted with a fervent heat.

If you do a little reading in science, you’ll find out what kind of temperatures we are talking about where literally the air catches fire. Exactly what transpires and the things involved in that is just an amazing thing.

Verses 2-5, “Then I, John, saw the holy city, New Jerusalem, coming down out of heaven from God, prepared as a bride adorned for her husband. And I heard a loud voice from heaven saying, ‘Behold, the tabernacle of God is with men, and He will dwell with them, and they shall be His people, and God Himself will be with them and be their God. And God will wipe away every tear from their eyes; there shall be no more death, nor sorrow, nor crying; and there shall be no more pain, for the former things have passed away.’ Then He who sat on the throne said, ‘Behold, I made all things new’ And He said to me, ‘Write, for these words are true and faithful.’”

New Jerusalem comes down. That is compared to a bride because that’s going to be the dwelling place for the bride of Christ—the Church. The Church was married to Christ a thousand years earlier (Revelation 19:7-9; 20:6). When the New Jerusalem that’s adorned like a bride comes down, that will be the dwelling place of the Church, of the firstfruits. The rest of the earth will be inhabited by all of the other billions that have come into the Family. We will see that as we come down.

We are told in v. 7, “He who overcomes shall inherit all things, and I will be his God and he shall be My son.” This is a time when all who are there will have free access to the water of life (v. 6). It’s a time of eternal life.

Those who won’t be there are mentioned in v. 8, “But the cowardly, unbelieving, abominable, murderers, sexually immoral, sorcerers, idolaters, and all liars shall have their part in the lake which burns with fire and brimstone, which is the second death.”

The fearful are the first mentioned. Everyone has fears. This is not saying that if you are ever afraid of anything you won’t be in the Kingdom. Why the fearful are excluded? These are people who don’t simply have fears. Everybody has fears. What do your fears do?

Remember Israel who came out of Egypt. Why didn’t that generation enter the Promised Land? Because they were afraid to follow where God led. The spies came back and told them about the giants. Their fears paralyzed them and they wouldn’t follow where the Spirit led (Numbers 13:31-33; Numbers 14:1-9).

God had been leading them. Remember? –A pillar of fire by night and a cloud by day (Exodus 14:19-20). They wouldn’t follow.

You can’t get into the Kingdom if you won’t follow God. You can’t get there if you quit going. When fear takes control, it produces either paralysis or panic. Everybody has fears. But what do our fears do? As long as we keep following God, keep putting one foot in front of the other and following Him, we will get there. These are things that keep people out. They are being paralyzed or panicked by their fears and turning away from God.

Revelation 21:8, “...the unbelieving [They do not believe God.], abominable, murderers, sexually immoral, sorcerers...” The Greek word is “pharmakon” or “pharmakeia.” It would certainly include the whole realm of the drug culture and the terribly devastating spiritual effects that something like that has.

Continuing, “...idolaters, liars...” People can’t hold on to those patterns of conduct and be in the Kingdom. That’s not what God wants to perpetuate forever. We have to be willing to follow Him. We have to believe Him. We have to be willing to change the way we live, think and act. It doesn’t mean that we attain perfection in the flesh on our own strength. It means that we don’t want to hold on to the world’s way. We put those things to death.

Verses 9-10, “Then one of the seven angels who had the seven bowls filled with the seven last plagues came to me and talked with me, saying, ‘Come, I will show you the bride, the Lamb’s wife.’ And he carried me away in the Spirit to a great and high mountain, and showed me the great city, the holy Jerusalem, descending out of heaven from God.”

Jerusalem is the dwelling place of the bride.

Verse 11, “having the glory of God. And her light was like a most precious stone, like jasper stone, clear as crystal.” It’s described here.

Verse 12, “Also she had a great and high wall with twelve gates, and twelve angels at the gates, and names written on them, which are the names of the twelve tribes of the children of Israel.”

God had a plan from the beginning. In the book of Genesis, you read that Jacob had twelve sons. In the book of Revelation, you read that the New Jerusalem has twelve gates named for those twelve sons. It's not an accident that Jacob had twelve sons. God didn't look down one day and notice this guy had twelve sons and was so impressed with that, He decided to build a city and name the gates after them. God had a plan in mind from the beginning.

Why were there twelve tribes of Israel? Why are there different branches of the human family? Why are there different races and ethnic groups? Why are some of these things? Is it accident? Is it evolution? No, God had a plan in mind. Before He ever started He knew where He was going to end up.

God had a Family in mind—a great universe-ruling Family that is organized and has a structure to it. The whole structure is a family structure.

When God placed animals on the earth, we are not told that God originally created a male lion and a female lion and that all the lions that ever existed descended from them. Or that back in the Garden of Eden, God made only one bull and one cow and that every cow on earth is descended from those two. There isn't any indication that God did that or that God only created two fish or whatever it was.

But God created two people, a man and a woman. Why? It's not important that all the dogs be related or that all the lions be related, but God is building a Family. He could have created many different people. He could have created a thousand people simultaneously and put them in groups in different places. He chose to start with two because it was His purpose that every human being that would ever live be a part of the same family descended from Adam and Eve. We are all part of the same family, one family grown great. God made Adam and Eve.

Your children bear whatever heritage you have. That's just the way we are. If a man and a woman are Oriental and they get married and have children, their children have Oriental heritage and appearance. If two people are white, if two people are black or whatever it may be, God built that in. God did it in a way people would have never thought of. It was important that everybody be related. We all go back to Adam and Eve. We are all part of one family because God is building a Family. There's a family relationship. God designed it that way.

But He built in something unusual. He built in the genetic heritage in the ovum that was inside of Eve's body. He built in the genetic blueprint to give rise to all of the different races and groups because that was a part of God's plan, too. It was His plan that there would be one family that would sub-divide into various other families but would be a part of the same family.

It's interesting because we can see as we come down a little bit further in Revelation 21:24, "And the nations of those who are saved shall walk in its light [Speaking of the New Jerusalem.]..." The Greek word for "the nations" is "ethnos." That's part of the organizational structure. The Church—the bride, the firstfruits—which is called out of every nation, is going to be there in the New Jerusalem. But then all the other millions and billions that come in after the firstfruits are described as being structured using the family patterns because all of the various ethnic groupings are just branches of the same family. It's like one family.

Can you imagine the White Throne Judgment? It will be like a giant family reunion. When people are resurrected in one particular area, you will literally be able to line it up. Here is old Grandpa and Grandma. They are the progenitors of this whole branch of the family. You have the next generation, the next generation, the next generation, perhaps coming down for twenty, thirty, forty generations. All these generations come down. It all comes down.

There's a family structure that God has built in. God is building a Family. He has devised things to where there is a family structure that is built in, over and over and over because the family ultimately originates with God. God created the first two human parents. They gave rise to everyone else, and that is sub-divided into various identifiable families. Those families maintained identity and come down as various families. All ultimately become a part of one spiritual family. We started out as one physical family and we wind up bound together as one spiritual family.

God knew where He was going before He ever started. It's not an accident. It's not happenstance. It's not blind chance or evolution. God had a destination in mind. It's not going to be some giant mob scene where He has billions of people sort of swarming around. There's structure and there's organization.

We are told there are twelve gates. The gates are the access to the city.

Verse 25, "Its gates shall not be shut at all by day (there shall be no night there)." God, Himself, is there. The brilliance of the Father, of Christ and of the firstfruits is there. This is a brilliant glowing place, a city like you have never seen.

The whole topography of the earth has changed at this point. The city, we are told, is twelve thousand furlongs for length, breadth and height (v. 16). Twelve thousand furlongs is like fifteen hundred miles. That is centered evidently where Jerusalem is today. But the whole topography of that area has totally changed.

Here's a city that stretches fifteen hundred miles. That's like from El Paso, Texas to Atlanta, Georgia. That's sixteen hundred miles. That is a vast area. If you took something fifteen hundred square miles and set it down in the United States, it would take up almost half the country; between a third and a half of the whole country would be taken up by a city that size.

This is going to be an incredible city. There are streets of gold and brilliance. The gold is translucent. It's almost like you can see through it and yet it's gold (v. 21).

There are twelve gates and each gate is a giant pearl (v. 21). It is just incredible.

The wall around it is two hundred sixteen feet in height (v. 17). That's like a twenty-one story building that surrounds it. These gates of pearl—can you imagine a pearl that's equivalent to twenty-one stories tall? It's a vastly incredible thing. It so boggles our minds that we can't even imagine it.

It describes the foundations that are visible, the stones that are there and the twelve apostles have their names in the foundation (v. 14). It's not an accident that there were twelve apostles. It's not that Christ couldn't find fifteen or something else. There was a structure that's built in.

Twelve is the number of organization. God structures His whole government on the number twelve. His Family into eternity is structured on the number twelve. There are twelve gates, so that means everybody who enters into the presence of God in the New Jerusalem comes in through one of the twelve gates. That's a structure based on the twelve tribes. Everybody is assigned to one of the twelve gates, to one of the twelve tribes. Everybody has free access to come and go because everybody is part of the Family.

The whole earth is transformed. There must be smaller versions of this city all over.

A garden spot, that we cannot begin to imagine, has been made the headquarters of the universe. There's a government structure that starts with the firstfruits. The structure that God has imposed stretches to all humanity as a part of a great extended family structure. God is building a Family. There is a universe into which we will expand with the New Jerusalem serving as the headquarters. Why are there so many stars? How many of them have their own solar systems? We don't know. Why is all this spread out there? We are told that God will put all things under our feet.

Hebrews 2:8, “‘You have put all things in subjection under his feet.’ For in that He put all in subjection under him, He left nothing that is not put under him. But now we do not yet see all things put under him.” The Moffatt translation renders “all things,” “the universe.” We are told He has not withheld anything. Here we are in this vast plan.

Revelation 22:1, “And he showed me a pure river of water of life, clear as crystal, proceeding from the throne of God and of the Lamb.” We see the tree of life here (v. 2). There's no more curse (v. 3).

The book of Revelation provides the answer to what we encounter in the book of Genesis. In the book of Genesis curses are introduced. First came sin and then came curses. God provides the solution to sin. When He solves the problem of sin, He solves the problem of pain and sorrow. The curse will be removed that came upon mankind. It's amazing how Genesis and Revelation correspond when you put them together.

Here are two books written in two different languages, composed across a time span of over sixteen centuries; yet they so perfectly correspond together. They are written by two men in totally different cultures, totally different languages, separated by a period of sixteen centuries. Sixteen centuries ago was the fall of Rome. That's a long time.

Genesis opens with the garden. It opens with the river, with the tree of life, with man being expelled, being cut off from God and being denied access to the tree. It introduces the curse. Here in the book of Revelation, we read of a reversal of all those things.

Verses 3-7, “And there shall be no more curse, but the throne of God and of the Lamb shall be in it, and His servants shall serve Him. They shall see His face, and His name shall be on their foreheads. And there shall be no night there: They need no lamp nor light of the sun, for the Lord God gives them light. And they shall reign forever and ever. Then he said to me, ‘These words are faithful and true.’ And the Lord God of the holy prophets sent His angel to show His servants the things which must shortly take place. ‘Behold, I am coming quickly! Blessed is he who keeps the words of the prophecy of this book.’”

John was so overwhelmed.

Verses 8-14, “Now I, John, saw and heard these things. And when I heard and saw, I fell down to worship before the feet of the angel who showed me these things. Then he said to me, ‘See that you do not do that. For I am your fellow servant, and of your brethren the prophets, and of those who keep the words of this book. Worship God.’ And he said to me, ‘Do not seal the words of the prophecy of this book, for the time is at hand. He who is unjust, let him be unjust still; he who is filthy, let him be filthy still; he who is righteous, let him be righteous still; he who is holy, let him be holy still. And behold, I am coming quickly, and My reward is with Me, to give to every one according to his work. I am the Alpha and the Omega, the Beginning and the End, the First and the Last. Blessed are those who do His commandments, that they may have the right to the tree of life, and may enter through the gates into the city.’”

The way to have access is through keeping the commandments, “Blessed are those who do His commandments.” If Christ did away with the commandments, why is the very last thing we are told in the book of Revelation, “Blessed are those who do His commandments.” If you want to be blessed, you need to keep the commandments. People think the commandments were nailed to the cross.

It’s interesting. What’s the last thing God tells us in the Old Testament, right before it starts the New Testament?

Malachi 4:4, “Remember the Law of Moses, My servant, which I commanded him in Horeb for all Israel, with the statutes and judgments.”

Immediately, people turn the page. They get to the book of Matthew and they say, ‘Well, we can certainly forget the law of God, the Law of Moses which was commanded in Horeb.’ The last thing God tells us in the Old Testament, “Remember the Law of Moses My servant, which I commanded him in Horeb.”

You get to the book of Revelation (the last book of the Bible) and you find that the saved are singing the song of Moses (Revelation 15:3-4). The last thing He says now, “Blessed are those who do his commandments...” They will be the ones who have access to the tree of life and enter into the gates and into the city.

Verse 15, “But outside [KJV, “without”] are dogs and sorcerers and sexually immoral and murderers and idolaters, and whoever loves and practices a lie.” The outside is excluded—not that these are sort of outside the wall, but “without” in the sense of excluded, not a part of them. “Dogs” is a slang term referring to “false prophets.” It originally referred to “male prostitutes.” It was a Hebrew slang-term in that way. Then it became a term that the Jews used to make reference to false prophets who, in a sense, sold themselves for hire. You know, preach “whatever” for a price.

Verse 16, “I, Jesus, have sent My angel to testify to you these things in the churches. I am the Root and the Offspring of David, the Bright and Morning Star.” He is the Root from which David sprang and the Offspring, in the sense of the descendant.

This is the time when everyone who is thirsty can come and drink of the water of life (v. 17).

Verses 18-21, “For I testify to everyone who hears the words of the prophecy of this book: If anyone adds to these things, God will add to him the plagues that are written in this book; and if anyone takes away from the words of the book of this prophecy, God shall take away his part from the Book of Life, from the holy city, and from the things which are written in this book. He who testifies to these things says, ‘Surely I am coming quickly.’ Amen. Even so, come Lord Jesus! The grace of our Lord Jesus Christ be with you all. Amen.”

The scripture clearly shows that the book of Revelation is to be the finality, the capstone of the Bible. There isn’t any room to add anything. You don’t add anything else to the Bible.

There isn’t any room for the book of Mormon or something else that was purported to be some later revelation. There isn’t any room to add on some other revelation later. The book of Revelation is the end. That’s the concluding part of the Bible.

When you come to the end of the book of Revelation, you obviously have come to the end of the story. You are on the brink of eternity. You are standing on the threshold of eternity as a part of the Family of God. Everything you need to know to be a part of the Family is given. Our minds can’t fully grasp and comprehend all the details of what it’s going to be like to be a part of that Family, but you see if we get this far, the rest of it is taken care of. We have everything we need to know to get this far.

Verse 20, “He who testifies to these things says, ‘Surely I am coming quickly’....” He is going to come. He is going to bring to culmination the very plan and purpose of God. We have it outlined here for us.

I hope that this has been a helpful series for you, as we have gone through, concluding now with the book of Revelation and wrapping up our Bible study series. So, with that we will be concluded.

I see we have an announcement:

Mr. Rice: Mr. Ogwyn, on behalf of the Lafayette congregation, they asked me to present this card for all of your dedication and hard work in presenting this Bible study series and for the many years of hard work. They have a reception planned after Bible study.

Mr. Ogwyn: I don't get caught speechless very often, but thank you very, very much. That's...very pleased, thank you.

Question: What language did Adam and Eve speak?

Answer: Some have speculated that it was a form of Hebrew. It was the original language. We are told in Deuteronomy 32:8 that God separated the sons of Adam.

Question: Does Satan hear our prayers to God? Can he partially answer them and how would we know that he was?

Answer: It gets back to knowing what God's will is. There are ways that God conveys to us, in terms of understanding His will. The first way is through what God has revealed in the Scriptures. God reveals things in several different ways. God reveals in a statement of Law—"you shall do this; you shall not do this." You shall not steal, etc. That is a statement of absolutes of law. It is easy to know God's will in something like that.

There are other ways that God conveys His will. Everything is not completely listed as "you shall or you shall not." There are principles of wisdom stated in the Bible.

Proverbs 12:24, "The hand of the diligent will rule..." Stop and consider the principle of it. It takes careful, consistent work. It takes that to get ahead. That is an explanation of how God wants us to go about our work, etc. If we want to know God's will, look and see what's pleasing to God. When you are looking for what God wants you to do, is it in harmony with God's laws and the principles brought out in the Bible?

Another principle is seeking the right counsel.

Proverbs 18:1-2, "A man who isolates himself seeks his own desire; he rages against all wise judgment. A fool has no delight in understanding, but in expressing his own heart." Somebody that isolates himself is simply seeking to do what he wants to do. Their mind is made up and they are going to do what they want to do.

Proverbs 12:15, "...he who heeds counsel is wise." Seek wise counsel from those who are tuned in to God.

We have to be very careful of dragging God into anything that happens. How do you know? We have to be careful of reading God's will into circumstances. There are times when God does open doors and things just come together. You first start with the Law. That is a plain statement. The Law is a statement of fact. The Writings are the application of the Law. The Prophets are examples; they amplify. We look at this as our starting point. If it is good, then it is better when you talk about it. Talk to those who we respect and exude certain wisdom in their life.

It gets back to: How can you know whether it is God's will? Humanly, one of the hardest things we ever have to do and the hardest prayer is, "Not my will, but Yours will be done." Too often we spend our prayer time in talking God to our way. We need to see it God's way. Sometimes God gives us what we ask for. If it is our way, then we may come to regret it. What we want to do is to seek God's will. Then we can discern the difference of what is God's answer or the devil's counterfeit.

Question: Where are Enoch and Elijah?

Answer: They are dead and awaiting the resurrection.

Hebrews 11:5 mentions that Enoch was translated, "...Enoch was translated so that he did not see death..." Then we have to wonder. What happened? What does it mean to be "translated"?

Hebrews 11:5, "By faith Enoch was translated so that he did not see death, 'and was not found because God had translated him'; for before his translation he had this testimony, that he pleased God."

Verse 6, "But without faith it is impossible to please Him..."

It goes on to discuss Noah (v. 7), Abraham (v. 8) and Sarah (v. 11). In v. 13, we are told these all died, including Abel, Enoch, Noah, Abraham, and Sarah.

Verse 13, "These all died in faith, not having received the promises, but having seen them afar off were assured of them, embraced them, and confessed that they were strangers and pilgrims on the earth."

Enoch died and he died in faith. It clearly states in Hebrews 11:13 that Enoch is dead, "These all died in faith..."

What does it mean, "He was translated that he should not see death"?

We are told there are two deaths.

Hebrews 9:27, "And as it is appointed for men to die once, but after this the judgment."

We are told of the second death.

Revelation 20:14, "Then Death and Hades were cast into the lake of fire. This is the second death." There are two deaths. "It is appointed for men to die once." Everyone dies the first death. Even Jesus Christ died the first death.

Colossians 1:18, "...the firstborn from the dead, that in all things He may have the preeminence." So, the idea that Enoch and Elijah did not die would give them preeminence over Jesus Christ. That would mean that they had an honor that Jesus Christ Himself never had because He died. For that matter, even the doctrine of the assumption of Mary would tie in with the same thing. It would actually give her preeminence over Jesus Christ because it would say that she ascended into heaven in place of dying. That assumption is just that—an assumption. And it is an erroneous assumption. It is erroneous to assume the assumption, if that makes any sense. It is appointed for men to die once, but after that, the resurrection and the judgment.

John 3:13, Jesus said this to Nicodemus, "No man has ascended up to heaven, but He who came down from heaven [And John adds in a parenthetical statement.], that is, the Son of Man who is in heaven."

At the time John was writing, it was sixty years after Christ had said it. Jesus Christ was back in heaven so, "No one has ascended to heaven but He who came down from heaven, that is, the Son of Man, who is in heaven." We are told in John 3:13 that Jesus Christ is the only One who has ascended to heaven, which means Enoch did not ascend to heaven, nor did Elijah.

II Kings 2:11, "...Elijah went up by a whirlwind into heaven."

We must realize that there are three heavens spoken of in the Bible. In some cases, we are told about the birds flying in the midst of heaven. In other cases, we are told about the stars of heaven. We are also told about what is called the third heaven (II Corinthians 12:2). The term "heaven" can be used to refer to the earth's atmosphere—the birds in the midst of heaven or the heavens giving forth rain. When we talk about looking up into the heavens, in the sense of outer space or the stars, we are talking about the second heaven. The third heaven is the heaven of God's abode.

Which heaven was Elijah taken up into by a whirlwind? Well, a whirlwind operates only in the first heaven. When you get above the first heaven, there isn't any air. So, the whirlwind Elijah was taken up into simply transported him from one geographical location into another.

God used "horses and chariots of fire" (II Kings 2:11). Since a jet aircraft wasn't available and God didn't choose to make it available at that time, He used a horse and chariot of fire, which would be a very effective means of traveling. It was effective. God wanted Elijah removed and He removed him!

Hebrews 11:5, "...Enoch was translated [transferred], that he should not see death..."

Clearly, this is speaking of the second death (Revelation 20:14) because all have died.

Hebrews 11:13, "These all died in faith..."

Hebrews 9:27, "And as it is appointed for men to die once, but after this the judgment."

So, Enoch was translated or transferred. His allegiance, his loyalty, his citizenship was translated or transferred from the kingdom of this world to the kingdom of God and he died in faith. Evidently he was physically removed, perhaps to a different geographical location.

Question: Did Moses and Aaron suffer the first three plagues along with the rest of the Israelites? (Exodus 7-8)

Answer: The first three plagues were: 1) the Nile turned to blood (Exodus 7:20), 2) the frogs (Exodus 8:5) and 3) the lice (Exodus 8:16). Certainly, everyone who lived in Egypt was affected when the Nile turned to blood and there were frogs and lice all over the place. These were things that everyone had to contend with. After this third plague, God put a division between the Israelites and the Egyptians (Exodus 8:22). I would take it from this that everyone would certainly have been affected by the Nile turning to blood, in the sense, that the whole thing was blood. It didn't matter who you were; you were impacted by that. And there were frogs and lice everywhere—that kind of nuisance.

Question: Exodus 11:2, "Speak now in the hearing of the people, and let every man ask from his neighbor and every woman from her neighbor, articles of silver and articles of gold." What was the gold and silver used for?

Answer: It was used for a variety of things. Israel carried out some of the physical wealth of Egypt—gold, silver and jewelry. A lot of it was used in the construction of the tabernacle a little bit later on. Probably the bulk of it was used in the building of the tabernacle, the priestly garments and things of that sort.

Question: Exodus 12:34, "So the people took their dough before it was leavened, having their kneading bowls bound up in their clothes on their shoulders."

Answer: I'm not exactly sure what the question is, except that I might comment that the normal process of leavening was that they let the bread sit out. They used a sour-dough process, as I have mentioned before. Since they did not have commercially prepared yeast, they used the old methods of leavening, which was basically sour dough. You make up a dough, let it sit out and it will rise. It will begin to ferment and to sour. It will speed up the process if you make what they call a sponge and put it in the dough. That will feed it and get it going. But if you just make it up and knead it and let it sit out overnight, you will find that it will begin to sour and rise a little bit. Unleavened bread was the bread of haste, of urgency, because you didn't have time to let it sit out and rise. They had everything packed up. Since their kneading troughs were packed up, the bread that they ate was unleavened because it had not been allowed to sit and rise.

The Jews have strict regulations in the preparation of Matzos, as to how long the dough is allowed to sit before it is cooked because if you allow it to sit long enough, it will begin to sour and the sour-dough process will begin to set in. So, they have Rabbis spending great lengths of time sitting around, debating how many minutes the dough could be allowed to sit before it could be baked and still be considered unleavened. They tend to go in for all of that.

Question: Exodus 13:2, “Sanctify to Me all the firstborn, whatever opens the womb among the children of Israel, both of man and animals; it is Mine.” Are the firstborn males that open the womb still sanctified?

Answer: It's interesting; the spiritual application of that is brought out. In Hebrews 12:23, we are called “the Church of the firstborn.” We are!

In Numbers 3, the Levites were established as the priesthood. They took a census of the firstborn males in Israel and they substituted the entire tribe of Levi as the firstborn, instead of the firstborn of each tribe, as the priesthood. The priesthood was concentrated into one tribe. God took that tribe in lieu of the firstborn of each tribe. The Church today, collectively, represents the “Church of the firstborn.” So, in that sense, the firstborn are sanctified to God and we are part of that.

Question: As the Israelites crossed over to the Promised Land, how were they able to communicate with the inhabitants of the land? Weren't their languages different?

Answer: That's a good question. Yes, the basic languages were different, though there were probably certain things that they had in common. There were certain languages that were commonly used and there were second languages, just as we would have in most areas of the world today. We have languages such as English, French or Spanish as second languages in many areas of the world to provide a basis.

The Israelites would have spoken Hebrew as their own native tongue, as well as some of them being fluent in the Egyptian language.

In the land of Canaan, there was contact back and forth and certainly there would have been at least a limited use of the Egyptian language by some of the people.

Aramaic, akin to Hebrew, was a kind of language of trade and commerce throughout a large part of the Middle Eastern area.

For the most part, I don't know if there's any indication of a lot of communication back and forth. There was obviously some. You have the account of Rahab the harlot. She was able to make herself understood to the spies and they were to her. We are not told what language they communicated in. Likely it was some form of Egyptian.

In some of these areas, particularly where there was trade and commerce, you tend to have a language of trade and commerce. Even if people are not fluent in it, they can get by. This was an area that was on the route of what's called the Fertile Crescent and the caravan route. While not every individual would have had knowledge of other languages, there certainly were people who were in contact with the public and caravans and would have probably tended to have at least a limited knowledge of a dialect and Aramaic as well.

Question: Were there flags in Israel and what did they look like?

Answer: That is an interesting question. When Israel was encamped, as recorded in Numbers 2, there were standards, or flags, that were raised. They were camped three tribes to a side of each of the four sides represented. There were three tribes to each of the four sides. There was a particular ensign or standard, which was just another term for flag that marked the area of that tribe. There are references to it in Jewish tradition and some things that have been preserved.

Numbers 2:2, we might notice briefly, “Everyone of the children of Israel shall camp by his own standard [flag], beside the emblems of his father's house...On the east side...Judah...”, Issachar (v. 5) and Zebulun (v. 7).

Verse 10, “On the south side...Reuben...”, Simeon (v. 12) and Gad (v. 14).

Verse 18, “On the west side...Ephraim...”, Manasseh (v. 20) and Benjamin (v. 22).

Verse 25, “The standard of the forces with Dan shall be on the north side...”, Asher (v. 27) and Naphtali (v. 29).

Concerning the particular things that pertain to it, there is not a specific description of the flag in the Bible, but there are references in the book of Deuteronomy to things that were described as having relevance to each of these tribes. In Jewish tradition, the pictures of the ensigns of Israel have been preserved.

One of the interesting things to note is that most of the things that made up the ensigns have been preserved in the royal coat of arms of Great Britain. Also, portions of it are preserved in that of the United States, France and some of the other nations of Israel.

Deuteronomy 33:17, the statement describing Joseph, “His glory is like a firstborn bull, and his horns are like the horns of the wild ox; together with them he shall push the peoples [Gentiles] to the ends of the earth; they are the ten thousands of Ephraim, and they are the thousands of Manasseh.”

It is interesting because if you were to look on the royal coat of arms of Great Britain, you would see the unicorn pictured on there. The bullock also figures in it.

In terms of Judah, Judah is described in Genesis 49:9 as a lion’s whelp. The lion was the symbol of Judah. Christ was called the Lion of the tribe of Judah (Revelation 5:5). The lion, of course, was symbolic of Judah and is descriptive because from Judah was to come the kingly line. That’s why the lion is also in the royal coat of arms of Great Britain; the Queen (Queen Elizabeth) is a direct descendant of King David.

She occupies the throne of David. The very coronation stone over which she was crowned is Jacob’s pillar stone (Genesis 28:18; Genesis 31:13), which the children of Israel carried through the wilderness. It was a physical rock that literally followed with them through the wilderness because they took it there. It’s described in the books of Kings and Chronicles (II Kings 11:14; II Chronicles 23:13). It was the stone, the pillar, on which the kings of Judah were crowned, coming all the way down.

It was taken by Jeremiah to Ireland at the time of Judah’s fall, later transferred to Scotland and then overturned the third time and brought down to England. It’s there as a physical sign of the covenant that God made. It is preserved there under the chair of the throne of King Edward and labeled. They recognize what it is. Even the very label that’s there identifies the coronation stone as “Jacob’s pillar stone.”

You have united in the coat of arms and the insignias that represent Ephraim and represent Judah because the royal family in Britain is the descendants of the kingly line of Judah ruling over the tribe of Ephraim, the chief of the tribes of Israel. You find that much of the insignias, the material of the coats of arms and the flags that are described are identified with the British Isles, actually date back to that particular time that is described here.

Question: Joshua 1:12, “And to the Reubenites, the Gadites, and half the tribe of Manasseh Joshua spoke, saying.” What is the meaning of the half-tribe of Manasseh and why were they a half tribe?

Answer: Manasseh was the only tribe that couldn’t get along with itself. And they still can’t! The bloodiest war we ever fought in this country was the war between one-half the tribe of Manasseh and the other half of the tribe of Manasseh. Interestingly enough, the major battle at the beginning of that war was known as the “Battle of Manasseh’s Junction” and the “Battle of Bull Run,” but the term that was primarily used in the South was the “Battle of Manasseh’s Junction.” This is an interesting term.

If you trace it back, you will find that Manasseh had a wife and a concubine. Part of his descendants came from the wife and part of them came from the concubine (Deuteronomy 3:13-15). They never really got along very well between and among themselves. When they came up to the Promised Land, half of the tribe of Manasseh wanted to settle on the east side of the Jordan River. They didn’t want to cross the Jordan River. They were more agricultural, particularly involved in cattle raising and this type of thing. They desired the pastureland on the east side of the Jordan River. So half of the tribe of Manasseh was given its inheritance on the east side of the Jordan River along with the tribes of Gad and Reuben.

Then the other half of the tribe of Manasseh crossed the Jordan with the other tribes of Israel. The Jordan River, of course, was the dividing line, so half of them were on one side and half on the other side. The half that descended from the wife were on the west side. “Gilead” often refers to the area inhabited by Reuben, as well as the area inhabited by one of the half-tribes of Manasseh. The term “Gilead” goes back to that. And just as we find that distinction in ancient Israel, you find it preserved right on down.

When this country began to be settled, there were basically two fountainheads. One was in Virginia, which was kind of a fountainhead of the South, and the other was in Massachusetts, which was the fountainhead of the North. Those were the two centers.

When you come to the American Revolution, prior to Andrew Jackson (our seventh president), every president of the United States before him was either a Virginian aristocrat or a Massachusetts's Adams. Those two areas dominated the early history of this country and settlement primarily spread out on an east to west basis, coming from New England or coming from Virginia and the Carolinas across. That was the tendency and the distinction then. You could even track it back to the British Isles and to different areas that they came from, which gets into a different story. But anyway, it's kind of an interesting subject.

Question: Deuteronomy 16:5, ““You may not sacrifice the Passover within any of your gates....””

Answer: The point of “not in your gates” simply meant that you were to congregate where God said to congregate and not just pick your own spot. You couldn't say, ‘Well, I am not going to go up to the temple in Jerusalem this year. I'll just stay and do it here.’ In terms of the sacrifices, they had to be performed at the place where God had set His name. That was the principle on it. Basically, all the sacrifices were performed in Jerusalem, originally at the tabernacle and later the temple. And that, by the way, is the answer to why the Jews, though they observe the evening, do not sacrifice the Passover lamb at the time of Passover. The reason is that there is not a temple and they are told here not to do it within their gates but to go to the place where God has set His name. So, that is their reason on it.

Question: II Chronicles 7:14, ““...My people who are called by My name...” is the specific matter that is asked for explanation.

Answer: Notice v. 11, “Thus Solomon finished the house of the Lord and the king's house....” Verses 12-14, we find, “Then the Lord appeared to Solomon by night, and said to him: ‘I have heard your prayer, and have chosen this place for Myself as a house of sacrifice. When I shut up heaven and there is no rain, or command the locusts to devour the land, or send pestilence among My people, if My people who are called by My name will humble themselves, and pray and seek My face, and turn from their wicked ways, then I will hear from heaven, and will forgive their sin and heal their land.””

The question relates to “the people who are called by God's name.” I think the simplest way of saying it is that it is a reference to the people of God. In the context of II Chronicles 7, we are looking at Old Testament Israel and the time of the dedication of the temple. It was a national reference to Old Testament Israel who were the people of God. The point is that if they departed from their relationship with God and God's punishment came upon them, if they would humble themselves (that is fasting and prayer) and really turn to God with their whole hearts, God would hear. God would listen and God would restore His blessing.

I think the clear implication is that, in principle, this would certainly apply to us today as God's Church, God's people spiritually.

Duality is something that runs throughout the Bible. A basic principle of understanding much of Scripture is God's use of duality. He uses it in prophecy. He uses it in many ways. He uses it with God's people nationally (referring to physical Israel) and also God's people spiritually (the Church of God). Israel was, in that sense, both the Church in the wilderness (Acts 7:38) and God's people nationally.

That's why the Tribulation is two things. The Great Tribulation is the wrath of Satan. We've explained this, of course, when we went through the Bible Study on Revelation. The Great Tribulation is the wrath of Satan directed against whom? It's the wrath of Satan directed against physical Israel. Primarily, physical Israel is the United States and British Commonwealth nations.

In Jeremiah 30:7, the Tribulation is called the time of Jacob's trouble. It is directed at physical Israel, but it's also directed at spiritual Israel—at least the portion that Satan can get at.

When you go to Revelation 12, you read of the Church. When you tie it in with Revelation 3, it refers, in that context, to the Philadelphia stage or era of God's Church.

Revelation 12:14, “But the woman was given two wings of a great eagle, that she might fly into the wilderness to her place [a place of protection; a place of safety], where she is nourished for a time and times and half a time [the duration of the Tribulation], from the presence of the serpent.”

Verse 17, we find, “And the dragon was enraged with the woman, and he went to make war with the rest of her offspring, who keep the commandments of God and have the testimony of Jesus Christ.” The remnant are those that are left behind. They’re in the Church of God. They keep the commandments of God and have the testimony of Jesus Christ. It is basically a reference to the Laodiceans.

The point is that Satan’s wrath is directed two-fold: It is directed against God’s people nationally—physical Israel. That’s why it’s called the time of Jacob’s trouble. It’s also directed against God’s people, spiritually. That’s why Satan goes to make war with the remnant of her seed. The remnant are those of the Church that are left behind.

The principle of applying this statement, “My people called by My name,” is certainly that the Church of God is God’s people called by God’s name. In that sense, Israel is called by God’s name because God’s name actually makes up part of the name Israel. When Jacob’s name was changed to Israel, the ending “el” has to do with God. “El” means “God.” It’s a contracted form of “Elohim.” “Israel” means “prince of God” or “prince with God.” So, the name “Israel,” in that sense, reflects God’s name. God gave His people that name nationally. It was a national promise to the people at the time of the dedication of the temple, but the principle would apply all through time.

When you study the story of the people of God down through the centuries, you find the ups and downs that reflect the story of the people of God. The principle is always (whether collectively as a Church, individually in our own lives or even nationally as a nation) that if the people of God find themselves in affliction and really turn to God with prayer and fasting and really seek Him, God will hear and God will listen.

Question: II Chronicles 21:17, “...so that there was not a son left to him except Jehoahaz, the youngest of his sons.”

II Chronicles 22:1, “Then the inhabitants of Jerusalem made Ahaziah his youngest son king in his place....”

Answer: It is not uncommon for kings to have more than one name and you see at least a couple of names that are used. I think that clearly, in the context, the two names refer to the same person. Perhaps he was known by one name as a prince and another name as king. That is not uncommon. Royal children will have several names and in certain contexts, use different ones.

Question: Ezra 2:63—What does it mean for a priest to consult the Urim and Thummim?

Answer: We read of that in the Old Testament from time to time. The high priest had a breastplate and on that breastplate, there were twelve stones. The name of each of the tribes was inscribed in Hebrew on those stones. The consulting of the Urim and Thummim had to do with a way in which God would answer the high priest and would reveal His will by, evidently, causing certain of these stones to light up and the result of it spelled out a message. The Urim and Thummim makes reference to the breastplate and the stones.

According to Josephus, we are told that John Hurcanus, who was a high priest of approximately one hundred or so years prior to Christ, was the last high priest whom God answered through the Urim and Thummim. Basically, he seems to have been the last high priest. Even Jewish tradition acknowledges that God no longer answered the high priest through the Urim and the Thummim after that time. I think it was a matter that they simply had gotten far enough away from God that God did not respond to them in that way.

Question: Where does Job come in, in history? Where does his life take place? What country?

Answer: We are told in Job 1:1, “There was a man in the land of Uz....” We are not given a lot of details about where this land of Uz was. In Genesis 10, it mentions the sons of Aram, who would be the grandsons of Shem.

Verse 23, “The sons of Aram were Uz, Hul, Gether and Mash.” Aram was the father of the Arameans or the Aramaic people. They were kindred to the Hebrews. Armenia takes its name from Aram, primarily through the son Hul. Anciently, the area of Uz was in the area kind of between Egypt and Syria. That anciently was the general area of Uz. You might look on a Bible map and get the area if they show the Arameans. If you were to look on there, it would have been the area to the east of what became the land of Israel and north of Egypt and south of Damascus.

There is another reference to a similar word where it refers to the children of Abraham’s brother Nahor.

Genesis 22:20-21, “...it was told Abraham, ‘Indeed Milcah also has borne children to your brother Nahor: Huz his firstborn, Buz his brother, Kemuel the father of Aram.’”

Job’s friends are mentioned.

Job 2:11, “Now when Job’s three friends heard of all this adversity that had come upon him, each one came from his own place—Eliphaz the Temanite, Bildad the Shuhite, and Zophar the Naamathite....” It mentions them coming together.

Job 32:2, “Then the wrath of Elihu, the son of Barachel the Buzite, of the family of Ram....”

In Genesis 22:20-21, we noticed the sons of Abraham’s brother Nahor were Huz, Buz and Kemuel the father of Aram or Ram.

Elihu that is mentioned in Job 32:2 was a Buzite. In other words, he was a descendant of Buz. He would be at least a grandson or great grandson of the kindred of Ram, which equates with what is mentioned in Genesis 22:21.

Job 2:11 mentions Eliphaz the Temanite. Teman was a son of Esau (Genesis 36:10-11).

The Bible does not give or clearly define Job’s lineage. We have speculated on certain things in times past. The thing that becomes apparent from the book of Job—from the friends that are mentioned and the information that is given about the location being an area that was on the border of Egypt—is that the people that were involved were people that were of the general stock of Abraham and Abraham’s family.

We see that Elihu the Buzite would have been a descendent of Abraham’s brother Nahor and Buz and down in that line, which would have made them kindred to the descendants of Abraham.

Eliphaz the Temanite was a descendent of Esau (Genesis 36:10-11).

This is several generations after Abraham. Abraham, Isaac and Jacob—Jacob’s generation was the generation of the grandchildren of Abraham.

Job’s friend, Eliphaz the Temanite, would have been at least the generation of the patriarchs—the twelve sons of Jacob.

What you’re looking at is that the general time setting would be prior to the time of the Exodus, but it would have been after the time of Abraham, Isaac and Jacob. It is probably contemporary with the time that Jacob and his family were in Egypt. The events described in the book of Job involved some of the people of the general family of Abraham that were nearby, but they were not in the direct lineage. The ones that are specifically mentioned by name, the indication is they were general relatives. They were kindred people and yet not necessarily the exact lineage.

We are told the book of Job traces back to Moses. In other words, Moses was responsible for its inclusion with the books. So, it was something that took place prior to Moses. I think that’s clear. When God’s great power is described, there isn’t any mention or allusion to the events of the Exodus. It mentions the events of creation and the flood but not the Exodus. It is something that pre-dates the Exodus. It would probably be contemporary with the story of Joseph and his brothers. It would be in that general time setting and that generation.

Question: Psalm 51:5, why did David say, “in sin did my mother conceive me”?

Answer: This is not a reference to the Catholic doctrine of original sin and their subsequent doctrine of the Immaculate Conception. Most Protestants don’t realize that the Immaculate Conception doesn’t refer to Christ but to Mary. Their doctrine is based on their idea that original sin is transmitted through sexual intercourse and that a child is conceived in original sin. This is really what their doctrine is. This is part of it.

Another part of it is that Mary was conceived immaculately. Their story is that she was the only one who did not have original sin because her parents were evidently so righteous. They claim she was the only one not conceived in sin. And since Christ was born of a virgin, He didn’t inherit original sin either. Of course, it’s a bunch of pagan garbage.

Psalm 51:5 hasn’t any reference to that. It was a poetic expression. It just means, “I was a sinner from the beginning.”

Psalm 51:5, “Behold, I was brought forth in iniquity, and in sin my mother conceived me.”

He goes through Psalm 51 saying, v. 4, “Against You, You only, have I sinned, and done this evil in Your sight....”

Verse 7, “Purge me with hyssop, and I shall be clean; wash me, and I shall be whiter than snow.” He said, ‘Wash me thoroughly from my iniquity; purge me. Get out the lye soap and clean me up.’ That’s really the sense of it. ‘I am rotten from stem to stern. I’m a sinner from the beginning.’ David is looking at his nature. There isn’t any particular theological implication in the sense that, “in sin my mother conceived me.” It is a poetic expression of David expressing the fact that, ‘Look, I am a sinner, the son of a sinner. I come from a long line of sinners.’

We all do, by the way. ‘I am just a sinner from the beginning. I am rotten through and through.’ This is how David saw himself. He said, ‘Oh God, please clean me up. Change me, transform me,’ which is really the concept of what repentance is all about when we really grasp and see ourselves as David saw himself.

Question: The question involves several different scriptures and involves the matter of judging. When is it appropriate to judge and when is it not?

Answer: We live in a society today that prides itself on tolerance and people don't want to judge anything. If you say something about something, they say, 'Oh no, you shouldn't judge.' Several verses are brought to mind. The question is asked in terms of what's the proper application for us as God's people.

Let's notice some of the verses.

Isaiah 5:20-21, "Woe to those who call evil good, and good evil; who put darkness for light, and light for darkness; who put bitter for sweet, and sweet for bitter! Woe to those who are wise in their own eyes, and prudent in their own sight!"

Coming on down.

Verse 24, "Therefore, as the fire devours the stubble, and the flame consumes the chaff, so their root will be as rottenness, and their blossom will ascend like dust; because they have rejected the law of the Lord of hosts, and despised the word of the Holy One of Israel."

Jeremiah 23:13-14, "'And I have seen folly in the prophets of Samaria: they prophesied by Baal and caused My people Israel to err. Also I have seen a horrible thing in the prophets of Jerusalem: they commit adultery and walk in lies; they also strengthen the hands of evildoers, so that no one turns back from his wickedness. All of them are like Sodom to Me, and her inhabitants like Gomorrah.'"

One more verse back in Isaiah 59:10, "We grope for the wall like the blind, and we grope as if we had no eyes; we stumble at noonday as at twilight; we are as dead men in desolate places." The point is as it is brought out in these verses, God's law is a moral compass. To "judge" is to "make a distinction." That's what it means to judge. It means to "make choices, decisions or distinctions." We can distinguish between what is appropriate and what is inappropriate. God's law is a moral compass. If you cast away the law, you cast away the compass and you can't tell which direction you're going.

We live in a society that prides itself on tolerance. In reality, they've sort of thrown away the moral compass and want to treat all behaviors as though they are on the same level. That is certainly not valid from a Biblical standpoint. We can and should judge conduct in terms of what is appropriate and inappropriate. We have the criteria for judging that right here in the Scriptures.

What we cannot judge and what is God's prerogative to judge is the hearts and minds of individuals. God looks on the heart. We can see what someone does and judge the conduct as inappropriate. We don't know how much that person knows and understands and to what extent God is working with them. God looks on the heart. I can't tell you how sincere someone is. God knows. He looks on their heart. Now, sincere or not, I can tell you based on the Bible whether they're wrong or whether they're right in what they're doing.

There is the kind of judging that only God can do. God is the One that has to look in the heart. He is the One that has to evaluate a person's motives and understanding. God evaluates those factors. That's not for us to judge. They have to ultimately give an account to God.

What we are to judge is whether this is right or wrong or whether we should follow "this" or follow "that." We have judging to do as well. Our judging is not the hearts and minds of individuals. Our judging is the appropriateness of various conducts and whether it is something that we should follow or not. We have to make those judgments. God gives us a criterion. God gives us the basis. He gives us His Word. He gives us His law. It is a moral compass.

He puts us in situations where we are confronted with having to make choices. We have to make choices in our daily life. We are pressured from every direction and most of those pressures are in terms of choosing the wrong way. We have to take responsibility. Every time you make a choice, you've judged something.

If you say, 'Well, I'm not going to judge,' then, in effect, you've judged that everything is on the same level and that everything is okay. To say that something is a sin is not judging the heart and mind of the individual. God says, "Thou shall not commit adultery." If somebody commits adultery, that's a sin. I'm not judging them to say that. I'm not judging them as an adulterer or that they've committed adultery if I know that to be a fact. That's not judging them as a person.

God is ultimately the One that is going to judge them in terms of their relationship with Him, to what extent they have repented and to what extent God is working with them. God will consider all these factors. In terms of the ultimate destiny, God is the One who has to judge that. But we can certainly judge and should judge that adultery is wrong and that we are not going to do it. If we can't judge that, then we're in trouble.

That's where the world comes in. The world says, 'Well, who's to decide what pornography is?' It really shouldn't be that hard to figure out.

Anybody that wants to open their Bible can pretty well figure out some of these things.

Any judgment you make has to be based on something as a criterion. If you say, 'that's too long' or 'that's too short'—what was your criteria? You had something that you used as your standard.

Maybe someone measures a board and you say, 'You've cut that too long. You're going to have to cut two more inches off of it.' You judged. You used a standard of judgment. You used a tape measure, a yardstick or whatever.

God gives us a spiritual standard of judging. It is the basis by which we are to judge conduct. It is the basis by which we judge the appropriateness or inappropriateness of certain actions. We have to make those judgments. There are a lot of things we're confronted with on a daily basis. God evaluates us on the basis of how well we take and apply His word. God evaluates us on how well we apply His word in circumstances that we face.

Question: Matthew 2:14—Can we know by the Bible or history how long Joseph, Mary and Jesus stayed in Egypt?

Answer: There isn't any specific reference, nor am I aware of a tradition of an exact amount of time.

Matthew 2:19-20, we are told, "But when Herod was dead, behold, an angel of the Lord appeared in a dream to Joseph in Egypt, saying, 'Arise, take the young Child and His mother, and go to the land of Israel, for those who sought the young Child's life are dead.'"

Christ was born in the fall of 4 B.C. and Herod died the following Passover. So, it would have been shortly after the spring Feasts—probably sometime between Passover and Pentecost that Joseph and Mary returned. Christ would have been less than a year old. They, perhaps, were in Egypt for no more than a matter of months—maybe one, two or three months, something of that sort.

Question: Matthew 5:25, "Agree with your adversary quickly, while you are on the way with him, lest your adversary deliver you to the judge, the judge hand you over to the officer, and you be thrown into prison."

Answer: The basic principle is: don't involve yourself in a bunch of litigation. Try to settle out of court peaceably. If you get entangled in this world's legal system, there is no telling what kind of trouble you will wind up in before it is all over. It's a principle; don't have this adversarial, 'I am going to hold out and demand that I get everything that's coming to me,' rather than having a peaceable attitude. Be willing to settle. Try to work out a peaceable arrangement. If you have a problem with someone or some type of dispute, seek to work it out in a peaceable way. Realize that even if you have to accept things that aren't exactly right, chances are you are still going to come out better than if you get yourself entangled in this world's legal system. There are problems any way you "slice it." It's an emphasis on trying to settle things peaceably.

Question: Matthew 8:4; Mark 5:43; Luke 5:14—Why couldn't anyone tell of their healings?

Answer: It wasn't that they couldn't, but often Christ would tell those that He had miraculously healed not to mention it because He knew that as soon as the notoriety spread, persecution was going to intensify and He would have to leave the area because of the religious leadership being stirred up. Particularly in the earlier part of His ministry, He did not seek to call a lot of public attention to Himself because He knew what the consequences would be. So, in many cases, when He would heal someone, He would simply say, 'Look, keep it quiet. Don't make a public issue of it.' He knew the effect of the notoriety.

Question: Matthew 19:13—This is a question concerning the blessing of little children who are not in the Church, but whose grandmother or grandfather is in the Church.

Answer: Basically, the principle would be those who have responsibility for the child. In some cases, the grandparents are raising the child and that's a little different. I think one thing to realize is that with God's blessings comes responsibility. We will probably go through some of this in the sermon on the Sabbath. If we are going to claim God's blessing, we must be prepared to follow through with our responsibility. We can't just lightly claim God's blessing as though it were some magic wand and then not exercise our responsibility.

That would be the problem with children that are perhaps related or friends or whatever. Unless you have responsibility or someone is prepared to exercise the proper responsibility in rearing the child God's way, then for God's blessing to be fulfilled, that blessing must be accompanied by obedience.

There are certain things and certain principles in the Scriptures that you can go through concerning blessings. God desires to bless us, but there are responsibilities that we have. Anytime God offers His blessings, there are other things that are involved with it. There are responsibilities that we have. Perhaps that will clarify, as far as what's involved.

Question: Why, in Matthew's account (Matthew 20:20-21), the mother of James and John asked Jesus to grant her sons' to sit on His right and left hand and in Mark's account (Mark 10:37), it states that James and John were asking?

Answer: It is just one of the occasions where the two accounts complement each other. James and John were "in" on it. They wanted it. Mark tells it in a more succinct fashion—the fact that they wanted it. Matthew adds in that they had brought their mother into the circumstance. She was the sister of Jesus' mother Mary. They had brought their mother into it. Matthew simply adds in a detail Mark ignores because the basic fact of it was that James and John were kind of striving for status there.

Question: Matthew 26:41, what did Jesus mean by, "Watch and pray lest you enter into temptation...?"

Answer: The very fact that if we are not remaining vigilant and not staying close to God through prayer, we will be caught up in various temptations that come along. The key to not being enticed and entangled in some of these temptations is to be vigilant and alert, not simply to world conditions but to ourselves. Be alert to what is going on, what's happening. Be alert, pray and stay close to God.

Question: Explain Mark 7:27-28, "But Jesus said to her, 'Let the children be filled first, for it is not good to take the children's bread and throw it to the little dogs.' And she answered and said to Him, 'Yes, Lord, yet even the little dogs under the table eat from the children's crumbs.'"

Answer: This is a reference to the Canaanite woman who came to Christ (v. 26). We are specifically told in John 1:11 that Christ came unto His own in His first coming—primarily to the Jews. He was in Judea and Galilee and didn't travel throughout the world. He concentrated His message in the area in Judea and Galilee. This woman came up and Christ, in one sense, was testing her attitude. The English translation is a little harsher than the Greek. The reference is really, let's say, to puppies underfoot.

It was a matter of priorities. Christ was not dealing with everyone at that time. Yet the woman displayed an attitude of humility when Christ told her that. She said, 'Well, that's true, but even little puppies there under the table eat the crumbs that fall.' Christ was impressed with her attitude and, in a sense, dealt with her ahead of time. It was simply not God's time to deal with everyone. Christ's ministry was directed to the Jews. It was in God's time schedule that they be given that opportunity. And they, of course, rejected the proclamation that was given to them.

But there were individuals among the Gentiles that evidenced outstanding attitudes of faith, and Christ, in a sense, dealt with them ahead of time. It was simply not the time that He was directing His efforts toward a broader spectrum. But there were individuals, as this woman and the Roman Centurion (Acts 10), that evidenced an attitude that Christ took note of. It is a matter of realizing that God may be dealing with certain ones, and yet God will take note of an attitude of humility and faith even if that's maybe not where He would primarily be working.

Question: Mark 9: 35, "And He sat down, called the twelve, and said to them, 'If anyone desires to be first, he shall be last of all and servant of all.'"

Answer: They were disputing who should be the greatest. He said, 'Look, if you want to know how to get to the top, it is to serve the most. Be willing to lower yourself and be the least. As you look around, the examples you see in the Roman world and your idea of status is that the guy does nothing and has everybody else wait on him.' He says, 'I am telling you, the one that really is the greatest is the one that is serving, helping and willing to do whatever needs to be done—the one who is willing to humble himself as a little child, to help and serve others.' Christ showed that God's view of what is important is a little different than man's view.

Question: Mark 9:38-42, "Now John answered Him, saying, 'Teacher, we saw someone who does not follow us casting out demons in Your name, and we forbade him because he does not follow us.' But Jesus said, 'Do not forbid him, for no one who works a miracle in My name can soon afterward speak evil of Me. For he who is not against us is on our side. For whoever gives you a cup of water to drink in My name, because you belong to Christ, assuredly, I say to you, he will by no means lose his reward. And whoever causes one of these little ones who believe in Me to stumble, it would be better for him if a millstone were hung around his neck, and he were thrown into the sea.”

Answer: Realize, that in Jesus’ ministry, He came among the Jews who had been, to various extents, practicing the religion that God had given through Moses. Judaism, as was normally practiced in the New Testament period, really was not the religion of Moses; it was a humanly devised religion that had a lot of human tradition and “dos” and “don’ts” attached to it. But there certainly were many who were sincere to whatever degree, who were observing God’s laws and with whom God was working to one extent or another. Jesus makes the point to the disciples that it was not their job to get out and tell others, ‘No, you can’t do “this” or “that.”’ He said, ‘Look, if he is not against us, if he recognizes My authority and is not speaking evil of us, leave him along.’ In effect, He told the disciples to mind their own business and let God take care of His.

In terms of offending one of the little ones (vv. 41-42), Christ says in effect, ‘The way you treat My disciples, I take it personally. If one of My representatives does something in a positive way for My sake for one who follows Me (for one of My disciples), that counts to his credit and if one causes offense, that counts to his discredit.’ It is a matter that God takes note of. God takes note of the way we treat His children, which ought to give all of us cause to consider and realize that the way we treat one another is a serious matter.

Question: Mark 10:25, “It is easier for a camel to go through the eye of a needle than for a rich man to enter the kingdom of God.”

Answer: It’s explained in the context.

Mark 10:23-24, “Then Jesus looked around and said to His disciples, ‘How hard it is for those who have riches to enter the kingdom of God!’ And the disciples were astonished at His words. But Jesus answered again and said to them, ‘Children, how hard it is for those who trust in riches to enter the kingdom of God!’”

That really is the problem—those who put their trust and confidence in physical wealth. It’s very difficult. Through a comparison, He is using a statement that’s obviously an extreme statement. It’s an attention-getting statement.

Verses 26-27, “And they were astonished beyond measure, saying among themselves, ‘Who then can be saved?’ But looking at them, Jesus said, ‘With men it is impossible, but not with God; for with God all things are possible.’”

It’s not that anyone who has any wealth will not be in the kingdom, but there is a problem. The human tendency is to put our trust and confidence in what we can see, taste, touch and feel. The more we put our trust and confidence in what we have and what we can see, the less we put our trust and confidence in Whom we can’t see and the more we open ourselves up to trouble. Certainly, God can work with those who have wealth or those who don’t.

Question: In John 16:7-8,13, why is “He” used instead of “It” in referring to the Holy Spirit?

Answer: I think the simplest explanation is the fact that in the Greek language and in most languages other than English, you don’t have the neuter in the same way. For instance, in the French language, it is masculine or feminine. If you were talking about the table, it’s spoken of in the feminine or if you were translating it literally and you were referring to something, it would be either “he” or “she”—even though in English we would refer to it as an “it.”

Other scriptures show that the Holy Spirit is not a person. One of the simplest ways to prove that is that we are told in Matthew 1:18 that Mary was with child of the Holy Spirit. If she conceived by the Holy Spirit and the Holy Spirit were a person, then that would make the Holy Spirit the Father, right? And yet Christ prayed to the Father to send the Spirit (John 14:16). Mary was with child of the Holy Spirit. Obviously, the Holy Spirit was not a person, else that would have been the Father. Think that one through.

There are various other places where it talks about the Spirit being poured out from on high (Acts 10:45). Again, you don’t pour out a person. The Holy Spirit is a power that emanates out from God (Luke 1:35; Acts 1:8).

Many times when the masculine or feminine pronouns are used, they are rendered into English as the neuter “it” in many contexts. Here, the translators didn’t do that because they did not understand the fact that the Holy Spirit was not an individual. Since the translators themselves believed in the doctrine of the trinity, they simply rendered it this way. If you were reading this section of Scripture in the French Bible, the question would not arise because everything would be rendered as masculine or feminine. If you were reading it in the Greek, the same would be the case. In English, we make a distinction between “he,” “she” and “it.” It creates a little problem or causes a misunderstanding.

Question: Acts 7:25, “For he supposed that his brethren would have understood that God would deliver them by his hand, but they did not understand.” Did Moses know before leaving Egypt that he was to deliver Israel?

Answer: Moses had come to understand that God was going to use him to deliver Israel. He thought God had put him in the position as prince of Egypt and God would use him to help the people. The people were unwilling to accept him in that role. He thought he knew how God was going to do it. Then during the forty years in the land of Midian, he probably thought God was not going to use him. God did it a totally different way. We try to second-guess God. God delivers us from our problems. Very, very rarely does He do it the way we anticipate it. We have to walk by faith.

Question: Why does it say in Acts 9:7 that the men heard the voice and then in Acts 22:7, it says the men did not hear the voice?

Answer: Acts 9:7, “And the men who journeyed with him stood speechless, hearing a voice but seeing no one.”

Acts 22:9, “Now those who were with me indeed saw the light and were afraid, but they did not hear the voice of Him who spoke to me.”

They did not understand what was said. They heard a noise, but they did not comprehend the message that was spoken. That is the sense of it.

Question: In Acts 16:4, are the “decrees” of this verse referring to Acts 15:29? Can decrees be imposed on us? Were the decrees nailed to the cross?

Answer: They felt to be baptized you had to become a Jew. The sign of the covenant of Abraham was circumcision. It was an issue. It was difficult for many Jews to accept the fact that Gentiles didn’t have to be circumcised. The issue had gone to Jerusalem. When an issue arises and it cannot be resolved on a local level, it goes to headquarters—specific matters of Church government.

In Acts 15, a decision was made. The decree was written up and sent out. One of these decrees had to do with circumcision.

Were the decrees nailed to the cross? (Colossians 2:14) That is not what it is referring to. What is blotted out?

Turn back to Acts 3:19, “Repent therefore and be converted, that your sins may be blotted out....” Our sins are blotted out. What does that have to do with the handwriting of ordinances? If you were to look up this phrase “handwriting of ordinances” (Greek, “cheirographon”), it means “something handwritten.” This is a manuscript, specifically, a legal document or bond, a handwritten bill. It is a written record, like a signed handwritten bond of indebtedness. It was a term often used in the Greek world referring to a debt. Our handwritten bill of debt was blotted out. Christ paid our debt in full. The catalog of our sins—our personalized debt—was paid in full. We owed our life and Christ paid the penalty. It was against us, contrary to us and He took it away. Our sins were nailed to the cross. He took all of our sins. As a result, our sins were nailed to the cross.

Can decrees be imposed on us?

Yes, the authority for that is in Matthew 16:19 where the Apostles were told, “And I will give you the keys of the Kingdom of heaven, and whatever you bind on earth will be bound in heaven, and whatever you loose on earth will be loosed in heaven.” Binding and loosing had to do with official judicial decisions. The judgment was to be made based on the law. The law doesn’t change; circumstances change. That comes on down today.

The Scribes and Pharisees were in that office, but they weren’t doing what they were supposed to.

Matthew 23:2, “...‘The scribes and the Pharisees sit in Moses’ seat.’” Moses’ seat is to make judgments.

Matthew 21:43, “Therefore I say to you, the kingdom of God will be taken from you and given to a nation bearing the fruits of it.” It will be taken from the Pharisees and given to the Church.

How do you know which day to celebrate as Holy Days? We know from the Hebrew calendar. Who made that determination? God revealed it, but the Jews have preserved it.

Question: Why do Protestants most often quote the Apostle Paul as their authority? Peter was the chief apostle (the leader of the twelve). John had a very special relationship with Jesus and James was the brother of Jesus. Why is it that almost all scripture references used are from Paul instead of these three?

Answer: Paul wrote more of the New Testament than any other one person, so there is a lot to quote from Paul. He wrote fourteen books.

The reason the Protestants like to quote from Paul the most—one factor is the fact that Peter says in II Peter 3:15-16: “...as also our beloved brother Paul, according to the wisdom given to him, has written to you, as also in all his epistles, speaking in them of these things, in which are some things hard to understand, which those who are untaught and unstable twist to their own destruction, as they do also the rest of the Scriptures.”

Peter said centuries ago that Paul wrote some things that are a little hard to be understood. Paul was a deep thinker. He frequently dealt with philosophical concepts. He wrote some things that are a little more difficult to understand. Peter made reference to that. It was hard to be understood in the time that it was written. Peter said Paul wrote some things that are a little more difficult to understand and those that are unstable and unlearned twist them, just like they do the other Scriptures—but they particularly like to twist Paul.

They take certain things out of context. This was the case centuries ago at the time of the New Testament (Peter himself warned about it), and it is certainly our case today. We find that there is an emphasis given to what the Protestant world terms “Pauline theology.” That is simply based on what Peter expressed.

God used Paul in a very remarkable way. He was deeply educated and grounded in the Old Testament Scriptures, and God used him to write more of the New Testament than any other one person. God also included the writings from James, Peter, John and Jude, as well as the four gospels. That’s why, when we started going through the New Testament in the order in which God inspired the Greeks to preserve it (the manuscripts are inevitably preserved throughout the Greek world and the so-called Byzantine texts), the General Epistles of James, Peter, John and Jude preceded Paul’s epistles. They set the stage. That’s why, when we went through them, we went through them in that order. When you go through James, Peter, John and Jude, you go through faith, hope and love and warnings against apostasy. By the time you come to Paul, you are a little more grounded to understand some of the things Paul wrote. You understand Paul in the light of James, Peter and John. In that sense, that’s why they need to be understood first because they deal with more basic subject matter.

Question: I Corinthians 15:29—Concerning the phrase, “baptized for the dead.”

Answer: The whole context deals with the resurrection. If there isn’t a resurrection, what is going to happen to those who are dead?

I Corinthians 15:29, “Otherwise, what will they do who are baptized for the dead [“Baptized for the hope of the dead” is the sense of it.], if the dead do not rise at all? Why then are they baptized for the [hope of] the dead?” This is a gross misunderstanding.

Questions: I Timothy 3:1—Why don’t we have bishops?

Answer: We do. We don’t normally use that term in English. It is an English term. The term in the Greek language is “episcopos.” It’s the Greek word from which the Episcopal Church takes its name. “Episcopos” simply means “overseer.” It is one of several terms that is used to refer to the ministry. Certain churches—the Catholic Church, Episcopal Church and others—use “bishop” as a title to refer to an individual in a church hierarchy. In reality, all elders are bishops. They are overseers, individuals responsible for the oversight of the congregation. We don’t generally use the term simply because it is a term that has been misused by the world and carries the connotation that is not scriptural. We more commonly use the term “elder.”

In reality, there are four basic terms that are used in the New Testament. One is the Greek term “presbyteros,” which means “elder.” A second term is “episcopos,” which means “overseer.” It is translated “bishop” in the King James. A third term is “poimaino,” which means “shepherd.” It’s the word that’s translated “pastor.” Any time you see the word “pastor” in the New Testament, it is translated from the exact same word that is also translated “shepherd.” Then, also the term “diakonos,” which means “minister.” Those four terms: bishop, elder, overseer and minister would be pretty much interchangeable, used in the sense of referring to anyone, whether a local elder or another rank. The term pastor (or shepherd) would refer basically to the one who had the oversight of the flock or the congregation.

Question: I Peter 5:13, “She who is in Babylon, elect together with you, greets you; and so does Mark my son.” Is this physical or spiritual Babylon?

Answer: The book of I Peter is a straightforward letter or book. It is addressed to the strangers scattered throughout Pontus, Galatia, Cappadocia, Asia and Bithynia (I Peter 1:1). It is written from Babylon (I Peter 5:13). Babylon was the capital of the Parthenon Empire. This was one of the major areas where the ten tribes of Israel were. Babylon had a large Jewish community.

There isn't any reason to take that he was in Babylon, other than in a literal fashion. If it is not symbolic, then it is to be taken literally.

Another aspect of demonstrating that it was the literal city of Babylon, the Catholic Church wants to claim that it was Rome. They should go back to Revelation 17. When it comes to I Peter, they claim Peter was in Rome being the pope. They want to leave out Revelation.

Also, if the letter is coming from Rome it would be coming from the west, and there isn't any way you would start a letter from up in the northeast corner of Pontus. You would have to start it probably in Asia and come through another way.

I Peter 5:13, "She [the Church] who is in Babylon, elect together with you, greets you; and so does Mark my son." We would take the expression, Babylon, literally. To whom were they sent? They were sent to the lost sheep of the House of Israel.

Question: I John 5:7-8 appears to support the trinity.

Answer: I John 5:7, "There are three that bear witness in heaven, the Father, the Word and the Holy Spirit, and these three are one." This is not a part of any of the original Greek texts. Basically, any commentary will bring that out. Most modern translations simply show the verse with a footnote. Verse 7 does not appear in any Greek manuscripts; it only appeared in the Latin Vulgate.

It's an interesting story as to how it came to be a part of the King James translation. The King James translation was primarily made from the Greek Textus Receptus (as it is called), as published by Erasmus of Rotterdam, who was a scholar a couple hundred years earlier. He was responsible for and helped to compile an authoritative Greek text that was utilized in the western world. When he came out with his Greek text, it, of course, did not have this verse because it was not in any of the Greek texts. It stirred up quite a bit of controversy. Basically, it came to be put in under threat of his life by the local Catholic bishop. It's a story that will be brought out in any of the commentaries. So from that standpoint, it can't be utilized as a proof of the trinity because it really has no authority in the Scriptures. It is not actually a part of inspired Scripture. It is not in any of the Greek manuscripts that we have or that there is any record of.

Question: Is the Laodicean Church era to come after the Philadelphia Church era?

Answer: Yes. In Revelation 2 and 3, we have the Church addressed. In Revelation 1:20, John sees seven lampstands and this is explained. Christ is pictured as standing in the midst (v. 13). The entire Church is being pictured by seven lampstands. It was to be a light to the world. These are not the only Church congregations in Asia Minor. They were to typify the Church of all times.

Revelation 1: 1, "The Revelation of Jesus Christ, which God gave Him to show His servants—things which must shortly take place...." John was given this vision to be revealed; to reveal "things which must shortly take place." It was a prophecy. It was something that had implication way beyond the seven little congregations which were addressed here in chapters 2 and 3. These seven were selected out. They were stops on a Roman mail route. There was this particular order in which they were addressed. We have something that was typical and representative of the Church of all time. It typified the entire Church because God's number of completion is seven. Each of these congregations had characteristics selected out.

From a standpoint of prophecy, we begin in Revelation 2 with the Church at Ephesus. This is a particular time period of the Church. There are seven distinct eras. It was successive, as in the nature of the mail deliveries. They also have an application to individual Christians of all time, but these messages are primarily a prophecy. It begins with the time of the Apostle John and projects itself out to the time of the Lord. The Laodicean era is the final or seventh one mentioned; the Philadelphia is the sixth.

It became plain in the early 1950s (about 1951-1953) that an understanding of some of this had opened up. Mr. Herbert Armstrong had been puzzled. Those in Oregon clearly were the Church of God, yet they were so small and totally lacking in vitality, life and power. It was a paradox and he could not understand. If it was the Church of God, why was it was lacking in power? He puzzled over that through the years. In the time around 1951-1953, those coming out of college began intensive study in certain sections of Scripture. It became plain that this was the revelation in chapters 2 and 3. Sardis was told that it was at the point of death, and then Philadelphia, which had little strength and yet had kept God's Word, had set before it an open door. It was plain that God had raised up Mr. Herbert Armstrong for the Philadelphia era.

This was the era that was prophesied to be kept from the Great Tribulation (Revelation 3:10). It became apparent that the scriptural description of these people was identified here in Revelation. They were pictured as lacking power and they did. The understanding of the history of the Church from the apostles to our time became clear.

Yet there remains one final era characterized as the Church of the Laodicea. Some of the specifics remain to be seen. The distinction between Philadelphia and Laodicea will be apparent prior to the Tribulation and is something that we will simply have to wait and see. It should serve as a warning for each of us, as to what God says is going to occur to some. We find an attitude, described in chapter 3, characteristic of the Laodicean Church and characteristic of this age. We live in a permissive society. We live in a society that tends to have a very watered-down, lukewarm, type of approach to life. We would all do well to be warned of that. Perhaps at a later time we will go through an entire Bible study on Revelation 2 and 3.

Question: Revelation 6:6—What is the oil and the wine that is not to be hurt?

Answer: That is a reference to the horse of famine. It describes the four horses of the Apocalypse. The third horse is the horse of famine. It describes, in symbolic terms, that he has a balance scale, a type of scale that was used in time past.

Revelation 6:6, "...‘A quart of wheat for a denarius [KJV, “penny”], and three quarts of barley for a denarius; and do not harm the oil and the wine.’” It describes rationing, where they are rationing out this small increment of grain. There is severe famine and it describes grain, the very staff of life, being rationed out.

The term that is translated “penny” in the King James is a reference to the sum of money that was a day’s wage for a common laborer—not exactly a penny as we think of it, though some of you can probably remember when you worked for a few cents a day. Our concept of money today is vastly different than the concept of money simply forty or fifty years ago and much more so back then.

“...do not harm the oil and the wine” is simply describing commodities that are in short supply. They are told, ‘Be very careful, we are rationing grain and some of the luxury items like oil and wine.’ They are being very, very carefully rationed out because of severe shortage.

Question: Who are the two witnesses?

Answer: Would you like for me to name names? No, I won’t name names. The reason I won’t name names is I don’t know names. There was a time when several of us thought we had them figured out a number of years ago, and it’s very apparent that we didn’t. So, I don’t think I am going to nominate anyone new to the job.

The two witnesses are mentioned in Revelation 11:3-4, “‘And I will give power to my two witnesses, and they will prophesy one thousand two hundred and sixty days, clothed in sackcloth. These are the two olive trees and the two lamp stands standing before the God of the earth.’”

You find reference to them in Zechariah 3 and 4. You find symbolism of God’s two representatives. You can find parallels to the two witnesses in the person of Moses and Aaron, God’s representatives who went in before Pharaoh. The plagues that Moses and Aaron called down are very similar to what the two witnesses will be calling down.

The two candlesticks mentioned are representative of two Churches. Some have speculated on this that they are Philadelphia and Laodicea. I don’t think that is necessarily the case. Understand that candlesticks, as we know them, did not exist back then. A more accurate translation would be lampstand because wax candles simply did not exist at this time in history.

What was utilized at that time resembled a pottery bowl. In some cases, it was a bowl that was set on a stem that came down and you filled up the whole thing with oil. You would have, maybe, a high stem and then you would have stems that would come out. You would fill up the main thing with oil and the oil would keep the lamp lit. You would fill up the main stem that came up higher. You would fill that up with oil and the oil was an open stem that came up to a little bowl on each side. So, it was the oil that was burning.

Generally in the Middle East, they used olive oil because that was the most readily available source. God uses olive oil as a type of His Holy Spirit. Many analogies are drawn from the Bible from the use of olive oil. The fuel source that was used in the tabernacle and later in the temple was olive oil. Olive trees would be, of course, the source of olive oil. The two lampstands that are filled with olive oil represent a type of God’s Spirit. In other words, the two individuals are filled with the Spirit of God. At that time, God’s representatives serve as a contrast to the two other individuals in Revelation 11 who are Satan’s representative—the Beast and the false prophet. Who does God have? He has two witnesses, two individuals who are undoubtedly alive on the face of the earth right now, and we, in terms of knowing exactly who they are, cannot lock in on that right now.

The point is that when the time comes, God selects whom He will and places that individual in that office. The individual may very well be around.

We look on the horizon and we try to figure things out, but we are doing so on the basis of things as they are now. But if we're talking about ten, fifteen or twenty years in the future, then there's no telling. Things can change drastically. Things can change drastically in five years or even in one year. You see, that is the problem in trying to zero in on a specific individual.

There will be two men that God will utilize in that capacity as His direct representatives to serve as witnesses to the world and, in effect, call the hand of the Beast and the false prophet. This is in much the same way that Moses and Aaron went in before Pharaoh as God's representatives and contended with Pharaoh's magicians, Janes and Jambres, and there was the contest back and forth.

You find various analogies. You can draw an analogy to Joshua and Zerubbabel and their function in the time of Ezra and Nehemiah. In the book of Zechariah, they are the two olive trees and the two lampstands. Zechariah 3 and 4 are the chapters that refer to that. It's clear in Zechariah 4 that's the analogy of the two candlesticks (or "lampstands" would be more accurate). The two olive trees clearly typify Zerubbabel and Joshua in the book of Zechariah. They were the two individuals who were leaders in God's work. They were doing God's work at that time and were representing God to the people in dealing with foreign rulers. They were dealing with the enemies of the faith. Some of that ties in with the way we got the Bible.

But to try and zero in on two specific individuals is not possible at this time. The point is that at certain times in history, God has utilized a team, as in the case of Moses and Aaron or as in the case of Zerubbabel and Joshua. God has not always chosen to utilize a team in quite the same way. You will find in the New Testament at the beginning, Peter and John stood out in a special way. They were kind of a team. You would find them as a team being brought before various ruling groups. There are other times when you find an individual mentioned in the singular fashion and you don't find any mention of someone else. God has sometimes done it a little differently. They are simply going to be God's chosen representatives at the time of the very end. During the time of the Tribulation, there will be those two individuals whom God will use to hold out as His witnesses and warning to the world in much the way that Moses and Aaron did.

Question: Revelation 20:7-10—Are those that perish lost forever? Is there hope for them?

Answer: The Millennium is a time of judgment. God is not judging the world right now, but He is going to be judging during the Millennium. The Scripture does not teach a second chance. It teaches a chance of salvation—an opportunity for an individual to have his mind opened by God to understand God's calling and purpose. But realize that when we know and don't act on what we know, that's our chance. It's not a matter of second chances and third and fourth chances, over and over. It's a matter that once we really know and understand—God has dealt with us. We understand and we are having our opportunity. We have to make a commitment. There will be those who make the wrong choice, those who simply choose the wrong fate.

From the time setting, it would appear here in Revelation that we're looking at a period at the end of the Millennium. Here are individuals who have had an opportunity to fully know God's way. God has been working with them. They have had an opportunity and they simply have not availed themselves of that opportunity. They have allowed themselves to be deceived because they did not believe the warnings. Don't you think there will be sermon after sermon after sermon preached on these scriptures, particularly as we get toward the end of the Millennium? Don't you think we will warn people of what's going to happen and to be aware lest it happen to them? There are going to be individuals who sit there and think, "That could never happen to me."

I had a point very vividly impressed upon my mind. We were at the Feast of Tabernacles and Mr. Herbert Armstrong called a meeting for the ministry. He addressed the assembled ministry. He opened the Bible to the section in Acts where Paul talked to the Ephesians elders (Acts 20:17-38).

He went through the section of scripture where it says, Acts 20:28, "...take heed..."

Verse 30, "...from among yourselves men will arise up, speaking perverse things, to draw away the disciples after themselves." "Some of you will depart and will seek to lead away a following.’ This was a charge to the Ephesians elders.

Verses 28-30, “Therefore take heed to yourselves and to all the flock, among which the Holy Spirit has made you overseers to shepherd the church of God which He purchased with His own blood. For I know this, that after my departure savage wolves will come in among you, not sparing the flock. Also from among yourselves men will rise up, speaking perverse things, to draw away the disciples after themselves.”

Mr. Herbert Armstrong read this to us and he said, ‘Fellows, this is not a statement of what has happened in the past; it’s a prophecy of what’s going to happen in the future. This is going to happen again. Don’t let it happen to you.’ I remember that very emphatically and the point emphatically made as only Mr. Herbert Armstrong could make it. I had never heard Mr. Armstrong go through this scripture in that way either before or after. But that Feast for some reason, he was inspired, and I think I know why he was.

He was inspired of God to go through that section in his address to the ministry and to really drive it home. ‘This is going to happen! Don’t let it happen to you!’ What really impressed me was that just a matter of weeks later, there were a number of those in the room who heard those words, who did allow it to happen to them—some within a matter of weeks, some within a matter of months, some over the course of the next few years. The point is that people can be warned and they don’t always heed the warning.

There are going to be those in the Millennium who are going to be warned, ‘Look, Satan is chained up right now. The time is going to come when he is going to be turned loose and he’s going to try to deceive you—and this is the way he’s going to do it. Don’t let it happen to you.’ There are going to be those who ignore that, and it will ultimately lead to their destruction. The whole world ultimately has a choice set before it—good and evil, right and wrong. Israel of old had that choice (Deuteronomy 30:15,19). We have that choice today. The people who live in the Millennium are ultimately going to have to be given a chance to choose.

For a period of time, they will have the right way instilled in them. Satan won’t be around to muddy the waters. We will be able to create a society without Satan’s influence, but they are going to have to make a decision to reject that influence. God has to know that if they had a choice, they would choose the right. If they never had that choice, it would be a little different.

Question: In the book of Revelation, it talks about the various tribes and it talks about the twelve tribes. The question relates to the fact that most people, even in the Israelite tribes, have some level of mixture in terms of a tribal mixture. If they are going to be separated out, there are many who would not be totally of one specific tribe and the same would be for ethnic groups as well.

Answer: I think the principle is the fact that God is ultimately the One who will tend to that. In cases like that, people normally take after one side of the family or the other, and there is a sense of identity that is there. Many things are obviously clear. Some things or some issues may not be as clear. That’s why some of those things will have to be resolved when Christ comes because He is the only One that knows how to sort out the details in the appropriate way. Perhaps much of it would not be unclear, but some would be in terms of how God would allocate things and assign individuals as He reallocates the earth as recorded there in Revelation.

Question: Is it permissible for a baptized member to date a non-baptized individual under any conditions?

Answer: The basic principle of dating, of course, goes back to marriage. For one who has made a commitment to God—who has been baptized and is converted—to become involved with someone who is not, is not appropriate.

In the context of the Church and young people who have grown up in the Church and who are here as a part of the congregation, we sometimes have situations where there are some who are baptized and some who are not—basically, that young adult age spread. In terms of single dating and in terms of anything that would involve romantic involvement, something of that sort really shouldn’t go that far. There needs to be a common bond in terms of commitment to God’s way.

It may be partially on what you mean as a “date.” In the context of Church socials or participating in young adults group activities, something of that sort, it is a little bit different. It would be best that if someone has a specific question on that; it is the kind of thing that’s best handled on an individual basis. If someone has a specific question, they can check with me on it personally.

Question: The question involves the fact that the Catholic Church has issued a new catechism. The Catholic Church in issuing the new catechism states, “doctrines and scriptures should be understood to reflect more accurately the current mood and consciousness of society.” This is stated in the introduction of the Catholic Bible Course. The question relating to that is: Would that be accurate from a Biblical standpoint?

Answer: The scripture is very clear that Jesus Christ came preaching the gospel or the good news of the kingdom of God. God’s message is not designed to reflect the current mood and standards of society. Society has cut itself off from God and chosen to go its own way. Jesus Christ came with God’s message.

You might notice Malachi 3:1, “Behold, I send My messenger, and he will prepare the way before Me. And the Lord, whom you seek, will suddenly come to His temple, even the Messenger of the covenant, in whom you delight. ‘Behold, He is coming,’ says the Lord of hosts.”

What do we find here? We find that Jesus Christ was to come as the Messenger of the covenant. He came proclaiming the message of the New Covenant. It was a prophesy that a messenger would be sent to prepare the way before the One who was coming as the Messenger of the covenant.

You might notice in Acts 10:36-37, “The word which God sent to the children of Israel, preaching peace through Jesus Christ—He is Lord of all—that word you know, which was proclaimed throughout all Judea, and began from Galilee after the baptism which John preached.”

You want to know about the gospel or the origin of the gospel that Jesus preached?

We’re told in Mark 1:14-15, “Now after John was put in prison, Jesus came to Galilee, preaching the gospel of the kingdom of God, and saying, ‘The time is fulfilled, and the kingdom of God is at hand. Repent, and believe in the gospel.’”

Peter said in Acts 10 that this message was the word which God sent. So, who’s the origin? Where did the message originate? It originated with God. It was sent to the children of Israel. Jesus Christ was the Messenger and the message had to do with peace. It began to be published, starting in Galilee, after the baptism which John preached.

When we come back to Mark 1:14, we see, “...after John was put in prison, Jesus came into Galilee preaching the gospel of the Kingdom of God.” That’s the only way to peace. The good news of the Kingdom of God is the way that peace is coming, and that is the only way. That is the good news that holds the key to peace.

This was a message about the New Covenant. What is the New Covenant? The New Covenant has to do with God writing His laws in our hearts and in our minds (Jeremiah 31:31-33; Hebrews 8:10). Jesus did not come with a message that was going to do away with the law. He came with a message that had to do with putting the law in our hearts and in our minds.

The gospel was the message of the Kingdom of God. What does a kingdom have? First and foremost, a kingdom has a king, doesn’t it? It has laws, it has subjects and it has territories. Jesus Christ came with a message that made all of those things plain.

You remember Daniel 2:32-35. We’ve gone through this numerous times. You remember the great image that Nebuchadnezzar saw: the head of gold, the breast and arms of silver, the thighs of brass, the legs of iron, the feet of iron and clay and the ten toes. The stone cut out without hands comes down and smashes the image on its feet, and the image turns to dust and blows away. The stone becomes a great mountain that fills the earth.

We’re told in Daniel 2:44, “And in the days of those kings [the final ten] the God of heaven will set up a kingdom which shall never be destroyed; and the kingdom shall not be left to other people; it shall break in pieces and consume all these kingdoms, and it shall stand forever.”

The God of heaven is going to set up a kingdom. Where is it going to be set up? It’s going to be set up on the earth. It’s going to rule over all the kingdoms of this world.

We read in Revelation 11:15, “...‘the kingdoms of this world shall become the kingdoms of our Lord and of His Christ, and He shall reign forever and ever!’”

The kingdom of God is going to hold sway over all the earth. Jesus Christ is going to rule as King of kings and Lord of lords (Revelation 19:16).

The law will go forth from Zion (Isaiah 2:3).

Jesus Christ came with a message of the good news about how peace is going to come and how we can have a part in that. The kingdom of God is something that we can inherit (I Corinthians 6:9). It is something that we can enter (John 3:5). That gets into a whole different subject. I’ve gone into that in some of the outlying Bible studies.

Jesus Christ did not come with a message that simply reflected the spirit of the age. He came with a message that reflected the Spirit of God. The spirit of the age has been different things at different times. The spirit of the age has never been in tune with the Spirit of God. It's not in our time and it wasn't in the time of Christ.

Paul brings out the statement in I Corinthians 9:19-22, "...I have become all things to all men...." Paul used psychology, in a right way, to help them to understand.

In terms of the way Paul approached the subject, let's notice a couple of examples in the book of Acts. Let's notice the different approach with a different audience.

Notice Acts 17:22, "Then Paul stood in the midst of the Areopagus and said, 'Men of Athens, I perceive that in all things you are very religious.'" –'You're exceedingly religious.'

Verses 23-26, "'for as I was passing through and considering the objects of your worship, I even found an altar with this inscription: TO THE UNKNOWN GOD. Therefore, the One whom you worship without knowing, Him I proclaim to you: God, who made the world and everything in it, since He is Lord of heaven and earth, does not dwell in temples made with hands. Nor is He worshiped with men's hands, as though He needed anything, since He gives to all life, breath, and all things. And He has made from one blood every nation of men to dwell on all the face of the earth, and has determined their pre-appointed times and the boundaries of their habitation.'"

Verse 28, "'for in Him we live and move and have our being, as also some of your own poets have said, 'For we are also His offspring.'"

Here he quotes from one of the Greek poets.

Verse 29, "'Therefore, since we are the offspring of God, we ought not to think that the Divine Nature is like gold or silver or stone, something shaped by art and man's devising.'"

Coming on down:

Verse 31, "'because He has appointed a day on which He will judge the world in righteousness by the Man whom He has ordained. He has given assurance of this to all by raising Him from the dead.'"

You can go through this whole section of Acts 17 and you'll find that Paul did not start out by quoting scripture. There aren't any verses that he quoted. In fact, the name Jesus Christ is not mentioned in this specific section. Paul was speaking to people who were not familiar with the Bible. He was talking to people who were unaware of Jesus Christ or any of the controversy that had surrounded Him. Paul introduced the subject starting from where they were to bring them to the fact and reality that there is a Creator God who is going to intervene and judge the creation, and there is One that He has borne testimony of through the resurrection as being the instrument of that judgment. It was an introduction. It was not everything there was to say, but it was the way Paul approached the subject, dealing with people who didn't have any knowledge of the Bible.

Go to Acts 22 where he's speaking to Jews (people who were familiar with the Scriptures).

Acts 22:1-2, he said, "'Men, brethren, and fathers, hear my defense before you now.' And when they heard that he spoke to them in the Hebrew language, they kept all the more silent...." He spoke in Hebrew to really get their attention. He certainly didn't speak in Hebrew on Mars Hill; on Mars Hill he spoke in Greek. He approached the people from that standpoint. He started out by introducing himself.

Verse 3, he said, "'I am indeed a Jew, born in Tarsus of Cilicia, but brought up in this city at the feet of Gamaliel, taught according to the strictness of our fathers' law, and was zealous toward God as you all are today.'"

He starts out emphasizing his relationship with the Jewish community—acknowledging and pointing out his study of the law. He recounts the story of his conversion (vv. 4-14) and goes on through.

You could notice other accounts that are directed toward the Jewish community. You could notice Peter's sermon in Acts 2 or you could notice Stephen's sermon in Acts 7, where Stephen started out with God appearing to Abraham (vv. 2-8), then gives sort of a synopsis of the Old Testament (vv. 9-53). Stephen was addressing Jews in Jerusalem who were familiar with the Scriptures.

If you're speaking to people who don't even know what a Bible is and you start quoting verses of Scripture, that's not an effective starting point. You have to first lead them to the realization that the Bible is the Word of God and then prove to them what it says.

It doesn't do any good to prove to a Buddhist what the Bible says, when you haven't even proven to him that the Bible is the Word of God. You have to start with people based on where they are. The message is the same, the standards of God don't change, but their technique and approaches are different. You can go through the book of Acts and find that there were different approaches used with different audiences, but they weren't coming to different conclusions and weren't preaching different gospels. They simply used a different introduction to capture their attention and help them relate to the message they were conveying.

We have traditionally done that over the years. Years ago, when Mr. Herbert Armstrong was traveling in some of the foreign countries (particularly in non-Christian areas), he used an approach modeled much more after Acts 17. When he was speaking to audiences that had a general familiarity with the Bible, his approach was different. We have, I think, an appropriate way of approaching the subject, but it does not allow for different gospels. The one gospel that Jesus Christ brought from God—the message that He came proclaiming—is the good news of the Kingdom of God which He bore witness. That is God's message.
