

ESSAY:

RULING CLASSES IN CONFLICT; CONSPIRACY THEORIES DISPROVEN

For decades, many Church of God members knew that the English were primarily descended from Ephraim and the Scots in the main were Judah. It was also understood that the British Royal families descend from various branches of Judah.

What is going to happen between the Scots and English – will the United Kingdom become divided? Prophecy gives us some clues; and the manoeuvrings of royalty and ruling classes gives us some pointers to watch.

Where does the future king of Scotland fit into this? He claims that he and the Scots in general are descended from Judah!

But are conspiracies at work? Today, conspiracy heresies are creeping into the Churches of God, unchecked by the elders who should be denouncing such and helping members to cease from unproven nonsense.

Over the past twenty or so years, a plethora of historical, archaeological and theological books have been produced, attempting to discuss the origin of Christianity and what it really taught in the first century. We may categorise these works as follows:

- An admission that original Christianity observed the Sabbath and 'Old' Testament laws etc
- Christ was God and a teacher of the Law
- Christ as a mere human who had descendants, a view long held by some European Royals
- Some works contain hints at or belief in some sort of Anglo-Israelism
- Neo-Gnostic ideas twisting the Word of God but containing surprising germs of truth (the usual truth and error mixed together scenario)

With the Masonic and conservative Protestant ruling classes fast in retreat in the Anglo-Saxon-Keltic world, more and more authors are exposing various societies or to throw some light on the early Church, Israelitish links to Britain and so on (even though mixed with error, nevertheless, at least they are on to something).

The Forgotten Monarchy of Scotland – claims to be descendants of Judah!

Few know that the Allies established a body called the European Council of Princes after World War Two to try and bring about reconciliation between the various rival Royal families of Europe, which they regarded as the cause of most of the intra-European wars.

Today, His Royal Highness Prince Michael of Albany, is the President of the Council which now functions as a constitutional advisory body within the European Union. He is the claimant to the Scottish throne upon future independence of Scotland.

This year Prince Michael published his long-awaited book The Forgotten Monarchy of Scotland wherein he claims the Judahite roots of both the Scottish peoples and his royal house. Whilst he claims direct descent from Judah (as do a few others in Europe) and whilst believing in a form of British-Israelism, diverges from it here and there. Here are some fascinating extracts:

“The legacy of the Scots kings was hewn on the Stone of Destiny, the venerated relic of the Beth-el Covenant (Genesis 28:18-22)”. (page 13) (on page 55 he claims that the true Stone is remains in Scotland, rekindling royal rivalries)

“Early Celtic Christianity was the closest of all religious teachings to the original doctrines of Jesus ... the Mosaic structure of the Old Testament was duly incorporated. Judaic marriage laws were observed, together with the celebrations of the Sabbath and Passover, while Easter was correctly held as the traditional feast-day of the Spring goddess ... Contrary to traditional belief, Emperor Constantine the Great (AD 274-337) did not embrace Christianity as the religion of Rome; he adapted Christianity into a new form which was implemented as the religion of Rome”. (pages 30-31)

One might comment that to this day, conservative Scottish Presbyterians have certain structures and Old Testament leanings which may be reminiscent of their ancient Celtic roots. Many of them have published excellent works on ethics as relating to the Bible and were the foundations of the conservative theologians and reconstructionist movement, advocating a return, of sorts, to Bible Law. Notice

“Prior to becoming High Stewards of Scotland, the Stewarts' maternal forebears were Seneschals in Brittany, and they were of the same ancestral stock as the earlier Merovingian Kings of the Franks, in descent from the ancient Royal House of Judah ... Throughout Europe and America, the scattered Jacobite exiles identified greatly with the Jews – each longing for a national home to call their own". (pages 198-199)

You can read more in his book about the Jacobites, Masons and the various factions which have vied for political influence. Throughout the Anglo-Saxon-Keltic world (particularly those from a Keltic origin), the Masons have been influential in keeping extremists, Catholics, Nazis and Communists at bay. Most Masons are conservative and philanthropological protestants with same strange traditions, which they don't even understand, in the main.

Throughout his book there are jibes at the House of Hanover – highly reminiscent of the continuing conflicts and jealousies between the royal families. The antagonism is so deep, that HRH Michael is pushing for a completely independent Scotland. He knows that upon the independence of Scotland, he would become its King, by default. Currently, when a claimant or rival to the British throne finds himself next in line (due to the death of the previous claimant), he writes to the British Home Office, renouncing the claim. This current British royalty is then advised of this action.

Whilst a fascinating and absorbing in his forthrightness and historical claims, HRH Michael makes some mistakes in various claims about Egypt and the Picts. Nevertheless, at least he is one who is coming out of his closet. Soon, we will be able to piece together the various rival factions amongst the European Royal houses, and it will be apparent that only the might of Great Britain the USA has held them off from tearing each other apart this century, and indeed, have actually encouraged them to cooperate. I anticipate the factions to be aligned something like this:

- Roman Catholics
- Claims to be descendants of Jesus
- Claims to be descendants of Judah (and hence the Davidic line)
- Protestants including anti-Catholic Masons*
- Humanists/modernists

... and any number of mixes inbetween.

The Masons themselves, are divided into all sorts of rival political groups and it would be a big mistake to assume that they are all in one camp just because the word 'lodge' is used by them. They have various factions, traditions and genesis.

Unbeknown to HRH Prince Michael, God chose and used another branch of the line of David to lead Great Britain. God macro-managed or engineered this to come about, whilst allowing man to micro-manage events within His framework and timetable. That is why God's British peoples and royal houses, whilst light years ahead of others, still have their human nature, intrigue, weird religious ideas and politics.

It may be that now God will allow rivalries to re-emerge, and for religious beliefs to come to the surface again, mixing this and that with 'christianity' whilst opposing other Great Churches and new age beliefs.

Factions Galore

In looking at any nation, one is struck by the endless number of political parties each with their own factions. Or at the array of protestant churches splitting and re-splitting over minor issues, something which is not unique to the Churches of God by any means.

Look, the founding fathers of the USA were predominantly deists – there is a good reason for this. God wanted men who sought the separation of Church and State to devise the Constitution of the USA. Their influence can still be seen on US currency notes, the design of Washington and so on (just as Canberra, the capital of Australia, has Masonic design in its layout).

What does this tell us? Is this some sort of evil, illuminati, devil worshipping conspiracy? Nope. Most Masons are protestants with some funny beliefs, particularly when it comes to the book of Genesis – but what are we to expect from the uncalled? Should we then condemn them, when the ruling class of the West, now in serious decline in numbers and influence, has some neo-pagan ideas. For pity's sakes, wake up! Our ruling classes have NEVER been truly Christian and certainly not sabbatarian, but semi-pagan, like the rest of society. They Masonic protestants have had some Biblical background yet it is they, who believe in some sort of interpretation of scripture, capitalism, democracy and family values. How like the rulers of ancient Israel.

God works in mysterious ways – and we have enjoyed the benefits of comparatively good ruling class. For those that moan and groan about our ruling classes, particularly the old ruling class, why not move to a gentile country of your liking and see how you like it?

The Jewish financiers, Masons and Protestants were the ruling classes of the Anglo-Saxon powers for hundreds of years and were the very ones that were prominent for our greatness - but their numbers are sinking fast and influence waning. For instance, the Rothschild's, so steadfast for the British Empire, lost half their wealth and power from 1800 to 1900. Today, they have been eclipsed by other financial institutions. The British Barings Bank (oldest bank in the world) collapsed and was taken over by the IDG Dutch concern. Mergers, takeovers, changes in legislation, nationalisations etc has seen the changing of the guard. The old nationalistic classes are fast in retreat – the new, liberal class fresh out of universities have replaced them with their own faces and set of 'values' – drugs, race-mixing, destruction of family values, abortion, feminism, surrogacy, homosexuality and so on (known as the 'new class' in political texts).

Today, Wall Street is divided into three groups; and we still have the Yankee – Cowboy wars within the industrialists in the USA.

New Age ideas are making some headway in the Anglo-Saxon nations, leading to much chagrin within the RCC as well as the old ruling classes of the West. But is there a consolidated New Age conspiracy? How can there be? And if there is one consolidated conspiracy, then why does the media constantly condemn Reagan, Thatcher, Eisenhower, Coolidge, Nixon, the British Royalty and now George Bush, jnr?

You see, there are so many differing New Age religions, with contentious doctrines, splits and origins, that it is ludicrous to assign the animists, Buddhists (with its many groupings), Hindus, Taoists, traditional American Indian religions etc, etc. They are so diverse and different that they cannot and will not unite. They may have the odd meeting, but they end up with greater suspicion and religious differences than ever. Just walk into any new age bookshop and see the hundreds of differing ideas. It is a pity that RCC and evangelical conspiracy theories have crept into the Churches of God. In addition, anti-Semitic conspiracy theories have Nazi sources – why has this happened?

And why should anti-British (and in particular disrespectful anti-Royalty) theories emanating from a variety of sources and in particular American right-wing libertarians raving on like the lunatic fringe it is, accusing the British Royals of devil worship and every other unproved lies one could imagine. We all know that there will be an evil prince of Israel, but if I looked at JFK, Carter and Clinton, I would not be throwing stones.

Now, why haven't the Church of God elders done something about this nonsense by countering it? Why do they not recognise these conspiracy theories as heresies leading the membership astray? Look, these weird ideas are contrary to scripture and are primarily negative (see Phil 4:8). Further, conspiracy buffs tend to dwell on such matters and over time start seeing conspiracies everywhere, leading to strange, fanatical behaviour and conversations. As time progresses, with such weird ideas and behaviour, they develop mental and chemical imbalances with resultant mental disorders – some minor and some severe, offending others and driving people away. Often this weirdness becomes written into their faces as their countenance changes over time. This is not a fruit of the Spirit. As time progresses, they assume even worse ideas and become fanatical and strange to be around – even obnoxious. The cure?:

1. prayer and fasting
2. be around positive people
3. dwell on positive and true things, not unproven and impossible ideas
4. 'get a life', don't just sit around contemplating nonsense. Mix more socially.

The Lord's Throne

God roars that the Throne of Israel (now resident in Britain) is 'the Lord's throne' (see IChron 29:23; IIChron 9:8). Therefore those constantly knocking it are setting themselves up for a great fall (note the principle of Gen 12:3)

Hollywood has movies on "The Skulls", or portraying the British as evil and the CIA and FBI as madmen trying to destroy us. Or film after film such as The Siege, portray White men and the US military as bad and are, to be quite frank, anti-Caucasian and racist. The opposite it is true: The Skulls & Bones is a boys club at universities and whilst like any club has its promises, ambitions and mistakes. It also has its factions and fall-outs like any other. Similarly, the CIA and FBI have made mistakes like all security agencies and they have their rogues like other organisations.

But they have played pivotal roles in keeping us free from the dominance of the RCC, Nazism, Communist tyranny, Islamic extremists etc, whilst allowing the political processes to continue in our lands. The British Empire and American economic world order were not built without the involvement of the military (including some mistakes), secret services or financiers. God works through physical human beings. Indeed, He did not use sabbatarians to build these empires, but He macro-managed their ascendancy, leaving non-true Christians to micro-manage these empires. Many of these were really 'good' men, trying to do the right thing. Yet they were still semi-pagan to God. How He works in mysterious ways, subtly, behind-the-scenes. One would never guess that God is doing this or that, unless someone pointed it out.

Let us return to the British throne, descended from David. It too has its factions (just read historical works to see that. In fact, a read of Prince Michael of Albany's book would convince anyone of that). Problems in the US constitutional system and its president, or in the British royal house, does not mean we should overthrow them. The royal family is just that: a family of royal descent, but with the same problems as any other family, yet doing a better job than anyone else who would like to volunteer for their positions.

It is true that Prince Charles has certain vague interests in Buddhism etc, but to exaggerate in an attempt to vilify the Royal household and come to all sorts of weird and liable conclusions is unwarranted. Have we so quickly forgotten a severe warning from God's Word:

"For the time will come when they will not endure sound doctrine; but after their own lusts shall they heap to themselves teachers, having itching ears;
And they shall turn their ears from the truth, and shall be turned unto fables" (II Tim 4:2-3).

The outcome of these conspiracy and in particular anti-British theories, is major problems with doctrine. No longer do they see that the historical enemies of Israel has been the Holy Roman Empire and its resurrections (see my paper on Pax Germanica – the Holy Roman Empire rises again which is available for free download at <http://home.iprimus.com.au/origin> or for a donation of $5.00 from GPO Box 864, Sydney, Australia 2001). They now think the UNO is the Beast and the USA is implicated; that the hundreds of competing and incredibly differing new age religions are the Babylonian Mystery Religion (when in reality they bear little resemblance to it) and that New York or the USA are Babylon the Great.

The ultimate and dangerous outcome?: the disappearance of the last remnants of God's people.

Indeed, the American Empire is being accused of what the British Empire was accused of by German nationalists and the RCC. Today, prophetic heresies of the evangelicals is infiltrating the Churches of God. As such, the members of the Church are being led into major error and are looking in the wrong place for the Beast and False Prophet – they look in the same place as the RCC and evangelicals and as a result see them as allies against the forces of evil.

Truth and error mixed together

Another work which mixes truth and error is The Marian Conspiracy. What is interesting is that this author shows that Mary ended up in Britain in accordance with old British-Israelite teaching. On the rear cover it states that during the author's search, "he uncovered the life, death and burial of the Virgin Mary which had been suppressed by the established Church for centuries".

Alas, like other books which expose the RCC such as the Messianic Legacy etc, it aligns itself with the idea that James taught the Law and this school of thought became the Nazarene Christians while Paul supposedly taught another variant of Christianity which eventually grew into the RCC. This, as we know, is not true for both Apostles followed the Law. But what is interesting is that more and more researchers are now accepting that Christ followed the Law and taught His disciples this. These researchers also accept that the Nazarenes were the original Church (but they add that Paul supposedly interpreted the teachings of Christ differently). The entire book is worth a read despite the short fallings:

"...Herod ordered the massacre of all the babies in Bethlehem to prevent the heir's escape. Mary and Joseph, however, managed to flee to the safety of Egypt where they were offered sanctuary by Antipater's friend, Antiphilus, a provincial official. When Herod died, shortly after, Mary and the baby returned to Israel but, as it was unsafe for them in Jerusalem or Capernaum, where Mary was known, they settled in the town of Nazareth. Here, Joseph married Mary, raised a family and made a prosperous living as a carpenter.

DRAFT

... On the cross, he gave his widowed mother into the care of Joseph, his eldest brother. Fearing for their lives, Mary and her second son fled the Roman empire and boarded a trading vessel bound for the copper mines of Britain. After arriving on the island of Anglesey, they lived amongst the Druids and converted them to their unique form of Judaism.

Half a century later, Paul's brand of Christianity had established itself in Ephesus where Mary, as Christ's mother, was venerated as the new Artemis. By the time Constantine created the unified Catholic Church in AD 325, Ephesian Christianity had spread throughout the empire and Mary was widely venerated as the Queen of Heaven." (pp305-06).

There are many such books available today, touching upon these ancient truths, yet also laced with enough error to either entrap or cause one to reject the positive aspects of these works. That is why we must be sifters of the truth, using the Word of God, His Law and the true doctrines as our foundations, guidelines and framework when studying books or even reading the news.

Too many members believe any silly nonsense pushed by a conspiracy theorist preying on the weak, the unthinking or those who have not been in society to the degree to understand that:

1. manoeuvrings of groups of men has gone on for thousands of years;
2. humans are factious and they normally do not stay aligned forever;
3. philosophies and ideologies change with the season. The Round Table group in the 1930s was not the same in composition or outlook of what it stood for just 10 years earlier. The Labour Party in the UK is not what it stood for 20 years ago. And if this current Pope has his way, the Jesuits will be cleansed of liberals and globalists;
4. they make labialise and unsubstantiated statements about groups and individuals based on their feelings or a silly book they might read (I well remember the books and newsletters espousing that certain billionaires in the USA wanted to subsume the USA into a Russian-controlled communist state etc).

Manoeuvrings of men come and go – your local library will have books on such goings-ons in Middle Age Europe as kings, princes, popes, secret societies, ideologies, factions, Masons, Catholics etc, etc fought continuously for control of nations and empires – there is no new thing under the sun. It continues to this day, but more subtly given the dominance of the Anglo-Saxon Powers.

Indeed, those who have now woken up to the fact that we have ruling classes, immediately overreact and leap into bed with the most bizarre and sick conspiracy theories imaginable. The House of Israel has its rival ruling groups, forever in contention. The Masons, for instance, were so influential, that the Soviet communists attempted to infiltrate them in Britain for a long time.

Britain is a land replete with ancient mysteries and a rich history which fascinates millions. One such mystery is the conflict between the Kelts and Saxons and their ruling classes. One day they will live in peace, the tribes of Judah will rule splendidly and Ephraim and Judah will accept their rightful place in God's system of governance free of paganism and ruling class rivalries.

"The envy also of Ephraim shall depart, and the adversaries of Judah shall be cut off:
Ephraim shall not envy Judah, and Judah shall not vex Ephraim" (Is 11:13).

Disclaimer: this author does not advocate membership of the Masons and does not approve of their beliefs. He merely is pointing out that they are a major reason for our freedoms for several hundred years.

* As one example, in Australia anti-Catholic and anti-Communist Masons have dominated one major rural party and influenced anti-Fabian policies for decades. Publically, Jesuits and others have been pursuing land rights to attempt to undermine the power of this faction. The power of this rural group has been fading for years along with the Masons and fellow conservative Protestants as well as Jews (combined, they represent the old ruling class of the Anglo-Saxon powers). Today, the RCC battles new agers, modernists and globalists for power over the West – a new ruling class has been born, those that led us for 200 years are being swept away.
