A Harmony of the Gospel Accounts

Here is a revision of Robertson's harmony of the Gospels and of Jehovah's Witnesses' "Main Events of Jesus's Earthly Sojourn". This chart singles out the suspension and resumption of the various Biblical narratives. Scripture references are underlined which point to a clarifying passing of time. Letters on verse numbers single out partial verses. Asterisks refer to notes which follow the chart.

- *6 An 1854 Canadian Jewish calendar identified Chislew 7 as Herod's known death day.
- *8 Assuming Jesus officially became a son of one year on his first Nisan 1.
- *9 Tiberius's 15th year began on the Hellenistic civil new year, Fall A.D. 27.
- *15 John 2:20 counts 46 years from Herod's 18th year in 20-19 B.C. to A.D. 28.
- *18 John 4:35 refers to an April harvest now four months away.
- *30 Mark dramatizes the crowd's intensity, Luke is more detached.
- *39 The out-of-context reference to "Judea" tempted scribes to write "Galilee".
- *40 Two weeks after a sabbath passover made this the second sabbath counting till Pentecost according to Joshua (5:10-12), the first according to the Sadducees. So, it was the "second-first" sabbath.
- *56 Some ancient rabbis identified Sivan 6 as the day the law was first given.
- *75 Robertson (Page 36) felt that this healing occurred at the time of Mark 1:40-45.
- *78 Matthew is more topic oriented and less time-oriented than Luke when moving from one major event to the next, but his minor details are more intimate.
- *99 Mark is graphic about the seen change. Luke does not speculate.
- *104 Matthew is familiar with (13:1) but often unconcerned with (13:54) sequence.
- *109 Matthew and Mark write about John at this break in Jesus's ministry. By leaving out events, Mark may be both topical and chronological.
- *134 Josephus (Atn. 7:14:7) identified sabbath noon to sabbath noon as eight days.
- *152 Two like episodes are too coincidental to be totally separate events.
- *166 Jesus's coming peril is so emphasized by John throughout, that he can relate the hard episode in its time setting. The others are topically restricted.
- *251 A night trial was illegal. The morning assembly provided a way of treating earlier gatherings as preliminary indictments.
- *262 Matthew and Mark allude to a second scourging but to events of the first also.
- *264 Simon arrives from the country perhaps because he has been laboring. Unlike the following day, this is a work day (Anchor Commentary on John, Page 883).
- *272 The sun is darkened and ten hours later a lunar eclipse makes the moon become as blood. This may contribute to the crowd's response to Peter's quote from Joel found in Acts 2:20. So this April 25, A.D. 31 lunar eclipse may figure into the events.
