Version 2.2

The Church of God sabbatarian groups have always been a scattered into various remnants. However, this century, due to the nature of organised nations and governments, and to enable it to do an end-time witness, it is essential for the Church of God to be united.

Yet there have always been various branches and eras of the Church. This century, the WCG stood out and proclaimed a major Work. Yet it is now more important than ever to do a Work, yet the remnants of this group just refuse to cooperate.

The genesis of this era are particularly interesting and serves to give us insights into the early WCG.

Ever since the scattering of God's sabbatarian church (Acts 8:1), it has not been one composite organisation, but has consisted of many groups related to one another. Some of those groups have died out; some seem spiritually without life; but some are alive and well, doing a Work to bring many to salvation. This article is about some of these groups today.

The Historical Links Between Adventists and Churches of God

Both Adventists and Churches of God are familiar with their roots and beginnings last century. With the formation of the Seventh-day Adventist Church, some individuals and fellowships either never joined and remained outside of the SDA Church, withdrew in 1863 or withdrew in 1866 (see Linden, 1844 and the Shut Door Problem, pages 80-81; Bjorling, The Churches of God, Seventh Day. A Bibliography, pages 10-14). Of course the Seventh-day Baptists remained a separate entity.

With the incorporation of the scattered non-SDA and non-SDB churches, the new group eventually became known as the General Conference of the Church of God). Later, in 1922, the name was officially known as General Conference of the Church of God (Seventh Day) and has remained such to this day.

Membership and new elders to the Church of God was added from the Seventh-day Adventist Church from time-to-time. Others aligned with the Church of God such as elder Greenberry G Rupert, whose writings later proved very impressionable on Herbert W Armstrong, founder of the Worldwide Church of God (initially known as the Radio Church of God).

Rupert brought with him the belief that the annual sabbaths, in addition to the weekly sabbath, are important for Christians to understand and to observe which impacted upon sections of the Church of God, a few who were already observing these days. During his time with the Seventh-day Adventist Church in the late nineteenth century, he performed missionary work in parts of South America. Later, in the 1960s, Worldwide Church of God ministers stumbled across many of these scattered remnants of Rupert's missionary work. They never associated with any other sabbatarian group, but continued to faithfully observe the sabbath and in many cases, the annual sabbaths.

The Churches of God today have a Seventh-day Adventist elder to thank for bringing the annual sabbaths into their theological framework. To this day, many Adventists privately observe these days. Rupert died in 1922, still a Church of God elder, leader of the Remnant of Israel group. Apparently he associated loosely with both the General Conference of the Church of God (Seventh Day) and the splits from the Church in 1905. It split again in 1933 with re-amalgamation in 1950, although some did not rejoin the General Conference. More recently attempts to unify with the latter group failed in a vote, but now appears to be occurring by default with individual congregations joining the larger group.

In 1931 the Church of God in Poland was formed as a result of a split from the SDA Church. Coincidentally the Church of God in Portugal also started that year, as an SDA Church splinter group and the Adventist Church of Promise in 1932 in Brazil which is now a member of the Church of God (Seventh Day) General Conference which has around 60,000 members around the globe. Also in the 1930s an SDA minister in Australia, pastor AH Britten, established the Remnant Church of God (although it was not registered until 1939). A small group continuing that church may still be found extant in Perth, Western Australia to this day.

There can be no doubt about it: the Adventists and Churches of God are related, have a common history and are more closely related than we might sometimes admit. By the way, not all of the Churches of God in East Europe which were underground during the oppressive years under Communist rule were offshoots of the Adventists. One particular group in the Ukraine came about due to a revelation in 1946 and others trace their history to groups dating back to the Middle Ages.

The Worldwide Church of God

In 1931 Herbert W Armstrong was ordained a minister of the Church of God (Seventh Day) and in 1933 he formed a congregation known as the Radio Church of God (later changed to Worldwide Church of God in 1968). After seven years his credentials as a minister of the Church of God (Seventh Day) was withdrawn in 1938 although he still co-operated with them until 1945 and Radio Church of God members visited with the mother church until the early 1950s. After that time, unfortunately, virtually all communication between the two groups ceased. Why mother and children churches cannot speak to each other is beyond this writer's comprehension – hopefully communication will recommence some day.

Further clues to our close relationship may be found in commonalities in our literature: The WCG's booklet The True History of the True Church was drawn, in part, from Adventist publications such as The Church in the Wilderness and Facts of Faith. Proof of the Bible was based on the SDA's Prophecy Speaks: Dissolving Doubts. Even the booklet Seven Laws of Healthful Living seems to have a basis in the SDA's eight health principles.

Beside the Sabbath and it being a sign for Christians, other similarities include the belief in seven church eras, the identification of the Roman Catholic Church with the Mystery Babylonian religion, the historic Beast power has been the Roman Empire and its successor Holy Roman Empire, water baptism, concept of the end-time remnant church, places of protection for God's people during the Great Tribulation and so forth.

This indicates that the Churches of God are not intellectually separate from the SDA Church and owes it a debt for certain concepts.

In 1934 Mr Armstrong commenced publication of the Plain Truth magazine and commenced the World Tomorrow radio program which grew to become the largest radio program on earth by the late 1960s and when it was cancelled in the early 1990s, it was, by that time, the longest serving program in history. During the 1960s, there was a small flow of Adventists into the Worldwide Church of God's (WCG) ranks. A flow in back toward the Adventists has also been occurring, particularly since the WCG theologically eschewed the seventh day sabbath.

By the time of his death, the WCG had around 150,000 attendees; the Plain Truth magazine had a circulation of over 8 million in 5 languages and in full-colour; the Good News magazine in several languages and in full-colour with over 1 million published each issue); a Correspondence Course with hundreds of thousands of students; a theological college; a world famous performing arts centre; scores of free quality booklets and hard cover books; a radio and TV program on hundreds of stations across the globe. All literature was totally free without any cost or obligation.

After the apostasy, the WCG's membership eventually plummeted to about 35,000; the radio and TV programs had been cancelled; the college closed; all books and booklets withdrawn; the Good News magazine and Correspondence Courses cancelled and the Plain Truth is being replaced by an ecumenical magazine with different titles in various countries (circulation may only be 250,000).

The Church leadership completely abandoned the Law of God and the doctrines one dearly held to.

Today we are aware of about 200 groups which have split from the WCG including 3 or 4 major groups. Most former WCG members have now forsaken the Sabbath or observe it privately at home. A few have joined the SDA Church.

The number of groups observing the Sabbath may be counted in the hundreds, numbering 9 million Adventists, approximately 2 million True Jesus Church members (mainly Chinese), hundreds of thousand of various Church of God members plus Messianic Christians and Messianic Jews and other groups.

Organisation and Cooperation

Established in 1945, the Bible Sabbath Association (BSA) is a non-sectarian association of Sabbathkeepers. The BSA is not a Church nor is seeking to become one. Nor does it propose ecumenicalism or mergers between groups.

The BSA is a network of Sabbathkeepers promoting the Sabbath in a positive way. We seek to encourage understanding, communication, and mutual respect among Sabbathkeepers; to promote the knowledge, acceptance, and observance of the seventh-day Sabbath among all Bible believers; and, to defend the freedom of believers in all nations to rest and worship on the seventh day of the week, and to seek to repeal all legislation that hinders Sabbath observance. The BSA publishes a variety of literature advocating the Sabbath: The Directory of Sabbath-Observing Groups, listing over 350 different Sabbath groups; The Sabbath Sentinel, a full colour bi-monthly magazine published since 1948 and a variety of books.

The Friends of the Sabbath was formed in 1995 after a major crack in the WCG with Church of God members and ministers wishing to keep in touch with fellow Churches of God and to build bridges with other sabbatarians. For instance, many are unaware that ministers of different groups were brought together over dinner and in other ways by BSA/FOS outside of organised conferences.

In Australia 1996 the first Friends of the Sabbath (FOS) conference (the first ever Sabbatarian conference in Australia) followed by three held in 1997 were catalysts in breaking down barriers. In those three conferences plus a seminar held in 1998 in Sydney, various groups and non-aligned persons were represented.

In 1998 Dr Rick Sherrod toured the various towns and cities giving presentations (Sydney, Canberra, Coffs Harbour, Brisbane, Toowoomba) and in 1999 Melvin Rhodes and David Lewis, PhD (Sydney, Melbourne, Brisbane, Auckland) presented extensive lost tribes and prophecy conferences with hundreds in attendance. This was under the auspices of History Research Projects which has been in operation since the mid 1980s. This neutral environment attracted members from at least seven sabbatarian groups, assisted in them keeping in contact and coming together in joint activities.

List of groups in Australia (needs to be updated)

Our aim is not to be exclusivist and as such, we intend to provide a service to all sabbatarians. Neither is the committee interested in becoming a church or to encourage mergers. Following is a list of known sabbatarian churches, fellowships and groups in Australia beside non-aligned 'no name' and living room Sabbatarian groups whom we would service:

Apostolic Church of God	Church of God, Williamstown
Beth Messiah Fellowship	Philadelphia Church of God
Christian Biblical Church of God	Remnant Church of God
Christian Churches of God	Seventh-day Adventist Church
Church of God, International	Seventh-day Adventist Reform Movement
Church of God, acf	Seventh-day Baptist Church
International Christian Embassy	Philadelphia Church of the Very Elect
Hope International	Southern Highlands Church of God
Independent Church of God	The Church of God
People's New Covenant Fellowship	The House of God
LLT Productions	The Sabbath Movement
Melbourne Church of God	Three Angels Message

Messianic Jewish Alliance	True Jesus Church
Messianic Jewish Ministries	United Church of God, aia
