

JAMES

The Search for the

TWELVE APOSTLES

William S. McBirnie Ph.D.

THE SON OF ALPHA SUCCESS

The Search for the TWELVE APOSTLES

CHAPTER XI: JAMES The Son of Alphaeus

William Steuart McBirnie Ph.D.

COVER: JAMES THE LESS (ANON)

Typesetting and Layout by Free-to-Share Publications

TABLE OF CONTENTS

BOOK INTRODUCTION

CHAPTER I: THE WORLD OF THE APOSTLES

CHAPTER II: WHEN DID THE APOSTLES LEAVE JERUSALEM?

CHAPTER III: SIMON PETER - PART ONE

SIMON PETER - PART TWO

CHAPTER IV: ANDREW

CHAPTER V: JAMES, THE SON OF ZEBEDEE

CHAPTER VI: JOHN

CHAPTER VII: PHILIP

CHAPTER VIII: BARTHOLOMEW

CHAPTER IX: THOMAS

CHAPTER X: MATTHEW

CHAPTER XI: JAMES THE SON OF ALPHEUS

CHAPTER XII: JUDE THADDAEUS

CHAPTER XIII: SIMON THE ZEALOT

SIMON THE ZEALOT - PART TWO

CHAPTER XIV: JUDAS ISCARIOT

CHAPTER XV: MATTHIAS

THE APOSTLES WHO WERE NOT OF THE TWELVE:

JOHN MARK

BARNABAS - JOHN THE BAPTIST - LUKE

LAZARUS

PAUL

Preface and Introduction

The High Adventure of Some Kinds of Research

(A Preface)

In seeking the information contained in this book, my search for the stories of the Twelve Apostles took me to many famous libraries such as those in Jerusalem, Rome, and that of the British Museum in London. For years I have borrowed or purchased every book I could find on the subject of the Twelve Apostles. A five-foot shelf cannot hold them all.

Three times I have journeyed to the island of Patmos and to the locations of the Seven Churches of the Book of the Revelation. One whole (and fruitless) day was given to a backroads journey into the high, snowy mountains of Lebanon, up among the famous Cedars and elsewhere, to check out a rumor that St. Jude had originally been buried in some small Lebanese village nearby. He was not.

I have personally viewed the many sepulchres which reputedly contain the bones of the Twelve; not that I consider them as having spiritual value, but because I wanted to learn, as an historian, how they came to be where they are, hoping that local tradition could be found in the places where the bones are interred that had escaped the history books. This search took me from Trier, Germany, to Rome, Greece, and to almost every Middle Eastern country.

The Vatican very graciously granted me special permission to photograph in all the churches in Rome and elsewhere in Italy. Some of the bodies or fragments of the bodies of the Apostles are preserved in that historic land.

Particularly memorable was the awesome descent far beneath St. Peter's Basilica to photograph the bones of the Apostle Peter where they rest in an ancient Roman pagan cemetery. One simply cannot imagine, without seeing it, so vast and heavy a church building as St. Peter's sitting squarely over a cemetery filled with beautifully preserved family tombs dating back to the first century before Christ!

Seven times I went to Petra in Jordan, and three times to Antioch in Turkey. I also visited Babylon and made four journeys to Iran in search of the history of the Apostles' missions there. Of course, there were some disappointments. For example, the body of St. John is today nowhere to be found. I entered his tomb in Ephesus long ago. Recently after many centuries of neglect, the authorities have sealed it and covered it with a marble floor. Though St. John's body has disappeared some parts of the bones of all the other Apostles are believed to exist, and I have seen them.

Travelers to the "Bible Lands" so often pass within a few yards of genuine relics of the Apostles and never know it. I had made twenty-six journeys to Jerusalem before learning that the head of St. James the Elder, several arm bones of James the just, and part of the skull of John the Baptist are held in veneration in two churches there! And, I might add, with some strong historical records as to their authenticity.

This is not, however, a book about bones! It is about living people who were described by St. Paul as the Founders of the churches (See Ephesians 2:19, 20). We are interested in Apostolic bones because they are possible clues as to the whereabouts of the ministry and places of martyrdom of the Twelve.

Now let me face head-on a typically Protestant attitude of skepticism concerning Apostolic remains in churches and shrines. I used to suppose that these so called "relics" were pious frauds, the result of the fervid and superstitious piety of the Middle Ages. Perhaps some are, but after one approaches the whole question with a skeptical mind, and then, somewhat reluctantly, is forced to admit the strong possibility of their genuineness, it is an unnerving but moving experience.

I suppose the practice of venerating Apostolic bones is repugnant to one who, as an evangelical Christian, sees no heavenly merit in praying before the sarcophagi in which they rest. Besides, it does no good to a literal mind to see the gaudy and tasteless trappings with which the shrines are usually festooned.

But the more one reads of the history of the Apostles, and what became of their relics, and the more steeped one becomes in the history and strange (to us) behavior of our Christian ancestors in the Ante-Nicene and Post-Nicene eras, the more the careful preservation of Apostolic relics seems to be perfectly in character. To many of those who lived in those times who could not read, an Apostolic relic was a visual encouragement to faith!

Let it be clearly understood, this book is an adventure in scholarship, not dogmatism. I am keenly aware that absolute proof of every detail recorded here is not possible. But when a researcher checks many sources against each other, when he visits the places mentioned for himself, and when he finds many new documents which are not in books, or not commonly found, then he develops a "feel" for the probable or possible.

This book has been an ever growing labor of love. I became more emotionally committed to the task as the years progressed. On several occasions during the laborious research, arduous journeys, and interminable writing and rewriting, I have had occasion to compare notes with scholars who have written about some of the Apostles, and have found not only a gracious willingness to discuss my conclusions but to accept some of them instead of those they had hitherto held.

How does one express an adequate word of appreciation to the many who were so kind in their cooperation, without whom this study could not have been completed? My secretary, Mrs. Fred Pitzer, made this project her own and has saved it from worse faults than those it still may have. My students at the California Graduate School of Theology in Glendale have assisted, and quotations from their research appear often. The same is true of Mr. and Mrs. Robert Schonborn, and of Dr. Miriam Lamb, who is head of research for our Center for American Studies. Mrs. Florence Stonebraker, Betty Davids and Richard Chase assisted, with Italian translations by Mrs. Marie Placido.

In Jerusalem the libraries of the American School of Oriental Research, the Coptic Church, the Patriarchate of the Armenians (Church of St. James), the Ecole Biblique of the Dominicans, were most helpful in opening their archives for research. In Rome the full cooperation of Monsignor Falani opened many otherwise closed doors. How kind they all were, and many others as well!

Naturally, any errors are not theirs, but mine. Hopefully, if there are any egregious mistakes, some kind correspondent will write to me so that any future editions may be corrected. A final word about the style of this book: At first I thought to write it for scholars, tearing apart the documentation of every source quoted. But that makes for so dull a book that I was afraid few would read it. I found to my dismay that most "critical" scholars could hardly care less about the post-Biblical story of the Apostles.

Then, I thought to write it as a narrative with few quotations and little attention to my sources. But in that case scholars would ignore the book as having no proper foundation and being without concern for critical and historical problems. As the Senior Minister of a busy church, I considered writing for pastors. These ministers might appreciate a homiletical boost for a series of sermons on the Apostles that might attract the people we are all trying to persuade to attend the church. I have not abandoned this approach altogether, but I did not do much sermonizing in this book.

It even occurred to me that the historical novel might also provide a viable format. But I tend to think as a historian and as a preacher, I lack the imagination to write a novel. Besides, what this book has to offer is analysis, fact and hopefully, truth.

So the book is in the form of an interpretation or critical analysis of every bit of knowledge I can find on the subject of the Twelve Apostles. Mostly I wrote it to become more familiar myself with the Apostles and to share that knowledge, and some conclusions drawn from it, with as many people as I can; scholars, church members, young people, historians, ministers, and all those who feel as I do, that we need to find ways to make the Apostolic age become more alive for us today.

I earnestly hope the reader will find it as interesting and enlightening to read as I found it to write.

William STEUART McBirnie

Introduction

What follows in this book is that which can be known from an exhaustive and critical study of the Biblical, historical and traditional records of the Apostles. The author has tried to reduce the legendary to the probable or likely, justifying it with the known historical facts concerning the state of the world in the first century and the documents of subsequent church history, local history, and relevant secular writings.

There is a great deal more information about the Apostles available than the casual student might guess. Ten years ago this writer produced a monograph called What Became of the Twelve Apostles? Ten thousand copies were distributed. In that publication I made the following observations:

"Someday a critical scholar needs to take a good look at the mass of legend which has come to us from early medieval times, and even from the last days of Roman power. He needs to try to separate the historical germ from the great over-growth of pure fantasy which one finds in those stories. In a word, a higher criticism of medieval legends needs to be made, and that criticism needs to be carried over into early church history. "I find myself disappointed in the writings of recent church historians who seem to pass over the era of the early church and say only what has been said in a hundred other books on church history written during the past four centuries. It has been so long since I have seen a new fact in a book of church history about the Apostolic Age and the Age of the Church Fathers, that I would be mightily surprised if I saw one! But perhaps someday someone will find the probable basis of truth amidst the legendary; and upon this, with perhaps the discovery of new manuscripts, we shall be able to piece together a better history than we now possess."

Since no one else seems to have done the work of producing a critical study of the Twelve, it has become a challenge to me to do so, for the sake of a renewed interest in the Apostolic church to which I hope this study can contribute.

The source of our material in that earlier publication was mostly that obtainable by anyone who would take the trouble to look into the standard books on the subject, such as church histories, sermonic literature, encyclopedias, etc., plus the observations of a few journeys to Rome, Athens and the Holy Land.

But that book was frustratingly limited and incomplete, not to mention its obvious lack of original research. Recently, the writer completed his twenty-seventh journey to the Middle East. Ten years of further study and research have revealed much light on the lives of the Twelve Apostles. Most of these insights have come in very small packages, a bit here, a bit there. Ten years ago I had not even considered writing a subsequent book to the former monograph, but the importance and volume of the material since gleaned from the many personal visits to the places of the ministries and deaths of the Apostles, plus their burial sites or tombs, has increased the conviction that this enlarged study must be offered.

Here for the first time in any one volume the preponderance of information concerning the histories of the Apostles is now assembled.

No scholar would dare suggest that anything he has written is the last word on any subject, nor indeed that his writings are the complete story. Yet these ideals have been the goals toward which we have moved.

INSIGHTS INTO THE APOSTOLIC AGE

There are several insights which the reader should have firmly and constantly in mind as the following chapters unfold. The early Christians did not write history as such.

(1) Interest in the Apostles has waxed and waned in various periods of Christian history. For that reason at certain times more information has been available than at others. New discoveries of historical information are made, then lie dormant in out of print books until a reawakening of interest at a later time brings them to light.

At first, in the Apostolic Age, the Apostles themselves and their converts were too busy making history to bother writing it. Hence, their records are fragmentary. Further, until the Ante-Nicene Fathers, history as such was not written at all. Even The Acts by St. Luke was not a general history but a polemic written to show the emergence of a Gentile Christian movement from its Jewish matrix, with divine authority and approval. Surely St. Luke wanted to defend and validate the ministry of St. Paul, his mentor. His themes, the Acts of the Holy Spirit, the inclusion in God's redemption of the Gentiles, the gradually diminishing role of Jews in the churches, the universality of Christianity, were all the concerns of Luke. It probably did not occur to him that he was writing the prime source of church history. Hence, to a historian of the early church, Luke is both the welcome source of his main knowledge and of his despair at its fragmentary nature.

There were periods of silence in early Christian history.

(2) After Luke and the other Biblical writers (such as St. Paul who left us a considerable knowledge of early Apostolic activities) there is for a time, silence. It is as if the Christian movement were in a tunnel, active, but out of sight for a period.

This is not as strange as it may seem. First, the early Christians did not really have a sense of building a movement for the ages. To them the Return of Christ might well be expected during their generation. They certainly spoke of it often, so they must have looked for the Return of Christ daily - at first.

To see this, study carefully the difference in tone between First and Second Thessalonians. In his First Epistle to the Thessalonians, Paul seemed to dwell at great length upon the imminence of the Second Coming. In the Second Epistle he rebukes those who are over-eager by reminding big readers of certain events which must precede or accompany the Second Coming.

It was as if he had looked again at the enormous task of world evangelism and had seen that it would take more than one generation. It was not that St. Paul lost his faith in the Second Coming, but that he balanced his faith with practicality. In any case, the early Christian movement was in a tunnel and out of sight as far as the recording of history is concerned. They were doing not writing.

The Apostles were not considered prime subjects for biography by the early Christians.

(3) The Twelve Apostles were important in the thinking of the early Christians, but were not considered to be more than leaders, brothers and dearly beloved friends at first. We look upon them as the founders of churches. It took some time for their spiritual descendents to see them as the Fathers of the whole church movement. Their authority at first was in the anointing of the Holy Spirit, not in ex cathedra pronouncements on doctrine.

True, the first council of Apostles in Jerusalem gave authoritarian pronouncements concerning the admittance of the Gentile converts into the Christian movement. Yet this did not seem to have the ecclesiastical authority then that we attach to it now. We could, in fact, wish there had been more such pronouncements; say, concerning heresy, forms of church government, social matters, etc. But there was nothing much that came collectively from the Apostles. They simply proclaimed individually what they had heard from Jesus Christ.

As they went forth into various parts of the world they carried, no doubt, the authority of their Apostolate, but they were not the church. They founded congregations which were churches. Ecclesiasticism in the highly organized and authoritarian forms it later took was almost unknown to them. The Apostles were evangelists and pastors, not ecclesiastics. Their histories, then, are the histories of evangelists, not of prelates. History does not deal as much with evangelists as with rulers. Hence, we have little knowledge about their careers before or subsequent to the dispersion of the Jerusalem Church in A.D.69, and by this time most of them had left Jerusalem to go on their various missions and many had died.

Secular history largely ignored Christianity in the early centuries.

(4) Almost all history in the first few centuries of the Christian era which has survived is secular, military or political. Josephus did not pay much attention to Christianity though he mentions the death of St. James. Roman history, except for the writings of Pliny the Younger, hardly notices Christianity until long after the Apostolic Age. It remains for churchmen such as Hegesippus and Eusebius to give us further details of the travels and history of the Twelve.

The early Christians were humble folk, with some exceptions. Who writes a history of the meek? Therefore we are left with little information about Christianity in general secular history, except for valuable insights as to the world in which the Apostles lived. The average reader, however, would be amazed at how very much knowledge we do have on that portion of the human story. Roman history is already well known and more knowledge is daily pouring in from the archeologists who dig into the artifacts of that great epic.

To the avid student of Roman affairs the world of the Apostles is as familiar as the world of a hundred years ago. This does not itself tell us about the actual story of each Apostle but it certainly tells us what was possible or even likely, as well as what was unlikely or impossible.

The Roman world was, during the Apostolic Age, a relatively safe world in which its citizens traveled widely and often. Read in the book of Romans, written by Paul in Corinth, the many names of people whom he knew in Rome, a city which at that time he had not visited. Read the travels of Cicero, sixty years before Christ. Recall the Roman invasions of Britain by Caesar, five decades before the birth of Jesus, and of Claudius in A.D.42.

The Roman Empire was a family of nations with a common language under the protection of one government, with roads leading everywhere, from Britain to Africa, from what is now Russia to France, from India to Spain. St.Paul himself, in the book of Romans, expressed a desire to evangelize Spain which had been conquered by Rome long before Caesar took it over in 44 B.C.

In the era of the Apostles there was a wide area of civilization awaiting them, civilized, united, and tied together by transportation and tongue. On that vast stage, and beyond it, we can easily visualize the farflung Apostolic labors. But Roman historians pretty well ignored Christianity in its early days. The "Search for the Twelve" was at first political or ecclesiastical.

(5) Long after the Apostolic Age there arose a conflict between the Greek and Roman divisions of Christianity as to what they called "Primacy". The Pope claimed it and so did the leader of the Eastern churches. An issue, for example, was one of Christian art. One group, the Romans, used images in the round as the objects of religious veneration. The Eastern Greeks preferred ikons; images-on-the-flat. There were other differences, including the removal of the capital of the Roman Empire from Rome to Byzantium, but mainly it was a political power struggle which led to the great schism that divided eastern and western Christianity, as the Roman Empire itself was divided.

At this time, and even before, as the schism was building, both sides sought Apostolic identification with their own religious institutions.

So a great search was made for the relics of the Apostles. Emperor Constantine wanted to construct what he called, "The Church of the Twelve Apostles" in Constantinople. In this structure he intended to house the remains (such as bones or parts of bodies) of the Apostles. He succeeded in securing the remains of St.Andrew, and also St.Luke and St.Timothy. (The latter two, while not of the Twelve, were close to them.) Apparently Constantine felt he must leave the bones of St.Paul and St.Peter in Rome though he may have had designs on the bones of St.Peter."

He gladly built a basilica to honor the bones of St.Paul in Rome. But, one may speculate, the Roman church was also reluctant to part with the bones of St.Peter. Constantine apparently did not press the matter, but he built a church over St.Peter's resting place, hoping perhaps to later move his body to Constantinople. In any case, he did not live long enough to collect all the relics of the Apostles for his Church of the Twelve Apostles. That church building remained unfurnished except for his own tomb. (Some evidence exists that he sought to place the Apostles' bodies around him in twelve niches while his own body would be in the midst as "The 13th Apostle"!.) Eusebius tells the story in "The Last Days of Constantine."

(Constantine celebrated the thirtieth anniversary of his accession in the summer of 335. Probably the most significant ceremonies at Rome that year were those accompanying the solemn translation of the bones venerated as relics of the Apostles St Peter and St.Paul from the catacombs of St.Sebastian, where they had been venerated since 258, to the basilicas built to honour them at the traditional sites of their martyrdoms, at the Vatican and on the Ostian Way." (Constantine The Great, John Holland Smith, p 288; also cf. Liber Pontificalis, ed. Duchesne, vol. 1, pp.172ff.)

"All these edifices the emperor consecrated with the desire of perpetuating the memory of the Apostles of our Saviour before all men. He had, however, another object in erecting this building (i.e., the Church of the Apostles at Constantinople): an object at first unknown, but which afterwards became evident to all. He had, in fact, made a choice of this spot in the prospect of his own death, anticipating with extraordinary fervour of faith that his body would share their title with the Apostles themselves, and that he should thus even after death become the subject, with them, of the devotions which should be performed to their honour in this place, and for this reason he bade men assemble for worship there at the altar which he placed in the midst. He accordingly caused twelve coffins to be set up in this church, like sacred pillars in honour and memory of the apostolic band, in the centre of which his own was placed, having six of theirs on either side of it. Thus, as I said, he had provided with prudent foresight an honourable resting-place for his body after death, and, having long before secretly formed this resolution, he now consecrated this church to the Apostles, believing that this tribute to their memory would be of no small advantage to his own soul. Nor did God disappoint him of that which he so ardently expected and desired." (A New Eusebius, J. Stevenson, p. 395)

"Planning the Church of the Apostles, Constantine had dreamed of resting there forever in the midst of the Twelve, not merely one of them, but a symbol of, if not a substitute for, their Leader. During the months of the church's construction, his agents had been busy in Palestine collecting alleged relics of the apostles and their companions, to be laid up in the church with his body, awaiting the general resurrection." (Constantine the Great, John Holland Smith, pp. 301-302).

"At Easter in A.D.337 the emperor dedicated the Church of the Holy Apostles in Constantinople, but soon thereafter he was overcome by a fatal ailment. He visited the baths at Helenopolis in vain, and then proceeded to confess his sins in the Church of the Martyrs. At Ancyrona near Nicomedia, he prepared his will, leaving the empire to his three sons, and in the presence of a group of local bishops he was baptized by the bishop with whom he had fought so often, Eusebius of Nicomedia. To this prelate was entrusted the will, with instructions to deliver it to Constantius, Caesar of the east. Wearing the white robe of a neophyte, Constantine died on Pentecost, May 22.

"... Upon Constantius's arrival the coffin was carried to the Church of the Holy Apostles and placed among the sarcophagi dedicated to the Twelve. In the presence of a vast throng the bishops conducted an elaborate funeral with a requiem eucharist.

... His body rested, however, not in any Flavian mausoleum or with any of the great pagan emperors before him but, by his own choice, among the memorials of the twelve apostles." (Augustus to Constantine, Robert M. Grant, p.277).

The project was started but not completed. However, an official search was made for the locations of the bodies of the Apostles, and this official search was possibly the precipitating cause for the inventory which was made for the Apostolic remains or relics.

After this time there arose the practice of the veneration of relics. The superstitious awe which these relics evoked was carried to extremes. The bodies of the Apostles, the bodies of other "saints", and the various holy relics such as fragments of "the true cross" came into great demand. Healings were claimed by merely touching or kissing these relics and naturally they came to be considered of great value by both the churches and governments of the Middle Ages.

As for a knowledge of the lives of the Apostles, this search for relics both helped and harmed a true history. The major relics, including the bodies or portions of bodies of the Apostles, give us some hints of the places of the death and burial and hence by tradition or association, the locale of their ministries. We perhaps have successfully traced the history of some of these Apostolic remains or relics in the following chapters, up to their locations today.

On the other hand we must recognize that some of these Apostolic relics may not be genuine, since wishful thinking or simple mistakes may have led the devout of other, less critical ages than ours, to go astray. This was especially so since there was great church prestige, political preferment, and often much money involved in securing what were believed to be genuine Apostolic relics.

Partisans in the great church schism between the east and west undoubtedly sought to associate their possession of Apostolic relics as proof of the blessing of the Apostles and God upon them, as witness the fact that they had the original and often miracle-working relics in their exclusive possession. Fortunately that competition has ebbed with the centuries. In quite recent times Pope Paul VI has returned to Greece the head of St. Andrew, to be housed in a new church in the place of his martyrdom in Patras, Greece, under the care of the Greek Orthodox Church. This was a highly conciliatory gesture on the part of the Pope since St. Andrew, having been martyred in Greece, is meaningful to the Greek Orthodox Church. It reduces by one the Apostolic relics in Rome, but increases the chances of unity between Rome and Athens very markedly, for whatever that may prove to be worth to those involved.

If one can cut through the maze of the history of relics and trace the presence of fact back to the genuine tradition of Apostolic associations in the places of their original martyrdoms and burials, then there is great hope that this may open up the way to confirm or even discover more light on the histories of Apostolic labors. This we have here attempted to do where possible. Admittedly this task and its results are open to scholarly criticism and interpretation.

The motivations of the Apostles are now more clearly understood.

(6) One great truth about the Apostles is unassailable. It has been strengthened by every bit of tradition and history we have studied. That is, most of the Apostles took seriously the great commission of Jesus (as recorded in Matthew 28) and went forth to "Judea, Samaria, and the uttermost parts of the world" to evangelize the nations with the Christian gospel. The story of the Apostles is thus mainly the story of evangelism in the early church. They set an example for all subsequent Christians that is clear, unmistakable and unswerving. They challenged commoners and kings alike. They did not become salaried ecclesiastics but often worked with their hands to support themselves, so that by any and all means they might share the good news in Jesus. Most, like St. Paul, sought to preach Christ, "not building upon other men's foundations, but going to the regions beyond."

There was an Apostolic strategy of missions.

(7) The lives of the Apostles, especially that of St. Paul, reveal an unusual and brilliant concept of missionary strategy. They always went first to the great cities located on the trade routes. From these centers their disciples and converts then traveled out to the towns beyond and there established churches which in turn established still others. The Apostles knew the secret of strategic locations and of delegating responsibility to others, thus multiplying themselves more rapidly than is the case in many modern missionary enterprises.

THE APOSTLES WERE CHURCHMEN

Above all, they founded congregations. Some modern day evangelism is so apart from the churches that the churches must feed the evangelistic effort, rather than for the evangelistic effort to build the converts firmly into the churches or to give impetus to new churches. This was never the Apostolic principle, which is why Apostolic evangelism lasted and some modern "populist" evangelism soon passes away.

The Apostles enjoined upon their converts the responsibility to become the church. Surely this is one lesson that needs to be re-learned today. It was St.

Paul who wrote, Jesus loved the church and gave himself for it (Ephesians 5:25).

WHY THE TWELVE?

The Apostles of Jesus Christ are heroes whose portraits, as Christians have come to know them, are "larger than life." The Roman and Greek Catholic bestowal of the title, "Saint", upon each of the Twelve (and thereafter upon a flood of others) was partly responsible for making them into demigods. But long before the time the New Testament was collected into one volume (the Canon) the figures of the Twelve had assumed commanding respect. John, in The Revelation of Jesus Christ, speaks of the New Jerusalem which is to have the names of the Twelve inscribed in its foundations. (Incidentally, that inclusion settles the issue of whether Matthias was, after the defection of Judas Iscariot, truly considered by the other Apostles as one of the Twelve.)

Why did Jesus choose only twelve chief Apostles? Obviously to correspond to the twelve tribes of Israel. He, Himself, as the new and eternal high priest, would stand for the priestly thirteenth tribe, Levi. The function of the Apostles was to bear witness to the resurrection of Jesus and of His teachings. For this reason, as the election of Matthias to replace Judas confirms, an Apostle had to have been long with Jesus and a witness to his teachings.

Paul stoutly maintained that he also was an Apostle, since his conversion, call, and instruction came directly from Jesus, and the signs of an Apostle were his in abundance. Yet there is no evidence that he was ever admitted to that inner circle of the original Twelve. Some of the original Twelve probably never did fully trust him, and even Peter confessed that he did not always understand "our beloved brother, Paul" (2 Peter 3:15).

THE BOOK OF ACTS AND THE TWELVE

In a most important sense, the book of The Acts of the Apostles, the earliest Christian book of history, is the story of how Christianity, at first a sect within Judaism, was opened to the Gentiles, and how in a short time it became mainly a faith of the Gentiles. From start to finish, The Acts shows Christianity as a minority movement among the Jews, soon rejected by most Jews, becoming Gentilized as the illustrious Paul became the European leader of the Christian movement. Peter remained for a time as the most prominent Jewish-Christian leader, but Christianity after the first century gradually died down among the Jews.

The Acts carefully records how Peter, obviously at first against his will, became a grudging Apostle to some Gentiles, yet all the while endeavoring to keep Christianity as Jewish as possible. The plan of the book of The Acts is as logically and carefully laid out as a lawyer's brief. It proves conclusively that Christianity was intended to, and slid, lose its exclusively Jewish character. It was to be much more than a sect or another party within Judaism, such as were the Pharisees, Sadducees, or Essenes.

Those who expect The Acts to be the complete early history of Christianity are doomed to disappointment. It is that only incidentally and in a fragmentary way.

Its main argument is that God, Himself, tore Christianity loose from its Jewish foundations and made it universal. To do this He used Peter at first, then Paul. The other Apostles played only incidental roles in the story of The Acts, since it is not a history of the Apostles but a history of the emergence of Gentile Christianity.

As valuable and as liberating as this emphasis is, the Bible student is soon, and perhaps unconsciously, caught up in the personal ministry of Paul. Peter, though prominent at first, is later ignored, as The Acts unfolds for the reader the story of Paul and his friends, Timothy, Luke, Barnabas, Silas and others.

The Acts, having shown Peter and the rest of the Twelve as having launched the Christian movement, and as having blessed the admission of believing Gentiles into the churches, then portrays again and again the fact that only some Jews around the Roman world accepted Christ. As others rejected Christ, in each instance Paul is shown as turning to the Gentiles who seemed much more willing to receive the gospel than the majority of the Jews.

This historical insight is necessary to know if we are to understand why we have a great deal of information about John and Peter, and even more about Paul, but know really very little of the other Apostles.

Roman and Greek Christianity early became dominant over Judaistic Christianity. Western Christians of the Roman Empire, treasured and preserved the writings of these three Apostles who worked among the Gentiles. The other Apostles did not write much, with the exception of Matthew. But Matthew's personality does not come through clearly in his gospel. The writings, if any, of the remainder of the Twelve are lost.

Mark was the helper and writer for Peter, but Mark was not considered an Apostle but an Apostolic assistant, as were Timothy, Titus, Epaphroditus, Luke, Barnabas, Silas, Acquilla, Priscilla and Erastus. Luke wrote about Paul in The Acts, and about the Apostles and Jesus in his gospel. But Luke was not himself an original Apostle. Hence, the New Testament as we have it is the product of Matthew, an Apostle, Peter, an Apostle, John, an Apostle, and Paul, an Apostle. Other New Testament authors such as Mark and Luke, were not Apostles, but assistants, and Jude and James were not of the original followers of Jesus, but brothers of the Lord, who did not believe until after the Resurrection of Christ.

As for the history of the Apostles after the first few years in Jerusalem, except for brief references to them in The Acts, we must look into the Epistles, the book of The Revelation of Jesus Christ, the histories and traditions or legends of the early, post-Apostolic Christian writers, and to the local traditions of the Christian movement in the places where the Apostles labored or died. It is this latter research than has had the least historic treatment and which we will attempt to explore, along with those early Christian traditions and Scriptural accounts which are fairly well (but not universally) known.

LEGEND, MYTH AND TRADITION

The word legend is today in better standing than it was a short time ago. 'Legendary' has often been a word of ill repute for it has meant "mythical" to most people. The word "tradition" stands far higher in the estimation of historians. Scholars today, thanks to literary criticism, historical research, and archeological observations, have more confidence in the existence of a residue of fact amongst the legends and traditions about well-known historical or Biblical figures. Blown up and fanciful they may be, but legends and traditions are often the enlargements of reality, and traditions may not be exaggerations at all, but actual fact. We have attempted to squeeze some of the water out of those legends which exist about the Apostles and find the elements of the reasonable and possible which are in traditions. Dogmatism is impossible in our subject, but surely a fuller knowledge of the lives of all the Apostles can now be acquired than has hitherto been generally known.

THE RELEVANCE TODAY

But why should the Christian reader, or the reading public, be interested in the histories of the first Apostles of Jesus Christ?

For one thing, any increase of knowledge about the Apostles will greatly illumine the power-filled early days of Christianity, and perhaps help to recover the secret of the primitive dynamic of the early Christians.

Christians today know, or can know, more about many things than any other generation of believers. Archeology is a relatively modem science. Textual criticism has secured a clearer Biblical text than was ever available before. Yet, unfortunately, much of the power and spirit of New Testament era Christianity is obviously missing in today's churches.

The general public needs to see afresh the dedication of the earliest Christian leaders, and to feel the modern relevance of their timeless methods and ideals. Christianity needs a self-renewal, as do all institutions. From where will this renewal come? That dynamic momentum which early Christians bequeathed, and which has still not entirely run down, was surely, in part, the personal and direct heritage of the Twelve Apostles and their Christian contemporaries.

The least that a study of this kind should contribute to all Christians is to direct our attention back to the days of a purer, unencrusted, tradition-free Christianity. There is much about the lives of the Twelve Apostles that can speak to us existentially today. Indeed, to discover what the Apostles did, or what it is claimed that they did, is to rediscover their motivation and the life-strategy which they followed.

HOW THIS STUDY BEGAN

In a sense this book has taken thirty years of comprehensive and intensive study to write. In 1944 the author finished a Bachelor of Divinity at Bethel Theological Seminary, St.Paul, Minnesota, with a major in church history which included over sixty semester credit-hours and a thesis on the same subject. In 1952 the author submitted another dissertation on the same subject and was graduated with a Doctorate in Religious Education from Southwestern Baptist Theological Seminary, Fort Worth, Texas.

Since that time, he has read continually in the subject of ecclesiastical history and has traveled repeatedly to Europe (39 times) and the Middle East (27 journeys) in search of Biblical and ecclesiastical information. This rich experience has been a labor of love and has been highly rewarding in terms of the discovery of new facts and fresh insights. It is a false supposition that all useful historic knowledge is to be found only in books, though many hundreds have been read by this writer about the Twelve Apostles. There is much additional information about them to be gleaned only by travel to places the Apostles once knew, and by conversation with people who now live there, who know of traditions not widely found in the books which are readily available to scholars. No one book, to my knowledge, has ever been written that includes all known facts about the Apostles until now.

For example: in October, 1971, the writer was an official guest in Iran for the celebration of the 2,500 year memorial to Cyrus the Great. Upon this occasion the opportunity arose to interview the leaders of several of the very ancient Christian movements of Iran who trace their spiritual descent back to the visits to Persia in the first century of at least five of the Apostles of Jesus! Not only was new information obtained, but a wider understanding of the Eastern thrust of early Christianity beyond the borders of the Roman world about which we Christians of the Western tradition know very little. This has been our great loss. The following observations are an illustration of an area of Christian history about which few American Christians know:

"...Iran had known Christianity from the earliest times of Apostolic preaching. When Christianity was first preached in this part of the world, that is to say, beyond the frontiers of East Roman Empire, namely in the easternmost regions of Asia Minor, north-eastern regions of Ancient Syria and Mesopotamia, the Apostles and their immediate successors did not know any boundary between East Syria, Mesopotamia, Armenia and Persia. In fact, the peoples of these countries lived in such a state of close association that the first Christians all belonged to the same stream of evangelization, they shared the same Christian traditions handed down to them by the first Apostles and their disciples.

"Thus, beginning from the first century, the Christian faith had been preached in Edessa, in the kingdom of Osrohene. It penetrated also Armenia and Persia in the same century. As Tournebize has said: 'From Osrohene the faith undoubtedly had shown forth quite early to the East; between Edessa and Armenia the distance was not big.' Long before Bar Hebraus, the alliances and frequent interpenetrations between Parthians, Persians, Edessenians and Armenians had justified the following remark of the famous monophysite patriarch: Parthians or Persians, Parthians or Edessenians, Parthians or Armenians, all are one." (The Armenian Christian Tradition in Iran, A Lecture, Interchurch Centenary Committee, p.1).

Later, in November of 1971, the writer led a group of people from all over America on a historic journey which was entitled, "The Search For the Twelve Apostles." On this expedition, through Europe and the Middle East, many more of the recorded facts in this book emerged. It can possibly be said that no other group in modern or ancient times has hitherto made so comprehensive a study into the lives and burial places of the Apostles in the actual locations indicated by history or tradition as have been associated with the Apostles.

Possibly there is yet more light to be thrown on the subject of the Twelve Apostles. One thinks, for instance, of the vast archives of ancient and as yet untranslated documents in the Greek Orthodox monasteries, or the Vatican Library in Rome. We do not pretend to the scholarship, linguistic ability, or the sheer time which would be necessary to dig for the needles in these huge haystacks. We must await the happy day when others more able will accomplish these tasks.

But within the limits of present scholarship, original research, and the critical examination of history and traditions, we have, we hope, amassed all that is known, or which reasonably can now be learned about the Apostles. We can anticipate with joy that further scholarship which will add to the body of information here presented.

CHAPTER ELEVEN

JAMES “The Less” Son of Alphaeus

James, the son of Alphaeus, who is also called the "Less" or perhaps "Younger," was a brother of Matthew Levi and the son of Mary. Which "Mary" is not altogether certain though she appears to be the wife of one Clopas [Cleophas], which may have been another or second name for Alphaeus.

As with Matthew, James was a native of Capernaum, a city on the northwestern shores of the Sea of Galilee. Here in the early part of his ministry Jesus also moved into His own house. He preached in the local synagogues, in private homes, as well as at the seashore where large numbers of people often gathered. We do not know how or where Jesus first met James and Matthew. Probably they had heard him during His preaching services. It is quite likely that when Jesus called Matthew to follow Him it was not so much a first acquaintance, but a final call to decision to one who had already shown a keen interest. If James and Matthew were brothers, and were cousins of Jesus, that fact would of course shed light on their previous acquaintance.

Matthew, no doubt, suffered in his conscience because, as a tax-gatherer for the house of Herod Antipas, the satrap of Rome, he must necessarily have incurred the displeasure of the Jews who hated Herod and Rome alike. In any case, it would seem quite evident that Matthew had made his peace with Herod's administration if not with the Romans, but he must have had to have overridden his conscience. After Jesus called him, Matthew immediately threw a great feast for his friends, who included a number of other tax-gatherers and their mutual friends, none of whom would have been in very good repute with the Jewish community. Jesus was the guest of honor at this feast, and we get a picture of the enmity of the Jewish community toward the tax collectors in that Jesus was bitterly criticized by the local Pharisees for eating with those they called, "Tax Collectors and Sinners." In Israel at the time this phrase "tax collectors and sinners" seems to have been a colloquialism for those who were hopelessly corrupt and outside the mercy or interest of God.

Having defiled themselves they would necessarily defile any whom they contacted.

We have no indication that James was among those who gathered for that feast. Every indication is that he was not.

Temperamentally and perhaps ideologically, he differed from his brother, Matthew.

James and Matthew Levi Bar Alphaeus were said to have been of the tribe of Gad, one of the ten tribes of the northern confederacy which was taken captive in the eighth century B.C. as a result of the Assyrian invasion by Tiglath Pileser. However, bearing the name Levi more probably indicates that both Matthew and James were of the tribe of Levi, the priestly tribe. The tribe of Levi, unlike the tribe of Gad, had fled from northern Israel before the Assyrian invasion and had joined with Judah.

That a child not of a priestly tribe of Levi should have been named Levi would be most unlikely in those days.

But Matthew had betrayed his priestly heritage and had become a collaborator with Herod and Rome. It would be natural to suppose that his brother James was in total disagreement with Matthew Levi's choice of secular matters. Later tradition about James indicates that James himself was at first a "Zealot" (a revolutionary group seeking to throw off the yoke of both Herod Antipas and Rome). But his patriotic and nationalistic idealism was rudely dashed by the policy of bloodshed which characterized the Zealots. Therefore, James probably became an ascetic, who sought refuge in his own piety from the bloodshed of the Zealots.

But was he an ascetic? This opens the question which must be settled about the identity of James himself.

THE DISTINCTION BETWEEN THE MEN CALLED "JAMES"

(1) With the identity of James, the brother of John, the son of Zebedee, known otherwise as "James the Elder" and "James the Great", we have no trouble. His is the only fairly complete story in the New Testament of any of the original Twelve, besides, of course, Judas Iscariot. This James was slain by beheading at the command of Herod Antipas to please the Jewish leaders who always suspected Herod's devotion to Judaism was mere lip service.

(2) James the Less or Younger, son of Alphaeus and Mary, who is the object of our study here, is a man of whom we know comparatively little except that he was brother to Matthew, also an Apostle, Joseph, an early Christian and Salome, an unknown woman.

(3) There is also a James who was the father of the Apostle named Judas or Thaddeaus, now commonly called St. Jude, who is carefully distinguished in Scripture from Judas Iscariot. James, the father of Jude, is probably the same as James the son of Zebedee and brother of John.

(4) James, the brother of Jesus, is the best known to us of all the early Apostles except for Peter, John and Paul. He was not one of the Twelve, however.

It is the confusion of identity between James the Less and James the brother of Jesus which makes it practically impossible to know who each was, and what each did as distinct from the other.

Most of the ancient denominations, such as the Roman Catholic or Armenian Orthodox, identify James the Less and James the brother of Jesus as one and the same. Their reasoning is complicated, contradictory and not defensible by the Scriptural record. Essentially though, it is an attempt to assert that, contrary to what St. Paul wrote in Galatians about "James the brother of the Lord," James the just was a cousin of Jesus. The reason for this tortured attempt to explain St. Paul's plain statement away is to protect the doctrine of the perpetual virginity of Mary by implying that when St. Paul wrote "brother" he really meant cousin. Obscure references in Greek literature are used by some to show that this was possible.

The early heresy of Docetism attempted to convince Christians that all sexual intercourse was evil. The later elevation of Mary to the stature of a demigoddess, forced some of those who took this view to invent out of whole cloth the notion that the brothers and sisters of Jesus were perhaps children of Joseph by a previous marriage. Thus James the brother of the Lord becomes James the half brother. However, at this point a further contradiction inserts itself. How could James the Less be the son of Joseph and also be the son of Alpheus?

The answer which has apparently satisfied most of the scholars of the oldest branches of organized Christianity is to make Mary the mother of James the Less, a sister of Mary the mother of Jesus. This reduces James the Less to the status of a cousin of Jesus rather than a half brother.

One cannot but sympathize with the defenders of this point of view under the pressure they were under to preserve the doctrine of the perpetual virginity of Mary, the mother of Jesus. But their solution is simply impossible. Never in history have two sisters been given the same name in the same family. The purpose of names is to distinguish between children. With the great number of names available to the ancients it would be grotesque to suggest that there were two Marys in the same family.

We may be safe, therefore, in assuming that James the brother of Jesus was indeed just that. There is little doubt that this James did not believe in Jesus before the resurrection, for the New Testament is careful to tell us that Jesus made a special post-resurrection appearance to a "James". This was probably the brother of Jesus. We are not told when this happened nor why it was necessary, but we do have two facts. Jesus' brothers in the flesh did not believe in Him before the resurrection, yet in the book of Acts, James the brother of Jesus, is described as the chairman of the church of Jerusalem, exceeding in rank Peter and John. It is a probability, therefore, that James the Less and James the brother of Jesus were not only different people, but also that each time in the New Testament where the name of "James" appears, after the official roster of the Apostles is listed in the first chapter of Acts, it refers to James, the brother of Jesus. We are sure that he was the spokesman for the Apostles. At the conference where Paul and Barnabas received a special commission to preach to the Gentiles, Paul certainly mentions him as having been the first and only Apostle with whom he personally conferred three years after his conversion, except for Peter.

When Paul went to Jerusalem again before his final imprisonment in Jerusalem, James appears again as the spokesman of the Twelve, urging Paul to demonstrate his fidelity to the Mosaic Law in order not to offend the Jews in Jerusalem. Paul purposely refers to this "James" as one of the "pillars" of the church along with John.

A careful reading reveals that it is James, the brother of Jesus, whom Paul meant rather than James the Great, since by this time James the Great was dead. It is not an utter impossibility that James the Less is meant, but the whole thrust of Paul's historic references to "James" seemed to be, according to the context of Paul's writing, the "James" who is the brother of the Lord.

James the brother of Jesus undoubtedly wrote the Epistle which bears his name.

There is also a great deal of traditional information about the life and death of James the brother of Jesus, which has been wrongly attributed to James the Less.

Over 200 years ago an English scholar, Darman Newman, summed up this tradition:

"Prayer was his constant business and delight. He seemed to live upon it and to trade in nothing but the frequent returns of converse with heaven. In the procuratorship of Alvinus the successor to Festus, the enemies of James decided to dispatch him. A council was hastily summoned. They plotted to set the scribes and Pharisees to ensnare him. They told him they had a mighty confidence in him and that they would that he might correct the error and false opinion the people had of Jesus. To that end he was invited to go to the top of the temple where he might be seen and heard by all. There they demanded, 'Tell us, what is the institution of the crucified Jesus?' The people below, hearing it, glorified the blessed Jesus. The Scribes and Pharisees perceiving now that they had overshot themselves and that instead of reclaiming the people had confirmed them in their (supposed) error, thought there was no way left but presently to dispatch him, that by his sad fate others might be warned not to believe him. Wherefore, suddenly crying out that James the just himself was seduced and had become an imposter, they threw him down from the place where he stood. Though bruised, he was not killed by the fall, but recovered so much strength, as to get upon his knees and pray to heaven for them.

They began to load him with a shower of stones until one more mercifully cruel than the rest with a fuller's dub beat out his brains. Thus dyed [sic] that good man in the 90th year of his life [this is of course, impossible. ED] and about 24 years after Christ's ascension, He was buried upon the Mt. of Olives in a tombe which he had built for himself." ("The Lives and Deaths of the Holy Apostles," Dorman Newman, 1885).

Newman based his narration on fairly good early traditions. James the brother of Jesus is, therefore, the James who was prominent in the Jerusalem church and was martyred by being thrown from the pinnacle of the Temple and then buried on the Mt. of Olives.

This is the "James" whom the Armenians and others confuse with James the Less. According to Armenian tradition, after the destruction of the Monastery in which the body of the martyred Apostle was originally buried, his bones were removed to the Cathedral of St. James in Jerusalem on Mt. Zion. They were placed beneath the principal altar. This Cathedral is also believed to be the site in which the head of the Apostle James the Great, brother of John, was buried.

The Armenian Monastery of St. James covers the entire summit of Mt. Zion totaling 300 acres, or 1/6 of the entire old city of Jerusalem. The remains of James the brother of Jesus were transferred from the Kedron Valley in the fourth century and buried in his home, the ruins of which were later incorporated into the Cathedral.

In the Treasury of the Armenian Patriarchate of Jerusalem are listed (1) a reliquary containing the "arm of James the Less" and (2) another containing "the fingers of James the brother of the Lord."

It is more likely that the reliquaries contain bones of the same man, James the brother of the Lord.

The tomb in the Valley of the Kedron, now called the Grotto of St. James, was originally the burial place of a Herodian priestly family of the sons of Hezir. In the fourth century, monks living in the Grotto found a skeleton which was held to be that of an apostolic "James" though they incorrectly identified this skeleton as that of James the Less. There is nothing to mitigate against it being the genuine skeleton of James the brother of Jesus, merely because it was found in the family tomb of the sons of Hezir. From the treatment of the body of Jesus by Joseph of Arimathea, who welcomed Jesus' body in his own family tomb, it is quite conceivable to infer that the family of Hezir might have extended compassionate burial to the body of James.

This is the skeleton which now lies under the altar in the Cathedral of St.Tames.

An unbroken tradition among the Armenians traces this body back to its discovery in the fourth Century. The tomb of the sons of Hezir is located immediately across from the "pinnacle" of the temple area to this day. Of James, Tbeodorus said, "He was thrown from the pinnacle of the temple and did not hurt him, for a fuller slew him with a club he carried and he was buried on the Mt.of Olives." ("Dome of the Rock" Judith Erickson, Jerusalem, 1971).

It is interesting and perhaps significant that recent excavations of the exterior southwest wall of the old city have uncovered fuller's vats. Fullers were the laundrymen of the first century, and fuller's earth was a kind of soap in wide use until comparatively modern times. The water that comes from the pool of Siloam, which is not far from the pinnacle of the temple, would have been a necessity for the public laundries of Jerusalem. One can easily get the picture: the crowd gathers on the pinnacle of the temple to throw James to his doom in the valley below. The fullers rush up from their laundry not far away with clubs in their hands which they had used for beating their garments. Caught up in the fury of the mob they smashed the skull of the aged Apostle after he fell. The compassionate members of the sons of Hezir, a family of priests offer a niche in their extensive tomb. Not far from where he was slain the battered body of the brother of Jesus is laid to rest. Standing in the doorway of this tomb, while on the steep western rock wall of the lower slopes of the Mt.of Olives, the visitor of today can easily reenact the entire dreadful scene of martyrdom and burial.

It would be helpful to a critical study such as this if this James the brother of Jesus, could indeed be successfully and firmly identified as also James the Less, but this is simply not possible to honest scholarship.

But what then of James the Less?

The linking together of James, the son of Alphaeus in the various lists of the Apostles gives the impression of more than an arbitrary or accidental grouping. James is listed with Simon the Zealot. Jude, the son of James the Great, is also referred to as a Zealot in the Apostolic Constitutions. The quotation in two of the ancient manuscripts of that work describes him thus:

"Thaddeaus was called Lebbaeus who was surnamed Judas the Zealot" ("The Master's Men," William Barclay, p.115) The fourth figure in the Apostolic listing is Judas Iscariot. He, too, may have been a Zealot according to Barclay. ("The Master's Men," William Barclay, p.115) However, it is quite evident that this is only speculation as far as James, the son of Alphaeus is concerned. His mother was a faithful follower of Jesus, going in company with Mary, the mother of Jesus, all the way to the Cross. Was it his mother, Mary, who won him to Christ, or was it James who won his mother? We do not know. But certainly one thing is evident. If James, the son of Alphaeus was, during his idealistic youth, a Zealot, he soon forsook the movement and became an ardent Christian.

One of the earliest church historians who is quoted by Eusebius, Heggesippus, who wrote in 169 A.D., says that James lived the life of a Nazarene (Nazarite?) before and after becoming an Apostle of Jesus Christ. As a member of this order he drank no wine and ate no meat except the Paschal Lamb, never shaved or cut his hair and never took a bath. James wore no clothes except a single linen garment which (he) also carefully avoided cleaning (with) water. He spent so much time in prayer his knees became hardened like the hooves of a camel. [These legends (which echo the sounds of the early days of the Monastics more than those of the first century and lack probability) earned for James the title 'James the Just'. So righteous was his life that he alone of the Christians was allowed to go into the Holiest of Holies, and Jews as well as Christians strove to touch the hem of his garments as he passed in the street.

This tradition of Heggesippus simply does not ring true. First, the description more nearly fits James the brother of Jesus who is the more likely bearer of the title "James the Just" Second, it is almost certain that no one but the Jewish high priest was permitted to go into the Holiest of Holies. Whether he was a Jew or a Jewish Christian, there is no reason to believe that anyone else, however holy his life, was ever permitted into the Holy of Holies. Third, none of the other Apostles are recorded to have held scruples against eating of meat and washing. This would have been contrary to the traditions of the Jews and the early Christians alike. We feel there is nothing whatsoever in this description to fit James, the son of Alphaeus.

A more interesting and perhaps more likely tradition is preserved in the "Golden Legend," a seven volume compilation of the lives of the saints arranged by Jacobus de Voragine, Archbishop of Genoa in 1275 A.D., which relates that James resembled Jesus Christ so much in body, visage and manner that it was difficult to distinguish one from the other. The kiss of Judas in the Garden of Gethsemane, according to this tradition, was necessary to make sure that Jesus and not James was taken prisoner. ("The Twelve Christ Chose," Asbury Smith, p.116,117)

If Mary, the mother of Jesus, was a cousin of Mary, the mother of James, this could account for the family resemblance between the two. Certainly there was no closer relationship between the two Marys than that of cousins. But then, bearded young men of the same race often have a resemblance. Yet we must point out that it is not certain that Jesus even wore a beard.

Even so, a facial resemblance could have existed. On the basis of this tradition, James is usually pictured in Christian art as beautiful of countenance. His handsome features full of spiritual and intellectual beauty make him easily recognizable in early pictures of the Twelve.

Again, we must challenge the generally held concept of Jesus as being a handsome man. There is no indication whatsoever in the New Testament that this was true. The only reference at all to the appearance of Jesus is found in the 53rd chapter of Isaiah (verse where we read the prophetic prediction that the Messiah would have "no beauty that we should desire him."

Yet in all of this perhaps we can detect a small kernel of truth. James the son of Alphaeus may indeed have had a facial resemblance to Jesus.

Such traditions as are preserved often contain at least a grain of truth.

Though confusing James the Less with the James who was the brother of Jesus, the authoritative writer, Aziz S.Atiya, in his "History of Eastern Christianity" relates the one historical tradition that has a ring of probability. He says, "The seeds of Syrian Christianity had been sown in Jerusalem during the Apostolic age, and the contention has been made that the first bishop of the Syrian church was none other than St.James of the Twelve Apostles, identified as `St. James the Less" ("A History of Eastern Christianity," Aziz S.Atiya, p.239).

According to the study made by Budge, ("Contendings of the Apostles II", E. A. Wallis Budge, p.264-266), James was stoned by the Jews for preaching Christ, and was buried by the Sanctuary in Jerusalem.

We must speculate at this point how and when the body of James the Less was discovered in Jerusalem and taken to Constantinople for interment in the Church of the Holy Apostles.

This could have happened during the reign of Justinian. According to Gibbon, Justinian rehabilitated the Church of the Holy Apostles which was built by Constantine the Great in the year 332 in Constantinople. ("The Decline and Fall of the Roman Empire," Edward Gibbon, p.510). Justinian had a keen awareness of Biblical history and compared his building of Santa Sophia with the temple of Solomon. (Ibid., p.508) Since this was the age of the frantic search for the relics of the early Christians, especially those of the Apostles, it is entirely possible that the body identified as that of James the Less was brought from Palestine to Constantinople to add Apostolic association to the Eastern Orthodox Church and empire. This cannot be proven but it is highly likely since Justinian's word was law in the entire Middle East, and the churchmen were eager to please him.

The Armenian church in Jerusalem had, by the time of Justinian, established its claim to the body of James the brother of Jesus, whom they mistakenly supposed to be identical with James the Less.

Justinian would probably have honored this conviction and left the body of James the brother of Jesus in place in Jerusalem while disagreeing with the identification of it as the body of James the Less. Why he later forwarded the body or parts of it to Rome can only be guessed at. Perhaps it was a part of some political agreement to keep his political alliance with Rome intact.

The historian who is aware of the complexities of the histories of the relationship of the Eastern and Western Roman Empires and the Eastern and Western division of organized Christianity can easily sense this scenario.

The body of James the son of Alphaeus, was brought from Constantinople to Rome about the year 572 ("A Traveller's Guide to Saints to Europe," Mary Sharp) and was interred by Pope John III in a church which was first known as the "Church of the Apostles Philip and James the Less." Only in the 10th century was this title shortened in common speech to the "Church of the Holy Apostles."

Archaeologists who have examined the lower part of the present day structure of the church in Rome affirm that the structure is the work of the sixth century and beyond doubt that which was constructed by Pope John III. The original church was dedicated the first of May 580 A.D. The bones of St.Philip were probably interred on that date, and the bones of James were added later. Still later, skeletal remains of other Apostles were added. There they may be seen to this day.

.....

THE TWELVE DISCIPLES

Who are the Twelve Disciples?

Their Backgrounds

- * The twelve disciples were from the Galilee region except for Judas Iscariot, who was from Judea.
- * Their occupations ranged from fisherman to tax collectors and revolutionaries.
- * Some were married. (see Mark 1:29-31; 1 Corinthians 9:3-6)
- * Some were well-versed in Scripture. (see John 1:46)

Their Purpose

- * After being baptized by John the Baptist and spending 40 days in the wilderness, Jesus started teaching and many people started following him.
- * After a night of prayer and meditation, Jesus chose twelve men out of all those who were following him.
- * These twelve men would be Jesus' main focus of instruction.
- * These disciples were selected to let the world know of God's love, that God sent Jesus to redeem the world. (see John 1:23)

Their Mission

- * These are the twelve men who, for the most part, would prove to be valuable companions to Jesus.
- * Their instruction and conversations would become the teachings, knowledge, and instruction for the church that would later grow and spread.
- * Jesus knew their personalities, both strong and weak.
- * Jesus knew that these men would disappoint him, desert him, deny him, and betray him.
- * Jesus knew that these men, once filled with the Holy Spirit, would be the first witnesses of the Gospel, carrying God's message of redemption to Judea, Samaria, and the ends of the earth.
- * The twelve tribes of Israel were blessed in order to be a blessing to all nations. In a similar way, these twelve men, along with all disciples of Jesus who follow their lead, were to bless all nations. (see Galatians 3:8) Followers of Christ are commanded to go out and make disciples of all nations, baptizing them in the name of the Father, The Son, and the Holy Spirit.

SIMON PETER

Other Names

- * Simeon bar Jona (Simon, son of Jona) •
- * Cephas ("rock" or "a stone")
- * Simon Peter
- * Simon

General Information

- * Son of Jona and born in Bethsaida. (John 1:42-44)
- * Lived in Capernaum. (Matthew 8:5-14)
- * Fisherman. (Matthew 4:18)
- * Brother of Andrew. (Matthew 4:18)
- * Partner with James and John. (Luke 5:10)

- * Married. (Matthew 8:14)
- * One of the pillars of the Jerusalem church. (Galatians 2:9)
- * Boldly preached, healed, and ministered to Jews and Gentiles after Pentecost. (Acts 2-12)
- * Imprisoned by Herod for preaching and rescued by an angel of the Lord. (Acts 12:3-19)
- * Wrote 1 and 2 Peter.

Personality and Character

- * Impulsive (Matthew 14:28), yet cowardly (Matthew 14:30; 26:69-74)
- * Hot tempered (John 18:10), yet tenderhearted. (Matthew 26:75)
- * Insightful (Matthew 16:16), yet dense. (Matthew 16:21-23)
- * Courageous and solid after Pentecost. (Acts 5:27-30)

Encounters with Jesus

- * Was called to be a fisher of men. (Matthew 4:19)
- * Left everything to follow Jesus. (Luke 5:11)
- * One of the three disciples in the core group of disciples. (Mark 5:37; 9:2; 13:3; 14:33)
- * Simon said Jesus is the Christ, Son of the living God. Jesus names him Peter (rock) and said, "Upon this rock I will build my church, and the gates of Hell will not prevail against it." (Matthew 16:16-19)
- * Was reprimanded because he refused to accept that Jesus had to die. (Matthew 16:23)
- * Witnessed Jesus' Transfiguration (where Jesus' divinity was revealed). (Mark 9:2-8)
- * Was sent to prepare the upper room for the Last Supper. (Luke 22:8)
- * Jesus predicted that Peter would deny knowing him three times. (Luke 22:31-34)
- * Was with Jesus in the Garden of Gethsemane. (Matthew 26:36-46)
- * Jesus instructed Peter after his resurrection. (John 21:15-19)

Key Lesson

God can forgive sins and strengthen the faith of those who love him.

Stories

Papias (second-century Christian) recorded that Mark served as Peter's scribe and wrote the Gospel of Mark based on Peter's testimony. According to some stories, Peter asked to be crucified upside down. Peter may have been crucified during the reign of Nero in Rome. Symbols for Peter are sometimes keys, representing the keys to the kingdom of heaven. (Matthew 16:19)

.....

JAMES, SON OF ZEBEDEE

Other Names

- * Son of Zebedee
- * Boanerges (Son of Thunder) "James the Elder"
- * "James the Great"

General Information

- * Son of Zebedee. (Matthew 4:21)
- * Son of Salome. (Matthew 27:56; Mark 16:1)
- * Fisherman with his father and his brother. (Matthew 4:18-22)
- * Brother of John. (Matthew 4:21)
- * Partner with Peter. (Luke 5:10)
- * One of the pillars of the Jerusalem church. (Galatians 2:9)
- * Put to death by the sword by Herod Agrippa 1. The only one of the twelve disciples who died for his faith that was recorded in Scripture. (Acts 12:2)

Personality and Character

- * Vengeful and fiery. (Luke 9:54)
- * Selfish and conceited. (Mark 10:35-37)
- * Committed to Christ and courageous to the end. (Acts 12:2)

Encounters with Jesus

- * Was called to be a fisher of men. (Matthew 4:19)
- * Left everything to follow Jesus. (Luke 5:11)
- * One of the three disciples in the core group of disciples. (Mark 5:37; 9:2; 13:3; 14:33)
- * Jesus named him and John "Sons of Thunder." (Mark 3:17)
- * Was rebuked with his brother John for requesting God to rain fire on a Samaritan village. (Luke 9:54, 55)
- * Witnessed Jesus' Transfiguration (where Jesus' divinity was revealed). (Mark 9:2-8)
- * Jesus responded to James's and John's request to sit at his right and left in the Kingdom. (Mark 10:35-43)
- * Was with Jesus in the Garden of Gethsemane. (Matthew 26:36-46)
- * Witnessed the miraculous catch of fish on the Sea of Galilee after Jesus' resurrection. (John 21:2-7)

Key Lesson

Stand firm in the face of persecution.

Stories

Some claim he was the first bishop in Spain. Symbols of James sometimes include the bishop's hat and the sword, which is in reference to his martyrdom.

.....

JOHN

Other Names

- * Sun of Zebedee
- * Boanerges (Son of Minder)
- * "The Beloved Disciple" (The disciple whom Jesus loved)
- * "The Evangelist"
- * "The Revealer"

General Information

- * Son of Zebedee. (Matthew 4:21)

- * Son of Salome. (Matthew 27:56; Mark 16:1)
- * Fisherman with his father and his brother. (Matthew 4:18-22)
- * Brother of James. (Matthew 4:21)
- * Partner with Peter. (Luke 5:10)
- * One of the pillars of the Jerusalem church. (Galatians 2:9)
- * Healed and preached. (Acts 3-4; 8)
- * Exiled to the island of Patmos. (Revelation 1:1,9)
- * Wrote the Gospel of John, 1, 2, and 3 John, and Revelation.

Personality and Character

- * Vengeful and fiery. (Luke 9:54)
- * Judgmental. (Mark 9:38)
- * Selfish. (Mark 10:35-37)
- * Bold, loving and compassionate after Pentecost. (Acts 4:13; 1 John 4)

Encounters with Jesus

- * One of the three disciples in the core group of disciples.
(Mark 5:37; 9:2; 13:3; 14:33)
- * Suggested that driving out demons could only be performed by those who follow Jesus and his disciples. (Mark 9:38)
- * Witnessed Jesus' Transfiguration (where Jesus' divinity was revealed).
(Mark 9:2-8)
- * Was sent to prepare the upper room for the Last Supper. (Luke 22:8)
- * Reclined next to Jesus during the Last Supper. (John 13:23)
- * Was given the responsibility at the cross to take care of Mary, Jesus' mother.
(John 19:26, 27)
- * Ran ahead of Peter to see Jesus' empty tomb and expressed faith by "seeing and believing." (John 20:2-8)
- * Witnessed the miraculous catch of fish on the Sea of Galilee after Jesus' resurrection. (John 21:2-7)

Key Lesson

God's love, evident in Jesus Christ, saves, transforms, and unites all believers.

Stories

Some stories suggest that John was released from exile on the island of Patmos and returned to Ephesus (Turkey today).

Stories suggest that John died in Ephesus around AD 100.

Symbols of John sometimes include the eagle (Revelation 4:7) and a book.

.....

ANDREW

Other Names

- * "Protokletos" (First Called)

General Information

- * Son of Jona. (John 1:42)
- * Born in Bethsaida (John 1:44)
- * Lived in Capernaum with Peter. (Mark 1:29)
- * Fisherman. (Matthew. 4:18)
- * Brother of Simon Peter. (Matthew 4:18)
- * Disciple of John the Baptist. (John 1:35-40)
- * Listed as one of Christ's twelve disciples. (Matthew 10:2-4;

Mark 3:16-19; Luke 6:14-16)

- * The name Andrew derives from Greek, meaning "manly."

Personality and Character

- * Enthusiastic about Christ. (John 1:35-42)
- * Inquisitive. (John 1:35-38)
- * Resourceful. (John 6:8,9)

Encounters with Jesus

- * First to follow Jesus. (John 1:35-40)
- * Called to be a fisher of men. (Matthew 4:19)
- * Sent out on a mission to the Jews to preach "the kingdom of heaven is at hand," heal the sick, cleanse the lepers, raise the dead, and cast out demons. (Matthew 10:5-8)
- * Informed Jesus that several Greeks wanted to see him. (John 12:20-22)

- * Told Jesus of the boy with five loaves of bread and two fish. (John 6:8, 9)
- * Was present when Jesus appeared to the disciples after the Resurrection. (John 20:19-25)
- * Was present for the Great Commission when Jesus sent his disciples to all nations. (Matthew 28:16-20)
- * Witnessed Jesus being taken up into heaven. (Acts 1:8,9)

Key Lesson

Go out and eagerly share the good news about Jesus Christ.

Stories

Some suggest that Andrew preached in Greece, Asia Minor, and Russia
 A seventh-century story suggests that Andrew was crucified on an X-shaped cross by a Roman proconsul.
 The symbol for Andrew is sometimes the X-shaped cross.

.....

MATTHEW

Other Names

- * Levi
- * Levi the son of Alphaeus

General Information

- * Son of Alphaeus. (Mark 2:14)
- * From Capernaum. (Mark 2:1-17)
- * Tax collector in Galilee. (Matthew 9:9)
- * Possible brother of James son of Alphaeus. (Mark 3:18)
- * Listed as one of Christ's twelve disciples. (Matthew 10:2-4;

Acts 1:13)

- * Wrote the Gospel of Matthew
- * The name Matthew derives from Hebrew, meaning "gift of God."

Personality and Character

- * Penitent. (Matthew 9:9; 10:2)
- * Hospitable. (Matthew 9:10)

Encounters with Jesus

- * Matthew left his tax collector booth to follow Jesus. (Matthew 9:9)
- * Matthew invited Jesus over to dine with him and his corrupt friends. (Matthew 9:10)
- * Sent out on a mission to the Jews to preach "the kingdom of heaven is at hand," heal the sick, cleanse the lepers, raise the dead, and cast out demons. (Matthew 10:5-8)
- * Was present at the Last Supper (Matthew 26:20)

Key Lesson

Jesus Christ is for everyone, even sinners and outcasts.

Stories

Some stories suggest that Matthew ministered to Persia, Macedonia, Syria, Parthia, Media, and Ethiopia bringing the good news to kings.

Some stories suggest that Matthew died a martyr.

The symbol for Matthew is sometimes a bag of coins in reference to his occupation as a tax collector before he encountered Jesus.

.....

THOMAS

Other Names

- * Didymus (Twin)
- * Judas Thomas
- * "Doubting Thomas"

General Information

- * He was a twin. (John 20:24)

- * Listed as one of Christ's twelve disciples. (Matthew 10:2-4; Mark 3:16-19; Luke 6:14-16)
- * Inquisitive. (John 14:5)
- * Doubtful. (John 20:24, 25)
- * Courageous. (John 11:16)
- * Faithful. (John 20:24-29)

Encounters with Jesus

- * Courageously encouraged disciples to go to Bethany. (John 11:16)
- * Asked Jesus how to know where Jesus was going. (John 14:5)
- * Doubted Jesus' resurrection saying he would have to touch his wounds in order to believe. (John 20:25)
- * Affirmed that Jesus was Lord and God. (John 20:28)
- * Witnessed the miraculous catch of fish and ate breakfast with Jesus after his resurrection. (John 21:2-7)

Key Lessons

Jesus can overcome doubts and lead believers to faithfulness.

Stories

Stories suggest that Thomas traveled to India and founded the Christian church there.

Some suggest Thomas was killed by a spear for his faith, and was buried in India.

Some say Thomas was a carpenter.

Symbols for Thomas include the spearhead and the T-square.

.....

JAMES, son of ALPHEAUS

Other Names

- * James the son of Alphaeus
- * "James the Younger"
- * "James the Less"

General Information

- * Son of Alphaeus. (Mark 3:18)
- * Possible brother of Matthew (Levi) the tax collector, also the son of Alphaeus. (Mark 2:14)
- * Listed as one of Christ's twelve disciples. (Matt. 10:3; Acts 1:13)
- * James the son of Alphaeus is often confused with James the brother of Jesus (who wrote the book of James) or James the brother of Joseph.

Personality and Character

- * Unknown.

Encounters with Jesus

- * Selected as one of Christ's twelve disciples. (Matthew 10:2-4; Luke 6:14-16)
- * Sent out on a mission to the Jews to preach "the kingdom of heaven is at hand, heal the sick, cleanse the lepers, raise the dead, and cast out demons. (Matthew 10:5-8)
- * Was present at the Last Supper. (Matthew 26:20)
- * Was present when Jesus appeared to the disciples after the Resurrection. (John 20:19-25)

Key Lesson

All followers of Jesus can still accomplish the work of God without being in the limelight.

Stories

Some suggest that James, son of Alphaeus, belonged to the revolutionary group known as the Zealots. Some say that James was arrested by the Jews, thrown off the Temple, and then beaten to death by a club.

.....

THADDAEUS

Other Names

- * Jude

- * Juda the son of James
- * Lebbaeus

General Information

- * Son of James. (Luke 6:16)
- * Listed as one of Christ's twelve disciples. (Matthew 10:2-4; Acts 1:13)
- * The Aramaic meaning of both Thaddaeus and Lebbaeus is the same, "beloved" or "dear to the heart."
- * The name "Judas" derives from the Hebrew name Judah, meaning "praise."
- * Jude is sometimes confused with Judas the brother of Jesus, Judas Barsabbas, and Judas Iscariot.

Personality and Character

- * Inquisitive. (John 14:22)
- * Confused. (John 14:22)

Encounters with Jesus

- * Selected as one of Christ's twelve disciples. (Matthew 10:2-4; Acts 1:13)
- * Sent out on a mission to the Jews to preach "the kingdom of heaven is at hand," heal the sick, cleanse the lepers, raise the dead, and cast out demons. (Matthew 10:5-8)
- * Asked Jesus how he would reveal himself to his followers and not to the world. (John 14:22)
- * Was present at the Last Supper. (Matthew 26:20)

Key Lesson

Jesus will reveal his truths to believers who follow him.

Stories

Some suggest that Thaddaeus belonged to the revolutionary group, the Zealots.

Some scholars believe that Thaddaeus authored the book of Jude, although most believe the author is Judas the brother of Jesus.

The symbol for Thaddaeus is sometimes a gold ship with silver sails before a red horizon, which is a reference to the ship he took on missionary journeys.

SIMON the ZEALOT

Other Names

- * Simon the Cananaean

General Information

- * Was a Zealot. (Matthew 10:4; Mark 3:18; Luke 6:15; Acts 1:13)
- * Listed as one of Christ's twelve disciples. (Matthew 10:2-4; Acts 1:13)
- * The name Simon derives from the Hebrew name Shimon, meaning "hearing."
- * The word "Cananaean" derives from an Aramaic word meaning "zealous one."

Personality and Character

- * Patriotic. (Matthew 10:4)
- * Loyal. (Mark 3:18)
- * Passionate. (Luke 6:15)
- * Sacrificial. (Acts 1:13)

Encounters with Jesus

- * Selected as one of Christ's twelve disciples. (Matthew 10:2-4; Acts 1:13)
- * Sent out on a mission to the Jews to preach "the kingdom of heaven is at hand," heal the sick, cleanse the lepers, raise the dead, and cast out demons. (Matthew 10:5-8)
- * Was present at the Last Supper. (Matthew 26:20)
- * Was present for the Great Commission and Jesus' Ascension into heaven. (Matthew 28:16)

Key Lesson

One should be willing to sacrifice his or her politics to follow Jesus.
One story suggests that Simon was the bridegroom at the wedding in Cana.

Some stories suggest that Simon was a missionary to Persia.

The symbol for Simon is sometimes a book resting on a fish, which is a reference to Simon fishing for people.

.....

JUDAS ISCARIOT

Other Names

- * "Judas the Betrayer"
- * Judas the son of Simon

General Information

- * Judas was the treasurer for the group of disciples; was a thief. (John 12:5,6; 13:29)
- * Judas betrayed Jesus, felt remorse, threw the blood money in the temple and hanged himself: The chief priest used the money to purchase the potter's field, fulfilling prophecy. (Matthew 27:3-10)
- * Judas purchased the Field of Blood and fell headlong and "burst open..." (Acts 1:18-20)
- * Judas was replaced by Matthias who was added to the eleven apostles. (Acts 1:26)

Personality and Character

- * Greedy. (Matthew 26:14-16)
- * Deceitful. (Matthew 26:25)
- * Treacherous. (Matthew 26:47-50)
- * Remorseful. (Matthew 27:3-5)

Encounters with Jesus

- * Selected as one of Christ's twelve disciples. (Matthew 10:4; Luke 6:15)
- * Jesus referred to Judas as the devil. (John 6:70,71)
- * Criticized Mary for anointing Jesus with expensive perfume. (John 12:4-8)
- * Conversed with Jesus during the Last Supper. (Matthew 26:23-25; John 13:27,28)
- * The devil entered his heart at the Last Supper. (John 13:2)
- * Betrayed Jesus for 30 pieces of silver. (Matthew 26:14-16; 47-51)

Key Lesson

Not all who claim to follow Jesus are faithful to him and his goals.

Stories

Judas was possibly from Kerioth in Judea.

Some scholars suggest that Judas was a member of the Zealot sect known as the Sicarii, who were dagger-bearing assassins.

.....

PHILIP

Other Names

- * None

General Information

- * Born in Bethsaida. (John 1:44)
- * Well versed in Scripture. (John 1:45, 46)
- * Listed as one of Christ's twelve disciples. (Matthew 10:2-4; Mark 3:16-19; Luke 6:14-16)
- * The disciple Philip is often confused with Philip the evangelist found in Acts.
- * The name Philip derives from Greek, meaning "he who loves horses."

* Philip probably spoke Greek. (John 12:20,21)

Personality and Character

- * Practical. (John 6:7)
- * Helpful. (John 12:20, 21)
- * Literal and confused. (John 14:8)

Encounters with Jesus

- * The third disciple Jesus called. (John 1:43)
- * Brought Nathanael (Bartholomew) to Jesus. (John 1:45,46)
- * Jesus tested him regarding the feeding of the multitude. (John 6:5-7)
- * Informed Jesus that several Greeks wanted to see him. (John 12:20-22)
- * Asked Jesus to show him the Father. (John 14:8,9)
- * Was present at the Last Supper. (Matthew 26:20)

Key Lesson

All the knowledge in the world does not compare to the truth found in Jesus.

Stories

Tradition suggests that Philip lived and preached in Scythia (Ukraine today). Some stories suggest that Philip was crucified on a tall cross at Hierapolis of Phrygia (Turkey today).

Symbols for Philip sometimes include loaves of bread (John 6:5-7) and a tall cross.

.....

BARTHOLOMEW

Other Names

- * Nathanael

General Information

- * Born and/or raised in Cana of Galilee. (John 21:2)
- * Well versed in the Hebrew Scriptures. (John 1:46)
- * Listed as one of Christ's twelve disciples. (Matthew, 10:2-4; Acts 1:13)
- * The name Bartholomew derives from Greek, meaning "son of Tolmai."
- * The name Nathanael derives from the Hebrew, meaning "God has given"

Personality and Character

- * Skeptical. (John 1:46)
- * Honest. (John 1:47)
- * Faithful. (John 1:49)

Encounters with Jesus

- * Jesus told Nathanael that he was an honest Israelite and informed him that he saw him sitting under the fig tree. (John 1:47,48)
- * Nathanael said that Jesus was the "Son of God" and "King of Israel (John 1:49)
- * Jesus enlightened Nathanael with what to expect (John 1:50,51)
- * Witnessed the miraculous catch of fish and ate breakfast with Jesus after his resurrection. (John 21:2-7)

Key Lesson

Believers are called to test all things with Scripture and remain true to its principles.

Stories

Some suggest that Bartholomew ministered to Asia Minor and India and the Armenian church claims Bartholomew as their founder.

Tradition suggests that Bartholomew was flayed alive in Armenia.

The symbol for Bartholomew is sometimes a blade.

